Lame-duck school chief makes 'training trips', then retires

Here he comes ...

... and there he goes!

Look, Ma, no haan — blub, blub, blub. Evil Knieval he ain't, but recent rains left plenty of water and goomy mud to cushion the fall of Douglas Winkleblack, 11, when he flipped his all-terrain cycle behind the Top O' Texas rodeo grounds in Pampa. Partly sunny skies today and Monday should dry up some of the mud.

Retiring Pampa School Superintendent Bob Phillips announced his resignation Feb. 16, but continued enjoying expenses - paid travel as late as May 5, about one month before his retirement.

Disclosures in expense statements came to light recently at school board meetings showing Phillips was still "training" for his job on expensive junkets when only weeks away from hanging it up for good.

Taxpayers spent nearly $1,000 on trips for Phillips in his last three months as a public employee, official records showed.

Phillips announced he would take his pension, retire, and enter politics at a school board meeting Feb. 16. At that meeting, the effective announced date of his retirement was Jan. 1, 1983.

The school board accepted the decision at that time.

However, at a school board meeting March 30, Phillips advanced the retirement date to June 30.

Again, the board accepted the decision.

Before the advanced retirement date, the board had already named Phillips' successor, James Trusty.

Trusty was Phillips' deputy superintendent before his appointment as boss.

The board held a meeting closed to the public on March 18 and later announced Trusty's appointment to the top job.

After the board dubbed Trusty new superintendent, Phillips said no other candidates had been considered for the job. He said Trusty had been "promoted."

Phillips is still officially Pampa's school superintendent, but Trusty has already assumed his new role as top administrator.

Trusty was listed as "superintendent" on the agenda for last Thursday's school board meeting.

Trusty said his old boss has used "accrued vacation time" to exit before the official June 30 retirement date.

While Phillips knew months ago when he would no longer be serving the school district, bills for his travel after he announced the date were approved for payment by the school board.

Recent school board-approved bills for Phillips' travel around the state after he announced he would no longer be working for the district include:

- Check No. 5587, $945.00, written May 5 for "TASB workshop in Austin."
- Check No. 5626, $42.03, written May 11 for "workshop in Austin."
- Check No. 5415, $43.29, written March 25 for "reimbursement for expenses to Austin."
- Check No. 5348, $300.00, written March 17 for "advance expenses to Austin."
- Check No. 5301, $170.19, written March 9 for "reimbursement to Midland."

A high-ranking school official told The Pampa News the above bills don't necessarily reflect the total payment of expense money to an individual, as it is common practice to separate air fare, hotels, and other expenses on separate bills for direct payment to the firms.

Many times expenses for school district trips involve payment of expenses to individuals, in addition to other checks and payments to travel agencies, motels and airlines.

Another check connected with the "TASB workshop in Austin" was written to James Trusty.

- Check No. 5588, $945.00, was written to Trusty for the same workshop.
- Another check, No. 5628, was also written to Trusty May 11 for "balance due on meeting in Austin."

Contacted at his home Saturday, Trusty said the "TASB workshop" in Austin was a meeting of the Texas Association of School Boards.

Trusty said he and Phillips and five members of the Pampa school board attended the Austin meet. He said the two checks written to himself and Phillips were expenses for all seven people.

Trusty was asked about the overall travel of school district employees. He was asked if in his opinion as superintendent, any past travel by administrative personnel might be considered excessive.

The new superintendent replied, "No, it's all been normal, just normal."

Trusty said checks written for employees' travel are sometimes written before a trip, and sometimes after the trip.

An examination of recently approved bills for district employees' travel around the state reveals the following payments were made for attendance at "alphabet soup" conferences and for other meetings and expenses:

- $215.32, "Jewelry workshop;" $607, "convention in Austin;" $34.24, "seminar in Austin;" $927.60, "travel Dec. thru March;" $456.00, "leadership contest in Corpus Christi;" two checks for $229.20, "meeting in Fort Worth;" $997.60, "contest in Amarillo;" $65.00, "round trip to Dallas for meeting;" $40.00, "registration for meeting in Dallas;" $126.58, "trip to Lubbock;" $230.15 and $207.80, "conference in Dallas;" $103.60, "expenses for appraisal meeting;" $30.00, "seminar in Canyon;" $371.50, "TMEA convention;" three checks for $194.25 each, "seminar in Austin;" two checks for $56.72, "hotel for TEOA conference;" $216, "six meals for 10 people;" $164, "three rooms;" $150, "tuition for TAAO course;" $35, "enrollment for appraisal school;" $198.60, "workshop in Dallas;" $135.60, "conference in Lubbock;" $29.20, "workshop in Canyon;" $736, "expenses to Austin for game;" $565, "UIL press conference in Austin;" $265 and $287.80, "leadership conference in Houston;" $380.00, "travel to San Antonio;" $54.00, "workshop in Amarillo;" $26.75, "mileage to air

The above list of recent travel expenses is not a total listing of administrative travel.

In addition, travel by students in choir, band or athletics is not listed.

During the past five years, the budget of the Pampa school district has more than doubled, along with district taxes.

Bob Phillips could not be reached for comment at his residence Saturday evening.

Reagan cracks down on oilfield equipment sales to Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying the military crackdown in Poland has shown little sign of easing, is expanding sanctions against the sale of oil and gas equipment to the Soviet Union.

Refusing to yield to appeals from U.S. businesses and European allies, the president announced Friday that the 6-month-old ban on the equipment sales now only would continue but would be widened to include foreign subsidiaries and licensees of American companies.

Major companies affected by the sanctions, both the old and new ones, are Caterpillar Tractor Co., General Electric and Dresser Industries, officials said.

The prohibition will prevent them, their foreign subsidiaries and licensees from selling oil and gas equipment for use in the Soviet Union, including the highly controversial natural gas pipeline between Siberia and Western Europe.

Licensees are foreign companies that produce equipment under licenses issued by U.S. firms.

That, said one official, will make the pipeline more costly and delay it by as much as three years. Some estimates place the current cost of the project at $26 billion. Gas is scheduled to begin flowing in 1984.

The president's decision was questioned by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"It is difficult to see how this action will do any more than split the NATO alliance and give the Soviet Union an opening to further divide us," Percy said in a news release.

The new action adds two or three companies to the list of those already barred from oil and gas equipment sales, bringing the total to 15 to 20 companies, said an administration official.

Misuse of emergency room puts crunch on public

By Walter Johnson
Special to the News
It's no secret that medical costs — like everything else — are rising, but officials at Coronado Community Hospital say they still are losing money — a lot of money — because of people who don't pay their bills.

Hospital Administrator Norman Knox said the brand new hospital is leading all other HCA hospitals in bad debts created by individuals who haven't paid their bills.

"Usually, we could expect bad debts to amount to maybe three to four percent most of the time," Knox explained, "but for some reason, we have been up around eight percent now for months, even though this area has enjoyed a better employment rate with better than average wages than other areas of the state."

Shaking his head in concern, Knox said the pattern surprised him, since the tradition of people in Pampa and other cities in the Panhandle is to pay their bills promptly — in fact, often in cash.

"People may be thinking we are still county owned and supported by tax dollars," Knox said, "but that just isn't true. We pay taxes rather than receive tax support. We are a business just like any other business and have to pay our bills just like any other business."

"If our customers — the patients — don't pay their bills, then our business, just like any other business, will lose and the community will lose as well."

Coronado Community Hospital is owned by hospital Corporation of America (HCA) the nation's leading investor-owned hospital management company.

"We have invested millions of dollars in this new hospital, built new offices for physicians, brought in five new doctors to serve the area, and are providing some of the finest medical care in the Panhandle," Knox said, "but we are still facing bad debt problems."

Compounding the problem is the recent wave of layoffs sweeping the area lately from major employers. Some of the area's largest employers have recently announced massive layoffs, as the economic trend continues its downward spiral — the first significant impact felt in this area. Economists predict an upturn possibly as early as the third quarter of this year, hopefully reversing the economic trend.

"With so many employees laid off," Knox said, "it poses a special problem. They can take time to have minor or elective surgery done (without any loss of time from work) but they don't have insurance to cover the expense."

Compared with other HCA hospitals, Coronado Community Hospital leads the state in bad debts. Last quarter, the Pampa facility showed 8.0 percent bad debt loss compared with 3.6 percent for all other HCA facilities in Texas.

The administrator noted that the does not involve care for the indigent patient. "We plan and expect a certain percentage of loss every year in providing services for indigent patients — we know to expect it," he said. "We are the only hospital in town and consider it our moral obligation to make services such as Emergency Room treatment available to the needy."

Knox said this problem becomes particularly difficult in handling Emergency Room cases. "These cases come in at all hours of the night and weekends, and it becomes difficult if not impossible to verify insurance coverage."

"They really need to get themselves a family physician and schedule an office visit."

Knox said the hospital's admission policy and emergency room policy have been carefully structured to avoid posing a problem for either the hospital or the patient.

"You wouldn't expect to walk into a car dealership, and drive off with a $2,000 used car without first making some major financial arrangements," the administrator said,

"but people seem to think nothing of planning elective surgery ... surgery that is not urgent or emergency ... without giving a second thought about how they will pay for it."

Knox explained that patients are expected to be able to make financial arrangements regarding their bills before being admitted to the hospital.

"It's very common for health care costs to get expensive, even though insurance covers a large part of the cost."

Insurance policies, he said are a contract between the patient and the insurance company.

"While we spend a good deal of time and money helping patients file their insurance forms, basically, it's between the patient and the insurance company," he said. "It's up to the patient to make whatever arrangements necessary to see that payment is made in full."

All too often, a large percentage of cases seen in the emergency room are non-emergency cases.

"Very low insurance policies cover emergency room care, unless it is some type of serious illness or accident, like a heart attack or an auto accident," he said. "Many of the cases we have problems with are relatively minor, and should be handled by the family physician during regular office hours."

Cases like diarrhea, nausea, vomiting, and headaches... problems the patients have had for several days ... and never bothered to call their family physician.

Nothing wrong with Dear Old Dad

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Dear Old Dad may be dearer if he's older, according to a study which found men who become fathers later in life are likely to be more involved in the care and needs of their children.

"What we found is that the group of men who seemed to be most involved in the hands-on care of the children were those who became fathers in their 30s," said Kathy Weingarten, a psychologist who conducted the study at the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women.

"This was the group that did a variety of the day-in, day-out types of chores, like diapering and car-pooling, more so than fathers in their 20s," she said.

Ms. Weingarten said the study was based on interviews with 36 couples who had their first child in their early 20s, 38 couples who began raising families in their early 30s and 14 couples who had their first child in their 40s.

The couples interviewed were from Maine to Virginia and came from urban, suburban and rural areas. Half the couples interviewed had high school educations; the other half had college diplomas.

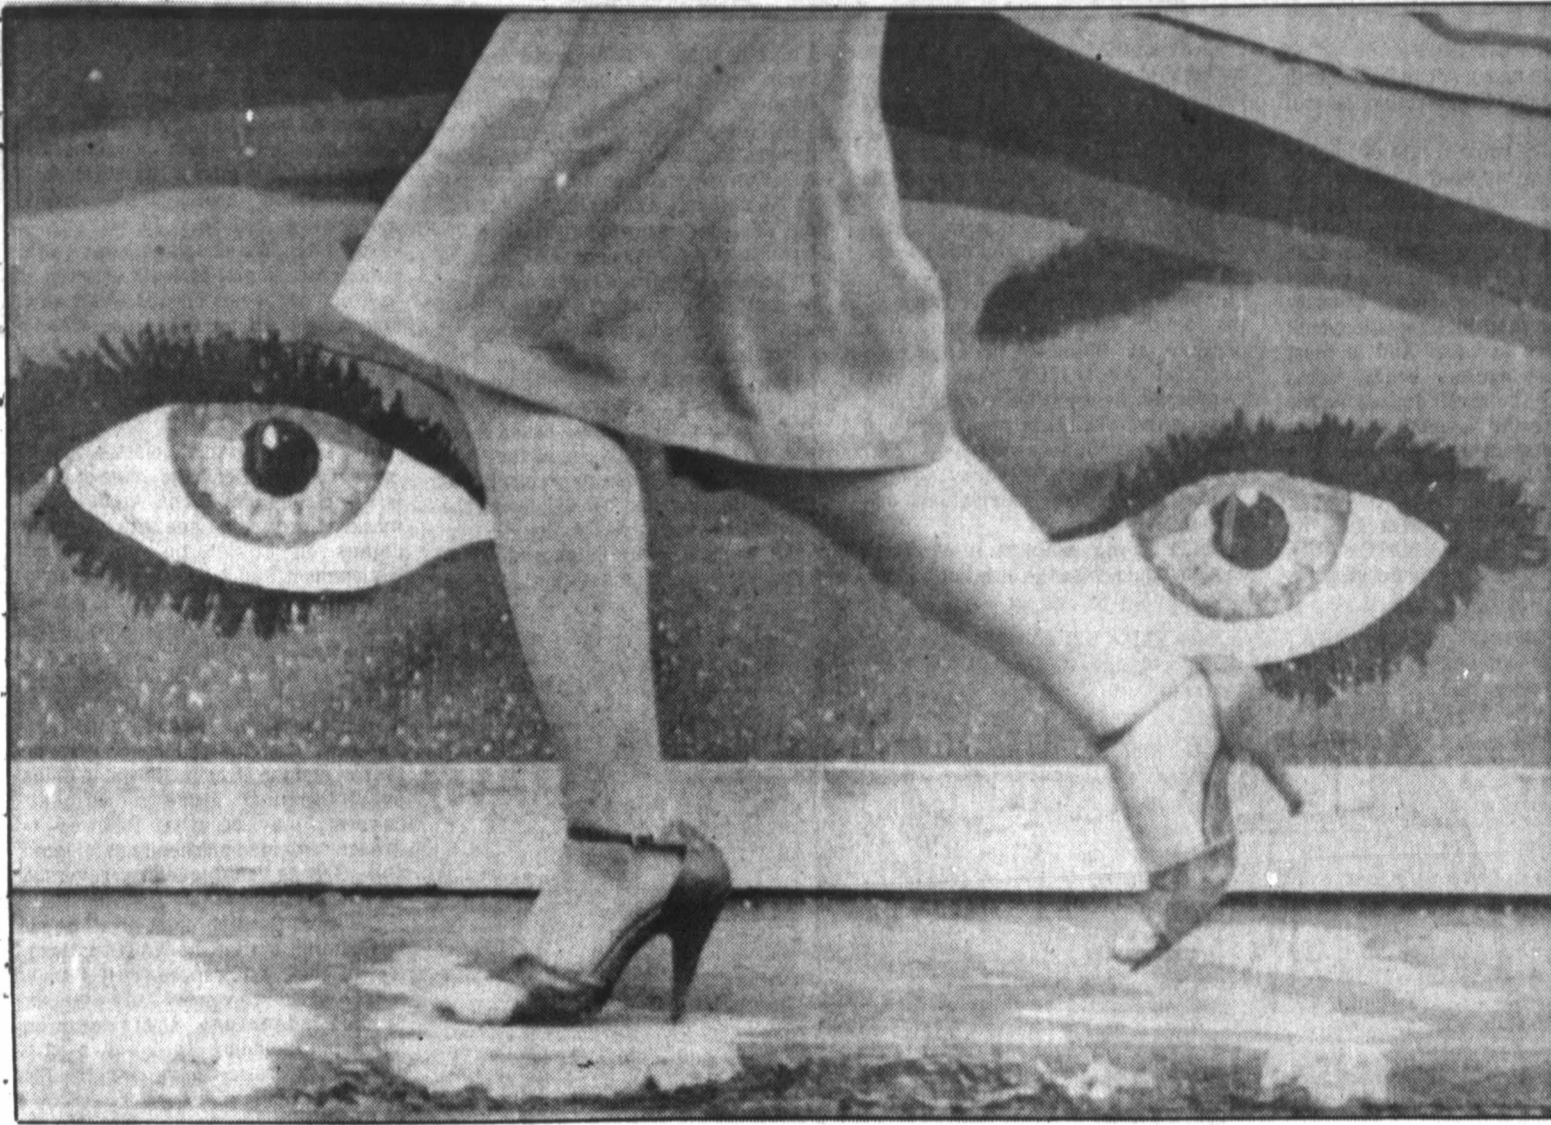

Ms. Weingarten said she believed men in their 30s were more flexible when it came to child-rearing chores than younger husbands.

"The couples in their 30s are more likely to have developed routines of sharing from the time they are married," she said. "More wives are employed so the men are used to sharing chores like cooking and cleaning. It seems that there is an easy transfer to the child."

"It is unlikely that the woman in her early 20s has been employed, so the couples fall into a more traditional division of duty."

Ms. Weingarten is a member of the department of psychiatry at Boston's Children's Hospital.

Houston: nation's 4th city

HOUSTON (AP) — A New York firm's survey says Houston has surpassed Philadelphia and now is the nation's fourth largest city. Houston's population reached 1,658,000 last year, with 64,000 new residents moving to the area, said Market Statistics of New York. The figure is more than 20,000 above the firm's estimate for Philadelphia. Officials at the Houston Chamber of Commerce downplayed the survey, saying they would not claim the city's new ranking until it is verified by the U.S. Census Bureau next year. However, chamber spokesman Howard Martin said Friday that Market Statistics surveys are usually accurate.

