

Military candidate leads in Guatemalan election

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The government's military candidate took the lead today over three civilians in the Guatemalan presidential election after an apparently sizable voter turnout despite a leftist boycott and fears of violence.

Scattered violence was reported during the voting Sunday, but the level appeared lower than the daily average in the past year of civil strife between leftist guerrillas and the military-dominated rightist government.

With less than 1 percent of the expected vote tallied, Guatel, the government agency in charge of election communications, said Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara had 3,928 votes, Alejandro Maldonado Aguirre of the Christian Democratic Party and the National Renovator Party coalition had 2,862, Mario Sandoval Alarcon of the National Liberation Movement had 2,575, and Gustavo Anzueto Vielman of the Authentic Nationalist Center had 1,238.

Because of the leftist boycott and the strife in which an estimated 500 people died in January, not more than half the 2.3 million eligible voters were expected to cast ballots. But Col. Ruben Alvarez, manager of Guatel, said there was "substantial attendance" at the polls, and people arriving from two northwestern provinces where leftist guerrilla activity has been heavy reported better than average turnout.

The president will be selected by Congress from the top two vote-getters unless one candidate emerges with majority. A vice president, a new 66-member Congress and a number of municipal officers also were being elected.

Police said gunmen opened fire at a polling place on the southern edge of Guatemala City, wounding three people, and government troops killed three guerrillas trying to burn ballots in the southwestern village of Vista Hermosa.

All four candidates, who range from right of center to extreme right, promised action to end the leftist insurgency that appears to be growing in this largest, most populous Central American country.

Guevara, former defense minister under Lucas Garcia, was the candidate of a coalition made up of the Institutional Democratic Party, which has been in power since 1970, the Revolutionary Party and the National Unity Front.

The leftists called the election a farce designed by the government to present a facade of popular support. The United States has indicated that resumption of U.S. military aid, suspended in 1977 because of alleged human rights violations, depended on a fair election and a reduction of violence.

The leftists said they were also boycotting the election because any candidates they put forward would be assassinated by the paramilitary death squads that support the government and operate with impunity.

Military-dominated parties have held power in Guatemala since leftist President Jacobo Arbenz was overthrown in 1954 in a U.S.-supported coup.

Groups consider appraisal budget

The McLean school board and Lefors City Commission both meet at 7 p.m. tonight to discuss the recently scuttled tax appraisal services budget.

The budget and contract for appraisal of all Gray County property was thrown out by the Pampa school board at an emergency meeting Wednesday. That action leaves the 10

Gray County taxing entities without a plan for the single - district appraisal work.

The Gray County Tax Appraisal District board had contracted for the appraisals with the combined, Pampa city - school tax office. But the budget for that county - wide appraisal work ran into stiff opposition from both officials and citizens. The budget was heading toward veto of the voting taxing entities when the Pampa school board called off the deal.

Three county taxing panels, Gray County Commission, Pampa school board and Grandview - Hopkins school board, have already turned thumbs down on the budget, despite the Pampa school board's halt on the plan.

But even though the Pampa school bosses said they forgot the whole thing, some officials believe the county taxing bodies should continue to veto the appraisal budget.

The $532,000 annual budget was approved by the appraisal board Feb. 15, and the contract, which set up the appraisal plan, also was officially approved by both parties, the appraisal board and Pampa school board. For that reason, Pampa State Representative Foster Whaley believes the taxing entities should continue to take positive action and register a veto on the issue.

Whaley said budget and contract veto is the only power taxing entities can exercise over actions of the tax appraisal board.

The Pampa City Commission will take action on the budget at a 9:30 a.m. meeting Tuesday. The McLean City Commission also will discuss the issue at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

No ruling made in shooting death of Pampa man in Lefors

LEFORS - No ruling had been made this morning in the Saturday night shooting death of Mark Lee Polk, 23, of 2332 Comanche Trail, Pampa, according to Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

Polk's body was discovered early Sunday morning in a mobile home at the corner of Fifth and Park in Lefors by the mobile home's occupants, the peace justice reported.

She said that when Tommy Wells and Jimmy Crutcher returned home from "down town," they thought Polk was sleeping. The pair told Prestidge that when they were unable to awaken him, they turned him over and discovered he had been shot.

There is no telephone in the pair's mobile home, the peace justice said, so they rushed to her home, knocking on her door at 1:49 a.m. Sunday to tell her of the shooting.

The peace justice said she summoned the Lefors ambulance and the Gray County sheriff's department. After arriving at the scene, she said she summoned Dr. Ralph Erdman, Childress pathologist, who performed an autopsy early Sunday.

Prestidge this morning said she was awaiting a report from Dr. Erdman on the autopsy before making a ruling.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan, who said he and his deputies were assisting in the investigation, said a .357 magnum revolver, with a six inch barrel, and loaded with magnum ammunition apparently was used in the shooting. Prestidge said the weapon was "in close contact" when the shot was fired.

Services for Mr. Polk will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the First Baptist Church with Rev. Claude Cone officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under direction of Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

He was born Sept. 22, 1958 at Clark Air Force Base, Philippines. He moved to Pampa in 1972 and graduated from Pampa High School in 1976. He was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Polk of Pampa; one sister, Mrs. Charla Kinney of Dumas; and grandmothers, Mrs. Maugha Singley of Columbia, Miss. and Mrs. Belle Svelts of Paducah.

Gas prices dropping

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Average gasoline prices nationwide have taken the biggest tumble since the 1960s, plunging more than 2 1/2 cents a gallon in the past two weeks, according to industry analyst Dan Lundberg.

Lundberg, who publishes the weekly "Lundberg Letter" that tracks oil industry trends, said Sunday a survey of 15,400 stations nationwide revealed what amounts to a "price war."

The price-cutting resulted from rebates to dealers offered by refiners as an incentive to increase volume, he said. Most of the rebates were replaced by across-the-board price reductions.

The survey found the average price at the pump is down 12 cents a gallon from a record high of $1.378 a gallon, Lundberg said.

He predicted prices will stabilize soon, although "they will continue a more gradual downward slope unless the world overproduction of crude eases off."

Prices dropped an average of 2.68 cents per gallon in the last two weeks, Lundberg said. Leaded regular dropped 3 cents.

The survey of four grades, with tax, showed the average price at self-service pumps was $1.172 for regular, $1.243 for unleaded regular, $1.349 for unleaded premium and $1.367 for leaded premium.

The drop in prices seems paradoxical, he said, because the dealer markup in the last nine weeks has increased by more than 1 1/2 cents a gallon, from 8.47 cents to 10 cents since the beginning of the year.

That means dealers apparently are passing on only part of their savings to the consumer, he said.

But Lundberg said the price war has not produced the hoped-for increase in overall sales.

An estimated three-fourths of all gas is sold at self-service pumps.

Although as recently as last year some people were expecting the price to hit $2 a gallon, the United States and other industrialized nations are using less oil due to conservation and conversion efforts begun following the 1973 and 1978 price increases triggered by OPEC.

Haggard asks Reagan's 'pardon' once more

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — It was an insiders' joke between President Reagan and country music singer Merle Haggard and most of the 500 people in the concert audience didn't get it.

In what many took to be nothing more than a smiling apology for singing about America's problems, Haggard joshed to Reagan: "I beg your pardon one more time."

But Reagan caught Haggard's double meaning and broke out laughing. As governor of California in 1972, Reagan granted an executive pardon to Haggard, who had spent nearly three years in San Quentin State Prison on burglary and escape convictions.

Reagan, his wife Nancy and an audience studded with Hollywood celebrities sat on bales of hay in a chilly barn Sunday to hear Haggard perform in a White House concert series that, until now, had featured opera and classical music from the East Room of the Executive Mansion.

This time the setting was a 1,200-acre horse and cattle ranch in the Santa Ynez Valley near the president's own ranch, where he had been vacationing since Thursday.

No black tie audience here; it was cowboy boots, cowboy hats, leather jackets and goosedown vests. Reagan sported a string tie with a silver longhorn slide.

The president, who was returning to Washington this evening to face mounting economic problems and Republican plans to rewrite his budget, didn't want to talk business as he wound up his vacation.

Asked prior to the concert whether he would scale back on defense spending when he returned to Washington, the president replied, "Let's not even think about things like that until we get there."

By concert's end, Reagan told the audience, "I leave here inspired I can't wait to get back on Capitol Hill."

The president travels to the Capitol Tuesday to confer with the 53 Senate Republicans, many of whom are searching for alternate budget plans to trim the record deficit forecast for 1983.

