

New mortgage ruling won't hurt Texas realtors

By The Associated Press
Lenders and real estate brokers say a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that federal savings and loans can refuse to let home buyers assume existing mortgages will have little effect in Texas.
"It's still business as we've been doing it," said Tom Heaton, president of the Austin Board of Realtors.
The Supreme Court ruled in a California case Monday that federally chartered savings and loans associations can enforce "due on sale" clauses that require homeowners to repay mortgages when selling their homes.
That prevents buyers from taking advantage of the below-market interest rates they otherwise could assume.

The high court ruling would not affect state-chartered institutions, but a Texas law already allows the clauses.
Hub Bechtol, president of the Texas Board of Realtors, estimated that 90 percent to 95 percent of mortgages in Texas have "due-on-sale" clauses.
State chartered institutions have been using them for ten years, said Alvis Vandygriff, commissioner of the savings and loan department of the Texas Finance Commission.
"It just wasn't practiced too much until interest rates rose above the historic 10 percent usury rate," he said.
"The law in Texas establishes that mortgage lenders could enforce the 'due-on-sale' clause and all this (the ruling) would really do would be to add another arrow to the quiver of a federally chartered savings and loan operating in Texas," said William Livingstone, general counsel for Dallas Federal Savings and Loan.

"This should not hurt sales at all," said John Jenkins Jr., president of the Amarillo Board of Realtors.
"This is something that has been enforced for ... years and the market has been accepting it," he said.
Dallas real estate broker Ebbly Halliday said she was disappointed with the ruling, but understood the lenders' position.

"We're not excited about the ruling," she said. "We realize that if the savings and loans loaded down with 5 and 6 percent loans go out of business there won't be any mortgage money period."
Durward Curlee, executive vice president of the Texas Savings and Loan League, said the ruling will have more effect in California, where a state law conflicts with the federal regulation, than in Texas.
"I don't think it'll have a significant impact on Texas lending and borrowing," he said.
Bob Haynsworth of Surety Federal Savings and Loan in El Paso praised the ruling.

No one held in gun club shooting

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

A Pampa man who was shot at Sunday evening at the local gun range said next time it happens, he's liable to shoot back.

Fred Carothers said the incident occurred about 6 p.m. Sunday at the Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club's range, about four miles west of Pampa.

He said when he went to the range to do some shooting, two men, a woman and an infant were already there, shooting at metallic silhouette targets with a .30-.30 rifle.

Carothers says he knew the caliber of the weapon because he owns a local gun shop, Fred's Inc.

Carothers said the metal targets being shot by the men with the deer rifle were not made for powerful rifles.

He said the targets are for pistol shooting only, and bullets from high-power rifles will punch through the silhouettes and destroy them.

"The club spent $500 replacing damaged targets just last year," Carothers said.

The gun store owner said only members and guests are allowed to shoot at the private range, and shooting targets with improper weapons is cause for ouster from the club.

Carothers said he approached the group and asked them to stop shooting the metal targets with the high-powered firearm.

He said a few angry words were exchanged, and the group then left in a "white over blue Chevy sedan."

The club member said the car was driven to a hill overlooking the range, about a half mile away.

Carothers said as he prepared to take some target practice, he heard a bullet whiz by his head and then heard the report of a gun.

"It was a .22 — I know a .22 when I hear one," he said.

He said he knows the shot came from the group he encountered at the range, because "they were the only ones around."

Carothers said he jumped in his car and followed the Chevy where he observed the group "shooting rabbits from the car."

"I saw a gun barrel come out the window, and they shot a rabbit," he said.

After he copied down the car's license plate numbers, Carothers said he called Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan about the near miss at the range and called game warden Buck Williams about the rabbits.

Jordan said he traced the numbers and questioned two Pampa men about the incident.

The sheriff said after investigation, "no charges will be filed at this time."

The sheriff said he confiscated six rifles, two pistols and a club from the men's car, but he said he later returned the rifles.

"Mr. Carothers could not positively identify who shot at him," Jordan said Monday.

The sheriff said if a shot was fired at Carothers, it was "probably accidental."

Carothers agreed Monday afternoon he could not identify his alleged attacker, but said, "It had to be somebody in that car."

"I don't think they were trying to shoot me — they just wanted to show me they didn't like what I said about the targets," the gun buff said.

Carothers said the next time he goes to the range he plans to be ready to shoot.

"Next time, I will be ready and armed. It's terrible to have to be that way, but I don't like being shot at. I was shot at a few times in World War II, and it's nothing to smile about," he said.

He said if his gun had been ready to fire when the bullet whizzed by his head Sunday, "somebody might have been hurt."

Anatomy of a heroin ring

He sold it like candy from pushcarts

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — The small glassine bags were stamped "Pac-Man," "Snow," "The Whiz" and "Show Down," with seasonal "brand names" like "Super Bowl" available in January and "Valentine" in February.

They were on sale at snow cone stands, ghetto storefronts and from teen-agers on mopeds, part of a delivery fleet that covered the city's poor east side and made a fortune, police say, for Maurice "Peanut" King.

The 28-year-old King, a former longshoreman, never finished the seventh grade but for two years managed to direct what authorities estimate was a $75 million a year heroin ring that employed over 100 people.

"Peanut just had the opportunity and ability and he took off like a rocket," said Sgt. Gary Childs, who oversaw a nine-month undercover investigation that finally broke up the ring early this month. "It was just a good business thing. If you had $70, you'd buy his dope because it was the best value."

Authorities dubbed it the "Peanut King Organization" and say its members were responsible for the murders of at least four people, including a teen-age mother caught in the middle of a gun battle.

The profits provided King with expensive clothing, jewelry, trips to gambling casinos in Atlantic City and a stainless steel DeLorean purchased for $25,000 cash.

It all came to an end during a series of raids June 4, when police seized $6.5 million worth of heroin, more than $300,000 in cash, $300,000 in jewelry, six fur coats and a cache of high-powered handguns and rifles. King was arrested three days later on a charge of distributing heroin.

In a recent interview at the Baltimore City Jail, the soft-spoken King, clad in an expensive athletic suit, new running shoes, solid gold watch and gold necklace, denied making money from "selling heroin."

He said "the bulk" of the $53,000 he amassed to open two grocery stores were from gambling winnings. He said he would go to Atlantic City "just about every other week," sitting for long hours at the baccarat and blackjack tables.

"When I was small, we played a lot of games to pass time," he said. "Basically I learned how to gamble."

King formed two legal corporations with two other men to operate the two small supermarkets. The recently renovated stores stand in marked contrast to their surrounding neighborhoods.

Above one of the stores, police said, was the ring's headquarters, containing a board room, separate offices for each of the three corporation officials and a room housing a computer for records. It was protected by electronic locks, bullet-proof glass and closed circuit cameras.

Above the other was a mirrored gymnasium containing weightlifting equipment, a sauna and a whirlpool bath.

King was a product of east Baltimore, among the city's roughest black neighborhoods. He grew up in a small, two-story row house, the fourth of five children. His father left home when Maurice was 5 years old.

His first encounter with the law was at age 12 when he was arrested on an assault charge. Since then, he has been arrested at least 24 times, on charges ranging from driving on a revoked license to shoplifting to homicide.

The first time King was charged with possession of heroin was in 1979. He was acquitted, but found guilty of violating probation in the same case and ordered to pay a $100 fine and court costs, according to the court papers.

At that time, King and Clarence Meredith, one of those indicted and still at large, opened a snow cone stand on an east Baltimore street corner, said assistant state's attorney Mark Cohen. Not only was fruit-flavored crushed ice sold over the counter. So was heroin, supplied by one of the city's major dealers who was later killed.

Police believe King established his heroin connection as a result of that still unsolved murder.

Gradually, police say, King took over heroin distribution points in his old neighborhood and amassed enough capital to establish his elaborate organization.

According to authorities, the organization employed youngsters between ages 15 and 18 as heroin delivery boys. The youths were paid as much as $500 a week and made their deliveries on mopeds to elude police down back alleys.

The ring owned between 20 and 25 mopeds, each purchased for about $950, police say.

"They always used kids, that was Peanut's trick," said Childs. He let them hold the dope "to insulate the leaders and because if arrested, high bails are seldom set for juveniles."

King still insists he is innocent. "I think I was set up," King said. "It's election time. They're just trying to put it on somebody."

Lt. Joseph Newman of the police narcotics squad says "the effects (of the busts) on the drug traffic have been dramatic."

"It's the first time we were able to take out an entire organization and have an effect on the supply of heroin."

47 may be killed over the weekend of the 4th

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Public Safety has estimated that about 47 people may die in traffic accidents during this July 4th weekend — unless drivers are careful.

The risk of traffic accidents will increase during the 78-hour holiday period because of more traffic on streets and highways.

A DPS official said alcohol, excessive speed, and failure to use seat belts are the major contributing factors in traffic deaths.

Sixty-three Texans were killed in accidents in last year's 4th of July weekend. Of those fatalities, 25 involved driving while intoxicated.

Another 59 people were injured on last year's holiday weekend.

The DPS said more of last year's deaths may have involved drinking and driving, but officials are uncertain about how many, because state law does not require blood alcohol samples from accident victims.

During this year's holiday period, additional troopers will be assigned to heavy-traffic areas, and many municipal police and county sheriff's officers will work local traffic safety programs.

Traffic fatalities will be counted in the DPS Operation Motorcade, a tabulation period beginning at 6 p.m. Friday and ending at Monday, July 5.

The DPS will tabulate traffic death totals in the state three times daily, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Quickie Mexican divorces illegal

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The state attorney general's office has filed suit to stop an Austin man from offering "one-day" Mexican divorces.

Gary Falkenberg of Austin took out classified newspaper ads in Dallas, Houston, Austin and other cities from May 22 to June 20, promoting one-day divorce service with "no 60-day waiting period."

Assistant Attorney General Patricia Robards of McAllen said the different states of Mexico all have residency requirements for divorce cases and that the documents Falkenberg promised to provide clients could not be legal.

Was new prince named for rock radio station ...?

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — WAPL-FM program director Wayne Shane says it was awfully nice of the Prince and Princess of Wales to remember his all-rock music station.

He has sent the royal couple a letter of thanks for naming their newborn child after the station. The youngest heir to the British Throne on Monday was named William Arthur Philip Louis — the same initials as the rock 'n' roll station.

In honor of the naming, Shane sent the little prince a "WAPL Hot Rocker" T-Shirt, a WAPL hat and a WAPL bumper sticker for Prince William's pram.

In his letter, Shane thanked Prince Charles and Princess Diana for naming their boy after "the greatest rock and roll station in America."

Hinckley speaks: 'I'm not out on the street'

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. denies that he "beat the rap" last week when a jury found him innocent by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan, according to a published report.

In a copyright story in The Washington Post today, Hinckley said he believes he was insane when he shot

Reagan and three others and emphatically denied that he "beat the rap," as one newspaper headline had said.

"I'm not walking out on the street. I'm in a hospital with bars on it...They act like I'm out free....It's not that way at all," Hinckley said.

Hinckley said he was shocked by the jury's verdict — that he was so sure he would be convicted that he had prepared a four-page speech to read in court the day he thought he would be sentenced, the Post reported.

"I respect them (the jurors) now a lot for just saying, 'To hell with what the public said, we think he's not guilty,'" Hinckley said during three telephone interviews Saturday and Sunday from St. Elizabeths Hospital for the mentally ill, where he is confined.

Post reporter Laura A. Kiernan obtained the interview because Hinckley called her at the newspaper from the hospital. Hinckley's chief defense lawyer, Vincent J. Fuller, said Monday that the calls were made without the knowledge of Hinckley's attorneys.

