Earth's shadow takes bite out of the moon as the world watches

The shadow of the Earth crept across the moon this morning, creating the longest lunar eclipse since 1859. One of the reasons the eclipse took so long was that the moon is now farther from the Earth than it usually is during an eclipse, making the Earth's shadow much larger at that distance. The eclipse could be seen for only a short time during its nearly two-hour duration in Pampa due to cloud cover. The Associated Press took these photos using a 1200 mm lens.

Marines to Beirut? Israeli radio says Reagan has pledged troops, money to conflict

By The Associated Press
Israel radio said today that President Reagan has agreed to send 1,600 Marines into west Beirut to take over PLO positions if the guerrillas pull out of the city.
There was no immediate comment from U.S., Israeli or PLO officials. In Washington, Alan Romberg, deputy State Department spokesman, said, "I have no comment on it at this point."
West Beirut is surrounded by Israeli forces that have besieged the estimated 8,000 PLO guerrillas in the war-shattered Lebanese capital.
Although the report did not elaborate on the task of the Marines, it was presumed they would ward off possible reprisal attacks on west Beirut's Moslem population by Lebanese Christian militiamen.
Israel radio said France agreed to contribute troops. It said the U.S. 6th Fleet would supervise the evacuation from Beirut, and Washington would pay for the ships needed to take them out.
The radio said the guerrillas would go to several countries, including Algeria, Iraq, Egypt and Syria. It said the guerrillas had refused to go to Libya, despite that country's fervent verbal support for the Palestinian cause.
The radio said the details had been worked out over the past three days by U.S. and Israeli officials.
The problems of where the guerrillas would go and how they would get there were the main obstacles in three-week-old talks involving U.S. presidential envoy Philip

C. Habib and Lebanese negotiators at the presidential palace outside Beirut. The talks are aimed at ending the conflict and arranging removal of PLO forces.
Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat had offered to withdraw most of his forces from Lebanon if Israel would allow the PLO to leave a token military presence — believed to be about 500 men — with the Lebanese army and a diplomatic mission in Beirut.
But the Israeli Cabinet refused the offer, saying all elements of the PLO must leave Lebanon and vowing that until then, the Israeli army would not ease the grip on Beirut.
Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to crush the guerrillas and has surrounded Arafat's west Beirut enclave with tanks and troops and cut off vital supplies in an attempt to force them out, rather than storm the stronghold and risk bloody street warfare.
Informed Lebanese sources estimate there 8,000 guerrillas and 500,000 civilians trapped in predominantly Moslem west Beirut, and Lebanese and Palestinian leaders have accused Israel of trying to starve out the remnants of the PLO. Israel denied the accusations.
Habib put together another Israeli-Palestinian cease-fire at sundown Monday to halt day-long exchanges of artillery, rocket and mortar fire that marked the heaviest fighting around Beirut since Habib's previous cease-fire was announced June 25.

Jury picking for poison coffee case will start on Wednesday

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

Jury selection begins Wednesday in 23rd District Court for the attempted murder trial of Pampa resident Leta Louise Jones.

Jones has pleaded innocent to the attempted arsenic poisoning of her boss, Rivest Landry III, while they were both employees of the Cabot Carbon Black Plant west of Pampa.

Attempted murder, under the Texas Penal Code, is a second-degree felony punishable by not less than two or more than 20 years' imprisonment and a fine of not more than $10,000.

The trial is set to begin Thursday, July 8, one day before the first anniversary of the incident, and is scheduled to continue next week.

Jones has been indicted for an incident in which arsenic-laced coffee prepared for the Cabot plant's midnight office shift made eight plant employees ill.

None of the employees required hospitalization.

Jones was indicted by a grand jury last August 24, after a lengthy investigation of the incident by Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan and Frank Leonard, a Cabot security officer from Boston.

Although the sheriff's department knew of the incident for a few days, Jordan said at the time, the investigation did not begin until July 15 after tests of the coffee confirmed the arsenic content.

The investigation included interviews with several employees of Cabot, and tests of pesticides used at the plant to see if arsenic was an ingredient.

No arsenic was used in the plant for any procedures, Cabot management said at the time. But arsenic is available to anyone in the form of commercial rat poison, which can be purchased in local stores.

Initially, investigators were not certain whether foul play was involved in the incident.

"It could possibly have been an accident," Jordan was quoted as saying last July, "but it isn't too probable."

Jones had been working as a relief operator in the production department at the plant since April, 1976, but was suspended from work with pay July 24 because of statements made to the management during the investigation.

Cabot Plant Manager Stan Burnham said after the indictment that "From what we know about the arsenic incident, it was prompted by a personal consideration."

The case has been set for trial twice in the past year, on Oct. 26 and Dec. 15, 1981, but was delayed upon waiver of the defendant's right to speedy trial by Jones and her attorney John Warner.

In most cases, a defendant has the right to trial within 120 days from the

He found jury duty is reward enough.....

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three times Paul Katus had been called for jury duty and three times he had been excused because of business meetings. But when he finally sat on a jury, he liked it so much he wouldn't accept his pay.

Katus served three days on a panel to help decide whether an auto accident victim was entitled to more money than he had received from the other driver's insurance company.

When it was over, the court sent Katus a $41.28 check, and Katus promptly sent the check back.

"I got so much out of the experience and I so enjoyed it, I didn't feel I should be paid, too," said Katus, 37, a district sales manager for a pharmaceutical company.

We dodge sharks, stray bullets, and errant rockets, but had fun

By JUDY GIBBS
Associated Press Writer

Americans gathered on beaches, in parks and at fairs, dodging stray bullets, wayward skyrockets and errant sharks as a three-day Fourth of July weekend marred by fires and injuries came to an end.

At least 415 people were killed on the nation's highways, according to a tally by the Associated Press.

A fire set by bottle rockets burned two city blocks in Houston on Monday, leveling two homes and damaging three others, while a sightseeing boat in New York City crashed into a pier, injuring about 25 of the holiday passengers.

"We got some spent bottle rockets as evidence," said arson investigator D.R. Whiteley of Houston. He said the rockets landed on the roof of one house and sparks blown by a strong breeze quickly ignited the wood shingle roofs of neighboring homes.

The skipper of the Circle Line sightseeing boat apparently lost control of the vessel Monday as it maneuvered toward its Hudson River pier after the around-Manhattan voyage. None of those injured was reported hospitalized.

Fireworks backfired in several cities where crowds had gathered to watch the traditional displays.

In Shreveport, La., spectators cheered when a skyrocket exploded on the launch pad, detonating dozens of other fireworks and setting a spectacular fire, mistaken by the crowd for part of the display.

"They must have thought it was the grand finale," said fire Chief J.A. Starks of nearby Bossier City. "What they didn't know was that we were running for our lives."

A 12-year-old girl suffered third-degree burns when a cannister from a spent rocket fell on her as she watched a fireworks display in Longview, Wash. The girl, Katy Hudson of Tumwater, will need plastic surgery to repair the burn damage, said her father.

Another fireworks-watcher, 2-year-old Eric Hutchins of Downers Grove, Ill., was in serious condition after a bullet, apparently shot into the air by a holiday celebrant, hit him in the head.

At least six people were burned when a cannister from a fireworks display fell smoking into a crowd of spectators in Austintown, Ohio, officials said. One woman was taken by ambulance to a local hospital, but her injuries did not appear to be serious, said Joe Korleski, a medic.

A despondent New York City man put an M-80 firecracker in his mouth, lit it and blew off the top of his head in front of his ex-girlfriend's home, police said. An M-80 has the power of one-third of a stick of dynamite.

Elsewhere, Americans packed beaches in California and fairs in the Midwest to celebrate the Fourth.

Pampa loses its TV after house trailer rips down lines

By JEFF LANGLEY Staff Writer
 The cable television signal to all homes in Pampa was out for about three hours Monday night, after someone moving a house trailer ripped down the main transmission line to the city, a cable company spokesman said today.
 Sammons Communications technician Wallace Singleton said cable channels went down about 7:30 p.m.
 He said service to the "major portion" of Pampa was restored about 10:30 p.m.
 Singleton said someone moving a house trailer at Coronado Trailer Park on Kentucky Street in West Pampa hung the company's transmission line, leading from the satellite dish to customers.
 The line is on a pole, and the trailer hooked it and pulled it down, he said.
 The technician said the company at first had no idea why the signal was out, because "nobody called us about tearing down the line."
 Singleton said company repairmen were enroute to check the dish, just west of the trailer park, when they noticed the line down.
 The spokesman said crews had to splice together several sections of the main line, before service could be restored.
 Singleton said Sammons Communications Manager John Mason would decide whether or not any action would be taken to discover who knocked down the line, or if any action would be taken against the responsible party.
 The cable company here provides 10 regular television channels and four "pay channels."
 The pay-for-play channels, which are billed in addition to the regular monthly cable rate, are the "Movie Channel," "HBO" and "Escapee."

Preacher tries to keep Gov's house from being White house

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff, self-professed deliverer of souls and votes, is trying to do to Mark White what he helped do to John Hill in 1978 — keep him from the governor's mansion.
 "Why would I vote for a man who would close my homes down tomorrow?" Roloff said in a recent interview.
 The Corpus Christi preacher, who has fought a long battle against state licensing of his youth homes, recently told a San Angelo audience, "Mark White would close my homes in a minute. If you vote for him, don't ever call me 'friend.'"
 How much harm can Roloff do to White's Democratic campaign to unseat Republican Gov. Bill Clements? Plenty, says Hill, the Democrat upset by Clements in 1978.
 Hill said White must be careful to defend against Roloff's allegations.
 "It shouldn't create some implication in someone's mind that (White) is anti-God," said Hill. "In no way should he be cast in the light of not being a religious man."
 White, a Baylor graduate, does not seem overly concerned about Roloff's politicking.
 "I would certainly suggest he has a right to say whatever he chooses to. I hope that he'd be accurate in the way he goes about making those statements," said White.
 Dwayne Holman, White's campaign manager, said, "Anybody campaigning against you hurts you a little bit," but added Roloff's influence should be "minimal."
 The Roloff-White fight and Roloff's affection for Clements both stem from the preacher's courtroom fight against state regulation. Hill, while attorney general, started Texas' drive to force Roloff to get state licenses.
 Roloff won an April 1981 decision from State District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin, who, reversing his order in a previous case, said separation of church and state allows Roloff to be free from state regulation.

 White appealed that decision. Clements said the state should have dropped the case.
 "I thought when the judge made his decision he made a judicious decision, and it happened to be one I agreed with, incidentally," Clements said shortly after the ruling. "As far as I'm concerned I see no reason to appeal. Let it rest."
 White didn't and now Roloff is campaigning against him.
 "I cannot afford to support anybody that's going to lock the doors against helpless children that are having their last chance. They've closed the homes twice. That ought to be enough crime for the state of Texas to commit," said Roloff.
 Roloff said he attracted 250,000 votes for Clements in 1978.
 "There's no question it had an impact," said Hill. "When you lose a close election you can always find many, many reasons for the loss."
 Four years after his defeat, Hill remains upset about the involvement of Roloff and the Lewisville-based Accelerated Christian Education, Inc. One month before the 1978 election, Garland preacher Earl Little, a close Roloff supporter, sent out letters addressed, "Dear Christian friend..."
 "The election of the liberal John Hill will signal the bureaucrats to move in for the kill," Little warned in a letter he ended by saying, "Fast and pray for the election."
 Hill also remains peeved about a brochure distributed at churches on the Sunday before the election. The brochure said, "The church needs Bill Clements for governor" because he supports "parental rights," "salvation by grace" and "a free church without government controls."
 Hill says the brochure — labelled "paid political adv. on behalf of Bill Clements for governor" — was the result of a deal between Clements and Roloff.