"I consider them the next best thing to the Census Bureau," Martin said. "It's my experience they are extremely reliable." Results of the survey will be published next month in Sales and Marketing Management Magazine. Edward Spar, president of the New York firm, said in an interview with the Houston Chronicle that the ranking of Los Angeles will also advance in the survey. Los Angeles, said Spar, will rank second in the survey, moving ahead of Chicago, which was ranked second in the 1980 federal census survey. The survey also shows that Houston's rate of growth, about 4.1 percent annually, is unmatched by any other city.

Group will see Braniff customers won't be left holding the tag

DALLAS (AP) — People left holding tickets for flights on grounded Braniff International will have a committee looking out for their interests during federal bankruptcy proceedings. U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Bill Brister gave final approval Friday for a creditors' committee to represent the interests of people with Braniff tickets. Fort Worth businessman A. Lee Morse led the push for the creditors' committee after the airline halted operations

May 12 and filed for protection against its creditors in bankruptcy court the next day. Those who still have Braniff tickets are classified as unsecured creditors. But rather than wait for a partial refund through the courts, the International Airline Passenger Association urged Braniff ticket holders to use the tickets on another airline. Ticket holders "won't get much of anything out of it" even if they get preferred status among unsecured creditors, said Hal Salfen, a director of the passengers' association. "They're at the bottom of the list... they'll be lucky if they get anything other than a small portion of the original price," Salfen said. Brister's final opinion recommended that the committee "serve in a limited capacity," the judge's law clerk, Pam Arnold, said. Brister tentatively approved the committee Thursday in Dallas and signed the final order Friday.

Pilot accused of dumping ex-wife's body from airplane

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In a case without a tangible victim, officials have accused a former Oklahoma City pilot of fatally shooting his wife and dumping her body from an airplane somewhere near the Texas Gulf Coast. Prosecutors on Friday said that Gary Lee Rawlings, 26, has been in a Golden, Colo., jail since his arrest June 2 on an Oklahoma County warrant charging him with first-degree murder in connection with the death of his ex-wife. The missing woman, Sally J. Rawlings, last was seen May 26 when she dropped off 2-year-old Kimberly Ann Rawlings at a downtown day-care center on her way to her job at Kerr-McGee, said District Attorney Robert Macy. Mrs. Rawlings, who rode the bus, never showed up at work that day. Three months earlier, she had obtained permanent custody of her daughter in a divorce granted in Oklahoma City, Macy said. Rawlings was denied visitation rights for six months pending a psychiatric examination, court records show. After the divorce, Rawlings moved to the Denver area, where he began work at a commuter airline, Macy said. Personnel at the downtown nursery, which Macy declined to name, alleged that Rawlings picked the child up after the mother disappeared. Officials began investigating Mrs. Rawlings' disappearance after co-workers reported her absence. Investigators alleged Rawlings was in Oklahoma City on May 26, and that he rented a small passenger plane and flew to south Texas where he landed for a fuel stop before returning to Oklahoma City. Forensic chemists were investigating blood stains found in the rented airplane, Macy said. The prosecutor said officials were "guessing" that the body could have been dumped from an airplane. Macy declined to disclose details of the flight route or vehicle rental. Oklahoma County officials have begun extradition proceedings to bring Rawlings here to face the charge. The child is staying with relatives in Colorado. Investigators alleged she turned up with Rawlings at his home in Golden, days after her mother was reported missing.

Indian Lodge: friendly, remote and booked full

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — When she was a girl of 15, Annie Claire Baldwin visited the Davis Mountains in West Texas and she's returned virtually every year since. That first visit was 65 years ago. "I've been to nearly every part of Texas and I think this spot right here is the prettiest," the Houston resident said as she sat in the courtyard of the Indian Lodge in Davis Mountains State Park. As she spoke, a gentle breeze wafted through the round courtyard, causing a few of last year's leaves to fall from a spreading madrona tree and rippling the surface of a wishing pool as blue as the western sky. The sun danced off the dazzling white adobe walls of the lodge. Green and red mountains provided the backdrop. "You can see why the old-timers used to want to keep this to themselves," Mrs. Baldwin said with a sigh, "but now, it's just overrun." Mrs. Baldwin and her husband, Salty, started coming to the Davis Mountains before the lodge was built in 1933, but they've become two of its best-known guests, staying several times a year while they visit friends at nearby ranches. "We get a lot of people who come back to visit every so often," said lodge manager Jane Russell. "The Baldwins are one of two couples who we have right now who come every year. The other couple is from Maine." Many tourists use the Indian Lodge as a place to get away for anniversaries and family reunions. The lodge is the only full-service hotel run by the state of Texas and its mountain location and low rates draw a heavy tourist business, as Mrs. Baldwin wistfully complained. "We're over 95 percent booked," said Ms. Russell, who has managed the lodge for three years. "The first weekend we have any availability is in November. It's a little better during the week." Ms. Russell said business at the lodge has increased more than 20 percent in the past few years, bringing in the most tourists since it opened in the late 1930s. The pueblo-style lodge, like many public works from its era, was built by the Civilian Conservation Corps in what was then just another wooded canyon in the rugged Davis Mountains. The land was donated to the state by an area rancher, who kept only the grazing rights, said park superintendent Ken Benad. "We still have cattle roaming around in the park nine months out of the year," he said. After the donation, the CCC crews camped at an old windmill in the canyon and erected the adobe structure by hand, Ms. Russell said. "Everyday, they'd run 4 1/2 miles over to Fort Davis and back for the exercise and then they'd start to work," she said. "They built 15 rooms. All the furniture was hand-carved by the CCC men. The reeding in the ceiling was brought from the Rio Grande by them and all of the ceiling beams were made from trees cut from this area." Forty years later, the state added 24 more rooms, a dining room and a meeting room, sticking close to the original style, but using concrete blocks instead of adobe and store-bought furniture. The lodge is decorated with the strange blend of flora that is native to the mountains — willows and cholla cactus, cottonwoods and yucca. Sometimes, it's decorated with fauna, too. "We have a raccoon that drinks out of the swimming pool every night and then he goes over to where the garbage cans are stored," Ms. Russell said. "He's got a regular path worn through there." She said lodge workers have an occasional brush with bigger game. "Some mornings we'll be coming in real early to open the office and there'll be a deer in the little courtyard out there," she said. "They'll come charging out of there and about scare us to death." Ms. Russell, a short, cheery woman, left the big-city bustle of Houston to work at the lodge after her father bought a ranch in the area. "That was three years ago and I've been here ever since," she said. "I haven't been back to Houston even for a visit and I'm not going to, either." Running a state-owned hotel does have its problems. For example, the governor's austerity program hit the lodge staff as well as other state agencies and there are the mountains of paperwork that the government requires for everything. But the state ownership is the reason for the lodge's low rates, which range from $16 a night for a single to $23 for a suite with two double beds. "Business is getting to the point where the lodge can turn a profit," Ms. Russell said. "The only thing that's keeping us from it is inflation. The state won't let us raise our prices and, of course, the price of everything else keeps going up."

Let 'em apologize

"Sometimes, having to apologize is the hardest thing to do," the judge said. "Maybe when you were in school you'd rather take your swats than do it. I think everybody has overlooked the basics in trying to solve a big problem.

"There has to be some kind of embarrassment," he said.

And he's right.

The present system of getting arrested for driving drunk, going to court and getting the charge plea bargained to a lesser crime and getting off with a fine and a slap on the wrist is not working. Too many innocent people (one is one too many) are getting maimed and killed because somebody else was at fault.

The judge's solution is unusual, but it is going to be unusual — maybe even heroic — action to bring down this monster that haunts all of the nation's highways and streets.

Over in Madill, Oklahoma, a defendant in a drunken-driving case got up in court after he was convicted and read the following statement:

"I want to apologize to the citizens of Marshall County for endangering their lives by operating a motor vehicle on a public road of this county while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

That was part of his punishment.

Another part was to run an advertisement two columns wide and about five inches deep that said the same thing.

This is the judge's idea. Associate District Judge Gary Lumpkin figures that drunken drivers caught in his county ought to tell a judge that they are sorry. And they ought to tell the whole county, too. Therefore, the ad ran in the weekly paper, with the signature of the offender appended at the bottom, and the defendant paying the cost — $20.

Bankruptcy rate could be slowed

The number of Americans filing for bankruptcy is growing at an alarming rate, and the blame cannot be placed entirely on economic recession and widespread unemployment.

Other reasons why so many are going broke include "easier terms" offered by the 1981 federal Bankruptcy Reform Act, the commercial exploitation of "easy credit," the nationwide desire to spend beyond income, and the fact that declaration of bankruptcy no longer carries the stigma it once did.

The legal profession isn't helping. Many attorneys advertise for bankruptcy clients. One firm in Southern California offers help for a fee of $99 on "credit terms."

Nationwide, almost 500,000 persons filed for bankruptcy in 1981, and the filing pace is much faster this year.

Most of those declaring bankruptcy are young wage-earners who could manage to pay a large portion of their debts over a five-year period. Many chose bankruptcy as a convenience and not as a last-resort financial necessity.

Many file under Chapter 7 bankruptcy statute, in which the court cancels debts, sells the debtor's property and distributes assets among creditors. Debtors tend to shun Chapter 13, the bankruptcy section that sets up a plan for repayment of debts and at the same time allows continuation of credit.

At this time, a concerned Congress is examining ways to change bankruptcy laws. One proposal would deny bankruptcy to individuals with ability to work out payment of debts and would force most debtors into a five-year repayment plan.

Something must be done to stop those who use bankruptcy courts for the easy way out.

led013 02981ee many — high interest rates, zoning restrictions, environmental restrictions, rent controls, a maze of permit requirements, restrictions on lending institutions, antiquated building codes — almost all imposed by government.

Facing such a complex set of problems, Congress decided to ignore everything but interest rates, and to approach that problem in a way that will make the overall problem of high interest rates a little more difficult to solve. The House

Reagan makes some gains

President Reagan arrived at the Versailles economic summit with a couple of strikes already posted against him.

First, the French and West Germans in particular were clearly planning to assail Reagan for the high U.S. interest rates that many Europeans believe are aggravating their own recessions. Second, most of the allies were just as clearly planning to resist any calls for limiting credit or trade with the Soviet bloc — an objective high on President Reagan's list.

As it happened, Reagan did better than expected, although he had to settle for the diplomatic equivalent of a blunt single rather than a swing-for-the-fences extra base hit.

The final communique issued by leaders of the world's seven largest industrial democracies included compromise language on such issues as international currency markets and aid to developing countries. But the carefully worded communique avoided anything that might be construed as criticism of the Reagan administration for refusing to attack unemployment and high interest rates by reinflating the American dollar.

Score one for Reagan.

On the even more sensitive issue of trade and credits to the Soviet Union and its satellites, President Reagan won a commitment in principle to "commercial prudence in limiting export credits to the communist countries."

Spokesmen for several Western European governments are already hinting that this language will have little real impact upon East-West commercial relations. Maybe so, but at least Reagan forced a tacit acknowledgment that subsidizing the Soviet bloc via cheap credits only serves to undermine Western security.

Given the European opposition even to discussing the subject of East-West trade, the "commercial prudence" clause has to be regarded as more than might have been expected just a week ago.

Even so, the Western Europeans remain committed to helping Moscow finance its $10 billion Siberia-to-the-Rhine pipeline, a project that will give the Soviets control over one-third of Western Europe's industrial fuel supply. And Western European's resistance to declaring bankruptcy Poland in default on its massive loans from the West remains as strong as ever.

All of which suggests that the Reagan administration must keep the pressure on short-sighted allies who would place near-term economic interests ahead of long-term strategic interests.

Well into its fourth decade, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is still growing.

That positive point should be kept in mind in evaluating what is written and said about the alliance on the occasion of the Bonn summit because almost every other point to be made tends toward the negative.

Pick any of a half-dozen priority issues of common interest and you'll find the allies at odds. And in most instances — nuclear policy, arms control talks, political and economic relations with the Soviets — the lines are drawn between the United States on one side and the Europeans, or most of them, on the other.

Even the positive point has its negative side. Spain, NATO's 16th member, in a last-minute surprise rushed its official entry. Not, as might be thought, in anticipation of the festivities in Bonn but to head off objections in Madrid.

Neither the right nor the left of Spain's still fragile democracy favors membership, for various reasons. The centuries-old wrangle with Britain over Gibraltar, exacerbated by the Falklands war, is one.

Even the governing center is not all that firmly behind the ditching of a century of Spanish isolation and nominal neutrality that it has engineered. As it is, Spain is qualifying its accession with the proviso that it will veto use of alliance bases — i.e., American — on its territory against nations with which its relations are friendly.

Which if you examine it carefully enough, could raise the question of why it may be more advantageous to have Spain in rather than outside the alliance.

There is one school of thought that appears to think that in or out, it no longer much matters for any of the NATO nations. Writer Irving Kristol, one of most prominent neo-conservative intellets, has observed that the alliance for most practical purposes has been dead for years and is only awaiting an official funeral.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies, an independent and much-respected London-based think tank, in a recent analysis of the state of NATO did not come to precisely the same grim conclusion but did assign the patient to the seriously ailing list.

The ailment was diagnosed as a growing provincialism that has a similar cause but goes in different directions in the United States and Europe. In the American form, it is expressed in an impatient nationalism that finds the necessity of taking into account the varying views and interests of allies an inconvenience and is inclined to go it alone.

In the European nations, nationalism is also at work, expressed in a de-emphasis on links with each other which, when it takes the form of a softer line toward the Soviets, has implications of establishing Europe as a third force between the two dominant powers.

All of the negative points are well made. On the other hand, none of them is completely new. The Atlantic has marked the dividing line between allied camps on Soviet policies before. Nationalism has been straining unity ever since the European began to recover from their immediate post-World War II paralysis.

Spin is not the first ally to show tempered enthusiasm for togetherness. Remember the French military withdrawal engineered by Charles de Gaulle, and the Greek pull-out in pique over Cyprus? More significant, however, may be what followed — France remained politically associated and Greece subsequently reversed itself.

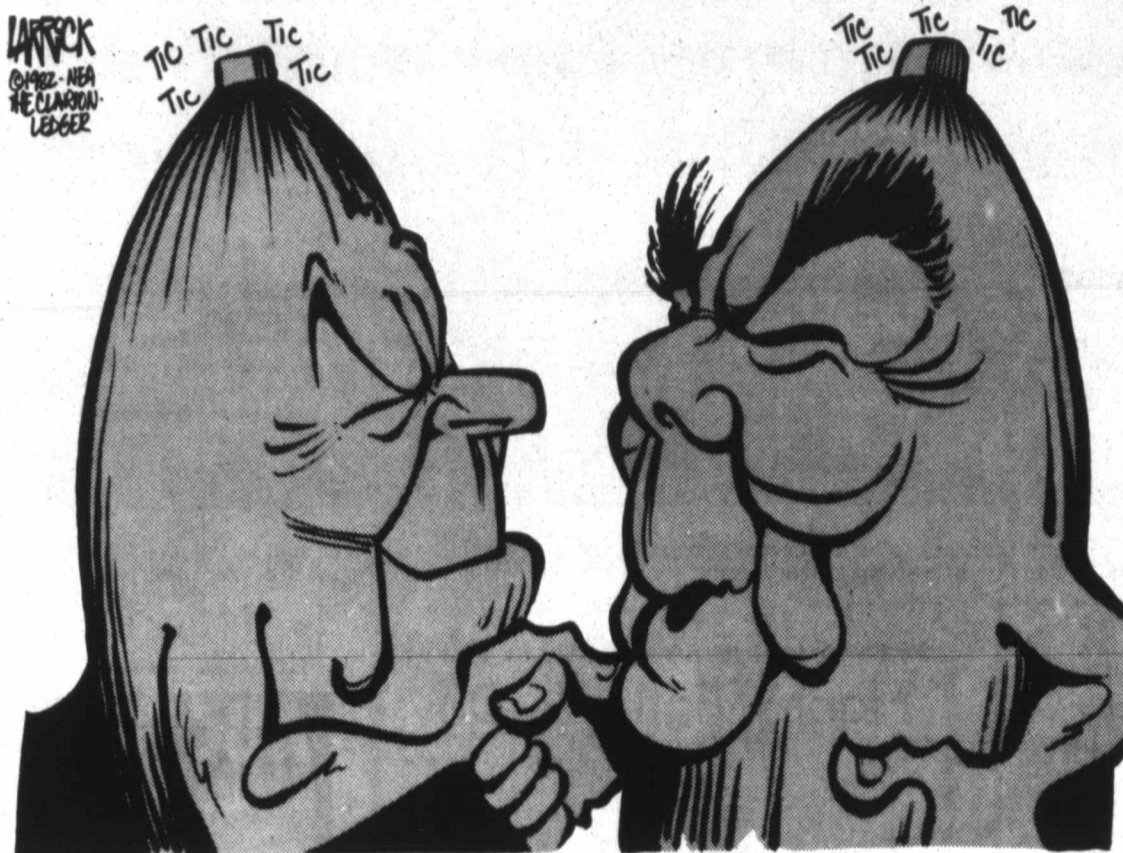

The most positive point of all about this summit is that the NATO nations, for all their differences, still find it worthwhile to meet. It is an acknowledgement that common interests, including those of a still newly democratic Spain, are greater than differences.

Thirty-three years is actually a rather ripe age for a multi-national alliance. And that it should still be growing is evidence that it remains vital.

There may come a time when NATO no longer serves common interests, at which point it will be legitimately dead and deserving of decent burial.

But it's much too soon to schedule the funeral.

Those liberated males

By RUSTY BROWN

I have a special list of guys I'd like to send Father's Day cards this year.

Some have been helping out around the nest centuries before it became a feminist goal. Others have been hooked on taking care of kids long before there were such things as paternity leaves and parenting classes at the YWCA.