"In what were his first comments to the news media since his arrest immediately after the shooting March 30, 1981, Hinckley also said he likes the hospital."

"I like it here so far. Nobody bothers me.... They call me Mr. Hinckley," he said. He said that when he arrived at the hospital last Tuesday people began asking for his autograph.

Hinckley was found innocent of the shootings by reason of insanity June 21. Doctors at St. Elizabeths must submit a report on his mental condition to the court by Aug. 2 and U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker has scheduled a hearing Aug. 9 to determine whether Hinckley is entitled to release from the hospital because he is no longer a danger to himself or others.

Asked if he thought he was ready to be released from the hospital, Hinckley, hesitated, then said: "That's a hard question.... I certainly would not be a danger to myself and I don't honestly think I've been a danger to society.... I certainly would not be a danger to the president, I'll say that for sure."

He said he thought there might be a problem with one person.

"I don't know if you've ever heard of her," he said, naming actress Jodie Foster. "I don't think there would be a problem. I don't think I would go stalking after her.... If we were in the same room, there might be some problem," he said.

He said that he has in his hospital room a picture of her taken from a magazine.

The 27-year-old presidential assailant said he feels sorry for Brady, whose wound to the brain has left him permanently disabled.

"He's suffered and his life is not what it should be.... I just want to say I'm very sorry about what I did. He was just at the wrong place at the wrong time.... and I just wish, I just honestly wish I could go back before that shooting.... and let him move two inches out of the way," Hinckley said.

The other men have recovered from their wounds.

Hinckley told the Post he did not feel sorry for them and that he thought the shooting helped Reagan's popularity.

Hinckley read the Post reporter the first two paragraphs of the speech he said he was prepared to give upon his sentencing:

"From the start all I wanted was for someone to love me. I desperately wanted to be loved but I never could give ### they call me Mr. Hinckley'

appropriate love in return. I seem to have a need to hurt those people I love the most. This is true in relation to my family and Jodie Foster. I love them so much that I have this compulsion to destroy them.

"On March 30, 1981, I was asking to be loved. I was asking my family to take me back and I was asking Jodie Foster to hold me in her heart. My assassination attempt was an act of love. I'm sorry love has to be so painful."

Reagan will sign voting rights extension legislation today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has invited some of the nation's best-known civil rights leaders to a ceremony today at which President Reagan is going to sign into law a bill renewing the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The bill, designed to guarantee free access to the polls for millions of minority voters, most directly affects nine states and portions of 13 others which are required to obtain federal approval when changing election laws.

Besides civil rights leaders, key members of Congress have also been asked to the signing ceremony.

Among those expected to attend is Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, who said as recently as Sunday that he hopes to return Reagan to "the purple hills of California."

A White House spokeswoman said National Urban League President John Jacob, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and several other prominent civil rights activists — many of whom have been critical of Reagan's policies — also had indicated they would accept their invitations.

Reagan's record on the voting rights extension was unclear for much of the year-long battle that culminated in passage of a compromise extending key provisions of the law, viewed at the most successful civil rights measure of the 1960s.

Early on, the president said he would sign whatever bill the Congress sent to him. But as conservatives inside and outside the administration expressed their opposition, Reagan threw his support to an alternative proposal without the enforcement clause that gave the old law its teeth.

Later, after the House had passed one version and it became clear a big majority in the Senate favored for a similar bill, Reagan endorsed the Senate compromise. Final passage, which came on an 85-8 vote in the Republican-controlled Senate, was delayed by a week-long filibuster staged by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The new law extends with some modification the enforcement provisions of the 1965 act, which would have expired in August had Congress not reached agreement.

It continues to require 22 states to get "preclearance" of election law changes, the most common of which involve redrawing district lines for local, state and congressional races. The purpose of requiring Justice Department to review proposed changes is to prevent state or local officials from limiting the number of

Mystery plant identified

The photograph of Mrs. G.F. Morris's "mystery plant" in Monday's Pampa News brought swift results.

Less than two hours after the paper "hit the streets", the plant was identified.

According to Alta Mitchell, who has four of them in her yard, the plant is mullein, which was used as an Indian home remedy plant. Mrs. Mitchell said the leaves of the mullein can be made into a poultice and applied to sprains, or the leaves can be brewed into a refreshing tea.

Mrs. Morris said she received seven phone calls during the course of the afternoon, each one identifying her plant as mullein (pronounced mullin) and one woman caller said her husband was Indian and said the plants leaves could be cured and smoked, and the plant was known as "Indian tobacco".

Police arrest two on drug violations

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Two Pampa men have been arrested by Pampa police and charged with possession of methamphetamine, of "speed."

Police say officer Danny Lance received enough information Saturday night to obtain a warrant to search a Pampa home for drugs.

About 10:15 p.m. Saturday, officers Lance, King, Wopper and Laramore searched the house at 1109 Juniper.

Police said they confiscated a "large amount" of "white powder," and officers said a field test on the substance indicated it was methamphetamine.

Police said they also confiscated an undisclosed amount of "several pills" of unknown type or origin and an undisclosed amount of "suspected marijuana."

Joseph Clyde Barber, 18, 1109 Juniper, and Tony Lee Horton, 21, 320 N. Davis, both were arrested at the scene of the search.

The men were charged by formal complaints from Pampa Assistant District Attorney Joe Hendley.

The men were each arraigned on a single charge of possession of methamphetamine, a felony, by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge, who set bond at $20,000.

New handgun ban may be unconstitutional

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco has become the largest city in the nation to pass a ban on possession of handguns, but the district attorney says he won't enforce the law until it passes a court test.

Mayor Dianne Feinstein signed legislation Monday making it a misdemeanor to have a handgun in this city of 650,000 people, saying it would "help us make our streets and homes...safe for everyone."

But District Attorney Arlo Smith said he wouldn't file charges in connection with the law until there has been a "constitutional determination" of its validity by the courts.

Smith said he believed "the ordinance is pre-empted by state law and it is invalid."

The Board of Supervisors voted 6-4 on Monday in favor of the ban, which has a 90-day grace period before becoming law in order to give people time to dispose of their weapons.

Ms. Feinstein, who proposed the legislation in February, predicted Smith would enforce the law because "that's what he's elected to do. Or the district attorney will go out and tell the citizens of San Francisco next year

If you catch Mal D'Espare, you can't lean over the railing ...

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Your fluid levels drop, your legs shrink. Some of your muscles start wasting away. You may become irritable and jealous of those around you.

You're not sick, you're just in space. Spaceflight does weird things to the human mind and body, and medical scientists don't really know why or exactly what to do about it.

Emotionally, space travelers "internalize" among themselves, but then take out their anger with the ground. They don't complain to each other about minor irritations. But they will grouse at Mission Control, spewing out their frustrations to the engineers who are safe back on Earth.

The best-known physical malady in space is motion sickness. Athletic test pilots who easily withstand the violent twisting and turning of jet flight often become pale, shaky and nauseated in orbit, but it usually ends after a day or so.

On Monday, pilot Henry Hartsfield reported that a queasy stomach and occasional headache bothered him during his first two days aboard Columbia. Doctors prescribed two aspirin, a motion sickness pill, and a good night's sleep.

The prognosis for Hartsfield's quick recovery was good, but specialists at the Johnson Space Center believe much research must be done on some more serious physical problems before voyages lasting many months or years are attempted. These include a decline in heart activity and a loss of calcium.

Jerry Homick, a doctor of psychology and a specialist in the effects of space flight, said the Russians have proven that voyages of 185 days are possible without serious harm.

"They've shown that with appropriate countermeasures, a healthy individual can tolerate six months in weightlessness," said Homick. But the cumulative effects of more than half a year in space, he said, remain a mystery.

Soviet officials, in a news conference last year, said they had no plans for flights longer than six months because experience showed that the efficiency of the cosmonauts declined. Exhaustion sets in, explained one cosmonaut, after about four months.

The exhaustion may stem from the slow deconditioning of the cardiovascular system. Once the human body arrives in weightlessness, the heart stops working as hard as it does in the gravity of Earth. The circulation system loses efficiency and hard physical work becomes more difficult.

In the three U.S. Skylab missions, which lasted up to 84 days, the astronauts exercised vigorously to maintain good heart conditioning. But Homick said even this countermeasure was not totally successful.

"Exercise slowed the deconditioning, but never stopped it completely," said Homick.

The danger is that the heart would become so weak that astronauts would not be able to withstand the stress of returning to the full gravity of Earth.

Another serious problem is the loss of calcium from bones. Homick said astronauts experienced this throughout Skylab and countermeasures that were tried never worked.

"There was no indication in the Skylab studies that the loss of calcium would level off and stop," said Homick. Eventually, he said, bones could become brittle and easily broken.

Solutions to both the heart deconditioning and calcium loss problems must be found before astronauts could attempt interplanetary travel. Voyages to Mars, for instance, could take three years, well beyond the known safe limit for space travel.

Questions must also be answered about the social "mix" of crews on long term voyages.

"Poor social interaction on long duration spaceflights could create all sorts of problems," said Homick.

For instance, he said, it could be dangerous on a crew of 10 or 12 to include too many people with strong, natural leadership impulses. This could lead to serious dissent with several persons battling for dominance.

Particular care would have to be taken in the selection of a sexually mixed crew for very long missions, he noted.

"If you have both sexes on a large flight crew," said Homick, "the traditional wisdom is that you don't want the women in a small minority."

A disproportionate ratio of the sexes, he said, could lead to struggles by males competing for the favor or attention of the women.

Europe trade chiefs blast U.S. policy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The leaders of the European Common Market strongly criticized the United States today, saying its trade policies seriously endanger free world trade.

The 10 government chiefs, concluding a two-day meeting, also condemned the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and called for immediate, simultaneous withdrawal of Israeli and Palestinian armed forces from west Beirut. They also called for a "complete and prompt" Israeli pullout from Lebanon.

The issues of the Mideast and U.S. trade policies dominated the summit, bringing tough bargaining and repeated redrafting.

A harsh preliminary draft on U.S. policies was considerably softened after British intervention.

One section eliminated from the draft was a warning that U.S. trade policies could seriously deteriorate political and economic relations with Western Europe.

The Europeans are angered by recent decisions of the Reagan administration to try to prohibit European companies from using American technology for the Soviet-West Europe gas pipeline, to curb imports of European steel, and to contest Europe's joint agricultural policy.

Free trade would be endangered by "unilateral and retroactive decisions on international trade, attempts to exercise extraterritorial legal powers, and measures which prevent the fulfillment of existing trade contacts," the final communique said.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher left the meeting early, but her foreign secretary, Francis Pym, had the original language considerably softened.

Car fees are up $3.50

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

Texas car owners will pay an extra $3.50 per vehicle in auto registration fees beginning Wednesday.

The rise in fees applies only to passenger cars, and fees for such vehicles are adjusted according to weight.

Fees for smaller cars, under 3,500 pounds, will rise from $12.30 to $15.80; for mid-size cars, 3,500 to 4,500 pounds, from $22.30 to $25.80; and for large cars, over 4,500 pounds, from $30.30 to $33.80.

Fees for other classifications of vehicles, including pickups, trailers, trucks, motorcycles and commercial vehicles, will remain the same.

Money from the fee increase will go to counties in the state, and will be used in road and bridge maintenance funding.

The increase was approved in Senate Bill 150 in the last legislative session, which allowed counties with 500 miles of roads or more mileage to increase their total yearly road and bridge funds.

The fund limit will double as of July 1, from a maximum of $175,000 to a maximum of $350,000 in money retained by the counties for such projects.

