Hits bottlecap homer but still can't score

Is Coke contest the real thing?

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

A Pampa woman has found a key letter toward a $2,000 cash prize from a Coca-Cola promotional campaign, but a Lubbock bottler refuses to pay off, due to a fine-print technicality in official rules.

"Peel a fortune and win!" chortles Sally Struthers and Joe Namath on national television commercials promoting the "Peel a Fortune" campaign.

"Spell homerun and win $2,000!" the actress says.

It sounds easy, but a disclaimer tacked on the ad tells potential game participants that entry forms and rules are available from local bottlers, according to a Coca-Cola corporate official in Atlanta, Ga.

The fine print in the "rules" may be what prevents a Pampa woman from claiming what appears to be a legitimate $2,000 prize.

The story began Tuesday afternoon when the daughter of Ella Blair, 612 N. Zimmers, found a bottle cap in her driveway.

Blair had been saving caps and playing the "Peel a Fortune" game, so her daughter, Mrs. Kathy Anguiano, gave the cap to her mother.

When the liner to the cap was peeled, it revealed an "R," the key, scarce letter toward spelling the word "Homerun" and winning top prize of $2,000.

"The rules of the game say the odds of spelling that word are one in 1,000,000.

To play the game, buyers of Coke peel off the inner liner of a bottle cap or look under a pop-top tab, revealing a letter.

Letters are then saved and put together to spell the words "Homerun" for $2,000, "Touch Down" for $100, "Point" for a director's chair and "Coke" for a T-shirt.

But after Blair used her daughter's "R" to complete her effort to spell "Homerun," officials of the Pampa Coca-Cola bottling company said they "could not honor" her claim for the advertised $2,000 prize, according to Blair and Amarillo Coca-Cola Bottling Company Area Manager Dean Pearson.

"I knew there was some catch," Blair said about the local bottler's refusal to pay her prize money.

The problem for payment of Blair's prize money results from her key letter, the "R" found in her daughter's driveway, according to company and bottling officials.

Blair said they do not know how the "R" wound up in her daughter's drive, but she guesses it fell out of her husband's work truck or from a passing vehicle.

The cap already had been run over by a vehicle when the liner was peeled, revealing the rare letter, according to Blair.

None of the bottlers or Coke officials dispute that Blair has a legitimate mystery letter.

What they dispute is which bottler should be responsible for payment.

The cap was put into circulation by the Lubbock Coca-Cola Bottling Company. Around the outside rim of the cap is printed, "Bottled under the authority of the Coca-Cola Co. by Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Lubbock, Tx. 79404."

While many may think Coke stands for one big happy company, local bottlers are actually independent businessmen, according to an Atlanta Coke official.

The woman in charge of promotions for Coca-Cola in Atlanta, Francis Helms, said the national company designs the promotional campaigns, but each bottler decides whether or not he will participate.

She said the bottler decides how much money he will spend on the promotion and how many winners he will pay for in his area.

Pearson said the Pampa bottling company, which is owned by the Amarillo Coca-Cola Bottling Company, cannot pay for Lubbock's $2,000 "R" because the local firm only has set aside enough money to pay for its own big winners.

He said stores or any bottler will pay the small winners, but the big winners must be redeemed at the plant which puts the key, "missing link" into circulation.

"We are not liable for caps from other areas," Pearson said.

The local area manager said once a local bottler decides how many big winners he will have in his area, the key "R's" are sent to the bottler through registered mail are placed on a coke in the bottler's local area.

He said the little winners and non-key letters are "seeded" during manufacture of the caps by Alcoa.

Despite the dispute about which bottling company is liable for the key letter, nowhere in the fine print of the rules does it say that all caps or tabs in a prize-winning sequence must originate from the same bottling company.

However, the rules, which are printed for each individual bottler's area, do say "only caps which bear the imprint of participating Bottler(s) listed above will be accepted."

The Lubbock bottling company is not listed in rules for the Amarillo area game, even though the firm is participating in the promotion.

It seems the dispute could be solved, and Blair could claim her money by taking the winner to Lubbock for payment.

That company threw up a roadblock by insisting that not only the key "R" be stamped with the Lubbock logo, but also the remaining letters in the word.

Blair's "R" is from the Lubbock bottler, the remaining letters are from the Amarillo firm.

"Once the key letter is found by a player outside the bottler's area; many times the requirement for the remaining letters will be waived, and the prize will be paid," Helms said.

"I'm going to try to work out the problem," Helms said about the territorial dispute Wednesday afternoon.

However, following Helms's calls to Lubbock, she said that bottler still insisted that all letters come from his firm.

Contacted in Lubbock, Coca-Cola Plant Manager Gene Roberts said, "I can't break the rules to pay $2,000."

Even though local bottlers set their own game odds, to the point of deciding how much they will spend on a promotion, Roberts said he "did not know" if it would be "easy or hard" for Blair to obtain the "readily available" letters from his area.

"I don't have that information," he said.

If a bottler wants to be adamant about refusing payment, there are numerous loopholes to escape payment in the printed rules.

For instance, Blair's "R" has been smashed by a vehicle tire; and although all printing on the cap remains legible, the rules say, "Caps are void if any part is mutilated."

Finally, with the probable exception of resolution in a court of law, the bottler's opinion of the game is the final rule.

Rules say, "The participating Bottlers will be the sole judges of the winners of this promotion, and their decisions will be final."

The Pampa dispute is not the first problem with the Coca-Cola "Peel a Fortune" game.

Helms said a printing error March 12 in Cookeville, Tenn. resulted in too many "R's" in circulation.

However, she said the bottler there paid off $100,000, or 50 $2,000 winners, even though rules protect bottlers from payment as a result of a printer's error.

Blair lives with her son, Eddie, a mechanic at the Pampa K-Mart, and a daughter in their small Pampa home. She is an unemployed bakery worker and says she had plenty of plans for the $2,000.

"I wanted to buy some new furniture and fix up the house," she said.

Until the Pampa bottler turned her down Wednesday morning, she "thought she was a winner."

Her son is the main Coke drinker in the family and is most bitter about the refusal to pay.

He said he plans to go to Lubbock next Wednesday on his only day off.

Eddie Blair said he will buy several cases of Coke there, and attempt to find the other letters to go with the rare "R."

Roberts said he would pay the $2,000 prize if all "Homerun" letters are from his district.

"We will give her a check for $2,000 from the Lubbock Coca-Cola Bottling Company," he said Wednesday.

Blair's son said, "Sally Struthers never said on the TV commercial they all had to come from the same bottler."

"If it had been somebody rich or important, they would have paid them right there," he said.

We have a few they can take along...

HOUSTON (AP) — Flies carried aboard the last flight of the space shuttle Columbia are laying less than half as many eggs as similar insects which never left Earth, a team of University of Houston biologists says.

Houseflies carried on the eight-day flight laid 57 percent fewer eggs during the study than those in a control group, members of the team said Wednesday. The flies normally reproduce every 10 days.

Team member John G. Baust said houseflies are "very advanced invertebrates" with chemical reactions during reproduction similar to those of humans.

"Flies provide a model system that may hint at problems man could face in space," Baust said.

Baust's colleague Richard E. Lee Jr. said the drop in fly eggs was unexpected, but confirms recent information from the Soviet Union, where scientists have been studying fruit flies carried into space.

No astronaut is known to have fathered a child after returning from space, but two Soviet cosmonauts have had at least one child each.

Todd Nelson, an 18-year-old high school student who designed the experiment in which the flies were carried, said the reproductive studies resulted from a happy accident.

The Houston professors were given the flies for study after Nelson asked them to help pack a group of moths for shipment.

Nelson's experiment was designed to study how flies, bees and moths fly in weightless conditions. Nelson, of Rose Creek, Minn., said the flies acted almost normally, but the bees tumbled without flapping their wings and the moths spiraled crazily.

Twisters hit soggy Panhandle

Two tornadoes were reported near Skellytown Wednesday night as heavy rains again soaked the already waterlogged eastern Panhandle area.

General rains of an inch or more fell over much of the region, raising the spectre of additional damage to the wheat harvests, already delayed by water and hurt by winds and hail in May.

A reported five inches of rain west of Allison, near the Oklahoma border, led the list of rainfalls reported. Miami had 2.5 inches amid a severe electrical storm, with roads under water during the downpour.

Shamrock's rainfall was logged at 1.8 inches, accompanied by high winds.

Inside Allison, nearly an inch of rain was reported, and about 9:30 p.m. fire departments from Wheeler, Briscoe and Allison were called out to cloud watch duty.

Clouds also caused concern nearer Pampa, after the funnels were sighted near Skellytown. Police officers were dispatched to the north and west of the city for cloud watch, sighting several storm cells north of the city moving toward it. Official Pampa weather spotter Darrell Seahorn called the clouds "the blackest I've ever seen."

Pampa's rainfall tallied 42 inch from the storm, bringing the month's total to 5.21 and the year's rainfall to 13.72 — pushing toward the normal total for the entire year.

Gray County Agricultural Extension Agent Joe Van Zandt, discussing the effects of rain on the wheat harvest Wednesday, said the harvest is already "bogged down by the weather."

"Just about the time it gets dried out enough for harvest," Van Zandt said, "here comes another rain. It's definitely a negative factor."

A growing problem for the harvest, he pointed out, is that "weeds are coming up in the wheat because of all the rain." And every day the harvest is delayed, he added, "makes us more susceptible to another hailstorm and still more damage."

The harvest situation is not critical yet, he said, but could become so "if it (the rain) doesn't stop."

Harvests all over the area are weather-delayed, as observers report "no one in the fields" to harvest.

One positive factor, Van Zandt added, is that "some dryland wheat has been ripened faster" by the additional rain, and has caught up with the rest of the crop.

"It may be a real quick harvest — when we do get in there," he said.

Elsewhere in the state Wednesday night, storm activity covered broad areas, resulting in a flood warning in Wichita County, following very heavy thunderstorms which dumped flood producing rainfall on the Wichita Falls area during the night.

A line of heavy thunderstorms also moved through the Dallas-Fort Worth area early today, dumping heavy rainfall and threatening to flood streets and low lying areas.

At least two tornadoes were sighted in Lynn County in Northwest Texas late Wednesday, near Tahoka and McCoy, where sheriff's officers said some power poles, barns and silos were damaged.

While the thunderstorms moved across northwestern and northern sections of the state, the rest of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies early today.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s in the Panhandle and portions of West Texas and in the 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 61 at Lubbock and 62 at Amarillo to 80 at Brownsville.

Forecasts called for scattered thunderstorms over all but South Texas today.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s, ranging from the upper 80s along the upper coast to near 105 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s except in the mountains of Southwest Texas where the mercury is expected to dip into the upper 50s.

Highs Friday will again be mostly in the 90s

Recent rains have added insult to injury to wheat farms east of Pampa.

The Wallace Birkes operation was one of the worst hit in last month's twisters, which destroyed five buildings and damaged five others on their four farms 20 miles east of Pampa in the Laketon area, and recent rains may not make a harvest possible this year.

The worst damage there, Birkes said, was from the hail that accompanied the tornadoes. He said 1 1/2 sections, over half their wheat crop, was severely damaged then.

Now wheat fields are soggy with over five inches of rain that fell in the past month.

"Weeds are coming in," Birkes said, "especially where there was hail damage."

He said water is standing in the low spots of many fields in that area, and "getting higher every night."

Neighbors reported water over the road in front of his house and in several other spots today, he said.

Many farmers are spraying to keep the weeds out, but Birkes has decided his own crop would not be worth the spraying effort. "It's just extra expense," he said.

The Birkes lost their rural home, three barns and a garage on their main property in one of two tornadoes last month. Barns and houses on his other three farms were damaged, and fences were destroyed on all four.

Birkes' wife Darlene said recent downpours have been a kind of blessing in disguise, at least giving them time to make some building repairs and clean up debris.

So far, they have rebuilt the walls and replaced the roof of their home one mile north of Laketon, and picked up much of the debris the twisters scattered in the fields.

Darlene Birkes said "It will be quite a while before we get to the three barns and garage."

A windmill was also destroyed on that farm, and the Birkes have no drinking water available there.

She said debris in the fields was more than they expected. She said they did not request help from the clean-up crew organized by Gray County Extension Agent Joe VanZandt because "We thought we could do it ourselves. The more we got into it, though, the more we wished we had called him."

"The neighbors were really great, neighbors and people from around Miami," Birkes said. He said they helped move furniture from the house May 19 to save it from further rain damage, and several helped load debris the next day.

Darlene Birkes said they were lucky in that no farm equipment was destroyed in the tornadoes. They found that the equipment shed had fallen onto their pickup and camper, and the vehicle was holding the building up.

With the help of neighbors, they lifted the shed roof up and removed two combines, two tractors and the pickup. "When we let it go, the whole building fell down," Birkes said.

As for the wheat crop, the Birkes are not ready to give up, though Darlene Birkes said "If it keeps on raining, there won't be much hope."

Birkes said even if the rain stops now, it would be a week before he could work in the fields. More thunderstorms are expected in the area for the remainder of the week.

"We're going to make it. We're not down," he said. "In farming, these are the things you have to take and keep on going."

Weather

Partly cloudy through Friday. Chance of rain 20 percent today and Friday and 30 percent tonight. Highs today and Friday in the low 90s, lows tonight in the low 60s. Southerly winds at 10 - 15 mph today and tonight, increasing to 15 - 20 mph Friday.

It's smart (taxwise) to sell the farm in pieces

When selling a farm or ranch, a major factor is timing. Since selling the farming business will likely produce a large amount of taxable income, it's best to spread the income by selling out at different times instead of all at once. It is best to sell livestock in the fall, machinery the next spring, and perhaps wait another year to sell the land.

Delaying certain sales until specific time periods have elapsed can also reduce the tax burden. For instance, breeding animals acquired after Dec. 31, 1969, must be held for at least two years. Delaying the sale of such animals can qualify the income for capital gains treatment.

Another factor to consider is the allocation of costs to different assets. An allocation of the sale price for land, buildings, growing crops, livestock and machinery should be agreed upon by both the selling and buying parties so that this will appear on the purchase contract. This will reduce many potential tax problems.

