County vetoes tax appraisal budget, contract

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners today unanimously vetoed the 1982 appraisal services budget, submitted by the Gray County Tax Appraisal District board, and also vetoed the contract between the appraisal district and the combined city-school tax office of Charles Rand, during their meeting today.

The commissioners followed the lead of County Judge Carl Kennedy, who was the only member of the five-man appraisal board to say no during the appraisal board vote Feb. 15.

As one of Gray County's 10 taxing entities, the commissioners took the first step toward rejecting the action of the appraisal board. A majority of the taxing entities must veto the budget within 30 days to override the appraisal board's approval of the $532,000 annual budget for appraisal of all property in Gray County. The commissioners met another requirement for veto of the budget when they adopted a written resolution of rejection to be filed with appraisal board secretary Lloyd Hunt of McLean.

In addition, commissioners also vetoed the contract between the appraisal district and the combined city-school tax office of Charles Rand. Rand was contracted as chief appraiser to meet the new state law of only one appraisal per piece of property for all county taxing entities.

Rand's budget got the approval of the appraisal board, but when it was first discussed with the taxing entities and a mob of angry taxpayers at the appraisal board meeting last Thursday, it ran into stiff opposition. Extravagance was cited in salaries, vehicles, building plans and other areas.

Many of those to voice complaints Thursday also attended today's meeting in both the form of commissioners and angry citizens. About 20 citizens were invited to voice complaints about the budget to the commission. Three repeaters from Thursday's appraisal board meeting again aired gripes today before the commission turned thumbs down on the budget and contract.

Gray County Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray said, "I'm with Carl (Judge Kennedy). Parts of the budget are a little wild."

Attorney Dave Martindale said, "It looks like contracting with an outside firm (for all county appraisal work) would save money. I think you officials should look into the possibility of housing the chief appraiser in the courthouse."

Property owner Dan Chapin said the budget is "outrageous and ridiculous."

If approved, the county commissioners would be grossly negligent in their duties to the people," he said.

Chapin also suggested contracting with an outside, private appraisal firm, not Rand's office, for the appraisal of county property, an idea seconded by L.T. Clyburn, 1819 Hamilton.

Clyburn said, "Let's just do the minimum amount required by law, hire a chief appraiser, or whatever."

Rand was at the meeting to discuss his budget with commissioners, and he said he would favor using an outside appraiser, if that's what the taxing entities want. He said he had contacted several private firms to get an estimate of per parcel prices for appraisal work.

Gray County Commissioner Jimmy McCrackin, who made the motion to turn down the contract and budget, said of using an outside firm, "I think that's the way (with a private appraiser) we are going to go."

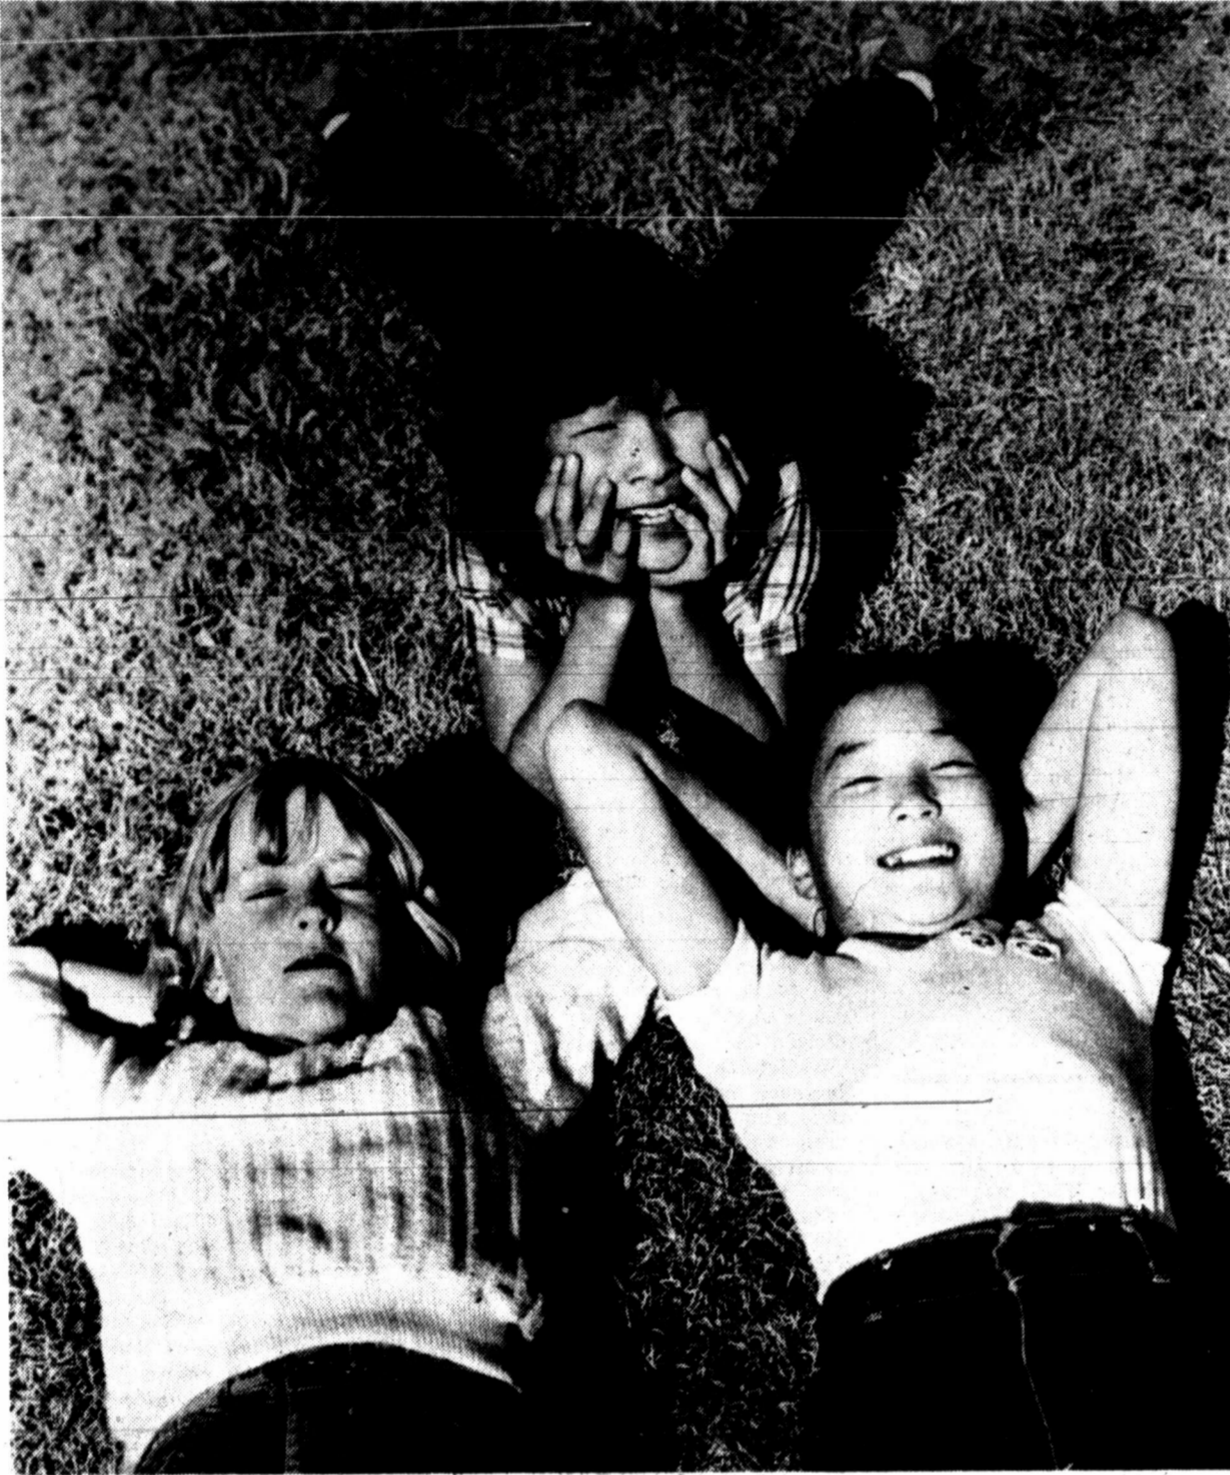

He also instructed Rand that as chief appraiser, he was working for Gray County taxpayers, not the State Property Tax Board in Austin.

Rand said "We have taken a real beating on this budget, and that's not fair. We are just trying to help."

To override the appraisal board's approval of the budget, four more county taxing entities must submit written vetoes of the budget to the appraisal board. If an entity does not vote on the issue, it constitutes automatic approval.

It appears the Pampa school board and city commission may be attempting to let the issue slide without a vote before the March 15 deadline. The school superintendent's office said today the school board does not intend to hold another meeting until March 16, a day after the deadline for a veto to be registered.

And City Manager Mack Wofford said Saturday, "There is no indication whether or not the appraisal budget will be on the agenda for the commission meeting March 9."

Supreme Court stands by decision to exclude paper from bank hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected a Texas newspaper's attempt to curb judges' power to exclude the public and press from pretrial hearings in non-criminal cases.

The court, by an 8-1 vote, left intact a state judge's decision to close a pretrial hearing in a lawsuit over alleged bank mismanagement.

Justice William J. Brennan voted to hear arguments in the case, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

The Lufkin News objected to the closure order after one of its reporters was forced to leave the courtroom during a pretrial hearing last Aug. 3 in a case in which a group of stockholders had sued the directors of the Texas National Bank of Lufkin. A lawyer for the bank directors asked that the public and press be excluded.

The lawyer said the hearing would involve "sensitive and confidential matters impinging upon the operation and reputation" of the bank, and that "the mere airing of such charges" could be damaging.

Judge Marcus Vascon, without explaining why, granted the request and ordered a Lufkin News reporter to leave.

The Texas Supreme Court subsequently refused to give the newspaper any emergency help.

In an appeal to the nation's highest court, the News and its editor, Joe Murray, argued that judges who close pretrial hearings in non-criminal cases are violating the Constitution.

The appeal invoked two recent Supreme Court rulings that, it contended, have established a qualified First Amendment right to attend all judicial proceedings.

Judges can overcome that public right only by an articulated finding that an open proceeding would pose a serious threat to the rights of those involved in the case, the newspaper argued.

In a 1980 decision called Richmond Newspapers vs. Virginia, the Supreme Court said the public and press have a constitutional right to attend criminal trials even when defendants object. That right can be overcome only "overriding interests" that a judge must have publicly identified.

However, the justices found no such public right of attendance at pretrial hearings in criminal cases when in a 1979 decision called Gannett vs. DePasquale they gave judges broad discretion to close such proceedings.

The Lufkin News' appeal said, "Although the decision in Richmond explicitly reached only the question of access to trials... it is clear from the several opinions in that case and in Gannett that this court has announced a rule that the press and public have a qualified right to attend all judicial proceedings, including pretrial proceedings."

Texas Attorney General Mark White urged the justices to reject the newspaper's appeal.

White also noted that the judge's order released transcripts of pretrial hearings in the Lufkin bank case.

Williams upset over plans to close Atlanta probe

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams fears he could lose his chance to be cleared of his two murder convictions if the books are closed on most of the slayings of young blacks that horrified Atlanta for nearly two years, his lawyer says.

Alvin Binder, the Mississippi lawyer who headed Williams' defense during a sensational nine-week trial, said Sunday that Williams was upset over reports that authorities now plan to close the books on 27 slayings. Binder said Williams hoped the investigation would continue so he would be exonerated.

A Superior Court jury deliberated 12 hours Friday and Saturday before finding the 23-year-old free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout guilty of murder in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21.

Judge Clarence Cooper sentenced Williams to two consecutive life terms in prison. Under Georgia law, Williams would be eligible for a parole review in seven years.

Cater and Payne were among 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force.

A source close to that investigation said Sunday that authorities have evidence linking Williams to as many as 24 slayings on the task force list, in addition to the two he was convicted of committing.

And the Atlanta Journal reported Sunday police also intend to close the books on the slaying of John Howard Porter, whose death was investigated by the task force but was not added to its official list.

Prosecutors at Williams' trial introduced evidence in the slaying of Porter and nine youths on the task force list in an effort to show a pattern of killings that included Cater and Payne.

District Attorney Lewis Slaton denied Sunday police have linked Williams to 27 killings, saying that number is "too high." He refused to say how many cases would be closed due to the convictions.