Most of the counties in the Panhandle, including Gray County, qualify for this raise in the limit.

Delton Ross of the regional tax assessor's office said the limit was at $175,000 for years, and increases in construction costs necessitated the increases in fees.

Judge selection called 'Russian roulette'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With up to 80 candidates to choose from on some ballots, Texas voters are doing nothing more than playing "Russian roulette" when they choose judges, a special committee on the subject has been told.

But the Select Committee on Judicial Selection was also told Monday at its first public hearing that eliminating elections would closet judges away from their public.

Forrest Smith, a Dallas attorney and a member of the Committee for a Qualified Judiciary, said "embedded political leaders" are the only ones who favor keeping judges beholden to party politics.

"We are playing 'Russian roulette' with our judicial system," he said. "Qualifications are becoming secondary to how (a candidate) spells his name."

Smith did not advocate any particular system, but said virtually any change "would be better than the status quo," which was defended, with some qualifications, by Dallas attorney Otto Mullinax.

"We must insist that (judges) play their constitutional role to the full and account to us, not to a governor or a selection commission," Mullinax said. "We demand as a right that our judges account to us, the voters, by seeking our approval to office."

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, chairs the 13-member panel which was appointed by House Speaker Bill Clayton. He said the committee will consider changes in the process ranging from simple "fine-tuning," like adding the notation "incumbent" by appropriate names on the ballot, to wholesale dissolution of judicial elections in favor of a merit system.

Currently, only 10 states, including Texas, choose judges through partisan elections. A dozen hold non-partisan elections to fill judicial slots, three give the choice to their governors and three more leave the choosing of judges to the state legislature.

Ten states use a merit commission system, known as the "Missouri plan," under which a panel chooses a slate of candidates from which the governor selects a judge.

The rest of the states use different systems at different judgeship levels.

Mullinax said politics is inevitable and judges should get closer, not more removed, from their constituents.

"To assert that the judge who gets his job by governor appointment or commission selection under the Missouri plan does not measure to a yardstick of politics is to confound reason and misstate fact," he said. He suggested state district judges run from single-member districts.

Such a plan, Mullinax argued, would open up judgeships to minorities and other underrepresented groups, and bring judges closer to a smaller constituency.

"Of the 36 district court judges in Dallas County, 28 live in the seven wealthy postal areas north of Mockingbird Lane," he said. "None live in a black, brown or lower-middle class area."

Good news-bad news day in space shuttle

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — There was a big hit and a big miss in major science experiments during the space shuttle's second day in orbit.

A machine that experts believe may revolutionize production of some types of medical compounds worked exactly as planned during a high-flow experiment. The device, called the Continuous Flow Electrophoresis System, produced several batches of compounds without an apparent flaw, officials said.

Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield again were unable to turn on an experiment package that is housed in a 2-foot-high canister in the cargo bay. The experiments are activated through a single control module, which has failed to work for two days, threatening disappointment for nine Utah college students who designed the project.

Hartsfield operated the electrophoresis system for more than six hours Monday and reported that a stream of raw biological material was processed smoothly.

The experiment uses electrical current to separate compounds, such as hormones or enzymes, from naturally occurring biological sources, such as urine. The process is used on Earth, but experts believe it will be several hundred times more efficient in the weightlessness of space.

James Rose, project manager for McDonnell Douglas, which cosponsors the test project, said he was "very, very pleased" with the test run.

"It ran for six hours and 51 minutes with high concentrations which can't be used on Earth. They were run and flowing nicely," said Rose.

McDonnell Douglas and its partner in the project, Ortho Pharmaceuticals, hope to prove that electrophoresis can be used in space to create superpure hormones or enzymes that are valuable in treating disease. The firms decline to reveal what compounds were tested Monday, but it's known that the growth hormone and a compound called urokinase were being considered. Urokinase is a powerful compound used to dissolve blood clots.

If the manufacturing process is successful, the two companies plan to orbit a factory satellite that would continuously make the medical compounds.

As for the cranky student experiment package, engineers prepared a 30-minute repair procedure which the astronauts will try today.

The experiment package is the first of what the space agency calls a Get Away Special. Such experiments are carried on the shuttle for private customers who pay about $10,000.

The space was donated to Utah State University and nine students worked two years to design and build experiments for the project. Their package, which once activated works automatically, includes tests of the effects of zero gravity on the growth of plants, shrimp and fruit flies, and on the flow of liquid metals and epoxy compounds.

Tyler chief is suspended with pay

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Willie Hardy says he will appeal his suspension with pay, but the man who pulled Hardy off the job said he will try to have the chief fired.

City Manager Ed Wagoner said he would present to the City Council his case against the man who directed the department through a series of controversies dating back to a bungled 1979 drug investigation.

"While I continue to have faith in Hardy's personal integrity and character, it is apparent to me he cannot effectively provide leadership and administrative ability that is necessary to continue as head of the police department at this time," Wagoner said.

"Within the next several days I will prepare and deliver to city council the reasons for my action as required by the city charter," said Wagoner, who declined to say if a specific incident prompted the suspension.

Hardy declined to comment on his suspension, but said he would be represented by his attorney, Rex Houston, before the City Council.

"I have regretfully taken this action after Hardy declined to accept another position within city government and declined to resign," Wagoner said during a Monday afternoon news conference.

He said it was not related to Hardy's suspension of two officers after an investigation into allegations they used excessive force when arresting a burglary suspect.

The city manager also denied the suspension was related to a petition calling for the city council to fire Wagoner because of his handling of the police department.

Ed Holley, a Tyler security officer and critic of Hardy, has said he hopes to get 2,000 signatures on the petition to fire Wagoner.

Mayor Norman Shtofman said Hardy had been asked to resign before Holley began circulating the petition, and Shtofman and Councilman Glenn Taylor both said they supported Wagoner's decision.

"I think it's something that's been brewing for 60 to 90 days... we've had some trying times with the police department," said Taylor. The councilman said the suspension was caused by "discord and discontent" within the department.

"Basically we've got a lot of good men on that force. Maybe Mr. Hardy's effectiveness ran out and it was time for a change," he said.

Shtofman said he expected the council to discuss the suspension at a meeting Friday.

"To the best of my knowledge, Wagoner has the full support of the city council as city manager and overwhelming support of the council in the action he's taken today," Shtofman said.

"It (Hardy's suspension) was a matter of a lack of total community support, a lack of support of his officers, and also a lack of support from the people with whom he works other than the officers. That's no reflection in him individually," said Shtofman.

Wagoner said that assistant chief Leo Britton had been named acting chief. Britton served as acting chief last December after Hardy was indicted on federal perjury and conspiracy charges stemming from a drug roundup in 1978 and 1979. Hardy was acquitted on all charges.

More than 100 drug charges were thrown out of court when it was revealed that two undercover agents had attempted to frame Tyler nightclub owner Kenneth Bora.

In the police department's most recent controversy, Hardy suspended officers Oren Hale and Dan Ross on June 16.

Flying eye hospital back at home

HOUSTON (AP) — Lynn Stark spent three months working as a nurse aboard Project Orbis, a flying eye hospital to teach Third World doctors new operating techniques.

But her fondest memory was of a little girl in Quito, Ecuador, who couldn't see a large white paper dropped on the floor, Ms. Stark said.

"When we unpatched her, we held a piece of orange candy up. She just grabbed it," Ms. Stark said of the girl, who underwent a cornea transplant. "She went right to it. It was great."

Project Orbis, a DC-8 carrying the "finest equipment available," recently returned to its home here after its maiden tour — a seven-city, five-nation mission to Latin America and the Caribbean.

The idea behind the project is simple, Ms. Stark explained Monday. It is a classroom that goes to the students, who are practicing ophthalmologists.

But she said Orbis had an impact beyond its instructional value, noting that legislation was passed in Lima, Peru, after the plane's visit to allow people to donate corneas for transplant operations.

She said instructors, who volunteer their time to the project, are careful to teach students surgical methods that can be performed with the technology available in the country.

"We never teach them things that they can't use when we leave," she said.

The equipment aboard the plane is donated by companies or paid for through gifts from private citizens, Ms. Stark said.

Students can watch operations on a screen in an 18-seat classroom in the front of the plane, or pictures can be sent by a microway signal from the operation site with more seating.

"We have cameras hooked right into the microscope," she said. "We have translators and the doctor wear earphones — the students can talk to the surgeon and ask his questions while he working."

HOUSTON (AP) — A house fire in northwest Houston killed four members of a family and seriously injured a fifth early today.

A woman in her mid-30s and three children died in the blaze, fire department officials said. A man was in critical condition at Hermann Hospital with severe burns.

A spokesman with the medical examiner's office said the victims' names were being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Arson investigators said the fire started about 12:30 a.m. in the master bedroom of the one-story residence. They said the cause of the blaze remained under investigation.

The woman and an 8-year-old boy were dead at the scene, officials said. A 6-year-old boy and a 4-year-old girl were pronounced dead shortly after their arrival at Spring Branch Memorial Hospital.

Dallas youths discover treasure in beer can

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — Alona Gilbert feared she would never find the $10,000 in jewelry hidden in a fake beer can and mistakenly left on a Gulf Coast beach.

Two 10-year-old Dallas boys never dreamed about the treasure they would find stuffed in the beer can they so casually tossed into the surf.

J.J. Huff and Matt Franklin found the tiny safe Saturday as they frolicked on the beach.

The tossed it around and threw it into the surf over and over again and watched it float back to shore. They threw it in the air and then saw it hit the beach, break open and reveal the concealed riches — about $10,000 in jewelry and three $20 bills.

Mrs. Gilbert and her husband, Grover, thought the camouflaged safe was a defective beer can when the pop top broke off Friday night. She didn't know her husband had inadvertently included it with the beer he took from the refrigerator — the place she thought a clever repository for her jewelry.

By the time she discovered the mistake at her Austin home Monday, she was convinced it was too late.

However, by then the boys had turned the treasure over to their parents, who, in turn, gave it to police, said detective Sgt. Charles Titus.

Mrs. Gilbert called the Port Aransas police Monday, looking for the place where the city dump discarded beer cans.

She was willing, she told the police dispatcher, to search the whole stretch of beach for the beer-can safe.

"I wanted to go down there and pick through every beer can at the place," she said.

But Titus overheard her conversation with the dispatcher and got on the phone.

He didn't tell her, he said, that police already had the can because he wanted to make sure she could identify the jewelry. She mentioned every piece but didn't mention the cash.

"You forgot about the three $20 bills," her told her. "I didn't catch on at first."

He then told her the jewelry was safe, thanks to J.J. and Matt, who were staying at the same condominium.

"I'm certainly going to reward them," said Mrs. Gilbert, so far she has had less luck finding the boys than they finding her jewels.

OPINION PAGE

Silenced voices are mute testimony

The 700,000 Demonstrators who gathered in New York City's Central Park recently to protest the nuclear arms race and to urge disarmament can be certain that their voices were heard in Washington.

The Reagan administration, even before the demonstration, reaffirmed its commitment to arms control and to negotiating with the Soviet Union, despite its perfectly justified suspicions of Soviet intentions.

But what of the Soviet leaders? Are they under any comparable public pressure to beat nuclear swords into plowshares, or to agree to arms control treaties that are both equitable and fully verifiable?

The answer, of course, is no. Those who doubt this need only reflect on the pitiful echo in Moscow of that mammoth demonstration in New York City.

While 700,000 Americans in Central Park were chanting their opposition to nuclear weapons, Soviet KGB agents were busy rounding up six of the 11 Muscovites brave enough to suggest that the Kremlin cut back on its own arms building.

