

Columbia retires after flawless landing before thousands

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield relaxed at home today, hailed by President Reagan as Fourth of July heroes for a near-flawless shuttle voyage that cleared the way for Columbia to begin flying for pay this fall.

Columbia's fourth and final test flight ended in glory on the nation's 206th birthday with a pinpoint landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and a flag-waving, cheering, singing celebration of America.

In the central moment of a stunning display of U.S. technological skill and stirring showmanship, the astronauts brought Columbia from space to a dead center landing on a concrete runway while Reagan and more than 500,000 other spectators watched with awe.

"Unbelievable...just magnificent," Reagan said of the landing. Later, he told the astronauts, "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember."

Columbia even provided fireworks — a double sonic boom swept across the desert valley, heralding the approach of the speeding craft on its graceful descent to Earth.

The perfect touchdown ended a seven-day, 112-orbit mission. The craft will be ferried to Florida, reconditioned and launched again in October or November with a four-man crew and will deploy two satellites.

Reagan used the occasion to call for "establishing a more permanent presence in space." The White House issued a directive favoring deployment of an anti-satellite weapon and improvements in systems giving early warning of nuclear threats.

The message stopped short, however, of endorsing expansion of the space shuttle fleet or construction of a manned space station, moves favored by the space agency and by the Air Force.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials added to the drama of the day by assembling its entire fleet of the black-and-white, stubby-winged space shuttles.

As the President spoke, Columbia, still warm after its return from space, sat on the desert runway. Challenger, second craft in the fleet, was perched atop a 747, preparing for a ferry ride to Florida and an eventual space voyage next year. And Enterprise, the nonorbiting test ship and first of the line, formed a Presidential backdrop.

As Reagan finished his remarks, he ordered a jumbo jet carrying Challenger to take off. The mated craft leaped into the clear desert air, circled and made a low flyby over the assembled spectators.

Mattingly and Hartsfield later boarded a NASA Gulfstream jet and flew to Ellington Air Force Base near the Johnson Space Center here. They arrived minutes before the ferry craft landed for an overnight refueling stop.

Officials estimated that 500,000 people gathered to welcome home the astronauts and to look at the Challenger.

Reagan and his wife arrived at an Edwards Air Force base reviewing stand overlooking the runway just minutes before Columbia landed.

Pampa youth loses leg in holiday crash

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

There have been no deaths reported in the Texas Panhandle during the Department of Public Safety's "Operation Motorcade."

But a July 4th wreck near Clarendon claimed the leg of a Pampa youth, and a wreck early Friday morning south of Pampa, just before the official holiday death count began, killed two Pampans.

18-year-old Stan Organ, 2713 Seminole, had his left leg amputated, following injuries he sustained in a one-vehicle rollover about 3:50 a.m. Sunday morning on Interstate 40 east of Groom.

Investigators said Organ and two companions were eastbound on I-40 in a jeep without a top, when they exited toward the intersection with Texas Highway 70, 11 miles north of Howardwick and 12 miles east of Groom.

DPS trooper Jerry Morris said the vehicle was traveling too fast when it exited on the I-40 access road. He said Organ lost control of the vehicle, and "overcompensated," flipping the vehicle once.

Morris said Organ was thrown from the jeep.

Organ was transported by a Clarendon volunteer ambulance unit to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where today he is listed in serious condition. A hospital official said Organ's injuries required removal of his left leg.

Organ's companions, 19-year-old Leslie Wayne Alexander, 1121 Terry Road, and 19-year-old Rick Bronner, 1300 Duncan, received minor injuries in the crash and were transported by a private vehicle to Pampa, according to Morris.

Investigators said the youths were headed toward a July 4th rendezvous at Lake Greenbelt.

Early Friday morning, Steven Paul McGrady, 23, 110 S. Faulkner, and Pamela Gay Owens, 26, 1128 Duncan, both were pronounced dead at the scene.

Long lunar eclipse tonight

In a nocturnal spectacle visible from half the world, the moon will go into its longest eclipse of the century late tonight as the Earth passes between its satellite and the sun.

The eclipse, the longest since 1859, will occur when the Earth's shadow blocks the sunlight that causes the moon to "shine."

The Earth's penumbra, or lighter area of shadow, will begin to cover the moon at 11:22 p.m. tonight in Pampa. But the moon will appear no different until it moves into the Earth's darker shadow, or umbra, at 1:33 a.m. The moon will be totally eclipsed from 1:38 a.m. to 3:24 a.m. in Pampa, a period of an hour and 46 minutes.

The eclipse may be more spectacular than usual because of a huge cloud created by the March 29 eruption of the Chinchonal volcano in Mexico.

... and our happy hydrant

Pampa didn't have an official fireworks display this year, but the fire department, in checking out the water mains, added to the festive spirit by uncorking this fire-hydrant at Cuyler and Francis. The brightly painted hydrant, seemingly exuding holiday enthusiasm, was captured for the moment by staff photographer Bruce Lee Smith.

Who wrote the Declaration?

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On his tombstone, Thomas Jefferson described himself as the "author of the Declaration of American Independence." But two self-styled historians say Benjamin Franklin — not Jefferson — deserves the title.

The declaration — 206 years old this Fourth of July — was really written by Franklin, say Maurice and Mollie Freedman, who analyzed the handwriting on an early draft copy of the famed document.

Jefferson and Franklin scholars call the theory "hogwash," "fishy" and "ludicrous," but they say no historians have tried to study the Freedmans' theory closely.

The Freedmans, of New York City, say that "at every turn" they have found evidence supporting their hypothesis.

Maurice, a retired archivist and systems analyst for the Royal Canadian Navy, and Mollie, who has taught handwriting analysis and document examination at Cooper Union in New York City, have studied everything about Franklin and the declaration for 12 years.

The Freedmans say Jefferson and Franklin experts have "merely rubber-stamped each other's theories."

Several years ago, the Freedmans claimed the parchment declaration was written in Franklin's hand in Paris and that Franklin signed all 56 names.

But they stopped short of saying publicly that Franklin wrote the original draft. The document historians say is Jefferson's original is in the Library of Congress.

Now the Freedmans say they have studied a nine-page document identified by scholars as a copy of Jefferson's first declaration draft. Mrs.

Freedman says she found several hundred points of similarity between the handwriting on the document and that on other Franklin works, among them: m's and n's rounded at the top and double f's finished with a tie that retreats across the letters.

Freedman says the document is "replete with Franklin's literary style" and that it's only natural that the founding fathers would pick Franklin, who had the most writing experience of them all, as the principal author.

The Freedmans challenge historians to examine their evidence. "We will take the FBI as the final source on handwriting analysis," Freedman says. The FBI has not volunteered to analyze the documents.

At the National Archives, where the Declaration of Independence parchment is on display, the chief of diplomatic records says the Freedmans' theory is interesting. "But there is so much evidence the other way," adds Milton Gustavson. "Their theory is based on an analysis of handwriting, and it seems rather tenuous."

Charles T. Cullen, editor of the Jefferson Papers, says historians haven't taken the Freedmans seriously because "they're trying to disprove something there is general agreement and some firm evidence about."

Jefferson was chairman of the subcommittee of five that framed the declaration. The panel also included Franklin and John Adams.

Roberts is all-round champ at Canadian rodeo

By TONY LLOYD
Special Correspondent

CANADIAN — After three days of competition in the heat and wind, Eddie Roberts was named the All-Around Champion Cowboy at the annual Fourth of July Rodeo in Canadian.

Roberts won the bull riding event, pocketing more than $1,000 in prize money. The all-around winner is determined by the total prize money won.

Roberts bull ride was marked a 72 by the judges to take the buckle home, followed by Dale Wanger, 70; Lucky Lundergreen, 69; and Guy Bell, 65.

Mike Arterwin and Knicky Hank scratched identical scores of 64 to tie for first place in the bareback bronc riding, followed by Randy Mitchell, 62; Jim Martin, and Bobby Adcock, 61.

Kyle Ditto wrapped up his calf in 8.88 seconds to take the big money in the calf roping, followed by Dick Munsell, 9.13; Turk Sweatt, 9.65; and Perry Rowland, 10.33.

In the bulldogging event, the big winner was Keith Birkenfield, with a time of 5.66, followed by Johnny Johnson, 5.70; Jackie Lytle, 6.39; and Brent Hayes, 6.40.

Kelly Freeman was the top cowgirl at the rodeo, winning the one-go-round barrel race with a time of 17.03. She was followed by Gay Moore, 17.20; Stefanie Bartlett, 17.28; and Ruth Juden, 17.37.