 Hill said that notation gave "the implication it was put out by the Clements' campaign."
 "It's very obvious that Clements agreed with Roloff to work to remove (Roloff's) homes from the Child Care Licensing Act in return for Roloff's efforts, both in connection with this brochure and in connection with statements he made on the radio and in personal letters he sent out," said Hill.
 Dary Stone, Clements' current campaign manager, said there was no deal. ACE put out the brochures as a result of "spontaneous combustion," said Stone.
 "That wasn't something we orchestrated," he said.
 Hill says it's still "up in the air" as to who paid for the brochures. A Houston television station reported the printer said the Clements campaign paid for them.
 ACE sells fundamentalist Christian educational materials to Roloff and thousands of other private schools, according to William French, ACE's director of political education.
 French said ACE President Don Howard personally paid for the 1978 brochures, which numbered about 45,000. Howard, visiting China, was unavailable for comment.
 "We encourage our people to know the issues and know the candidates," French said. "Politically we just are good conservative Christians..."
 ACE, because it is a corporation, could not legally have paid for the brochures, according to French.
 The fundamentalist attack on Hill did not end with the 1978 election. One week after his defeat, Hill received a letter from Bryant Nelson, pastor of the Ridgeview Christian Church in Virginia.
 "I am delighted to hear of your political demise in Texas. I sincerely hope you are never elected to public office again," said Nelson.

 Sunday from a seven-day voyage that completed Columbia's flight tests.
 The astronauts relaxed on Monday, their first day off in months, but go back to work today. They will spend hours over the next several weeks answering questions from experts and writing a lengthy pilot's report.
 Among the debriefers will be Air Force experts, because the fourth flight of Columbia included operation of a secret military payload.
 Officials said the spaceship performed very well and has been cleared to start routine operations in the fall.
 Experts examining Columbia at Edwards Air Force Base, where it landed Sunday, said it was in "really, really good shape."
 "The vehicle overall is in far better shape than it was on the three previous missions," said Jim Harrington, ground operations manager for Columbia.
 Workers found a small oxidizer leak in a small rocket thruster, but officials said there was no major problem.
 But there was concern about the solid rocket boosters that on June 27 drilled the winged spacecraft into orbit.

 According to Aviation Week and Space Technology, a respected trade publication, the solid rocket boosters provided less thrust than planned.
 The magazine emphasized that the less-than-planned performance did not endanger the spacecraft or the crew, but is of concern to engineers because Columbia and other space shuttles using the solid rockets will carry heavier payloads in the future.

Pampa boy is 'ambassador'

Darold Gene Haddican, Jr., Texas State Poster Child for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, has been named an Ambassador of Goodwill by Gov. Bill Clements.
 Darold, 7-year-old Pampa, was diagnosed in September, 1980 as having Duchenne muscular dystrophy.
 Described by his mother as a "very outgoing child," Darold will represent the MDA at functions throughout the state.
 The Muscular Dystrophy Association, a national health agency, is dedicated to the cure of 40 neuromuscular diseases, including the dystrophies, Fredreich's Ataxia, ALS and Myasthenia Gravis.

 The distribution is part of the national program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to distribute surplus cheese to the needy.
 The cheese will be distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. Salvation Army personnel will take identification of all applicants.

No rush in replacing Minyen

CANADIAN — Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober plans "no hurried appointment" to replace Gary Minyen, who has resigned as county commissioner.
 Elected Precinct 1 commissioner in 1980 on the Republican ticket, Minyen last week submitted a letter of resignation to the commission.
 Minyen commented that he was not upset with the court, nor did he have "any personal disagreement with anybody."
 "I just decided that the office was too heavy a burden on someone no more thick-skinned than I am," he told a friend.
 Minyen defeated Democratic incumbent Wyman Prater in the 1980 general election. When Gober does name his replacement, the new commissioner will serve until the next general election in 1984.

Clements threatens audit of unemployment insurance figures

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With the Texas Employment Commission projecting a rise of up to 2,000 percent in employer taxes just before the November election, Gov. Bill Clements says he may have the unemployment figures audited.

Clements told reporters he finds the TEC's figures "suspect" and doesn't think the projected rise in employer taxes jibes with what he called a not "all that significant" increase in unemployment in the state.

TEC announced last week that unemployment in the state hit 7.2 percent in June, the state's highest rate since 1970.

But TEC Chairman Nolan Ward said the projected increases in employers' contributions to unemployment insurance are based on "simple arithmetic" and are due to an increasing percentage of layoffs, not the unemployment rate as a whole.

Last month, the commission said that if trends continue, employers who now pay $6 per employee for unemployment insurance — the lowest rate in the nation — could face an increase up to $14 per employee after Oct. 1 when the new rate goes into effect.

"They are suspect," Clements said of the figures. "We are re-evaluating those numbers. Jarvis Miller and the budget planning office are making a very close analysis and we may even go over there and audit those numbers, because I just question them."

Comparing the 7.2 percent unemployment rate with the 6.5 percent figure of June 1981, Clements said the rise in the employers' rates is not warranted.

"I don't think a half of one percent is all that significant," he said. "Under those circumstances, I don't see how or why there should be any drastic change in those rates, and we're going to give it a very close look."

For every $5 million the state unemployment insurance fund drops below a $225 million "floor," employer taxes go up a tenth of a percent. The fund currently stands at $197 million.

Man arrested after hostage incident

HOUSTON (AP) — A man arrested after a seven-hour hostage incident at a south Houston apartment complex said that three people commandeered his cab a week earlier, forced him to drive to the same complex, then robbed and shot him, his brother says.

But Michael Linscomb apparently shot himself in the arm and made up the story that ended near his girlfriend's apartment, his half-brother Craig Thomas said after talking with police Monday.

Michael Linscomb, a 29-year-old cab driver, was charged late Monday with a three-paragraph count accusing him of burglary with intent to commit rape; aggravated sexual assault; and aggravated kidnapping, said Assistant District Attorney Charles Rosenthal. He was held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

The count was filed in an incident in which he allegedly held Cheryl Pearson, 24, and her 6-year-old daughter Chanelle at gunpoint from about 5:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m.

Sgt. Ellis Johnson, who declined to say how police negotiators persuaded Linscomb to give up, said Linscomb tossed several pistols out the front door of his girlfriend's apartment, then walked out, followed by the woman and her daughter.

"There's a lot of things he was upset about, but apparently there was some kind of domestic disturbance," Johnson said. He said he was not sure how many pistols the man had.

Thomas said his half-brother had been institutionalized twice, once at Rusk State Hospital.

Deputy Chief Dennis Storemski of the special weapons and tactics team at the scene said Ms. Pearson called police about 5:30 a.m. and told officials she had just spoken to Linscomb on the telephone.

Congressman urges voters to focus on issues affecting elderly

DALLAS (AP) — Older Americans are going to be an important voting bloc for the upcoming Congressional election and should focus on issues affecting the elderly when deciding who to vote for, a Florida congressman says.

U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., spoke Monday at a town hall meeting sponsored by U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas.

"If I were you, when the men and women are running for Congress, I would ask them if they are going to cut Social Security benefits," Pepper, the oldest member of Congress, said. "If they don't say no, don't vote for them."

The estimated 25 million Americans older than 65 will be an important voting bloc this fall, he said, because of their fears about reduced funding of government retirement programs.

"They (older citizens) are beginning to get concerned, and I think they are going to vote knowledgeably this fall as they probably never have, because they know that their own well-being is tied up in these congressional elections," Pepper said.

"The outcome of the election to a large degree is going to determine what's going to happen to a lot of people," he added.

Pepper, a member of the President's Commission on Social Security and chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, also said he believes there will be increasing "dynamism" among the nation's elderly, making them more productive.

"The greatest wasted resource that we have in America is that of the older people who do nothing because no one will allow them to," Pepper said.

The Florida congressman said he believes that the problems with funding Social Security are temporary.

"We have 103,000,000 people in this country out of work, unemployed," Pepper said. "If those people were working, every time they'd get a paycheck they would pay into Social Security."

It will take a strongly Democratic Congress to turn around President Reagan's economic policies which Pepper blames for the nation's high unemployment rate, he said.

Pointing out that Reagan had vetoed a bill that would have provided aid to the housing industry, Pepper said the President has refused to enact programs that would generate jobs.

Traffic kills 46

By The Associated Press

At least 46 people died in traffic accidents in the state during the Fourth of July holiday weekend and Texas Department of Public Safety officials said they had little hope the death toll would stay under their prediction of 47.

The counting period lasted from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

Fifty-four people were killed in traffic accidents during the holiday weekend last year, and the total rose to 63 with the addition of people who died later from injuries suffered in accidents during that weekend.

Among the deaths reported by the DPS were those of:

- Issac Davis, 16, of Bartlett, who died at 3:55 a.m. Monday after being hit by a car in Bartlett in Williamson County at 10:05 p.m. Sunday.
- Nelia B. Cantrell, 35, who died at 1 a.m. Monday when hit by a vehicle as she tried to cross West 7th Avenue in Corsicana at 10:46 p.m. Sunday.
- David J. Grootenhaar, 29, of Little Rock, Ark., who was killed when the motorcycle he was riding left the road at 11:23 p.m. Sunday at Loop 360 and FM 2244 in Travis County west of Austin.
- Ronda G. Blankinship, 15, of Stephenville, who was killed after the car she was in hit a horse at 11:30 p.m. Sunday on U.S. 281 2.7 miles north of Hico in Erath County. She was thrown from the car and the vehicle rolled over her.
- Celia Beltran, 5, of Hutto, who died at 11:52 a.m. Saturday from head injuries received when she fell from the back of a moving pickup truck.
- Ira Lee Lovell, 41, of Galveston, who died at 3:02 a.m. Monday when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car.

Patient in good condition after heart transplant

HOUSTON (AP) — The first patient was in stable, good condition today following what was expected to be the first in a series of 35 heart transplants in which a newly developed anti-rejection drug will be used.

A team of surgeons, headed by Dr. Denton Cooley, performed the surgery Monday at Texas Heart Institute on a patient identified only as a 43-year-old man.

Cindy Katz said late Monday the man was in stable, good condition after the surgery involving Cyclosporin A, an immuno-suppressant, a drug used to prevent rejection of the transplanted heart.

Ms. Katz said the drug has prevented rejection of a donor heart in 24 of 27 transplants at Stanford University. Dr. Barry Kahan, who worked with Cooley in Monday's surgery, has used Cyclosporin A in more than 80 patients undergoing kidney transplants, she said.

The hospital spokesman said the kidneys were "functioning after a year in more than 80 percent of patients." Kahan is director of the division of organ transplants at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

The operation lasted about two-and-one-half hours and was finished at 2:15 a.m. Monday, Ms. Katz said.

Cyclosporin A "has shown an encouraging ability over previously used drugs to interfere with the body's natural rejection system," Ms. Katz said. Doctors hope the drug will "solve many of the infection-related problems that have hindered some of the heart transplants in the past," she said.

Ms. Katz said researchers are unable to explain exactly how Cyclosporin A works, but she said it appears the drug prevents a part of the body's immune system from reacting against a foreign organ such as a donor heart.

"It induces potent and reversible suppression of the T-lymphocytes," she said. Those white blood cells are produced by the thymus, a gland of undetermined function located in the throat.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Thanksgiving in June

About a year ago we noted in these columns that a tornado had devastated Cardington, Ohio, pop. 2,000. Our interest in this hamlet 45 miles from Columbus stemmed from the fact that the owner of the weekly paper there used to write editorials for the Freedom newspaper in Bucyrus, Ohio, both before and after the disaster struck. Bill Histed has been putting his philosophy into practice.

Now 29, Histed bought the Morrow County Independent in 1980 with personal savings from years of endless workweeks. He thus had realized his lifelong dream of having his own newspaper when, a few months later, his offices and much of the rest of town were leveled. His first communications to us afterward reflected a heartsear weariness, as you might imagine, but were tinged with the spirit of determination that soon led him to dedicate a post-tornado special edition "to the people of Cardington and our supreme task ahead."

That's where we left him. Now, a year later, the results are in. Cardington and Histed have rebuilt, and earlier this month held a "Festival of Thanks." Another special edition of the Independent commemorated the event.

More than $3 million has been put into reconstructing the town. Histed estimates, and though some federal and state grants were used, much of the effort has been private, he reports. A division of Scott-Fetzer Corp. pumped $2 million into a metals plant, the Rotarians built a new shelter for the main park, the public library was put back together through volunteer effort at no increase in taxes, and Histed himself ended up with a new building for less than $50,000 thanks to some eager contractors.

