Unemployment troubles shown in plant closing

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of General Motors Corp. workers shook hands after the four-door Oldsmobile Ciera rolled off the assembly line, but it was to say goodbye, not congratulations, and the car bore a sad sticker.

"GM is my whole life — save the plant," said the handwritten sign tacked on the front end of the plant's last car as it left the 3.5-mile assembly line Thursday. The closing, which threw 2,100 people out of work, is the most recent casualty in a sales slump that has contributed to the nation's unemployment problems.

GM is also closing six other plants this year in locations ranging from Trenton, N.J., to South Gate, Calif.

One auto worker sang the "auto worker blues" as the plant closed, and Jack Giacopazzi, a 50-year-old father of six who has worked at the plant since it opened 19 years ago, said he couldn't believe this is happening.

"I may be all wrong, but I think we are on a Reagan street car going down the 1929 Hoover boulevard to the soup kitchen," Giacopazzi said.

The model's poor sales led the world's largest automaker to close the sprawling plant indefinitely. GM blames its plant closings on high interest rates and competition from foreign-built cars.

The company announced a series of plant closings after the breakdown of contract concessions talks with the United Auto Workers on Jan. 28.

At the end of the assembly line, worker John William revved the engine and drove the last car of 4.2 million built at the plant to a back lot, where it will sit until it is trucked to a dealer.

Hundreds of workers lubricated and covered about $200 million worth of computer-controlled manufacturing robots, shook hands and filed out Thursday afternoon.

Calligraphy is her calling

By JUDY PEITZMEIER
Scottsdale Daily Progress
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Handwriting has fascinated Sharon Singley for years — which is probably a good thing, since she spends hours on it each working day.

With a delicate stroke of a pen, her writing becomes art and a treasured keepsake. Ms. Singley is a calligrapher.

"I can remember looking at beautiful handwriting as a child and trying to copy it," she says. "When I lived in New Jersey — she moved to this area in 1976 — I met a woman who did calligraphy and as soon as I saw her work, I knew I wanted to do it."

She received her training in New Jersey and continues to perfect her skill by attending seminars and classes taught by calligraphy experts.

When she first arrived in Arizona, she took a job as a bank teller until she could get a job in the artistic writing she loves.

"I called every art studio in Phoenix looking for work as a calligrapher," she recalls. "Everyone I talked to said fine work was beautiful and I should get so much money an hour — but no one saw the need to hire me."

Finally, she found a business card from Penglraphics, a Phoenix business specializing in calligraphy, and not long after that she joined the firm. Her work there has included personalizing award scrolls, testimonials, books of poetry, handmade wedding invitations, a variety of certificates, business cards, agenda lists, menus — and even love letters.

Ms. Singley says she is paid by the hour, with a handmade card and envelope costing about $12.50 and a name written on a certificate costing about $2.50. Prices are also affected by the amount of detail and the quality of the paper.

"A lot of people think it's a high price to pay for a signature, but I can tell by people's expressions that they are more than satisfied easy to make, rich and tender, crunchy crust.

Recipe: cup fork-stirred at all-purpose white flour, cup wholewheat (graham) flour, ¼ cup baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoons sugar, ½ cup heavy cream. In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. With a fork, mix the flour into the cream. Use a spoon and a small metal strainer to drop the soft dough into small muffin-pan cups about 2 inches across the top and 1 inch deep, filling them almost full. Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven until golden — 15 minutes. Serve hot with butter. Makes 12.

Dr. Lamb

Milk sugar intolerance develops with age

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, who is 67, is a diabetic. I am a borderline case. We would like some information about Lact-Aid. I have received a sample but haven't used it as it converts lactose in milk into sugar. I am wondering if there is enough sugar in the Lact-Aid to warrant not using it.

DEAR READER — For the benefit of other readers, Lact-Aid is an enzyme preparation you can put in milk and it will digest the milk sugar lactose into its two single sugars, galactose and glucose.

At birth we all have a similar enzyme in the small intestine that digests milk sugar and does exactly the same thing. Unfortunately, 10 to 20 percent of adult Anglo-Saxons and as many as 80 percent of other ethnic groups do not have enough lactase enzyme in the intestine to do this. These people develop milk intolerance which causes symptoms similar to a spastic colon or worse.

I presume you are concerned about milk intolerance since you have gotten Lact-Aid. Lact-Aid can be gotten from the SugarLo

Company, P.O. Box 110, Pleasantville, NJ 08232.

The lactose in milk is sugar. It is a double sugar of galactose and glucose (called a disaccharide). Table sugar is a disaccharide of glucose and fructose. You will not get any more glucose from milk after using Lact-Aid than a diabetic without milk intolerance will get from ordinary milk.

In other words, if your diet allows you to use milk in conjunction with diabetes there is no reason why you can't use Lact-Aid. It really doesn't make any difference whether lactose is split by an enzyme in your intestine or split by an enzyme added to the milk before it is used. The end result is the same. The question about milk in causes the bowel symptoms).

To give you more information on milk intolerance I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products: Good and Bad. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have Crohn's disease. Can you tell me what causes it? I have severe low abdominal pain which at times really makes me sick. When the cramping is at its worst it causes me to have chills and nausea. The diarrhea usually lasts only three to four days. The constipation can make me feel as bad as the diarrhea.

An indentation and reddened area inside the bladder and that it could eventually rub a hole into it. I was told nothing could be done about it. I am overweight as well. Could this be causing the problem?

DEAR READER — No, being overweight is not the cause. Crohn's disease is also known as regional enteritis. It is a granular inflammation that most typically involves the area where the end of the small intestine (ileum) joins the colon in your lower right side but it can involve other areas, too.

It can cause the symptoms you describe and may be mistaken for appendicitis. It can cause sinus tracts including erosion into the bladder. Prednisone causes a remission in about 60 percent of cases in about eight weeks. Sulfasalazine may help in three to four months. It is a difficult disease to treat.

Lately I have been told my intestines are pushing against my bladder, causing

Lone Star Ballet presents the Arve Connection

When the dancers of the Arve Connection bring their electric movements to the stage of the Amarillo Civic Center on the evening of Saturday, March 6 at 8 p.m., they will close their program with the premier of a new number, Concentrics. Born out of the experiences of Richard Arve's childhood, the design takes on the shapes of the games and motions he remembers, working out into concentric circles. The audience will be first to share the excitement of a new dance.

The program will open with Class - a portion of an actual class workout showing how the company develops the constant placement of energy and fast movement which distinguishes this company.

After Send In The Clowns and Currents (electrical impulses moving from one dance to another) the company will present Naja, the Indian Cobra. The first part will close with a lovely flowing tribute In Memory of Phyllis.

The second part will open with Primates, primitive dances based on the ritual of Simba, the African God of the lion hunt and will close with the premiere mentioned above.

Tickets are $10, $7 and $4 and will be available at the Civic Center box office at Third and Buchanan in Amarillo. The program is fourth on the Season of Dance presented by the Lone Star Ballet Inc. for 1981-82. The fifth will be "Danceaway" which will be at the Amarillo Theatre Center on May 1 and 2.

Girl Scout cookie time is on in Pampa

It's Girl Scout cookie time and Pampa door bells have been ringing as dozens of Girl Scouts and Brownies bring oven-fresh cookies to sell. Priced at $1.75, the cookies will net some profit to the troops for activities and service projects. Profits to the Council help maintain the two campsites, Mel Davis at Lefors, and Cibola at Clarendon. A shower house, painting and some remodeling are projects underway at the campsites with the 1982 profits.