In the classic rodeo event, Ron Chaplupuk spurred to a one-point margin win in the saddle bronc riding with a 66 marking on his horse, followed by Bill Stearns, 65; Rick Furnish, 63; and Milburn Outhier, 61.

The three-man team of Jimmy Mathews, Ronnie Hill, and Jerry Howell won the overall championship in the wild horse race at the rodeo.

Should phone company be given their rate hike?

Jerry Jarrell, Manager Flipside Records, Pampa:
No, I don't because the operators are usually rude. We have to call sometimes three or four times to place a long distance call because either our phone goes out or the other party can't hear us. This happens to us frequently. I don't think they deserve one until they show a little more service.

Aldine Lawrence, Heard & Jones Drug employee, Pampa:
"Well, I suppose they are entitled to it if everyone else is. Everybody else gets a raise so why not?"

Angie Walker, Walden Books employee, Pampa:
"No, I don't. I think they are a monopoly and they have it made. They don't need all those rates they can do something else in place of putting it on."

Scott Gray, Scotty's Wine and Cheese Shoppe, owner, Pampa:
"I would like to see something written down as far as why before I'd give it to them. I'd like to see a list of their expenses and operating schedules. I think it would be fair, seeing as how everybody in Texas will be affected."

Teresa Sims, Gordon's Jewelry employee, Pampa:
"Well, when you have called them several times to get your phone fixed and they never show up, why should they get a raise? We have made several long distance calls from the store and its either 'stattery' and you can't hear them or you get disconnected."

Hurtado: presidente de Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Government party candidate Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado was elected president of Mexico, the Interior Ministry announced today. Opposition parties said they did not dispute the victory, but complained of isolated irregularities at the polls.

"We can announce that Miguel de la Madrid took a lead over the other candidates in such a way as we are certain that he has obtained a majority by a wide margin," said Enrique Olivares Santana, the ministry's secretary.

However, officials said election returns were arriving too slowly to provide statistics on the scope of the victory.

The opposition cited reports of stuffed ballot boxes and election violence, including the alleged kidnapping of four poll watchers and the shooting of another. But none disputed the ruling party's victory in Sunday's election.

"These violations were not particularly grave because they were isolated," said Jose Minondo Garfias, the opposition National Action Party's representative on the national electoral commission.

"The election was not a farce," said Carlos Sanchez Cardenes, the socialist coalition's commission delegate. "It was a serious and important step toward a more democratic system."

De la Madrid agreed in a videotaped statement issued shortly after his victory was announced.

immediate word on results in voting for a new Congress, nor in the balloting for governor of southeastern Chiapas state.

The Communist-led United Socialist coalition claimed four of its election observers were kidnapped in Hidalgo State and another observer was shot and wounded near a polling station in the state of Puebla. There were reports of ballot box problems and other complaints in Jalisco, Puebla and several other states.

The Federal Electoral Commission said it will investigate the charges of election violence and irregularities.

Among the nation's economic problems are 60 percent inflation, chronic unemployment and a $60 billion foreign debt. The government imposed a 40 percent devaluation of the nation's peso currency earlier this year.

Clem McSpadden will be rodeo announcer again

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer
Oklahoma's Clem McSpadden will once again be the announcer for the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

A former state and U.S. legislator from Oklahoma and nationally known rodeo announcer, McSpadden is here for his second year at Pampa's rodeo by popular demand.

McSpadden has been the general manager of the National Finals Rodeo for 12 years, and is producer of the "World's Richest Roping."

He has appeared on ABC Television's "Wide World of Sports" several times and has announced rodeos in Calgary, Canada; Salt Lake City; Madison Square Garden, N.Y.; San Francisco Cow Palace; and Philadelphia Bicentennial Rodeo.

McSpadden was born in Bushyhead, Okla. and grew up on the Will Rogers ranch at Oologah where his father, Herb, was ranch manager for Rogers.

No running allowed in this race...

SCOTTSBORO, Ala. (AP) — The entry instructions were short but sweet: "No jogging, no running, no sore muscles." The finish line was only 33 feet from the start. And the timekeeper was taking a snooze.

It was the first "Good Ol' Boys No Run-Run," and a man who didn't even know he was entered was the winner Sunday, by proxy. A sluggish stand-in entry strolled and meandered for about three hours before breaking the tape.

The competition was "a backlash against all those healthy, ruddy-faced people who are always panting up and down the streets. It appeals to people who think joggers are a little strange," said Olivia Brewer, director of the Jackson County Council on Tourism.

Serious runners were barred. "Anyone who came in Nikes were asked to remove them," she said. The timekeeper fell asleep in a hammock, so there was no official time.

About 8,000 spectators gathered to watch as 300 non-runners dilly-dallied their way to the finish line.

Those who thought the competition too strenuous bought $10 "patron" tickets, which allowed them to sit in lawn chairs beneath a shady tree, sip lemonade and watch the non-runners.

The race was sponsored by the Jackson County Heritage Center to raise funds to renovate a 19th century house as a museum.

Mistaken drug arrest leaves stigma behind to hurt student

DALLAS (AP) — Two years ago, Jeffrey Covington was identified as a drug dealer and hauled away in handcuffs from Bryan Adams High School. It was a case of mistaken identity, but the stigma and the whispers changed his life.

Covington was 16, an honors student and a candidate for the school council. But because of mistakes later acknowledged by the Dallas Police Department, he was identified as a drug dealer and arrested.

And by the time police acknowledged the mistake and apologized, Covington had been suspended from school, barred from the student council race, flunked in all his courses and banned from taking final exams. He also lost a part-time job at a country club.

Covington is now 18 and will attend Stephen F. Austin University this fall. He has not forgotten his ordeal and worries that others never will.

"Right up to graduation, he'd walk away from a group of people and they'd wonder if he still does drugs," said a friend, Steve Thomas.

Two weeks ago, Covington lost his federal court suit seeking $2 million in damages from the city and from the police department.

"We had a straight-out case of negligence," said his lawyer, Paul F. Carnes. "But the law says a police officer is entitled to an 'honest mistake' and he shouldn't be held liable for that."

Covington received $4,200 in an out-of-court settlement with the Dallas Independent School District, but his mother, Joyce Thurman, said that covers only one-third of the expenses the arrest caused.

"We are still angry," she said. "You don't just say, 'Hey, I'm sorry this happened.' When a 16-year-old goes through an ordeal like Jeff did, that's hardly compensation."

According to police records, patrolwoman Janice Jenkins, one of two undercover officers posing as students at the high school, said she bought a handful of methaqualone pills in the school parking lot from students she knew only as "Jeff" and "Tim."

Her report said Jeff and Tim were friends and habitual drug dealers. To determine Jeff's last name she went through a school yearbook looking for someone with "funny teeth," her records say. She spotted Covington's picture and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

The investigation led to a roundup of drug suspects beginning May 15, 1980 — a Thursday. Arriving at school the following Monday, Covington was summoned to the principal's office and told police were on their way.

Two plainclothes police led him through the hallway in handcuffs. Most students were in class, said Covington, "but when I walked to the police car, there was a class across the courtyard. They all learned of it then."

Covington repeatedly denied any involvement with drugs, to no avail.

"I had heard about people getting put in jail for stuff they didn't do. I was afraid I wasn't going to get out of it," he recalled.

Mrs. Thurman went to Covington's father for help in getting details on the accusations against their son. Ira Covington was an officer with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Some inconsistencies emerged.

The teen-ager was home sick the day Ms. Jenkins said she had bought drugs from him. Ms. Jenkins said he drove a Pontiac Trans Am; he drives a Chevrolet Camaro. And the suspect named Tim told Mrs. Thurman he had never before seen her son.

Mrs. Thurman presented that evidence to Assistant District Attorney Gary Arey, who arranged a face-to-face meeting between Covington and Ms. Jenkins.

"When we first brought Jeff into the room, she kept scrutinizing his face," Carnes said. "Then she asked him to speak."

"After he spoke a sentence, she thought just a second. 'No, that's not the right Jeff.' She never said, 'I'm sorry.' Her superiors apologized."

Ms. Jenkins left on vacation after the jury verdict and could not be reached for comment.

SHUTTLE DRAWS CROWD. Challenger, America's second reusable space shuttle, draws a crowd at Ellington Air Force Base at Houston Sunday afternoon.

Crowds welcome astronauts home

ELLINGTON AFB, Texas (AP) — The space shuttle Challenger, the United States' second reusable spacecraft, arrived at this air force base south of Houston to a cheering, flag-waving throng of Independence Day celebrants.

The crowd gathered to view the newest addition to the nation's space shuttle fleet and also to welcome home astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartfield.