Subsequently, the remaining five members of the newly formed Soviet peace group were detained and interrogated by the KGB. And all have been warned on penalty of future arrest and prosecution to cease their "anti-Soviet" activity.

The bullying of peace activists in Moscow lends a distinctly hollow ring to the pious posturing this week of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in his speech to the United Nations Special Session on Disarmament. It also suggests the potential dangers of negotiating agreements with a totalitarian state all but immune to the domestic political pressures that propel the Western democracies towards arms control concessions.

A bad solution to spy problem

President Reagan soon will sign the Intelligence Identities Protection Act. The legislation decrees, among other things, that information in the public domain may not be publicly repeated. It is unprecedented, undesirable and almost certainly unconstitutional.

The act makes it a crime for newspapers, authors or anyone else to publish the name of an intelligence agent — even one who is breaking the law. It sets penalties for such disclosure even when the information comes from public records. And it makes little distinction between the malicious exposure of agent identity and legitimate public scrutiny of government operations: Anyone could be jailed for identifying an agent, so long as there is "reason to believe" that doing so would impede U.S. intelligence activities. That means that citizens who discover intelligence corruption or ineptitude could write about it only at great risk.

The president insists that criminal penalties for disclosing the names of U.S. spies are "the cornerstone for the improvement of our intelligence capabilities." He has a point: The campaign to protect spies is spurred by anger over the behavior of Philip Agee, a former CIA agent who has written books attacking the agency — and by the 1975 murder of CIA officer Richard Welch in Athens after his name was published in an American magazine hostile to the CIA.

The consternation is understandable, but this legislation is a bad solution. However despicable the deliberate exposure of intelligence agents, it is unconstitutional to punish citizens for reprinting information from public documents. But that's what the Agent Identities Act will do. Such a law violates constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press. The American Civil Liberties Union promises to take the government to court. That is the right thing to do, because the Agent Identities Act should be overturned.

Stockman story causing wonder

A short editorial in the Wall Street Journal shook up the nation's budget director. David Stockman, just as it should have shaken U.S. taxpayers.

Picking up on an item by the Baltimore Sun's able capital reporter, Fred Barnes, the Journal wondered why, in the midst of the recent fiscal frolicking in the House of Representatives, the big spenders were egged on by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget.

Seems that on the House floor, the rumor was going around that the budget resolution offered on behalf of President Reagan by Del Latta, R-Ohio, would impose a deficit ceiling so low to allow for politically popular mortgage subsidy increases.

In steps OMB with a notice that because Treasury revenue is running higher than expected this year something the budget office was overlooking recently because it would have lessened pressure for tax increases to try to narrow the deficit) the mortgage subsidy could still be permitted under Latta. Talk about fuel for fire!

for more spending? In the wake of the Journal's editorial, Stockman's people are saying that the boss never saw the offending memo, that underlings shouldn't have sent it in a misguided attempt to aid Latta, and that Stockman has been leading the push to have Reagan veto the mortgage madness and was unfairly characterized.

Well, Stockman's longstanding pressure for higher taxes (undemied) has not let anyone forget the Atlantic confessional, and this latest apparent backsliding seemed to be the proverbial last straw for the Reaganomics - oriented Journal. Though we've chosen to see Stockman's sins in the light of a rather admirable recent past in the Congress, we, too, are near our limit.

The explanations offered for Stockman suffice only to a degree. It's reasonable to conclude that OMB staffers, 1 1/2 years into the administration, know where their chief stands and act accordingly. If they aren't doing that, then we have an administrative breakdown there. If they are, Mr. Reagan has a more serious problem, and the time has come to deal with it.

By DON GRAFF
The good news about Arab - Israeli wars is that they are so brief. Little more than a week after beginning their drive into Lebanon the Israelis had accomplished all their major objectives. Possibly more.

Not only in Jerusalem, but in Washington and even Beirut, the glimmerings of golden opportunities are beginning to be seen.

In one bold stroke, Israel appears to have succeeded in sanitizing its northern border of the Palestinian infection, outflanked the Syrians and shaken if not shattered the PLO leadership.

For the shadow Lebanese government, there is the possibility of exercising something like real authority over at least a portion of the national territory. It would be on sufferance of the Israelis, but at this point that has to look better than what the government has suffered under the Syrians and PLO.

Short work in Lebanon

The view from Washington may be most promising of all. The losers are the two leading clients in the area of the Soviets, who have suffered another loss in influence. They are likely to have a difficult time gaining it back on this evidence of the worth of their backing.

Exultation may be premature on all counts, however, the Soviet loss does not translate automatically into a gain in American influence where it would really count — more clout in pushing for an Arab - Israeli settlement that is the region's only long - term hope for peace.

If Lebanon does begin to function as a country again, it will be a much diminished one — minus the radical Moslem communities whose hostility to Lebanese Christians and Israel enabled the Palestinians virtually to take over the country in the first place.

And Israel may have secured another front, but at the price of becoming the occupier of more Arab territory that increases the strain on its human and material resources and its democratic institutions and ideals.

Another war may have been won, but peace as a result is probably farther off than ever. If there is one lesson of the long confrontation, it is that repeated demonstrations of Israeli military superiority only make Arab rejection of an accommodation more implacable.

The bad news about the larger Arab - Israeli war is that it appears to have no end.

MEANWHILE...
The Saudis have just given their unstable fellow Arab governments a demonstration of something they could all use more of — the orderly transfer of power.

They have their founding father to thank for it. Not because Ibn Saud established such effective institutions during his conquest and long rule of the Arabian peninsula, but because he provided so many sons.

The new King Fahd is the fourth to have succeeded him in the last 29 years.

The succession is never in doubt or, so far, dispute. It is arranged among Ibn Saud's senior sons, with new heirs apparent selected immediately following a royal death and the appointees apportioned among the tribes to which their mothers belonged to keep the peace the first Saud Established.

It has proved a very practical procedure for the family and the country.

But even the prolific Saud's legacy has its limits. The time is coming when power must be handed on not from son to son but generation to generation. The longer the lines of descent, the more tenuous the ties that bind.

That is the transfer that will test the Saudi system, to the intense interest no

Today is Tuesday, June 29, the 180th day of 1982. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On June 29, 1949, South Africa began its apartheid program of racial segregation.

On this date:
In 1946, the British arrested more than 2,700 Jews in Palestine in an attempt to stamp out alleged terrorism.

In 1966, for the first time in the Vietnam War, the United States bombed North Vietnam's capital, Hanoi, and its principle port Haiphong.

In 1967, Israel defied international protests and united the divided city of Jerusalem for the first time in two decades, following its victory in the Six Day War.

And in 1974, a landslide killed more than 250 people near Bogota, Colombia.

Ten years ago: The Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty was unconstitutional "cruel and unusual" punishment.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said the Carter administration was committed to seeking full diplomatic ties with China.

One year ago: China's Communist Party Chairman Hua Guofeng was declared "no longer fit" for that post and was replaced by Hu Yaobang.

Exclusionary policies

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The difficulties American firms face in respect to foreign trade have a direct bearing on the recession that grips the nation.

In a recent speech, Brien S. Wygle, vice president of the Boeing Commercial Aviation Company, cited some of those difficulties. "We are trying to compete in a world market," he said, "where there is no such thing as free trade and where more and more sales are going to foreign competitors who are heavily subsidized, particularly in financing, and who operate in non-competitive economies."

The Budd Company, America's last remaining manufacturer of rail cars, has voiced much the same complaint. Indeed it recently took court action in an attempt to block the sale of foreign-made rail commuter cars to the New York city transport authority. It charged that the cars were sold in this country with a foreign subsidy for financing.

There are other difficulties as well. U. S. Rep. Fortney H. Stark of California has cited the "exclusionary business practices that work to the benefit of domestic Japanese industries." He charged that "the inability of American industry to penetrate the Japanese market is causing irreversible damage to American firms in the development and marketing of semiconductor technology."

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress recently warned that "The loss of leadership in this one industry would mean the loss of international competitiveness in many of the advanced technology sectors that have been the basis of U. S. advantage since the second world war."

The Japanese, as Congressman Stark said, have an economy that's based on controlled competition whereby the intensity of competition is directed and limited by government actions and by formal and informal collaborative efforts of industrial and financial enterprise. This type of activity is not allowed American firms because of the anti-trust laws.

Congressman Stark spelled out the manipulative policies followed by Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry. These policies, among others, have included — "requiring government approval of all applications for direct foreign investment in Japan; second, limiting import penetration via high tariffs and exclusionary customs procedures; and third, limiting access by licensing advanced technology and know-how."

These policies make a mockery of Japan's assertion that its markets are open to foreign competitors.

Unfortunately, the U. S. government hasn't come to grips with this situation. It treats the Japanese with kid gloves. In Rep. Stark's view and that of affected American businessmen, that approach is unacceptable. If U. S. Trade Representative Bill Brock won't get serious about a crackdown on the Japanese, he is going to discover a prairie fire of opposition.

It isn't enough for the Japanese to say that their markets are open. Words are cheap. Action is needed to end Japan's trade exclusion policies and to dismantle the directed and guided economic system that lies behind these policies.

War game of the day

By ART BUCHWALD

"All right we're going to war game it today. Get out your pads and pencils. We are the superpower Alpha, and the enemy is the superpower Beta. Both sides have enough stuff to blow each other off the face of the Earth. What do we do?"

"We stay clear of each other as much as we can."

"Right. Now a mini-power named Omega comes to us and says it wants to be our friend. How do we show our gratitude?"

"We give the people a few weapons to defend themselves against Beta."

"Correct. Here is where it starts getting difficult. Another mini-power named Delta comes to us and says they also want to be our friends. What do we do about them?"

"We give them a few weapons, too."

"Why?"

"Because if we don't, Beta will."

"All right, let's move along. We've sold Omega weapons and we've sold Delta weapons. What do we do next?"

"We bring their military people here to teach them how to use them."

"And then what happens?"

"Each side thinks we've sold better weapons to the other, and demands more powerful stuff."

"Do we sell them the better equipment?"

"Yes, because the more equipment we can sell a mini-power, the cheaper it is to build military stuff for ourselves. Also the more alpha equipment they have, the more dependent they become on us as a supplier."

"So politically the best way to win the hearts and minds of people is by loading them down with arms."

"Everyone knows that, Professor. I thought you said this was going to be difficult."

"The game isn't over yet. Now Alpha has supplied Omega and Delta with guns, missiles, ships, submarines and airplanes. We also have assured both Omega and Delta that an attack on them would be considered an attack on us. We, of course, had Beta in mind when we made these assurances. Have we done the right thing?"

"Of course. The more countries we can line up against Beta, the safer we will be."

"On paper it looks good. But now we get to the war game problem. What happens if Omega takes our equipment and uses it to attack Delta, because they consider Delta a bigger threat to them than Beta?"

"We tell Omega to desist."

"What if they refuse?"

"We point out that according to our military agreement, they were only supposed to use our equipment to defend themselves against Beta."

"What if they tell us to stuff the agreement?"

"They can't tell us to stuff the agreement because we're a superpower, and no one talks that way to a superpower, because if they did we could wipe them off the face of the Earth."

"But we can't wipe them off the face of the Earth, can we?"

"I guess not. But we can cut them off from future supplies."

"But if we do that, Beta, Theta and Pi will step in and fill the void, and we would have lost a friend, and also one of our best customers."

"So we have to support Omega in its war against Delta?"

"Not necessarily. We don't want to lose Delta to Beta either."

"Then we have no choice but to let the two mini-powers fight it out with our equipment until one side wins?"

