Britain takes tough stance with Argentina

LONDON (AP) — Britain declared today it would not appease Argentine "dictators" and was reported beefing up its armada of warships steaming toward the Falkland Islands.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. prepared to fly to London and Buenos Aires in an attempt to defuse the crisis, and Argentine forces were reported digging in to hold the islands they seized from Britain Friday.

"Britain does not appease dictators," Foreign Secretary Francis Pym told a House of Commons debate.

Pym, successor to Lord Carrington who resigned Monday over his failure to avert Argentina's seizure of the remote South Atlantic colony, said Britain "will spare no effort" to find a peaceful solution.

"But if our efforts fail the Argentine regime will know what to expect," he said.

Pym labeled the Argentine military junta a "morally bankrupt regime" and said: "We intend to show Argentina and the whole world, Britain is resolved to succeed in this crisis."

In a vigorous speech to a packed Commons, Pym said it was obvious the Argentine "occupation force" of more than 3,000 troops would treat the 1,800 pro-British islanders as "a conquered population."

In Washington, the White House announced that President Reagan has "directed Secretary of State Haig to continue consultations with the governments of the United Kingdom and Argentina in the interest of assisting both parties in the search for a peaceful resolution of the dispute in the South Atlantic."

Britain was reported sending as many as eight more warships, including nuclear submarines, to join the 40-ship armada steaming toward the Argentine-occupied Falkland Islands.

Argentine reinforcements on the British colony were reported digging trenches and foxholes.

British troops on the convoy were ordered to shave off beards before reaching the Falklands so that gas masks could be worn if needed. "We are coordinating a program to meet the threat," said Cmdr. Ken McKenzie, the operations officer on the aircraft carrier Hermes.

The Times of London said three frigates and one destroyer were expected to join the armada that sailed Monday, and that up to four nuclear-powered submarines could already be on the way to the islands, 250 miles east of southern Argentina. The navy declined to comment for "security reasons."

In Moscow, an official Soviet source branded as "a lie" a report by Argentina's official Telam news agency that the Kremlin was sending Soviet submarines to side with Argentina in the crisis.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry reiterated its position in the conflict "is neutral." The U.S. government says it too is steering a neutral course in the dispute, which erupted Friday with the Argentines seizing the islands.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez met for 70 minutes in Washington Tuesday with Haig. Costa Mendez said the United States offered to help its "two good friends" resolve the crisis.

"I'm confident that we will reach through negotiations — even if they are long negotiations — that we will reach peace, an honorable and just peace," he said.

The Reagan administration is "walking right down the middle" between Britain and Argentina and is "not going to give anybody any help either way," Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto told reporters in Washington.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made clear she was only interested in mediation that would achieve Britain's aims.

"We shall be very happy if anyone is able to secure the withdrawal of the Argentinians," she told questioners in the House of Commons.

"Britain is not actively looking for mediation," said one British newspaper that supports Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative party, the Daily Telegraph.

Another Conservative paper, the Daily Express, said Mrs. Thatcher's new foreign secretary, Francis Pym, hoped to get the Argentine troops out of the Falklands without shooting, possibly by proposing joint British-Argentine control of the islands.

"But the chances for any deal would depend on Argentina backing down in the face of British naval strength and the weight of world opinion," the Express said.

British Ambassador Sir Nicolas Henderson, after a 45-minute meeting with Haig, said he was sure U.S. officials would "do everything they can to try to get the Argentines out."

Seven die in tunnel explosion

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Seven people burned to death inside a highway tunnel early today after a gasoline tanker was hit by a bus and exploded in flames that turned the tunnel into a roaring furnace and melted vehicles inside, officials said.

Fire Capt. John Speakman confirmed that seven bodies were pulled from the wreckage after the crash and fire in the Caldecott tunnel on Highway 24 between Orinda and Oakland.

"It looks like something out of World War II in there," said Jim Mattos, a California Highway Patrol public affairs officer, of the interior of the three-tube, 3/4-mile-long tunnel, a major commuter route burrowing through a hill between Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

Firefighters wearing breathing apparatus searched for victims inside the tunnel after the fire was brought under control, some 2 1/2 hours after the 12:20 a.m. accident. Speakman said the crash occurred in the tunnel's westbound tube. By early morning, the other tubes were open to traffic.

Speakman said the Alameda County Transit bus — which apparently carried no passengers — first struck a stalled car, then crashed into the rear of the double-tanker gasoline truck. The bus driver fell out of his vehicle, which went on to smash into a pillar, Speakman said.

At least five other vehicles were trapped in the tunnel behind the bus, the Highway Patrol spokesman said.

Searing heat from the blaze flattened the tanker truck, Mattos said, adding, "It's about six inches high — completely melted."

Speakman said the tanker carried 8,800 gallons of gasoline.

A Carson City, Nev., man who refused to give his name said he stopped his car in the tunnel after witnessing the accident and left his mother at an emergency telephone while he went for help.

Officials said a heater treater at an oil storage tank caused the tank fire. Firemen explained that a heater treater heats crude oil before it flows into the storage tank. The device uses a flame to heat the crude and remove water. Firemen said the flame ignited fumes coming from the storage tank.

Firemen battled the blaze nearly two hours with two units from the Pampa Fire Department. Firemen said no foam chemical was used, but water was sprayed on the tank to cool it and smother the fire.

Pampa firefighter injured battling oil storage fire

A Pampa fireman was injured this morning while battling a fire at an oil storage tank, about two miles south of Pampa, just east of State Highway 70.

Gary Ensey sustained back and ankle injuries when he fell from a ladder. Fire officials said Ensey was attempting to dodge a flame from the tank when he fell.

The fireman is listed in stable condition today at Coronado Community Hospital.

The blaze erupted shortly after 6 a.m. on a W.L. Bruce Oil Co. lease. The lease is occupied by Meers Oil Co.

WAGON — HO! These modern day French Canadian wagon travelers have just trekked through what was once known as Indian Territory, but the group worries more today about dodging careening tractor-trailer rigs than wild Indians as they make their way on highways across the United States. Members of the Robert family stopped in Pampa Tuesday, after a jaunt on Highway 60 from Miami. The band travels about 15 to 20 miles per day and have logged about 3,242 miles, toward their eventual destination of California's Rose Bowl Parade. (Staff Photo by John Wolfe)

Braswell sworn in as first woman school board member

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

The Pampa school board elected new officers and swore in its newest member at a regular meeting Tuesday evening.

After certifying the April 3 school board election results, former board member Phil Vanderpool said good bye, and Mrs. Mary Braswell officially cracked the all-male school board barrier.

Braswell won a majority in a three-way race for the Place 4 seat, for which Vanderpool did not seek re-election.

Place 5 incumbent Curt Beck also won election to another term, but he was not present for Tuesday's oath of office. Board member Buddy Epperson explained that Beck "is out of town on business."

Before he administered the oath to Braswell, Vanderpool said his term on the board "has been a pleasure to serve with members dedicated to quality education."

In accepting the oath, Braswell swore to uphold the U.S. and Texas Constitutions and agreed that she had not offered money or anything of value in return for votes toward election to her seat.

Following Vanderpool and Braswell's official change of chairs, the board elected its new officers.

Ken Fields was the only nominee and was elected board president.

He began his leadership of the school board on a humorous note when, in making a nomination for vice president, Epperson called Fields "Mr. Motion."

Epperson got his tongue untied and began the process of electing Darville Orr as vice president.

Wallace Birkes was then confirmed as board secretary.

Mrs. Braswell said her first order of business as a new school board member was "to learn what is going on — the process of conducting business on the board. I must study state and federal laws governing education and what the board can legally do with its tax funds," she said.

"I will be a member of the long-range planning committee which will affect education in the coming years," Mrs. Braswell added.

The new member said a present school policy which strikes a sour note in her is the policy of excused absences.

"Right now, a student can miss 11 days and be excused with only a note from a parent. Then, a student can have an illness and miss more days with a doctor's excuse. It is difficult for a student to miss that many classes and get an adequate education," Braswell said.

She said the first 11 excused absences should be reduced by a few days.

About the Open Meetings Law and public board discussion, Braswell said,

"As a new and inexperienced member, I think board decisions should be open to the public as much as possible and in the best interests of the school district."

However, she said there were some items of business that are best discussed in closed, or executive session.

While she is a new member on the board, Braswell is not a stranger to board members. She said Wallace Birkes is a neighbor, and Darville Orr is a friend. She said she knew board member and Pampa dentist Dr. Robert Lyle through her husband, who is also a dentist. "I feel comfortable with them, which helps," she said.

Overall, she said her highest priority is "to hire the highest caliber replacements for teachers who leave the system and to continue to upgrade scholastic goals."

Mrs. Braswell said as times get tighter, "all school districts must get the most out of each tax dollar."

In other action Tuesday, the school board voted for candidates to the Region 16 Education Service Center board, and the board approved a tuition hike for student transfers for next year.

The new yearly tuition rate for out-of-district students is $1,150 for academically eligible pupils and $2,180 for ineligible pupils.

Skellytown man arrested for gun, drugs

Following an alleged struggle over a pistol, a 34-year-old Skellytown man was arrested and charged late Tuesday night on three charges, including possession of a controlled substance.

Donald Ray Thompson was arrested around 8:40 p.m. on State Highway 152 by DPS Trooper Gordon Miller.

Miller said Thompson was stopped for a speeding violation about four miles west of Skellytown.

"I observed a handgun next to him on the seat. A struggle over the gun ensued, and he was subdued," Miller stated.

Miller said after the struggle, about $3,000 worth of what authorities believe is heroin or cocaine was allegedly discovered in the car. Miller said the substance has been sent to the DPS lab for testing.

Miller said it is illegal to carry a handgun, "unless you are traveling from county to county. But even then, you will probably have better luck if the pistol is not strapped to your side," he said.

Thompson was arraigned and bond was set before Carson County Precinct 6 Justice of the Peace Becky Hobson on three counts, possession of a controlled substance, $10,000 bond; unlawfully carrying weapons, $2,000 bond; and resisting arrest, $2,000 bond.

Thompson was transported to the Hutchinson County Jail in Stinnett because the Carson County Jail could not place him with its present juvenile detainees.

Unprecedented spring blizzard stuns East, crippling big cities

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Record April cold stunned much of the eastern half of the nation today in the path of an unprecedented spring blizzard that buried the major cities of the Northeast in up to 2 feet of snow.

The big blow that crippled cities such as New York and Boston with snows driven by winds gusting to 80 mph had moved into the northeastern tip of New England, but the National Weather Service warned that a new snowstorm was bearing down on the snowbound Midwest.

Temperatures dropped below zero this morning in northern Minnesota and upper Michigan and were below freezing as far south as the Tennessee Valley and the southern Appalachians.

With another storm developing over the central Rockies, a winter storm watch was posted in northeastern Iowa, southern Minnesota, southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois.

Snow already was falling over the northern half of the Great Plains.

The storm killed at least four people Tuesday in the Northeast after claiming 10 lives in the Midwest the day before, and four young hikers were missing in the Catskill Forest of New York.

Elections were canceled, Connecticut Gov. William O'Neill called out the National Guard to help clear the streets of abandoned cars and the airports serving New York, Boston and New Jersey were shut down.

Bitter cold threatened the peach crop in Dixie and thousands of people lost electricity in Virginia as winds gusted up to 72 mph.

The snow and the cold shattered weather records as two storm systems collided, and out in the white-capped ocean off Massachusetts, Nantucket Island was hit with gusts up to 83 mph.

The Midwest, digging out from the early days of the same snowstorm and cracking under record low temperatures, was warned that a new snowstorm would hit today after gathering strength in the West.

