Israeli troops swarm across Lebanon

By The Associated Press

Five Israeli armored columns shielded by air and naval bombardments advanced through southern Lebanon, capturing a key Palestinian stronghold in a massive invasion aimed at driving guerrilla gunners out of range of northern Israel.

U.N. and Palestinian sources said 20,000 Israeli troops and hundreds of tanks battled guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies Sunday from the outskirts of Tyre, the port and Palestinian military center on the Mediterranean 12 miles north of the border, to points north of the Litani River, the limit of Israel's 1978 invasion.

In one thrust across the Litani during the night, the Israeli military command said troops captured the Crusader-era Beaufort Castle, a heavily-fortified cliff-top Palestinian base that for years rained artillery fire and rockets on Israel's northernmost town of Metulla, 3 1/2 miles to the south, and much of the surrounding Galilee panhandle.

The Israeli announcement at dawn today capped six years of fruitless Israeli efforts to knock out the Beaufort Castle batteries with repeated air strikes, foiled when the guerrillas pulled their guns back into the maze of tunnels in the cliff.

Residents of Metulla said a heavy artillery and air attack on the fortress Sunday night stopped at midnight, and apparently the infantry moved up then, crossed the Litani River and overran the cliff-top fortress.

As Syria claimed its forces in Lebanon were engaging the invaders and the fighting threatened to escalate into full-scale war, the 15-nation U.N. Security Council demanded unanimously Sunday night that Israel "withdraw all its military forces forthwith and unconditionally."

The council ordered the combatants to advise U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar of their acceptance of the resolution within 24 hours. Israel was expected to ignore it.

In a letter to President Reagan, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said the invasion, mounted on the 15th anniversary of the start of the 1967 Arab-Israeli War, was a limited operation aimed at pushing "the terrorists 40 kilometers (25 miles) northward."

Reagan, wrapping up a summit with leaders of six other industrialized nations at Versailles, France, decried the violence and dispatched Middle East troubleshooter Philip Habib to the area to try to head off an escalation.

Begin said the offensive, which started about 11 a.m. Sunday when tanks began rolling into southern Lebanon, was called "Peace for Galilee."

"The terrorists are aiming their guns exclusively at the civilian population," Begin said. "The purpose of the enemy is to kill — to kill Jews, men, women and children."

Guerrilla shelling of northern Israel began Friday after Israeli warplanes pounded Palestinian targets up to the southern edge of Beirut, the Lebanese capital, in reprisal for the attempted assassination in London Thursday night of Israel's ambassador to Britain.

Israel blamed the Palestine Liberation Organization for critically wounding the ambassador with a bullet through the brain. The PLO denied responsibility and vowed to "fight unto death" to defend its Lebanese power base, the last guerrilla stronghold in the Middle East.

British police charged two Jordanians and an Iraqi in the shooting of the ambassador, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said a "hit list" found on one of them contained the name of the head of the PLO office in London along with those of prominent Jews.

There were no reports of guerrilla casualties in the fighting, but the PLO claimed its forces killed 150 Israeli soldiers, downed two Israeli warplanes and a helicopter and captured two pilots.

The Israeli command maintained a blackout on its casualties but acknowledged the loss of one plane and a helicopter gunship, the first air losses confirmed since 1974. It said the pilot of the jet was captured, but gave no information on the fate of the helicopter crew.

Lebanese police reported at least 230 people killed in Israeli air strikes Friday and Saturday.

Elderly man puts wife 'out of misery' then shoots himself

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — An elderly man left meticulous instructions for his funeral arrangements and asked neighbors to care for his lawn before he shot and killed his crippled wife and then critically wounded himself with a shotgun, authorities said.

Lee Roy McCree, 76, left a note saying he wanted to end his wife's misery after a long battle with a spinal disease before he shot her at least six times with a .22-caliber pistol as she lay in her bed early Sunday, a Hunt County sheriff's spokesman said.

McCree then walked to his front yard with a short-barrel shotgun and shot himself three times as neighbors watched in horror.

When neighbors reached the wounded man, said Betty Finstad, he asked three men to take the gun and shoot him again.

McCree was in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Citizen's General Hospital in Greenville Sunday after undergoing surgery for shotgun wounds in his left arm and chest. His 74-year-old, bed-ridden wife Grace Kendall McCree was pronounced dead at the scene.

In the suicide note McCree left for police on the kitchen table, he "asked the Lord to forgive him and stated that this was a mercy killing because he wanted to take his wife out of misery."

Sheriff's Cpl. Richard Hill said Hill said McCree left police a list of relatives and their phone numbers and instructions for the couple's burial, including the names and phone numbers of the florist and funeral home along with his note.

Neighbors described the McCrees as friendly people who always shared their home-grown vegetables with residents of this rural community about 30 miles east of Dallas.

"They were the best little old couple I ever knew," said Mrs. Finstad, who lives across the street from the McCrees' frame house near Lake Tawakoni.

McCree's best friend, Lonnie Barringer, said that when he found the retired master plumber lying wounded at about 7:30 a.m. in his front yard, he asked Barringer to take the shotgun and shoot him to "finish the job." Authorities were not sure why McCree shot himself with a different weapon.

"He left me a note wanting me to take care of his garden and grass and left $140," Barringer said. "He just said that he couldn't stand to see her suffer and he wanted to end it all."

Mrs. Finstad, who runs a corner grocery store next to her mobile home, said McCree's health was worsening and "he knew he couldn't leave her and go to the hospital, so he just decided to end it."

She said she heard a shot but thought McCree was just trying to shoot some snakes in his yard.

"A few minutes later came a second shot and I looked out the front door and I just couldn't believe what I saw. I never imagined Mr. McCree would shoot himself," she said.

Thousands of ERA supporters make last-ditch attempt at ratification

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

At least 35,000 supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment marched in four state capitals, beginning a last-ditch three-week drive for ratification, while their leaders considered a novel effort to place the amendment on the North Carolina ballot.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham and his wife, Adele, led 10,000 marchers Sunday in Tallahassee, and North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt addressed another 10,000 in Raleigh.

From 5,000 to 8,000 people marched in Springfield, Ill., and Gov. James R. Thompson — who had been criticized for "lukewarm" support of the ERA — said in Chicago he would personally call every state senator opposed to the amendment and seek votes for approval. Another 10,000 supporters marched in Oklahoma City.

Graham and many other marchers wore green and white — the colors of the National Organization for Women's ERA campaign. White also was worn by suffragettes of the early 1900s, seeking women's right to vote.

The amendment, which would ban discrimination on the basis of sex, needs ratification by three more states by June 30 to become part of the U.S. Constitution. Five of the 35 states that have ratified the amendment have attempted to rescind their ratification, but that action is being challenged in the courts.

The demonstrations were held Sunday in states where ratification is considered most possible.

In North Carolina, where the Senate voted last week to table the ERA, Hunt and key supporters planned a meeting today with the head of the state Board of Elections to discuss placing the amendment on the June 29 primary ballot.