Reagan has dug in his heels against cutting defense spending or trimming the tax cuts already enacted, but seemingly will have to give ground somewhere in view of the widespread GOP unhappiness with his plan.

A top presidential aide, speaking on the condition that his name not be used, said Reagan is returning to the toughest time he has faced as president.

The Reagans and the rest of the audience clapped their hands and tapped their toes throughout the hour-long performance.

Effort made to censure, not expel, Williams

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senator who rejected a potential Abscam bribe says Harrison A. Williams also should have walked out when an FBI team tempted him to take improper actions.

"I can see a reasonable man getting involved in one or two meetings," said Sen. Larry Pressler, "but Williams kept going back for more."

Pressler, 39, a freshman Republican from South Dakota, declined to say how he will vote when the Senate decides this week — perhaps Tuesday — on whether to expel Williams, 62, a fourth-term Democrat from New Jersey.

The Senate was resuming deliberations on the Williams matter today.

Senate Minority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., is leading an effort to censure rather than expel Williams, who has been sentenced to three years in prison and fined $50,000 on bribery and conspiracy convictions.

In other Capitol Hill business this week, President Reagan is scheduled to meet Tuesday with all 53 Republican senators, many of whom have called on Reagan to narrow projected budget deficits by cutting into his defense buildup or trimming some tax cuts.

Tennessee is assembling a list of alternatives, but Senate Finance Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., conceded Sunday there is no consensus on what Republican senators will agree on as a substitute for Reagan's program.

"We're moving in the direction of getting a package together, but it's not there yet," Domenici said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "Hopefully, it won't be too far off."

He said he believes Reagan is willing to negotiate if Congress convinces him that any changes in last year's tax cuts will not be used as an excuse to temper the spending cuts the president wants in domestic programs.

On the Williams case, Cranston argues that the FBI unfairly targeted the New Jersey Democrat and other members of Congress despite no advance indication that they might accept bribes.

The Abscam operation, says Cranston, was "totally out of control" because the FBI continued to lure unsuspecting public officials into wrongdoing even after their initial refusal to participate.

But Pressler, one of the unsuspecting public officials Cranston was talking about, said he believes Williams' misconduct far outweighs the FBI's own faults in Abscam.

"Some of the stuff in those tapes is so indefensible," Pressler said of FBI videotapes in which Williams is seen and heard meeting with a phony Arab sheik.

In the meetings, the sheik offers money in exchange for pushing immigration legislation or help in obtaining government contracts for a titanium mine in which Williams was given a part interest. At least 85 senators have seen the videotapes.

In November 1979, Pressler met in a Washington townhouse with a group of men whom he believed to be businessmen interested in making a political contribution.

"They were good actors," Pressler recalled in an interview, "but I thought they were strange businessmen." He said he concluded later that "these guys were off the wall."

Pressler said he subsequently learned he was a second choice for the meeting because two House members who had been targeted failed to appear.

The meeting was hurriedly arranged and, Pressler said, marked the final effort to draw House members and senators into the Abscam net.

During the 24-minute meeting, the undercover FBI agents suggested that $50,000 was available for a presidential campaign Pressler was just starting to organize.

According to a transcript of the meeting, Pressler replied, "In any event, it would not be proper for me to do anything in return for a campaign contribution, so I would not make any promises."

Pressler walked out a few minutes later, not knowing that the conversation had been secretly videotaped.

It was not until February 1980 that Pressler learned the "businessmen" were the same FBI agents who had gathered videotaped evidence that resulted in the criminal convictions of Williams and six House members, plus several local political figures from Philadelphia and New Jersey.

Pressler says he is mystified why he was targeted and has met resistance from the FBI in attempting to find out.

"The FBI is playing games with our (senators') careers" in the Abscam investigations, Pressler said.

He plans to support a proposal by Cranston for a separate investigation of Abscam investigation excesses.

In committee action today, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was receiving a status report from Deputy Secretary of State Walter J. Stoessel on the situation in Afghanistan and various defense committees were continuing to examine the Pentagon budget.

Also today, the House Budget Committee scheduled testimony from AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, one of the sharpest critics of the Reagan budget.

Newspaper reports Robert Vesco in Antigua

ATLANTA (AP) - Fugitive financier Robert Vesco has turned up on the tiny West Indian island of Antigua, but he eluded FBI agents sent there to find him. The Atlanta Constitution reported today.

FBI agents from Haiti and the Dominican Republic were sent to the island after Antigua officials on Thursday notified the U.S. Embassy that Vesco was on the island "in a tourist capacity," the newspaper said in a copyright story.

The agents searched for Vesco on the island, but were unable to find him, The Constitution said.

FBI agents have no arrest powers in the Caribbean but could ask local authorities to hold Vesco for extradition.

Vesco fled the United States a decade ago after he was charged with milking $224 million from a mutual fund.

Vesco disappeared about six months ago after the Bahamian government kicked him out of Nassau, where he had lived since 1978.

Before 1978, Vesco lived in a fortress-like enclave in Costa Rica, where he had fled to avoid prosecution.

Friend reportedly recieved unearned pension

CHICAGO (AP) - Aetna Life Insurance Co. reportedly paid $33,000 in pension funds to a lifelong friend of Cardinal John Cody based on false church employment records, but a spokesman denied that the Chicago Archdiocese submitted the fake reports.

In a copyright story Sunday, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that Helen Dolan Wilson received the funds over 12 years.

Bernard Hanley, who denied the allegations on behalf of the archdiocese, refused to elaborate. Insurance records show Mrs. Wilson was employed by the Chicago archdiocese from 1944 to 1968, when in fact she worked for the St. Louis archdiocese during those years, the Sun-Times said.

While collecting under the Chicago plan, Mrs. Wilson was also receiving pension benefits from the Archdiocese of St. Louis under a separate plan, the newspaper said.

Provisions do not allow pension credits to be transferred under either plan.

The Sun-Times also said Mrs. Wilson's monthly pension is considerably higher than that paid almost all of the church's other retired employees.

"Cody, spiritual head of the archdiocese, which is the nation's largest with 24 million members, is scheduled to retire Dec. 24, his 75th birthday.

A federal grand jury investigating Cody has subpoenaed insurance plans, Douglas Alspaugh, vice president of corporate communications for Aetna in Hartford, Conn., told the Sun-Times.

Mrs. Wilson, who is Cody's stepcousin, is a key figure in a federal grand jury investigation of the cardinal's financial activities.

In September, the Sun-Times disclosed an investigation was under way to determine whether Cody funneled up to $1 million in tax-exempt church money to Mrs. Wilson.

Setbacks cast new doubt on industry's future

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nuclear power advocates, who thought better times were coming when Ronald Reagan was elected president, are reeling from a string of setbacks that cast new doubt on the future of the industry.

Three of them came last week, almost three years after the Three Mile Island accident that was the worst in the history of commercial nuclear power.

The worst news came Thursday when the Tennessee Valley Authority voted 2-1 to stop building three nuclear reactors. The decision leaves in limbo almost half of the utility's 17-reactor nuclear system, designed a decade ago to be the nation's largest.

On the same day, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered a new review of earthquake safety at the Diablo Canyon plant in California, a "much-criticized plant that has been the target of anti-nuclear forces.

The Reagan administration's request to speed up construction of the long-delayed Clinch River Breeder Reactor.

The TVA decision means that in the past three years 30 reactors have been canceled or delayed, including seven this year.

And, from the viewpoint of nuclear power advocates, things could get worse.

There are 72 nuclear power plants in operation and another 72 under construction, not counting the three TVA projects ordered shut down last week. But no new applications for plants have been received by the NRC in the past five years.

The main reason is economics. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, when most of the plants now in operation were built or planned, the U.S. economy was expanding by 4 percent to 7 percent a year. The demand for power - and thus electricity - grew accordingly.

And nuclear power looked good in the mid-1970s as an alternative to OPEC oil.

But in the past few years, while the economy and the resulting demand for power have slowed almost to a halt, the costs of building nuclear plants has shot up. The rise has been spurred by inflation and more stringent regulatory review in the wake of various problems such as the Three Mile Island accident. Conservation also has cut into demand.

"There have to be some changes" in the economy before the outlook for nuclear plants improves, NRC chairman Nunzio Palladino told a House subcommittee last week. "If the rate of electrical growth picks up again, some utilities will certainly consider" nuclear plants.

NRC member Peter Bradford told the same panel that the industry, anticipating an unending growth in demand for power, "scaled up too fast for its own good" early in the last decade.