The two space travelers arrived back at their training site Sunday evening after a week-long trip on the shuttle Columbia.

The Challenger leaves Ellington today on the last leg of a trip from Edwards Air Force Base in California to Cape Canaveral, Fla. Mattingly and Hartfield briefly addressed the crowd of more than 50,000 before returning to the Johnson Space Center where they will undergo briefings this week.

But there was an unexpected diversion before the Challenger ever landed in Texas.

NASA officials said a single-engine Piper Lancer II made an emergency landing on the main runway at 3:58 p.m. CDT — just an hour and 28 minutes before the Columbia's sister ship landed on the same runway.

"The pilot had lost all electricity — his radio, his navigation aids — and had to come down at the nearest available runway," said NASA staff pilot Lacy Veach.

NASA officials did not know the names of the two people aboard and Ellington officials declined to discuss the incident.

The Piper landed safely and the incident went virtually unnoticed by the July 4 celebrants who lined the main runway for three-quarters of a mile and waited in 90-degree heat for the arrival of the astronauts and the Challenger.

Families with lawn chairs — and carrying coolers, binoculars, umbrellas and blankets — whooped, whistled, cheered and applauded as the Challenger arrived piggyback on a NASA transport jet.

The crowds at Ellington included visitors from as far away as Copenhagen, Denmark.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime chance for my children to see this, so we're willing to do it," said Henning Hansen, 32, of Waco, who brought his entire family and members of his brother's family, who live in Copenhagen.

Dean Reese, 27, of Houston, showed up with a 10-by-15 foot American flag, which he unfurled and enlisted the help of other spectators to hold down in the stiff breeze as the Challenger touched down.

"It's beautiful, it's fantastic," he said.

Two weeks ago, Covington lost his federal court suit seeking $2 million in damages from the city and from the police department.

"We had a straight-out case of negligence," said his lawyer, Paul F. Carnes. "But the law says a police officer is entitled to an 'honest mistake' and he shouldn't be held liable for that."

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble:

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals, call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Bonilla optimistic despite rejections

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Despite rejection of a proposal intended to make the League of United Latin American Citizens a powerful Hispanic political force, Tony Bonilla vowed not to let the organization return to a "Mexican-American Country Club" image.

"As long as I am national president, we are going to remain steadfast on our goals and objectives," he said. "There is no reason to be discouraged."

During the so-called "Brown Power Movement" of the 1960s, activist groups such as the defunct Raza Unida Party called LULAC "the Mexican-American Country Club" because it insisted on steering clear of politics.

Bonilla's proposal to create the first national Hispanic political action committee was shouted down by sharply divided delegates at a tumultuous closing business session at the LULAC national convention Sunday.

"We have liberals, conservatives, Democrats, Republicans, independents, and I think we have some idiots," Tony Bonilla said. "I think if we had a roll call vote, the resolution would have been accepted."

The resolutions chairman declared the PAC resolution was approved Sunday in a close voice vote, but Bonilla overruled him amid catcalls and ruled that it was defeated.

Bonilla said later he did not want to further divide the membership on the issue by asking for a roll call vote, although he contended some of those shouting "no" were not certified delegates.

Bonilla was unopposed for a second term as national president and was elected by acclamation.

But the 534 voting delegates rejected the PAC proposal that he strongly favored, and they also tabled all constitutional amendments — including one that would have increased his term of office from one to two years.

Bonilla said he pushed the longer presidential term to give "continuity" to the Hispanic movement.

He said he and his two brothers, William and Ruben, would implement "plan B," to form a national Hispanic PAC — independent of LULAC — that would endorse candidates and make political contributions.

"Our people are on board a train and the train is going to move right down the track," he said. "Those of the old guard better get on board or stand at the depot and wave goodbye."

Bonilla blamed defeat of the PAC measure on "old guard" and "loyal opposition" LULAC members who were defeated by Ruben Bonilla in 1979.

Ruben Bonilla served two one-year terms before Tony Bonilla's election in 1981, and has continued as national counsel of the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization. William Bonilla is a national executive board member.

Identity of man killed by police is unknown

HOUSTON (AP) — The identity of a man killed by police who were chasing him after a purse snatching remained a mystery late Sunday.

"We just wish we had some idea," said a spokeswoman for the Harris County medical examiner's office who declined to release his name.

Police officers from two independent towns within the Houston city limits say the man, who was suspected of stealing a purse from the passenger seat of a van, fired twice at them as he fled.

W.W. Snitkin, chief of police in West University Place, said one officer from his department and one from the Southside Place department shot the man several times after he opened fire from behind a brick wall.

Snitkin said the incident began about 9 a.m. Saturday when a purse was stolen off the seat of a van that a woman was driving out of a carwash.

The man fled on a bicycle, Snitkin said, and the woman flagged down Southside officer Andy Anderson. Anderson was joined in the chase by Bernie Kammerman of the West University Place police.

Snitkin said the two chased the man into an apartment complex, where the man fired twice at Anderson. Anderson returned the fire, and the man leaped a wall and landed beside Kammerman, Snitkin said.

Both officers fired on the man, who was carrying a small-caliber handgun, Snitkin said.

Is labor abundant or scarce?

If just one more person tells me that we must "create more jobs," I shall scream.

A visitor from Mars might well be mystified. He might ask, "Do you Earth folks work to live, or live to work?"

Plainly, men work and produce in order to eat and live. We are born consumers, we produce from necessity. We try to minimize work — that is, save labor — and maximize product. We do not "create jobs," we create goods. There is no shortage of jobs today. There is a serious shortage of goods and services.

The goods and services we want are many and complex. They require skills to produce. These skills are scarce, and this fact accounts for the shortage of goods — and services. This situation seems bound to get even worse. The shortage of skilled workers who can do the work that is wanted will grow.

"Despite our lengthening unemployment lines," says Pat Choate of TRW, Inc., and Noel Epstein of the Washington Post, in a current report. "We are suffering from shortages of skilled workers, from machinists to engineers. The result: bottlenecks, higher prices and lower quality in both domestic and defense products." They cite these labor shortages:

The Atlantic Research Corporation, Alexandria, Va., is offering staff members a $1,000-a-head bonus to find new workers for hard-to-fill jobs, ranging from communications test equipment technicians to electronic engineers.

In California's so-called Silicon Valley, the competition to lure engineers, computer professionals and other skilled workers from one firm to another is so intense that job turnover rates are as high as 80 to 100 percent per year.

A 1981 survey by the American Electronics Association estimates that 671 of its member companies will have more than 250,000 additional professional and semi-professional openings by 1985.

The National Tooling and Machining Association projects a shortage in three years of more than 240,000 machinists.

Millions more new job slots will emerge in the design, production and installation of the robots that soon will populate American industry. Other jobs will open in Fiber optics and in genetic engineering. And the age of computers is now invading the American home.

Choate and Epstein say there will be far too many new jobs ening for today's unemployed to fill even if they acquired the necessary skills. What is urgently needed, they say, is that we begin retraining millions of the employed so that they can shift to the new jobs that are opening up.

This, in turn, will require joint efforts by business and government to enlarge and improve the quality of vocational education. They emphasize that we must reverse "the decline in American teacher competence." Our schools are better than formerly but call for still more improvement.

And, they add, "We have to attack the anti-blue-collar arrogance that discourages our children from learning skilled trades."

We need "human capital," they say, better and in greater quantity.

Indeed we do. Can we develop it? Will people acquire the skills called for and perform the technical work that cries out to be done? Or will they settle back, take life easy, and live on the doles that are available to them?

First, they must understand that our job is not to "create jobs," or to do made-work, but to fit ourselves for the difficult jobs that the modern age demands doing.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, July 5, the 186th day of 1982. There are 179 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 5, 1978, a truce in Lebanon collapsed amid urgent negotiations to end fighting between Syrian peacekeeping soldiers and the Lebanese Christian militia.

Also on this date: In 1811, Venezuela became the first South American country to declare its independence from Spain.

In 1940, the Vichy government in France broke off relations with Britain in World War II.

In 1963, high level Chinese and Soviet officials met in Moscow to discuss differences over communist ideology.

In 1974, relations between the United States and Turkey became strained because of Turkey's decision to resume growing opium poppies.

Ten years ago the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington ruled that the Democratic credentials committee violated the Constitution when it stripped Sen. George McGovern of 151 California delegates to the national convention.

Five years ago Pakistan's army seized power in a bloodless coup, imposed martial law and promised new elections in October.

One year ago in Liverpool, England, bloody rioting broke out, injuring nearly 100 policemen. The clashes followed riots in immigrant communities in other British cities.