Alex K. Brock of the state Board of Elections said, however, that the Legislature would have to suspend 12 to 15 technical requirements to put the

Coup topples Chad gov't

PARIS (AP) — Rebel forces of Chad's former Prime Minister Hissene Habre seized control of the capital, N'Djamena, today after encountering little resistance in a dawn attack, reports reaching Paris said.

Government forces loyal to President Goukouni Oueddei gave up after about 30 minutes of fighting in the center of town near the president's office, the French news agency Agence France Presse reported.

Goukouni's whereabouts were not immediately known.

After sporadic shooting near the presidential headquarters, the civil population came into the street to welcome Habre's forces, the report said.

Earlier, Ahmad Affal, Habre's European representative, told The Associated Press the rebels had smashed the last government defenses around the capital and were preparing for a referendum on the proposal had merit.

Police probe smashes Pampa narcotics ring

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

Richard Ladell Tuck, 25, of 715 N. Frost, was arrested at about 5 p.m. Friday and charged with possession of a controlled substance following a lengthy undercover investigation by the Pampa Police Department.

Several packets of a substance believed by police to be methamphetamine, commonly known as "speed," were discovered in Tuck's residence, police said.

Tuck was arraigned late Friday night. Bond was set at $30,000 by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

Police Sergeant Lynn Brown, Detective Michael Wopperer, Corporal Jess Wallace and Patrolman Rod Bishop made the bust on a search warrant.

Police calculated the street value of the confiscated substance at about $1,000.

The substance will be transported to the regional Department of Public Safety office in Amarillo for further testing.

The eight week investigation, taking place in February and March, also led to Friday's arrests of Terry Wayne Rapstine, 19, 1601 Fir and Charles Gustave Chandler, 25, 604 N. Wells.

Rapstine was charged with delivery of marijuana, and bond was set at $25,000 by Judge Prestidge Friday evening. Police said he was arrested when he attempted to sell marijuana to an undercover officer.

Chandler was arrested at Tuck's residence and charged with possession of marijuana under two ounces.

A check of National Crime Information Center records showed Chandler was wanted by the U.S. Navy for desertion. Police said he will be turned over to military authorities.

Police also revealed today that two February arrests were a result of the undercover investigation.

James Robin Dickens, 18, 1132 S. Sumner, and Jerry Lee Roach, 22, of the Davis Hotel, were arrested Feb. 22 and charged with delivery of a controlled substance.

Police said Dickens and Roach were arrested in a "buy - arrest situation," in which suspects are

Winners in Texas runoff make November plans

By CHARLES C. HILL
Associated Press Writer

Jim Mattox says he won the Democratic nomination for Texas attorney general because of hard work and the kind of supporters who vote in runoffs. John Hannah says his loss boils down to time and money, too little of both.

Regardless, Mattox is looking forward to November.

"You know, we haven't ever had a Republican attorney general and I don't think we're going to have one now," the 38-year-old Dallas congressman said in an interview Sunday.

Mattox captured 51.3 percent of the vote in Saturday's runoff election to defeat Hannah, a 42-year-old former U.S. attorney in Tyler. Mattox goes against Republican Bill Meier of Euless in November's general election.

In the runoff for the Democratic nomination for land commissioner, Austin lawyer Garry Mauro defeated state Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland and will face Republican Woody Glascock in November.

Mauro, rebounding from a second-place finish in the May 1 primary that resulted in Saturday's runoff, won 53.4 percent of the vote. Mauro, 34, attributed the victory to endorsements from the men who finished third and fourth May 1.

The other two statewide Democratic runoffs Saturday were for nominations to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Austin lawyer Charles Campbell captured 52.6 percent of the vote to defeat Dallas lawyer John Humphreys for the Place 1 nomination. The Republicans do not have a candidate in for that judicial seat.

The Place 2 election now pits Chuck Miller against Republican Ray Moses. Miller, a Dallas County Criminal Court judge, won 53.3 percent of the votes Saturday to win the nomination in a contest against state District Judge Bill Black of Belton.

The turnout Saturday did not even reach the very light 8 percent predicted by Secretary of State David Dean.

The Republicans had no statewide runoffs, but did have runoffs in three congressional districts and two state Board of Education districts. The Democrats had three congressional runoffs and two three school board runoffs. Local and legislative runoffs also were held.

The Democrats would have had two other statewide runoffs but the runners-up withdrew. Attorney General Mark White won the gubernatorial nomination when Buddy Temple quit, and the nomination for treasurer went to Ann Richards when incumbent Treasurer Warren Harding pulled out.

Mattox won 295,170 votes Saturday, or 51.3 percent, compared with Hannah's 279,966 votes, or 48.7 percent, with 5,506 of 5,609 precincts reporting.

Hannah pointed out Sunday that Mattox's margin of victory slipped from seven percentage points May 1 — 36 percent to 29 percent in a four-way race — to less than three Saturday.

"It was a question I think of having a little more money and more time to campaign," Hannah said.

"Basically I got outspent two to one in the runoff," he said. "I didn't have as much TV and money as he did."

Hannah reported spending $118,819 in the April 22 to May 26 reporting period. Mattox reported expenditures of $245,155.

But Mattox had a different appraisal during an interview Sunday.

"I think that just in the end we managed to a little bit outwork them," Mattox said, also noting endorsements by 40 organizations "from one end of the Democratic Party to the other. I think they were the kind of educated voters that got out and voted on election day and made the difference."

Mattox predicted he "will easily be the choice" of the voters in his November contest against Meier, who until a year ago was a Democrat. Meier was unopposed in the May 1 GOP primary.

In the land commissioner runoff, Mauro, former executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, won 297,328 votes, or 53.4 percent, to Snelson's 259,505, or 46.6 percent, with 5,606 precincts reporting.

Mauro said a key factor in his victory "was the endorsement and the hard work" of state Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale and Paducah farmer George Fore, who finished third and fourth May 1.

But Snelson said it was a matter of Mauro having a more experienced campaign organization.

"I think it's just a case of they did a better job of getting their voters back to the polls in the urban areas," Snelson said Sunday.

Among the losers in congressional runoffs Saturday was Dallas lawyer Kay Bailey Hutchison, wife of former Texas GOP Chairman Ray Hutchison. Former Dallas City Councilman Steve Bartlett, 33, defeated her for the 3rd District Republican nomination and now faces Democrat James McNeese Jr.

Runoffs also were held in the 25th and 27th districts, two of the three districts created by Texas' population growth in the 1980 census.

The runoffs set up a 25th District general election contest between Houston lawyers Mike Faubion, 33, and Mike Andrews, 38.

Faubion defeated J.C. Helms, 40, of Houston, for the GOP nomination. Andrews became the Democratic nominee with a win over former state

Shooting spree leaves one dead, three wounded, and one jailed

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — A 46-year-old man was being held in lieu of bond here in connection with a shooting spree in a bar that left one person dead and three others wounded.

Police arrested Bennie Ray Waldrop, last known address in Clute, after he allegedly left the Cozy Lounge in Freeport, returned and began firing at four patrons he "had words" with Saturday evening, a police spokesman said.

