Argentina surrenders the Falklands

By The Associated Press

The Union Jack flew today over the capital of the Falkland Islands, a British reporter said, and Argentine troops throughout the islands surrendered to British forces that had shattered the defenses at the Stanley garrison

British Defense Ministry sources said about 14,800 Argentine soldiers laid down their arms, 11,000 of them in Stanley alone. The figure astonished British commanders, who had estimated Argentine troop strength on the Falklands at about 8.500, the sources said

The office of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher announced early today that Argentina had formally surrendered at 9 p.m. Falklands time (8 p.m. EDT), after a 74-day war that began with the Argentine invasion of the islands April 2 and killed a total of more than 1,000 servicemen, according to British Independent Television News correspondent Michael Nicholson reported later from Stanley that British forces had raised their country's flag over the governor's house.

Government sources said Britain was working through the Swiss Embassy in Buenos Aires to secure a stable peace on the South Atlantic archipelago

. The Buenos Aires government announced that the military - commanders of the two forces had drawn up a document "establishing the conditions for a cease-fire and the withdrawal of the (Argentine) troops." The junta's communique made no mention of surrender, but said the document would be made public when the text is available.

"Great Britain is great again," Mrs. Thatcher said outside her Downing Street office just before midnight Monday. A crowd of about 100 sang "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the Queen" as she returned from addressing Parliament.

Aides to Mrs. Thatcher said she was considering a visit to the Falklands and had postponed her scheduled address Wednesday at the U.N. special session on disarmament in New York until later in the week

The official communique from her residence at 10 Downing Street quoted marine Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, commander of British land forces on the Falklands, as saying that arrangements were being made to assemble the captured Argentines for return to the mainland with their arms and equipment.

'Falkland Islands once more under the government desired by their inhabitants — God save the Queen," Moore's message

With his forces poised on the outskirts of Stanley, Moore had flown through a snowstorm into the Argentine garrison to accept the surrender from Brig. Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez, British eyewitness reports said.

Britains rejoiced and Argentines chanted, jeered and wept over the British victory, which frustrated Argentina's 149-year-old dream of sovereignty over the windswept South Atlantic archipelago communique that the cease-fire was "de-facto," meaning that they shot down scores of enemy aircraft. it had in fact occurred, but added that the truce "has not been agreed to officially by either of the parties.'

The Argentine Joint Chiefs of Staff said in a earlier

The cease-fire was arranged when Menendez and Moore, commander of the 9,000-man offensive force, met face to face, the communique said.

Talks on surrender terms were being held at the Moddy Brook barracks just outside Stanley and probably would continue through the night, Nott said late Monday.

Britain was expected to demand the withdrawal of all Argentine troops, including some 1,500 on various parts of the islands outside Stanley. Many of these are dug in around Fox Bay on the eastern coast of West Falkland Island Argentina sent troops ashore April 2 and defeated a contingent of 80 British marines, leading Britain to send out a naval task force that eventually numbered 100 ships. Argentina claims Britain took the islands by force in 1833, expelling the Argentine administration. Official casualty reports through Saturday said at least 228 British soldiers had died in land, sea and air battles for control of the Falklands, with at least another 244 wounded. Argentine losses were estimated at 775 dead or missing and more than a

Argentina had massed its troops for a show-down fight at Stanley, a small town of frame houses on the eastern edge of East Falkland. The British began tightening the noose around the Argentine garrison last week when they seized ridges and hills 15 miles west of the capital. British troops then pushed down from the high ground in a series of assaults, punching holes through Argentina's defense lines.

Almost 6,000 British troops reportedly made the final assault, pouring over trenches and machine-gun nests as they seized Tumbledown Mountain and Wireless Ridge about a mile

The Argentine troops were "routed and fleeing through the deserted streets," Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, quoted government sources as saving.

In Buenos Aires, about 100 demonstrators at the Casa Rosada Government House chanted "Don't surrender, don't surrender" and "Give us a rifle, give us a rifle" when the British victory became clear. Some women in the crowd had tears streaming down their faces.

Others turned their wrath toward Argentina's military government

Why did they send our young men to fight against professionals?" asked a man on the Calle Florida pedestrian naval loss was the sinking of its only cruiser, the General mall where about 200 people gathered Monday night before a Belgrano, by a British submarine. Both countries claimed large board displaying the latest war news.

Eating their words...

The publishers of this sensational tabloid in Buenos Aires may be regretting their portrayal in jest of Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as Wonder Woman in view of Argentina's surrender of all its forces to Great Britain in the Falkland Islands last night.

.The headline says 'Thatcher is crazy. She believes she is Wonder Woman.'