"This has to be, if not the greatest, one of the greatest spring storms to ever affect this area," said National Weather Service forecaster John Pollock in New Hampshire.

Balmy weather had melted the snow in New Hampshire and Vermont before Tuesday's storm dumped up to 2 feet of snow and brought gusts up to 35 mph, causing scores of accidents on highways.

"This is the worst morning I've seen in some time," said Manchester, N.H., police Capt. Dana Weeks. "It's unbelievable how in a month's time people can forget how to drive in snow."

Many New Yorkers went home from work early in a snowstorm that was accompanied by lightning.

Congressmen press for tornado disaster aid

PARIS, Texas (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says that federal disaster relief could come within a week for more than 2,700 people left homeless in a four-mile-long path of destruction carved by a killer tornado.

Bentsen, D-Texas, who toured the area Tuesday, said it was "just miraculous" that more lives were not lost when the twister dipped into the Northeast Texas city last Friday. Eight people died and about 200 more were injured.

And U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said White House officials assured him that they would give top priority to the disaster aid request made Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clements for Paris and Lamar County.

"There's no question (that) what you've had serious devastation here," Bentsen said during a tour by vehicle through the northern part of the city hit by the storm. "I think we can help."

In Dallas, a Tower spokesman said members of the senator's staff would go to Paris to monitor federal programs and untangle any bureaucratic snarls.

"I am confident the President will move quickly to help local officials and tornado victims begin the painful process of rebuilding their community," Tower said in a prepared release from his office.

Accompanying Bentsen on the tour were local officials, including Lamar County Judge Brady Fisher, who said he was optimistic that aid would be forthcoming.

"We've met most of our short-term needs," Fisher said. "We've got food services, medical assistance and things of that nature. But our long-range needs, like housing, are what we need to take care of now."

And City Manager Bob Sokoll said the government's low-interest Small Business Administration loans which would be the mainstay of an aid package might not be available to many residents.

"That's where the void will come," said Sokoll. "The biggest problem will be to find housing for these people. It's going to be a big problem."

FBI reports crime rate steady in 1981

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crime rate in the United States has leveled off after several years of growth, according to preliminary FBI statistics for 1981.

The figures, released Tuesday, show that the number of serious crimes reported to the nation's police in 1981 was about the same as in 1980. The crime rate had grown by 9 per cent in both 1980 and 1979. The last year it did not grow was 1977.

Administration officials and crime experts did not consider the 1981 statistics to be an indication that the nation is solving its crime problem, however.

"We see hope, but to say the problem is taken care of would be irresponsible," said Associate Attorney General Rudolph Giuliani, noting that 1980's crime level was the highest the FBI has ever recorded.

"I'd like to say that after a year and a half of firmer law enforcement, the message is getting through to criminals, but I just don't know. It's still too early to tell," he said.

An academic expert, Dr. James Fyfe of American University, said the statistics probably reflected two factors beyond the control of law enforcement officials: the weather and the aging of the American population.

Fyfe said some law-enforcement initiatives, such as stiffer sentences and special surveillance of habitual criminals, have been effective in some cities, but that "they have probably had only a marginal effect" on the national crime rate.

The statistics showed that of the serious crimes counted, only robbery increased in 1981, going up 5 percent. Murder was down 3 percent, forcible rape down 1 percent, aggravated assault down 2 percent, burglary down 1 percent, auto theft down 4 percent, and arson down 8 percent.

In the preliminary report released Tuesday, the FBI did not give the actual numbers of crimes reported in each category. Those figures are scheduled to be compiled and published later in the year.

The statistics showed that the leveling-off was almost uniform across the country. The crime rate rose 1 percent in the South, declined 1 percent in the North Central states, and remained the same in the West. Reported 1 percent decreases.

Visit seen as confidence vote

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Painters and gardeners touched up official Kingston for President Reagan's arrival today for an overnight visit seen as a symbolic vote of confidence in Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

Reagan was arriving this afternoon to meet with Seaga, the first foreign leader he welcomed at the White House and a strong supporter of private enterprise. It is the first trip by an incumbent American president to Jamaica or Barbados, the second stop on Reagan's "working vacation."

The president and Mrs. Reagan fly on Thursday to Bridgetown, the capital of Barbados, for a three-day visit with actress Claudette Colbert, an old friend. Before their return to Washington on Easter Sunday, Reagan will meet with Prime Minister J.M.G. "Tom" Adams of Barbados and the leaders of other English-speaking islands in the eastern Caribbean, including St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica and St. Kitts-Nevis.

Seaga said he would talk with the president this afternoon and at a working dinner tonight. But he said he did not expect announcement of new aid beyond Reagan's Caribbean Basin initiative, which would allocate $350 million to the nations of the Caribbean and Central America with about a third going to El Salvador.

"I don't think there is anything left to announce," Seaga said. "Everything in the package is known."

Seaga added he believed chances were "excellent" that Congress would approve the aid plan.

"The Congress on both sides recognizes this as something that is essential to the stability of the area and encouragement of the democratic systems in the area," he said.

Seaga said Reagan, on his fourth foreign trip as president, was taking an "on-the-spot look at what has happened in Jamaica" and added, "It should be very good for us."

The prime minister said his government, which replaced Michael Manley's socialist regime in 1980, managed a "spectacular turnaround" in the nation's economic fortunes in the fiscal year that ended March 31.

He said inflation had dropped to 4.8 percent, from 28 percent the year before; there is a $39-million foreign exchange surplus, the nation's first since 1974.

Volcano destroys one Java village

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Rocks and lava spewing from Galunggung volcano destroyed a village 180 miles southeast of here, leaving 4,000 people homeless, officials said today. They said a small child from the village died after breathing poisonous fumes.

The volcano's first eruption in 64 years sent about 35,000 people fleeing Sunday from the 12 West Javanese villages surrounding the site. The child's death in Langajati village was the only apparent fatality, officials said. Earlier the government said five people had died.

Mining and Energy Minister Subroto said the 9,154-foot-high volcano had been considered inactive since its last eruption in 1918. It also erupted in 1822, killing 4,011 people, and in 1894, when it damaged 50 villages.

Subroto said Sunday's eruption was believed caused by gigantic lava lumps blocking the mouth of one of the volcano's four craters. He said people had been warned not to approach the mountain site until further notice.

Residents of the area said villagers had reported two weeks before the eruption that animals were dying from poisonous fumes emitted by the volcano, but officials took no precautions.

Budget compromise talks on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private negotiations on a possible budget compromise between the White House and members of Congress are temporarily on hold while President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. study the results so far.

Trying to play down his earlier optimistic statements, O'Neill is now saying the president must agree to a change in last year's three-year personal income tax rate cut as part of a compromise.

The Massachusetts Democrat told reporters Tuesday he is unwilling to discuss Social Security spending cuts as long as Reagan insists the tax cut he requested from Congress last year remain intact.

A number of officials have said the prospects for working out a bipartisan budget compromise hinge on Reagan's willingness to accept higher taxes at the same time O'Neill and House Democrats agree to reduce or freeze cost-of-living increases for Social Security.

Reagan has said repeatedly he will not accept any changes in the three-year personal income tax rate cut.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okl., chairman of the House Budget Committee and a participant in the private discussions, said Tuesday he "doesn't underestimate the extreme difficulties" of reaching a compromise.

But Jones added that the negotiators have been discussing options previously ruled "off limits" by "the principals" — Reagan and O'Neill.

Jones stressed, however, that "no substantive agreement has been reached."

He added that Reagan and O'Neill are being briefed on the progress so far and if they decide the talks have been worthwhile the negotiators likely will resume their discussions next week.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he was encouraged by the private talks among top White House aides and key Democrats and Republicans from the House and Senate.

"I have to be encouraged," said Michel, who has attended each of the sessions.

O'Neill, meanwhile, declared: "I am as firm on Social Security as the president is on taxes. And no way are we going to balance the budget on the backs of the senior citizens of America."

In a statement that tempered the upbeat remarks he offered Monday, O'Neill said he was both optimistic and pessimistic about the private negotiations.

Copters will try to reach isolated villages

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — A group of American helicopter pilots planned another attempt today to reach isolated villages on the slopes of the erupting Chichonal volcano in which more than 5,000 peasants may have perished. The chief pilot said he doubted they would be successful.

The 10 pilots flying for Pemex, the Mexican government's oil monopoly, made some triw flights Tuesday. But they could not get near the 4,340-foot volcano because of the clouds of volcanic ash belching up from the crater.

Chief pilot James Ballard said the copters would try again to fly over the five villages on the slopes of the mountain from which nothing has been heard since the eruptions began March 29. But he said the dense clouds of ash would probably force them back because the debris would clog the turbines of their choppers.

The villages are reached normally by trails now blocked by ashes three feet deep from El Chichonal. With villages much further away from the crater deserted because of the ash covering them and roofs of huts collapsed by the accumulation of debris, many officials doubt that anyone is still alive in the isolated settlements.

However, Defense Minister Felix Galvan Lopez said he was still planning to have 150 army paratroopers dropped into the villages with food and medicine "as soon as it is possible."

Twenty-one deaths have been confirmed and more than 500 people were injured in the first week of eruptions from the peak in the Sierra Madre range in southeast Mexico. Towns and villages for miles around have been emptied by more than 60,000 refugees.

Another light eruption Tuesday, which coincided with an earthquake in southern Mexico and Guatemala, poured more debris on the empty towns. Federico Mosser, head of a government geological team, said he believed the volcano "is accumulating rocks and sand" for another major eruption in a few days.

No casualties were reported from the earthquake.

El Chichonal was spewing up a 30,000-foot pillar of ash-filled smoke and steam, and the fallout was spreading for hundreds of miles.

"It is covering everything, trees, houses, the streets," said a resident of San Miguel Acatan, Guatemala, 220 miles away.

Geologists said a new danger was posed by poisonous gases emitted by the volcano. Soldiers were getting sick from the fumes while rescuing farmers, officials said.

Five gifted and talented students take trip

Twenty-four students from nine high schools of the Region XVI Gifted and Talented High School Program and their sponsors from the Panhandle of Texas recently visited Los Alamos, N.M. They visited Los Alamos National Laboratory and archeological sites at nearby Bandelier National Monument.

The group participated in Science Youth Day at Los Alamos National Laboratory. They heard lectures on current major research programs, atom - splitting, laser use, and cryogenics. This was followed by short films on Laboratory history and general research. The students toured three laboratories, cryogenics, solar energy, and the Van de Graff Accelerator. Opportunity was given for the students to see actual experiments in operation and ask questions of the science researchers in charge.

The group went to Bandelier National Monument where they attended a short slide orientation of the area and its archeological significance. Following that, they toured excavated prehistoric Indian pueblo ruins and cave dwellings in Frijoles Canyon.

They spent a day studying New Mexico geology and Paleo - Indian archeology. A park ranger from Bandelier national Monument served as a guide.

They traveled to the Tsansawi Ruins on Pajarito Plateau. These were unexcavated prehistoric Indian ruins on a high mesa overlooking the Rio Grande valley, the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, the Jemez Mountains.

Youths were not handcuffed

DALLAS (AP) — A motorboat designed to carry 600 pounds was "shimmying, bouncing up and down" with six men aboard as it headed for the middle of Lake Mexia, where it capsized and three black teen-agers drowned, says a man who watched from shore.

James Ferguson of Dallas testified Tuesday in the trial of three suspended Limestone County officers charged with misdemeanor negligent homicide in the deaths of the youths, who had been arrested for marijuana possession.

Ferguson was one of several thousand blacks who went to the central Texas lake last June 19 to celebrate Juneteenth, marking the day Texas slaves learned they were free.