Also, on a farm held less than 10 years, part of the soil and water conservation expenses that have been claimed will have to be recaptured as ordinary income.

Investment credit is another thing to consider when liquidating a farm business. Investment credit has to be recaptured if the sale results in items being disposed of before the expiration of the useful life for which credit was computed.

Regarding the method of sale, a farmer generally has three choices: sell for cash, sell on the installment method or a combination. The seller needs to determine his tax liability regarding each method before making a final decision. A large capital gain can mean additional taxes, notes the economist.

When sale of a farm or some of its components thrusts a farmer into a considerably higher income bracket than over the past four years, income averaging can come to the rescue. This allows part of an unusually large amount of taxable income to be taxed in a lower bracket.

A farmer who sells his operation, which also includes his home located on the land, must allocate part of the selling price of the farm to the home. Special tax rules apply to the sale of a residence. If the farmer buys a new residence two years before or after selling the farm and home, only the gain from the sale of the old residence compared to the cost of the new residence is taxable.

Any sale of capital assets does not affect Social Security taxes or retirement benefits. However, sale of inventory items and growing crops does. Any item reported on Schedule F in the income tax return may affect Social Security benefits or taxes.

When preparing to sell a farm, the operator needs to determine whether he still receives two-thirds of his gross income from the business of farming as required for tax purposes. Gains from sales of farmland and depreciable farm equipment are not considered farm income. So a farmer who sells his business may find he no longer qualifies as a farmer and thus must file a Declaration of Estimated Tax.

Any farmer preparing to sell real property is advised to visit with his tax consultant or accountant. Also, the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 provides numerous changes in tax laws, including depreciation and investment credit. A farmer should be familiar with these changes before selling his business.

Hinckley jurors questioned by Senate panel probing crazy plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel, hoping to get quick congressional action changing federal law on insanity pleas, is summoning three members of the jury which found presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. innocent by reason of insanity.

"They want to find out exactly what led members of the jury to accept the insanity plea," said a spokesman for Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., the acting chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on criminal law.

In a highly unusual step, the subcommittee announced Wednesday that jurors Maryland Copelin, 50, Nathalia Brown, 30, and Lawrence Coffey, 22, all of Washington had been asked to testify today.

Testimony was also expected from legal specialists on the issue.

Miss Brown and Mrs. Copelin have said they believed Hinckley, 27, was legally sane when he shot President Reagan and three other men on March 30, 1981, but they said they were pressured by other jurors to go along with the majority and provide a unanimous verdict as required.

"I violated my conscience," Mrs. Copelin said.

Hinckley, she said, "is a shrewd manipulator ... He isn't crazy, he's a genius. He manipulated his family, his father, and now us."

After 3 1/2 days of intensive deliberation, Mrs. Copelin and Miss Brown said they gave in to the will of the majority to provide a unanimous verdict on Monday evening.

Specter, a former prosecutor in Pennsylvania, has introduced legislation which would put the burden of proving insanity on the defendant.

The defendant would have to produce "clear and convincing" evidence that he or she was insane.

In a Senate speech, Specter said he believes the Hinckley jury was "in a state of confusion and unable to draw a clear-cut inference from the evidence."

"There has already been a public outray noting that the acquittal of the defendant Hinckley was occasioned by the fact that he was wealthy and had high-priced legal talent," Specter said.

In the Hinckley trial, U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker ruled that it was up to the prosecutor to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Hinckley was sane and that he knew right from wrong when he opened fire on Reagan and the others outside a Washington hotel.

Since the verdict, a number of other changes in federal insanity law have been proposed, including one sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. It would do away with insanity pleas except in cases where the defendant was so mentally ill, there was no awareness of committing a criminal act.

Had that law been on the books during the Hinckley case, for example, specialists say he would probably have been convicted because he knew he was attacking the president.

Cattle ranch hosts cowboy church meeting, first in Texas since 90s

CANADIAN — The Y-L Cowboy Camp meetings get under way today at the Y-L Campsite, 10 miles south of Canadian on FM 3044, just east of Hwy 83.

The non-denominational religious campout will continue through Sunday, with preaching, singing, children's activities, and chuck wagon - style meals served without charge to those attending.

Heading up activities will be evangelists Wayne Stockstill of Upland, Calif. and Boyce Evans of Lubbock. Music director is Larry Turner of Lubbock.

Cowboy Camp Meetings began in the 1890s in the Davis Mountains of West Texas. Each year meetings are held at various locations in the Southwest.

giving ranchhands and others with little opportunity to attend church during the year a chance to meet, worship and share religious experiences in the "temple of the Great Outdoors."

The Y-L meeting is sponsored by the Ranchmen's Camp Meeting Association in the Southwest, Albuquerque, N.M., of which the Y-L group is a member. The Y-L meeting is the first camp scheduled for 1982.

Americans eating better for less, experts say

Farm programs have led to an abundance of high quality food and fiber for America's consumers at fairly reasonable prices, according to Dr. William E. Black, economist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University System. Farm programs have stimulated increased supplies of agricultural commodities for export to alleviate hunger in many corners of the world and to reduce U.S. trade deficits.

The net effect of farm programs is that they have stabilized the supply of agricultural products which in turn has limited the degree of price fluctuations. In other words, food shortages that cause sharp price increases are few and far between.

"Consumer food prices are expected to increase 4 to 6 percent annually during each of the next two years," points out the economist. "This increase is much less than in recent years."

Farm income is expected to continue on a downward trend. Farm prices last fall were 13 percent below those of a year ago, yet this drop was not reflected in lower food prices. Retail food prices were up about 6 percent during that same one-year period. There is only a limited relationship between the prices farmers receive and the prices consumers pay.

As to the extent that farm programs subsidize farmers, they do so only when farm prices fall below a preestablished "target price" level, explains the economist. That situation doesn't hold true for all agricultural commodities. Only a few have this price protection — cotton, rice, corn, grain sorghum, wheat, barley, sugar, peanuts and tobacco. No types of meats are covered in the current farm program. Yet Americans are consuming less beef and fewer eggs because of changing eating habits, not because of higher prices prompted by farm programs.

If America's consumers should have cause for concern, it should be for the nation's farmers who are currently suffering from the most severe cost-price squeeze since the depression of the 1930s, notes Black. Farm costs have doubled in the last eight years while prices farmers have received for their commodities have increased only 30 percent.

"How farmers fare and how many survive financially will affect our nation's future food supply and the prices that consumers have to pay," Black points out. "That's the issue consumers should be concerned about, not the scant government safety net provided for farmers."

That's okay, Prince, we all have an aunt like that, too

LONDON (AP) — Britain's littlest prince remained without a name today while the press accused his aunt, Princess Anne, of being jealous of the three-day-old future king.

"We think it's very unlikely to be named for some days yet," a Buckingham Palace spokesman said Wednesday. He said things were going swimmingly at the nursery in Kensington Palace where the baby's parents, Prince Charles and Princess Diana, make their London home.

Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, told reporters Monday night upon the birth of his 7-pound, 1 1/2-ounce son that there was a "a bit of an argument" going on about names.

State claims victory in prison suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State officials, weary for a victory in the 10-year-old prison lawsuit, are happy with an appeals court ruling that a federal judge went too far when he ordered major reforms in Texas prisons.

Incarceration in the Texas Department of Corrections is "cruel and unusual punishment," the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Wednesday.

But the three-judge panel in New Orleans also said, "The duty to protect inmates' constitutional rights, however, does not confer the power to manage prisons, for which courts are ill-equipped, or the capacity to second-guess prison administrators."

The court threw out many reforms ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, including his requirement of private cells for inmates in the 33,000-inmate system, the nation's largest.

Clements, a longtime Justice critic, said, "Briefly stated, Judge William Wayne Justice was wrong and the state's position was right on key issues such as single-celling of inmates."

"Single cells for inmates was an extreme edict, and, happily, that is no longer an issue in this case," he said.

Attorney General Mark White, whose handling of the case drew criticism from Clements, said the appeals court decision was a major victory for the state.

"The impact of it apparently fairly well gives the state of Texas a sweep on the issues that were before the court," he said in a telephone interview from Cuernavaca, Mexico, where he was vacationing Wednesday.

Rick Gray, White's executive assistant, called it a "clean win for the state."

The appeals court affirmed Justice's order that the state reduce the prison population by Nov. 1 to a figure equal to twice the number of cells, plus the number of inmates who can be housed in dormitories. The dorms can hold one inmate per 40 square feet, the appeals court said.

Justice had ordered 60 feet per inmate.

William Turner, lawyer for the inmates who filed the civil rights suit, said the ruling was not the clear victory claimed by the state.

"I really think the court came down somewhere in the middle," he said in an interview from his San Francisco office. "But (the judges) vacated the order on single-celling, which was the most important issue before them."

Turner said it was important that the appeals court threw out the single-celling order "without prejudice."

"That obviously means this isn't over," he said, adding no decision had been made on whether to appeal.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also called the Wednesday ruling a victory for the state.

"It appears the court has allowed us to continue our own course of alleviating the overcrowded conditions in the prisons without imposing goals impossible for Texas to meet," he said.

The recent special session of the Texas Legislature OK'd $55 million for prison construction. Austin lawyer Harry Whittington, state prison board member, said 5,000 additional beds should be ready by Nov. 1.

White said the decision acknowledges there have been problems in TDC, which was temporarily closed to new inmates on May 10 due to overcrowding.

"We weren't faultless and we weren't blameless. At the same time we weren't as bad as some people said we were. In fact, we're far better than a lot of people thought we were and I think the court recognized that," he said.

The appeals court decision will have a definite influence on the July 7 settlement negotiations among lawyers for the state, the plaintiffs and the U.S. Justice Department, which intervened on the inmates' behalf. White said he is still willing to negotiate.

"Hopefully, (the Justice Department) will take a more reasonable stance. I'm very pleased that the court order is a direct rejection of their position," he said.

Frankly, this controversial, expensive and time-consuming case could have been resolved much earlier had not the U.S. Department of Justice demanded single-celling of inmates," said White.

Clements said the decision would "greatly strengthen" the state's position in the talks. Gray said it gives the state the "hole card."

The appeals court ruling came in a 105-page opinion, which cautioned that the lawsuit could become "a ceaseless guerrilla war with endless hearings, opinions and appeals and incalculable costs."

Federal judges must "respect the right of the state to administer its own affairs as long as it does not violate the constitution," the court said.

However, the court also warned the state that it "must equally recognize the duty of the district court and the special master as its agent to ensure the restoration of constitutional conditions of confinement in the Texas Department of Corrections."

"There are never any clear winners or losers in a lawsuit of this magnitude," said TDC Director W.J. "Jim" Estelle.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

On a sour note

President Reagan violated his own free market principles last year when he agreed to back a congressional drive for sugar price supports in exchange for the votes of several House Democrats who might otherwise have opposed the administration's budget and tax-cut package.

However necessary that trade may have been politically, it revived a price support program that effectively subsidizes beet and sugar cane growers and, in the process, leaves consumers paying higher - than - necessary prices for sugar.

The administration is now hoist by its own petard. The federal price supports for sugar have, predictable enough, encouraged surplus beet and cane production. The subsequent harvest, together with imports of foreign sugar, are overloading the market.

So, the administration must either impose import quotas or begin buying up and storing large portions of the domestic sugar crop. Mr. Reagan has chosen to restrict imports, thus requiring consumers to pay the higher sugar prices that will inevitably result.

The world price for sugar is currently about nine cents a pound. Thanks to Washington's meddling in the marketplace, Americans will be paying something closer to 19 cents a pound.

What we have here is an example of how one ill - advised interference in the marketplace leads to another, with consistently harmful consequences for consumers. This is, or ought to be, the very antithesis of the Reagan administration's stated philosophy of restoring market forces to their rightful role in the American economy.

Some good marks for Kirkpatrick

The relationship between American ambassadors to the United Nations and secretaries of state traditionally is a flashpoint of strife in an administration. The United Nations ambassador stands alone in the lion's den of the General Assembly; the secretary of state directs foreign policy from the redoubt of Foggy Bottom. Both, however, should work together for the national good.

That didn't happen during the recent U.N. vote when Secretary Haig failed to inform U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick that the United States wished to abstain from rather than veto an Argentine resolution for a cease - fire in the Falklands. She admitted this was an embarrassment, but the fault was Haig's for not getting the message to her in time.

Haig and Kirkpatrick have been at odds for some time over the war in the Falklands. Kirkpatrick, with close personal and ideological ties to the Argentine military regime, argued early on that America should remain neutral. When Haig's peace mission ended and America put its support behind Britain, she asked, "Why not just disband the State Department and have the British Foreign Office make our policy?" Haig reportedly told her she was "mentally and emotionally incapable of thinking clearly on this issue because of her close links with Latins."

Kirkpatrick's Argentine connection dates back to her Ph.D. thesis on Argentine politics. Before her appointment to the United Nations post, she argued in a controversial article in Commentary magazine that authoritarian regimes, such as the Argentine junta, were different than totalitarian regimes, such as Cuba, and deserved U.S. support. On the day the State Department protested Argentina's invasion of the Falklands, Kirkpatrick attended a party in her honor at the Argentine Embassy in Washington.

There are those who say Kirkpatrick's tilt against the official U.S. position makes her a liability to the nation's foreign policy. But since when is a nation best served by yes-men or yes - women?

On the distinctly positive side of her ledger, Kirkpatrick has tirelessly and effectively defended the United States and western values against the envy and malice of Third World demagogues and communist detractors at the United Nations. The nation needs more such principled, independent spirits in high places.

Americans' dream of own home fades

When government creates a problem, you can usually count on Congress to develop a "solution" that compounds the problem and makes the search for constructive solutions more difficult. With its eye firmly fixed on the short - run and the main chance, Congress has run true to form on housing.

We all know that the American dream of home ownership has become a fading hope for middle - income Americans. The causes are many - high interest rates, zoning restrictions, environmental restrictions, rent controls, a maze of permit requirements, restrictions on lending institutions, antiquated building codes - almost all imposed by government.