Dozier's kidnappers trial delayed

VERONA, Italy (AP) - Sixteen alleged members of the Red Brigades went on trial today for the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, but the defense attorneys obtained a week's adjournment to give them more time to study the 1,000-page indictment.

One of the defendants, 23-year-old Cesare di Lenardo, claimed he and other defendants had been tortured. Standing in the defendants' metal cage in the medieval courthouse, he displayed bruises on one hand and said, "If I could pull down my pants, I would show you signs of electric shock."

Prosecutor Guido Papaglia said all 16 defendants were indicted on two counts of terrorist kidnapping, which could get them a maximum of 30 years' imprisonment. But eight of the 16 have not been caught and are being tried in absentia.

One of the eight in custody, Ruggiero Volinia, 25, also was absent today. Under Italian law, defendants are not required to attend their own trial, and Volinia, who allegedly drove the getaway car after the kidnapping, chose to stay in his prison cell.

The other seven defendants filed quietly into the courtroom under heavy guard. Dozens of paramilitary police with bulletproof vests, riot helmets and sub-machineguns guarded the 13th century courthouse.

One of the 15 defense attorneys, Guariente Guariente, said six of the defendants were prepared to turn state's evidence. He said the defense would ask that they get no more than 15 years in accordance with a law to encourage terrorists to cooperate.

One count charges the defendants with the abduction of Dozier, the highest ranking U.S. officer at the NATO base in Verona, from his apartment on Dec. 17. The other count is based on the kidnappers gagging and tying up Dozier's wife, Judith, to delay her calling the police.

A court official said the general and his wife would testify.

Police rescued Dozier on Jan. 28, after 42 days in captivity, in a raid on an apartment in Padua and captured three men and two women without firing a shot.

Iran getting Soviet, Western aid

NEW YORK (AP) - Iran is receiving military equipment and arms from Israel, North Korea, Syria, Libya, the Soviet Union and several countries in Western Europe, according to unidentified sources quoted in today's New York Times.

Between $100 million and $200 million in arms, spare parts and ammunition were delivered to Iran from Western Europe in the last 18 months, Western intelligence sources told the Times. Iran is using the arms to fight its war against Iraq, the sources said.

About half of the arms were reportedly being supplied or arranged by Israel and the rest by free-lance arms merchants, some of whom may have connections with Israeli intelligence.

The arms suppliers are struggling, along with the United States, for influence over Iran's future and over the balance of power in the Middle East.

Almost all of the arms and equipment supplied by Israel are reportedly American-made, but the Times quoted Reagan administration officials as saying the transfer to Iran has not been approved by the U.S. government.

The arms supplied to Iran by Libya, Syria and North Korea are largely of Soviet origin, the sources said.

The Times reported Sunday that the United States is secretly financing paramilitary forces of Iranian exiles operating in eastern Turkey.

The United States is trying to form a coalition of Iranian exiles and is beaming radio broadcasts into Iran to report on the shortcomings of the Tehran government, the Times said.

The sources said the program was designed to counter growing Soviet influence in Iran, and give the United States a significant role in case the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini falters.

Archbishop calls for compromise

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Poland's Roman Catholic primate called on the Polish people and their government to be "reasonable and realistic" and compromise their differences. "We can't say now or never, or anything or nothing," Archbishop Jozef Glemp said Sunday in a sermon at St. Michael's Church in Warsaw.

The archbishop repeated the call of the 60 bishops of the Polish church, made in a statement a week earlier, for a social accord by "the government, church and trade unions."

"To reach an accord, we have to compromise," he declared.

Although the tone of the sermon was conciliatory, Glemp said martial law has brought "enormous disruptions" and "many harms and violations of human dignity." However, he did not refer specifically to the government announcement Friday that a priest had been sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison for slandering the government in a sermon and another one had been arrested in connection with the fatal shooting of a Warsaw policeman.

Radio Warsaw reported that the Council of Ministers met Sunday and approved the agreements reached last week in Moscow between Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski and Soviet officials on Soviet help to Poland's near-bankrupt economy.

The official announcement said closer, long-term links would be established with the Soviet economy and those of other communist East European countries to reduce Poland's dependence on raw materials and commodities from capitalist countries.

It also indicated considerable integration of Polish and Soviet industry, with joint cooperation in the production of electronic and marine equipment and with the Soviet Union supplying raw materials for the processing in Poland of textiles, leather goods, man-made materials, machinery and electrical equipment.

"Some of the goods thus produced will remain in Poland as payment," the broadcast said.

"The Moscow talks have also opened new possibilities for launching in the U.S.S.R. investment projects in which our enterprises and specialists will participate," the statement said. "This will help to obtain raw materials for our country."

A U.S. congressional delegation arrived in Vienna Sunday after a four-day visit to Poland.

New department head named at hospital

Coronado Community Hospital has announced the appointment of Dwight Austin as Director of Cardio-Pulmonary and Respiratory Therapy.

A native of Amarillo, Austin served in similar capacities at Veterans Administration Hospital in Amarillo and Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo before joining the staff at Coronado Community Hospital.

Knox said the addition of Austin to the staff will increase the hospital's ability to provide better health care services to the community.

The former Palo Duro High graduate spent three years as a medic in the Army before returning to Amarillo College to study to become a certified and registered Respiratory Therapist and receive an associate degree in Applied Science in Respiratory Therapy.

He is currently working on an associate degree in pre-medical and will continue toward this degree while working at CCH.

Austin and his wife Dyahann have two sons, ages 14 months and 2 1/2 years. Mrs. Austin is a tax supervisor for a homestead.

A member of the American Association of Respiratory Therapists, Austin lists golf and reading as his favorite leisure activities.

"We are very pleased to have Austin on our staff," Knox said. "He has excellent medical training and experience and has displayed the professional attitude we want for our staff."

Knox said the Respiratory Therapy Department will now be able to provide a full range of services including stress testing, echocardiograms, computerized cardio-pulmonary function tests, electrocardiograms, and many other services.

Filing deadline is changed

The filing deadline for state house, congressional seats, and local precinct chairmen has been changed to 6 p.m. March 12, according to Gray County Democratic Chairman Linda Haynes. This change will affect filings for precinct chairmen in our area. Those wishing to run must make application to the county party chairman.

DWIGHT AUSTIN

Republicans approve primary questions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Republican Party, trying to maintain its momentum but faced with a May primary that features only one hot contest, will spice up its ballot with five opinion questions intended to arouse emotions and interest.

After some arguing, the State Republican Executive Committee voted Sunday to ask Texans about horse-race betting, gun control, the Blue Law, jail sentences for repeat DWI offenders and initiative and referendum on the May 1 ballot.

Party officials say the outcome of the referendums is not important. What is important is that the controversial questions could bring voters to the GOP May 1 primary, and a big turnout could carry over to November.

"One of our motivations is to encourage more people not to go to the Democratic primary," said Wayne Thorburn, the Texas GOP executive director. "One of the ways to do that is to have something controversial."

Sunday's committee meeting was highlighted by an appearance by Gov. Bill Clements, who said he favors the sale of at least half the federally owned lands. The proceeds should be used to pay off part of the national debt, he said.

"I'm highly in favor of the federal government liquidating over half of the land, to start with," said Clements, who said there is little federal land in Texas.

The governor said the land-sale idea is being "seriously considered" by the Reagan administration.

Most of the federal land is west of the Mississippi River. Texas, as a result of the treaty that brought the state into the union, has little federal land and the federal government "sure as hell is not going to sell our state lands," said Clements.

The land sales would bring the federal government much-needed money and would put the land back on the tax rolls, said the governor: "as opposed to just sitting out there."

"We are not talking about Yellowstone National Park or Yosemite ... of course we need those things," he said.

Clements also announced that President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and former President Gerald Ford will attend a June 15 campaign dinner in Houston, at which Clements plans to raise a record $3 million for his re-election bid.

The five opinion questions, proposed by a subcommittee, stirred up an internal squabble. Thorburn told the committee that controversial questions draw voters.

The GOP primary ballot features only one solid statewide battle, a fight between U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and state Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston for the senatorial nomination. There are three candidates for land commissioner and two for comptroller, but neither race has drawn much attention.

The horse-race betting question almost proved too controversial for the committee. On first vote, it was rejected 24-22 after committee member Marcus Anderson of Abilene said it would force churches to mount a "frivolous campaign" against legalized pari-mutuel betting.

After the other four questions were approved for the ballot, the horse-race question was reconsidered and won 30-19 approval.

The SREC also approved two resolutions slamming the redistricting efforts of the federal courts and the all-Democratic Legislative Redistricting Board.