"We've dreamed the impossible dream, we have had the gumption not to let a setback defeat us," Histed wrote his readers, advising, "Let us work to retain that extra ounce of human love and understanding that we knew in our adversity."

That is the spirit of America. It is one you rarely see on the network news shows, where bellyaching over cutbacks in government subsidies is the order of the day. These were people dealt a terrible hardship through no fault of their own, and they survived and now may be ready to prosper by virtue of working and caring. Our editorial friend is proving that his were not hollow words.

Lessons of history must be learned

History offers scant evidence for the notion that signing arms control treaties helps to keep the peace or deter aggressors. As historian Barbara Tuchman noted in a recent essay nations bent on conquest have always found ways to evade arms limitations that constrained their ambitions.

Germany and Japan were classic examples during the 1930s. The Soviet Union behaves in a similar fashion today cynically violating longstanding prohibitions against the use of chemical and biological weapons.

Accordingly, the arms reduction proposals put forth by the Reagan administration and reaffirmed by the president June 17 in his speech to the United Nations' special session on disarmament may be doomed to failure. The Soviets may continue to reject them or having "accepted" them, may cheat even as they are now cheating massive on the terms of the 1925 Geneva Protocol and the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention.

Even so, Reagan has good reason for pressing the Soviets hard on arms control issues. To do otherwise would be to surrender the high ground in what has become a full-blown propaganda war launched by the Soviets. Losing this war could have disastrous consequences among them: a further unraveling of NATO; an erosion of domestic support for rebuilding the American nuclear deterrent, and casting the Kremlin in the undesired role of spurned peacemaker.

Then too, there is always the possibility that resolution on the part of the U.S. to maintain unquestioned military strength just might persuade the Soviets to accept and abide by a genuine arms reduction agreement. However remote that possibility, Reagan must pursue it.

He must also show he understands the growing disarmament movement in the West. If the nuclear debate in the United States becomes politically divisive it will soon doom any chance for successful negotiations with Moscow. The Soviets will have little incentive to bargain in good faith, much less agree to actual reductions in their nuclear arsenal, so long as Western governments are under mounting pressure to make unilateral concessions.

The tone and content of Reagan's U.N. speech were welcome indications that the president understands the need to negotiate from a position of strength with the Soviets while simultaneously reassuring at least the more thoughtful among the peace marchers in the West.

Thus, he underscored the administration's commitment to avoiding war, nuclear or conventional. But he also noted that merely signing arms control agreements that cannot be verified and are not adhered to is an exercise in building "paper castles." Exactly so.

Reagan called upon the Soviets to demonstrate their oft-proclaimed commitment to arms control and disarmament with "deeds, not words." He repeated the administration's standing offers to rid Europe of all intermediate range nuclear missiles, cut the strategic nuclear arsenals of both superpowers by one-third, and reduce the size of the conventional forces fielded by NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Taken together, these proposals go far beyond those offered by any previous administration. Indeed, they far exceed the nuclear "freeze" offered by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and endorsed by many disarmament activists in the West.

The Soviets can prove that they too desire an end to the arms race by meeting Reagan halfway, and by permitting adequate means of verification. If they refuse, as history suggests they will, the Reagan policy of arming while negotiating will have proved an indispensable insurance policy for keeping the peace.

When governments try to do so many things to and for us, they are bound to work their way into contradictions from time to time. Sometimes these become so obvious that a means of resolving them becomes prudent. The preferred method for trying to resolve them is usually the courts, and ultimately the U.S. Supreme Court. So it was last week with the matter of undocumented immigrants and school.

Critics may complain that the Supreme Court makes new law as often as it adheres to the Constitution, and there's some truth in that. But so long as our laws have such antipodal aims, legislative bodies lack the political will to resolve the contradictions they have created, and the people acquiesce in (and sometimes demand) government's attempts to do all things to all people, the Supreme court will sometimes be forced to improvise.

The court's decision that the state of Texas must provide "free" schooling to children of illegal aliens is a case in point. The necessity of the decision arises from government trying to do things it is unable to do at all, last alone competently. The likelihood that legislative bodies will address the fundamental problems that have created the situation is slight, and this is the justices' stopgap solution.

In a climate of opinion that accepts the premise of universal state schooling it is difficult to challenge the idea that government must educate everybody within the borders it claims. Yet the underlying proposition is surprisingly frail. In fact, the schools don't educate anybody. The state can force children to attend classes, but education remains an individual undertaking. While owing much to those who have built a foundation of civilization and culture, every truly educated person (and they are rare) is literally self-taught. Teachers can aid in the process, but they can't make a passive mind learn.

In part because this inconvenient truth is persistently ignored, the "public" school system in particular is in tatters. Yet political leaders continue to pay obeisance to the necessity and importance of extending its bogus benefits even farther.

Government also likes to pretend it can control people who want to cross the borders of this country. It has enacted immigration laws with little concern for reality. Since the laws are so unrealistic, they are routinely ignored. Everybody knows this, but it's not seemly to admit it in public.

If the immigration laws were workable, there wouldn't be a problem with children of illegal aliens thinking about attending school in the United States. Illegal aliens would be whisked across the border, and would be unlikely to return.

The political will to take the commonsense step of eliminating immigration restrictions doesn't exist at present. The political will to challenge the contention that government should be the mandatory schoolmarm of all may be growing but doesn't yet have much effective power.

Because "illegal aliens" reside in the U.S., and because a mandatory, taxpayer-supported school system is in place, the Supreme Court decided that the school system must serve the children of the "illegals." It's a stopgap. It will create new problems to be handled later.

If you think it doesn't have much to do with the Constitution of the United States, you're right.

"It's OK, neighbor! Just taking care of a few dandelions."

Industrial intelligence

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
In the vastly simpler era of the 1930s, Japan was notorious for industrial and military espionage. The payoff for this activity came at Pearl Harbor.

Today, Japan is not a militarized nation. In the field of industrial activity, however, Japanese business is as ambitious in seeking attainment of its goals as the imperialistic leadership was a half century ago. Today, Japan, Inc. engages in economic warfare, including industrial intelligence, relying on strategies jointly developed by Japanese companies and the government ministry of international trade which provides guidance in targeting foreign companies.

Selling Reaganomics

By ART BUCHWALD

Sometime back the Republican Party decided to launch a $1.7 million TV campaign to sell the GOP. They sought out an advertising agency and told them, "We've got to convince the American people that the only way to stop bad breath is by using Reaganomics. We want to show them that the best cure for the 'recession blahs' is a strong dose of supply-side economics. And we have to persuade the viewer that the President doesn't have ring around the collar."

The advertising agency boss told them, "You came to the right place. Belch, our creative vice president, has been working on just such a campaign. Show them what you've come up with."

Belch went over to a large easel. "Gentlemen, we must treat the Republican Party just like another consumer product. We have to convince the TV viewer that if he has hemorrhoids it's the Democrats' fault. Now our art department has sketched out a simple commercial. The first one shows actors that look like Jimmy Carter and Tip O'Neill. We will have a lawyer holding a will in which he reads what the Democrats have bequeathed Ronald Reagan, including a recession, unemployment and the highest interest rates in the history of the nation. As he's reading, Tip O'Neill is laughing like hell, and Jimmy Carter has that dumb grin on his face."

The Republican campaign managers studied it. Finally one of them said, "It's the old Brand X dirty trick gimmick. We're being negative, unfair, and some people would even say unscrupulous. I like it."

Another Republican nodded his head. "It's got the scary message we've been looking for, without the overkill. It will get the people thinking they're using the wrong deodorant."

Belch said, "We've tested it in Palm Springs, Calif., and 80 percent of the people who saw it said it convinced them to vote Republican."

"That's good enough for us," the head Republican honcho said. "If the Democrats yell foul, we'll know we're on the right track."

Belch said, "If the campaign proves as effective as I think it is, we have

The methods employed by the Japanese are very much in the limelight following the arrest in the United States of Japanese businessmen, representatives of Hitachi, Ltd. and Mitsubishi Electric, for allegedly trying to steal computer secrets that are the property of International Business Machines Corporation.

Hitachi, for its part, has admitted that it authorized payment of $540,000.00 for confidential computer information from IBM, but denies that it knew the information was stolen.

Whatever the final result of these legal proceedings, they should alert the U.S. public to Japan's aggressive campaign to win worldwide leadership in computer technology.

American leadership in this field is one of the few industrial areas in which the U.S. still enjoys supremacy. It is tremendously important for the future well-being of the United States that it continue to enjoy this supremacy. The knowledge industries are likely to be the great wealth-producing of the 1990s and early 21st century. Failure to retain leadership in these industries, chiefly the computer industry, could be fatal to America's hope of being the preeminent industrial power in the next century. It should be recalled that Britain's failure to keep ahead of Germany in the chemical industry in the late 19th and early 20th century contributed to its industrial and military decline.

Americans also should bear in mind that their country's current military predicament results in large measure from the Soviet Union's successful atomic espionage in the 1940s. The Soviets were able to build a vast nuclear arsenal because their agents stole atomic secrets from the United States during and after World War II.

Today, American's technological secrets, especially in the micro-electronic field are the target of espionage operations. Not long ago, the Wall Street Journal described the thefts taking place in California's Silicon Valley, the citadel of our computer technology industry. With an open society and a vast, open technical literature, the U.S. is very vulnerable to foreign economic intelligence operations. The FBI is to be commended for its undercover operation which netted the Hitachi and Mitsubishi dealers in confidential information.

More such operations must be mounted if the U.S. is to protect its vital trade secrets. Indeed, counter-intelligence in the 1980s must be given a new focus that recognizes the all-important nature of technical information. Fifty years ago, intelligence operators wanted pictures of forts and dock yards. Today, the representatives of foreign powers want the secrets contained in micro-chips. These tiny devices contain the seeds of national wealth and power.

"It takes time for a negative message to sink in," Belch told him defensively. "You have to play it over and over again."

"Baloney," the Republican said. "Everyone thinks we're doing a commercial for probate lawyers. We keep getting calls from people asking if we will write their wills. Besides, every time the damn thing shows it reminds the voter we're in a recession."

"But you people said you wanted to blame all the country's economic troubles on the Democrats."

"You guys couldn't sell a Chrysler car to Lee Iacocca."

"Look," said Belch desperately, "maybe the commercial isn't doing everything we hoped it would. We'll change the campaign by being more positive. We could show the President eating jellybeans in the Oval Office, and then looking into the camera and saying 'The question you have to ask yourselves is, "Are you better off today than you were four years ago?"'"

"Don't bother," the Republican shouted. "Your agency is fired."

"But why?"

"Because, thanks to your stupid commercial, everyone in Peoria is going to vote for the Democrats."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, July 6, the 187th day of 1982. There are 178 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On July 6, 1923, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was formed.

Also on this date:
In 1535, Sir Thomas Moore was executed in England for treason.

In 1699, pirate captain William Kidd was taken into custody in Boston. He was later hanged in England.

In 1945, Nicaragua became the first nation to formally accept the United Nations charter.

In 1979, Nicaragua president Anastasio Somoza sent 1,000 soldiers to the city of Masaya, held by rebels determined to oust him.

Ten years ago: A U.S. district judge enjoined photographer Ronald Galella from approaching Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis or her children to take their photographs. The judge ruled that Galella had "relentlessly invaded" the former first lady's right to privacy.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter reassured leaders of American Jewish organizations that Arab states should establish full diplomatic relations with Israel as part of an overall Middle East settlement.

One year ago: E.I. duPont de Nemours, the huge chemical concern, said it had agreed to acquire Conoco, the nation's ninth-largest oil company. The $7.3 billion transaction was to become the largest merger in history.

Today's birthdays: Television talk show host Merv Griffin is 57. Actress Janet Leigh is 55. Actor-producer Sylvester Stallone is 36.

Thought for today: Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food. — William Hazlitt, English (1778-1830).

Metal may be part of Sultana

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A farmer clearing his field with a bulldozer turned up a piece of metal that researchers say may belong to a steamer that sank in the Mississippi River in 1865, killing up to 1,500 people in one of history's worst ship disasters.