Officers said 12 shots were fired with a .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle. Waldrop was charged with one count of murder and three counts of aggravated assault after the shooting at 8 p.m. Justice of the Peace Harold Annon ordered Waldrop held on bonds totaling $65,000.

Johnny B. Goodwin, 36, of Oyster Creek, Texas was dead on arrival at the Community Hospital of Brazosport after being shot four times with 22-caliber bullets, police said.

Goodwin's common law wife, Carol Wilder, 41, was treated and released from Community Hospital of Brazosport for a wound in her right arm.

A man police identified as Ike Bailey,

29, of Freeport was listed in fair condition Sunday night at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston with two wounds, in the back. Hospital officials said they had the man listed as Isaac Bradley.

Phyllis Taylor, 36, of Oyster Creek was released from the Brazosport hospital after being treated for a wound in the wrist.

Police said they are not sure why Waldrop left the bar and then returned with the rifle.

"He walked in and began firing at the people he had talked with," a police spokesman said.

Reagan and Pope call for peace

VATICAN CITY (AP) — President Reagan, declaring himself on a "pilgrimage for peace," met today with Pope John Paul II at the midpoint of a European tour shadowed by warfare in the Middle East and the Falkland Islands.

The pope urged the United States to "step forward at this crucial moment in history to consolidate her rightful place at the service of world peace."

For 50 minutes the pope and Reagan met alone in the 16th century papal library, talking across a simple wooden desk, each man sitting on a high-backed velvet chair. Then, in a nationally televised exchange of statements with the pope, Reagan noted he was visiting Europe for the first time as president and said, "I would like to think of it as a pilgrimage for peace, a journey aimed at strengthening the forces for peace in the free West by offering new opportunities for realistic negotiations."

Reagan said he came away from the meeting "with renewed sense of hope and dedication."

"We seek the same goals of peace, freedom and humanity that the church pursues," Reagan said. He spoke of conflict in Latin America and the Middle East, and called Poland a "martyred nation" that had been a "bastion of freedom."

Reagan called for an end to martial law in Poland, freedom for political prisoners and renewed talks between the government and Solidarity.

The pontiff, speaking in English, said peace depends on farsighted world leaders working for human rights and an end to the arms race.

He cited "centers of acute tension" in the Falklands, the Iran-Iraq war and "now the grave crisis provoked by the new events in Lebanon."

Reagan also met with American seminarians at the Vatican, and was greeted with thunderous applause.

Weekend accident injures four

Four Pampa residents were injured at 2 a.m. Sunday in a one-vehicle accident six miles east of Pampa on U.S. Highway 60.

The four were reportedly eastbound in a Pontiac car on the highway and missed a turn in the road, crossing a railroad tracks before coming to a halt.

Highway patrol officers responded to the accident and contacted Pampa ambulance workers at the Pampa Fire Department at 2:03 a.m.

LeAnn Hurd, 24, of 1326 Coffee Apt. 1, was taken to Coronado Community Hospital by Pampa Fire Department's ambulance service and was treated for multiple facial lacerations and neck injuries.

She was transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo for plastic surgery. This morning, she was reported in satisfactory condition.

Richard Stroud, 29, of 722 Bradley, suffered injuries to his shoulder and foot and lacerations to his right eyelid.

Stroud underwent surgery at Coronado, and was reported in good condition this morning.

Hurd and Stroud were apparently transported by highway patrol officers to Coronado, and ambulance personnel transported the two other victims.

The two other occupants of the vehicle, Jayne Stroud, 26, 722 Bradley, and Curtis Hurd, 29, 1326 Coffee, also sustained injuries. They were treated in the emergency room of Coronado and released.

Highway patrol officers were unavailable at press time to say whether or not there would be any citations issued as a result of the accident.

Floods, tornadoes batter the nation

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Residents of southern New England were warned today to be on the lookout for more flooding following a weekend deluge that sent up to 12 feet of water through some towns and forced at least 1,300 people to flee.

Thirteen people were killed and five others were presumed drowned as a weekend storm dumped up to 11 inches of rain in the area.

One of the areas hardest hit was Ivoryton, Conn., where two dams on the Fall River burst Sunday, releasing a wall of water that washed away four houses and several cars.

"It looked like a tidal wave," said Christopher Dewey, who lives on Main Street. "It was like a white wave covering everything."

While the rains which began Friday were tapering off today, the National Weather Service posted a flood warning for all of southern New England except Cape Cod.

Thunderstorms today swept numerous areas from the Northern Rockies to New England.

In the northwestern Iowa community of Sibley, a tornado on Sunday destroyed two homes and damaged 12 others as it cut a 100-foot swath through an eight-block area. Ten people suffered minor injuries.

Tiny the cat is back home

Tiny is home. Tiny is a small white Persian cat who wears a bell, is deaf, and walks funny. With all that going for her, it stands to reason she'd be easy to spot.

She was. Several hours after Friday's Pampa News appeared with a story about the wayward feline, a Pampa woman called the Charles Smiley family in Lefors to let them know Tiny had been located and was hungry and dirty.

The cat had accidentally been released from the Smiley's car in Pampa Thursday night, and turned up about three doors away the next day. Said Mrs. Smiley, "The first thing she wanted was a bath."

Strong quake rocks Mexico City

reports of casualties or major damage.

A second tremor rocked the capital about four hours after the initial quake, residents said. There were no reports of casualties or damage.

The Tacubaya seismograph station said the first tremor at 12:53 a.m. (2:53 a.m. EDT) had a magnitude of 6.5 on the Richter scale and was centered on the Pacific coast 248 miles southwest of Mexico City, in the states of Oaxaca and Guerrero. There were no figures available for the second jolt.

The U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Center in Golden, Colo., estimated the magnitude at 6.9 on the Richter scale, nearly a major quake.

A police spokesman in Oaxaca reported by telephone that the quake to move in. "Only our desire to limit civilian casualties is still delaying the liberation of the capital," Habre's spokesman said. "Goukouni's regime is doomed."

Affal said the breakthrough came Saturday when the rebels captured Massaguet, the last government outpost on the only paved road to the capital. He said Goukouni's forces suffered hundreds of casualties and lost 308 men taken prisoner. Government forces were "in full flight" toward N'Djamena, 50 miles to the southwest, Affal said.

Goukouni's new prime minister, Djindjar Domo Ngardoum, told AFP the president refused to negotiate with Habre, his former ally in a civil war that wracked the former French North African colony for 18 years.

Parents are required to sign a release form when their child enrolls in the program.

There were no reports of serious damage. He said the first shock was followed by a lesser one about 10 minutes later.

A Red Cross spokesman in Oaxaca said he had no reports of damage.

West Texas sheepmen want chemical help in coyote battle

BRONTE, Texas (AP) — Ranchers in this West Texas town have been fighting a losing battle against coyotes who ravage local sheep flocks.

Now they have a new enemy — environmentalists who are trying to prevent the ranchers from using chemicals to kill the predators.

"We're not bloodthirsty killers," said rancher Don Glenn. "But the way things are now, it's plumb disgusting. If we don't get some relief, I don't see how the sheep business can survive."