.There was shouting and weeping in the streets in Buenos Aires this morning after Argentina's ruling junta announced a "cease fire" in the Falklands, as Argentinians knew this meant surrender. The month - long war has cost both sides over a billion dollars apiece and many lives. (AP Laserphoto)

Palestinian guerrilla leaders in devastated Beirut outgunned and trapped, are daring Israeli forces to hunt them down though Israel says it will not push its 10-day-old invasion of Lebanon into the capital.

The Adams say about half of the area's 250 plant species have returned in the two years since the mountain's cataclysmic first eruption May 18, 1980. The eruption left 59 people dead or missing and leveled 150 square miles of timberland.

Border Patrol stops walking

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - The U.S. Border Patrol has temporarily stopped participating in crime-fighting downtown foot patrols here because of a confusing order handed down by a federal judge, the agency's chief says.

The wording in an order filed last week by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton calls into question the ability of Border Patrol agents to legally stop and ask people their citizenship, Alan Eliason said Monday

He said agents no longer will pair up with El Paso police officers to patrol downtown on foot until the border patrol's lawyers study the order.

Statistics show the foot patrol cut downtown crime 30 percent in the last three months, Eliason said.

The Border Patrol in January raided bars frequented by Mexican-American patrons and netted 300 illegal aliens. But agents also scooped up at least two legal citizens and angered two bar

Those four sued the agency, and their lawyers asked Bunton to stop the agency from raiding bars without warrants or the owner's consent until the suit is settled.

According to Agriculture Department statistics, the Soviet Union imported more than 14.8 million metric tons of grain from its primary foreign suppliers during January-April, compared to about 10.8 million tons in the first four months of last year.

But in the four-month period of 1981, according to the figures, the United States provided only about 4.13 million tons of the total — about 38 percent.

In January-April of this year, however, U.S. shipments of grain to the Soviet Union totaled approximately 7.69 million metric tons or 52 percent of the total imported by the Soviets during that period. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and

AMTRAK derails, at least one is killed

EMERSON, Iowa (AP) — An Amtrak train headed west from Chicago to Denver derailed today on tracks washed out by heavy rains, injuring at least 150 people and killing a girl, officials said.

An Amtrak spokesman in Washington, D.C., said the two engines of the train, carrying 275 passengers, overturned and all the cars jumped the tracks near this town in southwest

"As far as I know, there was only one fatality," said W.D. "Bill" Baer, a member of the Malvern rescue squad. "It was a young girl, probably in her eens. I think she probably fractured her back or neck.

Baer said rescue units and law enforcement officers were called in from towns in a 50-mile radius.

The Iowa Office of Disaster Services in Des Moines said helicopters were dispatched to the scene from both Omaha and Des Moines to rescue some of the more seriously injured.

School buses were sent to take the passengers to the Nishna Valley School, located between Emerson and Hastings

Amtrak spokesman Mike Delaney said the derailment, which occurred shortly after 3 a.m., was caused by a washout on the Burlington Northern tracks. Southwest Iowa had heavy rains during the night and flash flood watches were in effect for the area.

During the night, some residents in the Emerson area had been evacuated due to flooding.

Mike Wadum, public affairs officer at St. Joseph's Hospital in Omaha, identified a passenger brought to the hospital by Life Flight helicopter as Kenneth Moore, 29, of Lincoln, Neb. Wadum said Moore was in serious condition with multiple pelvic

War declared on oilfield theft

An aggressive campaign against oil field thefts in Texas has begun with the installation of a new permanent statewide hotline. The new toll free hotline number is 1 - 800 - 645 - 2677 or 1 - 800 - OIL - COPS. The Petroleum Industry Security Council (PISC) is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons suspected of stealing crude oil or oil field equipment, or for information leading to the recovery of stolen oil field

The new hotline will replace the oil field theft hotline oeprated by North Texas Oil and Gas Association. The

Capt. Gary B. Laramore, Commander of Co. B in Pampa, Borger, and Shamrock, will be among the Texas Panhandle guardsmen and women preparing for their annual summer training at North Fort Hood, Texas.

Advance elements of the 2nd Battalion, 142nd Infantry (Mechanized), Texas Army National Guard will begin moving out Thursday, June 17, and all members will be at North Fort Hood by Sunday June 20th.

The Battalion, which consists of units from Amarillo, Lubbock, Pampa, Plainview, Wellington, Brownfield, Borger, Shamrock, Leveland, and Tulia, is commanded by Lt. Colonel William E. Murphy of Lubbock. The goal of the Battalion in this annual training is to improve each individual in their military skills and to work collectively with their parent unit and the active army.

Live firing will be conducted on the Mechanized Infantry Platoon Attack Course. All crew served weapons will also have live firing. Amphibious training will be conducted by "swimming" their armored vehicles across a deep lake.

The units are expected to return home on July 4.