Officials of the National Underwater and Marine Agency, a private, Washington-based firm, have not decided whether to try recovering the sunken Civil War steamer Sultana and the $18,000 in gold believed aboard, one of the researchers, Janita Potter of Memphis, said Monday.

She said researchers are still digging in the area for more evidence that the steamer is buried there.

The recovered piece was found in a field about a mile from the present riverbed, in an area exposed when the meandering Mississippi changed course in the 115 years since the disaster.

The field, now planted in soybeans, is northwest of Mound City, Ark., just across the Mississippi River from Memphis, the agency said. But officials would not disclose the exact location, fearing that the curious would trample the farmer's crop.

Mrs. Potter, who describes herself as a history buff, said she and her husband, Jerry Potter, became involved in the project through their friendship with Clive Cussler, who wrote "Raise the Titanic" and other books about maritime research and founded the National Underwater and Marine Agency.

"The people who own the property found something first and from then on it kind of built up," she said.

"It was a long time back," Mrs. Potter said. "The research itself has been going to for several years."

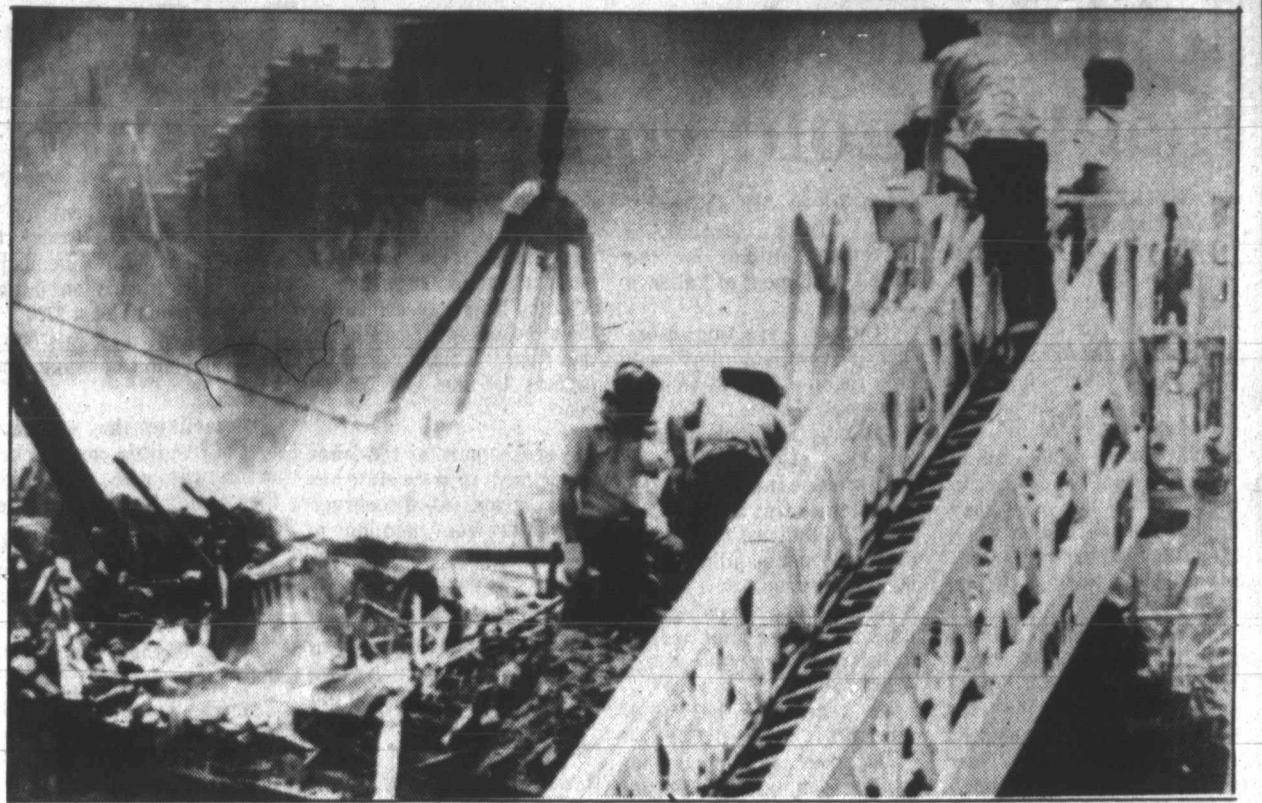

The Sultana — homeport Cincinnati, Ohio — exploded and sank April 27, 1865, on a trip from Vicksburg, Miss., to Cairo, Ill. On board were more than 2,200 passengers, most of them homeward bound Union soldiers who had been Confederate prisoners during the war.

The 1,000-ton steamer was about nine miles upstream from Memphis — at what is now Mound City, Ark. — when three of its four boilers blew.

The United States Custom Service at Memphis lists the death toll at 1,547, which would make it a disaster worse than either the 1912 sinking of the Titanic, in which 1,517 people died, or the sinking of the Lusitania, which involved the loss of 1,198 lives and helped bring the United States into World War I.

According to accounts from Memphis newspapers at the time of Sultana's sinking, scalding steam killed passengers instantly and the smokestacks collapsed killing more.

Measures are being taken to halt Argentina's rapid 'state of decay'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The economic minister appointed after the disastrous Falkland Islands war says he will devalue the peso, lower interest rates and restrict imports to stop what he calls Argentina's "state of decay without precedent."

Economy Minister Jose Dagnino Pastore, who took office last week in the new military government of President Reynaldo Bignone, announced the changes in a nationally broadcast address Monday night. The new policies reverse the free-market philosophy the ruling three-man junta has followed for six years.

Dagnino Pastore said the measures were needed because a 10-year high unemployment rate of about 11 percent, foreign debt of more than $35 billion and record numbers of bankruptcies are contributing to what he called "a national emergency."

Argentina's 28 million people have eagerly awaited a change in economic policy promised by Bignone, a retired army general who last Thursday replaced Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri as president. Bignone also has promised to return the country to civilian rule by March 1984.

Galtieri was forced out for his role in Argentina's defeat by Britain in the 74-day Falklands conflict, which critics say aggravated the ailing economy. Although Argentina has not agreed to stop fighting for sovereignty over the South Atlantic British colony, its forces there surrendered June 14.

The new economy minister said he would raise exports through devaluing the peso, Argentina's currency. Devaluations make foreign currencies more valuable, discouraging imports and spurring a country's exports by effectively lowering their prices on the world market.

Dagnino Pastore said the monetary exchange market would be split into commercial and financial sectors. The commercial exchange rate would affect imports and exports, while the financial rate would apply to other transactions.

The minister did not provide new exchange rates.

Suspicious fire kills six, police say

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — A man who police say set fire to a sofa at his niece's apartment during a fit of rage was charged with igniting a killer blaze an hour later that left six people dead and another 12 to 20 missing.

"You did it. Why did you do it?" the niece was screaming at the suspect when police arrived, officials said.

More than 120 people were homeless today after the fire swept through two downtown apartment buildings Monday. Police said some of the missing may have been at holiday gatherings away from home.

"Flames were crashing all around," tenant Richard Chute said, describing his family's escape.

As fire and thick, black smoke shot above the twin, five-story brick buildings, several tenants clung to ledges until firefighters could raise ladders and rescue them.

Police said the death toll would have been much higher except that two officers on patrol smelled smoke and went to investigate.

"If we hadn't happened to be there, probably another 60 people would have died," said patrolman Michael Dimaria.

Firefighters still were soaking the smoldering rubble early today as rescue workers searched for possible victims.

"The bodies are badly burned. They're taking out parts of bodies. It's going to take quite some time," said Ken Borowski of the Waterbury Red Cross, which set up shelters for the homeless.

The Waterbury Police Department reported at least six deaths.

Police said they did not know how many of those still unaccounted for actually were in the buildings when the fire broke out.

"The building superintendent says some people were away for the holiday," said Janet O'Donnell of the Red Cross.

As many as 165 people may have lived in the buildings, according to the Red Cross.

Borowski said it was difficult to obtain exact numbers because the buildings, which housed mainly low-income people, frequently had transients staying in them.

Waterbury Mayor Edward D. Bergin said, "This is the worst fire, to my knowledge, in the city's history."

Patrolman Dimaria said that when he arrived, one apartment was on fire. "Within a few minutes, the whole building was engulfed in flames — it all went up," he said.

It took the Waterbury Fire Department, which called in men and equipment from neighboring towns, four hours to bring the general alarm fire under control.

Police charged Israel Flores, 29, who also goes by the name of Israel Madera, with three counts of murder-arson and one count of first-degree arson.

He was held in lieu of $500,000 bond, and was scheduled to appear in court today, said Waterbury Police Sgt. Joseph Cass.

Disagreements over nuclear plants report

WASHINGTON (AP) — An anti-nuclear group and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission are at odds over how to interpret a recently completed report detailing problems at power plants.

Critical Mass Energy Project charged Monday that the report on 19,400 "events" at nuclear plants over a 11-year period shows that 141 of them could have led to a possible core meltdown.

But the head of the NRC division which commissioned the report, titled "Potential Precursors to Severe Core Damage," called the analysis by the anti-nuclear group "a bit overdrawn."

Critical Mass cited a draft version of the report prepared in January 1981 by Oak Ridge National Laboratory as verifying "that nuclear power plants are riddled with design errors and their operation plagued by equipment failures and human errors."

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals, call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Jobless northerners are finding that the 'gold coast' is tarnished

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press Writer
HOUMA, La. (AP) — The jobless still flock to south Louisiana with visions of ready jobs for high pay, apparently unaware of the tarnish a shrinking job market has put on the oil-rich "Gold Coast."

Many have wound up in welfare lines and charity centers like the ones they vowed to leave behind when they fled the hard-hit factory towns of the North, officials say.

"It's been unreal — the number of people from Michigan alone," said Celeste Gaudet, manager of the state welfare office here, about 60 miles southwest of New Orleans.

One out of every 10 people who enter her office seeking food stamps or shelter has recently arrived from out of state — lured by the hope of work in the lucrative drilling industry, she said.

"They think this will be their dream, that they'll walk the streets of gold," she said. "When they get here, they're flabbergasted."

The recession has made a rude sweep along Louisiana's Gulf coast, producing cutbacks and layoffs in a region that had reveled in an oil and gas boom for many years.

But word of the slump hasn't reached the migrants — whose notions of south Louisiana wages and living costs often weren't realistic to begin with.

"Many of them are coming from factories where they made $10 or $12 an hour," said Linda Carroll, a placement official for the state Department of Labor in Lafayette.

"They're expecting more than a company here will offer them — $4 or $5 an hour for unskilled labor."

The only available figures on the state's jobless migrants come from the Louisiana Department of Labor. In the past two years, there's been a doubling of the number of people who at any given time are collecting unemployment benefits transferred from other states — from about 3,350 to 6,700.

Ten years ago, the figure was 1,200.

That does not include the many more whose unemployment benefits have run out, or who weren't collecting any to begin with.

The number of Louisiana residents collecting unemployment has risen to 68,000, an increase of 25,000

Chrysler sales offices announced

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. will seek to capitalize on sales opportunities in the "high potential" cities of New Orleans and Houston by opening new zone sales offices in those cities by the fall, the automaker said.

The new offices will stem from a restructuring of current offices in the area that "are a little farther away (from the dealerships) than we desire," Tom Pappert, vice president-sales, said in a recent statement.

over two years. During that time, state unemployment has risen from about 6 percent to nearly 10 percent.

Victor Bussie, president of the state AFL-CIO, predicted the figure would reach 12 percent by the end of the year.

A spokesman for the labor department said the state has no program to discourage migrants from coming to Louisiana — despite the tightening situation.

Meanwhile, housing and other living costs continue to reflect the steep increases that occurred when oilfield workers flooded this bayou region, transforming sleepy fishing villages into boom towns.

Ms. Gaudet said the average monthly rent for a two-bedroom apartment is about $350. With a security deposit, it means an initial investment of at least $700.

Most of the migrants don't have that kind of stake, she said.