The Environmental Protection Agency has conducted hearings in nearby San Angelo during the past two weeks to reconsider its ban on the use of chemical Compound 1080 in large traps.

The ranchers, who have grown to loathe the coyote's romanticized lonesome howl, say they need Compound 1080 to combat rapid increases in the coyote population and rapid decreases in the size of their flocks.

Environmental groups such as Defenders of Wildlife oppose the use of Compound 1080 because of the hazards it poses to humans and wildlife.

"Thirty years ago when we were in high school, there weren't any coyotes here," said Glenn's partner, J. Lee Ensor. "That is what's frightening."

"The predators have flat shut us down," he said. "Every time you lose a lamb, that's basically a $50 bill."

Bill Sneed, president of the First Coleman National Bank in Coleman, testified at the hearings that the sheep population in Coleman County has shrunk from 200,000 in 1959 to 50,000 last year.

To combat the coyote, Glenn and Ensor have been moving their sheep from pasture to pasture and spent $1,000 to hunt the creature out of a helicopter.

As a last resort, they are fastening rubber-lined collars containing the Compound 1080 around the necks of their sheep as part of a state-sanctioned program.

Despite the maneuvers, the pair said they have lost 40 head of sheep in the last two years.

Members of Defenders of Wildlife say the collars are not safe because the poison can be transmitted to other animals through the coyotes, and the collars can be punctured by barbed wire or other sharp objects.

But the ranchers — and the bankers supporting them — say the only way they can stay in business is to begin using the chemical more extensively.

"We've got to get an answer to this problem, but I'm afraid it won't happen until we all get hungry because that product's not in the stores," Sneed said. "The sheepmen can't control things like interest rates and inflation, but predators is one of the problems they should be able to control and that might make the difference between surviving or not."

Bronte's arid climate and sparse vegetation are not conducive to large herds, and Glenn and Ensor say that only makes their position more precarious.

"This isn't sheep country in the normal sense," Glenn said. "There aren't any large herds around these parts, so it's not like you can afford to have shepherds and sheep dogs to watch the flocks."

The coyotes are formidable foes. "You've heard the saying, 'Smart as a fox,'" Glenn said. "Well, compared to the coyote, the fox is dumb."

Planned hotel purchase a court case

DALLAS (AP) — Representatives of the wealthy Hunt family of Dallas go to court in Los Angeles Tuesday in an attempt to purchase an exclusive Los Angeles hotel.

The action will be in probate court when the Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf trust fund will attempt to prove they should be able to purchase the Bel-Air Hotel for $18 million.

The sale is being contested by officials of the Beverly Hills Hotel Co., which has offered $20 million for the Los Angeles hotel.

Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf is a daughter of the late Dallas billionaire H.L. Hunt.

The trust had announced plans to purchase the 37-year-old Bel-Air Hotel for $18 million from Joseph Drown, founder and developer of the hotel. Drown died last April following open heart surgery, but a spokesman for the trust says the Dallas trust had reached an agreement in principle with Drown prior to his death.

The board of trustees of the Bel-Air Hotel have since agreed to finalize the sale to Mrs. Schoellkopf, a spokesman for the trust said.

The trust is attempting to buy the 66-room California hotel through Rosewood Hotels Inc., a firm owned by the Hunt trust.

Rosewood Hotels Inc. owns the luxurious Mansion Hotel at Dallas and will open a 248-room, $50 million hotel, called The Remington on Post Oak Park in Houston's exclusive River Oaks-Galleria area later this year.

The Hunt trust's purchase price for the Bel Air, about $300,000 per room, could possibly be the highest amount ever paid for hotel property, according to Robert E. Zimmer, president of Rosewood Hotels Inc.

Zimmer said the attempt by Beverly Hills Hotel Co. was made at the "11th hour" of negotiations between the Hunt faction and Bel Air officials and is contrary to instructions given by Drown prior to his death.

Zimmer said Drown wanted to sell the hotel to the Hunt trust because of his (Drown's) desire "that the Bel-Air continue to be operated according to the high standards he had set."

Drown made the decision to sell the hotel to Mrs. Schoellkopf's trust after he visited The Mansion Hotel in Dallas.

Report shows water sale would be costly

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — It would cost as much as $22.6 billion annually to transport 6 million acre-feet of Arkansas water to Texas and Oklahoma, according to a report by the High Plains Study Council.

Texas officials have said they would like to buy water from Arkansas.

The first draft of the report says an acre-foot would cost $434 and that figure could jump to $880 by the year 2105 if energy prices keep rising.

John Saxton, director of the Arkansas Water and Soil Conservation Commission, is to review the draft, which was sent to him several weeks ago. He said at a state Water Code Study Commission meeting Thursday that the council had once estimated the acre-foot cost between $700 and $1,100.

Tom Riley Jr., vice president of the Arkansas Association of Conservation Districts, said it takes about one acre-foot of water to grow an acre of cotton. The yield would sell for $500 to $600, he said, which wouldn't cover the price of the water and other expenses. The cost ratio for other crops would be similar, he said.

Unless the federal government subsidized the purchase, Riley said the plan "won't be feasible within two or three lifetimes."

The report said the environment would suffer if water was transported. One route calls for more than 1,000 miles of concrete-lined canal and the flooding of more than 300,000 acres for reservoirs.

Endangered animals and plants would be adversely affected, the report said. The route also would affect 31 wetland areas in at least five wildlife habitat areas in Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma.

Another route would use 900 miles of canal and 437,000 acres for reservoirs. The report said the route would affect rare species like the bald eagle and peregrine falcon.

Groundwater has steadily declined in the high plains, which produces a fourth of the nation's food. Saxton said the development of drought-resistant crops would lessen the impact of water shortages.

Bankruptcy court plans a 'Braniff annex'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The collapse of Braniff International Corp. is forcing the federal bankruptcy court here to open a new "Braniff annex" and double its staff and office space this summer.

The court has been burdened with an unprecedented workload after the airline shut down May 12 and filed for protection from its creditors here the next day, a court spokesman said.

"Most of the time, we have one creditor, or three. Occasionally, we get 3,000 or 5,000. But, my God, we've never had 80,000," said Bernetta Leiden, bankruptcy clerk for the Northern District of Texas.

The seven current employees have been deluged with calls and visits from Braniff ticketholders, former employees, passengers who lost baggage and attorneys representing some of the carrier's thousands of creditors, Miss Leiden said.

Process resuming on Commanche Peak

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board opens a hearing here today on a request for licensing of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant at Glen Rose.

The three-member panel is expected to conduct the hearing for about a week.

Juanita Ellis, president of the Citizens Action for Sound Energy, a group opposed to licensing the nuclear plant, said the hearing represents "really the last big chance to fight the granting of the operating license" for the power plant.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ruled that the plant can be operated safely, but the license must be granted by the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board. The three panel members who will conduct the hearing here include a lawyer, a safety expert and an environmental expert.

Comanche Peak, located about 80 miles southwest of Dallas and operated by Texas Utilities Generating Corp., hopes to receive the operating license by the end of the year.