In fact, I may even buy a splashy tie for one father. He's really five-star.

He's a seahorse.

His wife always deposits her load of eggs in his kangaroo-type pouch, nods goodbye and gallops off on the next wave. Good old dad does the incubating, his pouch swelling day by day. Talk about being left holding the bag!

In a few weeks the "blessed events" — especially blessed to the bulging father — occur. He almost seems to smile with relief as each perfectly formed mini seahorse pops out of his belly.

What's more, the seahorse isn't the only "pregnant" papa fish. Another is the African mouthbreeder — who does just that. He broods eggs in his mouth. Ditto the pearly jawfish from the Caribbean.

You've heard of mother's milk? Well there's also a nursing father. That's the South American discus fish. Not only does he help the female guard their cache of eggs ahead of time, but after they hatch, he exudes a creamy substance from his sides that the babies feed on.

Visit nearly any zoo and you'll see an emu — that Australian bird, well-known to crossword puzzle workers. Father emu takes his role seriously. So seriously, he alone sits on the nest until the eggs hatch.

Afterwards, he hovers over the brood, letting no one near. The shrinks would probably diagnose him as "over-protective."

Other birdmen often seen doing the nest sitting are the cassowary from New Guinea and the rhea from South America.

Mother goose has it made if pop is a Canada goose. He doesn't incubate eggs, but he devotes his life to helping her raise the youngins' and will take on anything that threatens his goslings — even attacking dogs that come too close.

In the animal world, too, there are some fathers worthy of admiration. Take the antelope, big horn sheep, the ibex and most species of goats. Each father looks after many females and all their young. While harem life may seem to be every man's dream, these fellows have a big job finding feeding grounds and protecting their family from predators.

The marsh wren is perhaps the most zealous father. After wintering in the Gulf states, he flies into town two weeks ahead of the female to scout the real estate situation.

When his bride arrives, he sings up a storm, taking her from site to site.

Alas, like many persnickety women, she turns up her beak at all of them and builds the nest her way, lining it with cattail down. Poor dad. Talk about an unsung hero...

If you think fathers should be lovers, too, none is more romantic than the bower bird from New Guinea.

First, he fashions a seduction chamber by flapping up and down and pulling weeds over his head. Then he makes a path leading to his lair, clearing it of all vegetation. As the coup de grace, he strews the path with — get this — rose petals.

So you see, all this supposed new talk about '80s fathers taking more time to be with their kids and sharing parenting chores is already a tradition with a lot of dads in the critters' world.

Now, wouldn't it be nice to find a fish mom who cuts grass, or a mother bird who patches roofs?

What are fathers made of?

By PAUL HARVEY

A father is a thing that is forced to endure childbirth without an anesthetic.

A father is a thing that grows when it feels good... and laughs very loud when it's scared half to death.

A father is sometimes accused of giving too much time to his business when the little ones are growing up.

That's partly fear, too.

Fathers are much more easily frightened than mothers.

A father never feels entirely worthy of the worship in a child's eyes.

He's never quite the hero his daughter thinks... never quite the man his son believes him to be... and this worries him, sometimes.

So he works too hard to try and smooth the rough places in the road for those of his own who will follow him.

A father is a thing that gets very angry when the first school grades aren't as good as he thinks they should be.

He scolds his son... though he knows it's the teacher's fault.

A father is a thing that goes away to war, sometimes.

And learns to swear and shoot and spit through his teeth and would run the other way except that this war is part of his only important job in life... which is making the world better for his child than it has been for him.

Fathers grow old faster than people.

Because they, in other wars, have to stand at the train station and wave goodbye to the uniform that climbs aboard...

And while mothers can cry where it shows...

Fathers have to stand there and beam outside... and die inside.

Fathers have very stout hearts, so they have to be broken sometimes or no one would know what's inside.

Fathers are what give daughters away to other men who aren't nearly good enough... so they can have grandchildren that are smarter than anybody's.

Fathers fight dragons... almost daily.

They hurry away from the breakfast table...

Off to the arena which is sometimes called an office or a workshop...

There, with calloused, practiced hands they tackle the dragon with three heads...

Weariness, Work, and Monotony.

And they never quite win the fight but they never give up.

Knights in shining armor...

Fathers in shiny trousers... there's little difference...

As they march away to each workday.

Fathers make bets with insurance companies about who'll live the longest.

Though they know the odds they keep right on betting...

Even as the odds get higher and higher... they keep right on betting... more and more.

And one day they lose.

But fathers enjoy an earthly immortality... and the bet's paid off to the part of him he leaves behind.

I don't know... where fathers go... when they die.

But I've an idea that after a good rest... wherever it is... he won't be happy unless there's work to do.

He won't just sit on a cloud and wait for the girl he's loved and the children she bore...

He'll be busy there, too... repairing the stairs... oiling the gates... improving the streets... smoothing the way.

Rain slows ripening of wheat in Pampa district

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

Wheat harvest should begin this week. The continued cool, wet weather has certainly slowed the ripening process as well as causing a lot of late maturing wheat heads.

TRACTOR FUEL EFFICIENCY

Since we are in our busy farming season, let's discuss how to use proper gear selection and engine speed to save fuel.

Fuel consumption is largely determined by the way a tractor is operated. Drawbar load, engine speed, the gear used, amount of turning and amount of engine idle time can cause fuel consumption to vary more than thirty percent for a given task.

For a tractor to operate and LP - Gas tractors all operate most efficiently under heavy loads when the throttle is wide open. Diesel tractors have the added advantage of greater "lugging" ability, that is, to pull at slower engine speeds when the tractor and implement are bogged down. The gear selection process for diesel tractors is the same as for gasoline or LP - Gas tractors. Select the highest gear at which the engine will operate at its rated speed when pulling heavy loads.

Excessive black smoke from a diesel engine means that it is lugging too hard and wasting fuel. Overloading any tractor causes excessive fuel consumption and rapid engine and drive train wear. Overloads occur when the tractor engine cannot reach its full rated speed. In these situations, shift to a lower gear.

One method for determining if the tractor is overloaded is to slow the engine to half throttle while the tractor is moving across the field under load. Then move the throttle to its wide open position. If the engine quickly reaches its rated operating speed, the tractor is not overloaded.

Many field operations, such as spraying and planting, do not require full rated tractor horsepower. A similar situation exists when sized for a smaller tractor are used with high horsepower tractors. Additionally, many operations must be performed at a fixed field speed. For these light or part load operations, you may wish to consider shifting to a higher gear and slowing the engine speed to maintain the desired field speed. Slower engine speeds improve fuel efficiency.

The "gear up - throttle down" concept can be demonstrated with Nebraska Tractor Test data. In the Nebraska tests, a tractor is tested in the following manner:

- 1) The tractor is tested for maximum drawbar horsepower in a gear selected by the tractor manufacturer.
- 2) In the same gear, the tractor is tested pulling 50 percent of the maximum power run load.
- 3) The tractor is tested in a higher gear and at a reduced engine speed to maintain the same pull and travel speed as in run 2.

During run 3, most tractors tested used between 15 and 30 percent less fuel than during run 2, even though the same amount of work was performed. Throttle setting and gear selection were the only factors changed.

Usually, the "gear - up throttle down" practice can be used when loads require less than two - thirds of the tractor's power. Generally, it is safe to reduce engine speed by 20 to 25 percent of the rated speed. Check the operators manual for specific recommendations for your tractor.

When using the practice of "gear up - throttle down", remember not to overload or lug the engine. A simple rule for diesel tractors pulling light loads is to select a gear and engine speed in which the exhaust smoke is not excessive. You can also test for an overload by using the throttle test mentioned previously. Most diesel engines can stand moderate overloads at part speed. Remember, however, the drawbar power required remains the same when you shift up and reduce speed. "Power" is a combination of speed and torque, so when you shift to a higher gear, you reduce drive train speed and increase torque. Sustained high torque loads, due to either excessive load and weight or incorrect gear and speed selection, can damage transmission and other drive train components.

Also, remember that when engine speed is reduced, power take off (PTO) speed is correspondingly reduced. In addition, with reduced engine speed, reaction time of the tractor hydraulic system is slower.

Nebraska Tractor Tests

indicate that a large diesel tractor operated at reduced engine speed for light drawbar loads may actually use less fuel than would a smaller tractor working at its rated capacity.

Table 1 compares the performance of a large tractor rated at 110 drawbar horsepower and a smaller tractor rated at 56 drawbar horsepower. Data in Table 1 indicates that the large tractor geared up and throttled down had the highest fuel efficiency - 13.55 horsepower - hours per gallon. This is a reduction of about one gallon per hour over full throttle operation of the large tractor and 0.29 gallons per hour over the small tractor. A large tractor properly matched to a light load may save fuel compared to a smaller tractor operating at full load.

Tractor and Operation Comparison:

Throttle Setting - Small Tractor, Full; Large Tractor, Reduced.

Percent Load - Small Tractor, 100 percent; Large Tractor, 50 percent.

Drawbar Horsepower - Small Tractor, 55.79; Large

Tractor 56.67; Large Tractor, 56.72.

Fuel Consumption (Gallon - Hour) - Small Tractor, 4.49; Large Tractor 5.23; Large Tractor, 4.20.

Fuel Efficiency (Horsepower - Hours - Gallon) - Small Tractor 12.54; Large Tractor 10.91; Large Tractor, 13.55.

Many tractor operators feel that because a diesel tractor is turbocharged it should be operated on full rated speed. If full drawbar horsepower is not required, this belief has no justification.

Fuel consumption and fuel efficiency can vary widely for specific tractors. Fuel efficiency (horsepower - hours per gallon) is the amount of work the tractor produces per gallon of fuel used. This measure is not influenced by engine size and can be used to compare efficiencies of tractors with different horsepower.

By keeping accurate records of the fuel usage of your tractors under a variety of operating conditions, you will be able to make decisions concerning the most efficient operation of the machine. Also good records can indicate when tune ups or repairs are needed.

Leaf rust becoming a problem in Texas

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Texas farmers are giving most of their attention to wheat and hay harvesting and are about to complete spring planting, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The wheat harvest is about complete over South and Central Texas and is increasing over North Texas and in the Plains, he said in his weekly report on Texas crops. Yields in many areas are down due to weather problems as well as a severe infestation of leaf rust, a perennial wheat disease problem.

Hay making is active throughout Texas, with good yields and quality reported in most areas. However, additional rainfall will be needed soon in some central, eastern and coastal areas for additional hay cuttings, said Pfannstiel.

Spring planting is winding down. Farmers are still planting soybeans in Northeast Texas and in a few coastal counties as well as in the South Plains, where a considerable amount of hauled-out cotton land is being planted in soybeans. Some lot cotton acreage also is going to sunflowers.

Cotton planting is active in the Rolling Plains due to recent rain delays, noted Pfannstiel, and some planting continues in the Trans-Pecos area.

Peanut planting is past the half-way point in Central Texas, and some planting continues in parts of West Central Texas and in coastal counties. Planting moisture is short in some coastal areas.

Also, farmers are still planting grain sorghum in the Panhandle.

Harvesting of vegetables and melons continues in the Rio Grande Valley along with peach harvesting over much of the state. Freestone peaches are now being harvested in Gillespie County, the state's leading peach producing county, Pfannstiel reported.

Up Close

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Horatio Alger did not write the plot, but most of the details for a boy makes good dime novel are heard in the story of this man's life.

He lived in a log cabin, traveled by stagecoach to a new life out west, lived and worked in an Indian Nation, began chores in the grit, grime and danger of the oil patch at age 15, and received a college degree at age 77.

While most of the nation was out of work and out of hope during the Great Depression, this man took his money and his friends' money, and put the future of his family on the line when he drilled his first oil well in 1933.

At this point, the story should say he discovered instant wealth from the bold move in uncertain times — but that first well just west of Lefors was a dry hole.

Many men would have quit then — but not E.C. "Gene" Sidwell.

There would be more dry holes along the way, but Sidwell kept drilling around the little town of Pampa.

He continued drilling, and his companies continued growing until he became one of the Panhandle's most successful independent oilmen.

During 50 years of working the oil patch around Pampa, Sidwell founded Texwell Corporation, Oil Well Servicing Company, LaCima Corporation, The Sidwell Corporation, Beacon Supply Company and Sidwell Oil and Gas Inc.

His fortune has been made many times over since that first dry well in 1933, but when it was suggested that many would be curious to know what he is worth, Sidwell replied, "They probably would — but I'm not gonna tell them."

Instead of looking to greenbacks, Sidwell likes to gauge success by the mark a man leaves on the place he calls home.

"I have tried to make a contribution to Pampa and the good people in it. It's the duty of every citizen to be vigilant and knowledgeable of what goes on in local government operations," Sidwell said.

The oil and gas producer's service to the community includes one term as mayor, one term on the Pampa school board, 15 years on the board of directors at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch and work with Shrine Hospitals.

Sidwell was born to Clarence Edwin and Chenoweth Sidwell January 3, 1905 in Monticello, Ky.

As a youth, his father hauled water for West Virginia railroad crews, and in 1893 began working with his brothers as a laborer in the Pennsylvania oil fields, the birthplace of the industry.

"My folks left Kentucky before I was one year old. My mother told me of leaving in a stagecoach for the railroad station, about 30 miles away in Burnside, Ky.

"We traveled by train to live near Blacksville, W. Va., a little town about like Lefors. We lived in a log cabin to be near the oil field action. Later, we moved to town, where I went through school. I graduated in 1921 with a class of seven.

Luck and pluck

"The same year, my family moved to work in the Oklahoma oil fields. When they moved to Oklahoma, I attended Davis & Elkins College for one year.

"In the spring of 1922, I went to Oklahoma to work in the oil fields in the Osage Nation, the same year of the first rotary drilling rigs.

"Before the rotary, cable - tool rigs were the most widely used. Both were powered by steam engines, and there were arguments about the merits of each method.

"The Borger boom of 1925 was drilled almost 100 percent by the cable - tool method.

"Average depth of a cable - tool well at that time was about 2,500 feet, but in Seminole, Okla. and other fields, the rotary came into its own.

"Continual improvements in rotary drilling brought deeper wells, faster completions and created discoveries, which would not have been undertaken with old drilling methods.

"It's not uncommon today to drill wells 15,000 to 20,000 feet deep, and we even have a few wells scheduled for 30,000 feet.

"When I began in the oil industry, the salary was low — $100 per month for a 10 - hour day, six days per week. But with a $1 meal ticket and company bunkhouse, things weren't bad — they were good.

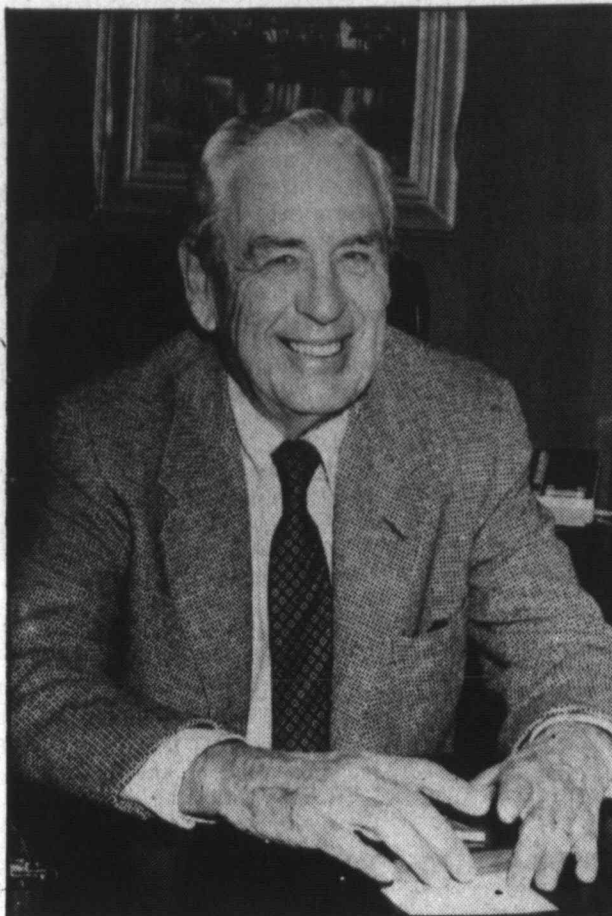

"After coming to Pampa about 50 years ago, I drilled my first well on the Combs - Worley lease, west of Lefors, that turned out to be a dry hole. The drilling budget was almost nil, but a friend in Chicago assisted with the payroll. The equipment was obtained with credit.

"It was smack in the middle of the Depression, but people were better off here than in other places. Pampa was a boom town. Things were cheap, and you could get plenty of people who wanted to work.

"After the dry hole, we hit a few good wells west of Pampa. Our success ratio in drilling was reasonably good.

"In 1937, I started Oil Well Servicing Company, the first well servicing company in the Panhandle, and Beacon Supply, a company which existed for 40 years.

"We were never a giant, but we had as many as 200 employees at the peak," Sidwell said.

Sidwell has sold most of his companies since then, but he is still involved in as many as eight or 10 wells at one time. His other present business activities include "ranching and investments."

A record number of nearly 4,000 voters turned out for the recall election.

There were 2,700 for Sidwell and 1,292 votes to remove him from office.

Shortly after the vote, Koontz resigned.

The oilman hit another of his life's highlights recently when he was awarded an honorary degree by the school he attended one year in 1922.

Davis & Elkins College, a private, liberal arts school in Elkins, W. Va., awarded the honorary doctor of science degree to Sidwell May 16th.