He said he shouted the first youth boarding the boat to get off because "the boat was sinking down in the water" with only three men aboard. But said he "backed up" when he realized he might be interfering with law enforcement.

Disaster declaration requested for Paris

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Ronald Reagan has been asked to declare Paris and Lamar County a major disaster area and eligible for federal funds in recuperating from Friday's tornadoes.

Gov. Bill Clements' message Tuesday to the president said preliminary damage estimates totaled $36.1 million, of which $34.7 million was to private non-agricultural properties. Approximately 1,100 homes were damaged or destroyed, he said.

"I have determined that this incident is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the state and the affected local governments and that supplementary federal assistance is necessary," Clements said.

He designated Wesley M. Anders of Austin as the state's coordinating officer for the request. Anders will work with the Federal Emergency Management Agency in continued damage estimates.

The presidential disaster declaration, if issued, would make available a variety of assistance programs including Small Business Administration loans, Farmers Home Administration loans, disaster unemployment assistance, Internal Revenue Service income tax deductions due to losses and individual and family grants of up to $5,000 for those who cannot qualify for loans.

Accused killer wants to beg for mercy

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Rhode Island man accused in a series of bizarre murders of young women says he has since become a Christian and plans to ask a Texas court for mercy.

"He's been saved. He has undergone a spiritual conversion," said the lawyer representing Stephan Peter Morin.

Morin unexpectedly pleaded guilty Tuesday to shooting to death a 21-year-old woman last Dec. 11 in a San Antonio parking lot.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue.

Morin surprised the courtroom when he entered his guilty plea before the scheduled start of testimony after eight days of jury selection.

"I've made peace with my God," Morin said.

Until he was arrested last Dec. 12 in Austin, Morin was on the FBI's list of 10 most-wanted suspects, sought since 1976 on a federal fugitive warrant alleging he brutalized, bound, hung from a ceiling hook, and raped a 14-year-old girl in San Francisco.

Prosecutors said most of the victims were blondes. In all, Morin is accused of killing five young women in five different states, the last being 21-year-old Carrie Marie Scott, 21, of San Antonio.

Despite Morin's guilty plea to the capital murder of Miss Scott, State District Judge David Berchermann Jr. of San Antonio said the prosecution must go ahead and present evidence in the case as though no plea had been entered. He said technically, Morin could withdraw the guilty plea at any time.

Besides that, state law requires that a capital murder conviction cannot rest on a guilty plea alone, but must include corroborating testimony. Conviction of capital murder carries a mandatory sentence of either life in prison or death by lethal injection.

"Our goal is to show that the man is repentant and that he shouldn't get the death penalty," defense lawyer Peter Torres said. "If a man feels like he is repentant, then he's going to express his repentance by saying he's guilty."

Torres said Morin would testify during the punishment phase in hopes of convincing the jury he is sincere in his new-found religion.

"He underwent a Christian conversion. He's coming across straight and clean. Since his arrest last year, he has taken a different outlook on life," Torres said.

The lawyer said he also plans to call Margaret Mayfield Palm, 30, of San Antonio, who said Morin abducted her Dec. 11 and forced her to drive him through police roadblocks in San Antonio when he was fleeing the scene of Miss Scott's murder.

Mrs. Palm has said she was held for 10 hours but spent that time converting Morin to religion and apparently talked him out of killing her. She was released unharmed, and her tip led police to Morin's arrest the next day.

In the first day of testimony, five police officers, the Bexar County medical examiner and a passer-by who witnessed the pre-dawn incident testified.

Morin has given different dates of birth to authorities, but Torres said he is 31 and has been in trouble with the law since he was 12.

State offers compromise on GM rebate incentive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A compromise proposal that would allow General Motors to extend its rebate and low-interest rate car and truck specials to Texas has been approved by the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission.

Assistant Attorney General John Fainter Jr. offered the proposal, noting that the automobile industry "is in a prolonged recovery period."

"It is a very difficult market out there right now," said Tom Ryan of Houston, district sales manager for Ford Motor Co.

The commission, which met in an emergency session requested by the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, voted unanimously Tuesday to withdraw its March 31 rule prohibiting GM's rebate and low-interest rate deals.

It voted to allow such deals temporarily if the company discloses whether the car dealer is covering part of the cost.

The old rule had prohibited rebate or special finance programs that required dealers to contribute part of the savings to the customer.

The rule excluded Texas from GM's nationwide program that offers customers 12.8 percent interest rate financing on cars and 14.2 percent financing on trucks.

Dealers from throughout the state complained to the TADA here to do something. TADA executive director Gene Fondren said last week dealerships along Texas' borders could suffer substantial harm, because prospective customers would go to Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico to buy GM products.

Fondren said financing in Texas had ranged from 15 percent to 18 percent.

He said Tuesday he felt certain that General Motors Acceptance Corp., the financial subsidiary of GM, would "almost immediately" offer the low-interest rate plan in Texas.

Fainter stated that it is important to disclose whether the dealer is covering part of the savings because the "dealer's contribution" could affect the price of the vehicle.

An amendment was added to Fainter's proposal that deleted specific advertising requirements and merely stated that the dealer's participation must be presented "clearly and conspicuously."

Hannah wants tougher rape prosecutions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Saying rape is Texas' fastest increasing crime and the hardest to prosecute, former U.S. Attorney John Hannah has promised to hire special rape prosecutors if he is elected attorney general.

"I intend to immediately hire several of the best prosecutors in Texas with established records in rape trials and make them available to local district attorneys on request," the Tyler Democrat told a Capitol news conference Tuesday.

Hannah also said he might recommend changes in the law to aid prosecutors, such as allowing testimony from other victims of the same rapist, which currently is not allowed under an "extraneous offense" clause in the law.

"I absolutely refuse to believe something cannot be done," Hannah said. "I refuse to believe our only solution and advice to women is to carry mace, wear a whistle or stay locked in their homes."

Appearing with Hannah was Houston municipal Judge Joellen Snow and Jane Wells, head of the Texas Women's Political Caucus, which endorsed Hannah last week.

Last of Krugerrand defendants sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — A four-year prison term has been given to the last man who admitted a role in a scheme to sell counterfeit South African Krugerrands.

David P. Merchant, 45, an Amarillo builder, was sentenced on Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson on a currency transaction violation to which he pleaded guilty on Nov. 17.

Three other people, including a former bank president, also pleaded guilty to various charges in the Krugerrand scheme. Merchant was accused of failing to report cash payments from a financial institution to the Internal Revenue Service. Assistant U.S. Attorney Shirley Baccus-Lobel said the builder faced a maximum five-year prison term and $500,000 fine for the offense.

The judge also sentenced 39-year-old Sidney James Heard to seven years in prison and fined him $1,000. William Kester Lankford was sentenced to four years in prison last week on conspiracy charges related to the scheme.

Robert Finis Ringo, former Tascosa National Bank president, was sentenced to three concurrent one-year federal prison terms.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The reformers try again

The U.S. Senate is now in possession of a study done by the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University (for which we taxpayers paid $116,000) that calls the federal election laws a "bookkeeping nightmare." They have failed to accomplish their purported purposes. The Harvard study offers recommendations that can be best described as a mixed bag, falling far short of the sensible step of repealing the laws outright. Congressional reaction even to the sensible aspects of the study's recommendations is reported to be skeptical. Apparently, incumbents have learned to love a law that many critics have called an Incumbents Protection Act.

The 1971 Federal Election Campaign act and the Watergate-inspired amendments passed in 1974 were supposed to eliminate the influence of big money on the political process, control campaign costs, and make elections squeaky clean. Instead, the law has fostered the influence of single-issue pressure groups, opened the path to corporate and ideological political action committees and made entertainers and artists (who are permitted to give benefit concerts) the new "fat cats." The cost of electioneering has continued to rise, with the taxpayers footing the bill for much of the presidential campaigns.

In addition, of course, the stringent, sometimes arbitrary and sporadically enforced reporting provisions of the law have created the bookkeeping nightmare, in addition to requiring the services of innumerable accountants and attorneys. The law has reinforced inducements to rely more on impersonal media and expensive, advertising than personal campaigning and grassroots organization. In addition, the law has created substantial roadblocks to third-party and independent candidates, even those who renounced in advance the desire to receive federal matching funds from the taxpayers.

The Harvard study, having described a body politic beset with a raging fever and showing symptoms of the onset of cancer, prescribes a couple of aspirin and a Band-Aid or two. It suggests a higher contribution limit for individuals, no spending limits for primary campaigns, a bigger tax credit for small contributors and (surprise, surprise) increased taxpayer subsidies for the whole sordid process. Unfortunately, the people who conducted the Harvard study seem to share some of the assumptions of self-styled reformers who first advocated this set of regulations. The hidden premise is that the process whereby the people choose their representatives to the government that rules them should be controlled by the more civic-minded and responsible among us (and by the government itself) so that the rest don't get out of hand and do embarrassing things. This condescending, paternalistic assumption deserves a full measure of scorn.

It's difficult to imagine anyone being so foolish as to give lots and lots of money to a politician. Nonetheless, in a free society, people should not be prevented by law from indulging in such foolishness. The present election law, called an "outright failure" by the Harvard study, should be repealed outright.

Baby's christening a national event

Surely, the christening of 2-month-old Wiktorja Walesa was one of the most unusual in history.

More than 7,000 Poles overflowed the parish church in Gdansk and filled an adjacent square with a warm upwelling of sympathy and support for Lech Walesa, the interned leader of the Solidarity movement and father of Wiktorja. The sympathies of the Polish church were evidenced by the presence of Bishop Lech Kaczmarek to preside at the baptism.

Despite its deeply religious significance for the devout Walesa family, the christening was, for most of those gathered outside, an occasion of political significance as well, one of the few possible under the iron rule of Poland's martial law. The brave Poles made this clear to the world and also to their military masters by chanting "Give us Lech back," and "Solidarity."

The crowd dispersed quietly, to be sure, and for the moment all Poland is quiet, as it has been for the most part since the army smothered growing political liberalization by imposing martial law on Dec. 13. Lech Walesa and nearly 4,000 other Solidarity leaders and intellectuals are under arrest. Dissent is difficult and dangerous.

But for all its armed strength and Soviet support, the army junta that rules Poland in the name of communism has done no more than hold onto power. It has been unable to improve Poland's ruined economy. Food is scarce, foreign debts unpaid, and the populace disaffected and uncooperative.

Spring is coming now and it will undoubtedly make a difference. Already the cold Polish winter is loosening its grip that kept people indoors. In the streets of Polish cities, underground leaflets are appearing with increasing frequency, and 7,000 Poles defied the state to attend a Walesa family christening.

The huge gathering at little Wiktorja's baptism, it seemed clear in Gdansk that Sunday, was a significant harbinger of things to come in that troubled land.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

Between mid-February and the ides of March this year the middle name for America appeared to be "dilemma." One and all, Republicans, Democrats, businessmen, union bosses, buyers, sellers, home builders, investors, farmers — in short, Johnny Q. — simply didn't know what to do. The nation was on "hold."

Gold lost ground. Money got tighter and interest rates loosened only fractionally. Unemployment worsened, understanding of American foreign affairs in virtually all countries became increasingly confused, and all eyes looked to Washington where the President was demonstrating the stonewall technique and how to spend money in style.

A few weeks earlier, in the Atlantic Ocean, the largest oil drilling platform in the world was smashed in a violent storm. An investigator has reported that a powerful wave blew out a porthole and the sea poured in, flooding underwater pontoons and blowing electrical circuits. It was found that the owners of the rig had neglected to update their Coast Guard certification. If only the notice had been posted, what a different story might have been told!