Testimony about cracks in the wall of one of the two reactors is expected to be presented to the panel as well as claims that over-excavation for the fuel storage building caused cracks in the bedrock foundation.

Mrs. Ellis said she plans to present evidence that she said shows a lax quality control program during construction of the plant.

When construction of the 2,300-megawatt, two-unit plant began in 1974, officials estimated it would cost $770 million. They now estimate it will cost at least $3.4 billion.

Mesa announces cash tender offer

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co. has bid up to $54.5 million in a cash tender offer today to acquire 15 percent of Cities Service Co. stock, as a week-long takeover battle continues.

The tender offer could give Mesa an additional 15 percent interest in the 77.9 million outstanding shares of Tulsa-based Cities Service. Mesa officials said Sunday they would try to buy up to 12.1 million shares of Cities Service stock and would file "definitive offering documents" today with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Each company has offered to buy the other's outstanding stock for the purpose of a merger.

The announcement came after Mesa filed a $1.6 billion federal lawsuit last week, accusing Cities Service of malice and deception in attempts to prevent the merger.

Mesa said it would seek additional financing in the tender offer to buy up to 12,100,000 shares of Cities Service common stock, at $45 net per share. The company already owns 4,100,000 Cities Service shares or about 5 percent of the outstanding stock.

"There can be assurance that such additional financing for the offer will be obtained," company spokesmen said.

The Amarillo-based Mesa said it also plans to file suit in federal court to challenge the constitutionality of takeover statutes in six states and to seek injunctions against their enforcement against the offer.

Actions would be brought in Delaware, Louisiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Utah, the release said. Cities Service is incorporated in Delaware.

Mesa, in a written offer last Tuesday, said it wanted to acquire a majority of Cities Service stock at $50 a share in what analysts said was a proposal worth more than $1.6 billion.

"Our proposal is still open," said Mesa Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr., adding that he hopes "that the board of directors of Cities Service will accept it."

Cities Service countered by announcing its intentions to try to acquire Mesa. It said it has $1.7 billion in credit available to purchase Mesa shares.

Marketplace best for housing help

The slump in housing construction extends from the timber lands of Oregon to the real-estate office outside Boston, and isn't showing signs of improvement. As a result, we're seeing the political hysteria of the House voting to pump $1 billion worth of emergency mortgage subsidies into the depressed U. S. homebuilding industry.

A long-term home-buying bailout is the talk of Washington, with industry officials pushing for congressional relief by June 1.

A wide variety of legislation has been introduced in response, most all of it to use the taxing and - or borrowing capacity of the government to subsidize home buyers, sellers and builders. Some of the same Republican senators who claim to be intent on balancing the budget are behind one of those budget-busting bills, for $5 billion in mortgage subsidies. Some old-time Democratic politicians like Rep. Henry Gonzalez of Texas have another scheme, to pump $22.9 billion into some HUD programs that historically have helped a relative few.

What these bills typically do to introduce complex formulae for determining which types of people and homes, or parts of the country, get the gravy. Underlying the intense lobbying for a bailout is concern over which branch of the housing industry will benefit most from whatever's approved: the real estate agents, the builders or the lenders.

Loans guaranteed or sponsored by the government have been the fastest-growing component of federal borrowing that has crowded most of us out of the lending market over the past five years. These loans, of which mortgages have been a major part, have been more a factor in the rise of interest rates than has the federal budget. Treasury statistics would indicate. These credit obligations, you see, are called "off-budget items" and aren't even figured into that $100 billion deficit figure you hear so much about in Washington these days. But they are burdens just the same, and a primary reason why, according to recent Office of Management and Budget figures, federally related borrowing will eat up 90 percent of the country's saving pool during the current fiscal year.

Such consideration led The Wall Street Journal to observe last November that the time had come to reconsider the widespread expectations of home ownership that it said had been instilled by the mortgage programs of the New Deal. It occurs to us that, lowered inflation and rising interest rates having popped real estate's balloon, a reevaluation is in order of the types and amounts of housing our capital markets can support. Economic constraints may be forcing us into high density living that many other civilizations have grown accustomed to, but which local going authorities in the country resist. It may be the case that either those restrictions change or we're going to be faced with a choice of no housing or no money available for the rest of the economy.

In the midst of this larger crisis, the Reagan administration is thankfully resisting most of the housing bailout schemes. It has stated a preference for relaxing regulations that hamper the housing industry. Included in its proposals, however, is some expansion of the loans that are part of our current problem.

A question of ads: offensive or funny?

The U. S. Postal Service and the postal unions are uptight about a current television commercial that shows two aging postal workers reject repeated pleas from a citizen to get his letter in the mail. The ad is for Federal Express, a young but fast-growing private mail service.

Meantime, Democrats are anxious about another television commercial, one that shows lookalikes of former President Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill bequeathing the current recession to the Republicans.

That commercial, of course, is being run by the GOP.

Federal Express, it appears, may be cowed by the post office with withdrawing its ad. That is a pity, simply because the ad, we think, is funny, and we need all the humor we can get in these times, as evidenced by the thrust of the second ad.

Sure, we would agree that both ads are outrageous in the sense that they exaggerate the weaknesses of their victims, but so what? It is an indisputable fact.

Mitterrand advised to change course

A year ago, Parisians danced in the streets to celebrate the election of Francois Mitterrand and the victory of his Socialist Party. Socialism Mitterrand style seemed to promise a breath of fresh air after to decades of conservative government, most recently under the icy aloof Giscard d'Estaing.

The French are now learning what they should have recognized all along: That style is no substitute for rational economic policies. Mitterrand's breezy informality and personal popularity cannot repeal the immutable laws of the marketplace.

France's first year under what some have called "socialist chic" has yielded higher taxes, continued double-digit inflation, a ballooning budget deficit, and an increase in unemployment from 7 percent last year to almost 9 percent today.

The franc is weak and getting weaker. It has already been devalued once, and a second devaluation is likely this summer. Private investment has dropped by 10 percent and significant amounts of capital have been transferred out of the country despite strict legal prohibitions.

All this was drearily predictable. The Socialist platform of industrial nationalizations, new taxes on the "rich," and an expansion of welfare state programs produced exactly what its critics said it would. Were Mitterrand blessed with a measure of pragmatism to dilute his socialist instincts, the damage to France's economy would have been worse.

As it is, public opinion polls show that a majority of French voters now oppose the government's policies, although Mitterrand remains personally popular. Right-of-center parties routed in last year's parliamentary elections are now making a comeback.

Mitterrand can respond to France's economic distress with large doses of the same ill-advised policies that have precipitated the current decline. Or, he can move back toward the center by encouraging greater incentives for work and investment.

Socialist ideologues are urging the former, but a sobered French public is pushing Mitterrand in the other direction. The Mitterrand government would be well advised to let itself be pushed.

By DON GRAFF

The news may surprise some. George Wallace is running for governor of Alabama.

But hold on. Isn't he governor of Alabama? For that matter, hasn't he always been?

Good questions. For a generation of Americans, George Wallace and Alabama's governorship were synonymous. It was in that role that he came to national prominence, to remain at political center stage for a tumultuous decade.