"Anybody got any better ideas?"

"Couldn't we take it to the United Nations? They're paid to keep peace."

"We could but it wouldn't help."

"So what's the solution, Professor?"

"There is no solution. There is only a moral. It's no fun being a superpower if every time you ask a favor of a mini-power, it tells you to stuff it."

U.S., Russia begin arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet officials begin a fresh attempt today to check the nuclear arms race by reducing the number of warheads that can span continents and oceans.

A senior U.S. official said the American goal in the new talks is to diminish both the number and destructive power of nuclear weapons. This goes beyond the objective President Reagan outlined in May — a reduction in the number of nuclear warheads carried by American and Soviet missiles.

The official said Monday that the Soviets have built up a 5-to-2 edge in missile payload.

In what Reagan called an "opportunity for real progress in our quest for peace," veteran American and Soviet negotiators have scheduled a meeting today at the Soviet diplomatic mission here to set ground rules for the long-awaited talks.

The two sides are to begin detailed presentations of their bargaining positions on Wednesday at the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency offices overlooking tranquil Lake Geneva.

Reagan has termed the negotiations START, for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, and has made a two-phased offer.

First, under the American plan, the two nations would trim intercontinental ballistic warheads from about 7,500 to 5,000. The next phase would reduce each side's total missile destructive power to equal levels. Soviet intercontinental missiles can launch a combined weight of 5 million kilograms, compared with less than 2 million for America's smaller rockets, according to the official, who asked not to be identified.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has urged a freeze in nuclear weapons "as soon as the talks begin."

But Reagan has rejected the proposal, saying it would put the West at the mercy of Soviet superiority. Until a treaty is agreed to, the Reagan administration is determined to go ahead with its $1.5 trillion, five-year defense program, including weapons covered in the talks.

PLO puts conditions on surrender

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas cornered in Beirut say they will surrender if they can flee Lebanon by boat and pack personal weapons, rejecting Israeli demands they totally disarm and ride buses to Syria.

Despite the apparent setback toward ending Israel's 24-day-old invasion, Lebanese officials said progress was made Monday in gaining the Palestine Liberation Organization's voluntary withdrawal from Lebanon and averting an Israeli assault on the PLO's remaining west Beirut retreats.

"The crisis will hopefully be defused shortly," said Tamam Salam, a prominent Lebanese whose father, former Prime Minister Saeb Salam, has been helping indirect negotiations between the Israeli invaders and Palestinian guerrilla leaders. U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib, credited with arranging a cease-fire that went into its fifth day today, said "efforts are still under way" to negotiate the PLO's withdrawal. He refused to elaborate.

Besieged PLO leaders opened the secret negotiations Monday to arrange details of their proposed "honorable" retreat from Lebanon, where for 12 years they have based their campaign to reclaim a Palestinian homeland from Israeli-occupied territories.

Lebanese officials and newspapers said PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, meeting with Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and other officials, had agreed in principle to abandon his west Beirut bunkers, where an estimated 8,000 guerrilla fighters are surrounded by Israeli forces and their Lebanese Christian allies.

But Lebanese sources said Arafat rejected Israel's offer to bus the guerrillas to Syria once they were disarmed by the Lebanese army.

Instead, they said, the guerrillas suggested sailing most of their forces out of Beirut in ships flying PLO flags to an unspecified country if Israeli forces withdraw from the city's edge.

An Israel radio broadcast said the PLO also was demanding that departing guerrillas be allowed to keep their personal guns, leave their non-military institutions in Lebanon intact and post small Palestinian units in the Lebanese army. The radio quoted an unidentified Israeli official as saying those demands were unacceptable.

Lebanese sources said other PLO demands included Lebanon's reaffirmation that the PLO is "the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people," and a promise that the 500,000 Palestinian civilian refugees living in Lebanon will not be expelled.

Israel responded "by maintaining its hammerlock on west Beirut and dumping thousands of leaflets urging the 600,000 residents to flee

Federal budget cutter has problems

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director David A. Stockman says he's trying his hardest to hold down costs around his own office. But what can you do when the landlord keeps raising the rent?

These are hard times, it seems, even for budget cutters. Stockman seemed apologetic in explaining to Congress why it will cost more to run his Office of Management and Budget next year than this year.

The budget official was asked by a House Appropriations subcommittee to defend his request for fiscal year 1983 for $36.1 million — up from the $33.8 million of the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

Unfortunately, reductions in other OMB expenses will be wiped out by increases in rent," he griped.

The General Services Administration, the government's landlord, has boosted rent in the Executive Office Building from $13.48 per square foot to $29.34 per square foot.

That, Stockman observed, is on the order of a 118 percent increase.

Stockman said he had tried his best to cut corners — like squeezing some workers into smaller quarters and reducing the number of free and hardbound copies of the president's 1983 budget he's been distributing.

And he's been holding the line on travel expenses. Stockman's written budget explanation breaks travel into two clear-cut categories: "Travel and transportation of persons, $370,000," and "transportation of things, $2,000."

The next energy crisis may be closer than we think. At a Senate Governmental Affairs Committee hearing the other day, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., was criticizing the Reagan administration's plan to dismantle the Energy Department and make further spending cuts in energy programs.

"There has been a catastrophic drop ...," Levin began. But he was interrupted midsentence by a temporary power failure as the ceiling lights in the hearing room blinked out — as if on cue.

"There has already been a catastrophic drop," he said. "Energy already has dropped."

By the time the audience had stopped laughing, the lights had flickered back on.

"I never used to believe in ESP," Levin said. "I may change my mind."

From Puyallup to Fifth Avenue, deely bobbbers no wooden bricks

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Those strange-looking head straps sprouting antenna-like springs tipped by balls, hearts and pinwheels are called "Deely Bobbers," and in the tradition of the hula hoop, pet rock and yo-yo, they're sweeping the nation.

But the fads that never make it are stranger still, says John Minkove, vice president of Ace Novelty Co., which makes Deely Bobbers.

There was the man who tried to sell Minkove a "brick" paperweight made of wood.

"It was a piece of wood painted like a brick," he said. "A brick paperweight. If you're going to make a brick paperweight, why not use a real brick?"

Another entrepreneur tried to sell Minkove something called the "Mount St. Helens fly-fishing rod."

"It was supposed to be a fishing pole that caught flies," he said.

"I didn't understand what the connection was with Mount St. Helens. I didn't understand how it was supposed to work. I didn't understand any of it."

Another gimmick that failed was a cigarette pack that coughed when it was removed from a pocket, Minkove said. It did that so a smoker would think twice before lighting up.

Minkove said Deely Bobbers were invented by a sales representative in San Francisco, and Ace Novelty, which is based in Bellevue, hopes to make millions before the Deely Bobber bubble bursts.

"It's still in its infancy," he said. "We don't expect it to peak this year, and we hope it'll last for another year."

The company is best known for fireworks, but neither the company nor Minkove is a stranger to selling oddball items.

Ace distributed troll dolls — little figurines with long, brightly dyed hair that for unknown reasons became indispensable to the well-dressed, pre-teen-aged set of the mid-1960s. It also marketed K-Bongers, two balls attached to a string that a person theoretically tried to smack against each other.

"Nobody could work it," Minkove said. "But it was like a yo-yo. Some people can't get a yo-yo to work, but they have fun trying."

With long practice, some people mastered the device, he said. "A guy came into our office once who could bounce the balls off the toe of his shoe."

When Minkove was shown a prototype Deely Bobbers by the inventor, Steve Askins, he knew it was something special. He still can't explain why, but after he took a pair home, he thought about it and eventually realized that people would buy them.

Electronics and lower housing costs

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The silicon chip is an extraordinary thing, said James Christian. A decade from now, even before, it could mean that home buyers might use less of their paycheck to finance their houses.

Christian is an economist, and because he is the chief economist of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, his specialty is housing, an area that has produced its share of dismal news. But this is good news.

"Electronic technology (much of it based on silicon chips) may extend the range of choice for many families to small cities and even rural areas," he said. "Without the sacrifice of employment opportunity."

Such a development, says a report from the league, whose members are heavily involved in home financing, "could reduce housing costs and improve the quality of life for those families who now must choose between career opportunities and locational preferences."

The opportunity is likely to be there, says Christian, because of the evolution of industry. The knowledge, or information, industry is now a growing force. Manufacturing might become a lesser one.

Manufacturing, of course, was tied to metropolitan areas, and such areas generally were dependent upon transportation — rivers and oceans at first, and railroads, superhighways and airports more recently.

Electronic technology, however, frees people of those restraints. The product — information or knowledge — can be moved rather than people. If enough circuits are available, people could even work at home.

It is happening already: The change is occurring. To illustrate, Christian suggested a check of some successful letters and consulting services. A quick survey was made: Bala-Cynwyd, Pa., Holliston, Mass., Wickenburg, Ariz., Media, Pa., Fitzwilliam, N.H. The point was made.

The generation now around 30 years of age appreciates the opportunity to live where they want, said Christian. "I see the old American streak of rebelliousness coming out about the work place," he said. "People don't want to be told where to work and where to live."

Now add the economic imperative to the opportunities made possible by electronic communications, he said.

"How much of business could be operated remotely?" A lot, he answered. "I would rather not get on an airplane and lose two days to go somewhere to give a speech," he said. "I'd rather walk downstairs to a teleconferencing center."

As this geographic dispersal takes place — and the 1981 homebuyer survey of the U.S. League developed evidence it is under way — there could be a marked effect on housing prices, says Christian.

That is, as companies and workers move into less populated areas, often in pursuit of lifestyle goals, the cost of a lot might play relatively less of a role in the price of housing.

Elephant due for trip to scales

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Columbus Zoo officials, who have been expecting a baby from their Asian elephant, Bomba, for the last year, hope a set of scales will warn them when the blessed event is coming.

"I'll weigh her every three days. Then I'll know if something is in there. I have to do something," said Zoo Director Jack Hanna.

A birth by the 5,500-pound Bomba has been predicted periodically for more than a year. But such predictions have proven risky.

A Columbus company will loan the zoo a sensitive digital scale that records weights of up to 10,000 pounds. Hanna plans to put Bomba on the 5-by-7-foot scale every three days. He believes rapid weight gain would prove that delivery is approaching.

Zoo officials say part of the problem in predicting the delivery date is the length of the elephant's gestation period, which Hanna said animal experts estimate at 22 months to 26 months.

"We thought she was ready a year ago," he said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Flodines of Comal County hope to leave David Simon stranded on Gilligan's Island without a beer permit.

Simon wants the state to let him sell beer at his business on the Guadalupe River. Norris and Jean Flodine say there's already too much drinking and carousing on the river that flows by their home.

Mrs. Flodine, 66, said the drinking is out of hand on the river. Recently, about 10:30 at night, she heard someone yell from the river. — "If you want to see sex on the river, turn on the light."

"They do it in the daytime, too," she said.

Simon's application for a beer permit for his Gilligan's Island business came before an Alcoholic Beverage Commission hearing examiner on Monday. The hearing will be continued in coming weeks. Everyone involved in the battle says it's a friendly fight.

The Flodines say there already are about nine places to buy beer along the river. The tubers and canoeists who come downriver by the thousands have shown great thirst and little concern about litter, they said.

"I've seen all kinds of debris — broken ice chests, beer cans, beer bottles and those plastic things that six-packs come in," Mrs. Flodine testified. "I even picked up a man's swimming suit. I don't know where the man was."