Today's birthdays: Former U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge is 80. Julie Nixon Eisenhower is 34.

Thought for today: In peace, sons bury their fathers. In war, fathers bury their sons. — Herodotus, Greek historian (5th century B.C.)

Idealist loses illusions

When Michigan liberal William M. Brodhead first came to Congress as one of the large class of Democrat "Watergate Babies" in 1974, he was filled with excitement and expectation.

"I kept saying, 'I can't believe I get paid for this, it's so much fun,'" he recalled. "I didn't want there to be one unemployed person in my district. I didn't want there to be one handicapped child without an opportunity for educational access. I wanted to do everything."

A few days ago, Brodhead stayed home from work and wrote his resignation from Congress effective at the end of this year. Friends and foes alike were astounded. Brodhead was not only a shoo-in for re-election but was seen as probable future governor of Michigan. What happened?

In Brodhead's case, it was not just the familiar story of the dedicated, burned-out overachiever who had finally had enough, although that was part of it. How, he asked, "can you be under this constant, growing pressure from lobbyists and special-interest groups?" Beyond that, it was Brodhead's complete disillusionment with politics, a feared loss of perspective and professional integrity and a growing feeling that a few of the people surrounding him really cared for the good of the country.

Brodhead who yearly got perfect or near-perfect scores from the Americans for Democratic Action at the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, said the feeling had grown in him especially the past two years that Congress was a "nut house."

The story of idealists coming face to face with realism and discovering government can't create Utopia is an old one, and Brodhead is not the first to discover hypocrisy and compromise dominate politics, but he's an interesting convert.

Undeserving firms, rich get SBA loans

The jury found John W. Hinckley Jr. innocent, but the whole world knows he is guilty. They saw it all on TV. What they didn't see was what was going on in his mind.

The psychiatrists saw that, they say, and they convinced the jurors that Hinckley's mental turbulence made him a sick man, sick to the point of doing something that he was not responsible for. Therefore, they said that he was innocent of any wrongdoing. He couldn't even be convicted of carrying a pistol without a license. He just didn't know that was wrong, they said.

Now will come the debate. On one side will be the theorists who believe that a person's state of mind makes him do things for which he in no way can be blamed. On the other side will be the practicalists who say one person brought harm or death to another and, therefore, that person should be punished.

It is not a new question. It has been around for years, almost as long as the profession of psychiatry itself. The problem comes when other finite minds try to determine at what point a person's mind no longer reasons logically but instead leads one's body into violent, explosive, insane acts.

John Hinckley will not go to a hospital where he will be treated. He could stay there for a short period of time, or he could stay there for much longer. The very fact that world-wide attention has come to focus on him could guarantee that he will not be released into society before it is believed that he is 100 percent "cured."

Although the case of John Hinckley is celebrated, it is only a microcosm of the overall problems. Hinckley is only one among dozens, hundreds, probably thousands of defendants who have killed and maimed and been found innocent by reason of insanity.

What about their cases? What happens after a half dozen years and interest wanes in a particular case? With prisons full and overflowing, with district attorneys having moved on to other jobs or retired, with witnesses having died or moved away, who is around to guarantee that a person who killed before won't be allowed to go free to kill again?

That's the question that follows in the wake of the Hinckley finding. There is little to worry about Hinckley. In all probability, he will be a prisoner in hospitals for years to come. But the many others who have had their lives spared because they were adjudged insane stand to be back on the streets when the pressure dies and the public is looking somewhere else.

The results in this trial should bring national attention to a tragic void in the judicial process. The consensus all over America today seems to be that something is amiss, that a hole needs to be plugged.

It ought to be, and as soon as possible.

Government-backed loans from the Small Business Administration have helped a lot of small companies, some of which have grown into big national corporations such as Federal Express, Apple Computer and NBI Inc. But there is a darker side of the picture.

It appears the SBA is still approving low-interest, guaranteed loans to undeserving companies and individuals. It was revealed, for example, that the SBA granted a $65,000 loan at 9 percent to a notorious pornographic emporium in New York City. The outfit was described as one of the richest and rauchiest on Time Square.

Rita Rick, an SBA spokeswoman, said the loan was made by several private investment companies because SBA rules don't bar such loans. She and other SBA officials contended that barring such a loan to this porno operation might have raised First Amendment issues.

Baloney. There is no reason why taxpayers are obligated to support this kind of operation. It's not a question of legality, but just good common sense. The public's money, taken through confiscatory taxation in the first place, should never be used to support degrading, immoral operations.

In another case, it was found that under special rules applying to "minority enterprise," Donald A. Nixon and a partner received a low-interest $45,000 SBA loan that was used to buy gold claims north of Lake Tahoe. This Donald Nixon it turns out, is the nephew of former President Richard M. Nixon. He was considered officially "disadvantaged" because he is a Vietnam veteran.

Another "disadvantaged" borrower was Avelino Gutierrez, an Albuquerque lawyer who qualifies because he is of Mexican heritage. He listed the net worth of himself and his wife at nearly $2 million, but nevertheless was given a low-interest SBA loan to help finance an office building he owns.

Low-interest SBA loans sometimes go to wealthy people who form investment groups whose purpose is said to be helping small business. In one such deal, the SBA loaned $14 million to an investment group that included actors Paul Newman and Burt Reynolds, as well as producer Norman Lear and 50 other show business personalities.

Obviously, more revamping of the SBA is needed. When taxpayer-supported loans are going to a porno house in New York, to some well-heeled "disadvantaged" borrowers and to millionaire actors and other wealthy people, the time has come for another crackdown on SBA hijinks.

Loss of Civility

The dictionary describes "civility" as observance of the forms of accepted social behavior. In recent years, however, civility has been on the decline. This is a very unhappy development for American society.

This situation came to mind recently when I read a letter written by an applicant for a job. The applicant thanked the potential employer for his letter of reply, saying: "I have received your most kind letter. I would like to thank you for replying to my original letter. Few people or organizations bother to respond these days." That's a true statement.

Impoliteness often seems to be the rule in our era. People don't bother to reply to letters. Telephone manners often are abysmal. The traditional forms of social behavior are eroded by bad usage. Sometimes it seems that only the armed services continue to use "sir" as a form of address. People are very neglectful about expressing thanks for gifts or other generous deeds. Many newspapers debase social usage by mentioning women without polite titles, referring to them as "Smith" or "Jones."

Many of the people who are utterly lacking in civility simply don't know any better. They haven't been taught to be polite and respectful to people with whom they deal. One can say that this is another failure of the schools. However, the fundamental failure is in the home.

In another era, people with the poorest preparation for polite society were accustomed to be civil. All that we have today is an artificial, public relations politeness — the "have a nice day" sort of remark that is decreed by a customer relations manual.

Fortunately, the armed services, especially the naval service, have done more than anyone else to preserve some of the niceties of social existence. Young men and women are taught to stand when a non-commissioned or commissioned officer comes into a room. Many of them absorb civil ways that last them for a lifetime.

Civility isn't an affectation. It is necessary for a smooth-running society. People need and are entitled to respect and to outward signs of it. Civility and good manners makes possible reasonable working relations among people with very different beliefs and objectives. Courtesy helps people through the most difficult and socially dangerous situations. One will not agree with everyone all of the time, but one may be courteous all the time.

The decline of civility is a bad sign in a society. It is a sign of breakdown and polarization. It means a recourse to harsh dealings and rough contests.

In the 1980's, we need to get away from the impoliteness, the lack of courtesy, and the absence of civility. We need to observe again the once accepted forms of social behavior, which were neglected or rejected in the turbulent, disorderly 1960's.

People who understand the importance of civility are happier and more productive people. Everyone is better off where politeness rules.

By PAUL HARVEY

The hospital givaway

If your luncheon club charges everybody the same, few will eat salads; most will eat steak.

There is a disinclination to eat less.

If you go to the hospital and the bill is going to be paid by an insurance company or by a government agency, it is understandable if out-patients become in-patients, if you demand more and stay longer — often more and longer than necessary.

Yet at the end of the year when all the bills are in and added up and divided by numbers of patients, the numbers indicate the cost of hospitalization is soaring.

Another analogy that will help us understand something we need to understand:

In the representative state, Tennessee, there are 160 hospitals. This year they will provide $2.2 billion worth of health services.

But for almost a fourth of that they will not get paid!

For 23 percent of that $2.2 billion the hospitals will be uncompensated because of underpayment by Medicare, Medicaid, bad debts and patients who are not eligible for "government money" and have no money of their own, but must be treated anyway.