One more hurrah

But Wallace has not been governor since completing his third term in 1979. He retired well, to an executive position with the University of Alabama. Why then is he now pursuing one more hurrah?

Whether or not that is a good question, Wallace has an excellent answer.

"Because," he says, "the polls show I can win."

He is a winner, he believes, because his record makes him the man for these times. The economy? He brought industry to Alabama and can attract more. Education? He expanded the state's system and can continue its "upward thrust." Dissatisfaction with big government?

"That's what I was talking about in the early '60s."

There is in the American people, he believes, rejection of the permissive society and a growing nostalgia for the past — although "not the bad parts of it."

There is more than a little nostalgia in George Wallace. "When I was governor . . . runs through his comments on issues, past and present, like a theme.

When he was governor, Wallace was also synonymous with an issue that dominated American politics. He rode it almost to the threshold of the presidency.

But in the process, he became its prisoner. George Wallace to many Americans remains synonymous with racial segregation.

It is an association he rejects, as he does the suggestion that his views have now changed and any surprise that his candidacy has black support.

"You're way behind on that matter," he fires back. And he ticks off ("When I was governor . . .") the social and political advances benefiting all Alabamians for which, he was responsible. George Wallace is not courting blacks. On the contrary, black representatives are urging him to run.

But the subject that really rouses Wallace is his health. It is good. He says it with the complete assurance of one delivering a definitive judgment.

"Mentally and physically I am able to run for and be governor. The doctors say so. In fact, it would do me good. But that's not why I'm running. I'm running because when I was governor I saw that in that position you could do so many things that were necessary."

Then: "I was governor for years in a wheelchair."

And the clincher: "I'm 10 years younger than Ronald Reagan."

He has no qualms about the rigors of yet one more campaign. On the contrary, "I'm looking forward to it."

And the way he says it, you'd better believe it.

Why U.S., Russia, are at odds

By OSCAR COOLEY

The American people are not fanatical pacifists, but they have been through two world wars in this century and are not eager to get into another. Are human beings condemned to make war on one another?

Americans love freedom. They do not buy Communism because Communism holds that individual freedom is impossible, that man has to have dictatorship — "dictatorship of the proletariat" they call it. Proletariat means the masses of poor people. So the Communist program is to impose such dictatorship. But dictatorship of any kind does not appeal to us, and "dictatorship of the proletariat" seems a deceptive and fraudulent phrase.

One reason, I think the chief one, why Americans love freedom is that we believe it is good economics. It makes for abundant production. We have a high rate of production in America, and for this we credit our individual freedom to own land and capital and to use these as each owner sees best.

The rulers of Soviet Russia apparently have problems. Agriculture is highly important in Soviet Russia, and the communistic state farms and collectives are not producing the food that Marxist theory held they would. The U.S. is selling Russia quantities of wheat, grown on capitalist farms.

Such statements regarding the Falklands affair as have emanated from Moscow have been critical of Great Britain. The dictatorship of the proletariat cannot be very happy supporting the Fascist-like dictatorship in Argentina.

President Reagan hints darkly that "if you knew what I know" there would be little opposition to his proposal to step up our defense program rapidly even though it sharply increases U.S. government spending at a time when our economy calls for a decrease.

Why don't we know what he knows? Is it a state secret?

We all know the world is in a state of relative instability. Changes are going on, not all of them for the better. It is not safe for the U.S. to disarm. To "talk softly and carry a big stick" seems to be fully as appropriate as in Teddy Roosevelt's time. Therefore, it is not inconsistent for those who believe government must be reduced to hold that the United States should increase its rate of rearming.

To increase the billions we now spend annually for arms makes it difficult for Washington to reduce over-all government spending. The best we can do, is to reduce the rate of increase!

The U.S. Treasury will continue to sell more and more bonds, and this government demand for credit will continue to bid the interest rate up.

It should be borne in mind that U.S. money is not tangible wealth but is simply debt. The debt is increasing at an alarming rate. More and more paper is circulating. As people get more of it, they spend freely. Sellers find it easy to raise their prices. And so prices go up and up. Inflation quickens.

Americans are not suffering from hunger, as Russians evidently are. We are not dependent on other nations for food. But let's not assume from this that all is well in the U.S.A. Many are finding it hard to get employment and to become productive.

Our basic problem still is to bring our excellent land, labor and capital together so that it will produce at a maximum.

The gates syndrome

By ART BUCHWALD

It seems that Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates has been under fire because so many blacks were dying from a vicious "chokehold"

The police use to cut off the supply of blood to the brain.

Gates said in defense of the L. A. force, that he had "a hunch" that blacks are more susceptible to neck injuries because more blacks are injured with the hold than whites.

"We may be finding that in some blacks when it (the chokeholds) is applied the veins or arteries do not open as fast as they do on normal people," he told the L. A. Times. "There may be something arresting the ability of the blood to flow again (after the hold). We're going to look at that very carefully."

What Gates doesn't know is that a lot of work has been done in the field of black mortality by Professor Klu at the University of Kluxclan.

Klu is the one who discovered that more young blacks were killed by police bullets than white suspects, and thus arrived at the conclusion that there is something in blacks that will not fight lead poisoning. In another study, he postulated that more black suspects in handcuffs were injured in police cars on the way to station houses than white, which he attributes to a metabolism defect in blacks who lose their balance when being roughed up in the backseat of automobiles.

In his most recent paper titled, "Racial Weaknesses As Applied to the Gates Syndrome," just published in the Police Gazette, Professor Klu writes:

"With regard to chokeholds in the United States, three times as many blacks as whites suffer severe injuries to themselves before being booked at the police station. For reasons that cannot yet be medically explained, blacks require twice as much oxygen when being choked as whites. This phenomenon, known as 'Gates Syndrome,' has doctors perplexed, particularly because a black's arteries cannot deliver sufficient blood to the brain.

"A normal white person can withstand being choked for at least three minutes without passing out. In tests at several Los Angeles police stations, black volunteers passed out in less than two minutes. One theory expounded by visiting Professor Bother of the University of South Africa, is that, when arrested, a black's fear of the police causes his veins to contract at the moment he is being choked. When the hold is released the trauma remains and it is impossible for the blood to go to the head.

"Professor Lembeck, of the National Police Institute of Houston, disagrees with Bother on his trauma theory and maintains the 'Gates Syndrome' can be attributed to a vitamin deficiency caused by a black person's diet. Lembeck says, 'Cutting off a normal victim's windpipe for a reasonable amount of time should not cause undue damage, unless the victim is lacking vitamin F, which is essential for breathing. Therefore it is recommended that the arresting officer use a chokehold only after he has been given training in mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.'

"There is not enough data available at this time to accept either Bother or Lembeck's theories. The racial connection has been established as a cause of 'Gates Syndrome' but the 'why' is still a question mark.

"Unfortunately Civil Rights organizations in Los Angeles are trying to cut off research work in this important area by demanding the chokeholds be abolished before the medical cure for 'Gates Syndrome' can be found.