"Sometimes they will have four or five little ones packed in the car with everything they own," Ms. Gaudet said.

"They've used all their money to get here, and they have nothing to feed their families with."

"A lot of them just live in their cars."

Many eventually pack up their frustrations and move on, disappearing as quietly and as quickly as they arrived, on foot or crammed in battered automobiles.

It was century's longest moon eclipse

CHICAGO (AP) — The longest total lunar eclipse of the century blotted out the moon early today, delighting thousands of moon gazers, sightseers, merrymakers and scientists who gathered to watch it around the country.

Hundreds gathered to catch the free show at the Adler Planetarium on the Chicago lakefront. It was a celestial finale to the Independence Day weekend.

The eclipse achieved totality at 2:38 a.m. EDT, but the red color predicted by many astrofomers in the upper atmosphere failed to materialize in the Chicago area, although witnesses in New York reported an orange color.

It was the longest total lunar eclipse since 1859.

The Earth's penumbra, or lighter area of shadow, began to cover the moon at 12:22 a.m. The moon appeared little different until it moved into the center of the Earth's shadow, or umbra, at 1:33 a.m.

The moon was totally eclipsed until 4:24 a.m., a period of an hour and a half.

As totality ended, the moon's eastern edge brightened first. By 5:29 a.m., the moon appeared normal, but the end of the eclipse was not until about 6:40 a.m., when the moon moved out of the penumbra.

The shadowed moon hung in the southern sky like the ghost of a moldy apricot, in Chicago barely visible through the haze and urban glare.

Earlier, Larry Ciupik, associate astronomer at the Adler Planetarium, said the moon "could appear copper-colored, or orange, or even brick-red." He and other scientists had predicted a more vivid than usual color for this eclipse because of the large amounts of volcanic dust spewed into the upper atmosphere recently by volcanoes such as Mexico's El Chinchonal.

The mood of many along the Chicago waterfront appeared to be one of resigned anticlimax — the show wasn't as spectacular as the weekend fireworks, but it was free, the night was warm and the beer was cold.

It was also an active night for scientists. Several amateur astronomers gathered at Jones Beach in New York. The president of the Amateur Astronomers Association, John Marshall, held an eclipse party at the Bear Mountain Summit in Harriman, N.Y.

Several hundred visitors had a chance for close views of the moon through 12½-inch reflecting telescopes set up near the Adler Planetarium dome by the Chicago Astronomical Society.

One reason for the long eclipse, scientists said, was that the moon was near the most distant point it ever reaches in its orbit around the Earth. The farther the moon is from the Earth, the longer it takes to pass through the Earth's shadow.

The length of the eclipse also was caused by the moon's passing through the center of the Earth's shadow. Usually, it passes through a smaller area of shadow above or below the center.

MOONS OVER MANHATTAN. The moon moves out of its period of total eclipse Tuesday in a view looking west over Manhattan. Sequence was taken from 5:43

a.m. until 5:57 a.m. EST. Dark buildings at left are the Waterside Apartments. The World Trade Center is in background and Bellevue Hospital at right. (AP Laserphoto)

Steamy summer days bring reminder; heat can kill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The steamy days of July and August are settling upon America: a time for fun but also for caution. Like winter's chill, summer's heat can kill.

Just two years ago, a summer-long heat wave claimed more than 1,200 American lives and caused about $20 billion damage, according to the U.S. Data and Information Service.

Even a "normal" summer takes an estimated 175 lives, more than most other natural hazards except winter's cold.

And National Weather Service Director Richard E. Hallgren noted that these are only the direct casualties. "no one can know how many deaths are advanced by heat-wave weather — how many diseased or aging hearts surrender that under better conditions would have continued functioning."

A government study of a heat wave in New York City in 1966 showed that the death rate more than doubled the day after the maximum temperature of 103 was reached. There was even a jump in deaths from cancer, stroke and heart disease.

And a National Climatic Center study found a jump of more than 1,500 deaths in a 1975 heat wave in the Northeast.

"One theory of such catastrophes states that, in a population as large as the United States, there is always a group of seriously ill people. Heat waves, it is surmised, hasten terminal cases. Other victims, however, might survive for appreciable periods except for such weather extremes," said the study.

While most meteorologists admit long-range forecasts can only offer the most general guidance, the weather service has issued a summer forecast predicting a 60 percent chance of above normal temperatures in East Coast and West Coast states.

Only the western Great Lakes and the states along the Mississippi River Valley should look for below normal readings, they say, with other areas having a 50 - 50 chance of hotter or cooler than normal temperatures.

Dear Abby Ataxia Foundation is ready to help

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My speech is slurred, I can't walk straight, my coordination is off, and it's hard for me to swallow. Worse yet, most people think I'm drunk.

I am a victim of ataxia — a hereditary disease that is often incorrectly diagnosed as multiple sclerosis. An estimated 15 million Americans are afflicted with hereditary diseases. Approximately 250,000 are victims of some form of ataxia. It affects people of all ages and races, and it cannot be diagnosed before the symptoms appear. It is a life-long and deadly disorder, yet surprisingly few people know it exists (it is not contagious and it is not a mental disorder).

There are ataxia clinics throughout the United States that can't wait to offer genetic counseling, neurological testing, financial assistance and reliable information concerning insurance, legal rights, where to find home care and nursing homes.

The National Ataxia Foundation is eager to locate victims and their relatives in order to help them. Please help spread the word, Abby.

MILDRED S. IN WOODLAND HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR MILDRED: I have checked out the organization and have found it to be a legitimate, sincere, non-profit organization that welcomes all inquiries and will respond (free of charge) to those who write. The address: The National Ataxia Foundation, 6681 Country Club Drive, Minneapolis, Minn. 55427. Phone: 1-612-546-6220. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I just wanted to share something nice. (I saw your column in The Day in New London, Conn.) I had an ad appear directly under your column. It was a sketch of a single rose with the following message: "Nancy, may the next 25 years be just as joy filled."

I know the couple who Nancy and Dick are, but apparently the sketcher in ad in that newspaper requesting that it be placed under Nancy wouldn't miss it, so I assume she's a very generous. Imagine her thrilled double-take when she saw the ad.

I'd like to see evidence of a good marriage out there. I'd like to see a man to be married to a man so thoughtful, loving and imaginative. Neat?

BETH IN MYSTIC, CONN.

DEAR BETH: Neat, indeed! I'll bet Dick's ad plants that unique idea in the minds of other lovers.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who was married in a Catholic church in 1958 said her husband took a ride one Sunday and never came back. She asked if she was still married and she need a divorce if she wanted to start life as a single woman.

I advised her to see a priest about an annulment. Regardless of what the priest or the church says, she had to consult an attorney. The only legal dissolution that would come from a court.

HOUSTON LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: I assumed the priest would tell her not only how she stood with the church, but how she stood with the law. (That's like assuming that a lawyer would feel obligated to tell his clients how they stood with the church.) Mea culpa.

Picture perfect paint jobs

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Over the years I have painted quite a number of rooms inside the three houses we have owned. Soon I would like to try something new — painting the outside of our present house. The outside has horizontal wood siding. Is there some special way to paint this kind of siding? The problem is that I have always used a paint brush, never a roller, and I don't think I would like to try the roller at this time and on this kind of surface.

A. — You are not alone in thinking that painting siding can be easier with a brush than a roller, although I personally prefer a roller. First, be sure you don't have too much paint on the brush, otherwise it will run down the handle as you paint the undersides of the projections. These undersides must be painted first. Next, do the main part of the siding, using sweeping, back-and-forth strokes to apply the paint and the same kind of strokes, but with a lighter touch, to smooth out the paint. When doing the undersides of the projections, it is necessary to use only the tips of the bristles. If you are using latex, you probably will not get lap marks and you might not even get them with some newer kinds of oil paints, but it's still a good idea to finish at least one side of the house at a time. Try not to stop in the middle of a side to answer the telephone or eat lunch.

Q. — We want to finish our basement and plan to have a toilet. How can this be done without tearing up the concrete floor, since the sewer pipe is above the basement floor?

A. — On the assumption that you will hire a plumber for such a professional job, tell him you want one of the up-flushing toilets now in use. They are made especially for this purpose, but are not always available everywhere. If your plumber balks at getting one, get another plumber.

Q. — I have to do some outside wiring soon and wonder whether it is necessary to use a ground-fault interrupter?

A. — Why wouldn't you want to use it? It might save your life or someone else's someday. A ground-fault interrupter is required by the Electrical Code. It works as a kind of fuse, protecting you if the circuit begins to leak electricity from the outside line.

Mending Mature Marriage

Hole in garage causes hot words

By LOUISE PIERCE

"DEAR LOUISE: I stepped on the foot feet instead of the brake when I was half way into the garage the other day and drove right out the back and into the garden. The garage was kind of rickety anyway and it really tore it up."

"I knew my husband would be upset but I hoped he wouldn't get real mad. Well, he did. He called me stupid. He's called me a lot of things in our 47 years together but never called me stupid before. It hurt my feeling real bad."

"I scold him sometimes, like when he tracks mud onto my clean linoleum. But I've never ever called him stupid."

"He says I ought to quit driving because most women over 60 are nervous and undependable and shouldn't be behind the wheel of a car."

"Do most husbands fuss about their wives' driving? Is he right about women drivers past 65? Would you stop driving if you were me? V. Y."

DEAR V. Y.: In my opinion he is wrong about the majority of older women being incompetent drivers. I have no statistics on this, but a scanning of any highway through any city should reveal as many mature women as young ones driving their cars. Further, I don't believe your husband could prove that more older women have accidents than do older men.

I think you should keep on driving — but wait until your husband cools off a little. Then promise to be careful — and keep your mind on your driving, every minute.

I know a lot of older men who consider their wives' driving as good as their own. You and your husband have a "trade-insults" going, and you need to stop it before it gets any louder and meaner. You should stop heckling him about muddy floors and ask him to return the favor if you offend him.

Otis used to frown at me sometimes when I did something foolish, although he never shouted or called me names.

New garages always disturb me. Every time we move, I have trouble driving straight into my half, leaving room for Otis' work car.

After our last move I drove in carefully. I thought, I was sure I didn't hit the wall on my side. I thought I'd done a beautiful job of parking.

A couple of hours later Otis poked his head into the kitchen. Half way between a frown and a smile, he said softly, "Honey, you crowded me a little."

I dashed around the corner to the garage. Was I chagrined! I was smack in the middle of the building!

The next day I began to practice getting in and out of my special spot. I went forward and backward so many times I had sun spots before my eyes. I'm sure my watching neighbors must have thought my mental gears were slipping.

But it worked. I still take it easy when I drive in, but I stay on my side. We're both relieved that I do. My best advice to you, V. Y. is to do likewise.

"DEAR LOUISE: My husband isn't too well and thinks he's worse off than he is or anyways than I think he is. He has a touch of heart trouble, nothing real serious I'm sure, just needs to take things a little slower than he did 20 or 30 years ago."

"He's real sensitive about it. He sits around and pouts because he says he doesn't dare do anything more strenuous than walking across the room."

"He used to be real active and I know he'd like to be again. Is there any easy work you can suggest that he might do to feel of some value again but not hurt himself? Thank you. K. Z."

DEAR K. Z.: Consult your doctor before you make any suggestions and before you follow any advice of mine.

My feeling is that small accomplishments could restore your husband's self-importance but not harm his health.

A friend of ours who was a heart patient did every task a little at a time. He doted on his car and kept it so shiny you could see your face in it. But each time he polished it, he did one fender or one door at a time. Eventually the whole car was aglow. And he did not hurt his health. Have you husband try it.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife won't let me out of the house until she's combed my hair, brushed my coat, polished my shoes and inspected my ears.

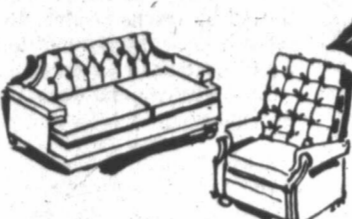

"We're almost 70 and I don't think we need to be so particular about our looks anymore. I think she's too prissy. What do you think? J. O."