SPEARMAN. Texas (AP) - Thunderstorms which spawned a tornado that flipped over mobile homes and injured 10 people Monday night moved out of the state today, leaving a cleanup task behind for the Panhandle city's residents.

'Neighbor will be helping neighbor," said a Hansford County sheriff's dispatcher. "And the power company employees are coming up to help. It got dark so quickly after it hit that we don't know how much needs to be done.

Winds from the twister broke out windows in the county jail, damaged some homes and downed power lines east of the city. Hansford Hospital spokeswoman Carol Fletcher said those injured had been treated and released.

"They just had cuts and abrasions from the hail and the glass that broke," she said.

Remaining Scattered thunderstorms dissipated as a cold front moved through the northern Panhandle, pushing southeast. Cooler temperatures and partly cloudy skies were expected for the Panhandle behind the front.

Hail accompanying the twister smashed the windshield of the car belonging to Hansford County Sheriff R.L. McFarlin, said the dispatcher, who asked not to be identified.

'We have at least four trailers over," McFarlin said. "The damaged homes we have been able to check on have roof damage and windows knocked out. The people we have visited out there said they were down in the cellar when the damage

The sheriff told the National Weather Service a tornado turned over trailers, damaged some homes and knocked down power lines just east of

Farmer Loyal Turner, an amateur radio operator serving as a storm spotter, reported his pickup truck was literally picked up and the windows smashed by the hail

A tornado watch issued Monday night for part of the Panhandle along the cold front expired at 4 a.m. today. A strong flow of moist air from the Gulf of Mexico has now developed ahead of the front, with southerly winds gusting at 10 to 25 mph.

Some low cloudiness was reported over parts of South and Central Texas, while elsewhere in the state skies were generally fair.

High temperatures should range from the upper 70s in the Panhandle to near 100 in the Big Bend. Early-morning readings were from the 60s in the Panhandle to near 80 along the lower Rio Grande

Prison crisis in Texas far from over

Overcrowding problems at Texas prisons will not go away soon despite the new $55.5 million appropriation by the Legislature, says Department of Corrections Director Jim Estelle.

'This problem didn't happen overnight and it won't be solved overnight," Estelle

He said Texas' booming population growth, hard economic times and public sentiment toward stiffer criminal penalties contributed to the overcrowding made worse because new prison construction did not match the inmate growth.

'As long as the Texas population continues to grow as fast as it has been, there's going to continue to be a crisis," he said Monday in an interview in El Paso, where he was attending the annual

Estelle said the appropriation will enable the corrections department to add inmate space faster, but not fast enough to solve the problem

"You have to be happy that some money was allocated." he said. "But the corrections board had proposed $85 million and we got $55 million. We're still $30 million short of what the board thought would be necessary.'

Estelle said completion of a new 1,000-bed facility is more than a year away. But he said construction of other facilities is being accelerated and some facilities intended for other programs will be used to house inmates.

Although new beds becoming available next month should prevent another halt to prison admissions lake the one ordered last month, Estelle said the controlled admissions policy probably will continue for some time.

'We were only shut down for seven days," the corrections director said. 'Now we're back in stride and most of the jails are able to get their committed prisoners into the system in a

Judge orders moving prisoners

HOUSTON (AP) - County officials say they forsee no problems completing a new downtown jail in time to begin the court-ordered transfer of prisoners from the old. overcrowded lockup before a Sept. 15 deadline.

U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue ordered county commissioners Monday to do everything they could to ensure completion of the new jail's basement and first nine floors by Sept. 15.

The partial ruling, issued after four days of hearings, ordered Sheriff Jack Heard to begin moving inmates into the new jail by Sept. 15 and to complete by transfer within a targeted move-in dates. Bue said the court "will not look favorably on any application for an extension of time to commence or complete the movement

Bue's order, however, did not address several related proposals by the prisoners attorneys, including closing the present downtown jail after Nov. 1 and limiting the number of inmates housed in the new facility.

Heard said he was pleased with Bue's order.

"I thought it was a very fair ruling, a very practical ruling," said Heard, adding his staff would have no trouble completing training of employees of the new facility by the deadline.

Bue's ruling also set up a series of hearings to monitor the progress of construction on the new jail.

The judge ordered Heard to present his plans for staffing the new facility and training the workers who will operate it by June 25. The first hearing on construction was set for June 29.

Gerald Birnberg, one of two ombudsmen overseeing the court's 1975 order concerning the jail's administration, said he hoped the order would raise the consciousness of Harris County officials.

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio (AP) - The director of a job placement program that helped Ohioans find jobs in the Sun Belt says he doesn't know how he can be effective now that state officials have told him not to stray beyond Ohio's borders. Walton said his agency worked closely with Texas Employment Commission workers to place Ohioans in jobs there. But he said a recent television news story about the program signaled the end of that cooperation.