Sidwell does not appear to be a man of wealth. His offices are in a small, plain brick building at 736 S. Cuyler.

His private office has only a few pieces of worn, vinyl furniture, and his chair, though large and comfortable, is covered with worn cloth.

He was elected as Pampa Mayor in 1959 and served one term, which included a recall election to oust him from office.

Sidwell prefers not to talk about his term as mayor, saying he wants to "let sleeping dogs lie," but he hints that he did not fit in with the "good ole boy" network at City Hall, of with back room deals.

An organized campaign to throw Sidwell out of office was mounted by the Pampa Jaycees about six months after he assumed office. The campaign began soon after the city commission asked for the resignation of former City Manager John Koontz.

The Jaycees tried to remove the entire panel, but only enough signatures to put Sidwell on the recall ballot were obtained.

"The recall was a sad day for me and the people of Pampa. We were tramping on too many toes. You don't bring about reform without bad feelings sometimes," Sidwell said.

"We tried to have an open city policy to inform people about what needed to be overhauled. We never had a closed meeting," he said.

Despite the expensive and organized campaign to kick him out of City Hall, the people of Pampa put their faith in Sidwell and defeated the recall by a margin of more than 2 to 1.

Besides a couple of oil paintings, and wall plaques for community service, the only real decorations in the room are portraits of the patriarch and his numerous offspring.

Sidwell and his wife of 54 years, Pauline, have two children, eight grandchildren and five great - grandchildren.

The Pampa producer credits his wife with any success he has enjoyed, and says they "share equally" in any achievements.

He wants to help make life better for the people of Pampa, a town he "really loves," and he hopes to continue serving the community and working in the energy field "for many years, if the good Lord is willing."

The 77 - year - old executive still checks in at the office daily, though his schedule is no longer as hectic as it once was. He maintains a secretary and driver to help with his schedule, and sometimes takes a short nap in the afternoon.

"Instead of 24 hours straight, I might work only six hours a day now — whatever I want to," he said.

Sidwell is an optimist and believes opportunity still exists for young people who want to work hard and make it in the business world.

"Success requires foresight, courage, common sense, perspiration, perseverance, a little luck, and a willingness to sacrifice," he says.

High interest keeps U.S. dollar on top

NEW YORK (AP) — With U.S. interest rates high, and expectations widespread that they will remain that way in the months ahead, the dollar was swept to a 12-year high against the currencies of major trading partners this past week.

Political and economic unrest around the world contributed to the process, in which the dollar reached all-time peaks against the French franc, Italian lira and Canadian dollar.

For U.S. consumers, the dollar's surge means prices of imports may fall and certainly should not rise, economists say. And manufacturers of U.S.-made goods, to remain competitive, also will have to hold prices in check.

Not surprisingly, lines at passport offices have lengthened.

Wall Street doubts Gulf Oil's intentions to buy Cities Service

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. has said almost nothing about its plan to buy Cities Service Co. for $5 billion, but the voice of Wall Street has virtually shouted its doubt about the proposed takeover.

On Friday, the price of Gulf stock fell $3.87 1/2, to $27.50 a share in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange. That was a 12-month low for Gulf.

"To me, the market is saying it hates the Gulf decision," said Barry Sahgal, who follows the oil industry for Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc.

Sahgal and several other analysts said they thought Gulf offered too much for Cities Service, a Tulsa, Okla.-based oil concern that had fought a tender offer by Mesa Petroleum Co., a smaller oil producer in Amarillo, Texas.

Mesa announced late Friday it had sold its 4.1 million shares of Cities Service stock back to the Oklahoma company, clearing the way for Gulf to begin its tender offer as early as Monday. Cities Service and Mesa also agreed to drop all litigation against each other.

Gulf is offering $63 a share for 51 percent of Cities Service's 80 million shares. Gulf intends to buy the remaining shares in an exchange for securities valued at $63 apiece. Keith Anderson, a Gulf spokesman, said the company had not decided what type of security would be used.

The value of the deal, at approximately $5 billion, would make it the third-largest corporate takeover in U.S. history, eclipsed only by Du Pont Co.'s $7.8 billion buyout of Conoco Inc. last September and the $6.3 billion that U.S. Steel Corp. paid last January for Marathon Oil Co.

"The reason (the Gulf) stock is getting hammered is that Gulf is going to suffer a significant earnings dilution, by my calculations," said a New York oil analyst who asked that he not be identified by name. "The Street is saying it doesn't approve of the merger."

Anderson said Gulf would have no comment Friday beyond a brief statement the previous day, when Gulf Chairman James E. Lee said the deal was a "unique opportunity" for Gulf to "realize long-term strategic goals."

The Gulf agreement needs approval by stockholders of both companies, and must pass an antitrust review by the Federal Trade Commission. Neither company has offered any comment on the antitrust implications of their agreement, but analysts said they expected the government to approve the deal.

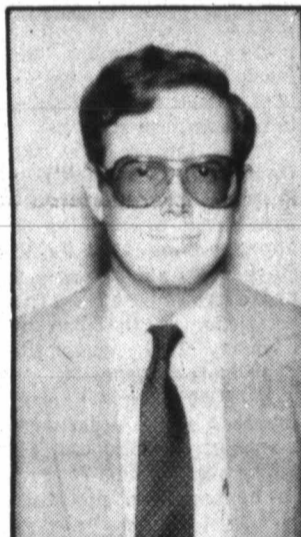

Gulf, currently the nation's sixth-largest oil company, would become No. 5, surpassing Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), once it combined with Cities Service. Together they would be the country's No. 7 industrial concern as measured by 1981 revenues, only slightly below Ford Motor Co.

Whitlow will speak at Desk & Derrick

Randy Whitlow, district marketing coordinator for Eastman Whipstock of Oklahoma, will be the featured speaker at Tuesday's regular meeting of the Desk and Derrick Club.

Whitlow will present a slide show and lecture on the principles of directional drilling following the buffet dinner.

The club, which is for women employed in the petroleum industry, meets Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Starlight Room at the Coronado Inn. For information and reservations, call Emily Washington at 665-2581 ext. 222.

Despite the rain, better save water for dry times

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

From different forums comes the same conclusion: big-time Texas water users better save some for a dry day.

Experts have documented that water supplies cannot support Texans in the manner to which they've grown accustomed and the cost of getting enough water to sustain a comfortable lifestyle is out of sight.

"Our quality of life in Texas is in jeopardy, and we cannot tolerate any dilution," says Gov. Bill Clements.

Proprietary feelings about natural resources such as oil and gas pale by comparison when Texans guard their water holes. You're talking white-hot emotions, region against region.

"You can't expect the people of southeast Texas to bear the brunt" for others, says Port Arthur Mayor Bernis Sadler.

Many recall the Dust Bowl of the 1930s, an awful time when farm lands became desolate wastelands.

Yet erosion of Texas land now "is worse than in the Dust Bowl period," contends Howard Saxion of the Sierra Club.

Five of 13 questions the club submitted to statewide Texas candidates this year dealt with water, and No. 14 asked, "What is the most pressing environmental problem in the state of Texas?"

"The water issue was pretty much a common theme," said Saxion.

When 16 candidates appeared at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce meeting in Midland, they were peppered with questions about water supplies, and spectators said no one had a satisfactory answer.

At a recent meeting of the Governor's Mayors Advisory Committee in Austin, water problems topped a list of complaints compiled by city officials.

"Some of us have got too much, but some of us have got too little," said Mayor Giles McCrary of Post.

Annual rainfall averages from less than nine inches in far West Texas to more than 56 inches around Beaumont-Port Arthur.

"Few towns anywhere in Texas can now claim adequate water to meet future demands," says the Texas Water Resources Institute at College Station.

What state planner Victor Arnold describes as an "almost incredible" population growth of twice the national rate is expected to strain Texas' water resources so much that by the year 2000 supplies will fall short of demand by up to 8.5 million acre-feet. One acre-foot is 325,851 gallons.

The prophecy of the Water Resources Institute that "We will have enough water in Texas in the foreseeable future so that no one will have to die of thirst" is some consolation.

Ironically, one reason for the bleak picture is Texas' huge storehouse of ground water.

For years Texans have drawn on seemingly inexhaustible ground water supplies, enabling cities and industries to prosper far from rivers and reservoirs and allowing fields to produce lush crops in semi-arid regions.

However, although Texas ranks third nationally in cash receipts from agriculture — $9.9 billion in 1980 — that industry is threatened by declining supplies of underground water.

Aquifers now supply 69 percent, or 13.1 million acre-feet, of the water used in Texas each year, but in 1982 Texans will pump more than twice as much ground water to the surface as will be replenished. By 2000, underground reservoirs are expected to supply only 6.8 million acre-feet of water.

"Irrigation as we have used it in the past cannot continue," says Arnold, former executive director of the Texas 2000 Commission. "The water will not be there from current Texas sources."

The point has been made that the Texas Constitution prohibits deficit spending, but nothing prevents a landowner from pumping more underground water than nature can replace.

In Abilene, the Governor's Water Task Force heard Lee Roy George, city director of planning, say the "land ethic" attitude that "By golly, it's my land, and I'll do whatever I want with it" must be changed.

"The shortcomings of law and institutions for managing ground water in Texas are serious and glaring," says University of Texas law professor Corwin Johnson. "There is essentially no Texas law for resolving conflicts among pumpers. Self help, outside the legal system, typically is the sole remedy for the well owner whose well is impaired by the pumping of other wells."

Johnson suggested a statewide program to monitor aquifers so withdrawals can be curtailed when the aquifers are in danger, and state water expert Charles Nemir says, "For the first time, people have come out and put the issue on the table, and we can talk about it."

Statwide management of ground water is one of the major recommendations of the Texas 2000 Commission, which also stabbed at what Arnold called "time-honored traditions" by recommending the transfer of water from one basin to another.

Another possibility for averting a water crisis is the importation of water from other states, an idea that has intrigued water planners since the 1960s.

Clements says he believes Texas will get water from Arkansas in the 21st Century even though Arkansas Gov. Frank White asserts he is "totally opposed to shipping water to Texas."

"What you have to do is court the girl," says Clements. "The first time is not a willing seller-buyer proposition. I'm working on Gov. White in Arkansas."

"This governor's never going to get a drop of water from Arkansas," snorts Clements' Democratic opponent, Texas Attorney General Mark White.

Nemir, deputy director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, acknowledges that "as far as positive proposals in concrete, we don't have any."

The High Plains Study Council has estimated it would cost as much as $22.6 billion a year to transport six million acre-feet of Arkansas water to Texas and Oklahoma.

Unless the federal government subsidized the purchase, the plan "won't be feasible within two or three lifetimes," said Tom Riley Jr., director of the Arkansas Soil and Conservation Commission.

"I don't see how it can help but be a question at the federal level," says Nemir. "Any time you have an agreement between two or more states and large sums of money are needed, the financing needs to be done — or at least strongly assisted — by the federal government."

Texas law requires the Department of Water Resources to devise a state water plan, which must be approved by the Water Development Board. A timetable calls for completion of the plan by January 1983, when the Legislature convenes.

A February report prepared by the department estimates it would cost $19 billion over the next 20 years to finance flood protection projects and sewage collection and treatment facilities, and $32.6 billion over the next 25 years to pay for water supply facilities.

"Unfortunately, people don't really become aware of water problems until the crisis stage.

Is the Recession really over?

NEW YORK (AP) — If the worst of the recession is over, an assessment that seems to be close to the consensus of professional economic forecasters, is recovery sure to follow?

The consensus says yes, but then come the qualifications, and maybe some disillusionment over what can be termed a recovery.

Jack Lavery, chief economist of Merrill Lynch, says the trough in activity "is close at hand," but adds: "Unfortunately, this does not suggest a robust recovery."

In fact, he expects it to fizzle out.

Bankers Trust says that the downturn is "seemingly bottoming out," but comments, "business sentiment remains decidedly uneasy."

The Morgan Bank says "the precipitous slide that began last July has been corrected." It projects 3 percent annual growth rate through 1983, then comments: "That is certainly disappointing compared with previous recoveries." Typically, recovery means 5 percent growth.

You get the idea. One report after another says something of the same sort: A recovery will soon make itself known, but not with the usual signs of relief or the feeling that troubles have been put behind.

Little enthusiasm is expressed about the projected recovery. When it comes, it seems, the upward curve in the economy may look like a hill in Iowa. That is, you may have to look hard if you're to spot it.

So what's the problem?

Plenty, according to the forecasters: Federal debt and unbalanced budgets, high interest rates, corporate debt and big losses, pervasive wariness, personal debt and shrunken assets, structural damage to the economy, major industrial changes, joblessness.

So you think lower interest rates will solve a lot of problems? Then perhaps you should consider the comments of a rather large fraternity that says Americans are so burdened with debts that they couldn't afford to borrow another dime.

Perhaps a budget deficit of "only" $100 billion might reassure people. But there are those to remind you that such an amount will still crowd homeowners and businesses from the money pool.

Less inflation, you say hopefully, means paychecks are going farther, a situation soon to be enhanced by a federal income tax cut, and that might mean consumers start spending.

Martina's streak continues

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova continued her winning streak to the eve of Wimbledon Saturday, defeating Hana Mandlikova 6-4, 6-3 for the $23,000 first-place prize in the BMW tennis tournament.

Navratilova tamed an awkward wind which whipped across the court and made strokes difficult.

"I am in the best form of my career," she said after the final, which lasted less than an hour.

Navratilova is top-seeded for Wimbledon and is rated a 6-4 favorite by British bookies. She is expected to open her Wimbledon campaign Tuesday and is seeded to meet Chris Evert Lloyd, the defending champion, in the final on July 3.

Lloyd spent the week practicing, but most of Navratilova's other rivals for the Wimbledon crown played at Eastbourne. The only player who gave her any trouble was Jo Durie, the No. 3-ranked British player who took a set from her in the semifinals on Friday.

Navratilova has won 82 matches and lost only five — all in tournament finals — since the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadow last September, and has won nearly $500,000 this year.

Unlike the men's field at Wimbledon, which is missing four of the top six players in the world, the top 20 women and 46 of the 50 in the world will play singles in the All-England Championships, as will two-time champion Evonne Goolagong of Australia, who is seeded 16th but has played in enough tournaments since the birth of her second baby to be ranked on the computer.

The only top women who will miss the second stop of tennis' four Grand Slam tournaments are Regina Marshikova, ranked 25th in the world, who is currently serving a prison sentence in her native Czechoslovakia following a car accident in which two women died; American Bonnie Gadusek, 21st, who is injured; Argentina's Ivanna Madruga-Osses, 35th, who is skipping Wimbledon because of the conflict over the Falkland Islands, and Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 47th.

Stove is playing mixed doubles, where she and South Africa's Frew McMillan are top-seeded, and the women's doubles with Mandlikova.

Of the Wimbledon seeds, only one — No. 9 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany — has beaten Navratilova this year.

Navratilova adapted her game to the conditions better than Mandlikova, whose play was brilliant at times but erratic.

WTSU FB camp scheduled

CANYON — The West Texas State Football Camp opens Sunday, June 27 with registration from 5-8 p.m. Workout sessions begin Monday, June 28 and continue through Friday morning, July 2.

Boys from fourth through ninth grade who will not be participating in high school varsity football in the fall are eligible to attend the camp.

Camp Director Ken Sawin and West Texas State University football assistant coaches will conduct the camp, held on the WTSU campus.

Campers will use the facilities used by the Buff varsity football squad, including the Activities Center and swimming pool. Campers will stay in one of the university dormitories and eat in the WTSU cafeteria.

Cost of the camp is $155.00 for a regular camper and $95.00 for a day camper. This includes accident insurance, lodging, meals, use of all Buff facilities, and a camp T-shirt.

For further information contact camp director Ken Sawin, 806-656-2323, or write West Texas State Football Camp, Box 912 WT Station, Canyon TX 79016.

Martina Navratilova returns to Jo Durie during their match at the BMW Women's Championship tennis tournament this weekend in Eastbourne, England. Navratilova defeated Durie 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 in the pre-Wimbledon match. (AP Laserphoto)

Watson, Rogers hold Open lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson and Bill Rogers surged into a tie for the lead Saturday in the third round of the 82nd United States Open golf championship.

Watson, seeking to add this national championship to his cache of three British Open titles and a pair of Masters crowns, and Rogers, the current British Open title-holder and 1981 Player of the Year, shared the lead a 212, four strokes under par.

Watson birdied two of the last three holes for a 4-under-par 68 on one of his favorite courses, the mist-shrouded forests and gulls and the cliffs and crags that make up the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Rogers, a fast pacer called "The Panther" by his fellow pros, shot a 69 in the cool, calm weather under gray, leaden skies that occasionally leaked a drizzling rain.

It was 2 shots back to George Burns, Scott Simpson and a pair of transplanted Australians who happen to be close friends, defending champion David Graham and 44-year-old Bruce Devlin. They were tied at 214, two under par.

Graham, seeking to become the first man to successfully defend this title since Ben Hogan in 1951, dropped a 35-foot birdie putt on the final hole to finish off a 69 that put him very much in contention going into Sunday's final round.