A similar tragedy was enacted in the South Pacific where the island of Tonga was raked by a typhoon and at least two children were lost at sea. The island of Tonga has never been inspected and certified and, of course, had to anticipate the worst.

In Orange County, Calif., the bright yellow van of Saddleback Dance Center was stolen by an Eagle Rock bank robber who crashed into a wall making his getaway. The police had been notified of the stolen van and had advised the dance studio to phone if they ever saw it again. The crash of the van put the matter on television and viewers phoned with the news that the van had been located. Police efforts are improving.

Oh, what a month it was!

Russel Reade, a 40-year-old biology teacher and chairman of the science department at a Northern California high school, has left his employment to become a partner and the manager of a business known as "The Chicken Ranch Brothel of Pahump, Nevada."

The principal and faculty at the high school have expressed shock and dismay. Reade is trying to keep a low profile, although a forerunner in the same business became popular enough to become the mayor of Sausalito. Earlier this year, Sally Stanford, one-time queen of San Francisco's bordello community, went to her reward while holding office leaving a fortune reportedly at $8 million.

Possibly there is something in the western climate after all.

Melanie Anne King, 22 a prostitute from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was given a courtroom choice — leave town or go to jail. She chose to leave town and the grateful judge shipped her to Los Angeles at taxpayers' expense where she immediately resumed her profession. Government does look out for the small business person.

Dog and cat lovers were clearly thunderstruck when Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, argued that the Reagan defense budget could be cut by $1.4 million if only the provision which covers veterinary services for military personnel was eliminated. It seemed unreasonable to those who love our furry friends for pet owners in the military to pay for inoculations, food inspections and the like. The new slogan appears to be: "Draft me, draft my dog."

Meanwhile, efforts multiplied to deify the military budget and to give to Ed Asner, president of the Screen Actors Guild, and Ron Reagan, former SAG prexy, equal time to make foreign policy. Both appeared willing to fight in a peacemaking effort.

Since many in this country had hailed the efforts of Sir Freddie Laker to provide passage across the Atlantic, crying towels were plentiful when Laker Airways went bust. It was a foul blow against this symbol of free enterprise, it was wailed, and some $5.5 million was pledged from private persons and firms to help Freddie get back in the air.

The ECONOMIST of London has given a slightly divergent view of Freddie's purity as a symbol of the free and unrestrained market. It seems that the American Export-Import Bank and the British government rushed to subsidize loans to allow him to purchase air craft (both American and British) "and so keep aircraft-builders at work."

Freddie is now doing it again with a new organization. It's mighty hard to keep an airline busted for long when it can get subsidized credit from the taxpayers of two countries. Meanwhile, politicians in both Parliament and Congress are aghast at the lack of business and the rate-cutting of all airlines. One airline actually gave away a batch of tickets as a promotional gimmick. This is the kind of rate-cutting that is going to be hard for Freddie to face. His new effort will be at regular rates and the other companies can now undercut him by paying us to fly.

Coming to light was the existence of a super-organization known as the "Association of International Associations." It headquarters in Brussels and claims to have registered 14,792 groups, each of which have offices in at least three different countries.

The AIA lites organizations against burns, radiology, noise, gout, and suicide. There is also an International Organization of Working Witches, and the Federation for World Power endorses slavery. The European Committee for Upholding Heroism promotes Neo-Nazism. But don't give up. There is also the International Committee for the Protection of Planets Against Microbes from Earth, and Global Action for Fair Treatment of Frogs.

According to the WORLD PRESS REVIEW, there is now, in addition, a League for the Encouragement of Humor in International Relations.

Also coming to light was the highly publicized "Jupiter Effect" which came and went with all the impact of a debutante's affections.

Why we have built-in inflation

By OSCAR COOLEY

Several states have constitutions or laws forbidding the state government to end its fiscal period with an unbalanced budget, that is, with expense totaling more than income, resulting in debt.

There is a strong movement in Congress to end deficit financing by the U.S. government. This would be virtually impossible if we are to continue to be a "welfare state," that is, a country in which it is easy to get on the town. The reason for this is in our monetary system. Let us see.

As producers, people produce goods and services and sell them for money. As consumers they buy what they want, paying with money, and consume it.

Once, the money was simply a commodity, such as gold, which people would accept in payment for food, clothing, shelter, etc. The gold, fashioned in coins, was called money. It was really just a metal, provided by labor. By tacit agreement, it was acceptable to everyone. It could always be swapped for goods.

The amount of money one had was limited because the mining of gold is laborious and time-consuming. So it took little money to buy a lot of goods. To increase the money by mining more gold was so laborious that buyers of goods offered, not gold but promises to pay gold in future. These promises being printed on paper were the early form of paper money.

Printing presses turn rapidly, and paper is cheap, so paper money came to be used more and more. It also had the advantage of being light and compact. The paper money might well have been called promise money, for that is what it really was.

Banks found they could lend this promise money, made of paper and costing little to produce, and so they loaned it increasingly. It earned interest just as gold did. Each dollar was simply a promise to pay, but the bankers kept these promises so well that people seldom asked them to.

More and more, the promises were used to pay bills. The money multiplied rapidly, more rapidly than did the goods. So it took ever more dollars to buy each unit of goods. Prices rose.

This is inevitable in a welfare state, because here the government accepts it as a duty to minister to people's welfare. If, at the same time, mass production prevails and many clever machines are invented, as is true today, people often find it difficult to get jobs. They turn to the state for help, and the state, running out of money, makes more by selling bonds to the banks. The flow of money into circulation becomes an ever-rising flood — built-in inflation.

Comeback for rail travel

By PAUL HARVEY

Rail travel phased out when jet travel came in.

First-class trains were unable to compete with first-class airlines in speed, comfort, services.

Now first-class air travel is phasing out and the Orient Express is making a comeback.

May 25 the famed Orient Express will roll again. This onetime eptome of travel luxury will roll from London's Victoria Station to Venice, Italy in 23 hours.

And the Orient Express is already more than half sold out for the entire year!

Food, furnishings and services promise to be as elegant as ever, the original cars renovated $18 million worth.

The ticket will cost $450 one way, slightly more than first-class air travel but, as I say, there is no "first-class" air travel anymore.

Airlines flying backward financially have cut back on amenities. Jumbo-jet passengers are herded like cattle and fed up front little more than the sandwiches they buy in the back.

New airlines configurations shrink seat space and the almonds have become peanuts and the former freebies — newspapers, seconds, mints and such — are altogether gone.

The overdue comeback for rail travel had to start someplace.

It starts in London, May 25. In much of Europe and spreading is a parallel renaissance of intracity rail service, "streetcars."

During the postwar boom of the '40s, mass motorization of the world population put everybody on his own wheels.

Where 79 cities and towns in West Germany had operated streetcars, within 30 years there were only 32.

The trams disappeared and their tracks were torn up and in Hamburg the last line shut down in 1978.

Today, in a dramatic turnaround, 28 cities in West Germany are laying new rail.

In France, where the last streetcar was publicly burned in 1960, a new system is being built at a cost of more than $100 million.

The new streetcars, as the new trains, are a vast improvement over the rattletraps of a generation ago. And the modernized streetcar trend is spreading to North American and Japan and is perceptible most everywhere in the world.

San Diego has a new light rail system and San Jose and Minneapolis are thinking about it.

Why? High fuel costs, high car prices, car traffic congestion, pollution, parking inconvenience.

And operating buses costs more and operating subways costs twice as much — as streetcars. What do you know?

My wife was right. She always said that "If the Lord had meant for us to fly, he'd never have given us railroads!"

Broken freezer ruins experiment

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists anticipated problems in space with a biological experiment conducted on the last space shuttle mission, but they never thought malfunctions on earth would ruin the sample and the test, a space agency spokesman says.

A faulty ground transport freezer allowed frozen blood and kidney cell samples to thaw and spoiled much of an experiment designed to test the process a drug company wants to use to make a costly and difficult-to-produce drug in the weightlessness of space.

"The tests went very well in orbit. But we just ran into problems on the ground," said Dr. Dennis Morrison, principal investigator at the Johnson Space Center.

Two batches of red blood cells and six batches of human kidney cells were processed on the Columbia's eight-day flight and stored in a stainless steel, double-walled cylinder lined with insulation that holds the freezing agent, liquid nitrogen.

Scientists had hoped to use the specimens to produce urokinase, a substance produced on Earth at high cost and used to dissolve blood clots.

Within two hours after the spaceship landed March 30 in the New Mexico desert, the freezer was placed on a training aircraft and flown back to Houston, said NASA spokesman Brian Welch.

But they discovered the samples had thawed when they opened the container Monday, Welch said.

"Of all the things that could have gone wrong," said Dr. Stewart Nachway, chief of the bio-medical applications branch, "the freezer was the last piece of equipment we would have expected to have trouble with."

Space center technicians were trying to determine what caused the freezer to fail.

Scientists said the freezer was designed to store the samples at least 10 days and, in earlier tests, had functioned properly for 12 days.

"Everyone was agast that such a simple piece of equipment would go down," Welch said. "You almost expect to have some glitches come up on the flight, but you don't expect something like this to happen."

Welch said analysis of the kidney cells is impossible now, but he said NASA officials believe on-board photography will provide most of the data they were expecting from the red blood cells, which provided a test for how well the process worked in micro-gravity.

"We have the cell samples and the equipment to try again in the future if circumstances permit," Morrison said.

The experiment was one in a series NASA is conducting to verify theories of manufacturing in space to produce materials which cannot easily be made because of Earth's gravity.

In lowered gravity, cells in a solution will not settle. By applying an electrical current to the samples, the cells are forced to migrate away from each other and allow the development of super-pure drugs.

There are more undocumented workers in Houston and Dallas than in areas where the Hispanic population is larger, such as the Rio Grande Valley, El Paso and San Antonio, Newport said.

The survey so far has found that undocumented workers are more likely to be married than are legal residents, and that most illegal immigrants sought better pay when they came to Texas, while legal residents cited joining family members as the reason for originally coming here.

Legal residents surveyed by the firm reported crossing back and forth across the Texas-Mexico border more often than did the illegal immigrants. And the figures would suggest that about 70 percent of the undocumented workers have been in the state continuously for more than a year.

Storms' severity was surprise

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — It showed up at the strangest times and in the strangest places, catching the Northeast off-guard with an April blizzard and marching on the South hurling ice and snow.

It ravaged the Midwest with Biblical floods and fiendish tornadoes. It washed out California hillsides and froze the fruit on Florida trees.

Very little of the unsinkable winter of '82 went according to plan. It was, in the words of one scientist, "the least predictable" winter weather in five years.

"Frankly, we're baffled by it," said Richard C.J. Somerville, a Scripps Institution of Oceanography meteorology professor who heads the nation's first experimental forecast center.

About 30 of the nation's leading climate experts met privately last week "to understand what happened" this winter, Somerville said in an interview Tuesday. They gathered at Scripps Institution of Oceanography in suburban San Diego, far from the howling winds of the Northeast or the snows of the Midwest.

It was "not a winter characterized by a single regime, or some simple flow pattern that set itself up at the beginning and persisted," Somerville said.

"Several forecasts caught it in general but none predicted the extreme breaking cold, individual details like that," he said.

The winter was not only unusually cold in some places, wet in others and snowy in still others, it also was unusually damaging.

As the Northeast reeled under an astonishing blizzard and portions of the Midwest lay frozen under the coldest weather ever to come along so late in the year, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration put losses at $8.2 billion and more than 350 lives.

"The prolonged winter of 1976-77 was more devastating economically, but this has been an unusually harsh period with its greatest intensity in the six weeks before mid-February," said Malcolm Reid, the agency's supervising meteorologist in Washington, D.C.