Another resolution called for the removal of U.S. Sen Robert Packwood, R-Ore., as chairman of the GOP Senatorial Campaign Committee because, according to the resolution, he recently "publicly insulted" Reagan and worked for the re-election of Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who has a GOP opponent in the primary.

Packwood recently said he was concerned that Reagan, when asked questions about the economy, responded with an anecdote "on a totally different track."

The SREC also voted support for a series of state and regional rallies to show support for Reagan's economic policies.

Less muscle tension can ease headache pain

DALLAS (AP) — A 57-year-old Dallas man was wracked by severe headaches for 17 years, the pain more prolonged and intense each year. Last year he suffered one or two headaches a day, some lasting for hours.

But he says that by using techniques taught at the pain clinic at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, he has been able to ward off mild headaches and has not suffered a severe headache since December. The clinic battles headaches with a host of innovative techniques, ranging from self hypnosis to biofeedback. The latest techniques reduce muscle tension when the skin temperature is raised.

Almost everyone has headaches sometime, but most cases are mild, says Dr. James Lipton, a psychologist and member of the pain clinic team.

"Some patients are in sheer misery," Lipton said. "It hurts like hell. I've seen grown men in tears over these headaches. They develop a fear of pain of future headaches. They become fearful of going out. Their lives become rather circumspect."

The exact cause of the headache is unknown, but its symptoms are familiar. In tension headaches, the muscles in the head and neck become tense. In migraines, blood vessels to the head first constrict, then dilate and swell. There is pain — and flickering vision, nausea, and light-headedness. The migraine can last a few hours, or several days.

"Headaches are tough to work with," Lipton said. "There's little information on how to treat them. Working with headache patients takes a tremendous amount of time."

Chronic headaches are not treated with medication at the clinic, but rather with techniques that can be learned and implemented by the patient.

Patients are taught to use their imaginations to reduce muscle tension and raise their skin temperatures. Relaxation therapy also eases muscle tension.

"It's a form of self-hypnosis," Lipton said. "There is a production of an altered state of sensitivity to both internal and external stimulation."

Patients learn to tighten their muscles, starting at the feet and eventually working up to the head. Then the muscles are relaxed until the body goes numb.

"Their heart beats, but they can no longer feel it," Lipton said. "They don't feel the ring on their finger. They don't feel the slacks on their legs."

Investigators searching for cause of fire that killed 10

HQUSTON (AP) — Arson investigators were to meet today in hopes of determining the cause of a smoky fire that killed 10 people at the Westchase Hilton Hotel.

More than a dozen investigators spent the weekend combing through the charred remains of Room 404 where the four-alarm blaze broke out early Saturday morning, said Chief Fire Marshal E. A. Corral.

Officials are also trying to determine if hotel personnel were properly trained in the use of the fire alarm system.

Investigators said a night clerk at the hotel turned off the fire alarm that first sounded at about 2 a.m. Corral said that if the hotel employees' training in the use of the alarm system was insufficient, misdemeanor charges could be filed against the hotel's management.

"If they did not have a fire plan and they were not properly instructed, then we could fine them," Corral said. Maximum penalty for such a fine is $200.

The clerk, James Harvey, apparently didn't realize that when he shut off a desk buzzer activated by guests on the upper floors, he was also turning off the entire alarm system, said Deputy Chief L.H. Mikeska.

Mikeska said the alarm system would have worked perfectly "if it hadn't been for human error."

Corral said that when the buzzer sounded on Harvey's console, he repeatedly reset it, thus preventing it from sounding the general alert that might have awakened guests on the fourth floor.

Thick black smoke filled the fourth floor and was sucked into rooms by the hotel's ventilation system, investigators said. A medical examiner said all the victims died of smoke and soot inhalation.

The victims were a Louisiana family of four and a Dallas woman who were in Houston for a wedding, and five members of a Houston family who had lived at the hotel while waiting to be transferred to Venezuela.

The Houston family was identified as Hernandez Espanol, his wife Isabel, their two daughters Sonia and Luz Adriana, and Mrs. Espanol's mother, Isabel Hernandez.

The Louisiana family was identified as Ronald Pabst of Metairie, La., his wife Cecile and their two sons, 5-year-old Ronald "Chuck" and 3-year-old Jonathan.

The Dallas woman was Susan K. Ilvento. Her husband, Dr. Joseph Ilvento, was among the 11 people injured in the fire; he suffered smoke inhalation and was listed in serious condition at Hermann Hospital.

Ron Holt, president of Texas Electronics Systems, the installing contractor for the alarm system, said Harvey told him he thought the alarm would sound after three minutes even if the buzzer were turned off.

Houston Fire Chief V.E. Rogers said the hotel's general fire alarm system automatically switches off the ventilation system when it is activated. But because the clerk repeatedly turned off the buzzer, the ventilation system came back on and sent the smoke through the rooms.

Rogers said his investigators had received conflicting information from some of the hotel's 200 guests about whether the alarm and smoke detection system operated properly.

Hotel Manager Eric Huemer, 36, said the hotel's fire alarm system had passed an inspection only three days before the fire. Each room is equipped with a smoke alarm, checked daily by the hotel staff, he added.

Hotel officials said they weren't sure when the 300-room facility would be reopened. Security guards were posted at locked entrances to the hotel, allowing only clean-up crews and fire investigators inside Sunday.

The man who was registered to Room 404, Scott Peterson, a cook at the Hilton Inn of Santa Fe, N.M., apparently wasn't there when the fire started.

Peterson and Scott Owens, both 19, told investigators they had a party in the room with two women earlier in the night, Corral said.

Peterson left about 10 p.m. and Owens fell asleep in bed, Rogers said.

About 2 a.m., Peterson returned and the room was full of smoke. He awakened Owens by yelling and beating on the room door, and Owens crawled to the door to open it, Rogers said.

The pair then went down the stairs and outside, Rogers said.

Budget hearing for state agencies are about to begin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — One of the most important but least known processes of state government is about to get underway — budget hearings for state agencies.

From these hearings eventually will come the 1984-85 state spending bill which is sure to top the current $26.5 billion budget.

State agency heads are being sent notices now of their dates they will appear before representatives of the Legislative Budget Board and the governor's budget office to make their first appeal for 1984-85 funds.

The actual hearings start in June and will last throughout the summer. Executive administrative agencies will be heard first and the hearings will end with the complicated budget requests of state colleges and universities.

After the hearings, the Budget Board staff will prepare a proposed 1984-85 budget to be presented to the Senate Finance and House Appropriations Committees in December.

The governor will present his recommended 1984-85 budget when he makes his "state-of-the-state" message shortly after the 1983 Legislature begins.

"We will be asking more questions than usual," said Gene Shelton, budget coordinator for the governor who will sit in on many of the hearings with the state agency heads. "We are going to put more emphasis than ever on good budget making."

The hearings roughly follow the "zero budgeting" process, where each agency must start at the beginning each two years and prove its need for every dollar it asks from the Legislature.

"Actually what we do is ask the agencies to make budget requests for various levels of effort for various amounts of money," said Tom Keel, executive director of the Legislative Budget Board. "We ask them for about four levels — what they can do at each level for what amount of money. Then the Legislature decides at which level it wants to finance the operations."

Although the pre-session hearings will be much the same as in the past, the arguments that will follow in the House and Senate after Jan. 11 may be hotter than usual.

The economic situation of the state and nation in 1983 will be the No. 1 factor and the outcome of the elections will be another.

Whether Texas still has a Republican governor, or whether a Republican is elected lieutenant governor to lead the Senate could make big changes in budget making.

Six Brown jurors hold press conference

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A majority of jurors in the capital murder trial of Eroy Edward Brown did not try to force one hold-out juror to change her mind and acquit the Texas Department of Corrections inmate, according to a statement released Sunday by six jurors.

Dorothy Kemp, 43, of Texas City said in a newspaper interview that she was "cussed at" by fellow jurors for refusing to join the majority and acquit Brown, who was accused of drowning Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack on April 4, 1981. "You talk about hollering and yelling," Mrs. Kemp said of the other jurors.

State district Court Judge Henry Dalehite declared a mistrial Thursday after the jury repeatedly told him they were "hopelessly deadlocked" and unable to reach a verdict.

"We did not want anyone to change their vote if they could not change how they felt in their heart: that's not the way our system was designed," said juror Al Chandler.

The jurors at the news conference refused to identify themselves and two others left before the news conference began. The remaining jurors could not be located, Chandler said.