Norris Flodine, 66, is a retired government architect. He said his Monday appearance at the ABC marked the first time he has played lawyer. It did not go too well. Simon has hired an aggressive, young lawyer, Barbara Barron, who knew her timely objections could frustrate Flodine's attempts to get evidence and testimony on the record.

In questioning his wife, Flodine opened by trying to establish that she lives near the Guadalupe.

"Where do you live," he asked his wife.

"I live with you," she replied.

The Flodines and neighbor Joe Davis said the tubers pull an extra tube with them to carry an ice chest full of beer.

"By the time they get to where they're going the cases are empty," said Flodine. "What happened to the cans? They went in the river."

When nature calls, the floaters head to the nearest riverbank, regardless of who owns the property, they said.

Simon, 25, did not testify Monday. He told a reporter his business — named for the 1960s television comedy — could help relieve littering and trespassing by providing trash cans and bathrooms.

There is an island in the river near the spot where Simon now rents tubes. But Simon said the beer sales will not be on the island, which was created when he cleared debris that had connected the island to the river bank.

"I'll get it sooner or later," he said of the ABC permit.

"It's a four-hour trip down the river," he said. "That's why they're throwing beer cans out and (urinating) on (river-bank residents') lawns."

New trial date set in prison warden murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge has set Aug. 2 for the retrial of Eroy Edward Brown, a Texas prison inmate charged with capital murder in the drowning of a warden.

Brown, of Waco, is accused in the April 4, 1981, deaths of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack and prison farm manager Billy Max Moore. Prosecutors have said they may seek to try Brown later in Moore's shooting death.

Brown has said he acted in self defense, believing the two prison officials were going to torture him.

Brown's first trial in Pack's slaying ended in a mistrial March 4 when jurors voted 11-1 in favor of acquittal.

At Monday's pre-trial hearing, State District Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore also granted the defense attorneys' request for tape recordings of conversations with three state witnesses and an additional $10,000 for investigative work.

"I hate to be coy, but I don't want to go into any detail," said defense attorney Craig Washington said when asked what the money would be used for. He had asked for $20,000. "We have some other things we need for the investigator to do — contact witnesses and so on."

Mending Mature Marriage Wife still playing second fiddle to husband's career

By LOUISE PIERCE

"DEAR LOUISE: I'm 69 and my husband is 70. We've been married 50 years and ought to be happy after all this time together.

"He is, but I'm sure not. He's been successful in his business since we were young. He's still healthy and successful and he won't quit working. He has a mania about staying in the business world.

"I say when you get to be as old as we are, it's time to retire, sell your business (He's had a lot of offers to buy it), and take your wife on all the trips you always promised her. It's time to spend your time with her instead of rushing off to your office every day. It's time to raise flowers and visit with your neighbors over the back fence.

"All our years together I've put up with him being gone all the time. He took business trips all over the country while I stayed home with the kids. I say he should give up his business life now and let us have the last part of our lives together.

DEAR D. E.: Right or wrong, you need to handle this situation with care. You can't give him the ultimatum. "Stop working or lose me," which seems to be your attitude. He could refuse that demand. As it is, you have as much togetherness as you ever had. You'll need to work up to a bigger share gradually. Some successful husbands have to quit working until health or circumstances force them to change.

Insist on his taking medical checkups regularly. Apparently he is in good health or he couldn't keep up his business pace. But bodies are as well as their minds. Too much pressure can cause hypertension, headaches, insomnia and ulcers.

Then tell him you want a little more of his time. Suggest evenings out to eat, to visit with friends, to take in shows of some kind. Leave him his days but ask for a few nights.

Then make an adjustment to the life you must continue to live until he loses interest in the business world. Many authorities have offered suggestions to the spouses of famous, wealthy or successful mates.

According to writer Norman Lobsenz, there are several things you must do in your acceptance of your spouse as he now is:

Have confidence in your own worth. Take a flexible approach to life. Be self-reliant. Work toward a calm temperament. Show confidence and efficiency. The author says, "High achievers are well organized and expect their spouses to be equally capable of running their share of the household affairs."

Don't insist that your husband leave his all-absorbing work until he is ready. It could sour him on life. And 70 isn't too old to be in business. Doctors, lawyers, writers, musicians, artists, businessmen, farmers, all manner of people, are often able to continue their successes long after three score and ten.

Try for vacations, then an evening once in a while. Make those times together special occasions. Then leave him alone.

"DEAR LOUISE: My wife is happy to sit at home, watching TV, reading, visiting. I like to get out in the evenings and sometimes in the afternoons, get to see friends and neighbors take in movies, eat out and other things.

"We have always got along pretty good. But it was easier before we both retired. Now she says she's tired of the public and only wants to stay home and enjoy being together.

"Well, that suited me for a couple of years. But now I've rested enough. I'm ready to get out and have a good time somewhere. We could take trips or join clubs or something. I'm beginning to think I can't stand all the sitting she wants to do.

"How can I persuade her to think like I do? OLD HUSBAND STILL YOUNG IN SPIRIT."

DEAR O. H. S. Y.: Let her rest a little longer. If her health is good, she should not want to spend the rest of her life in a rocking chair.

If she doesn't pep up before long, ask her to compromise with you. Say you'll take her somewhere three nights a week and stay home with her three nights. Take her to church on the Seventh Day.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Country Talker to address Not just horsing around ... Rotary Club installation

DELBERT DOWNING

The Pampa Rotary Club will hold their installation banquet tonight at 7 p.m. in the Coronado Inn. Guest speaker for the evening will be Delbert Downing from Snyder, Texas, who is known for his "country speaking".

Downing is one of the most versatile after-dinner speakers in the southwest. He was born on a farm and his love and respect for the land and for rural living seeps into his messages in a warm and often amusing way.

This noted speaker is a product of a one-room school, small rural elementary schools, a small high school and Rice University.

Downing is sometimes called a humorist; sometimes a philosopher, and refers to himself as a "country talker. His confidence in America, in his fellowman and in today's youth is said to be stimulating.

New officers to be installed at this evening's banquet are La Wayne Hogan, president; Darville Orr, president-elect; George Warren, vice president; Paul Payne, secretary; Mike Ruff, treasurer; Claude Wilson, sgt. of arms; and Doris Smith, executive secretary.

Directors to be recognized are Lee Waters, Phil Gentry, Joe Gidden and Marion John.

Ways with wood

Q. — I am buying a vacation home that is made of, I think, cedar shingles over regular wood framing. The seller says if I leave the shingles alone, they will turn to gray, since it is a newly built house. A future neighbor of mine says that isn't so and the wood must be treated first with a wood preservative. Who is right?

A. — It is always best to pay attention to the person who has gone through the experience. If the shingles are really cedar, a wood preservative would help to give the shingles the gray appearance you want.

Q. — I put up a wooden fence last year. Before doing so, I soaked the wooden slats in a preservative for several hours, since I had been told this was a better way of preserving the wood than by brushing on the liquid. I saved the container in which the wood had been soaked and covered it with some plastic wrap. Now I have another fence to put up. I intended to use the leftover preservative, but a neighbor says this is not a good idea, as the liquid may have picked up some impurities from the wood. Is he right?

A. — That's the first time I have heard that theory and have no idea what impurities your neighbor means. Professionals use the same wood preservative over and over again. You can do the same.

Dear Abby Rest home resident still eyeing the ladies

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70, and he's in a rest home and will never be able to come home because of an illness I can't handle. Sam (not his name) is attractive and well-read, but he gets confused now and then.

I don't drive, so a friend I'll call Emma drives me to see Sam two or three times a week. Emma often goes to visit Sam without me, which is fine because Sam appreciates the company.

Now the problem. Lately when I visit Sam with Emma, he pays more attention to her than he does to me. He never takes his eyes off her, and the last time we visited Sam, the hello and goodbye kisses between him and Emma were much warmer than you'd expect between casual friends. I laughingly told Emma on the way home that I thought Sam had a crush on her. She said, "Oh no, we're just good friends," but I noticed she turned beet-red.

Emma is my age, late 60s, and she's never been married. I enjoy her company and don't want to break up the friendship. Should I be jealous?

SAM'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes, but don't be foolish. If Sam and Emma find mutual pleasure in an innocent flirtation, what's the harm? I think both you and Sam are lucky to have Emma's friendship. Don't spoil it by overreacting. Keep a cool head and a warm heart. Emma's not about to steal Sam out of the rest home.

DEAR ABBY: Please, I need help quick. I've been going with this guy, Harold, for three years. He's sweet and understanding, and it was no surprise when he gave me an engagement ring for Christmas three years ago. (I was 20 then and he was 22.) We discussed marriage but didn't make any definite plans for the wedding because Harold kept saying we shouldn't rush into anything.

A few weeks ago Harold said he thinks we should live together first because he doesn't want to get married until he knows what married life is like.

I am dead set against living with him or any other man. He says I'm old-fashioned, that everybody is doing it. I call myself "respectable," and I refuse to go along with his suggestion. I tried to give him his ring back, but he wouldn't take it.

What I want to know is this: Am I old-fashioned, and is everybody doing it? Or is Harold right?

RESPECTABLE IN MINNESOTA

DEAR RESPECTABLE: You are not old-fashioned, and everybody is not doing it! Hang in there, girl. If Harold doesn't want to marry you on your terms, somebody else will.

DEAR ABBY: I should have listened to you! So many times a woman will see her best friend's husband with another woman, and she asks you if she should tell her friend, and you always say, "No!"

Well, Abby, I saw my best friend's husband in a car with a girl. My friend was having some minor problems with her marriage at the time, but my big mouth blew the whole thing sky-high!

I wound up hurting her more than helping her, and I lost her as my friend. She has not spoken to me in over a year, and I miss her very much. I doubt if I will ever have a friend like her again. Please warn others to keep their mouths shut.

SHOULD HAVE LISTENED

DEAR SHOULD: Good people with the best of intentions often do more harm than bad people with evil intentions. And then, of course, there are the gossip-mongers, busybodies, self-appointed protectors of "morality" and any number of nasty-minded folks who have so little joy in their own lives that they take pleasure in relaying painful news to others. If I had to err in such a situation, I'd opt for erring on the side of silence.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Don't be bugged by pesticides

The misuse of pesticides and fertilizers results in accidents every summer, a Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine toxicologist cautions.

Most accidents are caused by improper distribution or storage, says Gary Wimbish, Ph. D., associate professor of pathology at the medical school. "The ABCs for proper use of pesticides are simple: Read the label, mix and distribute them as instructed and avoid contact with the skin or inhalation of the vapors."

Accidents usually go something like this: Some of the poison is left over, it is stored in a soft drink bottle, and a curious child comes along and drinks it. "The way to avoid this, of course, is to maintain the excess in the original containers and store them out of the reach of children," Dr. Wimbish said.

Symptoms of dangerous contact with a pesticide can be mistaken for those of a cold or virus, he added. The symptoms are nausea, loss of appetite, cramping, excessive sweating, salivating and diarrhea. If you suspect an ingestion of a poison, first call your physician, who can make a definite diagnosis with label tests, and if a doctor not available, then call the local poison control center, whose number should be kept by the telephone.

One of the most dangerous fertilizers used in farming operations, Dr. Wimbish said, is anhydrous ammonia. "Tanks can leak and pressure builds (usually associated with overfilling and heat), the safety valve may release a large blast of ammonia into the operator's face, causing permanent damage to eyes, skin or the respiratory system, even death. The only advice I can give is to be very careful of leaks and take all precautions, treating the anhydrous ammonia as a deadly gas."

Housing industry no exception

NEW YORK (AP) — During the past few years the housing industry has explored every possible argument for having its product considered an exception to the rule, a special case to be treated apart from others.