DEAR J. O.: I think you're lucky she loves you enough to want you to look exactly right. Don't discourage her efforts. Write DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Homemaker's News

Yummy jelly for the belly

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

This season for many Gray County citizens to tackle the available fruits and try their hand at making jellies, jams, preserves, marmalades, or butters. Preparing quality homemade jams and jellies sometimes can test the patience and ability of even the most experienced home economists.

Jellies, jams, preserves, marmalades, and butters can add zest to meals. Most of them also provide a good way to use fruit not at its best for canning or freezing such as the largest or smallest fruits and berries and those that are irregular shaped.

SUCCESSFUL JELLY

Here are some guidelines to follow to insure success in jellymaking. (1) Use only recipes from reliable sources. Recommended sources are the Gray County Extension Service, U.S.D.A., home canning jar manufacturers, and commercial fruit pectin manufacturers. (2) Follow instructions carefully. If a "how to" is given in detail, that means it is important to success. (3) Use a large enough pan so jelly or jam can boil without overflowing. (4) Never double a recipe. Cooking speed and therefore times change with quantity. (5) If this is your first time to do jellymaking — start with recipes using commercial fruit pectin or skip jellies and try jam or preserves.

THE QUESTION OF SUGAR

Sweetness is a necessary component of jellied products. However, there are some alternatives to granulated sugar. Corn syrup or honey can be used for part of the sugar. In jellies without added pectin, corn syrup can be used for 1/4 of the sugar or honey may be used for 1/2 of the sugar. In products with added powdered pectin, corn syrup may be used for 1/2 the sugar. If honey is used in those recipes, the amount of honey should not exceed 3/4 to 1 cup. In products with added liquid pectin, not over two cups of corn syrup should be used or if honey is used, it should not exceed 3/4 to 1 cup.

"SUGAR FREE" JELLIED FRUIT

Jellies and jams can be a "sweet-treat" for calorie and weight watchers. Artificial sweetener is used to sweeten sugar-free jellies and jams, and pectin is used for the thickener. Also on the market are products developed with the person on a sugar restricted diet in mind. These jelling mixes on the market permit the use of honey, artificial sweeteners, or reduced amounts of refined sugar in place of the standard 55 percent sugar by weight required in conventional preparation.

STORING JELLIED FRUITS

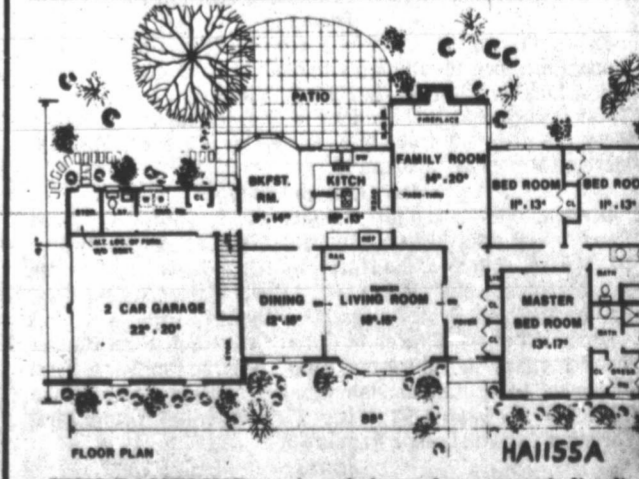

Jellied products should be allowed to stand overnight to void breaking the gel. Then label each container with the name and date. Store in a cool, dry place to prevent discoloration of jellied fruit. The shorter the storage time, the better eating quality of the product.

RECIPES AND INSTRUCTIONS

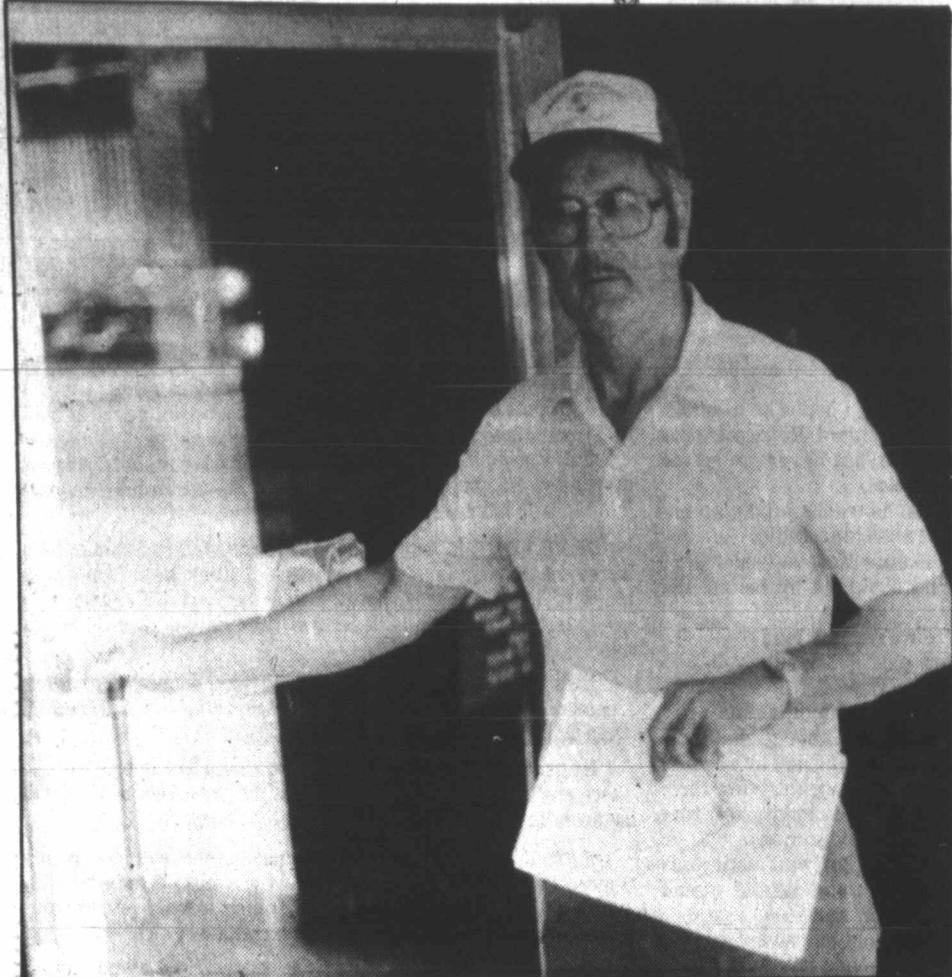

Copies of the free Extension publication Jellies, Jams, Preserves, Marmalades and Butters may be obtained from the Gray County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex. This publication contains information on testing for pectin, equipment needed, recipes (including cactus jelly, tomato preserves, sugarless jams and jellies) and questions and answers about jellied products. Also available from the Extension office are jelly and jam recipes for beginners.

AL roundup

Mariners edge by Yankees to move into third place

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Seattle may be a nice place to live, but the New York Yankees certainly don't like to visit there. On the other hand, anywhere Baltimore's Scott McGregor happens to run into the California Angels is paradise.

The Yankees, who have struggled most of the season, had won four in a row when they hit Seattle Monday night. Seattle hit right back. The surprising Mariners rallied for two runs in the seventh inning to knock off the Yankees 5-4 and move into third place in the American League West.

"I hate this ballpark," New York's Lou Piniella said of the Seattle Kingdome, where the Yankees have dropped 20 of 31 games.

Meanwhile, two-run homers by Rick Dempsey, Eddie Murray and Floyd Rayford powered the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-5 victory over California as McGregor recorded his 12th consecutive victory over the Angels.

Elsewhere in the AL, the division leaders, Boston and Kansas City, split a doubleheader, the Red Sox taking the opener 4-3 in 11 innings and the Royals winning the nightcap 4-3; the Milwaukee Brewers crushed the Chicago White Sox 10-4, the Oakland A's blanked the Cleveland Indians 2-0, the Minnesota Twins downed the Detroit Tigers 5-3 and the Texas Rangers nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2.

Julio Cruz singled home the tying run for Seattle with two out in the seventh inning, then stole second and third and scored the winner on Dave Eder's single. Cruz and Eder also singled in the first inning before Bruce Bochte's RBI double. And in the third, following a leadoff walk, Cruz laced an RBI double and scored on a single by Eder.

New York Manager Gene Michael was thrown out of the game in the seventh inning by home plate umpire Larry Barnett for continuing an argument started by catcher Butch Wynegar after Barnett called a close pitch a ball to Eder when a strike would have ended the inning.

Dave Winfield and John Mayberry homered for the Yankees.

Orioles 8, Angels 5

The homers by Dempsey, Murray and Rayford helped McGregor boost his career mark against California to 12-2, including the final game of the 1979 AL Championship Series. He scattered 10 hits in 8 1/3 innings but held the Angels to one run until the ninth. Doug DeCinces, Reggie Jackson and Fred Lynn homered for the Angels.

Red Sox 4-3, Royals 3-4

Frank White drove in three runs and scored twice for Kansas City in the nightcap, after Jim Rice's 11th-inning sacrifice fly gave Boston a 4-3 triumph in the opener in a battle between the AL division leaders. The split enabled the Royals to take a one-game lead over California in the AL West, while Boston's lead over Milwaukee in the AL East was sliced to one-half game.

White hit a two-run homer in the first inning of the second game. With the score tied 2-2 — Carl Yastrzemski homered for one of Boston's runs — Willie Wilson led off the Kansas City fifth with a single, the sixth consecutive game in which he has at least two hits.

A's 2, Indians 0

Dan Meyer hit a solo home run in the third inning and Mike Heath rapped a run-scoring single in the sixth to back the seven-hit pitching of Tom Underwood and Dave Beard as Oakland handed Cleveland its fourth consecutive setback. The Oakland pitchers outduelled Rick Sutcliffe, who scattered seven hits in a route-going performance.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 2

Billy Sample extended his hitting streak to 17 games with a third-inning single which drove in the first run in a three-run burst. Texas' Jon Matlack and Danny Darwin outduelled Toronto's Luis Leal, who yielded only six hits. In the Texas third inning, Larry Parrish was hit by a pitch and forced by Don Werner, who went to third on a single by Mark Wagner and scored on Sample's single. Wagner scored on a single by Doug Flynn and Sample scored as Buddy Bell grounded into a force play.

Haynie captures Jackson Classic crown

TORONTO (AP) — Even a trip to dreamland can be a little tiring. So a little rest is on the agenda for Sandra Haynie this week following her victory in the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic.

"I'm on a roll. I know it, but I'll die if I keep going," Haynie said. "This is the sixth straight week for me."

"I need a rest, so I'll be passing up Wheeling (W. Va.) next week."

Haynie sank a 10-foot putt for a par on the final hole Sunday to defeat Beth Daniel by one stroke. The victory enabled the 39-year-old Haynie to become the first player in the history of the Ladies Professional Golf Association to win the three designated major tournaments — the Peter Jackson Classic, LPGA and U.S. Women's Open.

"I didn't realize that," said Haynie, who shot a final-round 68 for a 280, eight-under-par total. "I'll have to remember for my scrap book."

The past few weeks have been quite a whirl for Haynie, who captured the Rochester International in Pittsford, N.Y., June 27. The LPGA Hall of Famer is in the second year of a comeback after four relatively inactive seasons.

"This is a fantasy, dreamland, Disneyland," Haynie said. "I'd have never dreamed I could come back the way I have. My first year on tour I played for less money than I earned this week."

Haynie won 39 tournaments from 1962 through 1975. Then she decided to take a break. "I had played competitive golf since I was 12 years old," said Haynie. "I was just burned out."

Now Haynie's back, and very happy about it. "It's nice to get back and reflect on it and enjoy it (winning) more the second time around," said Haynie. "I feel fortunate to be in a sport where you can take four years off and have the opportunity to do this. When I came back last year, I felt like a rookie again, but I was spotting other players — younger players — four more years."

Haynie collected a first prize of $30,000 to bring her season's total to $174,161.