The jury members issued a two-page written statement saying they were "pushed to the limit. When the blockbuster charge was presented to us, that's when the confusion began."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Peso should find true level

The tumbling of the peso was brought about by the deepening world recession and serious problems in Mexico — vast unemployment, a shrinking demand for exports, high interest rates and a high inflation rate of 30 percent annually.

The peso was last devalued in 1976, for the first time in 25 years. That devaluation, dropping the peso from 8 cents to about 4.4 cents in dollar value, came as the presidential term of Luis Echeverria drew to a close. The peso held steadily to its worth until the fall of 1979 and then began a slow decline.

Its decline was a false indication of true value. Banco de Mexico had propped up the currency by buying the peso for dollars at a fixed rate. Banco de Mexico withdrew support. The peso fell by nearly 40 percent of former dollar value.

Now Mexican money is floating cleanly against the other currencies of the world, seeking its true level of worth. Banking institutions in Mexico are free to set their own exchange rates. There will be no false supports unless the Mexican government decides Banco de Mexico must step back in and re-establish order.

What is the latest devaluation likely to mean? First of all it will mean belt-tightening for Mexicans. This will result in some loss of income or U.S. businesses along the border of California, Arizona and Texas that have heavy trade with Mexicans.

Reduction in border trade is of serious concern. Devaluation also means a drop in the number of Mexican citizens traveling in the United States, but it is likely to prove a boon to Mexico's lagging tourist industry. Air fares for flights originating in the U.S. won't change immediately but flights within Mexico will prove to be bargain.

Most financial analysts believe the free-floating peso will stimulate the Mexican economy, boost that country's export sales and improve income of visitor dollars. They are predicting the peso eventually will settle at 35 to 38 to the dollar.

The Mexican government is expected to announce some inflation-fighting measures such as price controls and possibly some relief for businesses and importers with dollar debts.

The Mexican devaluation was inevitable. The peso should be free to find its true position among the world currencies. Any false props will only cause future monetary shocks.

A report on the report

By DON GRAFF
In the escalating debate over El Salvador, one point at least should be perfectly clear by now: It is a highly complex situation about which the American public needs to be accurately and thoroughly informed.

To that end, Freedom House, a New York-based public affairs organization sponsored by prominent members of the political establishment, has issued a detail-crammed report that is both a capsule history of the conflict and a critique of coverage by the American press.

"El Salvador: Peaceful Revolution or Armed Struggle?" finds the roots of the conflict in El Salvador's long history of undemocratic rule and a widening split in the officer corps with one faction pressing for reform. As coup followed coup, the leftist opposition proliferated, primarily through a sequence of splits within Communist ranks. In the 1970's, opposition surfaced as terrorism.

The decade also saw the stealing of the 1972 presidential election from Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte, the creation of ORDEN (Organizacion Republicana Democratica Nacionalista) as the military's counter-terrorist specialists and, finally, the 1979 coup of reform-minded officers led by Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez and Adolfo Arnoldo Majano Ramos that set the stage for the current civil war.

Subsequent events of significance include Durate's return from exile to head the governing junta, the excesses of ORDEN and its proscription and the institution of a land-reform program that Freedom House sees as the most encouraging but under-reported aspect of the Salvadoran situation.

Finally, the report takes the American media to task for the inadequacy of its coverage of El Salvador. Much of that coverage has been simplistic, politically biased and poorly sourced. Some of it has been irresponsible and deliberate misinformation.

The indictment is especially serious coming from an organization more accustomed to defending the liberties of the press, among other free institutions. It would appear to be impressively documented. Upon critical examination, however, it also appears to have been selective in its documentation.

There is no mention, for example, of the post-coup history of reformist Colonel Majano. As it happens, he was forced out of the junta a year later and is now in U.S. exile, accusing his former military colleagues of "crimes and excesses."

The counter-coup pressure of right-wing officers is, in fact, one of the most significant details of the complex Salvadoran situation. There have been four junta reshufflings since 1979, and each time the reform elements have lost ground.

There is no mention of this by Freedom House. Nor any at all of Col. Jose Guillermo Garcia, the hard-nosed defense minister sharing the real power in the junta with a Gutierrez who could fit only the loosest definition of a reformer.

Moving along to land reform, Freedom House credits it with benefiting 210,000 peasant families, which, at an average of six per family,

"translates into 1.25 million people." The figures are, however, put somewhat lower by other sources — such as the U.S. government, which currently estimates beneficiaries at 60,000 families in the first phase, conversion of large estates into cooperatives. A second phase, covering tenant farmers, has bogged down at 25,000 families out of a potential 150,000 and a third, involving smaller land holdings, has been postponed indefinitely.

But no mention of this, nor of the continuing opposition of landlords and repossession of some lands, nor of public statements by Salvadorans in the program that it is not working.

Nor of intimidation, including execution, of peasant participants by ORDEN, which, Freedom House to the contrary, has not been liquidated but only gone ex officio. It continues to operate certainly with the knowledge and probably under the direct control of military rightists.

There is more on this subject and you will be reading it in this space shortly. Meanwhile, let it be agreed that the American public needs accurate information on the complexities of El Salvador.

But on the evidence at hand, it is not getting it from Freedom House.

Is abundance unfair?

By OSCAR COOLEY
Reagan opponents continually paint him as an ogre, grinding the faces of the poor.

What could he do for the unemployed? Create jobs in his answer: raise taxes on the rich; exclude the unfair imports.

"Those unfair imports" have a lot of people worried. If the Japanese want to make automobiles and bring them here, offering them for less than our cars bring what is unfair about it. All competition boils down to offering identical goods at lower prices than your competitors charge, or better goods at the same prices.

The imports from Japan are unfair, we are told, because the Japanese government gives the auto manufacturers in that country aids and subsidies which make possible for them to undersell us. Europeans are said to do the same.

All governments give aids to industries. Our own U.S. government has for many years given billions to aid the agriculture, buying up farm products in order to bid up market price.

At present, farm products are our leading export. Our farmers have produced so abundantly that we have a great plenty not only for ourselves but for foreign consumers. Are we being unfair to them when we ship them all these victuals at mutually agreed prices? The hungry in those countries would not say so.

When the Japanese cars began to flood this country, the American auto companies appealed to the government for aid. Washington got the Japanese to limit the number of cars they would export here. This gave only partial relief. It was a humiliating as well as largely futile measure. What should have been done?

For years the manufacture and sale of automobiles in the United States had been highly profitable. The auto workers unionized and got high wages, higher than in most other industries. The taxes and license fees on cars brought generous revenue, which made it possible for the states to complete and maintain a network of superb highways.

This constituted an invitation to competitors, and the Japanese auto makers took advantage of it. They held their costs down and so were able to ship cars across miles of ocean and offer them in the U.S. at bargain prices.

Our auto companies should have responded by lowering their costs, as well as their selling prices. Both costs and prices had risen to an uneconomic level, as they always do when competition is lacking. Auto workers were being better paid than anybody else. Also, they had been given long-term contracts, which made the wage rates inflexible and hard to reduce. The United Auto Workers had seen to it that the industry was run to a considerable extent for the workers benefit.

The selling prices of American cars were reduced some to meet the Japanese competition but not enough. Not until recent months have the wage rates been reduced. Result: more and more foreign-made cars ply our roads. Large losses are being reported by Ford and Chrysler. Many auto workers have been laid off.

The long-neglected American car buyer is now getting a break, thanks to the Japanese. Is it fair to call them unfair?

This election year, politics dominates

Congress is settled in the capitol for the second session of the biennium. We have the feeling that many of the members will be intent on restoring the independence of Congress.

Last year was not a good year for the self-image of the legislative branch. It was dominated by the White House. The presidency had been in eclipse since the resignation of Richard Nixon, and some thought the balance of power had been permanently shifted to Capitol Hill. But Ronald Reagan's skillful leadership brought the primacy of the Oval Office back with a rush. And, by and large, the president had his way.

It will be a different Congress this year, even with the same players. This is an election year for a third of the Senate and all of the House. Members will be pondering their re-election chances on every vote.

On many issues, it won't be easy for some to decide whether to vote for Ronald Reagan or against him. They will have to calculate how their votes in April will look to the voters in November. Will it be better to have supported the president or to have opposed him? A lot will depend on the condition of the economy in the fall. If the recession continues and deepens, the White House will be in trouble. If a recovery begins in time, Reagan's popularity will continue undiminished.

In an election year, politics dominates. There won't be many unpopular votes for "good government." There will be a good deal of posturing for political effect.