"I submit this would be a great mistake for black people everywhere. The circulatory system of blacks has tremendous scientific importance for the justice system of the country. Until we find out why they can't tolerate choking as easily as a normal white person, the mystery of black fatalities in Los Angeles will never be solved."

Counselor's Corner

Another X-Rated Subject

By DAVE BRUMMETT MDiv

It is believed in our society that being young is the greatest time in life. Our youth - centered culture praises youthful appearance, petite bodies and spirited movement. Most young people carry themselves well and are filled to capacity with energy. There are some people around who may have lost acceleration and speed. They are the x-rated subject.

Such individuals seldom want you to know their ages. It's really none of your business, many would express. Other might make the remark, "One's age isn't important because you're as young as you feel." That may be true, and a qualifier is needed: and I can't do things as easy, as quickly or as often as I once did them.

Old seems to carry a message few want to accept; yet, an old car, old dress, old pair of shoes don't seem to bother us. The old man or old lady comments really get to some people. The old country and the old quilt seem to bring pride and security to the surface.

When is old not young anymore? Margery Brown writes in McCalls, June, 1982 issue, "old age, as an abstraction, never arrives. Like a balloon, it stays comfortably ahead of us... When I was 12, old was wearing lipstick and a bra. When I was 20, 45 was on the lip of the tomb. At this particular moment, 87 seems old." Becoming old may be gradual, but it's coming if you're fortunate enough to live that long.

This writer has known some of the finest older people, in years, of course. There is a unique quality in such people. Experience surrounds them like the aura which comforts and gives one sanctuary. Having done something a certain way for a lifetime helps me to be successful in planting and harvesting a garden, keeping my mouth free from dentures and shows me successful, business techniques. One's experience is usually the best education we can receive.

Older people tell funny stories. Some tell them over and over. They are seldom boring because older people can change the characteristics and particulars to get the same message across. Family stories seem the best, don't they? Especially those you want to accept, but don't quite believe. Grandfathers are a joy to be around.

These people are delightful, even at their worst moments. Yes, they want respect. Acceptance. Health. A fair hearing. Success. Grandchildren's visits. Who among us do not want the same? Older people have a way of forgiving negligence. They protect us from being irresponsible. Generosity is the first bite of apple from grandfather's hand. Peace is grandmother's hypnotic motion in her rocker. Thanksgiving is the elderly shedding a tear during a prayer.

Sure, the old person can be a bother, in the way, a nuisance. They get tired, moody, hungry, dirty, ill and depressed. They're hired! Isn't that wonderful? Yes, these individuals are human!

Time is significant to the older generation. It is valuable, spent wisely. An elderly person paces his day and glorifies in completing a task. He seldom hurries through a project because the finished product has meaning for him. The self assignment was a worthy goal. His clock ticked on instead of the alternative.

Old age is another "passage" through life's consistent change. It has its pitfalls, tragedies and grief; it has comfort, solitude, satisfaction and completion. When one becomes old, her generosity is not forgotten. Her toothless smile, the wrinkled face, altered gait and white hair are special qualities. Thank God for grandmothers!

Margery Brown remarks, "In the meantime, I'm still not used to the delight of waking up in the morning and wondering whether to get up or not. I get up by choice. I enjoy the lack of musts and shoulds and oughts. I enjoy the luxury of choice... I enjoy becoming, or trying to become, the person I was cut out to be. Being old suits me. If this is the wrong side of the hill, it's the side I like best... So far, that is."

Have you ever watched an old gentle man peel an apple? His professional touch is a gentle wonder. Have you ever watched a gracious old woman lick ice cream from a cone? Her mannerisms are well learned. If you have not known an old person, your life has missed an adventure and your education is incomplete.

Old age is not the end of the world. It is a gift that each of us anticipates. Hopefully, getting to be an old person will be as important to us as being young. The x-rated subject, old age, changes its rating as we learn to believe in its purpose - to finish the assignment we were born to complete - Life!

Dear Abby

Lovesick women needs to find another doctor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To make a long story short, I am in love with my gynecologist. Other than for routine checkups, I keep finding excuses to make an appointment so I can see him. I did have cancer of the uterus, but I had surgery for that and am completely cured now.

I'm divorced and have teen-age children, but I don't know anything about my doctor. One day when I was in his office, we happened to look at each other and our eyes just locked! He didn't look away until I did, and neither of us said anything, but I know it was an electric moment for both of us.

I've been alone for nine years and own my own home. I don't know if he's married or not. He won't offer a word of encouragement during my visits, but he is very friendly and seems to enjoy talking to me. After he looked at me that way, I can't help wondering if there's a chance for me. It says on my chart I am not married, so I'm sure he knows I'm available.

After every appointment, before I leave, he says, "Is there anything you want to ask me?"

Would it be terrible if I said, "Yes. Would you like to see me outside the office?"

GOT A CRUSH ON MY DOCTOR

DEAR GOT: It wouldn't be "terrible," but it would be inappropriate. There's an unwritten law that doctors do not date their patients. If the "crush" becomes too crushing, find another gynecologist. This one is off limits.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 14 years old and I like to talk on the phone a lot with my friends. I want to get a phone of my own so that my parents won't have to yell at me for tying up the line or getting too many phone calls.

I am willing to buy the phone and pay the phone bills myself with the money I earn from baby-sitting, yard work and so on. All of my friends have their own phones, and over half of them bought the phones themselves and pay their own phone bills the same way I want to.

My parents say "No!" Why, Abby? Please tell my why. And if you have any good ideas on how I can change their minds, please tell me.

WANTS MY OWN PHONE

DEAR WANTS: I suspect that your parents are fearful that if you have your own phone you will spend more time talking and less on homework and chores. Try to make a deal with them. Agree to keep your grades at a level that they consider acceptable if you can have your own phone. And if you fall below that level, the phone will be removed without a whimper.

Astro-Graph

Your greatest career opportunities this coming year are likely to stem from the field where you are presently situated. Look for your bluebird there.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others will give you the benefit of the doubt today if you first show an inclination to do so with them. Fairness begets similar treatment. Predictions of what's in store for you for each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even in associations where the companionship is mutually enjoyable, the arrangement could begin to wear a bit if you spend too much time together today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) No one will think less of you today for asking questions about things which you do not understand. Your image won't be hurt, even if you think your inquiries are dumb.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to be quite lucky today, but not necessarily in financial or material ways. Your good fortune comes from that which does not gather rust.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will come out OK today in matters affecting your material security, provided you are not overanxious or too self-seeking.

Practice give-and-take.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're apt to be a trifle more competent than your peers today. What will be easy for you could be difficult for them. Be patient and understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This could turn out to be a rewarding day, if you keep your priorities in order. Don't waste your time on situations which have little value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be sure that the goals you establish for yourself today are worthy of what it may cost you to achieve them. Don't win a battle and lose a war.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Sometimes the best routes to success are actually the easiest. This will be true for you today. Try not to put obstacles in your own path.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you may feel that you cannot do what you hope to do without the support of others. This is not necessarily true, because you're luckiest acting alone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Beware of tendencies today to alter your success patterns. In areas where all is going smoothly, don't disrupt developments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Enter into agreements today with your eyes wide open. Once you make a commitment be sure to stand by your word, or it could jeopardize an association.