It is not unusual for government to pay 63 percent of a charge, the patient to pay 7 percent — and nobody to pay 30 percent.

That adds to the costs that paying patients must pay; that adds to the much-mentioned escalating cost of hospitalization.

In the case of Tennessee hospitals, the care which hospitals will provide this year for which they will receive no payment amounts to $500 million, or 23 percent of that state's total hospital bill.

That is equivalent to an automobile dealer being required to give away every fourth car!

He's got to charge more for the other three!

Tennessee hospitals also economize in every way they know how — group purchasing, careful energy management and use, industrial engineering, delegation of non-medical services.

Memphis has become a medical mecca with 18 hospitals, five of them big ones. Memphis Baptist Hospital with its more than 2,000 beds is the largest in the world — and still growing.

Methodist Hospital, Memphis, is among our nation's big-three non-tax-supported hospitals.

There may be no place in America where medical care is more efficient and more available.

Yet, despite all the factors tending to increase costs — expensive equipment, third-party payment, deadbeats and gratuitous services — health care costs in Tennessee are 30 percent less than the national average.

So everything I've said is likely worse wherever else you are.

Shoppers say it is harder than ever to make ends meet today

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

pemaket shoppers are more worried about rising unemployment than they are about rising prices, but they still say it is harder than ever to make ends meet and many are gloomy about the future, according to a recent industry survey.

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. for the Food Marketing Institute, a trade association whose members account for about half of all grocery store sales. It was one of a series of annual studies commissioned by the institute beginning in 1974 to measure public attitudes about the economy and the grocery business.

Almost two-thirds of those questioned in the latest survey — 63 percent — said that if they had to choose between higher unemployment and rising prices, they would select joblessness as the more serious problem; 24 percent said inflation was more serious. In a similar survey last year, 50 percent said unemployment was more serious and 37 percent said rising prices were a more severe threat. (The remainder of the survey participants in both cases said they were not sure whether unemployment or inflation was worse.)

Sixty percent of the shoppers surveyed said they were finding it harder to make ends meet and 34 percent said there was no change in their personal financial situation. Only 6 percent said it was easier to make ends meet today.

The number of people who believe that prices are rising faster than they were a year ago declined from 1981 to 1982, but a substantial segment of the public still worries about the increases.

Forty-five percent of those questioned in the latest survey said prices were rising more rapidly today, compared to 72 percent of those polled a year ago. Twenty-nine percent of this year's respondents said, however, that prices were rising as rapidly as they had been.

About their personal economic futures, 28 percent said they expected their financial situation to improve in the coming year. Almost as many — 25 percent — said they expected a worsening of personal finances; 43 percent predicted no change and 4 percent were not sure.

The latest survey was based on telephone interviews during January 1982 with a representative nationwide sample of 1,003 men and women shoppers. Among other findings:

—Utility costs and supermarket prices are the areas of greatest concern for shoppers. Fifty-seven percent of those questioned said they expect sharp increases in utility bills and 30 percent said they anticipated big boosts at the supermarket.

—When asked "Whom do you blame most for high food prices today — or don't you blame anyone," the biggest chunk of respondents — 44 percent — replied, "No one."

Head spaceman says U.S. must get back to research

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Lack of money for basic research during the past 15 years means the space shuttle program is using technology dating back to the 1960s and 1970s, the incoming director of the Johnson Space Center says.

The United States must again start funding research that will not produce immediate results if this country is to make progress in space exploration, Gerald Duane Griffin said in a recent interview.

"Basic research has kind of gotten pushed aside," he said. Griffin, 47, also said the next major goal of the United States should be to establish a permanently staffed space station.

"We have eaten up most of the technology we have," he said. "NASA is a reflection of this on a national scale. We don't have the R&D (research and development) base to move on to the next step we must take."

He said educating Congress and the public to the need for more research is the key to getting money.

Reagan: No more to be said about Haig

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is treating the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. like classified information — details available only on a "need to know" basis. He says there is no need to be filled and no purpose to be served by saying more about it.

Reagan took that position at his nationally televised news conference and underscored it as he headed to his Santa Barbara ranch for an Independence Day vacation.

What is known, on the public record, is that the secretary of state resigned and said it was because the foreign policy of the administration was faulty, and that the president said it wasn't.

Haig said he quit because Reagan policy had shifted away from the agreed-upon course of consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose. Reagan said the policy has produced great successes and needs no revision.

He said that will be that so far as public explanations go. "If I thought there was something involved in this that the American people needed to know, with regard to their own welfare, then I would be frank with the American people and tell them," Reagan said. "I don't think there's anything that in any way would benefit the people to know or that will in any way affect their good judgment."

To the news conference suggestion that he was critical of the explanation when a Democratic secretary of state resigned in protest, Reagan said there were indications then of things the American people did need to know for their own judgment.

When Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance resigned in 1980, it was in opposition to the attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran by force, a military mission that turned out to be a failure.

Reagan didn't have much to say about Vance at the time he quit. He was seeking the Republican presidential nomination, and had at the time ruled out campaign discussion of the hostage situation. He made an issue of it later on, but not then.

Reagan critics are going to be no less demanding of further explanation in the Haig resignation. They have a forum for those demands in the coming confirmation hearings on Shultz.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, insists that Reagan owes the public an explanation.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

July 5, 1982

Your role in the family will take on greater importance this coming year. Your ability to see things from all angles will have a most favorable influence on the clan.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's quite commendable of you to let bygones be bygones, but you had better let a cohort know about your change in attitude or he might feel betrayed. Predictions of what's in store for you for each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be wary of building your hopes too high based solely on hearsay information. The situation involved is a bit more complex than surface appearances indicate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is nothing wrong with going after a material opportunity you may hear of today, but take care that you don't step on anyone else's toes in the process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your motives for doing something affecting another may be very good, but unless you make your reasons known this person may resent your interference.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your own reasoning faculties are the most dependable today. Don't let a know-it-all step in and influence you. He or she could upset your apperant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In group involvements today, all contributions should be discussed and decided upon by all, or one person will find a way to make the others pay his share.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be too quick today to agree upon taking on new duties or responsibilities. You may later find out a lazy individual palmed-off all of his work on you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could get so involved today with new ideas and plans for a social function that you'll forget an important obligation. Brace yourself for repercussions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In family issues today, try to keep friends out of the picture. Outside interference could hamper your chances of working matters out to everyone's satisfaction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you stop and think before you speak, you can avoid a serious clash at home today. Listening to the other person's point of view first will help considerably.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An excellent opportunity for career advancement may be presented to you today, but you might need to modify your thinking in order to recognize it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Changing horses in midstream today could prove expensive. Before jumping into any new situation, take care of old obligations and responsibilities.

Fine line drawn between incest and affection

By DAVE BRUMMETT

One of the major goals in our everyday lives is to feel good. Most people awaken in the morning to enjoy this day; few are able to make it happen. A reason for not having a good day is that we may not feel accepted by those whom we encounter. We take another person's inability to be pleasant to us as a personal putdown. What it really is might be their lack of interest in answering our request for acceptance: give me some affection.

Children let us know when they want affection. They whimper, cry, act out violently, crawl into our laps or ask for a hug and a kiss. They know how to get our attention and acceptance.

There is a fine line between affection and manipulation for sexual self-satisfaction. Recently, scholars have concluded that incest may verge on an epidemic. Some believe that one out of every 100 American women was sexually abused as a child by her father. Many experts conclude that number is too low.

Incest has been blamed on the poor and among people who live on farms, and isolation from the larger community. The truth is that incest occurs in all areas of society and surfaces more frequently than most of us want to imagine. This request for acceptance has gone beyond affection.

In modern circles, there are some who believe affection is the key in terminating incest. Affection is one need we can agree is satisfying. It can lead to a strong belief in myself. I am important because you showed me affection: a smile, a handshake, sat close.

It can mean that I'm important to you. There are other people with whom you can be affectionate, and you chose me. I must have an important place in your life. You came to me and held my hand. In your gift to me, I must give, in some way, to you.

Affection can be taken incorrectly too because there are boundaries. The line is carefully drawn. In families, affection is one thing for parents and children. It is another with good friends, and still another between associates.

Incest is crossing the line and disobeying the rules of society. Most incest incidents are between father and daughter, step father and step daughter.

One consequence she suffers is relating to her parents. Mothers tend to blame her for seducing the father. Guilt is built into her through content. Shame is projected toward her. Threats are made to force denial. She is mentally bruised.

Another consequence occurs when she is married. Relating to her mate may lead her to recall unpleasant sexual interactions. She may resent men, feel awkward sexually or guilty and uncomfortable.