Facing such a complex set of problems, Congress decided to ignore everything but interest rates, and to approach that problem in a way that will make the overall problem of high interest rates a little more difficult to solve. The House has authorized $1 billion for mortgage subsidies for middle - income families.

This legislation may help some families, mostly in the Northeast, while pushing up interest rates for everybody else.

A new program to "help" those who want mortgage money at lower rates must get the money to provide these subsidies somewhere. Where? Government must go more heavily into the credit market, exerting even more pressure to keep interest rates high. It is ironic that this legislation was passed less than two weeks after the President's Commission on Housing issued an unusually perceptive report. The commission spent nine months holding hearings across the country. Its report deserves more lengthy consideration, but several aspects are pertinent now.

First, the commission concluded that the nation's housing problems are due more to government subsidies and regulation than to failure of the private market. It didn't advocate eliminating all subsidies, but it suggested that many should be trimmed. In conjunction with these recommendations, it insisted that the best hope for more affordable housing lies in a massive dose of government deregulation - at the national, state and local levels.

This is clearly the most constructive path the nation could follow - assuming that official talk about the crisis in affordable housing reflects a minimal level of sincerity.

In voting for mortgage subsidies for a few middle - income families, the House has gone in the opposite direction. This action will make the long - term problem more difficult to solve and create a whole new class of people with a place at the federal trough.

Thus the House chose to become, even more than before, a part of the problem rather than part of the solution.

What did CIA have to hide?

By ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Like Former President Richard M. Nixon, the Central Intelligence Agency has a central taping system that automatically and secretly records all conversations in the offices of the CIA's most senior officials.

To keep the inventory of prior recordings within manageable proportions, the CIA periodically destroys the oldest tapes. In January 1973, however, CIA Director Richard M. Helms initiated an extraordinary action - he ordered the destruction of all existing tapes.

Only one week earlier, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D - Mont., the Senate's majority leader, had written to Helms specifically requesting that the CIA retain and preserve all evidentiary materials relating to the Watergate scandal because a select Senate committee was launching a full investigation of the matter.

What did the CIA have to hide? A great deal, including involvement in a variety of covert domestic operations - activities specifically prohibited in the agency's charter.

Five of the seven men accused of breaking into the offices of the Democratic National Committee had direct links to the agency. Because several remained unusually loyal to the agency, it is reasonable to assume that the CIA had prior knowledge of the planned crime - but did nothing to prevent it.

In September 1971, three of those five men participated in a similar break - in at the offices of a Los Angeles psychiatrist. The CIA provided technical assistance to the burglary team.

E. Howard Hunt, one of those arrested in connection with the Watergate break - in, ostensibly left the CIA payroll in 1970 - but in the ensuing two years, the agency's Technical Services Division provided him with fake driver's licenses, a wig, voice alteration devices, a tape recorder disguised as a typewriter and a camera hidden in a tobacco pouch.

In a desperate effort to divert attention away from the White House, Nixon and his most senior aides devised a scheme in which they claimed a full investigation of the Watergate scandal would adversely affect "national security" and compromise sensitive CIA operations.

Because neither the White House nor the CIA could afford to be subjected to a full investigation, the two institutions were drawn into a quiet yet deadly serious struggle to keep attention focused on the other organization.

Into that plot stepped Robert F. Bennett, son of former Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R - Utah, and president of a Washington public - relations firm.

Bennett's company provided "cover" to CIA agents in Singapore, Amsterdam and other cities around the world. The CIA paid half of Bennett's legal fees in connection with his appearance before the federal grand jury probing the Watergate scandal.

Bennett, says Charles W. Colson, one of Nixon's few senior aides not directly involved in the scandal, "was reporting everything he was doing to the CIA every two weeks."

One CIA memo reveals that Bennett claimed to have established a "back - door entry" to Edward Bennett Williams, then attorney for the Democratic National Committee, to "kill off" disclosures that might embarrass the CIA or his company.

Another CIA internal document, written by the head of the agency's Central Cover Staff, notes that Bennett believed he could influence the outcome of the Senate investigation.

That same memo says Bennett continually fed material to Robert Woodward, one of the Washington Post reporters assigned to cover the Watergate scandal, and that Woodward was "suitably grateful."

In the struggle between the two organizations, the CIA clearly emerged victorious - but there's an important postscript: In the years immediately after Nixon left office in disgrace, the CIA faced perhaps its most difficult crisis because of revelations about wiretapping, mail covers, surveillance of dissident political groups and other illegal activities.

There are those who believe that Nixon partisans remaining in Washington engineered those disclosures in retribution for what the CIA did to the former president. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Retrenchment

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
In my recent visit to the office of the Spartanburg, S.C. Herald, Editor Rudy Rivers mentioned that the country would have to begin its recovery on "a new economic base." This is the beginning of wisdom for America. We can't expect to return to the good times of the 1960s.

From 1945 through the sixties, the United States enjoyed unprecedented prosperity. Indeed much of the world shared in this unaccustomed prosperity. As a result, the level of economic expectations rose to a previously unknown level. Now we are in the midst of a profound readjustment. The recession we are having in the United States also is being experienced abroad, except in Japan.

The surge in oil prices in the 1970s contributed to the grim economic situation. Hundreds of billions of dollars were redistributed to the oil-producing nations of the Middle East. This, in turn, lowered the Western world's economic capabilities, retarded investment in industry, and caused massive unemployment.

The current oil glut is easing that problem a bit, but the West will suffer from the oil shocks for years to come. A lower level of economic activity is affecting business of every type - sophisticated as well as basic industries. The airlines, for example, have excess capacity. Several major carriers are on the ropes. Some significant bankruptcies will shake out that industry in the next few years.

With domestic carriers in trouble, the American aircraft industry is laying off thousands of workers. U.S. aircraft manufacturers are having difficulty making foreign sales because foreign manufacturers have the full support of their governments, which extend easy credit terms.

The American automobile industry has been among the principal victims of economic decline. The industry is likely to be much smaller in the future. The talk of a big upswing in auto sales may be simply that - talk. Many auto plants are shut down for good. Ford Motor company, for example, has sold a major West Coast plant to Northrup, reportedly for production of the stealth bomber.

The automakers have sought new agreements with the United Auto Workers, but the new agreements seem inadequate. Indeed they may be hurtful. General Motors agreed not to shut plants, whereas the closing of plants may be essential for a long - term healthy industry.

Work rule issues are unresolved. In many industries with unionized plants, management isn't free to switch workers from job to job as the need arises. This union - imposed limitation on managerial authority complicates production problems and makes the affected companies less competitive.

In company after company, salaries are being reduced or raises eliminated in order to improve the organization's ability to survive in a recession. Happily, many large corporations also are eliminating the executive bonuses. Cutbacks are essential today in American business. The cutbacks have to be perceived as affecting all company personnel.

It's easy in life to adjust to a rising standard of living, and hard to make a downward adjustment. Millions of Americans are having to do this. Public and private organizations are wrestling with lower budgets. The country as a whole is in the midst of a massive retrenchment. Only the liberals in Congress think that America can spend as it did 15 years ago.

It's hard road the nation is traveling along, but it is essential to proceed down that road if the economy is to be rebuilt on a new, secure basis.

ART BUCHWALD

Who needs college?

By ART BUCHWALD
"Hey, Dad, guess what? I've been accepted by Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Stanford."

"That's just wonderful, son. But are you really sure you want to go to college?"

"Gosh, Dad, you always said the one thing everyone needed in life was a college education."

"I was making conversation. I know a lot of people who are big wheels in their fields who never had a university diploma. You know my friend Sam Steg in Boston? He not only never went to college, he never even saw an Ivy League football game. He is one of the most successful men I know."

"And Eddie Aaronson of Rockville, Md., made a decision that he could educate himself much better than any school could do for him. The man can buy and sell anybody who went to the Wharton School of Business."

"But you went to college."

"If I knew then what I know now, I would have never done it. I wasted four of the best years of my life studying for exams. I could have been driving a taxi then, instead of throwing my parents' money away on books and courses and dates. But just because I made a mistake is no reason you have to make the same one."

"Gee, Dad, you never told me how unhappy you were at Dartmouth."

"I didn't want you to know, because I was afraid you would think less of me. All fathers have skeletons in their closets that they try to keep from their children. Now that you're a man I feel I can level with you. The only reason I went to college was to stay out of the Army."

"I thought you would be pleased that I was accepted by five of the best schools in the country."

"I am, son. But just because they accepted you is no reason you have to go to any one of them. You've got a brilliant mind, and I hate to see them load it down with a lot of intellectual nonsense that could mess you up for the rest of your life. Besides, every college that has accepted you is part of the elitist establishment. By the time you graduate, you'll think that you are better than everybody else. Worse still, everybody else will think the same thing. Once you get a degree from a top - flight school, you'll be a marked man for the rest of your days."

"Mom wants me to go to a good college."

"All mothers want their sons to go to a good college. But that doesn't mean it's right. They think because you've been accepted in some fancy school it reflects favorably on them. It's not important what Mom wants for you. It's what you want for yourself."

"I want to go to a good school."

"You say that now because you've never been to one. You're young and idealistic and you believe that all you need to get ahead is an education. But as you grow older you'll discover it isn't the college but the man that matters. I can introduce you to graduates of every university you have been accepted at, who will tell you they would have been happier being male disco dancers."

"What do you want me to do, Dad?"

"It's your decision, son. I don't want to influence you one way or the other. But if I were your age, I'd buy a backpack and hitchhike across the country. You'll learn a lot more than you will in some Ivy League institution."

"Dad, can I ask you a question?"

"Yes, son."

"Are we broke?"

"We're not broke. But we will be if you go to one of those five schools."

"Okay, then I'll go to the University of Maryland. It always was my first choice."

"Thanks, son. You just saved the old plantation."

Unbranded cattle - horses easy prey

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Unbranded animals are easy prey for urban cow and horse rustlers in Texas, and livestock stealing is one enterprise not suffering from economic recession, a cattleman's association says.

Thieves have been taking increasing numbers of horses and cattle, especially around big cities, said Cullen Ribonson, special assistant for the Texas and Southwest Cattle Raiser's Association in Forth Worth.

Rustlers prey particularly on unbranded animals because "a brand is a cow's return address," Ribonson said in a telephone interview.

"Livestock producers in the metropolitan areas such as Dallas-Fort Worth and even San Antonio are losing more to rustlers than those in the wide-open spaces," he said.

Ribonson said one reason for increased urban livestock thievery is that the animals are more concentrated and often are not branded. Many owners consider it too time-consuming or expensive to get a few hands together to brand the animals, he said.

In rural areas, residents become suspicious if they see strange people and vehicles moving across the rangeland, and ranchers are more apt to heed the axiom: "Trust everybody but brand your cows," Ribonson said.

"But in a metropolitan area they can pull right up and load them up and nobody pays any attention."

The TSCRA has 32 field inspectors and 87 brand inspectors that attend every livestock auction in Texas. They have been investigating a series of 11 cattle thefts along IH-35 between Austin and Oklahoma City.

One narcotics addict also is suspected of stealing five unbranded cattle and selling them at an auction, Ribonson said.

Rustling has increased in trailer-load lots along with freezer rustling, in which a thief takes only one head for meat to put in his freezer, Ribonson said.

Thieves have to sell stolen jewelry and electronic items at large discount to a fence, Ribonson said, but unbranded stolen livestock can be sold at market value.

"Livestock is the only thing they can sell at market prices, and it's all profit," he said.

With modern transportation, rustlers can reach markets and sell the cattle or horses before TSCRA bulletins on thefts can be circulated, Ribonson said.

"They can load at midnight and have them sold by 10 or 11 the next morning at a market far away."

The most potent weapons against rustling are branding and ear tagging.

"Those items are 75 percent of the battle. We find a lot of stolen cattle that have been branded, but the others are hard to trace. Branding is by far the most effective," Ribonson said.

Texas headed for second in population

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Up from the land of oil and armadillos, a new population giant is rising, a census expert says.

By the end of this decade, Robert Skrabanek predicts New York no longer will be the second most populous state.

Instead the Texas A&M sociologist and demographer said by 1990 the second largest state will also be the second in population.

Texas is the fastest growing state in the country, a "giant human magnet pulling people from all regions," said Skrabanek.

"Texas added more people than all the 22 northern states put together" in the past 15 months, Skrabanek said.

While New York's population has increased slightly since the 1980 census, the Empire State, along with Rhode Island and the District of Columbia, lost population from 1970 to 1980, he said.

Recent census data shows Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa and South Dakota have been added to the list of states with declining populations.

"For the first time, Texas had a larger growth rate in percentage and in number of people than the nation's most populated state, California," he said.

"The wide gap between California's 24 million people and Texas' 15 million means it will be a long time, if ever, before Texas could catch up," Skrabanek said.

"We're still going to pass up New York before 1990," he said.

"Texas' population should continue to grow at a faster rate than the nation as a whole. The question now is how long it will be before migration creates a problem of unemployment, as the state's economy can't expand as rapidly as there are people moving this way," he said.

Skrabanek said the rate of increase of Texas' population should begin to level off soon because people migrating to the state, particularly blue-collar workers, will have a harder time finding jobs.

The percentage of growth attributable to migration jumped tenfold from six percent in the 1950s to 62 percent in the 1970s, he said.

Skrabanek said Texas' population could increase by at least 7 million and perhaps even 12 million people before the turn of the century.

During the 1970s, Texas had a 27 percent increase in population while the nation averaged as 11 percent increase. Since the 1980 census was taken, Texas grew at more than three times the national rate of 1.2 percent, Skrabanek said.

Editor says 'excellence' key to newspaper survival

DALLAS (AP) — The printed word still has power — and money — in America, but that could change if newspapers don't improve the services they give advertisers and readers, an editor tells publishers.

Robert J. Haiman, executive editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, told the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention Wednesday that the new electronic media — "videotext" and "teletext" news and information systems — need not kill daily print journalism.

"Newspapers are going to survive; you can bet on it," Haiman said. Then he added, "Some newspapers are going to survive."

"Some of us are not going to be winners," he said. "Some of us are going to be losers" in the war with the video "press."

"Newspapers are the No. 1 advertising medium in the United States," Haiman said. "There's plenty of money and we're getting our share. But if we blow it, we deserve to lose."