Robbie Hamrick, who headed the Georgia Bureau of Investigation's role in the task force, said Sunday officials from seven police jurisdictions would meet this week to decide the status of the remaining cases on the task force list.

The Journal report said the task force likely will be disbanded, and Williams probably would not be charged in any other killings.

Binder, who met with Williams at the Fulton County Jail Sunday, said his client "is not disheartened unduly" over his conviction, but "he's very disappointed."

"All of a sudden we're hearing that all the cases are being closed and that's upsetting to Wayne," Binder said. "He had hoped that the investigation would continue."

Binder said he understands that in one of the task force cases, authorities have eyewitnesses to the murder and "that would seem to me to warrant further investigation."

Williams, who "definitely wants the case appealed," is "holding up pretty well," Binder said. "He was very coherent."

After District Attorney Lewis Slaton read the verdict in court Saturday night, Williams insisted he was innocent.

"I maintained all along through this trial my innocence, and I still say so today," Williams said just before he was sentenced. "I don't have any malice towards the jury, the prosecutors or the court."

NEW YORK (AP) — A Puerto Rican nationalist group claimed responsibility for setting off powerful bombs that rocked the two major stock exchanges and other buildings along Wall Street but caused no injuries, police said early today.

The four blasts — which sources said packed the power of three or four sticks of dynamite — shattered windows at the New York Stock Exchange and surrounding buildings and blew out part of a wall at the American Stock Exchange shortly before midnight Sunday, police said.

Both exchanges were open for normal trading today.

Meanwhile, a demonstration was scheduled today by another organization to commemorate the 28th anniversary of the attack on Congress, in which Puerto Rican nationalists opened fire on legislators from the visitors' gallery of the House of Representatives. Five congressmen were wounded.

The demonstrators, organized by the New Movement in Solidarity with Puerto Rican Independence and Socialism, planned to rally outside the federal prison in lower Manhattan to demand the release of two men imprisoned in Puerto Rico for refusing to cooperate with a grand jury there.

Shortly after the explosions, the FALN took responsibility in a neatly typed five-page communique which was discovered taped to a telephone booth on Manhattan's Upper West Side, Sgt. Edward LeSchack, a police department spokesman, said early today.

"The FALN assumes full responsibility for the bombings which have occurred in the financial section of Wall Street on Sunday, Feb. 28, 1982," the letter said. Police dusted it for fingerprints.

The communique also decried "Yankee imperialism" and "Yankee capitalism," police said. No demands were made and there were no warnings of more blasts.

The first explosion occurred at 11:25 p.m. Sunday at the Merrill Lynch Building at 1 Liberty Plaza, LeSchack said. The second and third blasts at the New York Stock Exchange at 20 Broad Street and the Chase Manhattan bank at 1 Chase Plaza occurred at 11:35 p.m., he said. The fourth hit the American Stock Exchange at 81 Trinity Place at 11:55 p.m.

Five minutes after the final blast, a man telephoned The Associated Press and claimed to be from the FALN.

"Listen to me closely. I'm only going to repeat this once," the caller said. "This is the FALN. We just left a communique at 91st Street and Riverside Drive."

LeSchack said the explosive devices were "a high order of explosives, possibly dynamite" and were carefully placed outside the doorway of each building. A source close to the investigation said the blasts were caused by devices equivalent to three or four sticks of dynamite.

Windows at the New York Stock Exchange and in buildings across the street were shattered by the explosions. Charles Storer, a spokesman for the New York Stock Exchange, said the exchange would be open for "normal trading" today.

The blast at the American Stock Exchange, located directly behind historic Trinity Church, blew out a wall in a ground floor room that is under construction, broke three windows and twisted metal bars on the windows.

FALN is the Spanish acronym for Armed Forces for National Liberation, a group that has claimed responsibility for numerous terrorist bombings nationwide in its campaign to gain independence for Puerto Rico, a U.S. commonwealth.

England takes tough stance with hijackers

STANSTED, England (AP) — "Don't come to Britain," the British government warned hijackers today after the takeover of a Tanzanian airliner ended peacefully with the surrender of the four hijackers and the release of their 82 remaining hostages.

"The message is that hijackers coming to this country will not be permitted to leave," said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as her government prepared hijacking charges against the four Tanzanians who seized the Air Tanzania jetliner during a domestic flight over their East African homeland Friday.

They could get life imprisonment but probably won't. The only reported casualty was the Tanzanian co-pilot, who was shot in the lower back Saturday. A Greek doctor who treated him in Athens said the wound was not serious.

The Lufkin News' appeal said, "Although the decision in Richmond explicitly reached only the question of access to trials... it is clear from the several opinions in that case and in Gannett that this court has announced a rule that the press and public have a qualified right to attend all judicial proceedings, including pretrial proceedings."

Texas Attorney General Mark White urged the justices to reject the newspaper's appeal.

White also noted that the judge's order released transcripts of pretrial hearings in the Lufkin bank case.

The 76 freed passengers and five other crew members were "safe and well," police said, although four passengers were treated for shock. All were reported to be Tanzanians.

The four foes of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere gave themselves up Sunday afternoon after freeing most of their prisoners in groups and then sending two small children out to the police with their weapons — a loaded 38-caliber revolver, a fake pistol, a wooden grenade and an empty package labeled "explosives."

Security men found small amounts of explosives places at two emergency exits and at the lavatory doors in the rear of the plane, the police reported.

Police said another foe of Nyerere, exiled former Foreign Minister Oscar Kambona, helped convince the men British justice would deal fairly with them and they should surrender.

Police nab food bandits

Food bandits struck at two separate Pampa grocery stores over the weekend, and three men are in custody in connection with the incidents.

First, around 1:45 a.m. Sunday, officer Dan Ruch saw several packages of food thrown in the middle of Cuyler Street, near Tuke. He saw a man run from the area, and the officer gave chase. Collared near the scene were two men, both 26 years old.

Later investigation found a smashed front window at Frank's Food, 638 S. Cuyler, and it was discovered the store had been burglarized.

Charges in connection with the burglary were expected to be filed against the men today.

The second grocery store burglary set off an alarm at the Ideal Store, No. 2, 312 E. Brown, around 11:50 p.m. Sunday. When responding to the alarm, officer Neal Greene saw a man try to flee from the business. A 31-year-old man was taken into custody at the scene. Police believe the man hid inside the store when it closed for the night. Charges against the suspect are expected to be filed today.

guilty verdicts on the second count.

The jurors and four alternates were sequestered throughout the trial, and after spending their first night at home Saturday, all were reluctant to talk about the case.

Defense lawyers and prosecutors agreed after the trial the key to the conviction was fiber evidence presented by the state linking Williams to the 12 deaths.

Fiber experts testified that 18 different types of fibers and hairs found on the bodies of the 12 victims were matched to 18 different sources in Williams' home and car, including the hair from his head.

"It was the fibers, that's all I saw," Binder said. "It sure wasn't the witnesses."

School board to interview head coach applicants

The Pampa Independent School District board of trustees were to conduct an emergency meet at 3:30 p.m. today to interview prospective head coaches for the Pampa High School football team.

But after 9½ hours of discussions, the juror said the entire panel agreed on a guilty verdict in Cater's death. Less than three hours later, jurors reached

Town to consider fund for nuclear disaster

LOWER ALLOWAYS CREEK, N.J. (AP) - Municipal officials in this southwestern New Jersey town will vote tonight on whether to set aside $20 million for use in the event of an emergency at the nearby Salem Nuclear Station.

About five miles from the center of town stand the winning generating units of the Salem I and II plants, owned by Public Service Electric & Gas, Philadelphia Electric & Gas, Atlantic Electric, and Delmarva Power.

Township officials say they just want to be prepared.

"It came about because we had the money," said Deputy Mayor Robert A. Traae. "But the main reason it came about was because of some of the things that happened at Three Mile Island."

He was referring to the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident in history at the Three Mile Island reactor in neighboring Pennsylvania in March 1979.

Traae said money provided by a utility-funded money pool established under the federal Price-Anderson Act would not be enough to settle local residents' claims and still maintain their standard of living.

The township committee scheduled a public hearing tonight and will vote on establishing of a $20 million emergency fund in their budget.

Tax money received from the Salem plants amounts to about $6.7 million a year, officials said. Of that, $2.3 million goes to the county, and Lower Alloways Creek would be left with the rest.

Light turnout expected at Salvadorian election

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - With both campaign violence and fighting between leftist guerrillas and government forces increasing, politicians predict a light vote for the March 28 election of a constituent assembly in El Salvador.

Retired Maj Roberto D'Abuisson, the ultra-right party leader wounded in a guerrilla ambush Saturday, said in an interview last week he expected 700,000 voters, or 35 percent of the estimated 2 million people of voting age.

David Trejos of President Jose Napoleon Duarte's centrist Christian Democrat Party said 500,000 would be a big turnout.

D'Abuisson, who leads the four-month-old National Republican

Alliance (ARENA), was attacked near San Salvador's Ilopango Airport. Doctors said he was shot through the upper right chest, but aides took him away from the hospital after he was treated, and one close associate said the wound was not serious.

Two other incidents of campaign violence were reported during the weekend.

Soviet space probe makes landing on Venus

MOSCOW (AP) - A Soviet space probe made a soft landing on the planet Venus today and was sending back photographs and information from soil samples, the official news agency Tass reported.

The Soviets and the United States have previously landed unmanned space probes on Venus, the nearest planet to Earth. Tass said a second module is due to land on Venus Friday.

Tass said a module descended from the unmanned Venus 13 spacecraft early this morning after a four-month flight.

"The results of the new cosmic experiment will significantly widen the information about the planet nearest to the Earth," Tass said. The news agency said the probe had already sent back photographs and scooped up a soil sample.

The descent vehicle transmitted information from the surface of the planet for 127 minutes today, according to Tass.

Venus 13 was launched Oct. 30, 1981. Tass said Venus 14, launched on Nov. 4, will reach the planet on Friday.

Polish leader visiting Russia

MOSCOW (AP) - President Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union welcomed Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski with comradely hugs and kisses today at the start of the Polish Communist ruler's first Kremlin visit since he decreed martial law in Poland Dec. 13.

Soviet television showed the Brezhnev, 75, waiving stiffly across the tarmac at Vnukovo Airport with other high-ranking officials, to greet Jaruzelski as he stepped off the plane from Warsaw.

The two men received red carnations and tulips, listened to their national anthems and inspected an honor guard.

The Soviet Union is Poland's main military ally and chief trading partner. The Soviet government welcomed Jaruzelski's Dec. 13 martial law decree that crushed 16 months of labor trouble and challenges to Communist rule by the now-suspended independent union Solidarity.

Jaruzelski and high-level Polish Communist Party and government officials were expected in Moscow for two days to report on the crackdown and seek more economic help for his near-bankrupt country.

There were no welcoming remarks.

However, the Soviet news agency Tass said "top-level talks" would begin later in the day.

"Jaruzelski will ask for aid to help keep the place under control," a Western diplomat in Moscow predicted. But he said his official and unofficial Soviet contacts already were complaining about the strain of supporting their East European neighbor.

Troubled by poor harvests and falling production, the Soviet Union reportedly has sold large amounts of gold and sought additional Western loans to ease its own foreign currency shortage. The drain of having to help support Poland, which owes an estimated $26.5 billion to Western governments and banks, has the Soviet public grumbling.

Radio Warsaw said Sunday Polish miners produced 15 million tons of hard coal last month, nearly a million more than February 1981, and 3 million tons of soft coal. "considerably above their targets." Coal is Poland's chief export and main source of foreign currency.

Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, chief law enforcement officer, announced the lifting of almost all travel restrictions within Poland, beginning today. He said only some border areas were still off limits.

Kiszczak said 6,647 people have been interned since martial law. 2,552 have been released and 4,095 remain in internment camps.

Radio Warsaw broadcast an abbreviated version of the statement issued by Poland's Roman Catholic bishops Saturday outlining their position toward martial law. A church spokesman indicated that the church not the government decided what to leave out.

The abbreviated version, read during the weekly broadcast of Mass, included the bishops' call for resumption of talks between the government and Solidarity. But it omitted the bishops' calls for the release of those interned and amnesty for violators of martial law.

Meanwhile, two sons of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa visited him this weekend at the apartment in a Warsaw suburb where he is under house arrest since martial law. Bogdan, 11, and Slawek, 9, said they found Walesa in "a very good" mood, and living in a "very nice apartment," with television, radio, newspapers and books.

Court to look at Lockhart election

WASHINGTON (AP) - Tackling a voting-rights issue akin to that being studied by Congress, the Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether Lockhart, Texas, must change the way its city government is elected.