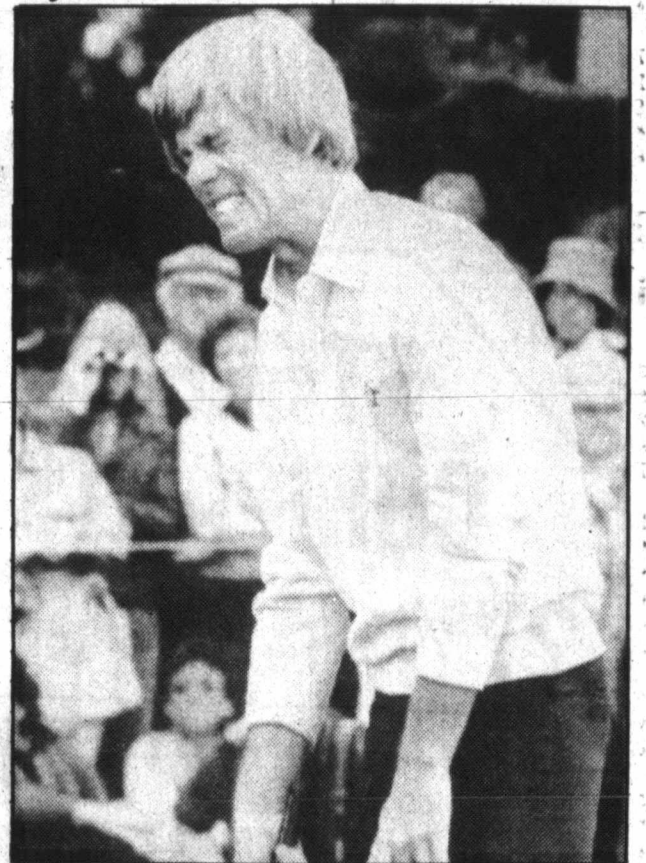

Devlin, now a sometime tour player who spends most of his time as a golf television commentator and course architect, held a 2-shot lead at the end of 18 holes, but couldn't hang on to it. Devlin, whose last victory came 10 years ago, did not make a birdie despite the near-ideal playing conditions, and struggled to a 75.

Burns, who led at the end of 54 holes in this tournament last year, closed with a 70 and Simpson, a steady money-winner on the PGA Tour, matched par 72.

Jack Nicklaus had a 71 that kept alive his hopes for a record fifth U.S. Open crown. He was at 215, only 3 back, and tied with Cal Peete, who shot a 72.

The group at par 216 included Masters champion Craig Stadler, Lanny Wadkins, Dan Pohl, Bobby Clampett and longshot Larry Rinker, a Tour rookie who held second place at the start of the day's play.

Argentina rebounds in soccer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — After a stunning defeat in the first game, defending champion Argentina has righted itself in the race for the 1982 World Cup soccer championship.

Diego Maradona, the Argentines' 21-year-old sensation who has been compared to Pele, scored two goals and set up another Friday, lifting his team to a crucial 4-1 victory over Hungary.

The Group 2 triumph means Argentina, along with Hungary, still has a chance to qualify for the second phase of the world's biggest soccer tournament.

Maradona's brilliant performance contrasted sharply with his lackluster effort when Belgium downed Argentina 1-0 in the World Cup opener last Sunday. Argentina's convincing victory should erase doubts whether the South Americans still pack the kind of power that earned the 1978 title.

Three-time World Cup winners Brazil also played brilliantly Friday night, trouncing Scotland 4-1 in a Group 6 match. The victory meant the Brazilians, the tournament favorites, are almost certain of advancing to the second round.

In Friday's other match, Italy and Peru tied 1-1.

Oscar, the Brazilian defender who played for the North American Soccer League Cosmos in 1980, put his team ahead for the first time in the 49th minute with a header off a corner shot from Junior.

The other Brazilian goals came from Zico, Eder and Roberto Falcao.

In the Peru-Italy Group 1 match, Teofilo Cubillas, the veteran Fort Lauderdale Strikers midfielder, had an outstanding game for Peru as his team rallied in the second half.

NFL contracts to expire

NEW YORK (AP) — The window will open later this month through which National Football League players can leave their union, and the NFL Management Council is showing them how it's done.

The contract between the league and players association expires July 15, and before then there is 10-day period during which players can resign from the union. The management council has outlined the procedure for the players.

The Associated Press has learned that the council's newsletter, "The NFL and

You," which will be mailed to players, management, coaches and media on Monday, explains that union security and dues check-off provisions end with the expiration of the collective bargaining agreement.

But Ed Garvey, the executive director of the NFLPA, doubts that the newsletter will have much effect on union membership, describing it as "just childish."

"It would be about as effective as me writing the owners and saying they can withdraw from the management council. I might get one taker," he said Thursday after returning to Washington, D.C. "And if he does withdraw we will welcome him into our union."

Garvey said both he and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who has been subpoenaed to appear, will testify Monday.

In the newsletter, the NFLMC maintains that it is not soliciting union resignations, simply informing the players of their rights.

Phillips unfamiliar with player drug use

AUSTIN (AP) — New Orleans Saints Coach Bum Phillips says he has never seen his players use cocaine and he probably wouldn't know if they did.

"I always thought Coke was something that came in a red and white can," Phillips said.

"Sure I remember Don Reese. I cut him. I remember his athletic ability, but I don't remember anything to do with cocaine. I don't know of anything like that going on in New Orleans. I wasn't there when it supposedly happened," said Phillips.

Reese said some Saints used cocaine at halftime of NFL games.

Phillips said he does not think cocaine is a "big problem" in the NFL.

"I'm sure some people do it ... but I don't see player's high on cocaine during a game."

Female athlete breaks discus record 3 times

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ria Stalman of The Netherlands shattered meet and stadium records three times each in winning the women's discus, the first of 12 final events Saturday in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The 28-year-old Stalman, the collegiate champion as a freshman at the University of Texas-El Paso in 1978 and as a sophomore and senior at Arizona State in 1979 and 1981, had a best throw of 203 feet, 10 inches.

Her series also included tosses of 200-5 and 199-6 — all breaking the meet record of 192-5 she set in Friday's qualifying and the Tom Black Stadium mark of 198-8 established by Jane Haist in 1977.

This was the first national title for the 5-foot-11, 190-pound Stalman, who now competes for the Los Angeles Naturite Track Club.

In men's competition Saturday night, Carl Lewis took the first big step toward a second consecutive double in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships, sprinting to victory in the 100-meter dash.

The 20-year-old Lewis, winner of the 100 and long jump last year in the national championships at Sacramento, Calif., took the sprint in 10 1/2 seconds.

Immediately after crossing the finish line, he headed for the long jump area, where the trials and final were scheduled to begin about 10 minutes after the dash.

Lewis' clocking broke the meet record of 10 1/3 he set last year.

His closest competition this time came from Calvin Smith of the University of Alabama. Smith stayed with Lewis for about the first 80 meters, but the strong University of Houston sophomore then blasted his way in front and raised his index finger in victory as he sped past the tape.

No athlete has won the 100 and long jump twice in a row in the national championships since Malcolm Ford did it three times, from 1884-1886. When Lewis accomplished the rare double last year, it was the first time it had been done since Jesse Owens did it in 1936.

While Lewis is bidding for his double, Stephanie Hightower, formerly of Ohio State University, equaled the American record in the women's 100-meter high hurdles with a time of 12.86.

Hightower's clocking tied the mark set by Deby LaPlante in 1979.

"Everything felt good all the way down," said Hightower, who outsped crowd favorite Benita Fitzgerald of the University of Tennessee. "I didn't hit anything (hurdles)."

Another impressive women's winner was sprinter Evelyn Ashford. She took the 100 in 10.97, the fifth fastest time in history and only .09 off the world record of 10.88, held by Marlies Gohr of East Germany.

Ashford had to battle to hold off Merlene Ottey of Jamaica and the University of Nebraska.

Wearing her usual one-piece suit, a bright red outfit, the swift Ashford led all the way in beating the long-legged Ottey, whose time of 11.06 was a British Commonwealth record.

Willie Gault, another Tennessee standout and a favorite with the crowd at the school's Tom Black Stadium, blazed to victory in the men's 110-meter hurdles in 13.54.

Gault, tutored by world record holder Renaldo Nehemiah — who has given up hurdling for a lucrative pro football career with the San Francisco 49ers — led virtually all the way in beating Milan Stewart of the University of Southern California, the runner-up in 13.63.

Vicki drives...

First round leader Vicki Ferguson of Boca Raton, Fla. eyes her drive from the 17th tee during the first round of the LPGA Lady Keystone tournament in Hershey, Pa. She slipped from the lead as Barbara Moxness took over in the next round.

Moxness leads Keystone

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Barbara Moxness fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to take a 3-shot lead heading into the final round of the $200,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Moxness, who has never won a tournament on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, had a 3-shot advantage over Vicki Ferguson and Hall of Famer Sandra Haynie.

Ferguson, the first-round leader, slipped to 1-over-par 73 for a two-day total of 140. Haynie shot her second consecutive 2-under 70 for her share of second place.

Gerilyn Britz and Sylvia Bertolaccini shared third place at 141. Britz fired the day's best round, a 5-under 67 while Bertolaccini had a 69.

Another shot back at 142 was last week's LPGA Championship winner, Jan Stephenson, who shot her second straight 71.

Moxness, 29, in her fifth year on the tour, was 1-over after the first five holes, then settled down to drop birdie putts on both the eighth and ninth.

She had a 15-foot birdie putt at the 11th hole, another at the 15th, and then converted a 25-footer on the final hole to cap the round.

Porsches lead LeMans

LE MANS, France (AP) — The factory Porsche team continued to dominate the Le Mans 24-Hour Race marathon early this morning after eight hours of racing.

The cars crewed by Americans Hurlay Haywood and Al Holbert held a one lap lead over teammates Jacky Ickx of Belgium and Derek Bell of Britain.

Two minutes behind in third place came the German team's closest challenger, the French Rondeau-Ford crewed by Frenchman Xavier Lapeyre and Francois Migault, with Briton Gordon Spice, 40 seconds ahead of the third factory Porsche of Jochen Mass and Vern Schuppan, which had been delayed with minor electrical problems.

In fifth position, another lap back, was the private Porsche of the Belgian Martin brothers, Jean Michel and Philippe, with Bob Wollek of France.

One of the two new British Nimrod-Aston Martin cars, five laps — over 40 miles — behind held a steady sixth on its first visit to the demanding circuit, driven by Britain's Ray Mallock, Simon Phillips and Mike Salmon.

Early withdrawals included both works Ford C100 contenders, the Ludwig-Surer entry with electrical problems and the sister Winkelhock-Niedzwiedz car with a blown engine.

The American father and son team of Mario and Michael Andretti failed to start the race after a controversial last-minute disqualification following a minor technical infringement. Their Mirage-Ford was disqualified before the start when officials ruled an oil radiator was unsafely installed. "It's beyond my comprehension," said a bitter Mario Andretti, who noted the car officially had been verified and repeatedly checked before and during qualifying.

New rules limiting fuel consumption were hampering the Porsches' top speed.

Trouble plagued the other leading team, the Lancias, on the opening laps. Both cars, crewed by Italian Grand Prix drivers Michele Alboreto, Riccardo Patrese and Teo Fabi, and Pier-Carlo Ghinzani, had problems with their electrical fuel pumps.

Instead of challenging for the lead as expected, they were far back in the field.

The race was being held in warm, cloudy weather before a crowd estimated around 100,000.

There were 30 American drivers in the field, but some were early victims of the notoriously tough track where speeds as low as 40 mph and as high as 220 mph impose severe mechanical strain.

One of the two Nimrod Aston Martins crashed on the three-mile Mulsonne straight in the early evening. British driver Tiff Needell escaped injury but the car was out of the race.

At least two of the 12 cars that already were out of the race had run out of fuel on the track, trying to squeeze out the fuel allowance.

Homers carry Rangers to victory over Twins

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Buddy Bell homered twice and Lamar Johnson and Dave Hostetler also belted home runs to carry the Texas Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

The Twins, who have now lost 39 of their last 45 games, fell behind in the second inning after Hostetler led off with triple against Pete Redfern, 3-8. Jim Sundberg followed with a groundout to score Hostetler for a 1-0 Texas lead.

Johnson hit his fourth homer of the year leading off the fourth to put the Rangers ahead 2-0, and Bell opened the sixth with his fifth homer to give Texas a 3-0 lead. One out later, Hostetler hit his seventh homer of the season.

Gary Ward's two-run blast, his seventh homer of the season, trimmed the Texas margin to 4-2 in the sixth.

Bell made it 6-2 in the seventh with a two-out, two-run shot. John Grubb, who had singled, scored ahead of Bell's sixth homer.

In other American League games Friday, Cleveland routed Boston 10-3, Kansas City topped Seattle 4-1, California beat Chicago 7-2, Baltimore beat New York 4-1, Milwaukee defeated Detroit 5-2, and Toronto outlasted Oakland 6-4.

INDIANS 10, RED SOX 3
Cleveland's Toby Harrah, who leads the major leagues with a .387 average, but who had gone hitless in his last three games, cracked a homer, two doubles and a single in Cleveland's victory.

Cleveland's John Denny, 4-7, posted the victory over the first-place Red Sox with 71-3 innings of six-hit pitching. Cleveland's Miguel Dilone slugged a two-run homer, while Von Hayes had two doubles and three RBIs. Dennis Eckersley, 6-5, took the loss for the Red Sox.

ROYALS 4, MARINERS 1
Kansas City's Amos Otis and Willie Aikens cracked two-run homers in the ninth inning to lead the Royals to their come-from-behind victory.

Otis and Aikens delivered off the Mariners'

Bill Caudill, 7-3.
Otis hit an 0-2 pitch into the left center field seats. After Hal McRae was retired, Jerry Martin drew a walk and Aikens belted a 2-3 pitch into the second deck in right field to seal the Royals' triumph.

ANGELS 7, WHITE SOX 2
California's Reggie Jackson homered for his 2,000th career hit, and had no difficulty putting the milestone into appropriate words. "At the age of 36, it means I'm not going to get 3,000," said Jackson.

National League

Their big guns relatively silent Friday night, the Atlanta Braves' seventh and eighth hitters — Bruce Benedict and Randy Johnson — combined for six runs batted in as Atlanta whipped San Francisco 8-3.

Benedict, batting in the seventh spot, had a two-run single in the first when the Braves jumped on Renie Martin, 2-4, for five runs, and belted his first homer of the season in the fifth after Horner had singled.

Johnson's two-run double capped the Braves five-run first.

The victory went to rookie Ken Dayley, 3-3, who gave up seven hits and two runs in 52-3 innings. Rick Camp finished the game to gain his fifth save.

Elsewhere in the NL, Los Angeles edged Cincinnati 3-2 in 11 innings; Philadelphia stopped Pittsburgh 8-3; Houston whipped San Diego 7-2; Montreal blanked Chicago 4-0 and New York beat St. Louis 5-3 in the opener of a doubleheader before the Cardinals won the nightcap 5-4.

DODGERS 3, REDS 2
Pedro Guerrero tripled and scored on Mike Scioscia's single in the 11th inning, leading Los Angeles over Cincinnati. Guerrero tripled past the glove of center fielder Cesar Cedeno to lead off the Dodger 11th. Following a groundout and a walk, Scioscia singled off Tom Hume, 0-2, for the winning run.

'Hostetler Homer' worth a trip to a Ranger game

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) — There is finally an attraction at Arlington Stadium worthy of $3 for a bleacher seat. It's called a "Hostetler Homer."

Not since Frank Howard's mighty missiles menaced FAA radar in the early 1970s have baseballs been hammered so hard by a Texas Ranger.

Believe it or not, the Rangers, who have the weakest offense in the American League, actually have a guy in the lineup who can kill you.

Meet David Alan Hostetler, who at a muscular 6-4 and 215 pounds looks as if he could drive steel with John Henry and give Paul Bunyan a logging tip or two.

Hostetler doesn't just hit a baseball; he compresses it into a white satellite.

His very first major league home run came in Shea Stadium last Oct. 4. He mashed a Pete Falcone fastball into Row W of the parking lot. New York Met officials are still trying to figure how far that ball traveled.

Hostetler nailed a Jack O'Connor fastball a week ago Saturday and sent Ranger bleacherites diving for cover. The still-rising ball crashed high into the stands 454 feet from home plate.

"He has ungodly power...unbelievable power," said Rangers manager Don Zimmer. "He hits the ball like Howard used to... I mean he puts some velocity on it."

Hostetler, who hit more home runs in two years than Fred Lynn did at Southern California in three years, came to Texas as a "sweetener."

The slugger was the throw-in in the deal that sent Al Oliver to Montreal for Larry Parrish. The Expos finally threw in Hostetler because they didn't need any more right-handed power.

at Denver on the Ranger farm, was called up May 28.

In 14 games, he has the club lead with six home runs.

Already he is something of a cult hero in Arlington Stadium, where the fans are desperate to cheer.

A hard-core group arrives early for Hostetler's batting practice pyrotechnics. They often are rewarded by souvenirs pelting the seats. He's hit as many as seven in the stands in one session.

When the game starts, a Hostetler appearance at the plate signals a stirring of anticipation. Nobody wants to get beamed by one of the rookie's rockets.

Hostetler is a gentle 25-year-old giant playing at first base and trying to hold down his first big league job. He is almost shy about his power.

"I don't try to hit the ball for great distances," he said. "I just try to get comfortable up there."

In Denver, the Pasadena, Calif. native hit some awesome shots in the mountain air that were never measured.

"I'm not sure how far some of those balls traveled but they really fly in that thin air," he said.

The "tag" on Hostetler is that he doesn't have the discipline to hit major league pitching and is poor with the glove.

"He's been laying off some mighty tough pitches," said Zimmer. "I think he has a chance to be a really good one. Our pitchers sure like to see him in the lineup."