Japanese drag their feet

Japan has grown justifiably wealthy exporting its high - quality manufactured products to Europe and North America. But the Japanese continue to risk this path to prosperity by dragging their feet when it comes to opening their own markets to foreign goods.

The trade "reforms" announced recently by the Japanese government are a case in point. On paper, the Japanese concessions to pressure from Western Europe and the United States appear impressive enough. Tariffs are to be abolished on 96 industrial products and reduced on another 119 items.

Coming in the wake of tariff reductions on 1.653 items last Decmber and January, the further liberalizations announced recently enable Japanese trade officials to contend that they are steadily breaking down the walls of Japan's traditional protectionism.

But there is less here than meets the eye. Most barriers to the Japanese market are of the non tariff variety. Foreign businessmen seeking to market their products in Japan must first pass them through a maze of nit - pickin regulations and inspections. A host of pressures, official and otherwise, discourage the establishment of adequate distribution and parts systems essential to support volume sales of foreign products in Japan.

Moreover, the Japanese government continues to maintain retrictive quotas against agricultural imports, a practice especially harmful to American farmers.

Few if any of these non - tariff forms of protectionism appear to be affected by the concessions announced by the Japanese since last December. And a spokesman for the National Asociation of Manufacturers characterized even the tariff reductions as "a totally unacceptable . . . gesture.

The current recession with its painfully high rates of unemployment combined with the continuing flood of Japanese imports into the United States is building ever more support in Congress for protectionist measures against Japan. Similar pressures are building in Europe as well.

Though these protectionist measures would prove most harmful to our own interests in the long run, they move that much closer to enactment every time the Japanese trumpet trade concessions that are more apparent than real.

Groups feed on taxpayers

When the Fair Budget Action Campaign announced, in early April, that its 86 endorsing organizations were planning to take their objections against the Reagan budget cuts to the streets, it sounded almost like a nostalgic echo of the activist 1960s. Here were union, civil rights, anti - war, anti - poverty, religious and environmental groups. purporting to represent total memberships of more than 10 million people, promising marches, demonstrations and other activities to protest on behalf of the poor, the disadvantaged and the downtrodden. There are some important differences between the activist groups of the 1960s and the current pale imitations of the 1980s. For starters, many 1960s protesters were genuinely anti - establishment. The current models are the establishment. When they protest against budget cuts, many of them are not simply advocating a cause; they have a substantial vested interest in keeping that federal money coming. Many of these politically and socially active organizations have been getting substantial amounts of their funding directly from the government. Kept de critics, anyone?

Of the 86 groups involved in the at Fair Budget Action Campaign, at lif least 31 have received sums from the sie federal government in the last five years. While the funds often came in pr the form of grants assigned to ar specific projects, the funds without ar question contributed to the his organizations' ability to engage in political activism. When a certain portion of operating expenses are covered by a federal grant, money ca raised from other sources can be Th assigned more effectively and mi directly to political and social tin activism.

In a few cases, we're not talking Ad about much money. The National ex Council of Churches, for exmaple, got $10,000 from the Department of Energy to prepare "graphic Un materials relating to energy determergency planning." The mo Community Nutrition Institute got a de few thousand from the Federal eruTrade Commission to be an sul-"intervenor" in a hearing, under a

Mai program that has since been ended. ther For many of these activist eac organizations, however, federal money is literally keeping them in business. Beteen 1976 and 1981 the National Council of Senior Citizens received more than $154 million from various federal agencies. About $50 million of the council's current budget of $52.5 million comes from the federal gvernment. Is it any wonder these people are concerned about budget cuts?

The National Urban League got about $110 million in federal aid in 1980. In the last five years, this organization has gotten 66 grants from HUD's Housing Counseling Program, 28 from CETA and five from the Department of Education. Largesse extends to samller groups. ACORN (Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now) received $231,370 between 1976 and 1981 and had four volunteers from VISTA assigned to it. One of its officials, in a recent magazine article, said this: "We do not use our food - buying clubs as anything other than a tool t build the necessary social bonds for our people to struggle in the political and social arena. Our interest is not in specific or immediate reforms; instead, our purpose in such participation is to build political power.

The organization that has volunteered to coordinate the Fair Budget Action Campaign from its Washington offices, using its facilities and staff, is the Food Research Action Center. Last year FRAC got $645,000 from the Community Services Organization. No wonder it has resources to spare.

Groups carrying the sympathetic labels of "public interest," "consumer" and "civil rights" received a steady infusion of money from the taxpayers throughout the 1970s. Yet they seldom provide direct benefits to the poor. Instead, they ususally consist of well - educated, experienced activists, lobbyists and community organizers. Trying to help those in need by funding such outfits is "trickle - down" ecnomics with a vengeance. Nobody would deny these people the right to pursue their own political and social agenda in complete freedom. That they would be so presumptuous as to claim the right to do so at taxpayers' expense, however, is outrageous in the extreme. It almost amounts to having the government fund lobbyists to persuade it to spend more money on lobbyists to persuade it to spend more money — ad nauseam. It's time to call a halt to this effrontery.