The justices said they will study a three-judge court ruling that an election system adopted by the city in 1973 illegally dilutes the voting power of Mexican-Americans.

Lockhart, a Caldwell County city of some 7,500 residents that is located about 30 miles south of Austin, was governed until 1973 by a city council comprised of a mayor and two commissioners.

The system then was changed in a citywide referendum to provide for a city council comprised of a mayor and four commissioners.

The mayor and commissioners are elected in staggered at-large elections to numbered posts.

In 1977, four Mexican-Americans challenged the constitutionality of the system installed in 1973. They charged that it adversely affected the Mexican-American voting power.

As of the 1970 census, Lockhart's population was 45 percent Anglo, 41 percent Mexican-American and 14 percent black. According to the Justice Department, Mexican-Americans represented about 30 percent of the city's registered voters in 1977.

It was soon discovered that the 1973 system never had been pre-cleared as required by the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The city in 1979 was barred from conducting elections until such pre-clearance from a three-judge court in Washington or the U.S. attorney general was obtained.

No city election has been held in Lockhart since that 1979 injunction.

The city did, however, seek pre-clearance from the attorney general. One of his assistants registered some objections, and city officials attempted to have the election system approved by a three-judge court.

By a 2-1 vote, the court last July 30 ruled that the 1973 change in election systems carried a possibly adverse impact for Mexican-Americans. Under the Voting Rights Act, any change that adversely affects racial minorities or has that intent is illegal. The lower court did not bother to look for discriminatory intent.

The city then sought Supreme Court review, and government lawyers urged the justices to send the case back to the three-judge court.

"As the dissenting judge recognized here, there must be more than potential dilution to invalidate an electoral change (under the 1965 act)," the Justice Department said.

U.S., China pledge overcoming obstacles

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan and Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, in letters to each other marking the 10th anniversary of the historic Shanghai Communiqué on Feb. 27, 1972, establishing relations between the two nations.

Zhao and Reagan both noted the progress made since former President Nixon and the late Chou En-lai signed the Shanghai Communiqué on Feb. 27, 1972, establishing relations between the two nations.

Neither, however, noted specific difficulties that have developed in the last year over the question of continuing U.S. arms sales to Taiwan.

He reaffirmed the United States commitment to both the Shanghai Communiqué and the joint communique signed by former President Carter on Jan. 1, 1979, establishing full diplomatic relations with China.

Reagan also declared "my government's willingness to work with our counterparts in Peking to overcome differences and deepen U.S.-China ties."

Zhao, in his letter to Reagan, said he believes China and the United States will "overcome the obstacles currently existing in the relations between the two countries" as long as they adhere to the 1972 and 1979 communique.

Weinberger supports Hussein's Hawk desire

WASHINGTON (AP) - Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says he supports the desire of Jordan's King Hussein to purchase mobile Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

Weinberger and Hussein appeared Sunday on a television interview program during which the Jordanian monarch said he "in the near future" will formally ask the United States for new weapons, including the mobile Hawk missiles.

Israel has made clear its opposition to the Reagan administration selling the mobile anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan. Hussein's military already has immobile Hawks.

But Weinberger on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," noted that Hussein recently purchased mobile missiles from the Soviet Union and said, "It is important for Jordan, Israel and the United States that Soviet influence not be extended into the Mideast."

Hussein, interviewed on the same program said the request for the additional U.S. weapons was delayed after Israel protested remarks attributed to U.S. officials when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger visited Amman two weeks ago.

Politicians disagree over boundary lines

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Democrats basically are pleased and Republicans unhappy with a court-ordered remap of the state's congressional districts. But the whole process probably will begin anew during the next legislative session.

The long-awaited plan, which redrew six districts in Dallas, Fort Worth and South Texas, was handed down here early Saturday, leaving reporters and politicians alike scrambling to decipher it.

The federal court's remap covers only the 1982 primary and general elections, so the Legislature must enact a plan that is agreeable to the court before the next round of congressional elections.

The Legislature passed a reapportionment plan last August, but the U.S. Justice Department rejected the plan Jan. 29 after minority groups charged it diluted their voting strength.

The Justice Department wanted two South Texas districts redrawn, saying Hispanics had been packed into the district represented by Kika de la Garza, D-Mission. They wanted at least one heavily Hispanic county put into a new district adjacent to de la Garza's.

Based on 1980 census figures, Texas gained three congressional seats, raising its delegation from 24 to 27.

U.S. District Judges Sam Johnson of Austin, William Wayne Justice of Tyler and Robert Parker of Beaumont redrew the two South Texas districts to satisfy Justice Department objections, but also changed districts currently represented by Reps. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas; Martin Frost, D-Dallas; Jim Collins, R-Dallas and a new "mid-cities" district between Dallas and Fort Worth.

A new Harris County district was left unchanged. "We've got a court decision from three fair judges and I think we should make every effort to live with it," said Texas Attorney General Mark White at a campaign appearance in Dallas Saturday.

White is running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Mattox, who had opted to run for attorney general after the Legislature's plan loaded his district with Republicans, said Saturday he wouldn't change his mind and run for reelection, even though the judges redrew his district to the Democrats' advantage.

Frost's congressional career is in better shape under the new plan. His became the "minority" district under the Legislature's plan, putting him in the position of running against a minority candidate in a heavily minority district.

But the judges said minority voters had been packed into Frost's district, leaving them with "swing" power in only one district, instead of two—the other being Mattox's.

They removed some minority areas while adding about 50,000 voters in Arlington to Frost's constituency.

Lucy Patterson, a Dallas community activist, had filed to run for Frost's seat.

"What this does is totally destroy a district from which the probability of electing a minority exists," she said.

But Frost insisted said the plan "maintains very substantial minority input" in the district.

"This district is fine with me," Frost said. "I hope this is the end of it."

But de la Garza was unhappy about losing Cameron County to the newly created 27th district. "It's like they're taking a little bit of my life away from me by separating good people and good constituents from me," he said. "It's like taking away part of my family."

Although the plan leaves Collins' district heavily Republican and changed the new mid-cities district from a toss-up to a likely GOP win, Republicans were not happy with the remap.

"It appears they have done a partisan gerrymander in Dallas County," said Wayne Thorburn, executive director of the state Republican Party.

State Rep. Dee Travis, who had planned to run for Mattox' seat — but found himself living outside the district under the new plan — called it "political" and said it put "all of the announced Republican candidates in the same (Dallas) district."

Steve Bartlett, a former Dallas city councilman who also had filed for Mattox' seat, called the plan "illegal on its face."

"I can't see that the court-ordered, gerrymandered plan will hold up in the Supreme Court," he said Sunday.

Each of the three judges wrote separate opinions, with Justice wanting the entire plan redrawn, especially Harris County, where he said minority voters were packed into one district.

Johnson said the judges found themselves in the undesired position of entering a "political thicket," but criticized Gov. Clements for not calling a special legislative session to amend the plan after the Justice Department rejected it.

Legislature will redo juggling act in 1983

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The juggling act of the 1981 Legislature called "redistricting" is still in progress but everyone already knows the outcome.

It will all have to be done again by the 1983 Legislature.

All efforts of legislators to shuffle congressional and legislative district boundaries to fit the 1980 census have been knocked down by state and federal courts and the U.S. Department of Justice.

Now, the last word on legislative boundaries is up to a federal court in Dallas. A federal court in Austin decided Saturday on congressional districts.

"The courts will draw only temporary lines for the 1982 elections and it will be up to the next session of the Legislature to redraw the lines," said John Potter, head of the redistricting staff of the Legislative Council.

"The courts will hand down only temporary plans for 1982," agreed Lynn Moak, aide to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby who had a hand in much of the Senate's redistricting work. "What extent the Legislature is involved is still a matter of debate."

"For instance, if the 1983 Legislature decides to just adopt the boundaries drawn by the federal court for the Senate, does that mean senators will have to draw again for 2- and 4-year terms. They've already drawn once under the 1981 plan," Moak said.

The three-judge federal panel in Dallas suggested that the 1983 Legislature consider new methods of redistricting so there would be negotiations between state and federal officials before the Legislature goes through the redistricting process, again in 1991.

"This court hopes the Legislature will address this problem, as well as the redistricting plans, in its next session," the judges said. "If it does not, then the Senate and House redistricting plans may well remain in litigation for years — and this certainly is not in the best interests of the state or its citizens."

Moak said when the 1983 Legislature gets through with its version of redistricting, big or small, the governor still has to sign it, the Justice Department still has to approve it and it will be subject to court challenges.

Moak said he did not believe the Legislative Redistricting Board would get another chance to draw legislative districts if the Legislature fails to reach agreement or if the governor vetoes the bill.

"As I understand it, the federal courts will retain jurisdiction and still have the final say on the Legislature's work," Moak said.

Both the Senate and House expect to retain the professional staff built up for the 1981 redistricting battle, as well as the extensive computer system purchased by the state.

"Our staff does not draw the lines for these districts," Potter said. "We let the legislators draw the lines and then we furnish them statistics on population, minorities and all that from our computer."

"It worked wonderfully," said Moak. "Some of the people who have used it the most are those filing the law suits against us. Our system is the best one in the state."

Hobby and Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton decided months ago that the redistricting computer would be available to all sides in redistricting.

Redistricting problems are not new to the Texas Legislature, and neither are the legal controversies that drag out redistricting for years after a census.

The Legislature waited until 1917 to redistrict congressional boundaries following the 1910 census. The next redistricting did not take place until 1933, three years after the census. The 1933 congressional district map lasted until 1957.

From the 1950 census until 1957, Texas had a congressman-at-large, elected statewide, because the Legislature did not change districts.

The 1960 census was not translated into new congressional districts until 1965. However, that bill was voided by court challenges and the 1967 Legislature had to redistrict again.

The 1971 congressional redistricting bill, based on the 1970 census, lasted until this year.

Feds gearing up for fight against white collar crime

DALLAS (AP) — Upscale crooks, beware. Uncle Sam is out to get you. Federal officials say they are preparing an all-out attack on white collar crime in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, New Mexico and Arkansas.

Special prosecutor David Everett of the U.S. Justice Department said the crackdown on the most common economic crimes — defrauding the government and swindling corporations — will begin in three months.

Everett, 35, is co-ordinating the five-state law enforcement effort.

"I will serve as a liaison between the U.S. attorney's office and the various state, local and federal criminal investigative agencies — as well as the private business sector — to identify economic-criminal activity and then to direct our resources," Everett said.

Federal fraud prosecutors in 10 cities have been fighting white collar crime for two years, but the program is just starting in the Southwest, said Don Foster, director of the Justice Department Office of Economic Crime in Washington.

He said white collar crime prosecutions have greatly increased in the target cities. In Los Angeles, the number of convictions for white collar crime rose 41 percent from 1979 to 1981 and in Providence, R.I., the number of cases jumped threefold last year.

Foster said fraud against the government amounts to more than $25 billion annually, 10 percent of the funds allotted to federal benefit programs.

Investigators also will combat illegal tax shelters, phony oil investments and securities schemes, health care fraud and farm loan schemes.

Everett said that since white collar crimes often appear legitimate, his team will try to detect patterns.

"We'll try to develop a tracking system ... so that when we see these (illegal) transactions happening here, there and everywhere we say, 'Hey, there is a pattern of activity.' There have been cases declined because they weren't recognized as major cases," he said.

Pickers demand higher wages

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — Delegates to the Texas Farmworkers Union convention here cried "Strike!" Sunday, and also called for the state's minimum wage to be raised.

Cries of "Huelga!" or Spanish for strike, echoed through the hall after Cesar Chavez, president of the National United Farmworkers Union, called for a protest march on the U.S. courthouse in Brownsville.

Chavez urged the action after reviewing a survey of nearly 400 Lower Rio Grande Valley citrus and vegetable pickers attending the meeting. Wages in Texas averaged 90 cents below the federal minimum wage of $3.50 an hour, Chavez was told after the questionnaires were tabulated. The information prompted a resolution calling for the Texas minimum wage of $1.40 an hour to be raised to the national level, and stirred Chavez to call for a more dramatic demonstration.

"They are robbing, cheating you from what is yours according to law," he said, leading a march around the floor of the high school gymnasium where the meeting was held.

"We have to get in a big fight with growers and win," he added.

No date for the protest march was set, although Texas Farmworkers Union Director Rebecca Flores Harrington told the delegation it would be "soon."

The survey that triggered the displeasure included questions about farmworkers' jobs, workload and pay.

According to the results, the average pay for citrus pickers was $2.45 an hour, compared to the federal standard of $3.50 an hour.

Vegetable pickers, the survey showed, made an average of $2.95 an hour for their work.