The winter produced one of the most severe outbreaks of cold weather America has seen since the 1800s, weather service meteorologist Nolan Duke in Kansas City, Mo., said in January. The Gulf Coast was glazed with ice. Southern cities such as Atlanta were frozen to a standstill at below-zero temperatures and half of southern Florida's winter vegetable crops were lost. The winter brought the coldest weather on record in Chicago, Milwaukee and Akron, Ohio.

Lawmaker scorecards increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — How can lawmakers let the folks back home know how they're voting? There's no shortage of scorecards and if members rate poorly on one list, they need only find another to go to the head of the class.

Political, labor, business and consumer organizations long have been rating members on their voting records. But in recent years the number of report cards has grown by leaps — especially those from single-issue groups.

More than two dozen groups now issue annual ratings of members, ranging from Christian Voice's tabulation on what it calls moral issues to "Shiny Apple" ratings by a nutrition lobby.

As might be expected, members getting good grades from one group often flunk horribly by another's standards.

That often pleases both the high and the low scorers, with conservatives like Sens. John Tower, R-Texas and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., — often as proud of their low ratings by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action as they are for their high marks on conservative lists.

The American Conservative Union, which issued its latest ratings last week, said 76 members of Congress scored a "perfect" 100 percent on selected key votes in 1981 — compared with 16 in 1980. But their ratings also showed the number to score zero had increased from 17 to 77 over the same year.

"Conservatives have become more numerous but a number of people have become more liberal," Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., chairman of the organization, offered in explanation.

The conservative Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, which has more stringent standards for right wingers than even the ACU, awarded John East, R-N.C., with its highest score in the Senate — 91 percent. The group lists him and 27 colleagues — including Majority Leader Howard Baker — as "staunch conservatives."

But it lists 20 senators — including Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Alan Cranston, D-Calif. — as "very liberal," with ratings between 26 and 39. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., with a rating of 24, was given his own category: "radical."

Other groups issuing annual report cards include the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, Ralph Nader's Public Citizen, the moderate Republican Ripon Society, the National Farmers Union, the National Associated Businessmen Inc., the American Security Council, the Americans for Constitutional Action and the National Taxpayers Union.

Political overtones at union meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Republican Party, concerned about the increasing alignment of major union leaders with the Democrats, is embarking on a sales campaign to lure labor's active participation in the GOP.

Richard Richards wants to create a labor advisory committee within the Republican Party's hierarchy, somewhat akin to the labor council established recently to advise the Democratic National Committee.

That panel has attracted 20 top union leaders, who unabashedly identify themselves with the Democratic Party and are working to defeat Republicans at the polls in November.

Richards was to address delegates to the building trades union convention today. He was added to the conference itinerary at his own request after the programs were printed.

Jennifer Hillings, a spokeswoman for the Republican Party, said Richards "asked if he could talk to them." She said he would discuss giving organized labor a voice in internal GOP affairs.

The construction union leaders also were to hear an address today by Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

About three weeks ago, Richards hosted a private meeting at the White House, outlining his plans for officials of five labor organizations, including the construction trades department of the AFL-CIO.

Robert F. Bonitati, a White House labor adviser, had said last week that the Republican Party is thinking about hiring a union liaison staff person at national headquarters here and opening a spot on the party's executive committee for a labor representative.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who has had close ties to the union movement, told conference delegates he has no plan to bolt the Republican Party. He said instead that the GOP should work hard "to earn the support" of organized labor.

Task force hears illegal alien study results

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Most illegal aliens in Texas head for Dallas or Houston rather than areas that have largely Spanish-speaking populations, and most want to become U.S. citizens, a state panel has been told by researchers.

The Governor's Task Force on Immigration, headed by Texas Tech University President Lauro Cavazos, also was told Tuesday that for the first time, the state has a dependable estimate of the number of undocumented workers living in Texas — between 600,000 and 900,000.

Dr. Frank Bean of the University of Texas said that number is narrowed down a lot more than a U.S. Census study that put the estimate of Texas' illegal residents at between 50,000 and 1.7 million.

Bean said his study combined two different methods of counting illegal immigrants to arrive at that figure. One method involved taking the 1970 count of Mexican-Americans in the state, developing an estimate of the number there should be 10 years later according to standard mortality, birth and migration rates, then subtracting that number from the 1980 census count.

The other used the 1980 Mexican census and applied expected sex ratios for age groups thought to produce the biggest number of emigres. Researchers basically counted the number of people who weren't there.

Meanwhile, using contacts in trade associations, the Houston firm of Lance Tarrance and Associates has been surveying both legal and illegal Mexican residents of Texas and found that about half would like to become U.S. citizens.

So far, said Frank Newport, surveyors have questioned only about 800 people, and only 10 percent of those are illegal immigrants.

Falling gold price hurting Lead, S.D.

LEAD, S.D. (AP) — The economic health of this Black Hills town that sits atop the richest gold mine in North America is as good as gold — and that spells trouble.

Falling gold prices have hit hard on the mining town of Lead. Thirty-three workers lost their jobs April 1 at the Homestake Mining Co., the first layoffs at the mine in 40 years. The remaining 1,650 Homestake workers — whose earnings are tied to the price of gold — will see a slight drop in their paychecks.

The Homestake mine, which produces about 30 percent of the gold mined in the United States each year, is the largest industrial employer in western South Dakota. It paid $40.8 million in wages last year.

Everyone here either works for Homestake, is a dependent of someone who works for the company, or lives on income earned by providing services to the mine and its workers.

Homestake estimates that 11,000 people in the Black Hills depend on the gold mine and its employees for a substantial portion of their income.

Because of dropping gold prices, the gold mine in Lead — the largest of several mines owned by the San Francisco-based Homestake Mining Co. — lost $120,000 in February, said mine spokesman Scott Zieske. The monthly loss was the first suffered by the mine since 1976.

The price of gold, which peaked at about $850 an ounce in January 1980, is carried each day on the front page of the local newspaper, the Lead Daily Call. By the end of last week, the price of gold had fallen to $329 in New York.

Gold prices have been depressed lately because of large sales by two major producers, the Soviet Union and South Africa. The Soviets, who own large stores of gold, needed cash to finance purchases of Western grain because of a bad domestic crop, and to assist, according to some analysts, Poland with its debt repayments to the West. South Africa has been selling gold in order to raise cash to alleviate a balance of payments problem.

In addition, OPEC nations have been selling gold to raise cash to operate their governments, usually financed by revenue from petroleum sales. That revenue is down because of the worldwide oil glut.

"People here are watching the gold price more than anywhere else in the country, because it affects them most," said Gordon Renner, who heads the staff of the United Steel Workers union local at the mine.

"The price of gold is a hot topic, it's on everybody's mind," said Bill Waugh, a member of the executive board of the Lead Chamber of Commerce and a supermarket manager.

"It kind of scares us," Waugh added. "One way or another, everything in Lead is connected with Homestake."

The elimination of 33 jobs at the mine marks the first time since 1942 that anyone has been laid off at Homestake. At that time, the mine was ordered closed by the government for the duration of World War II. Before that, the only layoffs took place in 1936, and involved very few men.

"I was flabbergasted at the layoffs," Renner said. "I think the company could have absorbed the people in the mine."

More layoffs could come if gold prices fall further, and the mine could be forced to shut down, said Al Winters, mine general manager.

"You eventually reach a point of no return," when losses make it impossible to keep mining, Winters said. "Our goal, of course, is to maintain full operations, increase production and productivity.... We're looking to try to determine other areas we can cut down."

It costs the mine $365 to produce an ounce of gold, Winters said. It was necessary to eliminate the 33 jobs to drive down the cost of production nearer to the price of gold, he said.

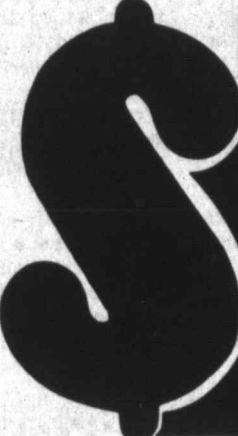

"We've got to run this place at a profit or a break-even point," Winters said. "We can't lose money."

Low gold prices also spell a loss in pay for Homestake workers.

Normally you like to operate independently, but this coming year you may seek for a partnership with one who is equally capable. You'll make a good team.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Hard feelings will result if you make promises to another today and then try to back out of them at the last minute. Stand by your word even if it hurts. Predictions of what to expect in each of the seasons following your birthday are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to include birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Co-workers could cause you problems today if they are not handled diplomatically. Strive to work in harmony with others, not against them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Doing your own thing is admirable, provided it doesn't hurt or inconvenience others. Don't cause complications with pals today by being too independent.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be supportive of family members and relatives today. Above all, don't compare them to outsiders if the comparison would put them in an unfavorable light.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There's a chance today you could be so intent upon making your points that you'll fail to see any merit in the ideas or views of others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're pretty sharp at recognizing bargains, but if you're not careful you may make a bum deal today. Don't believe everything the salesperson says.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Think for yourself today, especially where important decisions are concerned. Don't let others decide for you in areas where you are more knowledgeable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Think your moves through carefully today where work is concerned, or you might make your tasks far tougher than they should be. Plan ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do nothing today that is not in line with your highest standards, even though your peers may encourage you to do otherwise. Know when to say "no."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Let your accomplishments speak for themselves today, rather than tout your own horn. Others will be well aware of your achievements.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you challenge the position of another today, be sure you have all the facts to back up your case. Don't use hearsay information.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be prepared to stand up for your rights today if you feel you have something coming to you that is being withheld. A squeaking wheel gets the oil.

Apostles vow to stay, but fearful fall away

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the third part of a five-part Easter series presented in metrical style as prompted by many Scripture passages. With some slight but not substantial variations in some Scripture quotations to maintain the rhythm, this installment deals with the arrest.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

At a house deemed safe, they filed upstairs, to the lamplit second floor, and they settled down to enjoy a repast, by Jesus' twelve-man corps.

It's a night remembered, never dimmed, with its strange and moving fare, but before they started to share in that meal, a tension filled the air.

A betrayer sits with us, he said, in a tone that sounded doom. They inquired of him, "Is it I? Is it I?" And Judas left the room.

Then he broke the bread, dividing it, and dispensed the parts to eat; it's "my body," he said, which is "given for you," a startling sort of treat.

It was awesome then, still awesome now, in its sequence year-on-year, for it means to many he always imparts, his presence now and here.

A decanter raised, he poured the wine, for his silent, watching men, and averred it's "blood," the bequest of his life, "poured out to pardon sin."

They consumed that nurture, crops of earth, yet enfolding mystery, and however grasped he enjoined it be done, in "recollecting me."

He's the "living bread" that fills, he said, the lasting spring run rife; he's the "bread of God" and the drink that endures, to boost "the world's life."

But the shadows danced across that room, and he breathed a weary sigh, for the "Son of man" is assigned for the rack, by which he'll shortly die.

The impulsive Peter slammed the boards, and declared he'd be there too; if it's prison, death or whatever transpires, "I'm set to go with you!"

But his teacher knew and softly said, that "before the cock crows twice," you'll be swept along in a buffeting tide, and "you'll deny me thrice."

Yet the headstrong Peter still maintained, and so did all the rest, that they'd die before they'd ever retreat. They wouldn't pass that test.

In a little while, he'd part from them, with their apprehension doubled. You should know "I go to prepare you a place... Let not your hearts be troubled."

He disclosed a fresh commandment then, an imperative brand new, that whatever comes you're to "love one another," the way that "I've loved you."