The next energy crisis

within the next two decades is expected

Thus, even if per capita levels of energy use are maintained, the LDCs will require substantial increases in fuel supplies in the next century - but nobody knows if the resources and technologies will be available to meet that demand upon access to a proportional share of the world's available energy to support their growing commercial and industrial sectors.

That trend is already underway. During a five - year period in the mid -1970s, energy demand grew at 6 percent annually in the LDCs compared with only I percent in Western Europe.

Yet per capita energy consumption in the approximately 30 industrialized nations of the world remains nine times higher than in the LDCs.

"More" means billions beyond arms expenditures that already are at staggering levels in a thriving business in which the United States is already deeply involved and getting in even deeper.

The figure is based on data from the Cngressional Research Service and other official government sources. It breaks down into $25 billion in weapons business during the year for non -Communist nations and $16 billion for all Communist nations, including

The United States is the major dealer on the non - Communist side - $9.7 billion — while the soviets alone account for $15 billion of the Communist total, an imbalance that the administration has recently been playing up. But as the center's study figures it, the United States has a firm grip on the No. 1 position in the long

"Since 1973, when world arms trade exploded," it observes, "the figures are $75.2 billion for the U.S. and $55.7 billion for the U.S.S.R.'

A significant portion of U.S. arms has gone to key European allies - $5 billion go Britain and $4.6 billion to West Germany in the last decade. But much more goes to the Third World. For the same decade, Saudi Arabia was the leading cash sale customer at $34 billion. Iran, another bulk customer, was on the books for $14 billion.

Both, of course, could afford it. Whether the United States could really afford the business politically, considering the most recent chapters of the Iranian story, is another matter.

But the list of customers of the United States and other arms merchants also includes many nations that can't afford it but, after the Falklands lessons and the Exocet, are going to be tempted to plunge more deeply than ever. Talk about losers.

general of the Commission of the European Community, offered another, equally gloomy perspective on the situation:

"In many regions of the developing world, the energy problem is compounded by the growing scarcity of firewood, the increasingly acute problem of deforestation and the scarcity of fertilizers because farm wastes are used as fuel."

The rapid escalation of crude oil prices has had an especially devastating effect on the economies of many LDCs because they lack the resources to pay for a commodity which has increased almost 20 - fold in price during the past decade.

The LDCs' debt has soared from about $100 billion in 1970 to an estimated $600 billion this year and in recent years those, countries have been forced to earmark more than 40 percent of their total export earnings for oil purchases.

They increasingly find themseles in a "Catch 22" situation where energy availability is indispensable to econmic development yet they cannot obtain adequate fuel because of a lack of economic resources.

With the exception of the Persian Gulf countries and a few Latin American nations, most LDCs have no significant indigenous supplies of crude oil, while only India and Korea among the LDCs have substantial coal reserves.

There are, however, vast untapped energy resources in the LDCs, especially in the ares of hydropower and biomass conversion - but the pace of their development must be quickened to serve rapidly merging demands.

If not, the symposium participants warned, there exists the terrifying prospect of a world in which too little energy is available to serve the basic needs of too many people.

Pope pleads for worker freedom

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - Pope John Paul II, on a hectic 12-hour visit, today pleaded for worker freedom in a speech to the International Labor Organization and greeted two members of Poland's suspended Solidarity union.

His 60-minute speech made no direct reference to the military crackdown on the movement in his homeland, but the Polish-born pope said freedom of workers to associate in unions was a fundamental human right.

"Yet it is severely threatened, often flouted," the pope said. "It seems essential to point out that cohesion of the forces of society ... must be the outcome of free decisions by those concerned, taken in full independence from the political authorities and arrived in full freedom ..."

The pontiff, speaking before almost 1,800 delegates to the annual conference of the 149-nation ILO, said "the worldwide common good requires a new solidarity without frontiers."

The pope exchanged greetings with Solidarity representatives during a private meeting with worker delegates. The encounter with the Solidarity activists, who were outside Poland when martial law was imposed, was unexpected and brief.

John Paul arrived in Geneva earlier today to proclaim his message of peace and social justice.

It was the pontiff's 14th foreign trek and his third in less than three weeks. He earlier traveled to Britain and Argentina, leading thousands of Roman Catholics in prayer and urging those nations to end their undeclared war over the Falkland Islands.