But delegates representing more than 50 colonies from across Texas voiced anger that many farmworkers were being paid — at the very most — the Texas minimum wage of $1.40 an hour.

According to union statistics, only 35 percent of Texas farmworkers received the federal minimum wage, with the remaining being covered by the Texas minimum wage law.

About 80 percent of all farmworker families in Texas have incomes which fall below federal poverty guidelines, union leaders said.

In addition to the resolution calling for a higher state minimum wage, resolutions were adopted against alleged sexual harassment and unfair employment practices against women farmworkers.

Jurors scheduled to hear final arguments

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Deliberations in a month-long capital murder trial were expected today, if lawyers can agree on the instructions the judge is to give the jurors.

Prosecutors in the trial of prison inmate Eroy Edward Brown were not satisfied last week with the charge State District Judge Henry Dalehite had prepared for the seven-man, five-woman panel.

That delayed until today the final arguments that conclude one month of testimony from nearly 50 witnesses.

Brown, 31, of Waco is accused of drowning Warden Wallace Pack last April 4. He also may be tried in the shooting death of Ellis Unit farm manager Billy Max Moore.

Brown, currently serving a ten-year sentence for aggravated robbery, could be sentenced to life in prison or death by lethal injection if convicted of Pack's murder.

Defense attorneys say the two prison officials threatened to kill Brown and he was acting in self-defense.

Pack's family, Texas Department of Corrections officials and about 40 uniformed TDC guards were among the spectators who packed the courtroom Friday to hear final arguments. Another 30 people stood outside the courtroom, hoping to hear the case's conclusion.

Dalehite and attorneys for both sides conferred about the charge late Thursday and for several hours Friday before dismissing the jury.

Defense attorney Craig Washington said he was satisfied with the jury's charge.

But prosecutor Mike Hinton said he had several objections on "legal points." He refused to elaborate on his objections.

During the course of the trial, Hinton called many of the TDC's top officials, all of whom said Pack was a deeply religious, non-violent man who was never the subject of complaints from prison inmates.

Washington called a series of inmates and former inmates to the stand who characterized Pack as a violent man who tortured and drugged inmates and ordered the beating deaths of prisoners.

Not offered post

ATLANTA (AP) — Alan Kiepper, general manager of the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority, has said that Houston transit officials did not offer him that city's top transit job when he visited the Texas city last week.

"Let me say again that I haven't applied for the job, and they haven't made any offers. I just went out there to chat about it," Kiepper said on Sunday. "They are apparently considering a large number of people."

U.S. vessel's officers to testify about ship collision

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Officers from the American barge carrier Delta Norte planned to tell Coast Guard investigators today their version of what happened when the vessel collided with a Liberian tanker in the Gulf of Mexico.

Hearings on the Feb. 19 collision between the Delta Norte and the African Pioneer enter their second week. Coast Guard officials said the preliminary phase could be concluded Tuesday.

The Yugoslavian chief mate of the 808-foot African Pioneer, Josip Berket, testified Saturday, saying he did not change his ship's course or speed even though he was sure the two vessels would collide.

The two ships did collide in the fog-shrouded Gulf of Mexico, about 110 miles southeast of Galveston, seriously injuring two crewmen.

Berket said he first thought the 893-foot Delta Norte would pass in back of his ship. But when the two were about three miles apart, he said he realized from the radar screen that they would collide.

The chief officer said he could not turn to the right for fear he would strike another ship in the area, and that rules pertaining to marine safety prohibited him from turning left.

Since the Delta Norte was approaching from the left, Berket said, the African Pioneer had the right-of-way. So, he said he would maintain his course and speed so that the Delta Norte could turn out of his path.

Investigating officer Lt. Jack Hardin said that under international rules, Berket's ship would have the right-of-way when the vessels were in sight of each other, J.W. Gunn, master of the Delta Norte, and Berket testified that neither saw the other ship until seconds before the collision.

Indictments will be sought in judge's death

NEW YORK (AP) — The Justice Department is about to seek indictments against several suspects wanted for 33 months in the sniper slaying of a federal judge in Texas, according to The New York Times.

The newspaper quoted anonymous officials on Sunday as saying that within 30 days, prosecutors plan to ask a federal grand jury in San Antonio, Texas, to return indictments against Jamiel A. Chagra, a 36-year-old professional gambler and narcotics smuggler, and Charles Voyde Harrelson, 43, who previously was convicted of committing murder for money.

Federal agents say the two have been considered key suspects in the killing of Judge John H. Wood Jr. since last year.

Wood, the first federal judge slain in more than a century, was shot to death with a high-powered rifle May 29, 1979, as he left his San Antonio home.

Wood was scheduled to preside at the trial of Chagra, an El Paso drug smuggler who has been described as a Southwest drug "kingpin."

The descending cloud

Just before Ronald Reagan made his much-ballyhooed stand against higher taxes, Morton Kondracke of The New Republic offered the somewhat premature wisdom that "no matter who is elected, Gerald Ford is always president."

Well, to this point, Ronald Reagan has not been Gerald Ford, at least at times. His concerted push for some measure of spending and tax-rate cuts last year was laudable. His holding firm against excise tax boosts was dramatic (although the levy hikes he did propose, including an obnoxious withholding tax on interest and dividends, could take $35 billion from us next year). And the transfer of some social programs to the states is an absolutely splendid and far-reaching idea.

Nevertheless, all is not well at the White House, as seen through the eyes of those who held out hope that this administration could change dramatically the course of public policy. Kondracke's observation may yet prove to be apt.

The latest significant blow to the "Reaganites," as some of our columnists refer to those for whom Ronald Reagan's election was a triumph of ideas and simply a vehicle to power, is the departure of domestic policy adviser Martin Anderson.

Anderson, who first gained wide recognition in 1964 with publication of The Federal Bulldozer, his attack on the then largely sacrosanct urban renewal programs, was probably the most credentialed libertarian in the administration. His departure follows those of Lyn Nofziger and Richard Allen, other loyal hands to Reagan dating back to when the president was the beleaguered, principled challenger to, yes, Gerald Ford in 1976.

Now, in the cruelest of twists, it is the Ford crowd, whose pragmatic technocrats are symbolized by White House aide James Baker, who increasingly rule the roost in Reagan's Washington. Frustration with the Baker apparatus is what led to Anderson's exit, insiders tell us, and it is to bring on the departure of other committed soldiers of lesser rank.

Lest anyone dismiss this as bureaucratic infighting of little relevance to us who spend our working hours paying for all of these people, consider: Martin Anderson, alone among the Reagan inner circle, has fought the draft. Only he was there to demand that position papers for the president be reworked to do decency to the volunteer-army concept and to challenge the contentions of the military establishment which so wants the power of conscription. Without him, we may have had more than registration by now.

Anderson played a similar role in blocking ratification of the law-of-the-sea treaty, a United Nations grab for mineral rights that has the solid backing of the Washington diplomatic establishment.

Now there is no one frequenting the Oval Office, other than the president himself, who appreciates not only who Ronald Reagan is, but what he represents. And the chief executive, we keep hearing, is just too nice a guy to deal frontally with the threat to his presidency. Funny, they said the same thing about Gerald Ford.

DOE: now you see it

How do you abolish a government agency without really abolishing it? We're seeing an example of the art form in most of the discussion about the Department of Energy. Current proposals envision transferring most of its functions to other departments and maintaining funding at about the same levels they currently enjoy. Even if the proposal gets through Congress, the taxpayers are likely to get little benefit from the presto-chango maneuver.

A similar situation seems to be shaping up for the other DOE whose dismantling was promised during the 1980 campaign — the Department of Education. Education Secretary Terrel Bell has given strong lip service to the idea of dismantling the agency as a cabinet-level department, but his proposal may contain some remedies that are worse than the sickness he inherited.

Bell's proposal is apparently not fully formulated, but most of the trial balloons filling the Washington skies envision a National Education Foundation in place of the present department.

Bell's idea for a government-financed education foundation seems to be modeled on the National Science Foundation. The NSF, however, as a quasi-independent agency, has often displayed a rather aloof attitude toward Congress and the executive branch, based on the seldom-justified notion that its bureaucratic experts are more knowledgeable about the arcane matters under its jurisdiction than mere elected officials, and the philistines should keep their noses out. Accountability to elected politicians is by no means a cure-all for governmental arrogance; indeed Congress often outdoes the bureaucracy in pointless meddling. But it is seldom wise to create an institution that may be less accountable than the one it replaces.

The current Department of Education has 159 major programs and a budget of $12.6 billion. Bell's proposed Foundation would retain 105 of these programs at a cost of about $11 billion. Most of the major DOE programs would be retained, and many of the peripheral programs would be spun off to other agencies in the federal government.

This is abolition? This is even reform?

Critics of the increasing federal role in education generally believe that education is fundamentally a parental responsibility. Schools, presumably, exist to help parents carry out this responsibility and should be amendable to responsible parental influence. As the federal role has grown, the situation has become almost reversed. Federal experts increasingly dictate policy to local school districts and parents have less and less control over the schooling their children get.

Bell's proposal would preserve a dominant position for the federal government while making the federal institution less accountable. A federal "foundation" could be even more politically insulated than a cabinet department, making the federal experts even less accessible or subject to popular pressure. The foundation idea would best fit a model that is alien to most Americans — of appointed experts dictating policy from secure bastions, leaving such peasantlike figures as elected school boards to carry out these policies or face loss of federal funding.

Any proposal that suggests a reduction of federal meddling in education is likely to face opposition from the big teacher union, the National Education Association, and bureaucratic forces who have a strong interest in an expanded federal role. However, a proposal that looks like a ruse, changing the names of the players without fundamentally altering the structure — is likely to face opposition (or be viewed as a betrayal) by Reagan's natural constituency of social conservatives and parents concerned about loss of control over educational institutions.

Terrel Bell's foundation idea would seem to give us the worst of all possible worlds — maintaining a strong federal presence in education while reducing what little accountability now exists. Reagan should stick to his original promises and abolish the Department of Education by eliminating most of the programs it now administers.

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON

The current debate on the size and implications of the projected 1982 deficit ought to go down in history as the classic example of political and academic hypocrisy and duplicity.

On Feb. 4, Budget Director David Stockman testified before the U.S. Senate regarding the projected size of the 1982 deficit. There was controversy and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, didn't like what he was hearing. "Something is amiss here and I don't know what it is," Glenn said.

There is something amiss. Indeed, there are a number of things amiss.

The first is the persistence of the notion that a budget deficit projection means something — despite the fact that none of the deficit projections which have been made since the Employment Act of 1946 and the Budget Reform Act of 1974 required the administration and the Congress, respectively, to project the deficit (or surplus), has ever come close to hitting the mark.

The second thing amiss is the fact that Sen. Glenn had the gall to put on his most cherubic face and say that he didn't know what was going on. He is, after all, a senator and he has a staff which he could have directed to check with the office of Management and

The senator is who's amiss

Budget and the Congressional Budget Office to determine the assumptions and techniques they employ to manufacture their deficit projections.

If I seem to be too harsh on the senator from Ohio, he deserves it. So also do all the other politicians, both Republican and Democrat, who are using deficit projections which are little better than crude guesswork as a pretext for what they really seek — maximum personal political advantage.

Even if the current projection of a $100 billion 1982 deficit is absolutely accurate — which it most surely will not be — and if the estimates of 1982 revenues lost as a result of the cut in marginal tax rates are correct — which they most likely will not be because they ignore revenue feedbacks — the cut in tax rates could account for, at most, only one-third of the projected deficit. (Some studies suggest that the cut in marginal tax rates accounts for no more than one-fifth of the projected deficit.) With tax relief accounting for, say, between 20 - 33 percent of the deficit, what is the source of the remaining 67 - 80 percent of the deficit? That is the question Sen. Glenn and the other politicians who are jostling one another to get in front of the TV cameras ought to be trying to answer.

The projected deficit, whatever its final size, is principally the product of recession. Even though Tip O'Neill refers to this as the "Reagan Recession" it has nothing to do with the Reagan program. All the evidence now available indicates that the recession began in June. No part of the Reagan program was in effect at that time and, indeed, through the entire year the Reagan program was essentially not in operation. The recession is the direct result of the successful slowing by the Fed of the growth rate of bank reserves as it began what appears to be a successful attack on inflation. Even the Congressional Budget Office, which is still being run by individuals who are not friendly to the Reagan program, has estimated that for every 1 - percentage point decline in the unemployment rate, the deficit is reduced by $25 billion. When the recovery — which is fully expected — succeeds in reducing unemployment by only 3 - percentage points, the worst-case projection for the deficit is virtually eliminated.