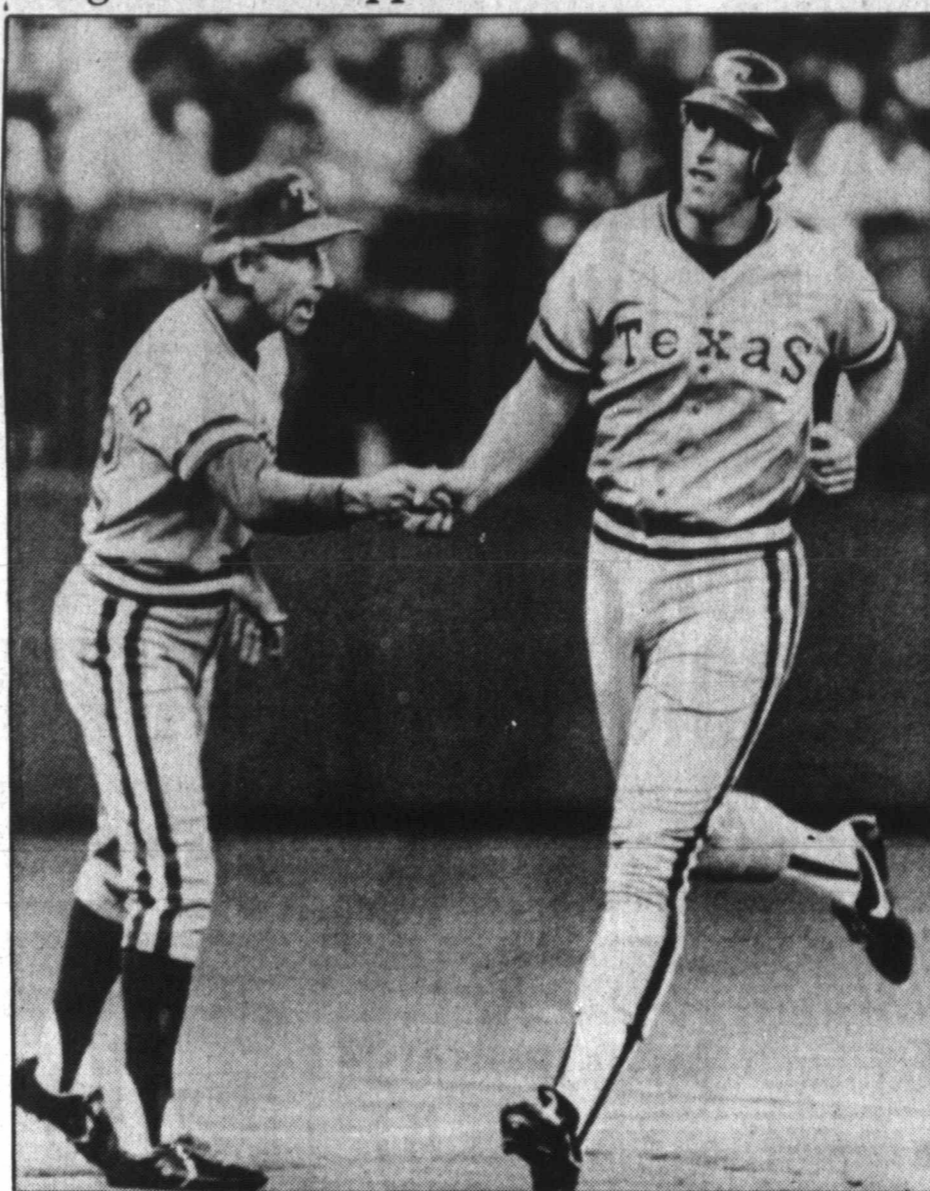

Hostetler admitted "My defense has been shaky but it's getting better... I'm working very hard on it."

But Ranger fans don't come to see Hostetler's leather.

They want to watch him batter a baseball.

A "Hostetler Homer" is an experience, one of the few good ones Ranger fans have had in 1982.

Rangers' round-tripper ...

Dave Hostetler gets congratulations from coach Wayne Terwilliger as he rounds third after belting yet another home run for the Rangers. Hostetler's big bat has become a prime attraction for Ranger fans.

Political ad ires Cowboy officials

IRVING (AP) — A conservative political ad that features girls in Texas Stadium dressed like Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders has roused the ire of stadium and team officials.

The advertisement, which attacks U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, was filmed at Texas Stadium by the National Conservative Political Action Committee as part of its $1 million campaign to defeat the incumbent Democrat.

Bentsen faces Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Collins in the November election.

Texas Stadium Corp. Vice President Bert Rose said Thursday that he would have barred NCPAC from the stadium if he had known in advance the models would wear the Cowboys' blue-and-white.

The television spot was to premier this weekend in Lubbock.

Benefit tourney aids placekicker

AUSTIN (AP) — A benefit golf tournament for former St. Louis placekicker Steve Little raised "somewhere between $4,000 and $5,000, we hope," according to the tournament sponsor, Russell Erxleben of the New Orleans Saints.

Little was paralyzed from the waist down when his car skidded and crashed into a road sign on Oct. 17, 1980.

"Had we known, which we didn't, that there was a cheerleader connotation to this thing, we wouldn't have allowed it," Rose said. "Clearly, the Dallas Cowboys, in toto or none of its parts, have any interest in politics."

"There's a policy that if anything takes place in the stadium involving cheerleaders, it's got to be our cheerleaders," said Cowboy public relations director Doug Todd.

"If the stadium had known anything about the cheerleaders ahead of time, the normal procedure would have been to have them (NCPAC) call the Cowboys to work something out," he said.

At the start of the commercial, the models are dancing on the stadium field, cheering for Bentsen. As the announcer details Bentsen's voting record, the models angrily throw down their pompons and storm off.

Rose said that because of the controversy, the stadium will not allow any more commercial political filming in the 65,000-seat stadium. NCPAC spokesman Joe Stefan said his group doesn't "really see why everyone is so upset."

But Bentsen press aide Jack DeVore called the ad "political pornography" and said he assumed the cheerleaders would "take some sort of action" against it.

And it's baseball time again fans

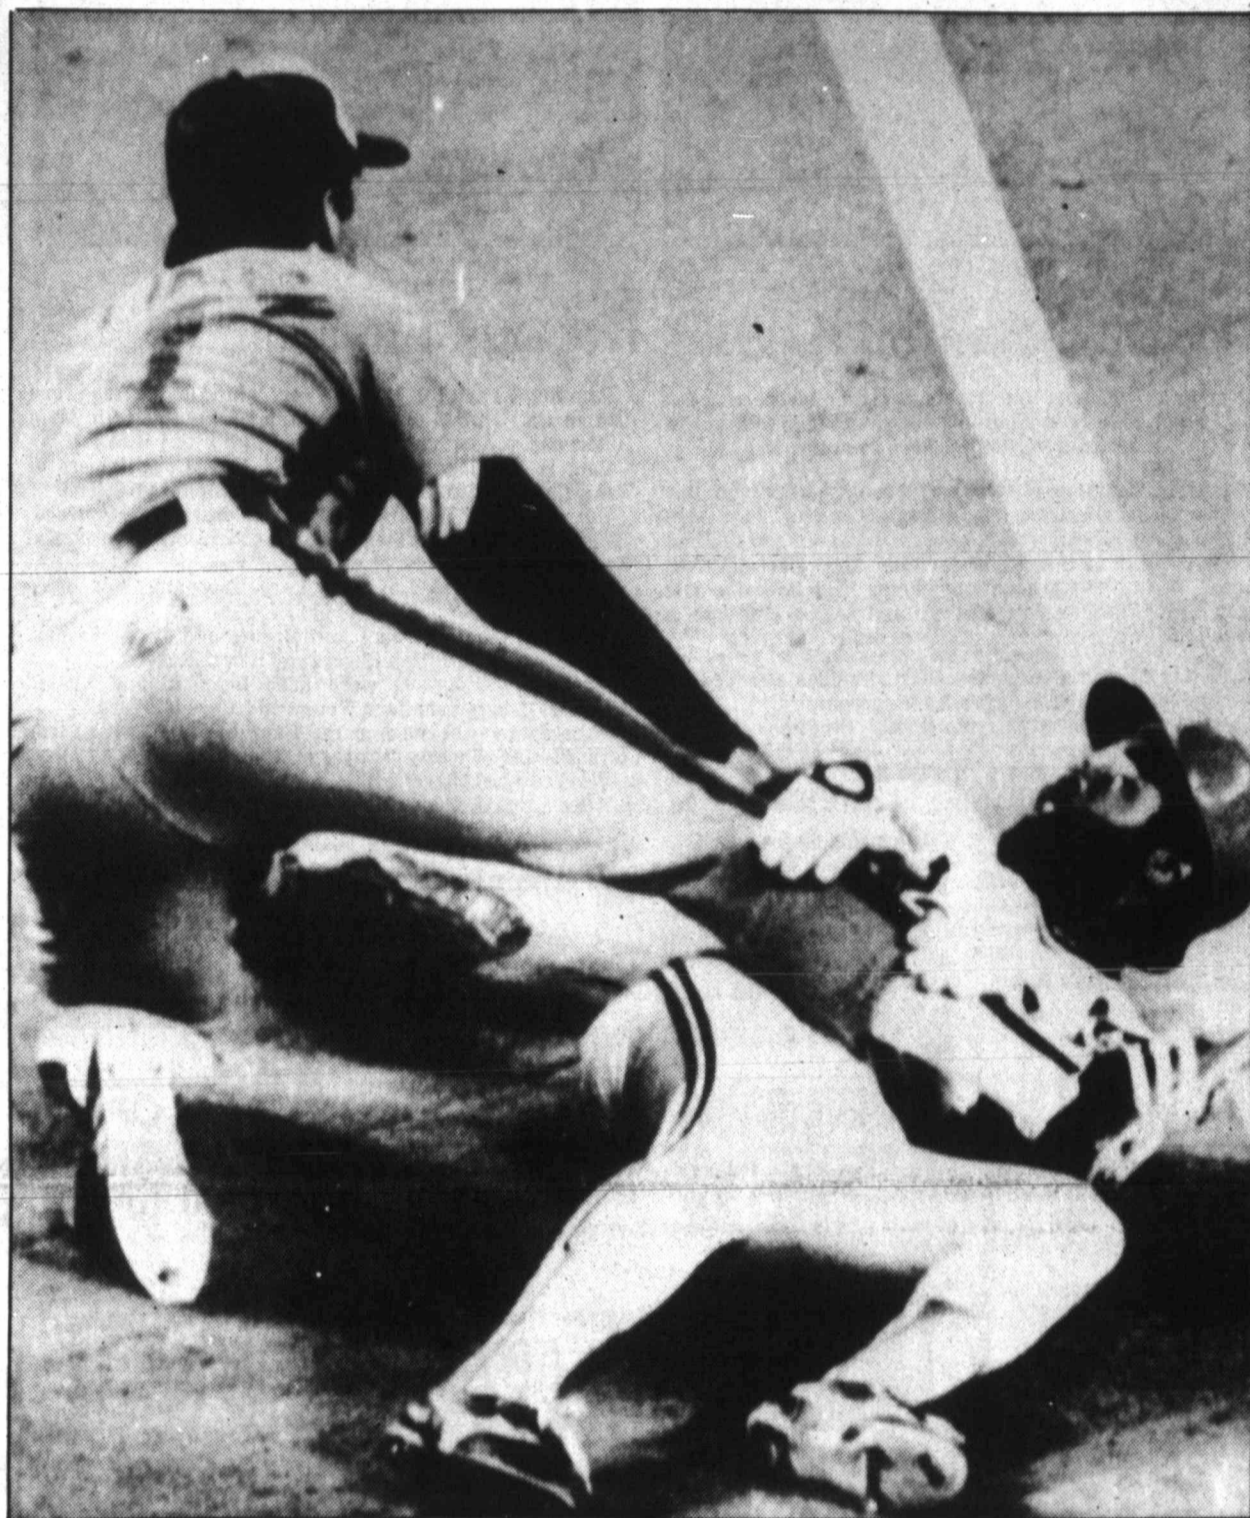

BY TOM ALLSTON
Staff Writer

Baseball has been called the National Pastime.

Whether this holds for the rest of the year, it's indisputable that Summertime is Baseball Time: in this shiny season players and fans swarm by the millions to stadium and sandlot. Leather and ashwood, walks, balks and base hits, sno-cones and Cheese-Whiz nachos set the tone of the nation till Fall.

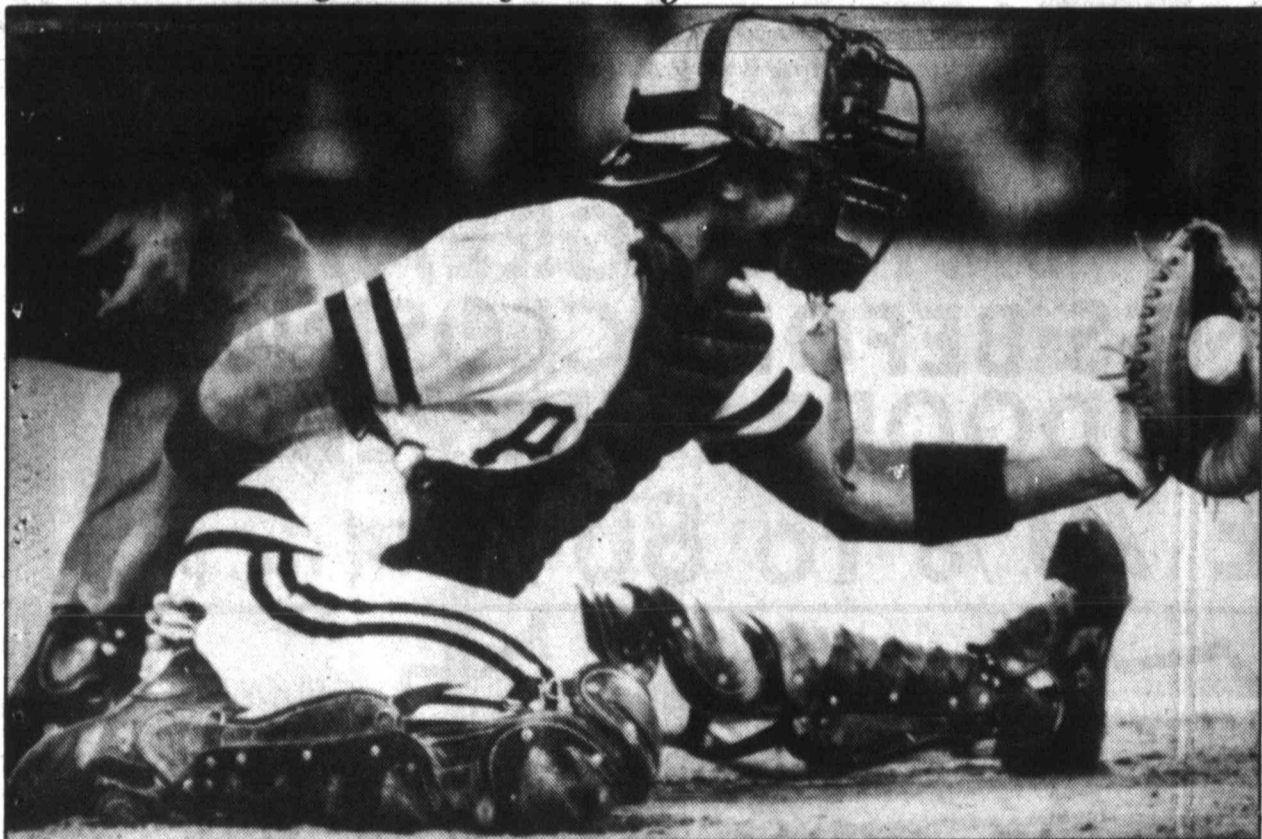

Journalists call summer the Silly Season. Some of this seems to rub off on baseball players, as seen on this page. Stopped in mid-move by the photographer's shutter, they display a wealth of movements and poses that challenge belief: their logical movements take on a bizarre aspect. We can assume that players don't really grapple, play tag, get into limp-wristed postures or compromising positions on the field. Pictures can and do lie. But in this case it's a fun fib, an entertaining exercise in imagining what could be going on out there.

I told you this would cost an arm & a leg...