Haiman urged the publishers to "keep electronic newspapers rather small and insignificant" by improving newspapers' quality and by controlling the new industry as much as possible.

"For example, if classified ads go electronic, make sure they're OUR classifieds," he said.

"There's no easy way out," he said. "What we're talking about is quality. ... But trends and innovations give heart."

Editors have never been more alert to their responsibilities (than now) in the aftermath of Vietnam and Watergate.

Newspapers are in danger if standards fall, but "excellence is invulnerable," Haiman said.

The speakers at the American Newspaper Publishers Association meeting here discussed "The Wiring of America: Should We Be Holding a Wake For Printing?"

Ben B. Smylie, who said he grew up in a newspaper family and "loves" the business, was pessimistic about the fate of the press. He urged publishers to switch to the teletext "newspaper."

"There seems to be a growing public and advertiser feeling that newspapers are dying," said Smylie, vice president of KEYCOM Electronic Publishing of Chicago. "It's only a question of when, not if."

Publishers should begin thinking electronically because in the new industry, "anyone can play — anyone, including the phone company, can set up the new machinery" for teletext or videotext systems, he said.

"Watch out, because the competition will be coming at you," Smylie said.

Leo Bogart of New York, executive vice president and general manager of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, said some form of printed newspapers will survive, but they might not be mass publications, which is unfortunate because newspapers are "not just a vehicle for advertising, but (help) maintain a free society."

Television has eroded newspaper readership. Fewer people are willing to "struggle" to get information by reading, he said.

Advertisers, looking for the best possible media buy, don't want to waste money pushing their products at people who won't — or can't — spend.

Presidential cabinet at disadvantage

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Paying the same tribute to the quality of his Cabinet that each of his recent predecessors paid to their circles of official advisers, President Reagan took office promising to give his department secretaries a prominent role in his administration.

Unlike those predecessors, however, Reagan has kept up regular contact in the White House with members of the Cabinet, if not with the Cabinet as a whole.

Still, that does not mean that the president's much-touted "Cabinet government" has worked perfectly over the past 17 months or that it is even playing a key role in the administration.

And White House aides have moved to cut down on the number of Cabinet secretaries' assistants allowed to take part in the Cabinet meetings — a step that they acknowledge gives the White House officials greater authority in the meetings and puts the Cabinet members at a disadvantage.

Cabinet government has "worked and it's worked well, because the president is dedicated to it and simply doesn't make decisions without seeking the input of his Cabinet," said Craig Fuller, assistant to the president for Cabinet affairs.

Each week, the president's early schedule leaves two or three hours for "Cabinet time" — meetings with the entire Cabinet, individual department secretaries, or, more likely, a session with several people who make up a Cabinet council considering a specific issue.

But it is not rare for weeks to go by when those time slots are filled with other meetings and the Cabinet members do not get in to see the president, although they meet at the White House with Reagan's aides.

If Cabinet members are not available for a meeting, the second-ranking official, usually a deputy secretary, is invited.

Tex the whooping crane killed, offspring survives

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — Tex, the rare 4-foot-tall whooping crane who performed a mating dance with a human, was killed in her pen by a marauding raccoon only a few weeks after she made scientific history as a mother.

George Archibald, director of the International Crane Foundation center, had spent years performing mating dances with the whooper to induce Tex to lay an egg after being artificially inseminated. The newborn chick, the first whooping crane born in captivity, hatched just 3 1/2 weeks ago and is named Gee Whiz.

Although saddened by Tex's death, Archibald said Wednesday "there'll be whoopers to dance with in the future" because the genetic line is continued in Gee Whiz. "We feel that our work has been successful," he said.

Tex, 15 years old, was killed Tuesday night in her pen, where Crane center spokesman Scott Freeman said a raccoon was found early Wednesday with her remains.

The raccoon, which was shot to death, had broken through an eight-foot nylon mesh ceiling designed to protect the cranes from such hazards, he said.

Freeman said Gee Whiz, born on June 1, is healthy and growing.

Tex had been raised by humans in the San Antonio Zoo in Texas and never became interested in male cranes.

The bird was transferred to the crane foundation — which is seeking to build up the endangered species — and Archibald began joining Tex in the mating dances. Cranes need to perform the dance to become receptive to breeding.

Archibald appeared Wednesday on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson after he learned by telephone of the bird's death.

"Last night while I was on my way to California, Tex was killed by a predator, and so it's sort of surrealistic," Archibald said on the program. "We have many cranes, we have more than 140 (cranes of various species) at the Crane Foundation but the one bird — it's the first time we've ever had this sort of problem, and it was her."

Carson quipped: "And she has film to pass on to her young. When they're old enough to understand it they can say, 'Hey, there's Mom!'"

In a previous interview, Archibald said he realized in 1975 that Tex went into her spring mating dance only when humans passed her pen.

"It is the same with children," he said. "If they have an abnormal childhood, they are raised with all sorts of abnormalities."

Elephant gets vacation to cure 'blues'

By JACK A. SEAMONDS
Associated Press Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A zoo elephant who sank into loneliness after the death of her companion is being sent away for a cure because now she does nothing but pace in her cage, perhaps troubled by elephantine memories.

Wally, the Toledo Zoo's only female elephant, "has got some real problems," zoo Director William Dennler said Wednesday. "I'd say it will take a good elephant trainer a couple of months to bring her around."

Zoo officials hope that sending her to an animal farm in Texas will soothe her psyche and end the lonely blues that set in after the 1980 death of her companion, Amber.

Wally, an 11-year-old Asian elephant, probably was traumatized when she watched 31-year-old Amber die two years ago, Dennler said. Wally hasn't been the same since. "I know it sounds strange, but she really has become neurotic," Dennler said. "All she does is pace back and forth in her cage. Elephants are very social animals, and two females will develop closer bonds than a male and a female."

"When Amber died, Wally was in the next cage area, and stuck her trunk through the bars to sniff, trying to find out what was going on," Dennler said. "She has never been without another elephant. Who knows what ran through her mind?"

The zoo checked initially to find out whether there were any Asian elephants available in the United States. There weren't, and having one shipped from overseas could cost $40,000 or more.

So in a two-for-one deal, Wally is being traded for two female African elephants, each about 3 years old, Dennler said.

The deal is a good one for the Toledo Zoo and for the International Animal Exchange of Ferndale, Mich., Dennler said.

Wally will be relocated first to the animal exchange's African Lion Safari near Port Clinton, Ohio. Eventually, Dennler said, the elephant will be transferred to the animal exchange's operations in Texas for breeding.

Wally is an untrained elephant, making her care more difficult, Dennler said, and animal trainers will begin working with her at the Safari.

"Wally is just entering breeding age and should be in that stage for the next 20 years," Dennler said. "So one of the factors involved in moving her is to increase the stock of Asian elephants, which are becoming hard to come by."

Dennler said the transfer of Wally and the two young elephants will probably be done next week.

Government's budget usually wildly optimistic

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The record $104-billion deficit Congress is forecasting for 1983 may seem like loose change compared with the shortfall the government could actually run up.

In each of the past three years, the initial budget plan approved by Congress was wildly optimistic when it came to forecasting the deficit for the following fiscal year. In fact, congressional estimates — abetted by White House budget experts — have grown progressively worse.

In mid-1979, Congress approved a 1980 budget plan calling for a $23 billion deficit. The actual red-ink total for the budget year was $60 billion, the second largest deficit ever.

In 1980, after rejecting Jimmy Carter's red-ink budget for 1981, Congress wrote a whole new plan that promised the first balanced budget in a dozen years. The actual deficit: $58 billion, third largest ever.

Last year, Congress bought Ronald Reagan's budget-cutting, tax-cutting plan and predicted a $38 billion deficit for the current fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, 1981.

Now, the Reagan administration is predicting an actual deficit of $100 billion, which would be the largest on record. Other forecasts put the total red ink as high as $114 billion.

As for the 1983 budget, many forecasters think the real deficit will be in the neighborhood of $150 billion, assuming interest rates come down, the economy returns to health and Congress enacts some of its planned savings. But if the economy remains weak or grows sicker, the deficit could swell above $175 billion, possibly beyond $200 billion.

One reason for the poor deficit estimates seems to be that politicians can't help but put on rosy glasses when it comes to predicting the economy's future course and their own ability to hold down government spending.

Another reason, some budget observers suspect, is that when the November elections are near, the White House and Congress handle an economic dilemma with a political solution: if they don't like the real deficit numbers, they cook up more appealing ones.

"If you were going into an election facing a 150-to-160 billion dollar deficit (for 1983), wouldn't you try to get it down anyway you could?" asked Carter's budget director, James T. McIntyre, whose own estimates were called into question when he was running the budget office.

An official in Reagan's budget office said the accuracy of the latest budget estimate depends on whether the economic forecast comes true and whether Congress follows through on the spending cuts and tax increases on which the $104 billion deficit is based.

"I admit that in both of these cases, the economic assumptions and the follow-through in Congress, the dangers are toward a higher deficit," said the official, who did not want his name used. "But we don't regard the estimate as being wildly unrealistic."

Nevertheless, there is skepticism in the financial markets about the government's ability to stay within the deficit figure for next year.

Even before the Senate gave its final approval to the budget plan Wednesday, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office re-estimated the likely deficit at $116.4 billion.

Moreover, the budget assumes Congress will raise $21 billion in new taxes and cut some $19 billion from non-defense spending, no easy feat just before an election. It counts on the administration coming up with an ambitious $13.6 billion in "management savings." It depends on falling interest rates to lower debt payments by $14.5 billion.

"Chances are the real deficit will be higher than the first budget resolution," said former Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., who chaired the House Budget Committee until his retirement in 1980.

"It's one terrific job that has to be done," Giaimo said of the battle still to be fought over tax increases and spending cuts.

Giaimo's successor as Budget Committee chairman, Jim Jones, D-Okla., would not return telephone calls to comment on the deficit outlook. Neither would Jones' Senate counterpart, Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

The assumptions the budget makes about economic growth, inflation, unemployment and interest rates are critical to the actual size of the deficit. Slower-than-expected growth means lower revenues; the same is true if inflation is lower than expected.

Immigration officials report smuggling ring cracked

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The largest illegal alien smuggling ring ever cracked by U.S. immigration authorities brought 24,000 people into the United States every year, often by hiding them in the trunks of cars for hundreds of miles, authorities say.

The ring, which operated for about 4½ years and grossed about $24 million annually — more than half of which was profit — was the largest ever smashed by immigration authorities, officials said.

A federal grand jury in Albuquerque on Wednesday indicted 38 people on charges of conspiracy to transport illegal aliens and 47 separate counts of actually transporting aliens. As of late Wednesday, 18 people indicted remained at large, 18 were being held in jail and two people were free on bond, said Jerry Jacobson, a criminal investigator with the immigration service.

Agents infiltrated the ring and worked as drivers for the operation, transporting aliens by car, truck and train from points in Texas and New Mexico to the Midwest, officials said.

"In hot or cold weather or whatever, some of these people were carried in the trunks of cars from Silver City (N.M.) to Chicago," Jacobson said. "They didn't even allow them to go to the bathroom" during the 35-to-40-hour drive, he said.

Salvador Pineda-Vergara of Juarez, Mexico, the alleged ringleader of the network, was arrested late Monday at a Western Union station in El Paso where he had gone to pick up payment for a load of illegal aliens, immigration authorities said. He was being held in El Paso in lieu of $1 million bond.

Immigration officials said more than 16,000 aliens a year were taken by the ring to Chicago.

About 1,500 aliens a year were taken from El Paso, which is across the border from Juarez, to the Amtrak station at Lamy, N.M., where they were sent to Chicago by rail, officials said.

Others were driven by a team of 40 drivers from Silver City and through Reserve, N.M., to the Midwest, authorities said.

Another 8,900 aliens were shipped annually to other states, including California, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Illinois, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Wyoming and Indiana, officials said.

INS agents began seizing 24 vehicles used by the ring including cars, trucks and one motor home. Nelson said. They also seized weapons in "safe houses" used to keep aliens overnight in the United States, often without allowing them food, water or toilet facilities, authorities said.

Joseph Salgado, assistant INS commissioner for enforcement, said the investigation would continue to see whether there were any links to employers in the United States who might have guaranteed jobs for the aliens.

Nelson said aliens were brought from Mexico and Colombia, Peru, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and the Dominican Republic. U.S. Attorney William Lutz said all the people indicted eventually would be brought to Albuquerque for trial.

The conspiracy count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The smuggling count carries a top penalty of five years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Lions down J.T. Richardson, 7-4

Derek Milum pitched a two-hitter as the Lions Club defeated J.T. Richardson, 7-4, Wednesday night in Babe Ruth baseball action at Optimist Park.

Milum held J.T. hitless through the last four innings as he lifted his mound record to 2-0 for the season.

Lions Club is now 7-4 for the season while J.T. drops to 6-7.

Billy Butler and Paul Simpson paced the Lions 10-hit attack with a pair of base hits apiece.

Mark Cochran and Ray Jackson had one single each for the losers.

Pampa Hardware meets Grant Supply at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the only game scheduled.

It was announced that the District 13-year-old Tournament will be held in Pampa. Dates have not been set yet.

Networks angry over Turner's plans to air NCAA football

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

College football's first two-network season has run into trouble, 2½ months before the opening kickoff. The problem involves Ted Turner and his cable-television contract with the NCAA.

ABC and its Atlanta affiliate, WSB, are angry over Turner's plans to broadcast NCAA football on WTBS, his Atlanta-based "super station," according to knowledgeable sources.

It is unclear what effect the matter might have on this fall's TV football slate. ABC and CBS, which share the four-year, $283.5 million network contract for college football, and Turner have announced the backbone of their respective schedules, and the sources stressed that this skirmish could not scuttle the multimillion-dollar deal.

But, the case underscores the growing competition between the television networks, which have controlled home sports viewing for decades, and the cable industry, which is taking an increasingly large bite of the TV sports pie.

WTBS is the anchor of the network Turner put together when he paid an estimated $17 million for the cable rights earlier this year. It will bounce its signal off a satellite for distribution to cable systems nationwide.