The issue, as it really always has been, is what is the best way to put the economy on a path leading to sustained economic growth? Is it tax increases? If that's what Sen. Glenn and his colleagues have in mind, let them state their case and offer the body of economic theory which decrees such a policy.

If those politicians who are crying over deficits want to find economists who will defend immediate tax increase as a weapon against deficits, they'll be able to find them. Economists Lester Thurow, James Tobin and Walter Heller have been declaring their fear of the impending deficit. However, in previous years when the political party they support was in office and when deficits as large, relative to GNP, as the one now projected were the order of the day, they all argued that deficits stimulate the economy. If they have discovered something now which they did not know before, they've kept it secret.

The nation is about to go through a period of political and academic doubletalk: deficits will be deplored, but few of those mourning will consent to a spending cut in those programs which sustain their political base.

Watch it — but don't laugh: it's not funny.

Today in history

Today is Monday, March 1, the 60th day of 1982. There are 305 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 1, 1932, the infant son of famed aviator Charles Lindbergh was kidnapped from his home near Hopewell, N.J.

On this date: In 1562, 1,200 French Huguenots were slain at the Massacre of Vassy, provoking a religious war in France.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte landed in France, forcing Louis the 18th to flee.

In 1959, Archbishop Makarios returned from exile to Cyprus.

In 1970, Rhodesia's white minority government formally severed its last tie with the British crown and declared itself a racially segregated republic.

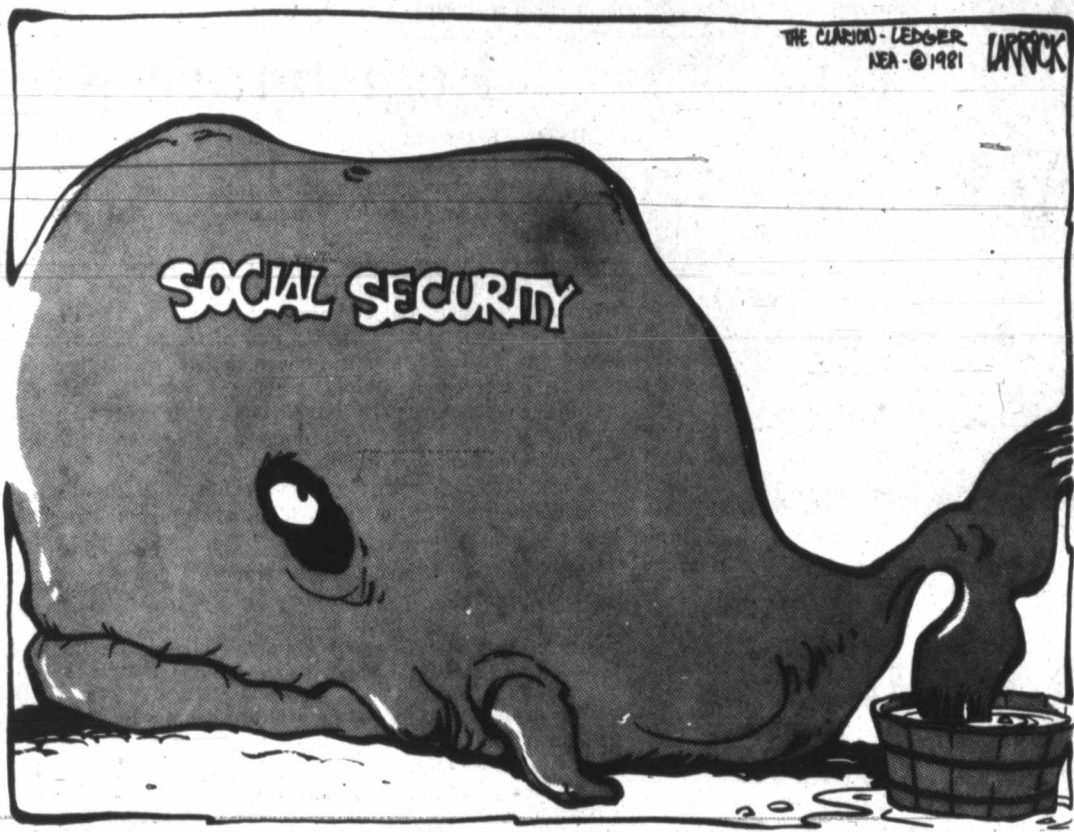

Ten years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled the Federal Trade Commission has broad powers to bar unfair or deceptive merchandising practices.

Five years ago: A medical source in the Soviet Union said at least 45 people had died in a Moscow hotel fire four days earlier.

Rules are rules

By D.R. SEGAL

I almost hired a Ph.D. once but I chickened out. It would have solved a couple of problems at the time. I figured it would give me status to have a "doctor" working for me, but she was such a drip I couldn't hack it. We had a longish interview with her asking most of the questions, many of which I didn't understand. I kept looking at The Wall Street Journal to see if she's been elected a director of Merrill Lynch or U.S. Steel yet but maybe her husband has poisoned her. I think he'd get a hung jury at least.

America's buried Treasure

BY PAUL HARVEY
There is buried treasure in the United States. You may be able to find it with nothing more than the maps they used to give away at filling stations.

Or get yourself a Mississippi River map from the Army Corps of Engineers for $15 and you'll note that the winding Mississippi River is constantly trying to straighten itself.

What happens is that any bend in the river erodes the down-river bank deeper and deeper.

Until the river shortcuts across the neck of any horseshoe bend leaving an area of a few square miles drained and dry.

Searching for sunken treasure in the active riverbed would be difficult because of the fast current and shifting silt.

Searching for buried treasure in the now-dry riverbeds is comparatively simple.

Porter Young of Helena, Ark., is a river historian, chairman of the Great River Road Commission.

He has told AP that "the Mississippi River is paved with wrecks."

Prominent shipwrecks include the Sultana steamboat which sank April 26, 1856, above Memphis, Tenn.; when its boiler exploded. Most of the 2,000 people aboard were killed. None of the $150,000 in gold and greenbacks which had been aboard was ever recovered.

The river tends to bury its dead. The current might carry a sinking boat for many miles before depositing it in a depressed area of the river bottom. There the wreck would soon be covered by sand and gravel.

She left me a copy of her doctoral dissertation and I got the idea she passed because nobody on the committee would dream of reading the thing. The two pages I read sounded very much like a literal translation from German and I always wondered if maybe she didn't crib it from the archives of some European university.

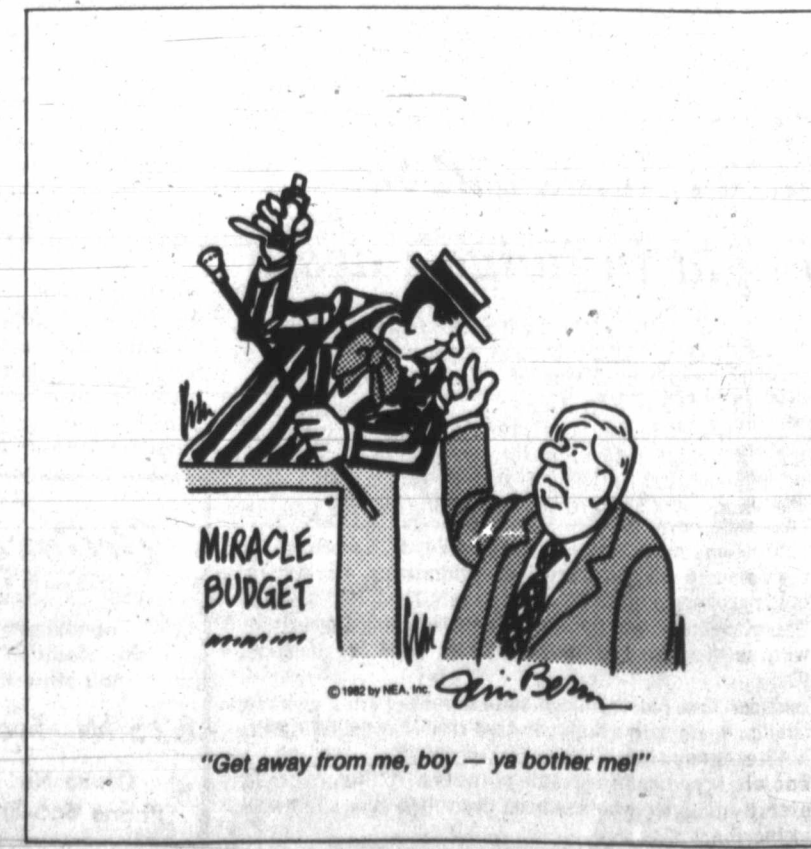

I do owe her something, however, although it took me years to catch on. She told me that Rules are important mostly because they are. A silly rule, she said, is much better than no rule at all because without rules people run around willy-nilly and get way over their heads. I thought she was nuts, but now I am not so sure. Our newspapers have Rules and I am not 100 percent sold that all of them are at that hot. Some papers have a rule — I think — that you use Ms. and others have a rule that the cute little number who cashiers over at Thrifty Drug is just plain "Smith" when we run a story about her busting an android on the head of her live-in boyfriend in a fit of pique.

You can make a case either way and you could "prove" either one if your life depended on it. It is generally agreed, in these cases, that a Rule is required, no matter how lunatic, because if you didn't have a Rule you would not be consistent. We used to pride ourselves in being Consistent Newspapers so that puts rules very high on the list of desirables. Some of our papers use the term Mr. in the case of clergymen, a Rule which I really don't want to hear much about, and some say Mrs. Mary Smith while others use Mrs. Joe Smith.

Those aren't all the Rules we have, of course. But they are a fair example. If it were not for Rules we would not have to hire so many copy editors to see we didn't break them and that wouldn't help the economy worth a flip. The Ph.D. girl very likely was smarter than I realized. Maybe her husband didn't poison her after all. He might have shot her.

Gray County Residents -- Do you remember?

BY MARGARET BIGGER

Over 50 years ago, there was an incident involving Gray County which caused widespread discussion and controversy.

When oil was discovered in the expansive valley of the North Fork of the Red River, which was little more than a stream, some state legislators wanted to declare the river "navigable". Thus, the state would own the riverbed bank to bank and the homesteaders would get no royalties.

Homesteaders from the valley and their neighbors filled a railroad car to Austin. Marching into the senate hall, they sat beside the legislators. Some laid their 45's on the lawmakers' desks. When the bill came up, the vote went in the Gray County residents' favor and they returned by train.

Do you remember this: Retiree John Carter Goldsborough hopes you do. Formerly with the United States Gypsum Company, Goldsborough is writing a book about his traveling salesman days in the 1920's and 30's.

His products were building materials, including Sheetrock, a quickly-applied wallboard popular in oil boom towns. His territory was the Panhandle of Texas and Western Oklahoma — nineteen counties in which most roads were dirt or sand and gravel. Hence, the name of his book is "Only 40 Miles of Pavement".

For a man of age 77, Goldsborough has excellent recall, yet some of his dates and facts are a bit "hazy".

Last July, Goldsborough returned to Territory 120 for the first time in 50 years, traveling 732 miles in five days. His rented Mazda covered it quickly.

Dr. Lamb

Get second opinion on uncommon spine condition

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor is an internal medicine specialist and he said I have rheumatoid arthritis. He just gave me pills for it and that was it. It is mainly settled in my back, hips and neck. My muscles do tie in a knot so I can't lift anything and I get sharp burning pains in my spine.

I had him prescribe some pain pills for me as my back hurts all the time. I can't lie on my stomach or flat on my back.

Is all this caused by rheumatoid arthritis? If so is there any specialist in my area? Our phone book doesn't list any. I am a female and just turned 25.

DEAR READER — It is important that you have an accurate diagnosis. Rheumatoid arthritis usually does not involve the spine, except the neck. You are too young to have osteoarthritis of the spine so the story suggests a more uncommon condition.

You may have ankylosing spondylitis which does involve other parts of the spine and hips. You are in the right age group for it. In the past it was believed this disease was almost exclusively in young males. It is now known that it is almost as common in young women. If your X-rays show involvement of the sacroiliac joints you probably do have ankylosing spondylitis even if you are a woman. Your doctor can do or have certain blood tests done that help in establishing this.

Talk to your doctor about it and perhaps he will be willing to refer you to a specialist in rheumatology to clarify your diagnosis and recommend future management.

Either rheumatoid arthritis or ankylosing spondylytis usually require more than therapy to control pain. The medical treatment is also usually different. More patients get benefits from Indocin if they have ankylosing spondylitis.