This is a situation that will challenge all the political skills Ronald Reagan has developed in the last 15 years, first as governor of California and now in the presidency.

The trend of the economy will probably be decisive, however. If the recession continues and deepens, Congress will become less and less inclined to go along with the president. If recovery comes in late spring or early summer, it could make it a lot easier for the president.

President Reagan's blind spot

By PAUL HARVEY
We used to identify military men with saber-rattling militancy.

Political arguments against a military man in the White House always began with the allegation: "He'll lead us into war!"

History says it does not work that way, that the leader with little or no personal military experience is more likely to be seduced by march music.

Does President Reagan have a blind spot?

It took a former military captain, Truman, to blow the whistle on World War II.

It took a military man, Eisenhower, to disengage us in Korea.

Nobody more than the archtypical military man, Douglas MacArthur, cautioned us to avoid land war in Asia.

Military men, per se, do not thirst for blood.

Conversely, it is the civilian-oriented leader who can be enamored with the pomp, power and pride represented by gun-thunder.

George Gallup's pollsters hear the same thing I hear, coast to coast.

Americans generally are supportive of President Reagan's federalism, believing central government more wasteful and local government more responsive.

Americans generally are supportive of Reaganomics. I've been recently in enormous gatherings of home builders, car dealers and farmers.

Nobody has been pinched more hurtfully by tight money than these — home builders, car dealers and farmers. They live on borrowed money. Sky-high interest rates threaten them with suffocation.

Yet, in every such meeting I hear almost unanimous support for Reaganomics.

"We know what he is trying to do and it needs to be done. It hurts like everything but let's give him a chance."

But then we come to the subject of foreign affairs and I hear next to no support for our President's willingness to throw American dollars at El Salvador. And never, whatever State Secretary Haig says, never ever to send American troops into that unworthy bloodbath!

The Communists, reaching out, grow weaker — not stronger.

If somebody is going to bleed to death, better than that us.

Berry's World

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It was a bit of humanness worth noting.
 As Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier was describing to the press corps his 42 days of captivity at the hands of Red Brigade terrorists, he said the worst of it was the plain boredom of sitting there day in and day out. Then he added, "They put earphones on me and played hard rock music through it all day long. Do you have any idea what hard rock music can do to a person?"

He was using humor to disguise his modesty, but it was incongruous to me that here was a man who had been abducted by lunatics, blindfolded, beaten, chained to his bed and every hour lived raw fear of his future and the one thing that was unbearable was the forced feeding of rock music.
 At the very moment Gen. Dozier made that statement, 85 million parents in this country not only stood up and applauded, but wept openly at the courage of the man. It was probably the only part of the ordeal that they could relate to.

It's my guess that his head is still vibrating from the decibels and will for some time. I've seen hard rock bring a lot of parents to their knees.

Who among us has not entered our car in innocence, turned the key in the ignition, and had our faces blown off by sound waves before we could turn down and reset the buttons?
 Who among us has not met persecution face to face when we entered a small, intimate restaurant and got into our first course before the band returned and made lip-reading painful?

It's hard to remember what the world was like before it became amplified. One day I was bringing the baby home from the hospital. The next there were four speakers on the wall, the cups were rattling and I was deaf.

 I suspect heroes like Gen. Dozier are pretty much like the rest of us... ordinary people who when thrown into an extraordinary situation react in an extraordinary way. His entire attitude on the nightmare was, to say the least, refreshing. As I watched him on the newscast of the press conference, I sensed that maybe the rock music was a major factor in his survival. There is something about listening to it hour after hour, day after day that makes you want to survive if only to stuff a 12-inch record down a three-inch throat.

Corn Spoonbread

 MEATLESS SUPPER
 Fresh Corn Spoonbread
 Green Peas Tomato Gratin
 Frosted Carrot Cake

CORN SPOONBREAD
 For best results, use young sweet corn.
 3 six-inch long fresh ears of corn
 1-3rd cup yellow cornmeal
 2 cups hot milk
 1/2 cup butter, soft
 1 teaspoon salt
 2 large eggs, separated

Cut kernels from corn; with back of knife scrape down cobs to release pulp — there should be about 1 1/2 cups kernels and pulp. Turn into a medium saucepan. Stir in the cornmeal, then the milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until thickened — about 5 minutes. Off heat, stir in butter and salt until butter melts; vigorously stir in the yolks. Beat whites until stiff; fold in. Turn into a buttered 1 1/2-quart oblong baking dish (10 by 6 by 1 3/4 inches). Place in a pan of hot water that comes up about as high as corn mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until top is golden (a knife inserted in center will not come out clean) — about 1 hour. Let stand 5 or 10 minutes before serving. May be cut in rectangles, but the spoonbread will be soft. Makes 6 servings.

Dr. Lamb

No more vermouth here

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I had a gastric ulcer operation a couple of years ago, also a small section of my stomach was removed. Will drinking four or five ounces of sweet vermouth mixed in cranberry juice every day be harmful to my stomach? I also use Granola and bran and prunes frequently. Lately I have been having pains in my stomach and am wondering if all of these foods are causing them. I am 69 years old.

DEAR READER — Any beverage that contains alcohol should not be used by anyone who has either a gastric or duodenal ulcer or for that matter any form of stomach acidity. Alcohol stimulates the stomach to increase its production of acid. The acid is related to ulcers. Also alcohol may dissolve part of the thick mucus covering that normally protects the lining of the stomach from digestion by its own acid digestive juices. That means no more vermouth.

Studies show that both caffeinated and decaffeinated coffee may contribute to stomach problems in those so afflicted. It is wise for people with acid indigestion and ulcer problems to avoid both forms of coffee, tea and cola. Cigarette smoking also has an adverse effect.
 Gastric ulcers are in the stomach and really are stomach ulcers. Duodenal ulcers are just outside the stomach in the first part of the small intestine and although many people call this most common type of ulcer a stomach ulcer, it is not.
 There are some important differences in gastric and duodenal ulcers. In general, people who have gastric ulcers are not as likely to tolerate roughage so well. We like to recommend bulk for bowel problems but it is not always tolerated well in people with ulcer problems. Whether your gastric ulcer is associated with an increase in stomach acid or not has an important bearing on the right treatment. I suggest you check in with your doctor to find out about those pains.

Dear Abby

A sweet bouquet tossed Abby's way

By Abigail Van Buren
 © 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our children gave me a copy of "The Best of Dear Abby" for Christmas. I had expected to find it filled with wisecracks and funnies. On the contrary, seriousness seems to be the keynote. It is evident that you do not lightly take your responsibility as an adviser.
 Your book reminds me of a rose. The pages become petals, rich with fragrance of empathy, compassion, seriousness, wit and humor. The stem has its thorns. The book is mighty near to being a documentary on humanity.
 May I please have permission to reproduce by Xerox pages 48, 49 and 50, which contain correspondence from "Miserable in Phoenix"? I desire to give copies to our children and grandchildren and their friends who may be raising teen-agers.
 I am 94 years old and my beloved wife of 64 years is 87. We both enjoy your book immensely.
 Rather than becoming an old pest, I will say "Goodbye." Love,
CHARLES ALBERT SMITH, ALTADENA, CALIF.

DEAR CHARLES: An "old pest"? Never! Your letter made my day. You may use the specific material from my book to share with family and friends. Everyone desiring to reproduce copyrighted material must request permission, as you did.
 P.S. To those who have complained that their local bookstores are out of my book, it's available by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to: "The Best of Dear Abby," 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate, and please mention the name of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY: Many parents spend the entire month of January recuperating after their grown children have come "home" with their families to spend the Christmas holidays with Mom and Dad. I'm one of those moms.
 Here's a terrific letter I hope you'll print. I'm sure not many moms have received one like it:
"Dear Mom: Thanks for sending that big box of stuff I left behind when we spent the Christmas holidays at your house. Everything arrived beautifully packed, as usual. And thanks for washing and ironing everything, and mending my good blue sweater. Glad you found the brown sock behind the bed. (I thought I had looked there.) Sorry about forgetting my camera and sunglasses.
 "It was sure great to see you and Dad. You always treat us like royalty, feeding us three scrumptious meals a day and waiting on us and the kids and all our friends. We didn't have to lift a finger. You did all the cooking and cleaning and laundry, too!
 "Next year we kids are going to carry you and Dad off to the shore for Christmas at that nice lodge, and somebody