The pope's Alitalia Boeing 727 landed at Geneva's Cointrin Airport at 8:40 a.m. (2:40 EDT). Under cloudy skies the 62-year-old pontiff emerged, dressed in white robes, to a greeting by Swiss President Fritz Honegger and church and civic leaders.

The pope was accompanied by Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the No. 2 man at the Vatican as secretary of state; Cardinal Bernardin Gantin, the Benin-born prefect of the Vatican

Peace Commission, and other prelates. Vatican officials said the pontiff planned no rest during the brief tour and would make several speeches, say a Mass and reiterate the themes of peace and social justice that have dominated his other trips.

John Paul scheduled addresses to the 148-nation International Labor Organization, committed to promote workers' rights, and the International Committee of the Red Cross, founder of the worldwide humanitarian movement. Both are Nobel Peace Prize

What to do when you can't pay

Associated Press Writer

Your bills are up and your income is down.

What do you do when you can't pay your debts? A growing number of families are asking themselves that question because of the recession that has pushed the unemployment rate to 9 percent and has eliminated or reduced paychecks for millions of Americans.

Lenders and credit counselors say there are several things you can take to minimize the problem of unpaid bills.

Start by explaining the situation to your creditors. "At this particular time they're exceedingly understanding," said Robert Gibson, head of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, a non-profit organization which operates more than 200 counseling centers across the country.

Gibson explained that changes in the law have made it easier for people to escape their debts by going bankrupt; lenders would rather accept reduced or delayed payments than take the risk of never getting their money at all

Borrowing money to pay existing debts may or may not be a good idea. Consolidating what you owe into a single loan is usually helpful only if the interest rate on such a consolidation loan is lower than the interest you are paying on the money you

A consolidation loan also may give you a false sense of security. "Most people can't handle them," said Gibson. Once they are relieved of the immediate pressure of overdue bills, they start spending again and wind up even deeper in debt. James Kendall, a spokesman for the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said consumers should not ignore signs of trouble in the hope that the problem will solve itself.

"Take some steps early on to avert the panic," he said. "Take the initiative.

Suppose you have lost your job. Or your working hours have been cut back. You know you're going to have trouble making next month's mortgage payment on time.

Explain the problem to the lender immediately; don't wait? until the payment already is overdue. "Go to them before they ! come to you," said Kendall. "Lenders will look much more; kindly on someone who tells them in advance (about a potential problem).

Be completely frank. You will have to give the lender all the details of your financial situation - even if it makes you uncomfortable. "Depending on who you are and what kind of payment record you have, you may get a fair amount; lender, Kendall added.

The definition of "a fair amount" will vary from lender to lender, but you may, for example, be able to pay only the interest on your mortgage for several months or you may be able to cut your payments in half. You may even be allowed to skip a couple months completely.

DEAR ABBY: I read in the Bucks County (Pa.) Courier Times that there is a new organization in that area called "Children of Aging Parents." That's exactly what I need: some people who are in the same boat as I am - people who can guide me in caring for my aging parents.

I need to know how to deal with the physical and medical problems of my parents - now both in their 80s. Also, I need to know how to be more patient when they become forgetful and repetitious, and sometimes paranoid and hostile. Please tell me how to reach this great group. Thank you!

It consists of adult children who have the responsibility of an aging parent or family member. CAPS provides training, education, counseling and rap sessions as well as information and referral services related to caring for the older person. It is a loving, caring, supportive organiza-

DEAR ABBY: Ever since our son was born (six months ago), my husband started calling me "Mamma." I really don't like it. I've told him I don't like it and to please quit, but he still calls me "Mamma.

How can I get him to stop? It turns me off in bed. NOT HIS MAMMA

DEAR NOT: Remind him. In bed.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has never given me a present for Mother's Day or any other occasion since the day we met seven years ago. He simply doesn't care about special dates. Do I feel hurt or "forgotten"? No! Why? Because he never forgets to take out the garbage, wash the truck, bathe three dogs, take two preschool children out alone on a weekend afternoon, clean the basement, trim the hedges, repair whatever needs fixing in the house, deposit his paycheck, and come right home after work.

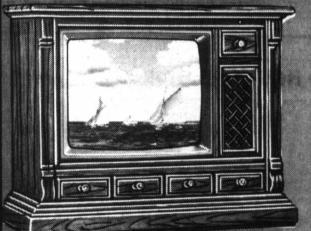

And yes, he never forgets to give me a hug and tell me he loves me. So who needs presents?

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) - These are tough times for economic forecasters, which is to say the times demand decisions. Will the economy bounce, or will it just drag itself along as it has been doing? Or even fall again?