With either problem you should have an exercise and stretching program. If you have ankylosing spondylitis and don't have such an active program you may develop a poker stiff spine that won't bend. Maintaining chest expansion is also important.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, who is 74 and an angina pectoris patient, drinks a glass of prune juice every morning.

Can this be detrimental to his health? Our two physicians disagree. One holds it is a no no, the other thinks it's all right as long as it doesn't cause diarrhea. We would appreciate your opinion.

DEAR READER — Prune juice does contain a chemical (oxyphenisatin, an anthraquinone) which was once used as a chemical laxative. It is not used anymore because patients using it developed chronic liver disease. Whether the amount in a small amount of prune juice is enough to be harmful has not been well studied.

The other point is that anyone with heart disease such as angina pectoris should not need to strain for a bowel movement.

I would also be grateful if someone could tell me the name of the restaurant - with - rooms where I stayed the night of the dust storm. Goldsborough said hopefully.

Dear Abby

Brief encounter becomes endless nightmare

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged, married professional woman with a problem that is beginning to affect my sanity. Three years ago I foolishly started an affair with a man of a different race. He's attractive, intelligent and very talented, but he can't hold a job because he's an alcoholic.

When he's sober, he's a decent, gentle man who wouldn't harm a fly, but when he's drunk he is unpredictable! He gets mean and violent, and he's even threatened to kill me if I stop seeing him. I've paid his rent, bought him clothes, given him money and begged him to leave me alone, but I can't get rid of him.

I've been wanting to drop him for two years, but I'm terrified that he may expose me, or maybe kill me! Lately when he gets drunk he's started calling me at home. Every time my phone rings, I tremble. I am a total wreck. I can't go on giving him money to keep him quiet. I have a fine husband and nearly grown children who would die if they knew about this.

Please help me. I am desperate. I trust you to...
KEEP ME ANONYMOUS

DEAR KEEP: You must tell your husband that three years ago you foolishly became involved with another man (his race is irrelevant), and you are now being blackmailed. Then tell your former friend that if he ever comes near you, or phones you, drunk or sober, you will have the police pick him up and he will be charged with harassment, blackmail and threat of bodily harm.

As difficult as this may seem, it is the only way to free yourself from this terrible nightmare.

DEAR ABBY: I don't care for dirty jokes, especially in mixed company, but I never know how to act when I hear one. (I'm a young married woman.)

Should I keep my face straight and pretend I don't understand? (That would seem rather foolish.) Or should I politely laugh along with everyone else?

I'm afraid if I make an issue of it and bluntly say I don't care for dirty jokes, people will think I'm a poor sport or a prude.

SUZIE

DEAR SUZIE: Don't allow anything that offends you to be said in your presence without challenging it. (Silence implies approval.) Respectable people will respect you, and you needn't worry about the others.

DEAR ABBY: Here are the facts: A friend of mine plans to marry a Korean woman with the understanding that they will not live together — it will just be a marriage of convenience. The Korean woman wants to come to this country and set up a business, and for the opportunity to do this, she is willing to pay my friend (an American citizen) $2,500 to marry her.

The woman has agreed to divorce my friend after she accomplishes her objective. What is your opinion of such a marriage?

WONDERING IN ARIZONA

DEAR WONDERING: Never mind my opinion, your friend should consult a lawyer. I am advised that the law frowns on such marriages.

DEAR ABBY: I want to ask "Unenlightened Uncle," who didn't know whether his nephew had received his gift of a $100 check until he asked the boy's father six months later, a question:

Was the check ever cashed? Did you look at the endorsement?

I, too, sent a check to my nephew as a gift, and on the back it was endorsed: "Dear Uncle, thank you, with love" ... then the boy's signature.

A country store in the basement

By BARBARA MAYER

AP Newsfeatures
The basement of their suburban home is fitted out like an old-time country store.

The library is done in Egyptian revival. The room where she writes is furnished with mission oak and their daughter's bedroom in country antiques. Their own room has Victorian style furniture.

The house has accommodated all the "finds" that Ralph and Terry Kovel have bought over the years. In the process, Ralph likes to joke, it has sunk three inches.

If he enjoys a joke about his antique buying career, who could be surprised? The Kovels — Ralph and Terry — by a happy coincidence of good luck and history have become everyman's antiques authorities.

Their 32 books, regular newspaper and magazine columns, newsletters and television programs are designed to guide the millions of Americans who see them. The Kovels — who started with no special expertise 30 years ago — might almost be considered stand-ins for their public.

The growth of their knowledge, interest and expertise has its counterpart in the outpouring of interest in old things over the past three decades among millions of Americans.

Recently, Terry Kovel reflected a bit on the changes that have occurred since she and her husband wrote their first book in 1953 — a dictionary of pottery and porcelain marks.

"Our friends thought we were eccentric to buy used stuff when we started in the 1950s. It just wasn't done in those days. Today, the wealthiest of the wealthy buy used clothing. In those days, it would have been a scandal."

The Kovels have seen the attitude toward collecting old things change radically over the years. Terry credits the opening of a number of great collections to the public in the 1930s and 1940s with stimulating an appreciation for antiques. It wasn't until the 1950s, however, that average people began buying antiques for themselves.

At first "nobody but little old ladies went into antique shops and they were just checking on how much their family heirlooms were worth," she said.

Today, young people are among the most avid collectors. Often the dealers are young, too. Antique hunting has become a family activity, she said, and museums and societies that put on programs have learned to offer something for everyone in the family, including the children.

In their travels, the Kovels have found that there are both the expected differences and some surprising similarities in market demand across the country.

"There's always been more Oriental things on the West Coast and more heavy oak furniture in the Midwest and East. Some things were made locally and so are in good supply in some areas and almost unknown in others. Ohio, for example, has sewer tile figures. Maine has spruce gum boxes.

But some things are popular in many parts of the country. Geisha girl porcelain figurines from the early 1900s are starting to be collected all over the United States. Blue-willow pattern dishes are popular all over, according to Terry.

Coming onto the collecting horizon now is dinnerware that was sold new in the 1930s. Already popular in many parts of the country, but still less expensive in the Midwest, are more art deco style objects.

As married, working partners of long standing, the Kovels share many ideas. But the couple admit to some differences of opinion.

Men spend more on antiques, insists Ralph. That's why items that men collect — such as mechanical banks and toys, swords and guns — stand to sell for high prices.

Terry is not so sure that men spend more. She's keeping an open mind on the subject.

(The Kovels' most recent books are "Know Your Antiques," and "Know Your Collectibles," both published by Crown.)

Korean dishes place accent on vegetables

Today, Americans are becoming attracted to Korean food, as evidenced by the spread of restaurants serving the foods of that country.

"Ten years ago, there were probably only three Korean restaurants in the United States," I was told by Ross Kasian, a Korean who heads an international furniture company in the United States. "Today there are about three dozen."

"There are two reasons why I personally prefer the food of my homeland," said Kasian. "As a gourmet, I find that spices are used more judiciously than in other Oriental kitchens. And, as a health buff, I prefer Korean food because there is a balance between meat or fish and vegetables.

Also we don't go in much for cream or starches. Kasian drinks Korean mineral water because he claims it has healthful properties, as well as a pleasant taste.

"If you feel stuffy, or have indigestion, it will make you feel better," he declared.

Korea's best known vegetable dish is Kimchi, which is actually a sort of pickle mixture. Here is a recipe.

Wash and drain vegetables. Peel turnip and cucumber. Cut vegetables into small pieces.

Sprinkle with salt and let stand 4 hours. Press out accumulated liquid. Mix vegetables with onion, garlic, gingerroot and red pepper. Place vegetables in jar and cover tightly. Leave jar in refrigerator 3 or 4 days. Serve with meals. Makes about 2 pints.

Lakers hold off lowly Cavs

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer
The former student nearly played as well as his teacher, but it wasn't enough for the Cleveland Cavaliers.
James Edwards, who was a rookie backup center for Los Angeles in 1977 behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, had 25 points and 14 rebounds Sunday as the lowly Cavs gave the Lakers a tough battle before losing 102-101.
The Cavs, whose 12-43 record is the worst in the National Basketball Association, had the game won until Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 32 points, copped a 15-foot hook shot with two seconds left. The victory gave the Pacific Division leaders a 41-17 record.

Celtics 106, Bucks 102
Larry Bird, who missed the entire third quarter after getting hit in the head, returned for the fourth period and scored 11 points to carry Boston past Milwaukee.
Bird, who scored 16 points, was left the game with 41 seconds left in the second quarter after a collision with Harvey Catchings.
The Bucks had a 102-101 lead with 2:02 to go, but didn't score again as Boston got three free throws by Bird and a basket by Robert Parish to win.

Suns 103, Sonics 98
Dennis Johnson scored 12 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter to rally Phoenix past Seattle, dropping the SuperSonics 3 1/2 games behind Los Angeles in the Pacific Division.
The Suns trailed by 17 points in the first half and by 12 in the third quarter before coming back to take a 95-94 lead on a basket by Alvan Adams with 3:08 to go. Then Johnson scored the Suns' next five points for a 100-96 lead with 49 seconds left.
Seattle was led by Jack Sikma with 33 points and 12 rebounds.

Bulls 118, Spurs 104
Backup guard Ricky Sobers scored 18 of his game-high 28 points in the final period to give Chicago its third straight victory for acting Coach Rod Thorn.
Larry Kenon, another Bulls substitute, scored 22 points, while George Gervin led San Antonio with 25.
Warriors 105, Hawks 77
Bernard King scored 28 points and World Free added 23 as Golden State routed Atlanta.

Mobeeticie led by three, 24-21, at halftime, but Lefors knotted the score at 33-all going into the final quarter.
Danny Hilburn poured in 26 points to pace the winners while teammate Bobby Hamilton added eight.
Mike Jackson and Cody Allison had 14 points each for Lefors.
Each team had split one game piece in the best two-of-three post-season series.

Texas meets Baylor in opening round of post-season tournament

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
The Texas Longhorns return tonight to the location where their season started unraveling in the first round of the seventh annual Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament.

Heart O' Texas Coliseum in Waco is where the Longhorns lost 6-9 forward Mike Wacker to a knee injury, and then proceeded to lose 10 of its last 12 games.

Texas also lost to the Baylor Bears twice this year.
"I predicted this would happen," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons who has seen his team spiral from No. 5 in the country to eighth in the SWC. "Everything goes back to the scene of the crime... it's in the stars."
He added, "It's merciful that this is coming to an end. There will be better days."

Lemons wasn't present in Waco when Baylor beat Texas the first time because of his brother's illness in Oklahoma.

The survivor of the Baylor-Texas clash plays third-seeded Texas A&M Thursday night in Reunion Arena in the quarterfinals.

Rice, which beat Texas Tech twice, is at Lubbock tonight and the winner of that game plays the Southern Methodist-Texas Christian winner in the other Thursday night quarterfinal.

SMU, the cellar-dwellers, travel to Fort Worth. The Mustangs lost twice to TCU during the regular season.

Arkansas won the undisputed title Saturday with a hard-earned 67-61 victory over Texas Tech in Fayetteville. It was Coach Eddie Sutton's fifth championship in six years.

The Hogs drew the No. 1 seed in the post-season tournament in Reunion Arena and will not play until Friday night from a bracket which includes the survivor of Southern Methodist, Texas Christian, Rice or Texas Tech.

Houston, the pre-season favorite, took second place with a 96-93 victory over the Texas Aggies, who got a third place bye into the quarterfinals.

In other NBA games Sunday, Boston trimmed Milwaukee 127-119. Golden State crushed Atlanta 105-77. Washington edged New York 113-109 in overtime. Chicago beat San Antonio 118-104. New Jersey bombed San Diego 110-95. Phoenix defeated Seattle 103-98 and Indiana tripped Detroit 112-101.

"Second season" begins in MoValley

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — In case anyone failed to catch a favorite Missouri Valley Conference basketball team in action during the regular season — stay tuned.

The second season is about to begin. With Valley champion Bradley leading the way, eight of the 10 league teams are paired for the opening round of the conference post-season tournament starting Tuesday night.

The winner of the tourney finals Saturday gets an automatic invitation to play in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship tournament beginning next week.

Coach Dick Versace's Bradley Braves, after winning their second Valley basketball title in three years with a victory over Tulsa Saturday, have the inside track in the league tournament.

Kerry Cook, who attempted only nine free throws all season, hit two with eight seconds left in overtime to help Bradley outlast Tulsa, 82-79, in the league championship game at Peoria, Ill.

Saturday action involving all 10 Valley teams settled the pairings for the Valley post-season basketball tournament.

Bradley, Tulsa, New Mexico State and Illinois State finished with records allowing them to play at home in the first round.