A LOOK AT THE RIVER. Michael Sievers, director of the Mud Island Mississippi River Museum in Memphis, Tenn., measures the depth of a topographic hydraulic model of the Mississippi River. Riverwalk, which is 1,800 feet long at a scale of 30 inches to the mile, will be among the highlights of the $63 million, 50-acre Mud Island tourist attraction which opens July 3.

Foreign hotels have Ma Bell in a tizzy

NEW YORK (AP) — Ma Bell is in a snit about the way her flock of customers is being treated by some overseas hotels. They're padding the bills on international phone calls, she says.

Upholstering might better describe the practice. According to AT&T, parent of the great Bell family of phone companies, surcharges range up to 300 percent.

The company also says it is fed up with the practice because, among other things, it loses millions of dollars a year when Americans traveling abroad believe rates are too high for them to call home.

Moreover, the company says, it gets the blame. Said a public relations representative: "They swear under their breath and decide to write a nasty letter to Ma Bell when they get home."

And they do. The company's director of correspondent relations, one of the fellows who deals with foreign phone companies, says the surcharges account for about 90 percent of complaints made to him.

He cites these examples: —A traveler who made a $22 call from West Berlin to Philadelphia, and then found when checking out that he was billed $60 by the hotel.

—A guest who complained to a Paris hotel when billed $90 for two $7.50 calls, and was told the $75 surcharge covered the cost of phone equipment and staffing the switchboard with multi-lingual operators.

"Some modest charges are reasonable," said the PR representative. It is true, he said, that hotels in recent years have had to pay for more modern equipment and that they must have a multilingual staff.

"But they have made a profit center out of the switchboard," he complained. In most instances, he said, the traveler has no idea he is being billed by the hotel at far above its actual costs. Burdened with luggage, and racing to make connections, the customer is in no position to argue very long.

While such surcharges might be standard in many overseas hotels, they are not customary in the United States, and that makes Americans particularly vulnerable to the practice.

So bothersome has the practice become that AT&T assigned a director — that's one step below vice president — to come up with a solution. E. E. Carr, the director, designed what is now called Teleplan.

Teleplan is an agreement with overseas hotels to set moderate surcharges and a fixed maximum, regardless of the length of the call.

Hard times for nation's homeowners

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

The high unemployment rate and the shaky housing market are causing thousands of homeowners to fall behind on their mortgage payments and many of them are facing foreclosure — an often-lengthy process which can leave both borrowers and lenders at a loss.

The Mortgage Bankers Association of America said last week that mortgages on at least 100,000 homes were "in the process of foreclosure" as of the end of the first three months of 1982.

The foreclosure rate of just over half a percent was the highest since the group started keeping records in 1953. The numbers don't mean, however, that 100,000 families will lose their homes.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the bankers' group, whose members "service" or manage mortgages for lenders of all types, said that the term "in the process of foreclosure" covers many situations. It may mean that the lender has filed a first foreclosure notice; or it may mean that the final title transfer is under way.

Riedy said he did not know how many of the homes now in the process of foreclosure will be lost. In the past, he said, homeowners in trouble could sell their homes and pay off the mortgage. Today's economy make sales more difficult and people who are unemployed over a long period simply fall further behind.

Walter C. Klein Jr., executive vice president of Advance Mortgage Corp., a Michigan-based company which services 185,000 loans in 40 states, said that the traditional pattern shows that about half of all foreclosure procedures are actually completed. The remaining borrowers come up with the back payments or sell their houses.

That may be changing, however. And Klein said the situation varies with location. The Detroit office of Advance, for example, recommended foreclosure on 1.71 percent of the mortgages it serviced in 1981. Almost three-fourths of the recommendations were completed.

Felix Beck, chairman of the board of Margaretten and Co., a national mortgage banker based in Perth Amboy, N.J., said his company does not institute foreclosure proceedings until a homeowner is at least four months delinquent in payments.

State laws affect the time that passes before the initial notice of foreclosure and the final loss of property. In New Jersey, Beck said, it generally takes at least six or seven months.

One of the last formalities before foreclosure is something called a sheriff's sale where the house is put on the block. Anyone can bid.

As a rule, Beck said, the holder of the first or primary mortgage bids an amount equal to the outstanding loan. If there are no other bids — and other bids are rare — title is transferred to the lender.

When the lender finally winds up to the house, it usually is offered for sale through a local real estate broker. In cases where the loan is insured by the Federal Housing Administration or the Veterans Administration, the government will often pay off the lender and take possession of the property.

Klein said it takes an average of seven months to sell a house after the lender has taken title. If the house is sold at a profit, the extra money, after the lender's expenses, goes to the homeowner.

'Nine' and 'Dreamgirls' split musical Tonys

NEW YORK (AP) — "Dreamgirls," a flashy Broadway production about the problems of a hit singing trio, and "Nine," the surreal story of an Italian movie director and the women in his life, split the lion's share of the Tony awards for musicals.

"Dreamgirls" won six awards, including best actor, actress and supporting actress in a musical. "Nine" won five awards, including best musical, during Sunday night's award ceremony.

"The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," a "great gamble" which cost $100 a ticket and took eight hours to see, received four Tonys in the drama field, including best play.

"Nicholas Nickleby," based on Charles Dickens' novel about a young man maturing in 18th-century London, was brought to New York by England's Royal Shakespeare Company. Roger Rees, who played the bright-eyed and exhausting title role, won a Tony as best actor in a play.

Trevor Nunn and John

Caird won as best directors for "Nickleby," and John Napier and Dermot Hayes won for best scenic design.

The "Dreamgirls" awards included best actress for Jennifer Holliday, the belting lead singer of the trio; best actor for Ben Harney, the trio's opportunistic manager; best supporting actor for Cleavant Derricks, as a rhythm 'n' blues star; best book for Tom Eyer; best choreography for Michael Bennett and Michael Peters; best lighting for Tharon Musser.

Zoe Caldwell won the Tony for best performance by an actress in a play for "Medea."

South African Zakes Mokae won as best supporting actor

"Nine," based on Italian director Federico Fellini's "8½," won five awards, including the big one — best musical; best supporting actress for France's Liliane Montevocchi as a Folies Bergere dancer turned film director; best director for Tommy Tune; best score for Maury Yeston; best costumes for William Ivey Long.

Zoe Caldwell won the Tony for best performance by an actress in a play for "Medea."

South African Zakes Mokae won as best supporting actor

as a tearroom waiter in Fugard's "Master Harold ... and the boys."

Amanda Plummer won as best supporting actress for "Agnes of God," in which she plays a nun who gives birth to a baby which is later found murdered.

Miss Plummer also was nominated in the best actress category for her characterization of the pregnant waif in "A Taste of Honey," a production that closed earlier in the season. Her father, Christopher Plummer, was nominated as best actor for his deady iago in "Othello," but lost to Rees, although the Shakespearean tragedy took the best revival award.