FUND ESTABLISHED. Pampa High track and field coach Wendell Palmer enters Citizens Bank and Trust to set up a fund for shotputter and discus thrower Randy Slaybaugh, who has been invited to compete in the International Sports Exchange track meet in Seoul, South Korea the second week in August. Slaybaugh must pay his own way, which will be approximately $2,000. Palmer added. Pampa residents have already donated about $300 to the fund. Palmer said. Persons who would like to donate to the fund may go to the bank or call Palmer at 665-6648. Slaybaugh, who graduated from Pampa High this spring, won the shot and discus competition in the District 3-5A meet this year, and qualified for the state meet as a junior. His personal bests have been 174-0 in the discus and 54-9 in the shot. The United States team going to Korea will consist of 60 athletes (30 men and 30 women) ranging up to 20 years old. It will be a three-day meet.

Braves past Chicago

by DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

Glenn Hubbard had a bad night. The Atlanta Braves only wish that all his nights can be so bad.

"A home run is a bad swing for me," said the Braves' 5-foot-8 second baseman, whose two-run homer in the seventh inning lifted Atlanta to its sixth straight victory, a 7-5 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

In other National League games Monday, St. Louis got by Cincinnati 6-5 in 10 innings, San Francisco beat Philadelphia 3-1, San Diego rallied to defeat Montreal 8-6, Los Angeles topped New York 4-1 and Houston beat Pittsburgh 6-4.

"Seriously, a home run is an uppercut and that's bad for me," Hubbard said. "I'm no home-run hitter and every time I hit one my shoulder starts flying up. I'll have to come up tomorrow and get extra batting practice to try and get to hitting line drives again."

"I'll take one-a-day anytime though," Hubbard said with a grin. Hubbard's homer, a blast off Cub starter Lee Smith, 1-5, made a winner of reliever Al

Hrabosky, 2-0.

Bob Horner belted his 17th homer of the year — and his sixth in five games — for the Braves, who maintained a 4½-game lead over second-place San Diego in the National League West.

Cardinals 6, Reds 5
St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith, whose ninth-inning error forced the game into extra innings, singled home the winning run in the 10th as the Cards sent the Reds to their eighth straight defeat.

The Cardinals moved to within .001 of first-place Philadelphia in the NL East.

The Cardinals grabbed a 5-3 lead in the seventh, let the Reds tie it with error-aided runs in the eighth and ninth, then relied on Smith's single off reliever Tom Hume, 1-4, to win it.

Jim Kaat, 3-1, pitched the ninth inning to post the victory. Doug Bair notched his third save.

Giants 3, Phillies 1
San Francisco's Bill Laskey, 7-5, silenced the biggest regular-season crowd in Veterans Stadium history by limiting the Phillies to one run on eight hits.

Chili Davis' leadoff triple triggered a two-run, sixth-inning rally that carried the Giants over loser Dick Ruthven, 6-7.

The holiday crowd of 63,501 — drawn in part by a post-game fireworks show — broke the stadium regular-season mark of 63,346, set Aug. 10, 1979 against Pittsburgh.

Padres 8, Expos 6
The second-place Padres kept pace with the Braves in the NL West as they erupted for six runs in the seventh inning to key their victory over Montreal.

Texas League baseball roundup

Donnie Scott drove in all five runs with a grand slam homer and a solo shot as the Tulsa Drillers defeated the Jackson Mets, 5-3, in Texas League baseball action.

In other Texas League games Monday night, Shreveport whipped Arkansas, 8-4, San Antonio beat Midland, 5-1 and Amarillo trounced El Paso, 11-1.

Scott's solo homer came in the ninth and gave the Drillers an insurance run.

Darryl Strawberry singled home one Jackson run and Mike Anicich sent the others home with a two-run homer in the third inning.

Brad Mengwasser, 7-2, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Jeff Bittiger, 7-4. Doug Wabeke had a two-run homer and Rob Deer had two solo homers as the Shreveport Captains whipped the Arkansas Travelers, 8-4.

Wabeke had three hits in three trips to the plate, scored three runs and drove in three. Jack Ayer had a two-run homer for Arkansas.

The winning pitcher was Scott Garrelts, 6-5. John Adams, 3-1, was the loser.

Randy Kaczmarzki had a solo homer and teammates Jeff Ronk and Jerry Davis contributed timely hitting as the Amarillo Gold Sox overwhelmed the El Paso Diablos, 11-1.

Ronk had two hits in two plate appearances and scored three runs while David had three hits in four trips to the plate and scored three runs for the Gold Sox.

Eric Payton homered for El Paso.

Marty Kain, 8-5, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Andy Beene, 7-1.

Lemmie Miller had a two-run homer as the San Antonio Dodgers defeated the Midland Cubs, 5-1.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 6, 1982

The past year may have made you overly cautious, but you can't drive a car with the brakes applied. When you get that green signal this coming year, move ahead fearlessly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) When two parties each refuse to hear the other's point of view, it becomes impossible to work out matters. Don't be guilty of this today in dealing with your mate. Find out more of what lies ahead for you for each season following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your productiveness will suffer today if you get too emotionally wrapped up in some infraction you feel has been perpetrated against you. Pride could be the greater enemy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Being frugal is good, but don't carry it too far. There's a possibility you may be so tightfisted today that you'll ignore the needs of your family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's not like you to overlook other's feelings, yet today you could be so insistent upon having your own way that you'll be blind to the desires of everyone else.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you dwell on negatives today, a depression could set in which would be hard to shake. This might hurt your situation even more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Everyone isn't as honest as you are, and today you could run across one whose sale's pitch is a lot of pie-in-the-sky. Don't be gullible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your personal ambition is unrealistic today, you'll become extremely frustrated. Reach high, but be honest about your limitations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Every once in a while your ideas can be so futuristic that they don't fit into today's world. If you find a lack of acceptance today, this may be the case.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may be asked to participate in something today which you feel is too overwhelming for your abilities. If your fears make sense, drop out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Flexibility in your thinking is a must today if you hope to keep things running smoothly. Unyielding opinions will cause major problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Recall: Your way is not necessarily the only way to accomplish a task. When dealing with co-workers today, allow them to perform in their own manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avoid taking sides between two pals who might have a dispute today. If you do, the blame for how things turn out may be aimed at you.

Anti-abortion activist nominated

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of a clean sweep of the six-member U.S. Civil Rights Commission, President Reagan has nominated a 32-year-old anti-abortion activist who once called for abolition of the agency. Congressional sources said close scrutiny will be given by liberal and moderate members of the Senate Judiciary Committee to Robert A. Destro, who just resigned as director of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights in Milwaukee.

Reagan has either replaced or indicated his intention to replace five of the six members of the commission. Sources who asked not to be identified said the current chairman, Clarence Pendleton, has indicated that the president will also name a sixth member to take the place of Jill Ruckelshaus, an active Republican feminist. The Catholic league Destro headed is a nationwide organization of 20,000 members whose main purpose is to urge reversal of the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions. The civil rights commission is prohibited by law from investigating and issuing reports on the impact of abortion law on minorities. It was set up to study and publish reports on the progress or lack of progress by minorities in fighting discrimination.

In 1978, Destro testified before the same Senate Judiciary Committee and criticized the civil rights commission for failure to look into discrimination against Catholics and white ethnic groups like Poles and Italians.

Destro said the commission has a "pronounced animus toward religion and religious discrimination cases."

He said blacks, women and other "approved minorities" are well represented by organizations like the Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Organization for Women and don't need a federal commission.

Destro said the commission has failed to examine discrimination against Catholics and ethnic groups, and has therefore created a national impression that only blacks, Hispanics, Indians and women suffer from racial or sexual discrimination.

Southwestern Public Service Company works around the clock to provide you with a dependable supply of electricity. When storms or other problems occur, SPS crews are ready to repair damaged equipment quickly. During the recent tornadoes that swept through parts of the SPS service area, many of our employees worked through the night and well into the next day to restore power to customers whose service was interrupted.

Donald French, Line Supervisor, Lubbock.

Investor-owned utilities, like Southwestern Public Service Company, provide about 77% of our nation's electricity. The cost of producing this power has increased each year due to inflation, the high cost of fuel, and many other factors. Keep this in mind when you receive your next electric bill, then take a look around your home. Chances are that your air conditioner, range, and television all use electricity. Remember, our country's standard of living depends on the availability of electric power—let's not take that power for granted.

John Merchant, Electrical Engineer, Carlsbad.

SPS' bond rating is AA. This rating allows investors to judge our company's financial condition and its ability to repay borrowed money. Bond-rating firms consider the financial health of the company, the stability of our fuel supply, management goals, construction, and many other factors. Companies with the highest bond ratings pay the lowest interest rates when borrowing money. SPS' solid rating allows it to raise capital for construction at lower interest rates, which saves our customers money.

Mary Pullum, Assistant Secretary, Amarillo.

Knowing what electricity is worth is worth knowing. For answers to your questions, call or write your SPS manager.

A look at the astronauts of the future

By PAUL REECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Jack-of-all-trades era of the astronaut ended when Columbia flew home from its fourth orbital mission. The age of the new breed, "astronaut specialist," begins with flight number five.

Crews for each of the next four shuttle flights include two pilot-astronauts and two mission specialists, or non-pilot astronauts.

The ninth flight, set for September 1983, will include six men: Two pilots, two mission specialists and two payload specialists, including one astronaut from either the Netherlands, West Germany or Switzerland.

This represents a fundamental change in space travel for the United States.

From the beginning of America's space program, astronauts were trained for every job in space that might be needed. And each astronaut was trained for a specific mission.

Every man aboard each of the Apollo flights could do the job of every other crewman. Each astronaut, even those who started out as scientists, was a highly trained pilot. And the pilot-astronauts became highly trained science technicians.

Test-pilot astronauts who landed on the moon spent months before their missions training as geologists. One expert who reviewed their work said the men of Apollo were all "competent field geologists."

Scientist-astronauts selected by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration spent their first year learning to fly high-performance jets. They were all able to take the controls of the spacecraft.

On Skylab, which involved missions lasting for weeks, the pilot-astronauts became experts on instruments studying the Earth and the sun. They also were trained for medical emergencies and each could perform minor procedures, such as pulling teeth, stitching wounds, giving shots and drawing blood.

The space shuttle is changing the need for such extensive cross-training.

"With the shuttle," Johnson Space Center Director Christopher Kraft said once, "anybody can fly into space."

Astronauts are split into distinct groups based on the jobs they will have in space.

Pilot-astronauts will fly the craft. Unlike Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield on Columbia's fourth flight, the pilot-astronauts will not perform experiments or operate instruments in the payload.

Their job, said Charles Lewis, a flight director, will be "flying the vehicle to satisfy the payload users."

Mission specialists will be responsible for the basic goal of the mission, and for the general operation of the experiments or the payloads. They will operate the robot arm that maneuvers cargo packages.

Payload specialists will concentrate on the specific cargo. They will be the in-space agents of customers paying to fly the payload. Some payload specialist in the future may not even be employed by NASA, but, rather, by the customer. A manufacturer, for instance, could fly a company engineer whose only job would be to concentrate on his firm's payload.

The changes will ripple throughout the manned spaceflight system, dramatically reshaping the operation of Mission Control, that earthbound big brother that has guided all operations on earlier spaceflights.

In the fourth shuttle flight, the first separate control center was put into operation. Mattingly and Hartsfield, operating a secret military experiment package, communicated directly with an Air Force controller in Sunnyvale, Calif., who was known only as "paycom." He directed operation of the secret experiment. It was the first time a flying astronaut talked directly with a paying customer instead of NASA controllers.

In the future, there will be several separate control centers. They are already being developed at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California and at the Goddard Spaceflight Center in Maryland. Eventually, even private companies or universities could have control centers for operation of specific payloads.

Mission Control, says Lewis, will become less important in the operation of the shuttle, a spacecraft designed to cut some of the bonds with Earth.

Engineers designed the craft with this in mind. On board is the most sophisticated computer system ever flown. It's capable of closely monitoring the spacecraft systems with the vigilance once provided only by Mission Control, with three shifts daily of some 300 experts.

"I think we'll gradually work our way into... sort of a small Mission Control team," said Lewis. Experts would be on standby, if needed, he said, but the number working full time on flight control will be pared back. Some positions already have been combined or eliminated.