Bradley as top seed has the home court advantage throughout the tournament while it continues winning. Tulsa is guaranteed of playing at home in the first two rounds if it wins its first game.

The Braves will host Indiana State in Peoria, Ill., and Drake travels to Illinois State in the upper bracket. In the lower bracket, Tulsa hosts Creighton and Southern Illinois is at New Mexico State.

Wichita State, which defeated Indiana State 92-72 Saturday, is not eligible for the tournament because of an NCAA probation.

The Shockers — who ended their season with a 23-6 record — tied Tulsa for second place in the league. Both have 12-4 conference marks, one game behind Bradley which finished at 13-3.

With eight teams qualifying for the tourney from the 10-team conference, Wichita State's ineligibility meant the last-place team would be eliminated.

West Texas State and Indiana State tied for last place with 3-13 records and split during the regular season, but West Texas State lost a coin flip for the No. 8 seed.

Behind Bradley and Tulsa, New Mexico State qualified for the third seed with a 10-6 league record, followed by Illinois State, which finished at 9-7 for the last of the four home-court berths.

Bean wins Doral Open golf title

MIAMI (AP) — The question of a possible penalty — which could have deprived him of the title in the Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament — had been resolved in his favor and Andy Bean obviously was growing testy under intense press questioning about the incident.

"If there was any doubt among the players, any doubt among the officials, I'd rather have the penalty," Bean said Sunday of the incident which involved the possibility he had improved his lie on the 14th hole.

There was no penalty. There was no doubt on the part of officials. And there were no questions from the other players.

The victory stands. This one, the eighth of his career, came by a one-stroke margin with a closing 3-under-par 69 and a 278 total, 10 shots under par on the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

It marked the sixth consecutive year that Bean has won at least once and it was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000. Perhaps more importantly, however, the victory put him in the Masters and the Tournament of Champions and re-established the big, hulking guy with the delicate putting touch as one of the game's top young players.

Jerry Pate missed a 12-footer for birdie on the final hole that would have tied him for the top. He had to settle for a par on the hole and a closing 70 that left him in a three-way tie for second at 279 with Scott Hoch and Mike Nicolette, who had the best total purse of $300,000. Curtis Strange, with a 67, Cal Peete with a 71 including a double bogey on the 18th, and Craig Stadler tied for fifth at 281. Stadler, the leader through the first three rounds, had a closing 73.

Jack Nicklaus, only two shots off the lead when the final round started, never really got untracked.

Anthony becomes first millionaire kegler

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Somewhere down the road, the biggest money-winner on the Professional Bowlers Association tour says he's going to retire and just play golf.

At least, that's what Earl Anthony vowed Saturday after pocketing the $38,000 first prize in the $200,000 PBA Toledo Trust-National Championship and becoming the first millionaire in the sport.

probably won't be a problem.

But the tension is. "I'll tell you, if the golfers had to do this every week, they'd be as white-haired and dead looking as we (bowlers) are," said Anthony, a left-hander from Dublin, Calif.

"I've never, ever experienced this much pressure. It's amazing, after all these years and all the times on television, that I still feel the pressure like I do."

Anthony's key source of pressure in the closing round was from Charlie Tapp who carried home $20,000 for his second-place finish. Anthony beat him 233-192.

tough. I knew if I gave him (Tapp) a chance, he'd take it and win. I couldn't give him that opening," Anthony said.

The PBA Hall of Fame member says that after this year, he has three more seasons under contract.

Anthony, 43, has been on the tour 13 years and has won 38 PBA titles and $1,012,586 during his career. Of his two key goals, Anthony reached the money mark Saturday. Bringing his total to 49 titles

Okamoto wins Copper Classic

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto admits she has trouble speaking English, but that proves no deterrent on a golf course, where tournaments are won and lost.

Okamoto, a 30-year-old native of Tokyo, sank a 15-foot birdie putt Sunday on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff with Sally Little to win the $125,000 LPGA Arizona Copper Classic.

It was Okamoto's first LPGA victory in the United States after capturing 20 tournaments in the Japan LPGA.

"My putts were just missing on the front nine," Okamoto said through an interpreter. "I knew if I had enough patience, they would start dropping."

Okamoto sank the winning putt on No. 11 — a par-3, 178-yard hole on the Randolph North Municipal Course, after Little ran her first putt two feet past the cup.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pitcher Fernando Valenzuela and the Los Angeles Dodgers are in the midst of salary negotiations, a club spokesman says, but although a contract agreement wasn't reached, "both sides reported some progress."

The statement also said that the time and site of today's meeting was still undetermined, and "both parties agreed there would be no further comment at this time."

Steve Brenner, the National League team's publicity director, said the Dodgers and Valenzuela and his representatives met for more than three hours Sunday.

Brenner issued a short statement saying that although a contract agreement wasn't reached, "both sides reported some progress."

BIRTHDAY WISHES. Elizabeth Taylor, center in white, with former husband Richard Burton at her left, receives applause Saturday night at the Legends nightclub in London. Burton denies marriage rumors

LONDON (AP) — "Elizabeth and I will never remarry," Richard Burton said today, squelching a roar of romantic rumors reverberating since his weekend reunion with Elizabeth Taylor, their first meeting in five years.

Burton and Taylor spent much of the weekend together, holding hands, dancing and talking, but only a few hours of it were in private. And three of her children were reported on hand then.

The reunion was a bonanza for most of the British press, which speculated on the possibility that they would marry for the third time.

"We haven't discussed it (marriage). It's not going to happen," Burton was quoted as saying today in an exclusive interview with the Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency.

"We love each other with a passion so furiously that we burn one another out," Burton was quoted as saying in the interview at his suite in London's fashionable Dorchester Hotel.

"I've got two certificates which prove that I was married to Elizabeth at one time or another — and we don't need another one," he was quoted as saying.

Earlier, William Hickey, the gossip columnist of the Daily Express, suggested there might be a connection with Miss Taylor's coming British stage debut in "The Little Foxes."

"When I asked Burton if his well-timed meeting with Liz... was love rekindled or merely the most outrageous plug London had seen in years, he could only reply wearily. 'God knows,'" wrote Hickey.

"I still love Elizabeth," the 56-year-old Burton told reporters Saturday night. And the 50-year-old actress said "we've always loved each other" as they drove off together to a party Sunday night.

When they left the party, and reporters asked whether they were thinking of remarrying, he snapped. "We are," but she shouted, "He's married, and I'm married." His aide Jo Lustig said angrily afterward that Burton meant both were already married.

Miss Taylor recently announced that she and her sixth husband, U.S. Sen. John Warner, were separated. Burton and his third wife, 33-year-old Susan Hunt, split up last August.

The Sun said Burton told its reporter, "Of course, I love Elizabeth — and I love Susan. I love them both, damn it... And what I'd have them do is for them to come into this room and fight it out between them."

To say that the administration's view of things includes a good deal of hope might be close to the truth. It assumes, for example, that leases of federal lands will be at maximum rates, recession or not.

The budget office, however, is no less guilty, assuming as it does that the country will enjoy bumper crops, thus adding to the cost of price supports, an assumption that no farmer would take for granted.

Equally subjective expectations and assumptions are found throughout the economic world, even among those econometric model builders who reduce economic activity to piles of numbers and then seek to make the numbers interact in what they think is a manner similar to the economy.

Which deficit is correct?

NEW YORK (AP) — Which estimate of the 1983 budget deficit is correct? The Reagan administration's $91.5 billion, or the Congressional Budget Office's figure of $121 billion? Who is right: Reagan or Rivlin?

To suggest that neither is right might be correct, but verification awaits the passage of time. Meanwhile, the disparity can be accounted for by an old, a persistent theme: Differences in expectations.

Those differences, many so subjective they cannot be measured, demonstrated or proven by any scientific technique, pervade today's economic analyses, and in fact the direction of the economy itself.

In the budget dispute, the president assumes that the economy will improve more sharply and provide more revenues than does Alice Rivlin, director of the budget office. On the spending side, he feels he can operate more efficiently than Mrs. Rivlin and staff assumes he can.

JAMES BRADY JOHNNY CARSON

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Presidential Press Secretary James Brady, 41, who suffered brain damage after being shot during an attempt on President Reagan's life, retains his near-photographic memory, his wife says.

In an interview with People magazine, Sarah Brady said her husband did, for a time, have trouble recalling recent events following the shooting, which occurred nearly a year ago.

"He was forgetful about who came to visit him or the date, but that has improved and is almost back to normal," Mrs. Brady said.

She said the drugs Brady takes to prevent seizures, Tegretol and phenobarbital, can make him groggy, and sometimes he finds it difficult to control his emotions and his voice.

Every day, a White House aide takes Brady to George Washington University Hospital for 4 1/2 hours of physical, occupational and speech therapy.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana, looking tanned after a 10-day vacation in the Bahamas, joined her husband Prince Charles at Westminster Abbey for a service marking the 100th anniversary of the Royal College of Music.

The 20-year-old princess expects the couple's first child in June.

The Sunday service was their first engagement since returning Saturday from their holiday on the island of Eleuthera.

The Prince of Wales, heir to the throne, heads a $7.3 million rebuilding fund for the Royal College of Music in London.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Tonight" show host Johnny Carson, stopped for an out-of-date car license plate after dining out with his wife, was booked for investigation of drunk driving, police say.

He was arrested about 1:30 a.m. Saturday on La Cienega Boulevard in an chic area known as "Restaurant Row." Lt. David Griffey said.

Carson — who has one of the nation's most famous faces — was released on his own recognizance, Griffey said.

The late-night talk show emcee had a blood-alcohol level above 0.10 percent, the state measure for drunk driving, said Sgt. Tom Van Arsdale.

Carson's publicist, James Mahoney, said Carson had just left a restaurant with his wife Joanna. Usually an abstainer, Carson had been drinking wine, Mahoney said. "Carson can't recall receiving as much as a parking violation in the past and he sincerely regrets the incident," Mahoney said.

Pope tempers criticism of Jesuits

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II tempered strong criticism of some Jesuit priests' liberal policies with a promise to let the Society of Jesus elect its own leader to replace his appointed chief of the powerful order.

"There is no longer any place for deviations that have certainly been harmful to the vitality of communities and of the entire church," John Paul told 110 Jesuit leaders Saturday.

They were summoned to Rome for an unprecedented week-long secret conclave to hear the pope's views from his appointed leader of the order, the Rev. Paolo Dezza. The conclave is expected to end Tuesday.

The 61-year-old pontiff, holding his own talks with the Jesuits Saturday, condemned the order's political activism and called on them to strictly follow his orders and Roman Catholic traditions.

But John Paul also praised the order as the "vanguard of renewal" within the church and urged "pastoral activity for the poor, the oppressed, the outcasts."

In an apparent conciliatory gesture, the pontiff said a general congregation of the order would be called before the end of the year to elect a new superior general.

John Paul angered some Jesuits last October by appointing Dezza to run the order, effectively supplanting their ailing superior general, the Rev. Pedro Arrupe.

Jesuits traditionally have named their own superior

News in Briefs

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — The controversial annual St. Lawrence Gulf seal hunt was supposed to start today, but even the seals weren't showing up in the bitterly cold, windy weather that was expected to keep hunters at home too.

Federal Fisheries spokesman Frank Ring said Sunday he doubted the hunt would begin because no seals were sighted during the bitter-cold weekend.

The hunt is centered on the ice pack around the Magdalen islands. It is relatively small compared to the main hunt, which begins in March on the ice pack off the northeastern tip of Newfoundland.

Opponents of the hunt had planned to try to disrupt it, but their vessel, the Rainbow Warrior, remained in the vicinity of customs officers in Halifax. Customs officials seized the vessel last week, claiming its operators, the Greenpeace organization, had not paid a $400 fine levied last year after the vessel failed to clear customs during a Newfoundland protest.

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — A leader of the Free Democratic Party, junior partner in Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's ruling coalition, demanded a nuclear-free zone in Europe and increased conventional defenses to escape an alternative of "capitulation or nuclear suicide."

U.S. interests, particularly concerning security matters, are not identical with our European interests, William Borm, a veteran member of the FDP leadership, told a weekend rally of this party's left-wing in this Rhine industrial center.

The nuclear doctrine of the North-Atlantic Treaty Organization has led security policy into a dead end street, he said, adding, another war in Europe would mean certain destruction for the Germans, West and East, but not so for the United States, he said.

Leftists in Schmidt's coalition have sharply criticized the chancellor for agreeing to allow the deployment of U.S.-built NATO missiles in West Germany to counter Soviet missiles aimed at Western Europe.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A $250,000 fire that destroyed a drug abuse treatment center and killed two men was allegedly set by a resident of the program, police say.