The house, it is said, has a special meaning in American lives. It is shelter, yes, but it is also said to be the anchor of the community.

Those who own homes vote more often, housing leaders argue. Homowners, they say, also have other positive attributes: they maintain properties better than do renters and their real estate taxes support schools.

The extreme of this argument is that without homeowners this country couldn't maintain its democratic way of life. The housing industry doesn't see that as exaggeration either; it argues that way every day.

By extension, therefore, high interest rates are un-American, because high interest rates make it impossible for many millions of households to live in a house of their own and perpetuate the American dream.

The dream, of course, has become a right in the minds of many people in the industry. Well, not quite a right, but almost one. Since the 1930s, they observe, housing has been deemed a socially desirable goal worthy of special assistance from government.

Will tax cut revive faltering economy?

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Taxes go down and Social Security benefits go up this week. What Americans do with the extra money may determine whether the worst recession since World War II ends soon.

A year ago the Reagan administration and its supply-side supporters fought for income tax cuts by arguing they would increase incentives to save and invest. But now the administration is counting on people to spend instead of saving.

Administration officials, and many private economists, think the stimulus of all that money — nearly $1 billion a week in extra funds — will produce an economic recovery that will stem the rise in unemployment and stop the slide in corporate profits.

But other economists disagree. They predict interest rates will go even higher, thanks in part to the government's need to finance the tax cut by borrowing billions, and that the high interest rates will choke off any recovery. Some even see the recession growing much worse.

The stakes are high, both politically and economically. Many businesses are in trouble — factories are operating at their lowest level in seven years — and a new round of layoffs and bankruptcies could follow if the economy does not rebound. Politicians of both parties fear what voters will do in November if the recession worsens.

There are some tentative signs that consumers are leading the way to recovery. Retail sales rose in April and May, and car sales in May were up from last year's depressed levels, although they have since fallen. The Commerce Department estimates the economy has grown slightly in the quarter now ending, after shrinking for two quarters.

The 10 percent cut in tax rates will put an additional $800 million a week into consumers' pockets, and the 7.4 percent raise in Social Security benefits will add $150 million a week, calculates Lacy Hunt, the chief economist of Philadelphia's Fidelity Bank.

If most of that is spent, as Hunt and many other economists expect, the result could be an end to the recession. If consumers flock to stores, the decision will shift to wholesalers and manufacturers.

If they see the sales as a sign of recovery, and place new orders and rehire workers, economic growth could spread. The increased profits could ease the strain businesses are feeling and reduce the pressure on interest rates, which have been held up in part by business borrowing to pay bills.

"Uncle Sam is borrowing money and directing it to consumers," says Maury Harris, an economist for Paine Webber Inc. "They will turn around and spend the money, which will increase corporate profits."

But there is a lot of doubt that will happen. Jack Lavery, chief economist at Merrill Lynch & Co., predicts spending will be held back by fear that jobs will be lost and by recent declines in housing prices, which make a lot of homeowners feel less prosperous than before. He also notes high interest rates make saving more attractive.

And the benefit from any increase in consumer spending could be offset by weaknesses in other parts of the economy. Businesses have cut back on capital spending and the housing industry appears unlikely to recover until interest rates come down, something few expect this year.

"This time the consumer may not have the strength or staying power to pull the economic wagon up the mountain," warns Edward Yardeni, chief economist at E.F. Hutton & Co. "If he stumbles, the wagon could roll farther down the valley and drag the consumer along in the dust."

Yardeni thinks there may be a new round of layoffs, which have declined slightly in recent weeks, throwing more fear into consumers. Unlike most economists, he thinks the recession is likely to continue, causing more business failures — which already are at the highest level since the Depression.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige says he would not be surprised if businesses cut capital spending even further, but he adds that he still sees "consumer confidence brightening" and thinks the recession is nearing an end. The administration estimates consumers will save about half the tax cut and spend the rest.

One reason that consumers are in a position to spend money is that it has not been a bad recession for people with jobs, simply because wages have been rising faster than prices. That trend is partly countered by increases in state taxes and by the hike in Social Security taxes that took effect Jan. 1.

If there is a recovery, there is almost total agreement among economists that it will be a weak one, with the economy growing in the second half of 1982 at an annual rate of 5 percent or less, compared to an average of 7 percent for the first six months after previous post-war recessions.

Unemployment, now at about 9.5 percent, is not expected to drop much below 9 percent before the end of the year, and many forecasters think that high interest rates will then help abort the recovery in 1983. The government is expected to borrow up to $100 billion in the last half of the year, helping to hold up interest rates, and the Federal Reserve, which could ease credit, says it will stick to its goals of holding down monetary growth.

Sponsors needed to send Pampa girls to AAU region track meet

Persons interested in sponsoring three Pampa girls on their trip to the AAU Amateur Athletic Union Junior Olympics region 9 track meet July 17 in McAllen may contact Frank Belcher at 669-6510.

Lyssa Dunnam, Kristia Lucas and Shonna Stevens, all ninth-graders to be qualified for the regionals after placing in an AAU 13-14 year old qualifying meet Saturday at Hereford.

The top two placings in each event qualified for the regional meet.

Dunnam took second in the long jump 14-10, 200 (28.6) and 100 (13.3). Lucas was second in the 400 (68.0) and Stevens placed second in the 80-meter low hurdles. No time was listed.

Lucas also placed third in the long jump 14-8 and Dunnam was third in the 400 meters. Stevens was third in the 400 and Amy Voyles placed sixth in the 400.

Belcher, Harvester girls' coach, said approximately $1500 would be needed to cover expenses and transportation to McAllen.

"This isn't a school function, so we need some financial help," Belcher added.

The top two qualifiers at the regional meet will advance to national competition.

"I'm pretty excited about having these girls in our program," Belcher said.

"They've got a good chance of getting their marks down for the regionals."

The trio helped lead the Pampa eighth-grade girls to a district track championship this past spring.

Dunnam's 28.8 in the 200 set a new district record and was a member of the 440 relay team that had a record-breaking time of 54.5. She also won the 100. Lucas won the 400 and Stevens placed third in the 100 hurdles and high jump.

"The main thing right now is get enough money together to get these girls to McAllen," Belcher added.

Bankers rally to edge Pampa Hardware

First National Bank rallied to edge Pampa Hardware, 9-8, Monday night and keep their hopes alive for a second-place finish in the Babe Ruth League standings.

Mike Killgo's single scored the winning run as Grant Supply nudged J.T. Richardson, 8-7, in the first game played last night at Optimist Park.

Hardware, which had already clinched the league title, jumped out to an 8-2 lead after three innings. But Hardware wasn't able to score again while leaving seven runners stranded.

Meanwhile, First National chipped away at Hardware's lead and pulled within one, 8-7, going into the sixth and final inning.

Hardware loaded the bases with two outs in the top of the sixth, but Trace Robbins flew out to end the threat.

First National scored the tying and winning runs without the benefit of a hit in the bottom of the sixth on bases-loaded walks to John Hazle and Paul Smethers.

The game was called after six innings due to the 2:15 time limit.

First National was outthit by Hardware, 12-4, but the Bankers took advantage of walks and errors to post their seventh win against six setbacks.

Juan Soto, John Monthe, Garland Allen and Jeff Gaines had two hits each for the Bankers.

Wes Stevens, Ruben Ramirez, Travis Hill and Smethers had one each for Hardware.

First National had earlier ended Hardware's 11-game winning streak.

Smethers, who relieved starter Jimmy Bridges in the third inning, was the winning pitcher.

First National meets Grant Supply in a possible doubleheader Wednesday night to determine second place. Grant must win both games to claim second place.

Grant lifted its record to 7-5 with its slim victory over J.T. last night.

J.T. was ahead 7-6 when Grant tied the score in the sixth on Chris Jones' rbi single to centerfield.

With one out in the bottom of the seventh and Brent John on first with a single, Killgo drilled a base hit to leftfield that got past Derek Smith to allow the winning run to score.

Killgo had three hits for the winners.

Ricky Cloud received the mound win after he came in for starter Killgo in the sixth inning.

Brent Cryer was dealt the loss in going the distance, but only three of the eight runs scored against him were earned.

Wil-Mart rolls by Glo Valve in little league tournament

Wil-Mart broke open a pitcher's duel with four runs in the bottom of the fourth inning and then coasted to a 9-1 victory over Glo Valve Service in Pampa Little League Tournament play at Optimist Park last night.

Winning pitcher Troy Owens limited the heavy-hitting National League team to just two hits and two bases on balls, sending them to their first tournament defeat.

Wil-Mart jumped out in front in the first inning on a double by Enoch Phetteplace and a home run by Buben Garvin. They put the game out of reach with the fourthsandwiched around a base on balls.

Glo Valve meets Citizens Bank, a 7-6 winner over Dunlap Industrial, at 7 p.m. today. The winner will play Wil-Mart at 7 p.m. Wednesday and at 7 p.m. Thursday if another game is needed.

inning rally which saw ten batters go to the plate. Cannon Allen, who had two hits in the game, opened the fourth with his second single. Phetteplace was safe on an error and Garvin doubled to score Allen. Owens was walked intentionally, but the strategy failed with Phetteplace stole home and Wesley Karber singled. Two bases-loaded walks produced the final two runs of the inning. The fifth inning saw Wil-Mart score three runs on only one base hit, a double by Shan Kyser.

Glo Valve came back in the sixth with their run on a single by David Day and a double by Chad McDougall

Ryan whips Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Nolan Ryan says he never sets any "number goals," but the hard-throwing right-hander of the Houston Astros is putting together some impressive ones.

Ryan weathered a two-hour, seven-minute rain delay to go eight innings Monday night, fanning 10 batters and yielding only four hits as the Astros downed the Atlanta Braves 6-2.

It was the 139th time Ryan, 7-8, has fanned 10 or more batters in a game and also was his 196th career triumph. It lifted his career strikeout total to 3,353, third best in baseball history.

Aggies sign Georgia star

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — George Smith, the Georgia schoolboy player of the year, has signed a scholarship to play football for Texas A&M University, school officials announced Monday.

Smith, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound fullback from Coffee County High School in Douglas, Ga., was considered the top football prospect in Georgia.

He had been selected to the first team of four high school all-America teams, and was rated among the top 15 schoolboy players in the nation by a recruiting magazine.

Smith runs the 40 in 4.6 and last season rushed for 1,600 yards.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- 1) Paresthesias (see above)
- 2) Headaches
- 3) Painful joints
- 4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- 5) Loss of sleep
- 6) Stiffness in the neck
- 7) Pain between the shoulders
- 8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- 9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Amritraj fully qualified for gentleman's singles

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The gentleman at the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club still refer to the bracket as "The Gentleman's Singles." They must have Vijay Amritraj in mind. Ranked 35th in the world on the Association of Tennis Professionals computer, Amritraj chose not to meet the full Volvo Grand Prix commitment this year and so came to Wimbledon through the qualifying tournament at Roehampton, a cut-throat route that five-time champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden declined to drive.

Then Amritraj sat patiently through four days of rain to gain a five-set decision against American Jeff Borowiak in what one commentator characterized as the "most sophisticated" match of the day.

Finally comfortable on the grass surface, Amritraj steps to the baseline and the ball explodes off the end of his fluid serving motion. Polite applause follows — the crowds here remember him for all the right reasons: his conduct, his past heroics — and all is suddenly right with the gentlemen of the All-England Club and the tennis world in general.

"Everything revolved around my service," Amritraj said Monday after running down Pascal Portes 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, marking the first time he's bested the Frenchman in four outings. "There was too much pressure on his own service because if he didn't get the first one in, he knew I was likely to win."