He assured they'd not be left alone, in their subsequent endeavor, but he'd send the counseling "Spirit of truth," to "dwell with you forever."

In the quiet he pushed his cup aside, as he resolutely stood, to announce his "hour" was approaching near. They'd head for yonder wood.

They departed then in worried mood, to traverse the trembling night. In a vague unrest they accompanied him, that grandest Israelite.

He's the "vine," he said, that stems from God, and "you're the branching" shoots, so "abide in me" just as "I am in you," to bear enduring fruits.

Through the empty streets, the city's gate, through the camps beyond they walked, through the Kidron valley and up toward the mount, and while they walked he talked.

That "my joy's in you" to brace your hearts, in the face of what impends, "a greater love has no man than just this": he gives "his life for friends."

For "you're my friends" forevermore; if you're scorned, abused, accused, just recall what happens to him in the world, that he is victim first.

This disturbed them now; he saw their gloom, and pronounced it passing sorrows. "You will weep, lament" but the tears become joy, on brightened, new tomorrows.

In the world the tribulation comes, but it shouldn't make you glum. Just press ahead with resolve and good cheer, for "I have overcome."

As they climbed the wooded Mount of Olives, to the old, unused vinepress, he abandoned talk and withdrew in his thoughts, beneath some inner stress.

In a clearing high among the trees, where their rendezvous were many, a deserted garden was there by the press. They'd reached Gethsemane.

You're to "sit while yonder I go pray." A regret now laced his breath. Just "remain and watch" for "my soul is downcast," down "even unto death."

In the moonlit haze that swathed that place, the apostles felt distressed. But despite their worry they nevertheless, reclined to take a rest.

As he walked apart he bowed his head, on his face a kind of shine. It's "the hour, my father ... I've made your name known," and thus "all mine are thine."

In the truth now "sanctify them" all, that to it they always cleave, and may "they be one" just as "we are but one," that "the world may believe."

For a while he stood in reverie. On return his face was bleak, but his men now slept in a spirit that wills, but oh, "the flesh is weak."

So "you couldn't watch for me one hour?" And again, he strode away, to collapse in sobs on a slab of white rock, in blood-flecked tears to pray.

It is fully "Father" up to thee, but "remove this cup of mine," if "thou art willing" for it to be done. "Yet not my will but thine."

For a time he lay in shaking moans, but at length he rose, half numb. He aroused his men from their negligent sleep. "Enough! My hour has come!"

From the woods came sounds of clanking arms, a scrambling through the trees, the advancing tramp of militia and then, a thin but chilling breeze.

They emerged, a hundred Roman troops, with some priests who gave a hiss, and Judas rushed and embraced the accused, betrayed by sham — a kiss.

The platoon, its adjuncts, came ahead, and so Peter flashed his sword. He sliced an ear to the screams of the mob. "No more!" his Lord deplored.

Put your sword away, he snapped with edge, for its users die by it.

State reassess crime agencies

EDITOR'S NOTE — The federal agency which had granted states the money to help fight crime, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, goes out of existence the end of this month. Here's a national look at what the states are planning to replace the LEAA money in these cost-conscious times.

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP News Features Writer

With the demise of the federal agency that provided their money, many state law-enforcement commissions are disbanding. Others are still in existence, and how they fare may provide an insight into the potential success of the Reagan administration's New Federalism.

The reason for the shuffle is the phaseout of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which between 1968 and 1980 appropriated nearly $8 billion to states for police departments and ancillary facilities like courts, prisons and probation departments. Its offspring were the state commissions, set up to parcel out money coming in from Washington.

The LEAA dies April 30, victim of a consensus reached during the Carter administration that it was too cumbersome, too wasteful, too bureaucratic. As a result, many of the state commissions set up to handle the money and paperwork are also dying.

But not all. Some states have absorbed the best features of the LEAA into their own budgets, running them from the governor's or attorney general's office or public safety and state police departments. Others have found enough state money to make the commissions permanent. Many are waiting for some federal program — several proposals are pending in Congress — to replace the LEAA.

That development portends what President Reagan proposed in his State of the Union Address — turning over heretofore federal programs to the states.

"What's happening in the states certainly could be a portent of the future if the new federalism goes through," says Gwen Holden of the National Criminal Justice Association, a Washington advocate of the disparate state law-enforcement agencies.

"The LEAA was a classic case of the block grant — here's the money, you hand it out. Now the burden is on the states. They're going to have to decide what gets priority in criminal justice and the related social services. In a way, having less money can help. When there's money, everybody's jumping in looking for his piece of the pie."

Ms. Holden is one of many law-enforcement professionals who concedes that LEAA's time has come.

Created as a response to widespread urban rioting in the late '60s, the agency in its early years poured millions into anti-riot equipment like armored personnel carriers for small cities and counties with problems little worse than teen-agers congregating on street corners.

It was also the kind of bureaucracy that's an easy target for budget-cutters. Self-perpetuating, it created a new layer of government whose function was to serve simply as a conduit, and generated bundles of paper. One example: the 1968 law creating the agency covered 10 pages in the Congressional Record; an amendment passed in the mid-'70s covered 80 pages.

Moreover, for whatever reason, the crime rate rose steadily during the LEAA's lifetime.

Defenders of the federal concept say its most enduring contribution may have been to get law-enforcement officials thinking about coordinating efforts.

"I don't think many people are sorry to see the LEAA go," says Ms. Holden. "But something ought to replace it. You have to realize that if you parole someone from prison, that has an effect on the probation departments and may have an effect on the crime rate. I think the LEAA got people to acknowledge that what happens in one area of law enforcement has relevance in another."

What's emerging in the LEAA's place reflects the cost-consciousness of the '80s.

In the LEAA's heyday, money went to both high- and low-crime states. For example, New Hampshire — with the eighth lowest crime rate in the nation in the latest FBI figures — got nearly $25 million in 12 years. More than a third went to police departments for equipment, renovation, and communications. The rest was distributed among the state prison and probation system, juvenile programs, courts and mental hospitals.

Now the New Hampshire agency is gone, though a legacy remains — new equipment, new technology, interdepartmental communication. Similar legacies remain in other states whose crime commissions are going out of business. Oregon, for example, will shut down its Law Enforcement Council on June 30, but a $1.9 million computerized law-enforcement data system will remain.

Some states have absorbed their independent agencies into existing departments like the state attorney general's office or the state police. Some have continued independent with state funds or funds from court fees.

Watson predicts treacherous greens at Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Defending champion Tom Watson says he won't be surprised if the 46th Masters Golf champion shoots above par because of fast greens.

"Treacherous does not describe them," Watson said Tuesday. "They're almost impossible right now."

Watson, the only two-time winner on the professional tour this year, generally is regarded as the favorite in this elite, international field of 76 that will begin the chase for the season's first major championship on Thursday over the picturesque 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course.

Watson, who also won here in 1977, says he's "playing well, but I'm concerned like everybody else about my efforts on the greens."

"I like them fast, as long as they don't get too fast," he added. "If you're on the wrong side of the hole here, your goose is cooked. Hitting a 30-footer is like hitting a 5-footer."

He said he expected very few scores under par this week and "if we get much wind, even par or 1 over might win."

It usually takes a below-par figure to capture this championship. Only three Masters champions have failed to break par, the last time in 1966 when Jack Nicklaus claimed the third of his record five Masters with an even-par total.

Jackie Burke Jr. and Sam Snead each won with 289 scores in 1956 and 1954, respectively.

Watson, who won earlier in the year at Los Angeles, was victorious in his last start at the Heritage before taking a week off to work on his short game.

Watson said that windy conditions compounding the problem would be an advantage for the short hitter.

He cited Tom Kite as one to watch this week. Kite, who won the Bay Hill Classic in a playoff, currently is second on this season's money list with $155,392.

Nicklaus, regarded by many as the best player the game has ever had, hasn't won in six outings this year, but he always ranks among the favorites at Augusta.

Jerry Pate, who tops the 1982 money list with $160,447, also must be considered one of the top contenders along with Johnny Miller, who tied for second last year and historically plays this course well.

Among others who must be considered are 1976 champion Raymond Floyd, Hale Irwin, Bill Rogers and Craig Stadler.

Only two foreign players have ever won the Mastrs — South African Gary Player, a three-time winner, and Spain's Seve Ballesteros, who won here two years ago.

Two Australians could figure in the picture before this 72-hole test ends Sunday — Greg Norman and David Graham.

Little league tryouts continue

Little League and Farm League tryouts will continue today at 5:30 p.m. at Optimist Park.

A chilly day greeted the excited group who kicked off the tryouts yesterday. Their enthusiasm was not hampered by the weather as the coaches watched candidates field ground balls, throw, hit and run.

Tryouts are scheduled to conclude Thursday at 5:30 p.m. and will be followed by the annual player auction at which every player trying out will be assigned to a Little League team or a Farm League team.

"Most of the kids trying out yesterday were 10 years old," said Bob Dixon, president of the National Little League.

"We are hoping that more of the 11 and 12 year olds will come out today and tomorrow."

The program is open to boys and girls who are 10, 11 or 12 years old as of July 31, 1982.

FIRST OF SEASON. Catcher Darrell Porter of the St. Louis Cardinals is all smiles as he crosses home in the first inning of the National League opener at Houston Tuesday night. Porter hit a three-run homer to right field. The Cardinals won, 14-3. (AP Laserphoto)

Cards pound Astros in season opener

HOUSTON (AP) — About one hour after the season opener between St. Louis and Houston, a black cat crossed the path Astros hitters had to take to the batter's box.

It was far too late for the feline to bring any bad luck to the Astros — they had already crossed paths with the Cardinals, who banged out 18 hits and embarrassed the pennant hopeful Astros 14-3 Tuesday night before a disgruntled home crowd of 33,521 fans that was jeering before the season was one inning old.

Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter, recovering quickly from being hit on the elbow by a pitched ball on Sunday, gave the Astros their first taste of impending doom with a three-run home run in the five-run first inning off stunned Astros starter Nolan Ryan, trying to repeat his 1981 performance.

"It was an opening day home run off Nolan Ryan and it was a good feeling," Porter said simply. "I didn't even think about the elbow today. It started to stiffen on me... but the long delays between innings helped."

The Cardinals spent most of the game waiting to hit while the Astros flailed away in the field, committing two errors. Every Cardinal starter got at least two hits except third baseman Steve Braun and pitcher Bob Forsch, who got one each. In addition to his home run, Porter hit one of seven Cardinals.

"Nothing I did was right," said Ryan, who pitched a career record fifth no-hitter and led the major league in earned run average last season. "The only thing that looked reasonable was the change-up. After I hung the curve to Porter I started overstriding. I never could do anything with my curve ball or my fast ball. I never got close enough to do anything with it."

In addition to Porter's first inning homer, Braun had a run-scoring single and Ozzie Smith scored a run on a fielder's choice groundout.

Garth Iorg keyed a four-run fourth inning with a two-run double giving Forsch a comfortable cushion with which to ease his uncomfortable pitching motion.

"I really didn't have a good fast ball. I was always pitching from behind," Forsch said. "I just laid it in there and let them hit it and we had some great defensive plays in the field."

Forsch also was appreciative of his team's offensive work.

"Teams come to Houston and don't score that much all year off these guys," Forsch said. "You don't expect that many runs off Nolan Ryan."

Forsch said the long wait between innings didn't bother his pitching. "I'd love to have that long a wait between innings if we can score that many runs," he said.

The black cat that made its balated trek to the Astros' dugout, came from the direction of the Cardinal dugout.

The Astros hope to send it back when the series resumes tonight.

Rick Mahler knocked Phil Niekro out of an Opening Day pitching assignment with a freak batting practice accident and his conscience bothered him for nine days.