APPLE PUDDING
 Our no-fail version of a famous Scandinavian dessert.
 1/2 cup (4-ounce stick) butter
 1 cup fine zwieback crumbs
 1/2 cup fine honey graham cracker crumbs
 2 cups canned sweetened applesauce
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 Grated rind of 1 lemon (1 teaspoon)
 Topping: Sweetened whipped cream or vanilla sauce
 In an 8-inch skillet over low heat melt the butter; add the zwieback and graham cracker crumbs; stir to coat the crumbs with butter. In a small bowl stir together the apple sauce, cinnamon and lemon rind. Spread 1-3rd of the crumb mixture in a buttered 4- or 5-cup soufflé dish or casserole; add 1/2 of the apple sauce mixture; spread with another 1-3rd of the crumbs and top with the remaining apple sauce and then the remaining crumbs. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until browned — 30 minutes. Serve warm with one of the Toppings. Makes 6 servings.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

There is a strong possibility you could form a very fruitful alliance this coming year. It will be with someone whose philosophy is in harmony with yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Neither you nor your mate should make important decisions today without first consulting one another. Two heads may be needed to come up with the right answer. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Things could go wrong initially with the tasks you undertake today, but don't let this dismay you. Your errors will lead to ways to do a better job.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
In situations requiring a partner look to old standbys today rather than to your newer acquaintances. Tested pals will be more in harmony.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Be careful about making snap decisions today. Your first thoughts may not be your best. Once you've studied the matter, your judgment improves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Persons under your direction could do things which will displease you today, but rather than coming down hard on them use tact to point out their mistakes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If you're negotiating a financial matter today, don't jump at the first offer. Play a little hard to get and you'll come out with better terms.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
When dealing with others today, try not to prejudge them or jump to conclusions. Your initial assessment of their actions could be erroneous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Be sure to look out for the interests of others today in the same measure they will for yours. There's a chance you could be more of a taker than a giver.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
You should be rather lucky today in most things you undertake, with the exception of situations relating to your finances. Keep your guard up in this area.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Today, others will assist you in reaching your goals, even if they feel you're wrong, provided they see you are truly making an effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Listen to wiser heads today if the majority thinks you're on the wrong track. When the vote is against you, chances are they're right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Someone you're counting on to come through for you today may not be in a position to do so, but you could be extremely lucky through another you'd never have thought of.

FANS GREET HARVESTERS. Over 200 cheering fans were on hand to greet the Pampa High boys' basketball team Saturday night after they returned from the Class 5A regional tournament in Midland with the first-place trophy. Pampa enters state tournament play Friday

Throngs of Pampa fans greet Harvesters after return from winning regional championship

Over 200 happy cheering fans, many yelling "We're No. 1" and waving giant hands with the No. 1 sign, seemed to materialize out of the cool, crisp air and converge on the Pampa High Harvester basketball bus that pulled into the school parking lot late Saturday night.

The Pampa High boys' team had just won the Class 5A regional tournament Saturday afternoon with a 59-51 win over El Paso High in Midland College's Chapparel Center.

The Harvesters won't be home long. They leave for Austin Tuesday night and the state tournament in the Super Drum.

"We'll have a workout Wednesday between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.," Pampa coach Garland Nichols said. "Each team is allowed one workout and that's our time."

Pampa (29-4) meets San Antonio Churchill (25-3) at 8 p.m. Friday night in first-round action. North Mesquite (38-2) meets Galveston Ball (34-5) at 4 p.m. Friday in the other first-round game. The winners meet at 7:15 Saturday for the championship.

"I think San Antonio is the tournament favorite," Nichols said.

"They were there last year and they've got three starters back, but it's going to take a good ballgame to win it no matter when we play."

Nichols will discuss the state tournament during a Harvester Booster Club meeting at 7 p.m. tonight in the high school football fieldhouse.

There will be a pep rally for the Harvesters at 8 p.m. tonight in the Pampa Mall.

Nichols said he felt a "tremendous relief" when the final buzzer went off to signify Pampa's regional victory over El Paso.

"I really felt drained off from all the emotion," Nichols said. "I really didn't feel anything until I starting getting all the phone calls today from all the fans."

"It's a great feeling to realize that there are over 200 Class 5A teams in the state and we're among the top four."

Pampa opened the regional tournament with an easy 51-35 win over Denton, but the lopsided victory didn't surprise Nichols.

"I had seen them play before and I felt we could beat them once we got our running game going," Nichols said.

Pampa used third-quarter scoring sprees to help knock off both Denton and El Paso after only two points had separated the teams at halftime. Pampa had made such a habit of winning games this season with third-quarter surges that Nichols had been accused of using a magic potion.

"I give the stuff to all the kids at halftime and it gets them psyched up," Nichols laughed. "No, we've just been able to make the necessary adjustments at halftime and then go with it."

Obtaining an early lead on Denton was the key to victory in the championship game.

"El Paso's coach (C.D. Jarvis) has been coaching there 37 years, so I knew they had a solid program," Nichols said. "I told the kids that they just had to go and make themselves believe that they could win it. We had to go with our game plan and make them chase us. I knew if they ever got the lead we would be in trouble because they're excellent at running a slow offense."

Going into the tournament, Nichols felt the Harvesters could win the regional title.

"After we beat Plainview (bi-district game) and Tascosa (district playoff) as bad as we did, I knew we could win it."

Tar Heels win ACC Tournament

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Top-ranked North Carolina had just beaten Virginia in the title game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, and Coach Dean Smith was unhappy.

The Tar Heels claimed their 10th ACC title with a 47-45 victory over No. 3 Virginia Sunday afternoon, but a North Carolina stall that consumed 7 1/2 minutes of play was a major topic of post-game questioning.

"Isn't it amazing?" Smith asked rhetorically. "We just had a great basketball game out there until eight minutes left to play, and that's all you want to talk about."

North Carolina led 44-41 with 8:44 to play with the help of four buckets by freshman Michael Jordan. Jeff Jones put Virginia within one point at 7:34, and neither team scored a basket until Cavaliers center Ralph Sampson hit a slam dunk at the buzzer.

In the meantime, North Carolina was in its four-corner offense — a euphemism for stall — and scored its final three points from the foul line, all by Matt Doherty.

"That's one of our offenses," Tar Heels forward James Worthy said of the four-corners. "We look for layups off back doors, and if we don't get those, we look for them to foul us."

Worthy led North Carolina, 27-2, with 16 points, all in the first half as the Tar Heels built a lead that grew to as many as 12 points, 24-12. At that point, Worthy had half of North Carolina's points, but the Cavaliers stormed back behind Sampson, their 7-foot-4 junior.

Both teams, along with No. 16 Wake Forest and North Carolina State, received NCAA tournament bids.

Two other conference titles — and NCAA berths — were decided Sunday. Freshman Keith Lee powered No. 13 Memphis State to a 73-62 victory over Louisville in the Metro Conference, and North Carolina A&T beat Howard 69-67 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Metro Conference Lee, a 6-11 center, scored 27 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for Memphis State, which just squeaked into the Metro final with a 71-70 victory the day before over Virginia Tech.

Memphis State, 23-4, took a 61-45 lead with 9:33 left after outscoring Louisville 22-7 in a span of eight minutes. The Cardinals, who received an NCAA at-large berth, had not lost in the Metro tournament since 1979.

Tournament titles were decided in 18 conferences Saturday. The upsets were in the Southeastern Conference and the Eastern Eight. No. 18 Alabama defeated No. 15 Kentucky 48-46 at Lexington, Ky., in the SEC, and Pittsburgh won the Eastern Eight with a 79-72 victory over No. 9 West Virginia.

No. 5 Missouri won the Big Eight, sixth-ranked Idaho won the Big Sky. No. 9 Georgetown won the Big East, 10th-ranked Tulsa won the Missouri Valley and 14th-ranked Arkansas won the Southwest. No. 7 Minnesota clinched the Big Ten title by beating Ohio State in their regular-season finale.

Southeastern

Eddie Phillips scored 13 points, including a basket with three seconds left, to pace Alabama, 23-6, over Kentucky, Kentucky, 22-7, was led by Dirk Minnifield with 11 points. Both teams, along with Tennessee, were selected for the NCAA tournament.

Eastern Eight

Clyde Vaughan scored 21 points as Pitt surprised West Virginia. The Panthers ran off a 19-7 burst late in the first half to win. West Virginia gained an at-large NCAA berth.

Big Eight

Ricky Frazier and Steve Stipanovich led Missouri to a 68-63 victory over Oklahoma. Frazier had 24 points, and Stipanovich 14 for Missouri, 25-3. Oklahoma was invited to the National Invitation Tournament.