The pre-dawn blaze also forced the evacuation of 80 people from an adjacent hotel. Sgt. Nick Katzenstein said Ramon Jesus Verdugo, 27, was booked for investigation of arson and homicide.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Witnesses say an 80-year-old woman never braked when her car ran off a highway and smashed into a bench at a bus stop, killing three elderly women and injuring five other people.

Dole says 'must be assumed' Reagan will accept changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's refusal to "sound retreat" on his embattled economic program, one of his key congressional allies says it "must be assumed" Reagan knows he will have to accept changes.

Hinting at one possible change, Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday that "we can do a lot with the 3-year tax cut" Congress enacted last year for individuals.

For example, Dole suggested that one way to increase tax revenues would be to forgo the 10 percent rate cut scheduled for next year and instead begin "indexing," or tying personal tax rate changes to inflation. Under the current law, indexing is not scheduled to begin until 1985.

"We'd pick up $3 billion in '83 and about $15 billion in '84 just with that (indexing) change," Dole said.

Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Reagan has strongly resisted suggestions that major changes be made in the tax reductions Congress passed last year. But many legislators have argued that revenues must be raised in order to trim deficits.

The president told the Conservative Political Conference Friday night, "We are standing by our program, we will not turn back, or sound retreat, just as we near victory."

But Dole, asked whether Reagan would accept changes, said, "I think that must be assumed."

Dole — who along with other GOP members of the Finance Committee was meeting with Reagan at the White House this afternoon — added: "It would seem to me...that he (Reagan) knows that sooner or later there's going to be an arrangement or an accommodation."

Dole also predicted that Congress may reduce cost-of-living increases for some benefit programs, such as Social Security, to trim the huge deficits projected in Reagan's budget recommendations.

Opponents of Reagan's economic program got fresh ammunition over the weekend with release of a Congressional Budget Office study that concluded families with incomes below $20,000 suffer almost two-thirds of the social program cutbacks while getting only 15 percent of the tax savings under Reagan's economic plan.

Administration officials have contended their program of cutting both taxes and non-defense spending will spur investment and a sizable upturn in economic growth.

Dole acknowledged Sunday that Reagan's budget often is seen as unfair to the poor while giving breaks to the wealthy.

"I find the perception is fairly widespread and I think to some degree it's accurate because we are looking at a number of social programs" and benefit programs as targets for additional cuts in the president's budget.

In addition, Dole indicated that a bill raising the $1.079 trillion limit on federal debt is a likely vehicle for carrying most of the economic program to be passed this year by Congress.

Administration officials have predicted the debt ceiling will be reached in mid-May, meaning Congress will have to raise the figure to keep the government operating.

"It would seem to me that the debt ceiling must be passed, and if we really work at it, we can bring enough Republicans and Democrats together to put a package on the debt ceiling," Dole said.

Reagan's budget proposals are due to receive continued critical scrutiny in a series of hearings before the House and Senate budget committees this week.

Sharing the spotlight with budget deliberations this week in the Senate is the issue of whether to make Harrison A. Williams Jr., the first senator to be expelled since 1862.

After several delays and 10 months after his conviction in the FBI's Abscam investigation, the Senate opens debate Wednesday on a resolution of expulsion against the New Jersey Democrat.

UAW members approve contract

DETROIT (AP) — It wasn't easy for United Auto Workers members to give an estimated $1 billion in wage concessions to Ford Motor Co., but when it came to voting they heeded their union leaders and remembered their laid-off colleagues, union officials said.

The UAW announced Sunday night that Ford workers ratified a proposed new contract by a vote of 43,683 to 15,933, or 73 percent in favor.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said Sunday the vote "unquestionably" was influenced by the number of Ford workers on indefinite layoff, "plus the fact that Ford has had some plant closings within the past year."

Union concessions will enable Ford to resume Supplemental Unemployment Benefits payments, which provide eligible laid-off Ford workers with up to 95 percent of their take-home pay.

The payments to workers with less seniority were cut off in February because the Ford SUB fund was depleted. Under the new pact, Ford must immediately deposit $70 million into the fund.

Ford workers agreed to accept a wage freeze for the duration of the 31-month pact, defer cost-of-living allowance payments for nine-months and forfeit eight paid personal holidays and a December Sunday bonus day. New hires will start at lower wage and benefit scales.

In exchange, Ford agreed to a two-year moratorium on plant closings by curbing work contracted to overseas and non-union facilities, guaranteed income for higher seniority laid-off workers, profit sharing and preferential hiring of laid-off workers.

Ford, which reported 1981 losses of $1.06 billion, sought the concessions to become more competitive with foreign carmakers. Analysts estimate Ford will save about $1 billion over the life of the contract.

About 170,000 Ford autoworkers, including more than 54,000 on indefinite layoff, were eligible to vote. Many apparently did not vote because of early predictions of ratification.

Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell also lauded the Ford vote.

"Everybody is in this battle and it must now be clear beyond any doubt that the key to our continuing success will be the kind of cooperation and trust that has been so evident in these negotiations and in our day-to-day operations," he said.

The contract went into effect at 12:01 a.m. EST today, and Ford and union officials were scheduled to sign the pact at Ford headquarters in suburban Detroit later today. The pact replaces a contract that was to expire on Sept. 14.

Also today, the UAW's American Motors Corp. council was scheduled to meet in Chicago to decide whether to reopen contract talks Friday in Detroit.

AMC wants its 15,000 workers to forego 10 percent of their wage and benefit increases for 22 months to give the automaker $150 million for product improvement programs. AMC said the workers would be paid back with interest as early as 1984.

Transition from campus crusaders to today's consumer activists

By JOEL STASHENKO
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Born of restlessness as the Vietnam War faded, New York's Public Interest Research Group has successfully made the transition from campus crusader to consumer activist.

It's one of about two dozen similar organizations around the country that have survived the last decade.

Today, public interest and other similarly inspired lobbying groups concentrate mainly on environmental and consumer issues. California's chapter is fighting against a plan to channel state water from the northern part of the state to thirsty Southern California, while members in Massachusetts helped get a returnable bottle law.

"The real power we have is the ability to organize people on the grass-roots level," said the New York group's chief lobbyist at the state Capitol in Albany, 27-year-old Arthur Malkin. "We can offer state legislators the merits of our arguments and the fact that there are people in the districts and communities supporting our position."

State public interest research groups had little such clout in 1973, when Nader and a friend, Donald Ross, wrote "Action For A Change" — a how-to guide on forming and nurturing their branch, a "PIRG."

In those days, chapters were created to "express views of college students in regard to decisions which affect social change." While that was an energetic formula at the time, New York leaders soon discovered that a membership based on transient college students had its drawbacks — both in getting effective local projects started from campus chapters in Syracuse, Albany and Buffalo, and in influencing state legislators.

Although 17 New York college chapters still provide the bulk of its funding through a portion of student activity fees, 40 "neighborhood" spinoff organizations have been created to give the group older members and more year-to-year stability.

However, a 38-member executive board drawn from member college chapters still dictates statewide policies and tells executive director Ross and Malkin what non-partisan issues to tackle and which to avoid.

"There are inherent difficulties with a group whose membership changes so much," said state Consumer Protection Board executive director Karen Burstein, a frequent ally of the public interest group. "But I think they have become more effective in the past few years, and on some issues, very valuable."

University chapters, with a dozen or so active members each, concentrate on local projects such as tax assessment studies. The Binghamton chapter helps run a successful food cooperative for senior citizens.

The state group, which has an annual budget of about $1 million, has shifted from projects in Albany like 1974's six-volume, 4,000-page guide to New York's 210 state legislators to addressing a dozen or so major topics a year, and pushing hard for passage or defeat of two or three major issues each legislative session.

The group has also begun to concentrate on producing major reports, prepared by staff members over months or even years and designed to get maximum publicity. Recent reports have included such topics as toxic wastes in the Niagara River and student voting rights.

"We try to back up what we do in a written product," said Ross. "After all, we are a research group. It gives us a far better base to build our cases from. I think for the amount of paper we put out, we've had remarkably few problems."

But critics charge that errors in some reports undercut the group's effectiveness.

"Of course there are problems — there's no way with the great variety of people participating that there wouldn't be," Ms. Burstein said. "I've read some NYPIRG reports that struck me as simply meaningless and some I thought were just wrong."

The group has tried to improve its image by hiring qualified experts to plead its case on certain issues at the state Capitol.

Last year, it took lead roles in bills on the state's property tax assessment methods and on giving New York a returnable bottle law. Both attempts failed.

Malkin attributes many legislative defeats to the strong industry and utility lobbying. He said he and his supporters are often outnumbered 20-to-1 by business lobbyists in the halls of the Capitol before a big vote.

Still, the group's officials admit they found themselves allied with industry on several legislative issues last year, such as the property tax fight and a series of measures to strengthen the state's toxic waste regulations.

Occasional alliances with organizations like the Business Council — the state's largest business lobbying group — show the acceptance the public interest group has gained among some special interest forces.

Cats from across country vie for feline honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Morris and Garfield couldn't make it, but Heathcliff, Sweetie Pie, Harry and Wake Up Doc were there, vying for top cat at the 65th annual Empire Cat Club Show here.

The 520 cats and kittens representing 23 breeds from all across the country, Canada and Scotland primped, preened and purred for a plethora of prestigious prizes in Madison Square Garden on Sunday.

"It's definitely grown since I've been here," said Richard Gebhardt, who has been associated with the cat club since 1945. "Cats are no longer associated with elderly lonely ladies. Cats are sort of in. Both men and women have discovered that cats are highly compatible, convenient pets."

The Cat Club sponsors up to 200 shows a year throughout the country, Gebhardt said, but the New York event is considered tops, attracting the most exotic and expensive cats, including Japanese Bobtails, Cornish and Devon

Rex, as well as the more common Persians, Manx and Siamese.

Multi-colored ribbons adorned most of the cages, but Boza Joe Rascal, a brown 9-month-old Abyssinian, was in an unadorned cage.

"He's been disqualified," said his co-owner Pat Singletary, who works with breeder Pat Dutch in New York. "He has a tiny white spot on his throat and because of the club's rules, he's been disqualified. But he has a nice body and nice eyes."

Show manager Tom Torio said the club has a written set of rules by which the cats are judged.

In the end, there were four winners: Simbelair Carla, a white Persian, took the Grand Championship category; Finia, a white and brown tabby, won first prize as Household Pet; Delite Million Dollar Baby, a blue Persian, grabbed the Grand Premier category; and Khazsar's Smooth Talker, a blue-point Himalayan, was the Best Kitten.

Taffy, a calico, was curled up in her cage, apparently unconcerned that, as her owner, Ed Coppinger put it, she "wasn't doing real well."

"We've been showing her for five years," said Coppinger of Monroe, N.Y. "Showing cats is strictly a hobby. You don't make any money out of it. After all, it becomes a social thing and the competition is secondary."

Coppinger estimated it costs several thousand dollars a year to show cats.

Taffy was in the household pet category — garden variety strays and alley cats who compete for the "Morris Prize," named after the yellow tiger-stripe who earned fame in cat food commercials.

Sweetie Pie, a grey-black cat from Southington, Conn., has won more than 20 Morris Prizes nationwide and three consecutive "Best of the Best" Awards in New York. Her owner, Mary Danko, adopted Sweetie Pie from the Connecticut Humane Society.

Vermonters receive 'warning' of vote session

PUTNEY, Vt. (AP) — It is called a "Warning" but it is not as ominous as all that.

"Warning for annual meeting," it says. "All persons legal voters of the town of Putney and town of Putney School District are hereby notified and warned to meet in the town hall..."

It is just a notice to the townspeople of their annual exercise in direct democracy and a warning to taxpayers of where their money might be spent.

New Englanders have been conducting public business this way since the 1600s.

Thomas Jefferson called the town meeting "the wisest invention ever devised by the wit of man for the perfect exercise of self-government, and for its preservation."

In the Putney "Warning," Article X proposes the purchase of a 30-inch lawn mower for a sum not to exceed $1,400 and Article XI suggests laying out a sum not to exceed $2,500 on a new town shed.

And Article XV suggests putting an end to the nuclear arms race.

Vermonters in towns like

Putney and Addison, Pomfret, Kirby and Hardwick, Weybridge and Whiting, Orwell and Shaftsbury — 161 all told — will vote in meetings tonight and Tuesday on whether to call for a nuclear arms freeze.

Specifically they will vote on asking the Vermont Legislature to ask Congress to ask the president to propose to the Soviets a mutual halt on the manufacture, testing and deployment of nuclear weapons and the planes and