"I thought about that right up to the game. I hated it," said Mahler, who was given the starting assignment Tuesday night after injuring Niekro's ribs with a line drive off his bat during a spring training workout.

Spurred by determination to atone for the mishap, the 28-year-old right-hander hurled a two-hitter to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 1-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Making the most of his first season-opening start, Mahler retired 17 consecutive San Diego batters between the second and eighth innings on the way to the first shutout and second complete game of his checkered career.

Once the game started, Mahler said he put the Niekro incident out of his mind. His shutout was preserved by three defensive gems that kept him in control.

"The defense made every play you could possibly make," said Mahler, who struck out seven and walked three.

Left fielder Dale Murphy was responsible for two hit-saving catches, and right fielder Claudell Washington crashed against San Diego's newly-shortened outfield wall to snare to line drive off the bat of Luis Salazar. Murphy made a diving catch of a Juan Bonilla liner in the third and robbed Sixto Lezcano of extra bases in the fourth with a twisting grab near the wall.

Luis Salazar's second-inning single and a ninth-inning double by Rupert Jones accounted for San Diego's only hits.

In other National League action, the St. Louis Cardinals walloped the Houston Astros 14-3 and the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 4-3. Two games were called by snow — Montreal at Pittsburgh and New York at Philadelphia.

In the American League, Seattle whipped Minnesota 11-7 and Oakland Athletics beat California 3-2 in 11 innings. Four games were postponed by bad weather — Toronto at Detroit, Texas at New York, Boston at Chicago and Cleveland at Milwaukee.

Darrell Porter's three-run homer in a five-run first inning started St. Louis to an easy victory over Houston and Nolan Ryan.

Ryan, 11-5 last season, including a record fifth career no-hitter, was no match for Cardinal starter Bob Forsch, who scattered seven hits in eight innings, including solo home runs in the sixth inning by Alan Ashby and in the seventh by Art Howe. Porter also collected one of seven Cardinal doubles.

"It might have been good to save some of those runs for tomorrow night but I don't think we'll have any trouble scoring runs this season," Porter said. "We won't always have it this good. It was just a great day for us and a frustrating day for them."

Forsch, despite delivery problems, mastered the weak-hitting Astros until he tired in the eighth.

"Teams come in to Houston and don't score that much all year against these guys," Forsch said. "You just don't expect that many runs off Nolan Ryan."

Dusty Baker's bases-loaded single through a drawn-in infield in the ninth inning lifted Los Angeles over San Francisco in the World Champions' opener at Dodger Stadium.

Bill Russell led off the Dodgers' ninth with a double off loser Gary Lavelle, the third of four San Francisco pitchers. One out later, Steve Sax singled and pinch-hitter Ron Roenicke walked intentionally to load the bases. Greg Minton replaced Lavelle and Baker hit the first pitch between third and short for the winning run.

AL roundup

Maler-led Mariners rap Twins, 11-7

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Earlier this week, Jim Maler got rapped as a bad batter by his Seattle Mariner teammates.

Tuesday night, he did his best to change their minds by driving in five runs with three hits, including his first major league homer, to lead the Mariners to an 11-7 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"I just kept listening to the coaches and changing a few things," said the rookie first baseman who struggled through a spring hitting slump and was voted the "worst hitter" to make the 25-man roster.

"I had been putting pressure on myself and coaches just told me to relax and do what I could do. It finally sank in. I just went into tonight knowing it starts all over."

While Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann postponed judgment on Maler, he did have some thoughts about the Twins' new home — the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome — which inspired five home runs and attracted 52,279 fans to its inaugural regular-season game. The crowd was the largest baseball audience in Minnesota history.

"This place has got a chance of being the Kingdom in home runs," he said. "You play in here and you just have to keep going."

Minnesota third baseman Gary Gaetti hit two of them, including a three-run job that tied the score 4-4 in the fourth. In the fifth, the Mariners took the lead for good as Julio Cruz scored on a sacrifice fly by Bruce Bochte.

The Mariners scored again in the sixth on Maler's sacrifice fly and added four more runs in the seventh on an RBI double by Al Cowens and a three-run double by Maler. Cowens added a solo home run for Seattle in the ninth.

In the only other AL game played Tuesday night, the Oakland A's edged the California Angels 3-2 in 11 innings.

Four games were postponed by bad weather. Snow wiped out the Texas-New York contest, while the Toronto-Detroit, Boston-Chicago and Cleveland-Milwaukee games were postponed by cold.

In the National League, Los Angeles beat San Francisco 4-3. St. Louis walloped

Houston 14-3 and Atlanta trimmed San Diego 1-0. Snow postponed the Montreal-Pittsburgh and New York-Philadelphia contests.

A's 3, Angels 2
Davey Lopes drew a bases-loaded walk from California pitcher Don Aase with two out in the 11th inning to force in the winning run in Oakland's victory over the Angels.

Aase walked Dwayne Murphy, the A's leadoff hitter in the 11th, but retired the next two batters before Wayne Gross singled, sending Murphy to third. Jim Spencer was walked intentionally to load the bases.

Lopes, the former Los Angeles Dodgers' second baseman playing his first AL game, fell behind 0-2 on the count and then took four straight balls. Aase was outraged over umpire Durwood Merrill's call on the third ball, but the next pitch was outside by almost a foot.

GOING BROKE. David Clark, the mayor of Paw Paw, W.Va., says his community located in West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle, not far from the District of Columbia, may go broke if it doesn't find a way to pay a $10,500 award to a motorist who sued the town. Clark says the fine comes close to the town's total annual budget.

$10,500 bill puts tiny town near bankruptcy

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
PAW PAW, W.Va. (AP) — Being the mayor of Paw Paw means everything from chasing stray dogs to cutting the grass at the town cemetery. But David Clark never thought the job would also leave the very survival of the town in his hands.

Perched on the Potomac River where it slices between West Virginia and Maryland, the tiny community is wondering how long it can go on being a town if it can't pay a $10,500 bill. The bill stems from 1978, when the former police chief chased a motorist who later won a lawsuit against Paw Paw.

While $10,500 would be the price of a coffee break to a large city, Clark says the bill is likely to break the bank — although as he points out, Paw Paw doesn't even have a bank.

Paw Paw has been in a slow decline ever since the last of the Union troops stationed there during the Civil War marched away. A few stores and a funeral home huddle at the single crossroads in the center of town, where fresh flowers are placed regularly at the monument to the local men who died in World War I.

Jobs are scarce and most people commute across winding mountain roads to jobs in Virginia and Maryland. The students from the tiny high school — which graduated 13 seniors last year — leave home quickly.

Clark says the town had been trying to slow the downward slide. A new water system was built with a federal grant and there was even talk of attracting industry.

But then came the night in May 1978 when Charles H. Harbaugh of Berryville, Va., drove through town.

Police Chief Lawrence Sherman stated in court documents that he clocked Harbaugh doing 47 mph in a 25 mph zone. A chase ensued with Sherman stopping Harbaugh three times only to see him speed off again each time the chief got out of the cruiser.

The chase spilled over into Maryland where local authorities, after being radioed by Sherman, stopped Harbaugh. After a night in a Maryland jail, Harbaugh was released after a judge ruled that Sherman lacked jurisdiction in Maryland.

Clark, who was not mayor at the time, said the incident went unnoticed in Paw Paw. Then a year ago, another police officer said he clocked Harbaugh driving above the speed limit on his way through town. Again a chase across the hills ensued with police from West Virginia and Virginia joining in before the driver eluded them.

Clark, who also serves as justice of the peace, found Harbaugh guilty in absentia and notified Virginia authorities, who suspended his driving license for three weeks. Harbaugh responded with a $1.3 million lawsuit, alleging his constitutional rights had been violated during the first chase.

After a trial in Baltimore, a jury awarded Harbaugh damages and legal costs amounting to $10,500 — a sum almost half of the town's annual $25,000 budget. The decision bewilders Clark.

"I didn't feel the town should be held liable for a police officer's actions," he said. "I can't see how the jury found any fault against the town."

Most of Paw Paw's 600 or so residents, according to Clark, didn't know about the case until the town got the bill. In a community where the local tax of a few dollars per family hasn't been raised in 30 years, the sum seemed impossible.

"This is the biggest headache we've had in a long time," Clark said. "I'd been lying if I didn't tell you this hadn't taken something out of me."

Mark Davis, Sherman's lawyer, said his client would not answer any questions about the incident.

The suit is headed back to court because Harbaugh is not satisfied with the award. Clark says the town may end up paying even more.

The problem of footing the bill is frequently mulled over in Jerry Kline's general store, where the shelves are crowded with everything from bacon to aging posters from the Saturday Evening Post.

Kline says no one has yet come up with a solution. "Nobody likes it. Nobody thinks it's fair," he said.

Most of the townspeople, in fact, don't believe Paw Paw should pay up.

"They don't know what they're going to do," said a clerk at the local liquor store. "But everyone says they aren't going to pay."

Instead, people look to Clark for an answer. The mayor, a quiet man, shook his head and said, "I guess they have a lot of faith in me."

Clark said the town tried selling its old pump house to raise the money, but the only offer was rejected as too low. About the only other property Paw Paw has is the cemetery, where Clark and the town commissioners take turns cutting the grass.

The mayor said that a woman in Virginia recently had sent in a contribution to help with the expense and that the money would be deposited in a bank pending the outcome of the second court case. Clark declined to name the lone donor and would not discuss the amount received.

Clark, who is paid $25 a month, says small towns aren't equipped to deal with such modern problems. People who still nod to strangers on the street find the idea of insurance against lawsuits outlandish, he said.

Such insurance would cost Paw Paw $1,100, said Clark. "It's almost impossible. But it sure makes you want to scratch hard to come up with the money to guard against this," he said.

THE ROGER WAGNER CHORALE has thrilled audiences from Japan to Rome to Amarillo. Their recording "Virtuoso" has not only been widely received, but also won a Grammy Award.

Roger Wagner recognized throughout the World

Roger Wagner, during his long and illustrious career, has received a plethora of signal honors from his city, country, the nation and throughout the world. In 1953 Wagner and his Chorale were invited to participate at the coronation festivities of Elizabeth II in London.

In 1959 and again in 1964 he and the Chorale were selected to represent the United States in concerts throughout Latin America.

In 1966 the United States State Department, through its Cultural Exchange Program, again sent the Chorale on tour to the Middle East, Turkey, Yugoslavia, France and Italy.

In Rome, he and the Chorale had the honor of singing for Pope Paul VI at an audience in St. Peter's Basilica - the first non-Italian choir to do so in the twenty-five years. In January, 1973, Roger Wagner shared the podium with Eugene Ormandy to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Los Angeles Master Chorale at the Inaugural Concert at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D. C.

In May, 1973, Dr. Wagner served as guest conductor of major symphonies during a month-long tour of the Soviet Union with the Master Chorale, where "he made a notable impact on the Soviet musical world."

In July, 1976, Dr. Wagner conducted the New Philharmonic Orchestra and the Chorale of Radio France in concerts in Paris, during the Festival de Paris. The prestigious Paris publication "Le Monde" wrote "under his dynamic direction, Roger Wagner emerged extremely precise, devoid of all stiffness and complaisance."

Roger Wagner and his Chorale were invited to participate in the Israeli Festival in August, 1976. The Chorale was critically acclaimed for its performances in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, Caesarea and Haifa. In commemoration of the Chorale's outstanding participation in the Israeli Festival, Wagner was awarded the Knesset silver medal of the state of Israel.

In July and September 1977, Dr. Wagner conducted the New Philharmonic and Radio France Chorale in two performances in the Royal Chapel of Versailles.