The third consequence is her sexual life has been tarnished. All her friends plan dates or weddings with the anticipation of their first sexual experience. She is sad because her first sexual act was suffered at an early age, probably by a father-figure wanting affection. He crossed the line and the victim suffers all her life.

Siblings experience incest, as do mothers with their sons and fathers with their sons.

These incidents are fewer, it is believed. Larna and Philip Sarrel write in their article "Incest: Why It Is Our Last Taboo." "We don't believe that within the family, open discussion of sex, a degree of nudity and lots of affectionate touching are problematic; we believe that they are healthy.

However, affection is different from deliberate erotic stimulation; a comfortable acceptance of the human body is different from an exhibitionism that is intended to be seductive."

Children have the rights to control their own bodies, not to suffer abuse and exploitation sexually and not to feel the pain from unwanted intrusions. Incest forfeits these rights. It can mar one's mind for life.

It is doubtful if there is one person reading this article who has not shown you child affection. Good! Affection is a request for acceptance. Each of us can use a steady supply of acceptance, can't we?

There is a fine line between appropriate affection and incest. If you cross the line get help for your family immediately. The longer you wait, the more everyone suffers and the damages can be unresolved.

For those who choose to give affection, let it be given in order for the recipient to feel accepted. Give your family members a hug. It heals the mind and feels good.

More Women

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Women have made substantial inroads into male-dominated fields, such as service and sales, in the past 10 years, according to a study compiled by a maker of office and postal equipment.

In 1972, 99.9 percent of all Pitney Bowes sales representatives were men. Today, women compose close to one-fifth of the sales force.

Service and repairing office machinery was then a solely male field, but women now account for 8 percent of the force. While most administrative employees are female, the percentage of men in that area has jumped from 6 percent in 1972 to 15 percent today.

Jazzing it up

DETROIT (AP) — The motor capital of the world may be edging up on New Orleans as the jazz-festival center of the nation.

The second Montreux-Detroit International Jazz Festival drew more than 350,000 fans to its 82 concerts despite a soggy start. The 700 musicians participating in it included such headliners as Cleo Laine, Sarah Vaughan, Herbie Hancock, and Earl "Fatha" Hines.

"We were absolutely delighted that in our second year the Detroit Festival has become established as one of the leading jazz festivals in the world," said Robert E. McCabe, president of Detroit Renaissance, the festival's principal sponsor.

Dear Abby
Mother is picky about title
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We are still having an argument that began on Mother's Day. Perhaps you can help us settle it. On Mother's Day I received flowers with a card that read, "To Mother on her special day." It was signed by both my son and his wife, whose mother is still living. I later learned that my daughter-in-law's mother also received flowers with a card signed by both my son and his wife.

I say that the card that came with my flowers should have been signed by my son only. After all, I carried him under my heart for nine months, gave him life and raised him to manhood. I am his mother — and not the mother of the stranger he married.

My son's wife has her own mother, but she is not the mother of my son!

I know if you print this, you will receive many letters from mothers saying, "As long as I am remembered on Mother's Day, I don't care who signs the card." However, that is not the point. The point is that being called "Mother" is a sacred privilege that belongs only to the woman who has earned it.

DEAR MOTHER: Obviously, a person can have only one mother, but when people marry, they create a new "family," and their spouse's relatives become their relatives, traditionally as well as by law. Don't split hairs, Mother, lest you split families.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and just finished 11th grade. I flunked one semester of social studies, so now my dad has to pay $80 for me to go to night school to make it up. I didn't want to go to night school in the first place, but he says if I don't go, I can't drive, and you know how important driving is to a kid my age.

Anyway, get this, Abby, my dad is making me pay back the $80. Do you think he is being fair?

MAD
DEAR MAD: Yes. And wise, too.

Civil War examined

ORDEAL BY FIRE. By James M. McPherson. Knopf. 694 Pages. $29.95.

Princeton University professor James M. McPherson hasn't written just another history of the Civil War. "Ordeal By Fire" does more than just chronicle military campaigns. And the book does far more than just rehash traditional theories on the fall of the Confederacy.

What is immediately impressive about "Ordeal By Fire" is the detail that McPherson develops to explain the social and economic conditions in both the North and the South before the war. He shows the Southern states' great reliance on the North not only for manufactured products, but also for the sale of their cotton. He successfully debunks theories about the so-called economic benefits of slavery and presents evidence showing that, "in short, slavery and modernizing capitalism were irreconcilable."

McPherson also clearly explains the battles of the war. He doesn't become immersed in tactics — although they are there — and he isn't afraid to use the illuminating anecdote. For example, to show the divided nation he cites Kentucky Sen. John J. Crittenden, who had one son become a general in the Union army and the other a general in the Confederate army.

McPherson also pauses in his narration about the surrender of Lee to point out that the signing occurred in the Appomattox living room of a man who had given up his home near Manassas after it had been used by the Rebels during the first Battle of Bull Run so he could get away from the war.

"Ordeal By Fire" also documents what happened during the Reconstruction and shows how the issues that grew during that period festered into this century.

The book is an illuminating look into what McPherson calls "the central event in the American historical consciousness."

ROYAL AWARD. Jimmy Connors talks with the Duke and Duchess of Kent after the Duchess presented Connors with the Wimbledon Men's Singles championship trophy Sunday in London. Connors beat title holder John McEnroe, 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 to take the title.

Navratilova is No. One ... period

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova can finally lay claim to being No. 1 without adding any qualifications. The powerful left-hander is No. 1 on the Women's Tennis Association computer. She has won 54 of 55 matches this year. She is far and away the biggest money winner on the women's tour this year. Still, there was the spectre of Chris Evert Lloyd. Navratilova erased that obstacle Saturday by capturing the women's singles title at the All-England Tennis Championships, defeating Lloyd 6-1, 3-6, 6-2 in a match that tested all the strokes in Martina's arsenal. "She played well under pressure," Lloyd said her conqueror. "I thought she might crack there for a while. But she had to win the match. I didn't give it to her."

It was Navratilova's 19 consecutive final and her 14th victory. It was those losses that made observers wonder. She crushed Tracy Austin in the opening set of the U.S. Open finals last year, only to lose in three sets. She lost to Austin again in Stuttgart, West Germany, and to her for a third time in the Toyota Championships in East Rutherford, N.J. Lloyd then beat her during the women's Australian tour. But the Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova, who became a U.S. citizen last year, beat Lloyd in the Australian Open and ran roughshod through the Avon winter tour until the championships in March, which she lost to Sylvia Hanika of West Germany. Since then, she's been unbeatable. Andrea Jaeger was her victim at both the Family Circle Cup and the French Open. But there was still Lloyd, the reigning queen of women's tennis who picks her spots to play and usually wins. "Martina kind of choked that match," Chris said of last year's U.S. Open finals. "When she's been in a tough situation in the past, Tracy or I have come out better. But she won this match." "I was expected to win here," Martina said. "I was the favorite. But it's always hard to win in that position."

Beats McEnroe Connors wins Wimbledon crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe began separated only by a net and 78 feet of worn green grass. They ended more than four hours later, separated by the gulf between a champion and a runnerup. "Neither one of us was going to roll over and die. It was kill or be killed out there," Connors said Sunday in the aftermath of his 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 triumph over the defending champion to capture the All-England tennis championship at Wimbledon. "That's why we have great matches." And, it had to be great, if only to eclipse all the troubles that had plagued the 98th installment of Wimbledon. With five of the top 10 ranked men players — including four of the top six — absent for a variety of reasons and rain that fell nearly every day of the fortnight, the prestige of both the tournament and the All-England Club was in need of saving. A subway and railroad strike cut even deeper into the gate, which totaled 320,000 through the two-week-long tournament, a drop of more than 37,000 from last year's meeting. And, who was better for the job of saving the tournament than Connors, the 1974 champion, who was in need of a little saving himself. Since winning the 1978 U.S. Open title, the world's third-ranked player had failed to reach the final of a Grand Slam tournament — the Australian, French and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon — having lost eight times in the semifinals and twice in the quarterfinal bracket of those events. "I did it in 1974, and once is fine and dandy if you want to be a one-timer. But