Today, Amritraj took on 14th-seeded Roscoe Tanner. In other matches, third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis opposed unseeded Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia, sixth-seeded Gene Mayer played Larry Stefanki and No. 7 Mats Wilander of Sweden met Staislov Birner of Czechoslovakia.

On the women's side, top-seeded Martina Navratilova squared off against 18-year-old Zina Garrison; No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, the defending champion, met 15th-seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania and 12th-seeded Billie Jean King battled No. 6 Wendy Turnbull of Australia.

Top-seeded John McEnroe, the defending champion, and No. 2 Jimmy Connors, seeded to meet in the finals of the men's singles, both advanced the fourth round of the rain-plagued event Monday with victories.

Australian Paul McNamee also reached the fourth round with a 7-6, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1 victory over South African Kevin Curran.

McEnroe comfortably sent compatriot Lloyd Bourne packing 6-2, 6-2, 6-0, but Connors ran into trouble against another qualifier, Drew Gitlin of Encino, Calif., who took a set from the left-hander before grudgingly surrendering 6-2, 6-7, 7-5, 7-5.

Asked if he'd ever seen Gitlin, ranked 185th in the world, play before, Connors replied: "No, and it was not the time for introductions."

"But if you're a little off, like I was after not having played for a couple of days, it's a great equalizer to have someone who hangs in there."

Asked if he was worried at any juncture of the three-hour match, the former Wimbledon champion added: "I don't get worried. That's probably the best thing about my game. I don't play with fear."

Advancing into the third round Monday alongside Amritraj, a stalwart of the Indian Davis Cup squad, were sixth-seeded Gene Mayer, who outlasted Australian Brad Drewett 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 in a match begun Saturday; No. 11 Brian Teacher, who beat Australian Rod Frawley 7-5, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, and No. 14 Roscoe Tanner, who throttled fellow American Fritz Buehning, 6-3, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4 with a serve that knocked down the net at one point.

Also gaining the third round were American Nick Saviano, who came from two sets down and fought off two match points before ambushing No. 9 Brian Gottfried 6-7, 6-7, 7-5, 6-4, 6-1; and New Zealander Russell Simpson, who staged a blazing service duel against American Chip Hooper and emerged a 6-3, 1-6, 6-3, 6-7, 11-9 winner in the longest match of this year's tournament.

The 11-9 final set came because Wimbledon, like the French Open, does not use the tiebreaker to decide the final set of a match. For that same reason, No. 16 Steve Denton of the United States was locked in a 10-10 fifth-set battle with Schalk van der Merwe when play was suspended Monday night.

On the women's side, defending champion Lloyd hammered fellow American Kate Latham 6-1, 6-1.

Third-seeded Tracy Austin overcame a lapse of concentration caused by the rain delay to beat Kathy Jordan 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Andrea Jaeger, seeded fourth, overcame a limping Ros Fairbank of South Africa 6-3, 7-5; ninth-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany stopped Andrea Temesvari of Hungary 6-2, 6-2; No. 10 Barbara Potter ousted fellow American Jane Preyer 6-4, 6-4, and No. 11 Anne Smith of Dallas eliminated Corinne Vanier of France 6-3, 6-2.

In other matches, JoAnne Russell downed fellow American Pam Casale 1-6, 7-6, 6-4 and Claddis Kohde of West Germany advanced with a 4-6, 6-0, 9-7 victory over South African Yvonne Vermaak.

LA expected to pick Worthy in NBA draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers will choose James Worthy of North Carolina with the first pick in the National Basketball Association draft, NBA chief scout Marty Blake predicts.

"I think it's a matter of personal preference," Blake said on the eve of today's draft, which started at noon EDT at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum. "I really don't know, for example, if the roles were reversed and Utah had the first pick, if they would take Worthy, but I think for the particular needs of the Los Angeles Lakers, that Worthy fills the bill."

The Lakers didn't announce, as they did two years ago when they made Earvin "Magic" Johnson the first pick, whether they would select Worthy, DePaul's All-American Terry Cummings or Dominique Wilkins of Georgia. But it was a foregone conclusion that Los Angeles, San Diego and Utah would make those three juniors the first to be drafted.

All three teams say they would be happy with any of the three, but most observers have predicted a Worthy-Cummings-Wilkins selection order for the Lakers, Clippers and Jazz.

Blake, who does initial scouting reports for all 23 NBA teams, called Worthy, Cummings and Wilkins "three great superstars. I don't think you could go wrong taking any of them."

He said his prediction that the Lakers would take Worthy "doesn't mean that Terry Cummings or Dominique Wilkins may not in the future be classified as better all-around players than Worthy."

Although Blake called the senior class "a good crop, with as many as 20 big guards that could go in the first two rounds," the 1982 draft could be remembered as the "Year of the Underclassman."

Dallas, which picks fourth, traded its starting center of last year, Wayne Cooper, and a future draft choice to Portland Monday for guard Kelvin Ransey. This apparently opened the way for the Mavericks to take still another junior, Texas center LaSalle Thompson.

Dallas reportedly also was considering Bill Garnett, a 6-9 senior from Wyoming; and Trent Tucker, a 6-5 senior guard from Minnesota.

Other underclassmen expected to be drafted by one of the first 12 teams are 6-7 forward Clark Kellogg of Ohio State, 6-8 forward Cliff Levingston of Wichita State and 6-3 All-American guard Quintin Dailey of San Francisco.

Two other juniors who probably will go in the first two rounds are guards Rob Williams of Houston and John Bagley of Boston College.

Other top seniors are centers Wallace Bryant of San Francisco and Mark McNamara of California, forwards Scott Hastings of Arkansas, All-American Kevin Magee of California-Irvine, Mitchell Anderson and David Thirskill of Bradley, Eddie Phillips of Alabama, Ricky Frazier of Missouri and Terry Teagle of Baylor and guards Paul Pressey of Tulsa, Lester Conner of Oregon State, Lafayette Lever of Arizona State, All-American Eric Floyd of Georgetown and Ricky Pierce of Rice.

Los Angeles got the No. 1 choice by trading for Cleveland's pick and then winning a coin flip with San Diego. The Clippers and Cavaliers had the worst records in the two NBA conferences.

Tired astronauts ready to exercise arm

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts faced a demanding day in space today, ready to give the shuttle's weightless arm its stiffest test yet even though both were tired and one suffered slight motion sickness. Commander Ken Mattingly asked Mission Control to lighten the load. "Leave out the little things," he said. "Our strategy should be to take the big items." Their task on Flight 4 is to certify Columbia as a commercial and military cargo carrier starting on its next trip in October or November. But NASA officials said Monday that flight might have to be delayed because the two booster rockets that helped hurl the ship into space Sunday sank in the Atlantic Ocean when their parachute systems failed. They were to have been recovered for reuse on a later flight. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the impact on Flight 5, if any, must await an investigation into the failure, the first of its kind in the shuttle program. Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield told a flight surgeon during a private radio conversation Monday night they both were tired and Hartsfield reported he had a slight headache and occasional queasiness. Dr. E.L. Schulman attributed the troubles to a longer-and-busier-than-planned first day in space and directed Hartsfield to take two aspirin and a motion sickness pill and for both to get a full eight hours sleep. They each logged only five hours Sunday night. Later, talking with the control center, Mattingly said: "It's going to be a busy day tomorrow. Right now we're in condition to handle it. I have no qualms about doing the big things but I think we ought not to do all the little things — a troubleshooting all the little problems." In Houston later, Flight Director Chuck Lewis described Day 3 of Columbia's week-long final run as "a very tight timeline, which requires a lot of detail and attention to it." The spacemen blocked out most of the day to flex the metallic muscles of the mechanical arm being developed to park satellites in orbit and to pick up others for servicing and repair. Hartsfield does most of the work. Almost forgotten for the day will be the scientific experiments and the top secret payload of military sensors in the cargo bay. The arm, too frail to support its own weight in Earth's gravity, was tested very successfully on Columbia's last two trips but not as extensively as today's flight plan called for. Standing at a remote station in the cabin, Hartsfield was to guide the arm to grapple and lift an 800-pound package the size of a desk, moving it about the cargo bay to make contamination measurements important to future satellite designs. Later, Hartsfield was to wave the package about as Mattingly triggers steering jets to evaluate how arm-carried satellites are affected by the firings. While the astronauts worked hard in orbit, NASA officials on the ground were trying to determine precisely what went wrong with the parachutes that caused the rocket boosters to hit the water so hard they sank. The boosters used on the first three missions worked perfectly, bobbing in the water until recovery ships could pick them up. The ocean canisters are on the 91-ton crafters in the 100-foot long 3,500 feet under water, and will have to be written off as a $36 million loss. What worries NASA is the prospect that the same fate could befall other boosters in future. "I'm sure that the program certainly won't go launch another set of SRBs without an investigation panel and looking at possible design changes that may be required to keep this from happening again," Lewis said.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian George Kirby will return to show business this weekend after a five-year absence, including more than three years in prison on a drug conviction. The comeback will begin with a four-day, seven-show stint at Marla's Memory Lane Supper Club in Los Angeles. Kirby was arrested in 1977 after several cocaine and heroin deals with an undercover officer working on Nevada and federal agencies. "I'm not bitter," Kirby said at a news conference Monday. "I had no business getting involved in what I did in the first place." MODesto, Calif. (AP) — he kid some considered a wimp" at Downey High school turned out to be the hero at the 20th reunion of the class of '62. That might be because George Lucas made himself and his school famous by writing the movie "American Graffiti" about prom night at Downey High. The 1973 film offered a slice of nostalgia about innocent youth growing up in central California before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and the beginning of the Vietnam war. Like all high school reunions, Saturday's was a piece of nostalgia for the filmmaker, who made "Star Wars," "The Empire Strikes Back" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark." Lucas' high school locker buddy, Dennis Kamstra, once called him "the kind of wimp I used to slap around with a well."

ATLANTA (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant was "rather upset" when a photograph of her dancing with a minister was distributed, the evangelist says. "It was the first time Anita has ever gone to a disco, and she was exploited in it," said the Rev. Russ McCraw of Montgomery, Ala., adding that "she'd like to have her privacy like anyone." McCraw, who ministers to homosexuals, said Monday that he and Miss Bryant were "just having a good time" when they stopped briefly at the night spot Saturday. Miss Bryant, 42, once was an outspoken opponent of homosexual rights in Florida. She now lives in Selma, Ala., and was visiting friends in Atlanta when she and McCraw went dancing.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Efrem Zimbalist Jr. has been appointed to the board of trustees of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts by his old friend, President Reagan. Zimbalist, who starred for nine years in the ABC television series, "The F.B.I.," succeeds former Kennedy aide LeMoine Billings. The board term will expire in 1988. The president on Monday named another personal friend, industrialist Justin Dart, to a federal post. Dart, a member of the president's so-called kitchen cabinet and chairman of the executive committee of Dart & Kraft Inc., was nominated to the board of directors of the Communications Satellite Corporation for a term expiring in 1985. His appointment is subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Revco's lower prescription prices can save you money.

We've filled over four hundred million prescriptions—all at a discount price. There's no better combination than your doctor's advice and a quality Revco prescription.

Save more with generic drugs. Ask your doctor if it's possible for him to specify a generic drug rather than a more expensive name brand. Revco can fill your prescription either way.

Extra savings for the people who need it most. Join our senior citizen or student club and receive an instant 10% discount on prescriptions.

We'll transfer your prescription. No matter where your prescription is being filled now, we'll call your doctor and arrange for it to be filled at Revco.