Big Sky

Ken Owens scored 19 of his 27 points in the second half to boost Idaho over Nevada-Reno, 85-80. Nevada-Reno failed to get a post-season bid.

Underclassmen star in girls' tourney

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sophomores and juniors — with a few exceptions — stole the show from the seniors at this year's girls' state basketball tournament.

One Southwest Conference woman's coach named four she would like to recruit, and every one has more high school eligibility.

Here are the four: Monica Lamb, a 6-foot-5 junior from Houston Yates who got in foul trouble but scored 15 points in 13 minutes.

Victoria junior Yulonda Wimbish, 5-10, who tossed in 48 points and grabbed 19 rebounds in two games and also made the key defensive plays on Vickie Green of Dallas South Oak Cliff in Victoria's 46-45 Class 5A championship victory.

Del Valle sophomore Beverly Williams, 5-7, an acrobatic shooter and quick defensive player who flipped in 58 points in leading her 4A team to semifinal and title victories.

Pennee Hall, a 5-8 junior from Mont Belvieu Barbers Hill who led all scorers with 64 points, including a rare four-point play in the championship victory over Carthage when she made a driving layup, was intentionally fouled, and made both free throws.

Other non-senior stars included Levelland sophomore Daria Isaacks, 5-11, who scored 33 points in a 64-63 semifinal loss to Carthage; Sheila Bryant, a 5-11 junior from Carthage who scored 39 points and had 18 rebounds in two games; Laura Williams, a 6-0 junior from Phillips who scored 51 points and grabbed 20 rebounds; and Carmen Wynn, a 5-11 Amarillo junior who scored 15 points and led her team with nine rebounds in a losing effort against South Oak Cliff.

In team competition, Nazareth cleared its bench in coasting to a record sixth consecutive Class A championship by defeating Krum 61-33 in the semifinals and Dime Box 64-37 in the finals.

Hardin defended its 2A title, beating Phillips 69-61 as Charlotte Reescano, a senior, scored 33 points and hauled down 22 rebounds.

Hall's 37 points and ballhandling led Barbers Hill to a 68-53 Class 3A title victory over Carthage, which has failed to win a championship in five tournament appearances. Williams was superb on Del Valle's fastbreak offense that overcame a 13-point second quarter deficit to whip Carthage 76-64 for Del Valle's first 4A title.

Wimbish settled Victoria down after South Oak Cliff had run off 12 consecutive points for a 39-37 lead with 4 minutes 53 seconds left in the game. She scored two field goals and a free throw and guarded SOC's Green so tightly that the SOC star forced a bad shot and threw the ball away twice on crucial plays as Victoria held on for a one-point victory.

"I told a friend last summer that I thought we could do it even though we had a lot of juniors on the team," said Victoria Coach Jan Lahodny.

Nothing wrong with juniors, or sophomores.

NCAA assembles 48-team field for national title shootout

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — NCAA officials, breathing a sigh of relief over the lack of conference tournament upsets, believe they've assembled the strongest 48-team field ever for their national basketball championship.

At the same time, Dave Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference and chairman of the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee, admitted Sunday that the tournament did not take in the nation's best 48 teams.

"But we're closer to having the best 48 than in recent history," Gavitt said in announcing the tournament pairings and seedings on national television. "We did not get many upset winners in post-season tournaments at all."

By majority vote of NCAA members, the committee is required to give automatic invitations to the champions of 28 conferences, leaving 20 at-large invitations. Most conferences, in an effort to get as many teams into the tournament as possible, stage post-season playoffs to determine their automatic qualifier. When teams that otherwise would not be considered get hot and win post-season tournaments, the result can be dilution of the field's overall strength.

But Gavitt believes that is not the case this year.

"This is the deepest and strongest field we've ever had," he said. "The word 'upset' no longer applies in the NCAA Tournament." In making the 20 at-large selections, he added, "there were some very close calls. Four or five years ago, teams with nine defeats, people would have said didn't belong in the tournament. Last year, our champion (Indiana) had nine losses."

North Carolina, DePaul, Virginia and Georgetown were named the top seeds in the four regionals. Geographically speaking, top-ranked North Carolina got the best deal and Georgetown, ranked No. 8 in The Associated Press Top 20, got the worst.

North Carolina is the top seed in the East Regional and never would have to leave its home state until the semifinals in New Orleans. Georgetown was assigned to the West Regional, about 3,000 miles from its Washington, D.C., campus.

Second-ranked DePaul is the top seed in the Midwest, and Virginia, ranked No. 3, is seeded first in the Midwest. Fourth-ranked Oregon State, the Pacific 10 Conference champion, is the No. 2 seed in the West.

Among the more notable teams left out and later picked up by the National Invitational Tournament were Bradley, 21-10; Iona, 24-8; Nevada-Las Vegas, 19-8, and San Diego State, 20-8.

The top four seeds in each region are given byes into the second round. The regional championships will be March 19-21 at Raleigh, N.C., in the East and at St. Louis in the Midwest. The semifinals and finals in the Midwest will be March 18-20 at Birmingham, Ala., and March 18-20 in Provo, Utah, in the West.

Hagler retains title with knockout

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — "We want Hearn's! We want Hearn's!" chanted Marvin Hagler's fans, who had very little chance to cheer their hero during his defense of the undisputed middleweight title against William "Caveman" Lee.

It took Hagler 67 seconds Sunday to get rid of Lee, who still seemed confused at the post-fight press conference when he said, "I just got caught with a lucky punch."

The 25-year-old Lee got caught with everything Hagler threw, was knocked down and lost when referee Larry Hazzard stopped the fight by grabbing Lee to keep him from falling through the ropes after he got hit by two smashing rights to the head.

That set Hagler's fans at the Bally's

Park Place Casino Hotel to chanting for Hearn's, who was at ringside.

Hagler also wants Hearn's, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion, who has won twice as a middleweight.

"Hearn's is next in our contract," said Hagler, who will be 30 May 23. "We have a signed contract. I'm looking forward to the big fight, the big money."

"A fight against Marvin would be a very tough fight, but I feel like I'm a much better fighter," said Hearn's.

Hearn's, who also appeared at the post-fight press conference, said he expected to fight Hagler in the next couple of months. Although agreements have been reached in principle, the money reportedly still is to be raised. Hagler is asking $5 million and Hearn's $3.5 million.

Bob Arum, who promoted the Hagler-Lee fight, said originally he wanted to schedule the Hagler-Hearn's fight June 25, but when the heavyweight match between Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney was postponed until June 11, Arum said he wanted to put his fight on within the first 15 days of May. Now the promoter is talking about late summer.

Lee, a native of Philadelphia now fighting out of the Kronk Gym in Detroit, was a substitute for stablemate Mickey Goodwin, who was injured.

Hagler, of Brockton, Mass., now has a 54-2-2 record with 45 knockouts, and has made four defenses of the title he won by stopping Alan Minter in the third round Sept. 27, 1980 at London. Lee now is 20-3-0.

Arthritis ends Allred's chances of competing in Boston Marathon

Pampa cross-country runner Louis Allred will not participate in the Boston Marathon next month.

Allred, considered one of the top distance runners in the Panhandle, has developed degenerative arthritis in his knee which forced him to drop out of the marathon.

"I had a knee operation in college and a lot of calcium built up on it during the years," Allred said. "The doctor advised me not to Allred has been a consistent winner in cross country events in and around the Panhandle area. Allred won the first annual Pampa 10 K run in the 35-40 age division last year.

During last year's grueling Palo Duro Marathon, Allred bested the men's 30-39 record (22:14) set by Pampa's Jim Hogan by finishing in 21:34. He also won the 30-39 title in the Frosty Four-Miler held in Canyon last year and finished second overall.

"I was counting on going to Boston," Allred said. "I already had my reservations made, but I'm real satisfied at least that I was able to qualify."

Pampa girl joins all-region team

Kellye Richardson of Pampa, who was recently named to the Western Junior College Athletic Conference all-star basketball team, received another honor last week when the 5-10 Amarillo College sophomore was named to the Women's All Region V second-team.

Richardson, the Lady Badgers' leading scorer, joined sophomore teammate Nancy Kocurek on the second

NO FREE AGENCY SEATTLE (AP) — Not every pro-basketball player aspires to be a free agent with a chance at mega-bucks. One who refused was Jack Sikma, the star center of the Seattle Super-sonics.

"The best thing for me to know is that I would stay in Seattle," Sikma said after signing a three-year contract extension last fall. "Now I can start making some long-range plans. One important one is where I am going to live for the rest of my life. I simply wanted no part of that free agent rigamarole."