Billions of dollars conceivably could be at stake. If, for instance, the economist foresees an improvement, he might tip his company's decision in favor of plant expansion. He can tip it the other way too

And, you might surmise, if he makes the wrong decision he could tip himself right out of a job. The heat's on, presenting forecasters with the toughest job of all, which is to call a turn in the economy

While many economists aren't in the forecasting business, those most often in the public eye are, and their reputations could be ruined by a bad call. True, the public has a short memory, but corporate managers have long ones; they aren't inclined to forget faulty advice.

Based on the facts. Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, reaches one conclusion, Edward Yardeni, economist for E.F. Hutton, the securities firm, reaches another

'Business has been reducing inventories at an extremely rapid says Weidenbaum, who understandably takes a positive approach. "Meanwhile, consumer spending in real terms has increased slightly

In a statement to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, the Reagan aide expressed his opinion that the July tax cut will expand consumer saving and spending.

Two days later Yardeni began his weekly "Economics Alert" with the opinion "The economy is falling off a cliff again." No, he said, the economy is not coming out of recession. It's going deeper into it.

Generally speaking, no number of internal factors can compromise reputations more than incorrectly calling major turns in the economy

High unemployment rate hits one county in southern Texas

By SUSAN STOLER

Associated Press Writer RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas (AP) -Detroit, Flint, Kokomo and other northern cities with double-digit unemployment rates move over. Last year 38.3 percent of the work force in Starr County did not have jobs. the worst unemployment rate in Texas.

The jobless picture in Starr County, located in deep south Texas, is not a new phenomenon brought on by budget cuts or industrial layoffs. There is simply no industry here for its 27,000 residents, including a large number of migrant farmworkers.

Most of the county consists of rough rolling ranch country barely fit for cattle grazing. Along the Rio Grande. large farms hire mostly seasonal workers. Oil production in the northern sections around San Isidro employ few full-time workers.

The problem stems from a combination of the county's border with Mexico and a reluctance to give up an agriculturally based economy.

The people are changing from not wanting foreign, or rather outside, business to come into the county," said Bruno Trevino, interim head of the Starr County Industrial Foundation which is trying to attract new industry to the area. "That was the attitude for a long, long time."

The dismal unemployment figure ballooned in January to 52.4 percent when only 6,000 of the county's 12,600-member labor pool had jobs, said James Barnes of the Texas Employment Commission's statistical reporting division in Austin.

The jobless rate declined to 28.8 percent in April, including those who have stopped looking for work and those who do not qualify for unemployment benefits, the commission said.

By comparison, unemployment for the entire state stands at 6.4 percent, more than three percentage points below the national average of 9.5 percent.

Per capita income for county residents was $3,493 in 1980, the second lowest in the state. Only Maverick County, further north along the U.S.-Mexican border, was worse, with

A large number of migrant farmworkers live in Starr County and cause the seasonal fluctuations in unemployment figures. The jobless rate is highest between October to February when they return home from harvesting in other states.

Trevino came home from teaching college economics to induce industry to come here. He said the work is similar to what he did as a Foreign Service officer assisting economic development in Mexico, South America and Africa.

School districts and other governmental bodies are the largest industries. Jobs there are highly favored and rarely relinquished.

Program prevents erosion of bones

ailment" that leads to a million broken bones among America's elderly every year can be prevented or eased by a program including exercise, diet and sensible shoes, a medical group said

For women, who suffer most from osteoporosis, a gradual erosion or thinning of bones, the American Society for Bone and Mineral Research also recommended hormone therapy.

There is a virtual epidemic of broken hips and fractured spines among older women, Dr. Robert P. Heaney, before a news conference called today to announce the findings.

He said one-fourth of white women over 60 will suffer a spinal fracture and a fourth of all women over 80 will break a hip because of the progressive disease

And the painful, often-crippling breaks can result from falls that would hardly have bruised the same victim two decades earlier.

Broken bones can even result from such everyday tasks as "taking a roast out of the oven, lifting a stuck window or raising the corner of a mattress." said Heaney, vice president for health science at Creighton University in

'This is at least as common as diabetes and it costs incredible amounts of money," yet few people are even aware it exists, he said Monday. "It is a strangely invisible ailment in our society.

And, he said, "It is totally asymptomatic - you don't know your bones are fragile until you break one.

The society, during a meeting in San Francisco today, was issuing a list of guidelines designed to prevent or slow the deterioration

To stem a lifetime of erosion. Heaney said, prevention is most beneficial among teen-agers and young adults and should continue for a lifetime.

The recommendations are -Daily exercise, especially running or walking. Heaney said bones, like muscles, seem to wither with disuse.

Tennis players 'prunes' of the pro sports world

AP Special Correspondent

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - One need only to jump from a big heavyweight title fight in Las Vegas, Nev., to a tennis shootout in Reno to the world's most prestigious golf tournament here to reinforce an old conclusion.