I'm not a one-timer," he said of the Wimbledon title. "I had the chance to do it three times since then (1975 against Arthur Ashe; 1977 and 1978 against Bjorn Borg) and it slipped by me. "I had another chance today. I was going to do anything to stop that chance from slipping by me again, and that means fighting to the death." But at the opening of the match — fittingly on Independence Day, the first all-American final since 1975 — it appeared the only struggle would be against boredom. Connors broke through in the opening game to build a quick 3-1 edge, only to have McEnroe capitalize on his opponent's lackluster play by taking the next five games and the set. Then it was McEnroe's turn to err, with Connors using breaks in the second and fourth games to win the second set by an identical 6-3 score. But slowly their instincts began to take over and the tension mounted as the third set got under way. Sporadic urging by the isolated spectators swelled into cheers from the enter crowd at Centre Court. Connors gained another break in the first game, pushed it to 5-4, and was serving for the set. At 30-30, he delivered the sixth of his eight double-faults in the set. No. 7 came at break point. After an exchange of serve, the set went to a tiebreaker. "I said to myself, 'You're out of it if you don't get straight. You've got to slow down and cut out the errors,'" recalled Connors. Although his serve was never broken from that juncture on, Connors would have to wait for his payoff. McEnroe's sixth ace of the match — he would finish with 19 — gave him a set point in the tiebreaker, and a service winner gave him the third set. By the fourth set, umpire Bob Jenkins was forced to call repeatedly for the capacity crowd of 14,000 to "let the gentlemen play." And play they did. "I thought I would hold on to the title after the third set," said McEnroe. "I feel bad I didn't win, but I had a better time this year than last. It was tight all the way through, but he won the bigger points at the end." The fourth set followed serve despite the fact that McEnroe drilled 10 aces, two of them during a love game to force a second tiebreaker. He rocketed yet another ace to take a 4-3 lead in the tiebreaker, only to have Connors rip off the next three points and capture the set with a service winner. Connors gained the winning margin with a service return down the line for a break in the third game. After the two held serve to 5-4, the 29-year-old Belleville, Ill., native served his 13th double-fault of the match. But he finished the match with a service winner, leaped into the air as he made his way to the net, then walked to the end of the court, where his wife Patti met him, and collected a kiss. "I am not going to extend my career by another eight years," Connors assured reporters. Martina Navratilova, on the other hand, looked as if she could go on for at least another eight years in taking the women's title Saturday from defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

AL roundup

Boston regains lead over Brewers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
Baseball lore dictates that the teams in first place on July 4 will win the pennant. Maybe so, but two of the three holiday leaders in the American League are no longer there on July 5.

In the AL East, Boston and Milwaukee were tied for first after a record-tying two-week barrage of home run fireworks by the Brewers — 35 in 15 games — but the Brewers were tamed Sunday by Dennis Eckersley, who fired a six-hitter as the Red Sox rolled to a 4-1 victory and regained a one-game lead over Milwaukee.

"This gives us some confidence because those guys had been hammering us," said Boston catcher Gary Allenson. "Now we're in first place ourselves. If they had swept us here, it might have meant a psychological edge for them."

Kansas City did sweep in the AL West. With Amos Otis hitting two solo homers and Bud Black and Mike Armstrong holding California to two hits, the Royals handed the Angels their fifth consecutive setback 6-1 and nosed past them to the top by one-half game.

In other AL games, the Seattle Mariners turned back the Chicago White Sox 3-1, the Detroit Tigers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 6-1, the New York Yankees edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2, the Texas Rangers routed the Oakland A's 11-4 and the Minnesota Twins nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3.

While Eckersley was silencing Milwaukee for his third consecutive triumph, Tony Perez rapped a pair of RBI singles. The Red Sox, who broke a four-game losing streak, gave Eckersley all the support he needed with a pair of runs in the third inning on two-out singles by Jerry Remy, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Perez off Mike Caldwell. Perez also singled a run across in the seventh.

Royals 6, Angels 1
The Angels arrived in Kansas City with a 2½-game lead, but were outscored 19-5 in the three games and have dropped five in a row. Otis was the Royals' big gun, going 4-for-4 with two singles to accompany his homers.

Otis opened the scoring with an inside-the-park home run leading off the second. Center fielder Bobby Clark seemed too have trouble finding the drive in the bright, cloudless sky. Clark banged into the wall as the ball fell and Otis easily circled the bases. John Wathan added a two-run single off loser Geoff Zahn in the third. Willie Wilson singled two runs across in the fifth and Otis hit his second home run in the sixth.

Mariners 3, White Sox 1
Dave Henderson singled home two runs in the first inning and Gary Gray doubled home another in the eighth. Floyd Bannister allowed six hits but left after six innings when he jammed his pitching hand diving for a ball. The White Sox scored in the fifth on singles by Bill Almon, Ron LeFlore, and Tom Paciorek. Larry Andersen pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh and Bill Caudill retired the last three batters, striking out three, to record his 15th save.

Tigers 6, Orioles 1
Lance Parrish and Mike Ivie homered to back the three-hit pitching of Dan Petry and lead Detroit to only its fourth triumph in the last 20 games. Detroit tied the score in the fifth when Ivie hit his 10th homer. An inning later, Whitaker and Lynn Jones singled and Parrish homered off Mike Flanagan for a 4-1 lead. Tom Brookens singled home two more runs in the seventh.

Yankees 3, Indians 2
The Yankees trailed 2-1 and had managed only one clean single and two scratch hits off John Denny when Oscar Gamble drew a leadoff walk in the eighth. Dave Winfield's double and a walk to John Mayberry loaded the bases and Graig Nettles singled off Denny's pitching hand to tie the score. One out later, Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly scored pinch runner Dave Collins, giving New York its fourth straight triumph.

Rangers 11, A's 4
Larry Parrish, who had only eight runs batted in all season, drove in a club record seven runs with a three-run homer and a grand slam as the Rangers routed the A's.

Parrish drove his three-run homer off Matt Keough, 7-11, in the third inning to give the Rangers a 5-3 lo, Parrish cleared the bases for only the second time in his career with a long drive into the left-field bleachers.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 3
Gary Gaetti led off the bottom of the ninth with his 10th home run of the season, only the fifth Minnesota hit but pinning the loss on Toronto starter Dave Stieb. Gary Ward hit a two-run homer for the Twins in the second inning, while Lloyd Moseby and Buck Martinez homered for Toronto. Moseby's homer was his sixth of the season and third in as many games.

Weiskopf wins Western Open title

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP)—It was an out-of-character Tom Weiskopf who won this year's Western Open golf title. He credits Ken Venturi, Jack Nicklaus and himself for the change.

"Be patient, be patient, be patient," I kept telling myself. "Let it happen." That's always been a problem for me. I try to force things," said Weiskopf after his victory Sunday.

Usually a bold player, Weiskopf turned conservative on the last nine holes at the Butler National course.

"I didn't shoot at a pin on the backside, except 11, until I got to 18. I was shooting for the middle of the greens. I usually fire at the pins," he said.

Weiskopf paid tribute to Venturi and Nicklaus for his 15th career victory, a feat that lifted him into fourth place on the game's all-time money list with $2.1 million.

He said he reviewed a 1970 note from Venturi on golf swing fundamentals. "I took it to the practice tee and worked with it the last three weeks," Weiskopf said of the advice from the former U.S. Open champion.

He said he learned patience from watching Nicklaus, his old Ohio State buddy, play in the U.S. Open.

Still, Weiskopf needed a swing of two shots on the last hole to win the $63,000 first prize with a 2-under-par 70 for a record Butler National total of 276, 12-under-par.

He birdied from seven feet. Larry Nelson, leading Weiskopf by a single shot going to 18, bogeyed by three-putting from the front fringe.

"There's destiny in everything," Weiskopf said. "This is a game of mistakes and Larry made one there."

Nelson finished second place with 71-278. He earned $37,800.

"I'm happy for him, but not very happy for me. That's the way it goes. I played as well as I could," said Nelson.

Nelson admitted a spectator yelled as he was preparing to hit his approach shot to the 18th green. "It threw me off," he said.

Nelson stepped away from the ball, addressed it again and hit his five-iron in the fringe, 35 feet short of the hole.

"I didn't hit that good of a putt, but it was difficult. You couldn't charge the hole. And the second putt I didn't hit as hard as I should have," he said.

Bob Gilder, the winner of the Westchester Classic last week, finished third, closing with a 69 for 278. Gilder, the hottest current player in golf.

Expos, Pirates explode fireworks

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
It wasn't a good day for pitchers at Three Rivers Stadium.

"You had to keep your helmet on," deadpanned Pittsburgh relief pitcher Kent Tekulve after a fireworks display by the Pirates and Montreal Expos that included a total of 36 runs and 57 hits Sunday.

The Expos won the first game of the doubleheader 16-6 before the Pirates came back to win the nightcap 10-4.

"We just took a good country whipping (in the first game) — but we came back," said Pittsburgh's Mike Easler, who hit a two-run homer along with Jason Thompson in the second game.