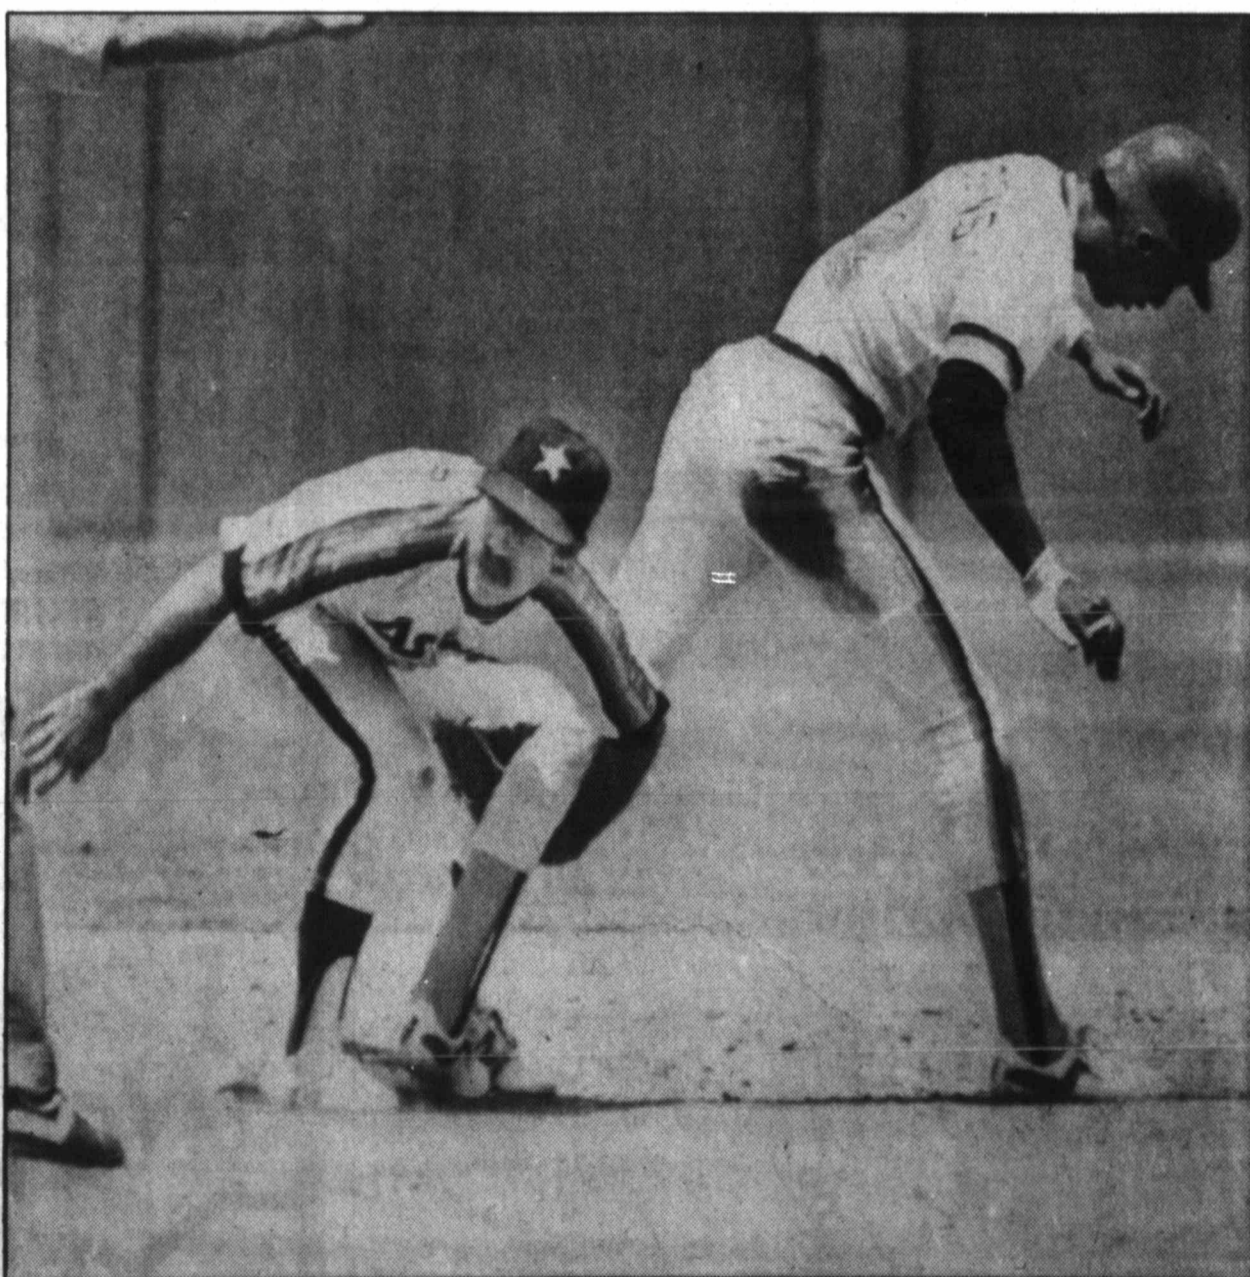

St. Louis Cardinal, Ozzie Smith, tries to lift the leg of Montreal Expo's pitcher Bill Gullickson off of his body after Gullickson tagged him out on a failed squeeze-play during the 4th inning Monday night at St. Louis. Smith broke from third on a pitch out. Gullickson made the tag on the run - down. (AP Laserphoto)

There's always time for Yoga...

Pittsburgh Pirate's catcher Tony Pena isn't practicing Yoga while making a difficult catch during Monday's game with the New York Mets. He routinely sits in the dirt behind home plate, an unusual position that worried some coaches at first but one which Pena says gives pitchers a lower target. (AP Laserphoto)

The old hidden ball trick...

Houston Astro shortstop Craig Reynolds hooks his arm around the leg of San Diego Padre Alan Wiggins after Wiggins stole second base during the bottom of the first inning. Wiggins was called safe. The Padres won all four games of the series winning the last game 5-4 Sunday afternoon in San Diego. (AP Laserphoto)

I'm a gona get you...

San Francisco Giant pitcher Renie Martin chases Atlanta's Brett Butler toward second base after picking him off. He tagged Butler out. Action was in the third inning of the first game of a double header Sunday. Martin and Giants won the first game 2-1. Braves won the second game 5-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Going to extremes

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (AP) — Eskimos of the far North have a more intense blood flow to their hands and feet than do most other humans.

A widening of the blood vessels, called vasodilation, permits abundant blood flow to the extremities. As a result, Eskimos have warm hands even in cold weather. Their basal metabolic rate is 20 to 40 percent higher than that of people in more southerly regions, it was reported by Natural History magazine.

Mending Mature Marriage Retirement debate

By LOUISE PIERCE

Not only do I get letters from you older couples, but you often telephone me or meet me downtown and ask advice. I'm happy to have queries, any way you want to make them.

Sometimes you ask if I do any consulting before I give answers to your questions. I do quite often, yes. I talk to ministers, doctors, lawyers and other authorities.

The other day a lady I had not met before asked if I might be "Dear Louise". When I said I was, she asked, "May I ask you some Personal questions?"

"Of course."

"Are you and Otis over 60? Is your health good or bad? Is it better to retire at 65 or keep on working? My husband and I are 63 and we're trying to decide which would give us a better life in our older years."

My first answer was that Otis and I are over 60. His health is so good that I marvel at his ability to keep up his fast pace of continuing to work in his profession, hold offices in so many organizations, take me dancing at least once a week and do all the other things he does with charm and vigor. He says it's because he keeps physically fit through daily exercise and two afternoons a week on the golf course.

My health is reasonably good, enough so that I can't really complain. I have small problems which I have detailed to you many times. But there's nothing wrong with me that isn't absorbed and soon forgotten in my pleasure of our good life.

As for retiring at 65 (or 70 or whatever age you are considering), there are mountains of ideas, beliefs, and suggestions on this.

A staff writer for U. S. News & World Report gave reasons for retiring at 65, or sooner, as follows:

(1) Increases in pensions, Social Security and other retirement benefits help keep up with inflation.

(2) Some pension policies encourage employees toward early retirement, adding financial incentive.

(3) Careers sometimes suffer frustrations because employers often shut off advancement for older workers.

(4) Companies sometimes demand that older workers keep up the vigorous work they always did. In other words, keep up or get out.

(5) High unemployment causes lay-offs, and older people often prefer to retire than look for new jobs.

(6) Poor health can sometimes urge workers toward retirement.

I'd like to add a couple more: (1) the desire to have more leisure time with your spouse; and (2) the desire to travel as much as your finances and inclinations allow.

Many readers ask me how to keep healthy after retirement. There are mountains of ways to stay well, to keep working or to retire. Authorities tell us that, with or without pills or potions, some people are healthy into their 90 or even 100s — and that there is no single secret to it. Such oldsters seem to have common traits and habits.

Dr. Erdman of Duke University's Center for the study of Aging, says healthy, happy older people tend to have satisfaction in work and volunteer projects, being happy, enjoying sex, participating in sports, possessing good habits and a pleasant environment.

There you have an educator's suggestions for aging gracefully and contentedly with your mate if you retire at 65 or soon after.

Among the arguments for keeping a longtime job or seeking new employment after retirement from such work include (1) good health and the desire to keep working; (2) the mounting cost of living that can make continuance of work attractive; and (3) lack of any activity planned for retirement, which could cause a lack of interest in life itself.

81-year-old Congressman Claude Pepper of Florida says, "I was elected to the House when I was 61. If I'd quit at 65, I don't think I'd be around today."

Write DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, TX. 79065. Or call me.

Dear Abby

Adoptee neither curious nor bitter

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 years old and my name is Jenna Whitney, and I would like to set you straight on the subject of adoption from an adoptee's point of view. I read your column in the Berkshire Eagle and was prompted to write when I read your Mother's Day comment: "If you're adopted, send your mother two bouquets."

Contrary to your slanted belief, we who are adopted are not a special breed of people — we are simply people who arrived in the family differently. Perhaps our natural parents couldn't afford to raise us, or our natural mothers had no husbands and wanted the best for us. Either way, I'm sure that more than half the people who are adopted are glad they are where they are. If someday they would like to find the woman who gave birth to them, that's their prerogative and I wish them luck. Since I was adopted when I was 3 months old, I never knew the woman who gave birth to me nor do I ever want to, but I am glad she had me because I am having a wonderful life. My mother and father who raised me have given me many opportunities few people have had. I've been to Bermuda, the Bahamas, Europe, and I plan to go to England, Ireland and Scotland this summer — all before I'm 16.

Now, Abby, before I close this letter I want to ask you two things:

1) Since by your standards I'm supposed to give my mother two bouquets of flowers for Mother's Day, should I give my father two ties for Father's Day?

2) Please use this in your column because I would like to know how many readers agree that adopted children owe their parents twice as much.

JENNA IN WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

DEAR JENNA: One tie and this column should make a wonderful Father's Day gift.

DEAR ABBY: While going through some old school books, I found a stack of "thank-you" notes I had written, addressed and stamped, but never mailed!

Abby, I graduated from high school four years ago! What should I do? Mail them now or just forget about it? I feel so ashamed.

FOUR YEARS LATE

DEAR LATE: Open them and add an apology with an explanation for your tardiness. (P.S. And don't forget to add more postage, or they'll never get there.)

DEAR ABBY: First off, I'm a 17-year-old girl who has been overweight all my life, but not terribly overweight (I'm 5-foot-4 and weigh between 130 and 140). Anyway, last Thanksgiving after I pigged out with seconds on everything, my father said he would give me $100 if I lost 10 pounds by New Year's Day.

I took him up on it and lost not only 10, but 12 pounds by New Year's Day, so he gave me the $100.

Here is my problem: Since then, I have gained it all back, plus three pounds, and now my father thinks I should return the $100. I have already spent the money, but that's beside the point, Abby. I honestly don't think he should expect me to return the money.

What do you think?

LOVES TO EAT IN N.J.

DEAR LOVES: I think you earned the $100 fair and square, and since nothing was said about "keeping the weight off" for a specified length of time, you are not obligated to return the money.

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

SUSAN BIRDELL

Birdsell named U. S. National Award winner

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that Susan Birdsell has been named to a 1982 United States National Award winner in Business Education.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than percent of all American high school students.

Susan Birdsell, who graduated May 28, 1982 from Pampa High School, was nominated for this National award by Mrs. Ramona Hite, a Business teacher at the school. Susan Birdsell will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and upon the Standards for Selection set forth by the Academy. The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability, and recommendation from a teacher or director.

Susan Birdsell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Birdsell.

Safety and savings

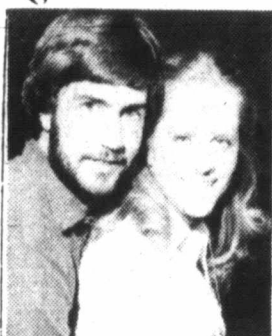

MIAMI (AP) — Economic incentives that encourage the nation's truck drivers to save fuel are also helping to lower accident rates and highway fatalities, a safety expert says.

Driving techniques that earn truckers cash and gift bonuses for increasing fuel economy also pay dividends for all highway travelers, says Bob Noel, head of Ryder Truck Rental driver-training program.

Following techniques taught by the firm's fuel-conservation course, drivers found they could earn more money while doing their job in approximately the same amount of time. They also found that at the end of the trip, they were less tired, less tense and more alert, Noel observes.

HOWARD E. GRAHAM

Knife & Fork
announce programs

"The Top O' Texas Knife & Fork Club programs for 1982-83 promise to be outstanding," according to Howard E. Graham, club president.

Bill Coplin ("Sir Philip Richardson") will open the series on October 4 with a unique and delightful message that will shatter the theory that the English have no sense of humor. Posing as the educational advisor to the Prime Minister, Coplin brings an exciting message of humor that will help you to reach out to others and to go that extra mile in your life.

Vern Bennom Grimsley will speak on "The Psychology of Exuberant Living" on February 10, 1983. His inspirational broadcasts are heard by millions over more than 1,000 radio stations in all 50 states and around the world.

Chellis Swenson, as "Rhinestone Rosie" will entertain the club on March 18, 1983, with songs from Gay Nineties. Along with her performance she will wear authentic gowns from the 1890s and relate experiences she has had in collecting her costumes.

Arthur Secord will climax the year on April 19, 1983, with a dynamic message on "The Challenge of Communicating." Secord is a nationally known master in the art of communication and has delivered more than 3,500 speeches during his career.

In addition to Graham, other members of the board of directors are: R. J. Sailor Jr., vice president; Helen Wagener, secretary; Marjorie Gaut, Charles Bowers, W. M. Ledbetter, Dr. Kenneth Roysse, Jerry Lane, Geraldine Rumpy and Bob Carmichael.

Graham urges all members who have not yet paid their 1982-83 dues to do so immediately in order that they not miss this exciting series of programs.

At Wit's End

"Dad 1982" is not the same Dad we paid tribute to a decade ago.

A funny thing happened to him on the way to the women's liberation movement. He became liberated too.

The stereotyped features are gone: the stiff upper lip in the face of sorrow, the preoccupation with car mileage, the garage full of power tools that he hated, the burden of being the sole breadwinner. In their place is a father who is allowed to cry, to sweat, and to fail.

He's a man who can change a diaper and heat a bottle without losing his manhood. He can smell good and wear pastel shirts and not raise eyebrows.

He can kiss his sons in the same spirit in which he kisses his daughters, and fight for custody of them and stand a fair chance of winning if he has to.

He can wear tennis shoes on airplanes and go on a diet. He can get a job as a nurse or a secretary and not be unique.

He doesn't have to pace the floor of a waiting room while his child is being born, nor does he have to lose face because his wife supports him while he is finishing his education or is between jobs.

The old "Wait till your father gets home" that used to mean an hour of talks and discipline, now means, "We eat dinner."

He can pass up gusto for something dietary and no one cares. A hurricane can bear his name. Putting gas in the car and changing the oil is no longer a job FOR MALES ONLY.

He can make stroganoff, a good cup of coffee, treat ring-around-the-collar, and find the working end of a vacuum sweeper.

He is less threatened by women, children, and responsibility as he becomes more aware of our similarities and not our differences.

Never in the history of civilization have fathers been closer to their children. They're no longer that elusive figure who used to appear on cue, count them, have dinner with them, and peck them good night on the cheek as they went to bed. Dad 1982 is a vital part of their lives.

I used to say, "God invented man and said, 'I can do better than that.'"

I'm not so sure anymore.

Peeking at Pampa

A truly lovely reception was held at the Lovett Memorial Library on Sunday afternoon, June 6, hosted by the people of St. Vincent DePaul Catholic Church and honoring Father Francis Hynes, who will be leaving Pampa soon.

The whole area was invited, and members of almost every congregation attended. Friends came from other towns as well as Pampa, filling the library auditorium all afternoon, offering tributes to Father Hynes and wishing him well.

Ladies of the church hosted a tea table laden with cookies, sandwiches, candies and other goodies. Somebody asked Gay Ammeter how many sandwiches she made for the occasion. She said she and a couple of friends made 400 sandwiches — and that other groups did the same.

Father Hynes will be moving to Sweetwater, Texas. He will also be acting as guide for summer trips to foreign countries. Wouldn't it be exciting to take a trip under the guidance of this happy, smiling, well-informed man? He is such a delight and will be greatly missed here.

He worked in community projects as well as in his church. He was on the Board of Directors of the Pampa Rotary Club and served in many other ways. We wish him every happiness.

Did you know that there are several books in the library by George Blanda, the famous football star and brother of Pete Blanda of Pampa? Excellent story of his life and of advice on physical fitness. Good reading.

Half the town is happy to have the Gikas brothers home from their vacations and at work in their cafe again. During the week they were closed, people wandered around Foster Street, sorry not to dine there. One couple even drove over from Amarillo just to eat coney in that spot.

Understand Ted went to Greece to visit relatives and friends. John and wife, Joyce, went to Colorado and enjoyed the mountains and the fishing. John brought home pictures of his fine catches, the envy of other Pampa fishermen.

Rue and Hesta Hestand are home from their marvelous trip east. They attended the Commencement Program at West Point, where Rue's nephew was graduated. (Rue says West Point is a BIG place.) Then they toured the eastern part of the U. S., including many historic places.

Hope many of you enrolled in the pottery-making workshop sponsored by the Fine Arts Association and taught by Janice Sackett and James Hinkley. Sounds like a wonderful opportunity to improve your skill in this field. Janice teaches art at P. H. S., you know, and is an artist of real ability. She's the wife of Floyd Sackett, our Chamber of Commerce manager.

Hope you took in the Second Annual Art Festival, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association and hosted by Las Pampas Galleries, a couple of weeks ago. A reception was held on Friday night and the showing was on Saturday and Sunday. The work of 15 artists of the Southwest was on display.

Glendora Gindorf was hotness to the festival. She's such a charming lady, always beautifully dressed, always looking as if she just left the beauty shop.