Our sports heroes — overly paid, overly glamorized and, in many cases, overly pampered - may come in a single basket but they are as different as apples, oranges and prunes

In Las Vegas, we saw a big, pleasant kid from Long Island get his dreams shattered by a better and more experienced man, the heavyweight boxing champion of the world -WBC version

His left eye gashed, bleeding, hurting and deeply disapointed. Gerry Cooney should have rushed to the hospital for some repairs.

Instead, he insisted on first going out and facing the music - the postfight press conference where Holmes earlier had shown himself to be a gracious winner.

Sandwiched between the fight in Las Vegas and the golf at Pebble Beach, was an event in Reno Sunday called "The Shoot-Out," matching two of the world's finest court talents, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

A Reno hotel casino, Harrah's, put up the cash, $125,000. It was just a tennis match, nothing at stake, a pleasant, carnival-type afternoon with a few Hollywood celebrities enlivening the soup.

Suit to block player TV fees

CHICAGO (AP) - The 26 owners of major league baseball teams Monday filed suit to block players out of money from televised

Ray Grebey, director of the owners' player relations committee, said the suit seeks a permanent injunction to recognize the clubs as sole owners of all baseball television rights.

Marvin Miller, president of the Major League Baseball Players Association, vowed to fight the owners' suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Chicago. "I'm confident that we'll win on the merits of the issues involved, Miller said.

Also on Monday, the owners endorsed a restructuring proposal that would remodel the sport's hierarchy

"It was the most constructive day baseball has had in my 13 years as commissioner," said Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who took over baseball's top job in 1969 with the promise to revamp its structure.

structure was good until we got to the modern era, where telecasts, marketing and other factors begin to have a more profound impact on the game," Kuhn said.

The restructuring proposal calls for merging the two league offices into the commissioner's office and a more centralized business

operation "from the auditor up to the owners," according to restructuring committee co-chairman Roy Eisenhardt, president of thes Oakland A's.

Under the plan, the 26 owners would operate "like a board of directors and the commissioner would be like the chief executive officer."

In another move, National League owners voted to abolish their unanimous voting rule, under which any owner can veto a request for expansion, inter-league play, a team's change of division or expulsion of an owner. Such actions will now require approval of only nine of the 12 National League owners.

Larry Holmes has to prove nothing to anybody, and hopefully, he has nothing to prove to himself.

Holmes has climbed into the professional prize ring 40 times, and 40 times he walked out a winner. He has defended the title 12 times against anybody promoter Don King and the WBC politicians put in against him.

Time after time, Holmes has risen to the occasion. He won the title from Ken Norton while fighting with a pulled muscle in his left bicep; he overcame in own overconfidence and beat Mike Weaver; he got up from smashing knockdowns to stop Earnie Shavers and Renaldo Snipes, and he handled his victory over Muhammad Ali in a no-win situation with

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Wendy and Lisa Mountz, who made medical history last summer as the first sisters to receive heart transplants, are back to riding roller coasters and swinging tennis

The teen-agers have few restrictions on their lives, though they must still take anti-rejection medication and drugs to control blood pressure. "The transplants," as their parents often refer to them, also watch their sodium, sugar and cholesterol intake

"We cheat a little bit once in a while," Lisa, 14, said with a laugh. "It's tough not to eat anything

Most victims of the heart ailment that afflicted the sisters stand about a 70 percent chance of living at least five years after a successful transplant, said Dr. James Harbrecht, the girls' doctor in Kansas City.

The sisters have a chance to live much longer than that because they were young and healthy except for the heart - at the time of their operations, and major strides have been made in transplant research since the first operation 15 years ago, the doctor said.

The girls have gone back to school and can swm, play tennis and visit a local amusement park for breathtaking rides on a giant roller coaster. "I feel pretty good," said Lisa. "I can't remember very much (about the past year) because I was kind of out of it for a long time. I used to be tired a lot and I'm not anymore.'

Until Wendy became ill with what seemed to be the flu around Thanksgiving 1980, all four of Gary and Linn Mountz's children had been in such good health that they didn't have a family doctor.

But Wendy's symptoms were diagnosed as idiopathic congestive cardiomyopathy, a usually fatal disease that deteriorates the heart muscle, slowing its ability to pump blood and swelling the organ to four times its normal size.

Five months later, tests showed Lisa also had the disease. Doctors don't know what causes the disease, although they believe it may be a virus or genetically linked.

The sisters went to Stanford University Medical Center after specialists decided transplants were their only chance. Doctors said Wendy was the sickest patient ever to survive a transplant at Stanford. She was "at death's door" when she received her new heart on July 29, 1981, Harbrecht said.

Nine days later, Lisa received the heart of a San

By late September the girls were fishing in the Pacific and eating their first hamburgers in months. Wendy, who will be a high school senior next fall, and Lisa, who will be a freshman, returned to classes in January.