At the same time, however, the games will be going through the air — free — to all Atlanta households. WTBS is a UHF station, broadcasting on Channel 17.

That's what has WSB and ABC upset. They feel that such over-the-air telecasts violate the network's exclusivity contract with the NCAA.

There's another part to the Turner-ABC battle.

Both ABC and CBS have priority to any game on the NCAA schedule, with right of first refusal alternating under a system of "control dates."

WTBS says it plans to carry the Boston College-Texas A&M game, the first contest for the Aggies under Coach Jackie Sherrill, as its first telecast Sept. 4.

But, the game is scheduled for Sept. 11, an ABC control date, and there's a possibility the network will chose the BC-A&M game for its national telecast.

NL roundup Expos take NL East lead

DOWN AND OUT. Dickie Thon of the Houston Astros slides face down into the waiting tag of shortstop Johnnie LeMaster of the San Francisco Giants. Thon was caught stealing and put out with a well-thrown peg from Giants catcher Milt May in the bottom of the third inning Wednesday night in the Astrodome. The Giants won, 9-8. (AP Laserphoto)

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer
It took some time, but after a sluggish start — one which had them six games behind as late as May 21 — the Montreal Expos have finally done what many experts thought they would do. That is, move into first place in the National League East.

Now your guys start to pull away, right, Jim Fanning? "I like to be cautious when talking about something like that," said the Expo manager.

The Expos were anything but cautious Wednesday night. Warren Cromartie belted a pair of home runs and Steve Rogers scattered eight hits as Montreal shut out the New York Mets, 5-0, enabling the Expos to move to the top in the East spot by .005 over St. Louis.

In other National League games Wednesday, Philadelphia beat St. Louis 7-1. Atlanta topped Los Angeles 7-2. Chicago nipped Pittsburgh 6-5 in 10 innings. San Francisco outlasted Houston 9-8 and Cincinnati beat San Diego 5-4.

"First place in June is not the same as first place in September or October," said Rogers, who raised his record to 9-3 as the Expos won their sixth straight game. "We've worked hard to jell. I'm not surprised we're playing this well. The talent is there and it's producing now that we've gotten over the rough spots and all the player changes have been made."

"We felt in training camp that our pitching was very, very good," said Fanning, who piloted the Expos to the NL East title last season. "There are a lot of strong young arms. Our staff is as good as any in the league, and pitching is going to be the key."

"The National League East has a history of being a dogfight in recent years, and I expect the same thing again." Phillies 7, Cardinals 1

Mike Krukow, 6-5, fired a seven-hitter and singled home a run and Manny Trillo had three RBIs to lead the Phillies, who snapped a three-game losing streak.

"It was a very important game tonight," said Phillies first baseman Pete Rose. "We haven't been playing with very much intensity."

"Sometimes you don't play with intensity because of the opposition," said Rose, who singled in the third inning for one of nine Philadelphia hits.

Steve Mura, 5-6, lost for the Cards, who fell out of first place in the NL East for the first time since April 15.

April 15. Braves 7, Dodgers 2
Braves pitcher Rick Mahler, 7-5, belted his first career home run and hurled a complete-game seven-hitter as Atlanta downed the Dodgers and Fernando Valenzuela.

"It's one of the big thrills of my career," Mahler said. "I can't hit one in batting practice. It's like a dream."

Mahler's two-run homer off reliever Alejandro Pena capped a four-run outburst in the sixth inning as the Braves chased Valenzuela, 9-6, with four consecutive singles.

It was only the third loss in 12 games for the third-place Dodgers. Cubs 6, Pirates 5

Chicago's Junior Kennedy stroked a 10th-inning RBI double off Randy Niemann to give the Cubs the victory after the Pirates had tied the score in the bottom of the ninth.

Cub reliever Bill Campbell, 1-3, picked up the victory, although he gave up Dave Parker's RBI grounder in the ninth which tied the game at 5-5. It was Campbell's first NL triumph. Giants 9, Astros 8

Max Venable's pinch-hit RBI single in the eighth inning led San Francisco to the victory after the Giants had squandered a 6-1 lead.

"It would have hurt a lot if we had lost tonight," said the Giants' Joe Morgan, who made his first career start at third base. "We got shut down by a good pitcher yesterday (Vern Ruhle), but today our guys scored some runs. This is one we should have won."

The Giants had taken a five-run lead midway through the game but still had to come from behind to topple the Astros, who regained the lead with a six-run explosion in the sixth inning.

Giant reliever Fred Breining, 4-1, was the winner. Greg Minton worked the last two innings to record his 12th save. Reds 5, Padres 4

Paul Householder and Eddie Milner shined for the Reds in the late innings as Cincinnati held off San Diego.

Householder drilled a two-run homer in the eighth inning to put the Reds ahead 5-3, and Milner threw out Broderick Perkins with the potential tying run at the plate to end the game and give the Reds their third straight victory.

Tom Hume, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher, picked up the victory to improve his record to 1-2. Padre starter Chris Welsh held Cincinnati hitless over the first six innings until the Reds picked up three runs in the seventh.

AL roundup Magic fails to help A's

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's tried to pull some rabbits out of a hat, but all that came out was another punchless lineup.

Having lost seven of their last eight games, during which they were shut out twice and held to one run on two other occasions, the A's decided to try a little black magic and have center fielder Dwayne Murphy pull the batting order out of a hat.

Rickey Henderson, normally the sensational leadoff man, hit eighth, while cleanup slugger Tony Armas was in the second spot. Nothing helped. The A's managed four measly singles and dropped a 1-0 decision to Larry Gura and the Kansas City Royals.

"This is the fourth time I've done this in my managing career," said Billy Martin. "It's the first time it didn't work. We'll go back to our regular lineup the next time. It was just something to try and snap the team out of it."

In other American League games, California shaded Texas 5-3. Boston handed Detroit its 10th consecutive setback 10-4. New York edged Milwaukee 3-2. Minnesota erupted for six runs in the ninth inning and beat Chicago 6-3. Baltimore defeated Cleveland 3-1 and Toronto downed Seattle 5-3 in 11 innings.

The Royals scored in the ninth after Brian Kingman walked Hal McRae to open the inning. Bob Ochwinko relieved, walked Willie Aikens and was replaced by Dave Beard, who retired the next two batters before U.L. Washington singled to score pinch runner Dennis Werth.

"We're going to take batting practice in the hotel lobby tomorrow," said Martin. "We won't have to worry. We won't break any lamps, I guarantee it."

Martin even had some nice words to say about Gura — whom he traded away from the Yankees in 1976 and had disparaged ever since — and vice versa.

"He did a heck of a job out there," Martin said. "I know Gura doesn't like me, but he's a great pitcher. You've got to congratulate a guy for that."

"You can tell Billy I like him," Gura replied. "I don't hold any grudges. I just didn't like the way he used me back then, that's all. But, heck, he's a great manager. He's proved that everywhere he's gone." Angels 5, Rangers 3

Reggie Jackson slammed a two-run homer and Rob Wilfong had three hits and scored twice as California maintained its half-game lead over Kansas City in the AL West. Winner Ken Forsch was tagged for solo home runs by Dave Hostetler and Buddy Bell, while Hostetler hit another off reliever Andy Hassler. Jackson hit his 14th homer in the seventh to chase loser Doc Medich.

Glenn Hoffman drove in four runs with a tie-breaking two-run homer and a single. Hoffman's fifth home run of the season came with two-out in the sixth inning following a single by Dave Stapleton and a wild pitch by loser Jack Morris to snap a 3-3 tie. Hoffman's single capped a four-run seventh inning. Dwight Evans had a homer and two doubles for Boston and drove in three runs. Yankees 3, Brewers 2

Roy Smalley slammed a three-run homer in the fifth inning and Mike Morgan and Rich Gossage combined on a seven-hitter as the Yankees snapped the Brewers' seven-game winning streak. Gossage relieved with two on and one out in the seventh and retired Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper. The Brewers had runners at first and third with none out in the eighth, but Gossage struck out Gorman Thomas and Roy Howell and retired pinch hitter Don Money on a fly ball.

Milwaukee took a 2-0 lead, including Ben Oglivie's 17th homer, but the Yankees rallied in the fifth on a walk, John Mayberry's single and Smalley's two-out homer, his seventh.

McEnroe scores second-round victory

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It is somehow fitting that just minutes from where the goodly Dr. Jekyll downed the potion that made him the beastly Mr. Hyde, John McEnroe rails against his own darker side.

But fight it he does, swallowing what anger he can on the neatly manicured lawns of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club. It is like shadow-boxing in front of a mirror, except here some 8,000 people are looking on.

Jimmy Connors, who long ago tempered somewhat the demons that continue to haunt McEnroe, highlighted today's card when he put his No. 2 seeding on the line against Australian John Alexander.

In other men's matches, third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis took on New Zealander Bruce Derlin. No. 4 Sandy Mayer met Colin Dowdeswell of Britain and No. 11 Brian Teacher of the United States got his tournament bid underway against Israeli Shlomo Glickstein.

The ranked women, all of whom received byes in the opening round, also made their debut today as top-seeded Martina Navratilova, No. 3 Tracy Austin, No. 4 Andrea Jaeger and fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia took the court.

Second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, in keeping with Wimbledon tradition of having the defending champion open play, defeated Barbara Sue Gerken on Tuesday.

McEnroe, who opened on Center Court Monday in an impressive victory, moments after wiping out Eddie Edwards of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 7-5 in a second-round match Wednesday showed that the feathers of the reigning champion still ruffle.

A reporter asked the New Yorker if he "is purposely backing off the throttle a bit?"

"You might put it that way," McEnroe said. "I hope to enjoy my tennis career. This way, as time goes on, it will be easier."

Yet, it didn't go that way Tuesday. With his strokes erratic from the outset, his temperament joined in.

After cruising through the first two sets with nothing more than minor disruptions, McEnroe missed an easy volley in the third game of the final set. He lifted the ball with his racquet and then slammed it into the net. An umpire issued him a warning.

For the third straight day, rain curtailed the card Wednesday and left tournament officials facing a backlog of dozens of matches.

Two other seeded men players reached the second round as No. 12 Mark Edmondson of Australia outlasted American Marty Davis 7-6, 7-5, 7-5 and 15th-seeded Buster Mottram of Britain overcame a tiebreaker loss to overtake 20-year-old Anders Jarryd of Sweden 6-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Unseeded American Lloyd Bourne, playing in his first Wimbledon, turned back Ilie Nastase of Romania 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

Superbrat displays reluctant restraint

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — At times he looked as if he wanted to cry. At other times, as if he wanted to fight. Then, at still other times, as if he'd like to stroll over to the sideline, cradle his six wooden rackets in his arm and flee the premises.

It's John McEnroe's battle with aged, starchy Wimbledon and with himself. It's virtually the only game in town now that Bjorn Borg, who won five straight men's titles, refused to attempt qualifying for the All-England tennis championships.

Young McEnroe, the defending champion, now has played two matches — the first without incident, the second marked by moments of frustration, petulance and a near — but not quite — eruption.

To those who watched America's "Superbrat" — as English tabloids have dubbed him — almost effortlessly dispatch a young South African, Eddie Edwards, in Wednesday's rain-plagued second round, it was a study in reluctant restraint on the part of both the combatants, Wimbledon and McEnroe.

Before he struck the first ball, McEnroe acted as if there was a beast inside him itching to get out.

He became annoyed at the moving crowd. Noises distracted him. He made his displeasure known by stalling, gesturing and even approached the umpire's stand.

He questioned two foot faults, objected — not violently — to several calls which he thought were wrong, even drew a stern warning from the umpire, when after missing an easy shot, he vented his anger by slamming the ball into the net-cord and having it fly across court.

"Code violation, abuse of ball, warning," intoned the umpire, George Armstrong, a meek-sort of man in his 50s. The penalty procedure is first a warning, then penalty point followed by penalty game and out.

McEnroe was stricken with disbelief. He strode belligerently to the umpire's stand.

"I asked him what constituted ball abuse," McEnroe said later. "I thought you had to hit the ball into the stands or at a linesman (a rule on the WCT circuit)."

McEnroe swallowed and went back to the base line. He declined to let the monster escape, but he came across as a stroke-making genius whose emotions cannot be smothered by an order or a vow.

He could be the greatest tennis player who ever lived — with his left-handed serving power, his quickness and natural instincts — but he also is a perfectionist, subject to subtle disruptions.

Nerves seem to pop out of his agile 5-foot-11, 165-pound frame.

He bounces the ball and goes into his unique serving stance. A figure moves in the crowd. He pulls up quickly. He glowers at the offender. He waits until movement has stopped before he resumes.

He plays a point.

"I was frustrated — I lost my rhythm but I won the big points," he says afterward. The score: 6-3, 6-3, 7-5. But no masterpiece.

John McEnroe is happy only with masterpieces.

Gilbert could be one to watch at Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — In a field full of golf's great stars — including newly-crowned U.S. Open champion Tom Watson — journeyman pro Gibby Gilbert could be the man to watch this week in the $400,000 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic.

"I can't explain it. I don't understand it at all," said Gilbert, who has enjoyed his greatest financial successes on the hilly, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course in suburban New York.

The veteran tourist, who has won three times in a 15-year career, has finished second in the Westchester event each of the last two years and has been a runnerup here three times overall.

"Somebody figured it out, to the last penny," he said. "Do you know that I've won 15 percent of my career money in this one tournament? Can you believe that? Fifteen percent."

"I've been asked a thousand times why I play so well here, and I don't have an answer. I just enjoy it," Gilbert said before teeing off today in the first round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

While he said he's as puzzled as anyone over his history of success in this tournament, Gilbert said he has one theory.

"About this time of the year, when I hit a bad shot or play a bad round or something, the other guys will say, 'that's okay, Gibby, Westchester is coming up'."

"Well, if they're thinking that way, I guess maybe it gets me to thinking that way, too. It gets me to thinking I'm going to play good here."

COORS BEATS THE HEAT THAT KILLS BEER TASTE.

Other beers are subjected to taste-killing heat of 140°

Only Coors is kept cold from the brewery to your store to assure fresh beer taste.