Among Glendora's assistants was Burton (Mrs. Jeff) Bearden. She's also a lady of charm and personality, possessed of a winning smile.

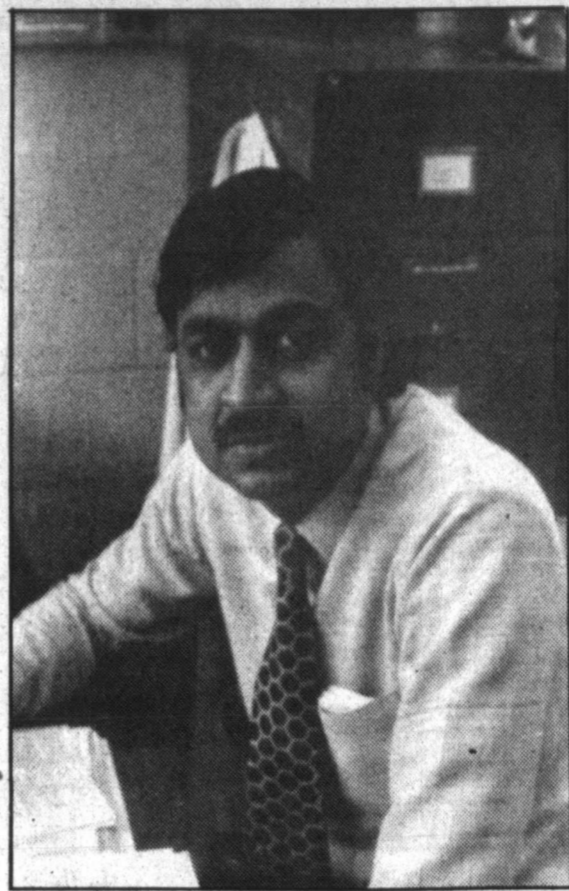

Aren't the Cow Belles of the area a busy and innovative group? They meet in members' homes and come from Pampa, Miami, Canadian, Panhandle and Wheeler. Seems to me that, through the years, these ladies have sponsored style shows and other lovely events. Mrs. Bill Surratt says this year's style show will be Sept. 18. They're a busy, working, accomplishing club.

Always enjoy seeing the beautiful pictures of brides in the Pampa News. Was especially interested in the marriage of Brenda Johnson to James Bothwell in Corsicana. She's the daughter of the Blaine Johnsons, who lived here when Brenda was a little girl. She's also the granddaughter of Mrs. Webster Johnson, a Pampa lady with lots of personality and lots of friends. Have heard her called "Verdalee" and also "Myrtle Lee". Don't know which is correct, but she's a joy to know.

Lots of people are taking trips or entertaining guests from far places. Senie Coley's granddaughter, Judy Coley of Bowie, has been visiting her. Naomi Higginbotham of Oklahoma City and the Ed Marcums of Harlingen have been guests of the Jim Marcums. Dorothy and Lynne Newberry of Colorado Springs recently visited Florence Radcliff. Geneva and Frank Chapman have been entertaining Mrs. C. C. Teague of Irvine, Ca.

Wouldn't you love to be young enough and smart enough and lucky enough to be among the group who will be travelling to Europe on the educational tour with Leta Olson? She has taken these trips in previous years. A wonderful opportunity for those who get to go.

Watch for me next week. PAM.

Beat the heat this summer

by DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Gray County residents can get more from their "beat-the-summer" dollar. Some simple, no-cost steps can be taken immediately to maximize cooling while minimizing energy use and costs.

RAISE THERMOSTAT

Raise the air-conditioner thermostat to the highest comfort level possible. This will reduce energy consumption from three to ten percent for each degree the thermostat is raised. When it's excessively hot outdoors, turn the thermostat up even higher to keep from overworking the air conditioner. Greatest efficiency results when a difference of no more than 15 to 20 degrees is maintained between inside and outside temperature.

USE FANS

Fans, used either by themselves or with air conditioning, can enhance summer comfort while saving energy. For every dime it costs to operate a one-ton air conditioner, a fan costs less than a nickel. Fans won't make any change in the room's actual temperature, but the constant breeze they provide will make a person "feel" much cooler. In fact, set the air conditioner at 82 degrees F, use a fan to circulate the air, and experience the same comfort as if the air conditioner were set at 74 degrees F.

DRAW SHADES

Windows and glass areas transmit most of the radiant heat they are exposed to. Therefore, block out heat on those sides of the house that get direct sun exposure. Draw shades or draperies on the east side in the morning and on the west side in the afternoon to reduce the heat load the air conditioner must remove.

AIR CONDITIONER MAINTENANCE

Since a dust-clogged air conditioner filter restricts air flow and makes the machine work harder, change it frequently. Overgrown shrubs, weeds, and grass growing close to the air conditioner's condensing unit can restrict the flow of air and seriously impair the unit's efficiency. However, shrubs and trees that shade the unit from direct sunlight help keep it from getting too hot.

ENERGY-SAVING INVESTMENTS

There are energy saving features that can be added which do cost money. The energy-conscious consumer can view these steps as "investments," because they will result in sizable long-term energy benefits:

- (1) Adequately insulated floors, walls, and attic space;
- (2) Weatherstripped doors and windows and caulked cracks to reduce air infiltration;

(3) Exterior sun-control devices, such as awnings, shutters, and reflective film, to protect windows and glass areas;

(4) Properly sized air-conditioning equipment with a high-efficiency rating; and

(5) Deciduous shrubs on the home's west side.

HOME ENERGY DOLLARS AND SENSE

A special program has been planned for Tuesday evening, June 29, beginning at 7:00 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex. Titled "Home Energy Dollars and Sense", the program will focus on ways Gray County residents can reduce their electric, gas, and water bills. The program will include:

Selection and Installation of Ceiling Fans; Energy Labels - Your Guide to Savings; Reducing Your Utility Bills - panel discussion with representatives of local utility companies and Question - Answer period.

All interested persons are invited. The program is free of charge.

Charm school offered

The Gray County 4-H Council will sponsor "Rays of Fashion" Charm School Tuesday, June 22, at the Lovett Memorial Library, Pampa. The charm school is open to the public and those attending need to bring a sack lunch and drinks will be provided. The day's activities will include:

9:45 - 10:15 - Preview of Fashion J.R. Girls - The Hollywood

Lessons of fatherhood

By Rusty Brown

This is about two fathers. Their lives have just changed dramatically — one, by choice, the other by tragedy. The first man is named Stan.

At 36, he's one of the new breed of fathers who jumped off the fast track to have time with his kids. His daughter is 9 and happiest cruising the neighborhood on her bike. His 12-year-old son likes hiking and racquetball and understands computers.

For 13 years Stan was the ambitious, upward-bound executive with a national accounting firm.

"I worked very hard," he says, "and put in long hours every day. If a client wanted to meet for breakfast, I left the house before the children were up. Much of the time, I didn't get home 'til after they were in bed. During tax season — which was about four months of the year — I worked Saturdays, too."

All these sacrifices were going to be worth it, Stan told himself. If he worked hard enough, he would be named a partner. Three years ago that's what happened.

But the peak was not what he envisioned. The workload didn't lessen; the hours didn't shorten. The responsibilities were even greater. And, still, he was the "outsider" in the family.

"I could see the next pinnacle would take another 10-year investment. By then, my children would be grown, and I would never know them, really," he said recently. He began to ask himself: "Can I live with the consequences?"

His wife, who had recently returned to her own career, encouraged him to think about reordering his priorities.

So he broke loose from the corporate mold and started his own business in a quaint, old house, away from the go-go-go of the downtown maze.

Life with father now means he's home for dinner every night. He has time to help with homework and time to listen to the answers when he asks: "Hey, what happened at school today?"

"If a client should ask to see me tomorrow morning," confided Stan, "I'll tell him I can't make it until 11. I'm going to school first to see my daughter introduce the assembly speaker. She and I go biking once a week, and I make time to play racquetball with my son."

"I don't have to satisfy a corporate image anymore. I'm more interested in my image with my family," he said.

Stan is not unlike a growing number of fathers who have rejected the old role as "absent breadwinner." A significant number of dads are deciding they want to be kid-huggers and care-givers too; that it's not a job for mothers only.

In a "Life-Style" essay in Newsweek last fall, New York psychiatrist Avodah K. Offit called fatherhood "the new family romance of the '80s. It's the unexplored frontier."

How lucky for fathers, like Stan, to discover the delights and dividends of crossing that frontier while their children are still young.

And now, in contrast, the story of Bobby Chacon. I am haunted by the horror that befell this California boxer who found out too late how much his family needed him.

A onetime featherweight champion, he is the father of three children, ages 6 to 11. He was the subject of an interview in "The Sacramento Bee" newspaper last February.

At the time, he said his wife wanted him to give up boxing because he was away from home and on the road too much.

"I can understand one reason my wife wants me to quit boxing," he was quoted as saying. "It's tough for her to take the kids to school, take care of the chores and clean the house while I'm away. She thinks I don't know when to quit. She could be half-right."

The next month, on March 16, Chacon sliced a scheduled 10-round fight to three rounds by flattening his opponent with savage fury and a barrage of overhand rights to the jaw. He left the ring, saying, "All I wanted to do was get in there and get out."

Earlier that day, his wife, Valorie, 31, had locked the bedroom door of their home on a 20-acre farm, turned up the television and shot herself in the head with a .22 caliber rifle.

His eyes filling with tears, Chacon said: "All I want to do now is get back to my three kids. We need to be with each other..."

STUFFED POTATOES

The make-ahead kind.
4 medium baking potatoes, about 1 1/2 pounds
4 tablespoons butter, at room temperature
1/4 cup plain yogurt
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup finely grated cheddar cheese

Bake potatoes in a preheated 425-degree oven until centers feel soft when fork-pierced — about 50 minutes; cut a thin lengthwise slice from the top of each. Scoop out pulp (reserving shells) and mash with butter, yogurt, salt and pepper; spoon into shells and smooth tops; sprinkle with cheese, patting it down. Wrap appropriately and freezer-store — we stored ours for a week. When ready to use, unwrap potatoes and place on heavy foil or a small cookie sheet; bake in a 425-degree oven until hot through — 45 to 60 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

How to serve artichokes

So simple and yet so delicious.

Cook one artichoke for each serving; drain upside down. For each serving, use 2 tablespoons butter. Gently heat the butter just until it is a light brown color. Accompany each artichoke with a small container (Oriental teacups are perfect) of the hot browned butter.

Henryk Szeryng: 50 years a violinist

By JOHN GALE
 Associated Press Writer
 AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — After almost 50 years on the concert stage, violinist Henryk Szeryng still remembers the snowy night in Warsaw when he first "communicated the joy and emotion" of his music to a large audience.

It was Jan. 6, 1933, and Szeryng was just 14½. His performance of the Brahms Violin Concerto was so well received, that he was called back for five encores.

"It went over better than I expected," he says.

The Polish-born Mexican violinist recently reflected on his long career after completing a four-month world concert tour that took him to more than 40 countries.

"I have always had this irrepressible drive to express myself, and it has served me well as a performing artist," he said.

"It is not enough to be in command of your instrument. It is not enough to be faithful to the intentions of the composer you are interpreting. What really matters is how well your personality mixes with that of the composer and how you convey to your public what you so eagerly wish to convey to them."

The violinist annually gives about 100 concerts, all delivered with a disciplined musical style and pure silvery tone.

Szeryng's half century as a violin virtuoso is to be marked by a series of worldwide concerts that will include a visit to the United States. In November, he will appear with Mstislav Rostropovich and the National Symphony Orchestra in the first of five concerts to be given in Washington and New York.

These will be followed by overseas tours in 1983 to Europe, the Middle East, Japan and Australia.

Meanwhile, he continues to "communicate." His youthful debut with the Warsaw Philharmonic Orchestra took place before an audience of 2,800. Today, he said, he can reach an audience of 1 million, with video tapes of one live performance broadcast and re-broadcast in many countries.

Szeryng became a Mexican citizen in 1946, taking up a professorship at the music faculty of the National University.

He still gives master classes for advanced young artists, and is immensely proud of his official appointment as Mexico's musical and goodwill ambassador, which enables him to travel on a diplomatic passport.

"I don't envy Kings and Presidents," he says. "I envy myself. My job is something I live. I love my violin and to me, it is a companion. I believe it can love you back."

Spielberg spawns two more

NEW YORK (AP) — Last year, director Steven Spielberg was responsible for the top grossing film of 1981, "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

This year, Spielberg could be responsible for two top-grossing films, "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial" and "Poltergeist."

The two movies are like day and night.

"One's a boy and one's a girl," the 34-year-old director said over a cup of cold borscht during an interview.

"Poltergeist" is a real scary ghost story," he said, "while 'E.T.' is a love story about friendship."

In "E.T.," that friendship is between a boy and a creature from another planet, who gets stranded on earth when his spaceship abandons him.

"E.T." means more to me than any movie I ever made," Spielberg said.

"When I was young, my father would move us from one town to the other every time he found a better job," he said. "I'd be on the brink of making a best friend and suddenly I'm somewhere else having to start from scratch. 'E.T.' is about a friendship that will never be disrupted."

"Poltergeist," one the other hand, is a horror story about a typical suburban family being terrorized by a force that exists somewhere between life and death. For Spielberg, it represents all his childhood fears.

"All my fears were normal," Spielberg says. "I was afraid of my closet. Under my bed. Dark shadows."

The Nighthawks: reviving the music of the bathtub gin era

NEW YORK (AP) — It was born from an age of rebellion and good times — a sound for the high-stepping and high-living of the Roaring '20s.

Now that same music evokes images of the bell-shaped cloche hats, bathtub gin, the Charleston and Model A Fords.

And some members of the New Orleans Nighthawks — the only New York band still playing the tunes that inaugurated the Great Depression — are intoxicated by the musty vapors of nostalgia.

Not the white-haired guy playing clarinet, though. The nostalgia sufferer is Vince Giordano, the whippersnapper on tuba. He just turned 30.

"A lot of people think there was ragtime, and then Glenn Miller — so what do you guys play?" says Giordano, whose 10-piece band works one night a week in a crowded Upper East Side club.

They play big band music, the music that was pioneered by Paul Whiteman, Bix Beiderbecke, King Oliver, Louis Armstrong and thousands of forgotten musicians.

And they pound out such ageless tunes as "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," "Button Up Your Overcoat" and "Basin Street Blues."

Giordano thinks that 1928 was THE year. "Bix was making his best records, and Whiteman sounded great, and Louie was playing with his first big bands around then," he said. "Everything was going like gangbusters."

OUR KIDS DESERVE SUPPORT

AUSTIN — One of the unfortunate facts of family life is that it does not always last. Divorce is all too common in today's world, and Texas is no exception.

Children many times are the victims of the breakup in families. Generally, one parent or the other gets custody of the children of the failed marriage, and many times raising those children is a financial burden on that parent.

It is also a fact of life that mothers are more likely to gain custody and that women generally don't make as much money as men. This puts a double burden on these mothers, and on their children.

There is no alimony in Texas, but one parent can be made to pay child support to the parent who is raising the children. About 600,000 children in Texas are eligible for child support. Four out of ten of these children don't receive any support from their absentee parents. Only two out of ten receive the full amount to which they are entitled.

Aside from the moral and ethical grounds for requiring these parents to support their own children, there are financial reasons as well. The Texas Department of Human Resources estimates the state could save about $60 million a year if we could enforce our child support laws. The reason for this is obvious. If the parents don't support their children, the state has to do it for them.

The Senate Subcommittee on Public Health and Welfare is conducting an interim study now to try to deal with enforcement of child support decrees.

Granny Porter's war on signless Texas town begins

By BRUCE GUYNN
 The Sherman Democrat

ANNA (AP) — When it comes to street signs, feisty Edith Porter refused to yield.

For 15 years she unsuccessfully lobbied the city council to erect street signs. When the council said "no" again last week, the 69-year-old grandmother put up her own and labeled her narrow, block-long, asphalt road "Granny Porter Avenue."

"Isn't it sporty?" Mrs. Porter beamed, pointing to her home-made street sign in this North Texas farming community of about 850 residents.

"It's the first one here in a 100 years."

Mrs. Porter said visitors to Anna find it difficult to locate residents without street signs, and packages are often left on her doorstep addressed for someone else.

People knock on her door at all hours of the night asking for directions, said the Anna resident for 22 years.

"I can't tell them (where people live) because there are no street signs in Anna," she said.

Mrs. Porter took her cause to the city council 12 times during the last 15 years. But councilmen repeatedly told her the town could not afford street signs, she said.

Anna Mayor Bill Powell said the council told her last week it is studying the possibility of erecting road markers on the town's 30 streets.

"We have the money to do it if it needs to be done," he said. The signs might be erected before fall, he said.

With the help of four other residents, Mrs. Porter fashioned her marker from an old, metal, T-shaped pole with "Granny Porter Avenue" hanging on one arm and a basket of flowers on the other.

"I own the property from here to the back block so I figured it was my street," she said.

Mayor Powell is not so sure.

"Granny Porter Avenue," Powell said, is really "First Street." But if the city does erect its own signs, he said, Mrs. Porter's marker will not be disturbed.

"We'll just put one beside it to tell what the street name really is," the mayor said.

Mrs. Porter said the local residents appreciate her sign. "They think that it is beautiful and it adds to the city," she said.

After the sign went up, Mrs. Porter's daughter, Cissie Mosier, said, "Mother, you have more nerve than I thought you had."

"Grandma," said four-year-old grandson Matt, "that's pretty."