The split gave the Pirates their fourth victory in five games with the Expos and 10th in their last 13 games. After a slow start, the Pirates have moved within 3½ games of the first-place Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East.

Warren Cromartie hit a home run, triple and double and drove in five runs to lead a 21-hit attack for the Expos in the opener. The Pirates had 15 hits themselves, including a home run by Dale Berra.

Easler had a double and a sacrifice fly along with his homer in the second game. The victory was a welcome birthday present for Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, who was born on the Fourth of July 53 years ago.

The Expos, meanwhile, have dropped nine of their last 12 games.

Montreal's Al Oliver suggested the Expos simply ran into a hot Pirate team, playing its best baseball of the season.

Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia beat New York twice, 9-7 and 7-2; Houston blanked Los Angeles 3-0; St. Louis stopped Chicago 7-2; San Diego edged San Francisco 4-3 and Atlanta turned back Cincinnati 4-1.

Phillies 9-7, Mets 7-2
Steve Carlton struck out 13 and George Vukovich and Mike Schmidt hit home runs as Philadelphia beat New York in the first game of their doubleheader.

Despite his high strikeout total, Carlton, 11-7, struggled throughout. He scattered 11 hits, walked three and survived a two-run flurry in the ninth when the Mets scored on RBI singles by George Foster and Joel Youngblood.

Ivan DeJesus drove in three runs with a triple and a single and Mike Krukow scattered nine hits as Philadelphia won the second game. It was the third doubleheader sweep for the Phillies over the Mets in nine days.

Astros 3, Giants 0

Nolan Ryan fired a four-hitter for his 48th career shutout as he pitched Houston over Los Angeles. The 35-year-old Ryan struck out 10, the fifth time this season he has struck out 10 or more in a game, to extend his major league record to 140 such performances.

The victory for Ryan, 8-8, was his first ever in Dodger Stadium. He had lost six previous decisions to the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

Jerry Reuss, 9-6, was the loser.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 2

Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece and Lonnie Smith scored four-times as St. Louis beat Chicago and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Winner John Stuper, 3-1, scattered six hits before needing Bruce Sutter's last-out relief help in the ninth, when the Cubs scored on a bases-loaded walk to Larry Bowa. Sutter gained his 18th save.

The Cardinals turned the game around with a three-run burst in the fifth helped along by two Chicago errors.

CHICAGO (AP) — Andrei Frolov, freed last month from the Soviet Union to join his American wife after a joint 25-day hunger strike, says it hasn't always been easy adjusting to his new-found freedom.

Writing Sunday in the Chicago Sun-Times, Frolov said he once became bewildered and almost angry when buying a pair of running shoes because of the variety of colors and styles — all in his size.

In Moscow, he wrote, he was unable to find even one pair that fit.

Frolov also expressed surprise at human behavior in Chicago.

"It is amazing to me how freely people behave on the streets," he said. "They dress as they please and go barefooted. Although I would feel very uncomfortable behaving this way, it is nevertheless very impressive to me."

Frolov, 51, met his wife, Lois Becker Frolov, 27, in Moscow in 1980 when she was an American exchange student. They married in Moscow in May 1981, but Frolov was unable to emigrate until after the hunger strike. He arrived in Chicago on June 20.

Korchnoi said he was originally told his family would leave Leningrad on June 27, so he had signed a contract to play in a chess tournament in Colmar, 93 miles from Zurich, in early July.

NEW YORK (AP) — X-rays are becoming increasingly effective in detecting breast cancer in women over 50 or where physical examination fails to disclose the disease, a new study confirms.

The American Cancer Society, which cooperated with the National Cancer Institute in a five-year study of more than 280,000 American women, said "the diagnostic capabilities of mammography have improved considerably" in recent years.

The society said 42 percent of the 3,557 cases of breast cancer in the study were found by breast X-rays, also called mammograms, and could not be diagnosed by physical examination.

A look at the practice of paying the victims of crime

By KEITH GAVE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The fear still festers for a 26-year-old University of North Dakota professor, several months after she was beaten and raped.

Slowly, she is on her way to recovery. Since the attack, the state of North Dakota has paid her about $22,000, mostly for psychiatric care, says Richard Gross, director of the state's crime victims compensation program.

The woman has since moved to California, but remains under the care of a psychiatrist. North Dakota taxpayers continue to pay for that care.

Recalling a meeting with the woman, Gross said, "She kept thanking me, telling me we saved her life. And I'm sure we did... She may have very well committed suicide. That was her intimation."

Similar programs throughout the country are working with varying degrees of success for thousands of victims of violent crimes, said Gross, who also is president of the National Association of Crime-Victim Compensation Boards.

Gross emphasized that the concept is relatively new in the United States and, for the most part, still experimental. California passed the first crime victims law in 1967. Since then, 34 states have followed with similar programs, including six last year.

It's only a matter of time, he says, before victims in every state get similar "rights."

In Chicago, Hazel Johnson talks about being "at an awkward age." At 55, she's too young to collect Social Security and with no job experience, too old to go to work.

She's a widow now. In March 1981, her husband was shot and killed during a robbery attempt in front of their South Side home.

Illinois taxpayers came to her aid through their state's program to aid crime victims and their survivors.

"I really haven't the faintest idea what I would have done without it," she said of the $15,000 she collected — a lump-sum payment of $7,500 and $750 per month for 10 months. "It seemed like an awful lot of paperwork to fill out, but it worked for me."

The national association's hopes for some kind of federal assistance were buoyed with President Reagan's announcement in April of a task force on crime victims — one of his first major non-budget domestic initiatives.

"The victim often comes to court seeking justice, and often society does not have time for him," said Lois Herrington, who was appointed by Reagan to head the force. "We've spent so much time and energy looking out for the criminals — how we can protect his rights, educate him, feed, clothe and house him and find out why he commits crimes."

"We haven't balanced the criminal justice system by recognizing the rights of the victims," she said.

Few would disagree.

"It's an attractive argument. It's sort of like mom and apple pie," says Harvard University Law School professor Daniel McGillis, who is involved in an extensive study, commissioned by the Justice Department, of the crime victims programs.

"Nobody can argue against it," McGillis said, "except on funding."

State victims compensation budgets range from about $12 million annually in California, the largest, to North Dakota's $150,000, the smallest. Maximum claims range from $1,500 in Colorado's new program to $50,000 in Texas. The average claim varies from state to state, but according to the survey the median award is $2,600.

Virtually all the programs cover people directly injured in a crime and people injured aiding a victim. Those eligible for benefits typically include injured victims, dependents of deceased victims and third parties assuming expenses for victims.

There are variations. About a third of the programs have provisions for restricting eligibility based on the victim's level of hardship. Some have a deductible provision. Many allow for attorney expenses. A few have provisions for payment compensating "pain and suffering." None allows for property loss or damage compensation, Gross said.

Virtually everyone contacted by the Justice Department study's researchers indicated that program funding is the central issue for crime victim compensation. With state budgets strained and the federal flow of dollars reduced to a trickle, any program providing aid funds is vulnerable to budget cuts.

Federal victim compensation repeatedly has been proposed since 1965, with little progress.

But in recent years, some states have found success with a new funding formula the experts are hopeful will work. They're taking money away from the criminals — through fines and penalties — and handing it over to the victims. About a dozen states now have some version of this concept in their victims compensation programs.

"People don't care what criminals pay," McGillis said. "Add the fines and penalties provision and you have a very attractive package."

Cedar Hill: the ears of Texas are upon it

CEDAR HILL, Texas (AP) — Folks here say it's easy to get high in this North Texas town.

Cedar Hill is 870 feet above sea level, making it the highest point on a line from the Gulf of Mexico to Oklahoma City and an attractive home for television and radio towers.

The seven huge antennas in Cedar Hill guarantee millions of dollars in tax revenues. They account for 10 percent of the town's total property tax valuation of $144,841,102.

Says Turk Cannady, the mayor pro tem of this town of 7,500 people, "It's the only thing we've got."

"It gives us a certain amount of recognition," he explained. "When the power goes off, they have to say the power is off in Cedar Hill. It puts us in the spotlight."

He said that otherwise, "We're an unknown. We've got some of the best scenery in Dallas County, but no one knows we exist."

City Council member Gail Douglas says she wouldn't mind a few more antennas making their home in Cedar Hill.

"It wouldn't bother me if we had two or three more," she said. "We get to tax them, but you don't have to protect them with police."

The antennas carry signals for the major television stations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and for most of the radio stations. Five of the antennas are 1,550 feet tall.