Extreme heat destroys beer taste. In fact, because of the way other beers are processed and shipped, they are exposed to 140 degrees of this taste-killing heat even before they reach your store.

Not Coors. Only Coors is always packaged and shipped cold from the brewery to your store. In fact, Coors is kept cold longer than any other beer—and that means fresher tasting beer for you.

Sure, it would be easier to allow Coors to be exposed to extreme heat. And maybe some beer drinkers wouldn't taste the difference. But we think real beer drinkers would. Because keeping it cold is the only way to assure fresh beer taste.

That's why your last Coors tastes as fresh as your first. Tastes first-beer fresh, Coors after Coors. Coors is the beer made for the way you really like to drink beer.

Coors
MADE FOR THE WAY YOU REALLY LIKE TO DRINK BEER.

So you want to be a 'Culture Vulture'?

By Lynn Howard

The women have long necks, pointed chins and aristocratic noses. Their smiles are rare rewards bestowed only on the worthy.

The men have chiseled features and piercing glances. They absently ponder aromatic clouds of pipe smoke and speak powerful words in clipped voices.

All of them balance wine glasses between two fingers as they murmur about artists and artifacts, writers and books, conductors and classical music.

These are the Culture Vultures.

And you want to be one of them — you who can barely hold a beer glass with two hands, you who believe the Met is a member of a baseball team.

Surprise! It's not really that difficult. By the end of this article, you can be well on your way to becoming a died-in-the-wool Culture Vulture.

The key is simple, yet elusive: an honest appreciation of the Muses.

It doesn't have to be all of the Muses, just one or two of your favorites. Art, music, theater, dance, opera, literature, philosophy... Pick what you feel most strongly attracts you and work on that. Sorry, plumbing, the NFL, karate, laundry and sharks are not the things Fine Arts are made of.

OPERA

Take opera, for example. Now, now, before you scowl, consider that opera is actually a musical written a long time ago by a big-name composer. If the dregs of 18th century European society could memorize an aria or two (remember, this was as close as they got to the Top 40), why can't you?

Before you go rushing off in white tie and tails to the nearest opera society, it may be worth your while to practice a bit.

Get thee to a record store, or better yet to a library that lends albums, and have your librarian help you pick a few of the more popular operas. "Barber of Seville," "Die Fledermaus" or "Les Contes d'Hoffman" might be good for starters.

Don't let the foreign-sounding titles scare you off. Most albums carry a story synopsis on the cover that can be used as a guide. Open your mind and imagine how the music fits the scenario. Try to get a recording of the piece in English, and the going will be a lot easier.

As the opera progresses, you'll be able to follow the dialogue as it is sung. Play it a few more times over the next few days and you may even find yourself humming along.

My first opera was "Madame Butterfly," which I saw with a couple of friends. Before going to the theater, I had listened to the recording and read the story line so I could understand what was going on during the performance.

My moment of full appreciation didn't dawn until the first act, when one friend leaned over and whispered: "See that guy Pinkerton? He's a real stinkerton."

Still hesitant? Remember "Tommy" by the Who is billed as a rock 'n' roll opera.

CLASSICAL MUSIC

The problem with classical music is that it doesn't have lyrics that earmark it in our memories. So, try to remember the names of the composers of a piece of or two you like and why you like them.

For example, "I enjoy Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 because it reminds me of walking on my uncle's farm during the fall." Don't be insincere though — if it really reminds you of a New York subway at midnight, perhaps you don't actually like it that much.

Again, to get a general versing in classical music, the lending library is the first stop. Get a variety of composers.

I suggest "Pastorale" by Beethoven (light and appealing), "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi (well worth the additional concentration it requires; you may catch yourself whistling parts of it while you vacuum), one each of Bach, Brahms and Chopin, and perhaps a dash of Dvorak or Bartok. Be prepared for the last two, though. Their music is often as heavy as their names sound.

Listen to the records, again with an open mind. Don't try to hear them all at one sitting, or you may overdose on fluttery notes and end up hating classical music forever.

Think of it as rich caramel and sample sparingly. Note the pieces that you enjoy most. Play them over a couple of times and imagine what they make you think of and why you like them.

Try to remember the composer's name and, if possible, the name of the selection. I steer away from pieces with numbers, such as Opus 52, simply because I have a bad memory for numbers. If the reverse is true for you, go for it.

Don't worry. Culture Vultures never pop quizzes on the difference between a sonata and a concerto. They just exchange opinions on what strikes their fancy. Fancy that.

BALLET

Sports fans may be surprised at just how much they can appreciate ballet and how quickly they can tell true strength and ability from frills and flourishes.

The life of a ballet dancer is not unlike that of a gymnast. Strength, balance, endurance and grace are as important to a dancer as they are to an Olympic contender. Training is a daily discipline. Muscle tone is maintained through exercise and practice, practice, practice.

The fundamental difference between gymnasts and dancers are these:

Gymnasts have coaches and dancers have choreographers. Gymnasts represent their teams and dancers represent characters in a story. Gymnasts have to make their efforts look like an accomplishment; dancers have to make their efforts look easy.

Understand all that and you have three-quarters of ballet appreciation scooped.

Dear Abby
All hanky and no panky in office love affair

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with this guy I work with. We have a lot in common. His marriage stinks and so does mine. We've done a lot of talking, but that's all. I can't get this guy out of my mind, Abby. We've made plans to spend a weekend together, but something always comes up and he can't make it. I even rented a motel room for a Sunday afternoon, but he never showed up. When I saw him at work on Monday, he said he had the feeling he was being followed and didn't want to take a chance. This guy really appeals to me like no man I have ever known. He keeps saying he would like to get to know me better, but that's as far as it goes. What I need to know is this: Why can't I get him to meet me away from work?

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: Because he's either chicken or henpecked. In any case, you're both married to other people, so forget him. He's doing what he does best — talking.

DEAR ABBY: The physical attraction I once felt for my husband is waning fast. The reason? He's fat and doesn't seem to care. He knows how I feel. Should I find someone else, or pretend he's someone else?

COOLED OFF IN COOS BAY

DEAR COOLED: What else does he have going for him? If he's worth keeping, pretend he's Robert Redford, Burt Reynolds and Paul Newman rolled into one. If that doesn't work, pretend he's Orson Welles and love him to pieces.

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one who never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby, but I'm too embarrassed about my problem to ask anyone else.

I'll start from the beginning: Dick and I got married when we were both 17, mainly because I was pregnant, but we also loved each other deeply. We've had our problems like most young marrieds, especially getting ourselves into deep financial trouble.

This weekend Dick gave me a real shocker. Because of his job as a construction worker, he works 200 miles away and can come home only on weekends. Anyway, he came home with hickeys all over his neck and admitted he had committed adultery on several occasions because of his strong sexual desires, which I can attest to. He says these girls mean nothing to him and he loves me, but he gets so lonely and there is nothing to do but go to bars. That's where he meets these easy girls. He says if I want to divorce him he will understand and won't fight it.

The fact is, I still love Dick. Besides, I have two preschool children and I'm four months' pregnant. What should I do? I am a good Christian, but sometimes I feel like killing myself.

UPSET AND DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Both you and Dick were married before you were mature enough to handle that kind of commitment. If your marriage is to survive — and you owe it to your children to give it your best effort — you will need family counseling. If your church doesn't provide it, try your local mental health association. Don't back off because of the money. You will be charged only what you can afford. And please remind Dick that bed-hopping with girls he picks up in bars is the way men get VD — and bring it home to their wives.

DEAR POLLY — My husband retired early and I am still working. When he first started helping me around the house, I wanted him to do things "my way." Then I slowly realized that he would help me more willingly if I just let him do things "his way." I think more wives would receive help from their husbands if they would let them do things "their way." — IRENE

DEAR IRENE — Thank you for a lovely letter and a very important lesson in human relations. These days when more families are sharing the household chores, let's all remember that the important thing is that the job gets done. The exact method or process of execution is really not so important after all. When anyone undertakes or is assigned a job, let them do it without your backseat driving! And for you, Irene, our Pointer of the Week Award, an autographed copy of Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer. — POLLY

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1.00) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Summer Safety Tips

Fireworks add a big bang to the 4th

BY J. D. RAY
Assistant Fire Chief, Pampa Fire Department
Fire and Safety Committee, Pampa Chamber of Commerce

It is again the season to celebrate Independence Day in the United States of America. Through recognition of the hazards of fireworks, accidents can be avoided.

It is also the time of year that grass has attained its rapid spring growth and is now dry and easily ignited. The explosion or remaining paper embers of firecrackers and skyrockets will easily start a grass fire. And many times because firemen were busy extinguishing grass fires, a home has been lost when a skyrocket lands on a wood roof.

Small children must be educated on the force and heat of fireworks and taught the basics of firework safety. This can be done only through proper supervision.

FIREWORKS SAFETY TIPS

1. Use fireworks only in grass free open areas.
2. Never in City limits or close to buildings.
3. Adult supervision of children
4. Poppottle Rockets are prohibited in the State of Texas.

Love handles are not something fun to hang on to Hate those "love handles," those ugly rolls of fat that make your swimsuit look like the Pillsbury Doughboy lives there? It's enough to make you jump into a fad diet and starve until the rolls drop off. The advice from Robert L. Kaman, Ph.D., of Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine: Watch it. "Effective and safe weight loss is a matter of simple arithmetic," the associate director of the medical school's Institute for Human Fitness said. "You have to burn more calories than you take in. And that gives you a choice: eat less or be more active or both. With few exceptions, gradual weight loss is the ONLY kind that stays with you." How many calories do you need? Dr. Kaman gives a formula. To maintain current weight, multiply your weight by 11.43. Then multiply the answer by 1.3 if you get no exercise, by 1.4 for moderate exercise and by 1.5 for vigorous exercise. To lose weight, take in fewer calories than your final answer. But don't forget nutrition. "You still need a diet of three meals well balanced in the four major food groups," he said.

Don't become another statistic—work safely

American Society of Safety Engineers (ASSE) President Donald J. Eckenfelder announced today that the Society, the largest individual membership society of safety professionals in the country, was sponsoring a National Safety in the Workplace Week, June 20-27, 1982.

"In a country where workplace accidents killed 13,000 and injured 2,200,000 in 1980 according to industry figures. . . National Safety in the Workplace Week is an idea whose time has come," said ASSE President Donald Eckenfelder.

"ASSE is profoundly dedicated to the reduction of workplace accidents through the development of highly skilled safety professionals necessary to achieve such a reduction and we have been so dedicated since our founding in 1911," said Eckenfelder.

"National Safety in the Workplace Week is a time for government, industry, labor, academia and professional safety societies and organizations such as ours to focus our attention on the reduction of death and injury related occupational accidents. . . accidents that cost American Business more than $30 billion in 1980 alone," Eckenfelder said.

"What ASSE hopes to achieve by sponsoring this first annual National Safety in the Workplace Week is the beginning of a renewed awareness of on-the-job safety to further reduce accidents in the American workplace. . . be it in a factory, construction site, office or retail establishments," Eckenfelder said.

Currently, a Senate Joint Resolution sponsored by Senator

William Roth (R-DE) recognizing the week and asking it be proclaimed by President Reagan is expected to be brought before the Senate.

ASSE consists of more than 18,000 members engaged in safety and health management - supervision in industry.

insurance, government, education and as private consultants. The Society has 109 chapters in the United States, and membership includes safety professionals in more than 50 countries.

Mr. Donald J. Eckenfelder is ASSE President; and Ms. Judy Neel is Executive Director.

Cleaning Formica counters

DEAR POLLY — I have problems keeping my Formica countertops clean. They seem to stain so easily — every little spill of fruit juice or sauce leaves its mark. I don't want to scratch them. What is one supposed to use on these counters? — JANET

DEAR JANET — Baking soda makes a good nonabrasive cleaning powder for Formica. Just scour it on with a damp sponge or cloth. Lemon juice is also good for bleaching out some stains. But a good Pointer has just come in from CRIGLER, who writes: "After trying the bathroom spray cleaner (for cleaning basin, tub, and tile) on my stainless steel sink, I had another thought. I have some Formica-top tables that have been a problem. The bathroom cleaner did a fantastic job on those as well." Sounds like an excellent solution. My thanks to Crigler. Hope this helps Janet and all you other readers who are cleaning your Formica today. — POLLY

Poking at Pampa

BY TOM ALLSTON
Staff Writer and Sports Enthusiast

Of all the advantages available to sports-minded Pampans, one of the finest is our unique tennis courts in Central Park.

Like swinging five bats, or distance-swimming in lead underwear, playing on this rugged terrain makes tennis on a FLAT court an absolute piece of cake.

What could be better conditioning than chasing the ball up hill and down dale, leaping the chasms and dodging the undergrowth that flourishes there? To say nothing of the vision training you get playing at night, when the lights — if operational — illuminate only a third or so of each court. You learn to make each eye do the work of two or three.

The courts open whole new realms of strategy. You can aim a serve at the high edge of a crack, giving it a crazy bounce even John McEnroe couldn't handle, or blip a return into a clump of monkey grass, where it will die and roll out, for an automatic point. With practice, you may even be able to blast one INTO one of the small caverns in the court, for an unreturnable maneuver.

One word of caution, though: before retrieving the ball from any of the cracks or stands of vegetation, poke the handle of your racket into it to discourage any critters that might be lurking there. And if it's one of the larger Zones of Unknown, have your partner hold your belt at the back before you go in.

Just in case something should grab you.

Teenage pregnancy -- a growing concern in Texas

"I'm a seventeen year old student and I now have a two month old baby... in my situation and probably in a lot of other pregnant girls, I was not taught about the act of having sex until it was too late," a Houston teenager testified before the Select Committee on Teenage Pregnancy in March. The Select Committee, chaired by Representative Mary Polk, D-El Paso, and composed of several State Legislators and concerned citizens, has been listening to testimony by teenagers, parents and professionals across the State about the problems of premature pregnancy and parenthood.

The problems are grave. Like one Houston teen, most adolescents aren't receiving adequate information on their reproductive biology and the risks and consequences of early sexual activity from either their parents or their teachers. "You learn about sex from your friends, and you wouldn't believe some of the things you hear," a seventeen year old teenage boy from El Paso testified. One of the most commonly held beliefs among teens is that one can't get pregnant if one only has intercourse infrequently.