Feds to appraise western livestock grazing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is scheduled to begin this month an appraisal of western livestock grazing to help determine the fair market value of rental fees charged for the use of public lands. Officials said the appraisal will be done jointly by the Forest Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, and the Bureau of Land Management in Interior.

R. Max Peterson, chief of the Forest Service, said the appraisal is part of a review and evaluation of the present grazing fee formula and other options required by the Public Rangelands Improvement Act of 1978.

Peterson said the appraisal will be completed by November 1983.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it is helping states to set up a standardized system for detecting and keeping track of crop pests.

Ron Johnson, who is coordinator of the program for the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said that previously each state had its own system of surveying for crop pests.

"Now we're helping the states standardize their methods so they'll be better able to use each other's data," he said.

Each week the information will go to a USDA computer at the Fort Collins Computer Center, Fort Collins, Colo.

Michigan State University will process the information, which then will be available in less than a week as summary reports to state and federal agencies for use in their own programs or in advising farmers on pest control methods.

Johnson said 41 states are participating in the program now and that it probably will not be fully operational for at least another two years.

Church bus overturns

WALSENBURG, Colo. (AP) — Four children were hurt when a church bus from Texas carrying 44 passengers — most of them youngsters — overturned on a highway near here and burst into flames.

The Colorado State Patrol said the bus was transporting youngsters from a Baptist Church in Fort Worth, Texas, to a summer camp near Castle Rock, Colo. when the accident occurred Monday morning about 13 miles north of this southern Colorado city on Interstate 25.

The four victims were hospitalized in Huerfano Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries. Authorities would not release their identities.

It is believed the driver hit a soft shoulder causing the bus to flip over onto its right side. The engine burst into flames — eventually consuming the entire bus — but all occupants managed to evacuate the bus through emergency doors at the back.

The State Patrol said the cause of the accident remained under investigation.

Police said the jewels were taken from the fashionable East Side flat of Enid Haupt, 70, the former publisher of Seventeen magazine, who has given millions of dollars to the arts and medicine. Beneficiaries of her charity have included the Lincoln Center and the Mount Sinai Medical Center.

The burglary was reported when she returned home Monday afternoon following a weekend away, police said.

OTTAWA, Ontario (AP) — Princess Anne, on a ceremonial tour through Canada, whirled through a busy day in Ottawa, surveyed some cattle, dined on caribou and then headed for the Yukon.

Before she departed Monday, the 31-year-old princess had met with local organizers of the international children's group she heads, cruised a canal and lunched with the prime minister.

Then came a cruise down the Rideau Canal, where people waved from the canal side. One kayak paddler had to fight to avoid capsizing in the narrow waterway.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A former Polish diplomat who defected to the United States says the will for freedom is strong in his home country.

"Solidarity still lives in the hearts and minds of the people," Romauld Spasowski told about 23,000 people Sunday in a Fourth of July speech.

Spasowski, urged his audience to lend both moral and material support to the Polish people, suggesting they donate food, clothing and medicine through private or church-associated relief programs.

In December, Spasowski resigned as Polish ambassador to the United States and defected after martial law was declared in Poland.

His speech at Brigham Young University's Marriott Center was part of the Provo Freedom Festival program.

Spasowski criticized the Soviet Union and urged Americans to fight what he called Soviet aggression.

"I know the communist and the socialist systems in Poland and in other countries are wrong," he said. "Once I grasped the full meaning of this, I could no longer continue to work for the government."

Texas rainbow is tarnished

HOUSTON (AP) — The gold of the Texas rainbow is tarnished by layoffs, a rising jobless rate in some areas and a mild slowing of growth. But unlike so many areas, there is still an economic rainbow.

By most measures the Texas economy still remains strong, healthy and perhaps poised for another surge forward, even as the economy for the nation as a whole continues to struggle.

"I think we're starting into a boom period," said a San Antonio economist and in Houston an authority on business observed. "The outlook is exceedingly bright for the rest of the century."

Nevertheless, the state has taken some locally severe bumps, scrapes and bruises. The "oil patch" has been staggered by a severe cutback in drilling, a decline in refinery capacity and a sharp reduction in demand for oil field equipment.

Dozens of oil-related business have been cutting jobs, and more layoffs are predicted. Industry analysts say some companies may fold before the picture improves.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area was stunned by the failure of Braniff International. About 4,500 jobs were lost when the airline ceased operations on May 12. There also have been layoffs in manufacturing.

Unemployment rates have risen slightly in a number of areas, and the tendency might worsen. Some analysts predict rates as high as 7 percent this summer in Houston and Dallas, the state's economic powerhouses. Yet Texas' rates are far below the national unemployment rate of 9.5 percent in June.

Statewide, the Texas Employment Commission reported a jobless rate of 5.9 percent, up from 4.3 percent in the same period of 1981.

Only four major labor markets — Amarillo, Austin, Odessa and McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg — showed improved job pictures for April.

Salvadoran immigrants seeking political asylum in Canada

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Salvadorans by the hundreds continue entering the United States illegally through the Rio Grande Valley and some are seeking political asylum in Canada where immigration policies are more relaxed.

U.S. immigration officials say they have not seen a slowdown in the numbers fleeing war-torn El Salvador since the March national elections there.

"We've noticed no significant change one way or another," said Chief Agent Larry Richardson of the Border Patrol's six-county McAllen sector.

"It seems to bear out our feelings that we're looking at an economic situation (rather than a political one)," he said.

In 1981, 2,830 Salvadorans were apprehended in the McAllen sector, many of whom had paid between $200 to $2,000 to smugglers who brought them all or part of the way to Texas.

Houston, Chicago, New York and other large cities with growing Salvadoran communities are their usual destinations.

So far this year, 1,210 Salvadorans have been arrested in the 100-mile-long stretch along the Rio Grande from Brownsville to Rio Grande City. The sector goes north to Falfurrias.

The State Department has decided that Salvadorans as a nationality do not qualify as political refugees under the United Nations convention. Most asylum requests are denied unless a person can show special circumstances, such as membership in a banned political organization.

However, the Canadian government in March 1981 relaxed its refugee policy and suspended deportation procedures against Salvadoran aliens, said Kevin Burke, immigration consul at the Canadian consulate in Dallas.

"We're responding simply on a case-by-case basis," Burke said in a telephone interview. "If a person may meet the (U.N.) Geneva Convention definition of refugee, at least the way we interpret it, they can apply."

Burke interviews Salvadoran applicants in person and has traveled to South Texas several times to talk to aliens being held at the Immigration and Naturalization Service detention center near Los Fresnos.

The asylum applicants usually have contacted the consulate through a local attorney or an informal network of volunteers who assist refugees, he said.

"We've only had a small number of people come forward to this office. Mexico City has been involved in this quite a lot," he added.

As many as 240,000 Salvadoran refugees are estimated to be living in Mexico, according to the United Nations.

There were more than 60 asylum requests pending in the Dallas office from Salvadoran individuals or families when the last count was made in May.

"It's been mushrooming since then. They walk in and we get calls," said Lou Quinn, Burke's assistant. "Somebody tells his buddies and the word gets around."

She said about 10 people applying through the Dallas office have re-settled in Canada.

The Canadian government pays their transportation, arranges housing and offers English classes. Refugees are expected to repay the relocation program once they are settled and find jobs.

Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Calgary have small Salvadoran refugee communities, Burke said.

The Canadian official said it sometimes is difficult to distinguish those who would be in jeopardy back in El Salvador and others trying merely to improve their financial condition.

"Economics is tied up with it," he said.

Canada, with its colder climate and lower immigrant population, clearly is their second choice to the United States, he said.

"Canada is another universe to them," said the Rev. Larry Jackson, a Presbyterian minister in Edinburg. "That's a long, long way from home. They know no one there."

Jackson is one of the founders of the Border Association for Refugees from Central America. The group tries to arrange housing, clothing and other needs for refugees who have come through the Valley "undetected" or for others caught by the Border Patrol.

He estimated a less than a dozen Salvadorans in the Valley have applied for Canadian asylum.

Most Salvadorans flee to the United States with little understanding of the political complexities involved, he said.

"All they know is there are a lot of people shooting at a lot of other people and they're caught in the middle and they want out of it," Jackson said.

Canada is not the answer to the continuing problem of refugees streaming to the United States, he said.

Lisa Brodyaga, a Harlingen lawyer who handles many asylum requests for Salvadoran aliens, agreed.

"It's nice to go where people want you," she said of the Canadian's relocation program. "But I'd like to see this country treat them as political refugees, just like every other country in the Western Hemisphere."

If that is not done, she said the Salvadorans should be granted "extended voluntary departure," which would allow them to remain in the United States indefinitely until it is safe to return to their country.

"That, in a sense, is better. It's not good to drain a country of all its people," she added.

New mediation services offer an alternative

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The dispute seemed bound for the backlogged Dallas County court system, either a drawn-out civil suit or — since there had been death threats — a criminal trial.

Instead, the case ended with a handshake, and no lawyers fees.

The dispute began last fall when the buyer and seller of a used car argued over a $200 down payment the seller refused to return when the buyer refused to complete the deal.

Their disagreement boiled into death threats. The buyer went to the district attorney's office, wanting to file criminal charges. The district attorney's office referred him to Dallas' new Dispute Mediation Center. The dispute became DMS's first case in what supporters say has been a highly successful first year.

Richard Everts, mediation center director, talked to both men — whom he declined to identify — and arranged a meeting between them where he moderated a discussion of their differences.

Three and a half hours later, having signed a settlement they both liked, the men shook hands and drove away. Neither side lost nor won, Everts said. But both left satisfied, a speedily reached, mutually acceptable agreement in hand.

And neither man was out a dime in legal fees. It is in cases like that Everts said he believes mediation is offering a happier and cheaper alternative to Dallas County courts.

The idea is new to Texas. The mediation center, funded by a combination of state and foundational grants, opened a year ago in July, just months after a similar agency opened in Houston.

Everts and members of the mediation center board, a mixture of lawyers, judges, a county commissioner, businessmen and social workers, say they're pleased with the organization's first year. They express enthusiasm about its potential.

Mediation, Everts said, "is a very positive event for interpersonal relations."

"People are down on the judicial system. They're down on lawyers. They're taking disputes to a judicial system it was never designed to have."

Mediation differs from traditional court proceedings in that the two disputing parties work out their differences with the help of a neutral third party — a mediator — who brings them together and steers them toward a settlement both will accept.

Both sides may break off the proceedings at any time, but, supporters say, the parties are unlikely to do that since most see mediation as a way to avoid going to court.

The settlements that result from the process are binding contracts — enforceable in court. But they are rarely appealed, because the disputants themselves drew them up, Everts said.

"I feel it's great," board president Louis J. Weber Jr., a Dallas civil trial lawyer, said of the mediation process. "Lawyers charge too much and the system is too slow."

Bob Greenwald, a U.S. Justice Department official whose agency started experimental mediation centers during the Carter Administration, said DMS's first year "has been beyond our expectations."

"It's just been a house on fire," he said.

In its first year, DMS handled 600 cases, 100 more than had been its goal.

Of those 600 cases — a variety of civil, minor criminal and domestic disputes, including divorces — 55 percent were resolved through mediation, Everts said.

Most of the unresolved cases never reached mediation because the second party could never be reached, Everts said.

"Once we can get (the two sides) together, the probability for success is very high ... 90 percent," he said. "It's getting them together that's the hard part."

The center's cases come from both referrals, like its first, and walk-ins, Everts said.

The complaints are passed along to mediators, who, in turn, invite the parties to meet and settle the dispute.

At the session the two parties tell the mediator their sides of the story and discuss ways of reaching an agreement.

"Eventually they see a format that they like," Everts said. "We provide alternatives. They select what they find to be equitable."

All 33 mediators are volunteers, paid only a small stipend. They range in age from 23 to 79. Half are women. A third are lawyers and retired judges. Seven are bilingual.

All were trained by Everts, who holds a doctorate in international law and started a mediation center in Denver before coming to Dallas.

Greenwald, a Justice Department mediator in Dallas, praised the group.