During the summer of 1978 he conducted the Radio France Orchestra and Chorale when he shared a tour of Japan with Lorin Maazel and composer Oliver Messiaen.

The week of September 11 he was again on the Radio France Orchestra podium. The program, broadcast throughout Europe, was Gershwin's "American in Paris," four excerpts from Copland's "Rodeo," a Corelli Suite and Three Dances by Maurice Durufle.

The 1979 summer found Dr. Wagner and the chorale on an impressive tour of South American cities. From Mexico City their stops included, among others, Honduras, Panama City, Guayquil, Lima, Santiago, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo. Concerts were presented between June 15 and July 15.

In spring 1980, Dr. Wagner and Chorale toured Korea and Japan. While in Japan, the Chorale made a Digital recording "I Dream of Jeannie" with Toshiba, EME. In fall, 1980, Dr. Wagner again set abroad to conduct in Goteberg, Sweden.

Dr. Wagner holds a full professorship in the Music Department of the University of California, Los Angeles. Of the many recordings which he has made, it is especially notable that his album, "Virtuoso," received a Grammy Award.

Internationally acclaimed Roger Wagner Chorale to perform Wednesday evening

The Roger Wagner Chorale will be the final concert of the 1981-82 Pampa Community Concert season. The performance will begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 8 in the M. K. Brown auditorium. New memberships purchased for the 1982-83 Community Concert season may also attend this performance by presenting the ticket stub receipt they received.

The Roger Wagner Chorale began as a twelve-member madrigal group in 1946 and has since become the premiere vocal ensemble of America and the possessor of an enviable international reputation.

Invited to perform in London as part of the coronation festivities for Queen Elizabeth II, the Chorale made its first trip abroad, singing at London's Royal Festival Hall and then performing in Paris, Amsterdam and the Hague.

The Chorale has, since then, toured every state in the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii, made three tours of South America, three tours of Japan, a second European tour and tours of the Middle East and the Soviet Union. The latter conducted in the spring of 1974, was termed by the State Department as, "one of the most successful exhibitions of American culture displayed in the Soviet Union since the cultural exchange program between the two countries was initiated in 1958."

During the 1976-77 season the Chorale made four separate tours, including two of its special half-week residencies, a Midwest bicentennial tour, a West Coast Christmas tour highlighted by concerts with the Vancouver and Seattle Symphony Orchestras, and a spring tour of the South and the East. The climax of the season was a Carnegie Hall concert in New York, a collaboration with the Prague Chamber Orchestra.

The Chorale's recordings, totalling over sixty, represent every genre of choral compositions, from Georgian Chant and Monteverdi to Stephen Foster, Lukas Foss and Ralph Vaughan Williams. Their "Virtuoso" album earned a Grammy Award and the "Joy to the World" recording sold over 500,000 copies to become a Gold Record Album and the biggest selling album of the Capitol Records classical division.

The strength of the Chorale has always been the calibre of the performers. It has been the training ground for such notable singers as Marilyn Horne, Carol Neblett, Karan Armstrong and Theodor Uppman, who have all gone on to star in the great opera houses of the world.

Dear Abby

Fix it, flaunt it, or forget it

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You really blew it to "Underdeveloped," the unhappy, flat-chested eighth-grader who wanted a bra-but whose mother wouldn't get her one until she had something to put in it. You told her to be patient—maybe she was a late bloomer.

Girls that age have enough to deal with without feeling inadequate because they're flat-chested. As a former flatso myself, I know how that girl felt. Fortunately, my mother was more understanding than hers. She bought me a padded bra, and it made all the difference in the world to me. Instead of feeling ashamed of my underdeveloped body, it gave me a lot of self-confidence.

I'm still a flatso underneath it all, but I've been wearing a padded bra for 25 years and I feel good about myself.

NO BOOBS IN BURLINGAME

DEAR NO: Let's hear it from a lady lawyer who accepted Mother Nature's verdict with grace:

DEAR ABBY: This letter is addressed to "Underdeveloped": Your letter to Dear Abby struck a responsive chord in me because I had the same problem at your age. My mother bought me a bra, and everyone made fun of me because it kept slipping up. (I had nothing to fill it.) Added to that, I was extremely tall and skinny. I was called "Stringbean" and "Telephone Pole." I, too, wanted to cry often.

Don't feel bad. You may be a late bloomer. I never was. However, I decided to make the best of what I had. I developed my mind, my personality and my self-confidence. The end result? A 6-foot lady attorney who the men love to flirt with and the women envy because I "could be a model." By the way, not one guy I have known since I was 18 has commented unfavorably about my flat chest. Hang in there!

MADE THE BEST OF WHAT I HAD IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I went to the funeral of a beautiful young woman. At the grave site, her young husband had the casket opened and he removed her wedding ring. I didn't think that was right. What do you think?

APPALLED IN MONTCLAIR

DEAR APPALLED: I would not judge the actions of a young husband at the grave site of his wife.

...

DEAR ABBY: Someone told me that a recent poll was taken to find out which professionals and business people are the most respected, and real estate dealers were way down at the bottom of the list. Can you please check this out for me?

SELLS REAL ESTATE IN DALLAS

DEAR SELLS: The Gallup Poll listed the following 24 professions in order of their reputation for honesty, integrity and ethical standards. The results of the poll showed that ministers were most respected, followed by pharmacists, then dentists, next M.D.s, engineers, college professors, policemen, bankers, TV reporters, newspaper reporters, funeral directors, lawyers, stockbrokers, senators, business executives, building contractors, congressmen, local officeholders, real estate dealers, union leaders, state officeholders, insurance salesmen, advertising practitioners and auto salesmen.

...

Chicken dish to make ahead

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
When I decided to develop a new recipe for roast chicken, accompanied by a tomato sauce, that could be prepared ahead and reheated for guests, I made an interesting discovery. The sauce had much better flavor and texture when we used tomato juice from a concentrate rather than regular canned tomato juice. Response to the dish was excellent. The sauce is pungent; the curry in it does not dominate.

CHICKEN CECILY
3½-pound roasting chicken
Oil
3 cloves garlic, peeled and slightly smashed
¼ cup orange juice
Two 6-ounce cans tomato juice from concentrate 1½ teaspoons arrowroot blended with 1 tablespoon cold water and 1 teaspoon curry powder
Salt and pepper to taste
Watercress or parsley sprigs inserted in the center of unpeeled orange slices
1 cup long-grain rice, cooked and hot
Chutney

Remove any visible clumps of fat from chicken. Tie ends of drumsticks together. Turn wings back, locking tips. Rub chicken with oil and place in an oiled 12 by 9 by 2-inch roasting pan. Roast uncovered in a preheated 400-degree oven until there is some fat in the pan — 15 to 30 minutes.

Add the garlic to the pan and pour the orange juice over the chicken; continue roasting uncovered until the chicken is tender and drippings in the pan are very brown — 1 to 1½ hours. Remove chicken to a serving platter and keep warm in a low oven.

Tip: Roasting pan and skim off as much fat as possible from drippings. Place the pan over low heat on a surface unit and add the tomato juice; with a wooden spoon stir to get up all the dark particles in the bottom of the pan. Pour through a fairly fine-mesh strainer into a 1- or 1½-quart non-corrosive sauce-pan. Add the arrowroot mixture and stir constantly over moderate heat until boiling and thickened; stir in any juice from the chicken plus the salt and pepper.

Garnish the chicken with the orange slices and serve with the sauce, rice and chutney.

Makes 4 servings.

TO MAKE AHEAD
Make this dish early in the day to serve at dinnertime. Roast the chicken and cut it up (2 wings, 2 portions of breast, 2 drumsticks, 2 thighs, 4 pieces of bony back.) Arrange the pieces in a 2-quart oblong baking dish (11½ by 7½ by 1½ inches); cover the dish with saran and let stand at room temperature. Make the sauce as directed and let it stand, covered in its sauce-pan, at room temperature. Before serving heat the sauce, stirring several times, and pour it over the chicken. Bake uncovered in a very hot oven until the sauce bubbles and the chicken is heated through — 10 to 15 minutes; or reheat in a microwave oven.

Wild Rice

Cooked this way all the grains should open.

1 cup wild rice
Water
Butter to taste, at room temperature
Salt to taste

In a 5- or 6-quart saucepot, generously cover the rice with water; turn into a strainer to drain; repeat several times to wash the rice thoroughly. Return the rice to the saucepot and add 4 quarts water. Bring to a boil; cover and boil gently, without stirring, until tender and each grain has opened — 40 to 50 minutes. Have extra boiling water on hand to add toward the end of the cooking so that the rice is covered with boiling water. Rinse under hot running water, draining well. With a fork, stir in the butter and salt. Makes about 1 quart — 6 servings.

So, egg eaters, enjoy the recipes in Ackart's book. But try to limit yourself to just one serving. That's a practically painless way to cut both calories and cholesterol.

For an excellent extra-rich treatment for your hair, try this homemade conditioner. Start with 1/4 cup of olive oil (use up to 1/2 cup if your hair is very long and thick). Now, beat in two whole eggs. Apply this mixture to your hair, working it through to the ends. Leave the mixture on for an hour, then rinse well with tepid water. Be careful the water isn't too hot; otherwise, the egg will cook and rinsing will be a chore. Finally, shampoo your hair thoroughly and rinse several times until there's no residue.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lou Gossett Jr. could face up to three years in prison if convicted on a felony charge of possessing cocaine, the district attorney's office said.

Gossett's female companion, Honey Rufner, 34, was also charged Tuesday with one count of possessing cocaine, said Pam White, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office.

Gossett, who won an Emmy for his performance in the TV mini-series "Roots," and Ms. Rufner were freed after each posted $2,500 bail pending arraignment on April 20 in Malibu Municipal Court, she said.

An allegation Gossett and Ms. Rufner gave cocaine to their children was dropped because of insufficient evidence, said Deputy District Attorney Marsha Revel.

Gossett's 7-year-old son and Ms. Rufner's 7-year-old son and 4-year-old daughter were placed in custody of the Department of Public Social Services and then in foster homes after the actor and his companion were arrested on March 18, said Carol Matsui, special assistant to the director of the social services department.

Judge H. Randolph Moore of Juvenile Court said hearings are continuing and declined to discuss whether the children are still in foster homes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch has handed over to Playboy magazine the tapes and transcripts he made of his lengthy and controversial interview with the magazine.

Tuesday's action stymied efforts by the Daily News here to gain access to unpublished parts of the interview, in which he characterized suburban living as "sterile," and rural life as "a joke."

Playboy's interviewer taped more than a dozen hours with Koch last November and December. A transcript published in the April issue included only a fraction of the conversation.

A reporter for the Daily News asked Koch in a letter on March 25 to listen to independent recordings of the sessions made by the mayor's staff. Playboy objected, saying that the interview was its exclusive property and that Koch had taped the sessions only to verify the accuracy of the published version.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A celebrity suit against California lawyer Marvin Mitchelson has been dismissed, with the attorney who filed it acknowledging that blood tests ruled out the possibility that Mitchelson was the father of a schoolteacher's child.

Mitchelson took the tests at the insistence of attorney Robert K. Steinberg, who represents Susan Riley, 27, of Manhattan Beach.

Landmark Smoker Study:

Merit Earns Taste Trophy.

---

Rigorous smoker tests confirm MERIT as proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

---

Just released—the results of extensive new research conducted by MERIT.

The conclusion: In tests comparing taste and tar combined, MERIT is the clear choice over leading higher tar brands.

MERIT Remains Unbeaten.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Turning Smokers To MERIT.

In a separate part of this study, smokers report that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers say MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