The unfortunate consequences of misinformation and mistaken beliefs is revealed in the statistics on teenage pregnancy in Texas. Of the over two million teenagers in Texas one half of the boys aged 15-19 and one third of the girls are sexually active. An estimated 49 percent of these teens used a contraceptive method at first intercourse, the most common method being withdrawal. As one educator and parent noted, however, "Withdrawal as a method of contraception is about as effective as dancing in the streets." It is not surprising then that one in nine Texas girls between the ages of 15 and 19 became pregnant in 1980, approximately 92,295. Of these pregnancies, 49,093 resulted in live births, approximately 27,247 of these teens received abortions, and the remainder miscarried. An additional 998 babies were born to Texas mothers under the age of 15.

These young women are not prepared physically, emotionally, or financially for pregnancy and parenthood. Maternal death is 60 percent higher for young teens than for their 20-24 year old counterparts. The risk of congenital malformations, low birth weight, birth injuries and infant death are much more likely among babies born to teenagers. Pregnant teens are seven times more likely to attempt suicide than their non-pregnant peers, and sadly, they are more likely to abuse and neglect their children. While over half of teen mothers are unwed, 95 percent of them choose to keep their babies. Eight out of ten teen mothers never finish high school and 60 percent have another child while they themselves are still school-age. Without high school diplomas or work experience many of these teens end up on the welfare rolls — and will stay there for the rest of their lives. Their children, too, are much more likely to require public assistance and medical services throughout their lives — babies of teenagers fill the neonatal intensive care units and the treatment facilities for physically and mentally handicapped children across the State.

By reducing teenage pregnancy and helping teen parents remain in school until graduation, the cost in human lives and suffering, as well as the State welfare costs, can be reduced. The Texas Department of Human Resources recently completed a study which demonstrated that for every three teenagers seen in their Title XX Family Planning Program, one pregnancy was averted. For every dollar spent on family planning for teens, $2.44 was saved in first year medical and welfare costs alone. It cost approximately 75 dollars to deliver family planning services; a normal delivery costs from 1500 to 2000 dollars and a delivery with complications requiring intensive care for the infant over several weeks can easily cost 10 to 20 thousand dollars. A doctor in Houston testified that it would be less costly for the State to hospitalize teen mothers for the full nine months of their pregnancy and give them good prenatal care than to deliver and care for the sick babies that are born as a result of poor prenatal care young maternal age.

There are a number of people and programs across the State working on solutions to the problems of teenage pregnancy and parenthood. Teenage parent programs, such as one in the Austin Independent School District, have successfully reduced repeat pregnancies and drop-out among school-age mothers. "We're finding that many programs are effective, but their existence is being threatened by Federal budget cuts and hampered by outmoded policies. Public support for these programs and for expanded efforts in this area has been voiced across the State. The people who work with these teens and their babies know that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," Representative Polk said. The Select Committee on Teenage Pregnancy is developing recommendations to introduce in the 1983 Legislative Session so that these efforts to help these teenagers before, during and after pregnancy, will be continued and expanded across the State.

Rolling in the dough

Everybody wants to get into the act of baking for the Community Bazaar to be held at the Pampa Mall Saturday, June 26. Tamra Whitenburg and children, Heath, 3, and Emilia, 5, are baking goodies to benefit the Saint Matthews Episcopal Day School's first grade class. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Two problems solved

DEAR POLLY — I have two problems that I would like your help on. I bought some very good sunglasses. There was a sticker on the corner of one lens. When I removed the sticker, a sticky mess was left. I tried vinegar and a cotton ball with no luck. Can you help?

I was given several five-pound bags of white sugar and it's hard as a rock. Any ideas on how to loosen it? — DONNA

DEAR DONNA — Good news! I have two pointers for your two problems. Sunglasses: Best and safest remedy is to rub the gluey mess with a little vegetable oil and a soft cloth. This usually cleans it right up. Fingernail polish remover would also work if the lenses are glass, but it could damage the finish on the plastic frames.

White sugar: Just put the bags of sugar into the freezer for a few days. This will make the grains free-running. You can use it right out of the freezer. — POLLY

Corporation's scholars are also salesmen

EDITOR'S NOTE — Like other organizations, Rand Corporation misses those federal dollars. But the times are far from lean. The nation's oldest think tank keeps thinking up other projects to occupy its scholars, who nowadays have to be salesmen, too.

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A dozen years ago, at the height of the Vietnam War, a man who had seen two businesses fold under him was offered a job at the Rand Corporation. It was secure and it paid well, but he hesitated.

"I was a peacenik and I didn't like Rand's reputation," he says. "I had the impression it was a place where they were building bombs in the basement."

He finally took the job and sound the nation's oldest think tank much like a university faculty. It certainly wasn't a hawk-only aerie. It has harbored both Herman Kahn, who put Rand on the map 30 years ago by hypothesizing on the winnability of nuclear war, and Daniel Ellsberg, who defected with the Pentagon Papers.

If Rand is still the brains of the military-industrial complex, it's far more diverse today than one co-founder, Gen. Curtis LeMay, ever envisioned when Rand opened as an intellectual adjunct of the U.S. Air Force. Engineers still scrutinize the parabolas of ballistic missiles and strategic thinkers discourse on "Arms Control and Defense Planning in Soviet Strategic Policy," but that's only part of what Rand does. Nearly half the $41.7 million it raised in 1980-81 was for work unrelated to defense. The heaviest concentration of staff is in the social sciences, nearly a quarter of its 500 professionals.

Among the non-defense work Rand is proud of: a study (which outraged Alcoholics Anonymous) suggesting that some alcoholics can resume normal drinking after a period of abstinence; a study of North Sea tides that enabled the Dutch to build eikes in an area previously without them; a study on the city of Cleveland's problems. Rand is changing in the way it's raising money, in part because federal budget cuts are drying up its major source of revenue. Even as Rand increases its non-defense research, the federal funds in that area have decreased — from 85 percent of Rand's domestic budget in 1977 to 60 percent.

One source is state and local government, where Rand is actively pursuing new contracts; another is foundations; a third is private industry, previously off limits because Rand chose to avoid the briar patch of private competition.

The private-fund breakthrough came with creation of the Rand Institute of Civil Justice, which includes 140 corporations among its sponsors. The reasoning was that civil-court improvement, the institute's aim, would benefit everyone.

Rand opened in 1946 as a joint research arm of Douglas Aviation and the U.S. E Force, designed to project warfare techniques into the atomic age. It was called the Research and Development Project — R-A-N-D its acronym.

Two years later, it became an independent nonprofit think tank "to further and promote scientific, educational and charitable purposes, all for the public welfare and security of the United States of AMERICA." Unofficial ties remained with Douglas, from which many Rand employees sprang.

For 20 years, Rand stuck to defense research — in 1967, it was still 90 percent of the work. Rand researchers developed procedures for in-air refueling, a major breakthrough for the Air Force. A 1948 study — a decade before Sputnik — pronounced the feasibility of an earth-orbiting satellite.

Some non-defense notions were less practical. One researcher suggested alleviating California's water shortages by blasting away part of the Antarctic icecap and towing a huge fresh-water ice cube to the California coast. Another proposed a tunnel from Los Angeles to New York with trains to make the trip in 21 minutes.

In Rand's 21st year, 1967, Franklin J. Colbohm, one of the Douglas alumni who founded Rand, was succeeded as president by Henry Rowen, under whose aegis serious non-military research began. The non-defense portion of the workload increased steadily until this year, when there was a small reduction because of federal budget cuts.

Rand is a key stop on an academic-government old-boy network. Take the career of James Schlesinger, former secretary of defense and of energy. Schlesinger quit teaching at the University of Virginia to join Rand in 1963. In 1967 he became Rand's director of strategic studies. In 1969, he left to become assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget and went from there to the Cabinet.

The Rand board exemplifies the business-academic-establishment mix. The current chairman is former Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Members include William T. Coleman, the former secretary of Transportation, Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp; George H. Weyerhaeuser of the Weyerhaeuser Corp.; Wesley P. Cross, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh; Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. A former member is Samuel R. Pierce Jr., secretary of Housing and Urban Development. The Board of Overseers for the Institute for Civil Justice includes former Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart and Leonard Woodcock, former head of the United Auto Workers and U.S. ambassador to China. Former Attorney General Edward H. Levi is an honorary member.

Rand's home is a low-slung complex of corridors about a quarter-mile from the Santa Monica pier. It looks much like a garden apartment complex.

Security guards stand at all entrances. Rand employs 47 security officers. Personnel who work in the "shaded area," about a third of its space, require top-secret clearances. All Rand visitors must be escorted by an employee.

Mail, both incoming and outgoing, is opened and read by Paul Weeks, a former Los Angeles Times reporter who is the chief information officer. He says it's less for security than to allow the free interchange of ideas. "The idea is to let one department know what another department is working on," he says.

The blend of academia, Pentagon-style security and a beachfront setting makes life at Rand a bit strange, even by California standards. At lunch hour, staffers can partake of organized beach volleyball, serious jogging, yoga, and folk dancing, or attend seminars on "Rand-based Robust Analysis of Linear Models"; "Bomber Force Modernization"; "penetration of Soviet Strategic Air Defenses in the 1990s" (clearance needed); and "Japanese Defense Policy Today: Importance of Homeland Defense and Defense Buildup Planning."

One thing it doesn't offer its employees is a chance to get rich. At least not at Rand. Salaries are slightly above the university level. The president, Donald B. Rice, a former official of the Office of Management and Budget, makes $117,000 a year, low by corporate standards. But it is a place to establish a reputation, and at Rand, that takes more than just brainpower.

A Rand researcher is usually as much salesman as scholar. To make it a project leader — even to stay at Rand — the projects he conceives must be alluring enough to generate paying sponsors, particularly now, when Rand's staff is down from 1,084 a year ago to 916.

"The typical scholar in the back room with the door closed is not the kind of person who survives in this environment," says David Lyon, who heads Rand's non-defense research.

"Rand is a jungle. You have to have the soul of a used-car salesman to survive here," says Robert Specht, a mathematician who started at Rand soon after it opened, served in both research and administrative arms and is now a retired consultant.

What Rand often faces are clients happy to let Rand be the bearer of bad tidings.

A look at 'other' Geneva arms control talks

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Once a week, a black Mercedes and three beige Fords bearing Russian diplomats, Red Army officers and faceless bureaucrats ease through the opened iron gates at the Soviet diplomatic mission and proceed in single-file formation down the Avenue de la Paix.

Three minutes later, at the end of the Avenue of Peace, the Soviets emerge with decided haste from their cars for a perfunctory reception. They are met by a handful of Americans waiting at the door of a building that houses U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency offices.

The routine, almost-ritual exchange of handshakes and nodded greetings is the only real public moment in the talks on intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe, talks that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. once said "constitute a special category of East-West relations."

Since they were convened Nov. 30, the negotiations — the harbinger of parallel Strategic Arms Reduction Talks due to open in Geneva June 29 — have been veiled in secrecy. And given the worldwide attention that is certain to be devoted to the opening of START, the talks on intermediate-range forces or INF are likely to recede further into the background.

At the outset of the INF deliberations, the two sides said a news blackout was a prerequisite for progress.

Never have they departed from that agreement to remain tight-lipped in Geneva about the results of their twice-weekly meetings.

The sessions alternate between the Arms Control Agency offices and the Soviet mission compound where there is seldom occasion even to glimpse the negotiating teams.

Chief U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze, who has crafted and criticized American arms control policy since World War II, is known literally to turn his back on reporters asking about the course of the talks.

While staying well within the prescribed limits, Nitze's Soviet counterpart, Yuli Alexandrovich Kvitsinsky, delights in dropping cryptic, one-line hints. Asked once how the negotiation was proceeding, Kvitsinsky smiled and said, "As it should be."

Questioned on another occasion about what he was looking for from the talks, the 45-year-old Soviet, Nitze's junior by 30 years, replied with a smirk: "Success."

Success, however, has proved elusive after more than 30 rounds of arcane bargaining, which is to continue apart from the START negotiation.

Eugene V. Rostow, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said in London in early June that the INF talks "have not succeeded in overcoming, in any respect, the gaps between the two positions."

The differences seem staggering. The Soviets, for example, argue approximate parity prevails in intermediate-range weapons strength; the Reagan administration, however, says the Kremlin holds a 6-to-1 advantage, and possesses weapons for which the West has no match.

The basic U.S. position is essentially to swap its paper missiles for the Soviets' deployed missiles. The offer, commonly called the "zero option," proposes cancelling NATO plans to deploy a new generation of 108 Pershing 2 and 464 ground-launched cruise missiles in western Europe, beginning next year.

The Soviets, in return, would dismantle their imposing arsenal of about 600 SS-series weapons, most fearsome of which are 300 mobile SS-20 systems, each bearing three warheads with a range of 3,100 miles. They can strike targets anywhere in western Europe, as well as points in the middle East.

NATO has no weapon comparable to the SS-20.

The Kremlin has belittled the offer as "absurd," "ill-famed," and tantamount to unilateral disarmament. It insists that the U.S. medium-range bombers and missile-launching submarines assigned to Europe, as well as British and French nuclear strength, must be incorporated before there can be any genuine "zero option" negotiation.

Moscow has proposed mutual reductions in intermediate-range arms to "no more than 300 units" by 1990 and announced a unilateral moratorium on deploying SS-series missiles.

Washington has scorned the proposals as "spurious," arguing they would simply affirm the Soviets' advantage in such weaponry. Nitze — who comments more freely in Washington than in Geneva — said in the capital during a break in the deliberations:

"If the U.S. deployment of intermediate-range missiles is frozen, there will be virtually no incentive for the Soviet Union to give up theirs; they have virtually completed their planned deployment of such missiles in Europe."

In telephone ads, Nebraska is exception

NEW YORK (AP) — You can get a gourmet cooking utensil, a "greatest hits" album, a moving van, a hotel room, a credit check or some advice simply by dialing an 800 number from anywhere ... except in Nebraska.

Ma Bell's toll-free number business has always had its exceptions, and Nebraska is accepted as the most-often excepted.

Need an Avis rental car? Oklahoma is the exception. Want to locate a Porsche Audi dealer? Illinois is the exception. Have a question about Apple computers? California is the exception.

The list goes on. Forty-nine states get one number — the state where operators answer the calls gets another.

And because Nebraska has the highest concentration of 800 numbers, it's the most-often excepted state.

Why so many 800 numbers in Nebraska? About seven years ago, as the use of "800" numbers grew, Northwestern Bell of Omaha launched a campaign to bring reservation centers to its area. It worked. Omaha is home to 1,000 "800" lines and several hundred "800" numbers.

"If it can be sold in a catalog, chances are pretty good that you called here to get it," says Terry Sanford, account manager for Northwestern Bell's 800 operations.

The campaign to make Nebraska home for 800 numbers worked because the state's central location made the rates lower. Also, the accent. Yes, the accent.

"Some say we have a vanilla accent and our speech can be understood by anyone in the country," Sanford explains, understandably. Talk show hosts Johnny Carson and Dick Cavett are exceptional Nebraska products.

The operators may be easily understood, but the advertisements that have to list more than one 800 number may not be. AT&T recently overcame the mechanical quirk and sells an 800 service with one nationwide toll-free number — no exceptions. Until companies change over, there'll be some exceptions, especially for Nebraskans.

An Allied Van Lines driver who's looking for an all-night gas station simply calls one of his company's 800 numbers no matter where he is — unless it's Nebraska.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

You are likely to have a few rocks strewn in your path this coming year, but you'll be able to deal with them and turn negative situations into winners.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take extra pride in your work today and, once you begin a project, finish it with the same enthusiasm as when you started. The experience will be rewarding. Find out more of what lies ahead for you for each season following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you choose to do so today, you'll know how to make all the right moves to switch the spotlight from others back to yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The additional pluses you have going for you in commercial matters today are your hunches and imagination. Put them to profitable use.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a possibility that someone you're fond of could step on your toes today. You'll know how to correct the situation tactfully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This should be a very successful day for you. One of the major reasons: You harbor strong desires to do for others as well as for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The best way to lift your spirits today is to find sincere ways to bolster the sagging psyche of someone who really needs a morale boost.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be disturbed by shifting conditions today. Changes tend to work for your benefit, even though you may see little value in them at first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep in mind today that everything is negotiable. Regardless of what circumstances you're in, begin to bargain for something better. You'll get it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before asking assistance today, make a sincere effort to do what needs doing yourself. Once others see you're trying, they'll pitch in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You are very adroit today at getting situations properly organized. Even when directing others, you'll do so in ways to which they'll want to adhere.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to tackle difficult tasks you've been postponing. Your imaginative touches will make hard chores seem easier.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It will be hard for others to say no to what you have to sell or offer today. Regardless of any objections they might raise, you can overcome them.

Names in the News

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fred Astaire says he never thought "a funny-looking guy like me" could make it in the movies, and adds that much of his success was due to a good producer.

Astaire and 29 other former RKO stars were together again Wednesday for a ceremony marking the donation of the studio's archives to the University of California at Los Angeles.

"I never thought a funny-looking guy like me would be suitable for pictures, and I wondered how I would be able to do the things I had done on the stage," Astaire said. "But Pandro Berman, who produced all those pictures with Ginger, did everything in beautiful taste and hired the best songwriters in the business — Jerome Kern, George Gershwin, Cole Porter."

Ginger Rogers, Astaire's partner in the famed dance duo, also was present.

Another RKO actor was unable to attend but sent this telegram:

"Although I only made two films at RKO, both were enjoyable and memorable experiences. RKO is to be congratulated for sharing its archives with UCLA. Nancy joins me in sending our warmest regards to all. Ronald Reagan."

Cuban-Nicaraguan expatriates aiming to overthrow leftists

By Tom Tiede

SWEETWATER, Fla. (NEA) — The moist young man looks and sounds like any military recruit. He runs through a plain of sawgrass, drops to a watery trench and crawls under a barbed wire fence. Then he fires his weapon. "Bang," he says, grinning. "I got the lousy bastard between the eyes."

He's not just any military recruit, though. He's a counter-revolutionary. He's dressed in fishing boots and a Boy Scout shirt. He wields a World War II rifle that doesn't work very well, and he is preparing in the bowels of an Everglades swamp to battle what he calls "communist expansion."

He's 22. And Nicaraguan. And apparently serious.

"I'm from Managua," he says, in rapid Spanish. "My parents were in business there. Then the communists took over the government and chased us out of the country. Now I want to go back. I want revenge for what happened. I want to be a soldier and kill all of the communists I can."

And he's not alone. Political observers and law enforcement officers estimate that hundreds and perhaps thousands of foreign-born expatriates are presently undergoing counter-revolutionary training in South Florida. Reportedly, there are scores of guerrilla camps in the region.

The training is not really new. Guerrillas have been maneuvering here since Fidel Castro took over Cuba in 1959. But the scope of the activity has grown considerably since then; today the Everglades camps host homesick refugees from at least a half dozen Latin American nations.

The largest of the camps is on the edge of Sweetwater, a few miles inland from Miami. It's called Campo Cuba-Nicaragua, and it runs for 68 acres beyond a newly constructed housing development. The camp commander says more than 800 guerrillas have been trained at the facility.

That figure could be colored. The camp commander has a reputation for exaggeration. He is Jorge Gonzalez, a Cuban car salesman from Hialeah. He is middle-aged, beefy, and he wears a red beret and a United States major's insignia, yet he has never served in any rank in the U.S. Army.

Have you been in any army, Senior Gonzalez?

"I've been a soldier most of my life."

"Not officially. I've been a guerrilla. I started when the communists took over Cuba. I went into the mountains to fight Fidel Castro. I was there at the Bay of Pigs. I did my share. I'm told that Castro personally has given orders to his agents to kill me whenever they can."

Gonzalez' nickname is "Bombillo," Spanish for Lightbulb. He says his friends gave him the name because he has bright ideas. One of the bright ideas, in the 1970s, was to stage a bazooka attack against a Polish freighter in a Miami all dedicated anti-communists here," says Gonzalez. "The idea is to shoot reds. We want to fight them in Cuba, Nicaragua or anywhere else."

harbor; Lightbulb spent four years in prison for it.

And Gonzalez is still flirting with the law. Because the guerrilla camps here (he has three of them altogether) may be illegal, Gonzalez says the purpose of the camps is to train men to overthrow established governments in other nations, and there are provisions in U.S. law forbidding it.

One provision is almost 200 years old: the Neutrality Act of 1794. The act, which has seldom been used, provides prosecution for "whoever, within the United States, begins... or provides a means for... any military or naval expedition" against foreign governments not at war with America.

There are also international agreements against that kind of thing. The United Nations, for instance, has codified a resolution that requests member nations to see that their territories are not used to stage "military operations or serious depredations" against peaceful neighbors.

Cuba has complained often that the United States is ignoring the letter and spirit of both the U.S. agreement and the Neutrality Act. Nicaragua has also lodged formal protests. Paul Reichler, a Washington lawyer who represents Nicaraguan affairs, says the camp violations "are as plain as day."

Yet so far the United States has more or less avoided the condemnations, and, for that matter, the camps as well. The FBI is known to keep dossiers on camp activities, and Gonzalez says agents have visited his property, but otherwise the government pays scant attention to the paramilitary training.

One reason may be that Washington generally condones the camp activities. Because recent administrations have viewed the anti-communist guerrillas as serving U.S. purposes.

Indeed, some camp leaders have suggested that the U.S. government has helped supply and even plan the training operations.

True or not, a spokesman for the Justice Department says the agency is not currently investigating the camps. And he has been quoted as adding that "officially, we are not even aware of any military maneuvers taking place in Florida." The State Department goes along with that position.

And so does Gonzalez the Lightbulb. He insists he's not doing anything wrong. He points out that it's not a crime in America to conduct paramilitary training, and, as for the Neutrality Act, he says he has no control over what the men do with the skills they acquire at Campo Cuba-Nicaragua.

On the other hand, he makes no secret of the camp goals. He says the expatriates are learning how to overthrow leftist regimes in the Americas. "We are all dedicated anti-communists here. The idea is to shoot reds. We want to fight them in Cuba, Nicaragua or anywhere else."

So the camp is open most days for business. And Gonzalez says the training is regimented and professional. He claims he has a cadre of former American, Nicaraguan, Cuban and Haitian military men, and the ranks are filled by young guerrillas from Caribbean and Central American nations.

There are likewise some older folks in the camp. The Lightbulb says 10 or 15 of the trainees are between 60 and 70 years old. "The oldest man we have is 75. He's strong as an ox. We don't expect him to fight, but he can help in other ways. For one thing, the younger boys look up to him."

Whatever their ages, Gonzalez says the guerrillas are patriotic and exemplary people. They are not allowed to have police records, or to drink or use drugs on post. And they are all volunteers; the men are not paid, and they often have to furnish their own food, weapons and uniforms.

That's why the young Nicaraguan mentioned earlier wears a Boy Scout shirt. It's the nearest thing he has to fatigues. Some of the Campo Cuba personnel have been known to march with broomsticks, in lieu of unavailable rifles, and to outfit jeeps with plumbing pipes to resemble howitzers.

But there are no substitutes for the training itself. It can be grueling and realistic. The guerrillas share the swamplands with water moccasins and alligators,

And some of them apparently need it. For Gonzalez says scores of the guerrillas have been sent to Cuba, Honduras and El Salvador to take part in actual combat. He estimates that 200 have been sent to Honduras alone; they are Nicaraguans who fight the Managua regime from border areas.

Gonzalez says the border guerrillas have done an excellent job. But maybe a questionable one too. Some Nicaraguan guerrillas have allegedly taken to firing at guards on both sides of the Honduran-Nicaraguan line; the plan has been to sap Managua by starting a war between the states.

That's what counter-revolutionaries must do, Gonzalez says. Dirty tricks. Therefore instructors at Campo Cuba are said to teach matters ranging from young men.

And they aren't all that easy to find. Gonzalez says he has to reject many recruits who come to his camp. "A lot of them are on drugs, you know. It's sad. I know for a fact that Castro's agents peddle narcotics in this country. He's done his best to ruin the young people in the Americas."

Castro may also be doing his best to ruin Lightbulb. At least that's what Gonzalez maintains. He says Castro sympathizers have tried to infiltrate Campo Cuba on several occasions, and have fired at the place three times. "It doesn't bother me," Gonzalez smiles, "I spit at the man."

Actually, nothing seems to bother the Campo Cuba commander. Not even the widespread charge that he is more of a showboat than a counter-revolutionary. One reliable critic says Campo Cuba is merely the plaything of a "man who has grown fat in the belly but still wants to be macho."

The critic is a Miami-law enforcement official. He says that Lightbulb represents "the 20-year-old lie that Cuban refugees are somehow going to go back to the mainland and retake the island."

Practice of compagnonnage flourishes in French trades

By JEFFREY ULBRICH

Associated Press Writer
MONT-SAINT-AIGNON, France (AP) — It began in the Middle Ages, nearly died from 20th century modernization, and now is flourishing again with new enthusiasm — the system of learning a trade through brotherhood and travel known as compagnonnage.

In compagnonnage, a young man moves from apprentice to master, spending the intervening years on a tour of France. As he travels from city to city, changing about twice a year, he perfects his skills while passing on his newly acquired knowledge to others.

Lingering over a glass of wine with a group of young masons after dinner here, at the compagnonnage house near Rouen in Normandy, discussion turns to the essence of the system.

For these young men, to be a compagnon means more than being a journeyman carpenter or mason. It is a state of mind, a way of life. It means learning a trade not only as a way of earning a living, but as an accomplishment in which great pride is taken.

The Association Ouvriere des Compagnons du Devoir du Tour de France (the Workers Association of Companions of Duty and the Tour of France), which numbers about 3,000 and deals in 17 trades, is open to youths at least 16 years old.

To join up, a young man simply goes to the house nearest him. He is given literature explaining what it is all about and he undergoes a long interview with a prevot, or director. If he is accepted, he enters as an apprentice or after apprenticeship.

At the bottom level, the youth enters one of the 30 compagnonnage houses around France and completes a 15-month apprenticeship where he learns the basics of his chosen trade. Then, if he is accepted by his peers, he is designated an aspirant compagnon and begins his tour of France.

The youth entering at the post-apprenticeship level undergoes a period of observation. If his fellow workers judge him to have the necessary moral qualities and spirit of camaraderie as well as sufficient seriousness about his work, he is designated an aspirant and awarded the traditional cane and scarf.

In the old days, he would set off on foot, cane in hand, tools in a sack on his back, on the first leg of his tour. Nowadays, he is more likely to throw his kit into the back of a car and head out on a national highway.

After acceptance there is usually a private, closed ceremony involving only the members, followed by a public event, usually a dinner with local personalities, employers and supporters.

The closed ceremonies also usually involve a dinner at the compagnonnage house, the singing of compagnon songs, an official welcoming of the new member, aspirant or compagnon, lots of camaraderie and toasts with interlocking arms.

In the case of a new member, he is required to read aloud "The Rule," which sets out the code of conduct in the house. This includes the list of things for which small fines are imposed, like bad table manners, disrespect for the "mere," arriving late for dinner, whistling or reading at the table.

"Above all, make it clear that we are not a secret society," says Francois Masniere, the prevot of the house in Mont-Saint-Aignon. "We retain a lot of tradition and customs from the past, but it is not a secret society."

Present-day compagnonnage derives from the early Masons and worker societies of the past which were forced into secrecy by various government pressures.

Legend has it that compagnons built the Temple of Solomon in Jerusalem, but the first objective traces of them are found in the construction of the great cathedrals in France, says Roger Bonhomme, a 28-year-old auto body worker who is one of the association's five board members.

"It suffered many difficulties throughout its history, was nearly crushed at one time, prohibited at others," says Bonhomme during a talk at the association's headquarters in Paris' scenic 4th District. "It became secret for a while, not in the mystic sense, but when they were of necessity very discreet. Then, in the 18th and 19th centuries, it became very powerful."
