

Southwestern Public Service asks rate hike

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

After reporting total assets of more than $1 billion, gross revenues of more than $533 million and net profits of nearly $64 million during 1981, Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) has asked Texas cities and the Public Utilities Commission for a rate hike this year of $41.5 million.

The City of Pampa has already enacted a 120-day delay of the increase and has banded with other cities in the utility's service area to pay a consultant to study the company's rate request.

Under the SPS plan, the average residential customer's bill would increase more than 15 percent.

Company officials say they need more money due to continued construction projects in SPS's plan to change to coal-fired generators and due to higher inflation and costs of borrowing money.

SPS Pampa District Manager Joe Gidden said the rate increase is calculated to bring the company's rate of return on investment up to 12 percent. He said the return during fiscal 1981 was only 8.3566 percent.

"We are confident the rate is justified," said Steve Bosarge, SPS manager of communications in Amarillo.

The last SPS price increase, an 11.06 percent average jump in retail electricity charges, or $31.9 million, was granted to the company, effective June 1, 1980.

However, when filing for that rate hike, the company had asked regulators for an average increase of 14.78 percent, or $42.6 million.

A compromise between the cities' steering committee and the power company for that 1980 price increase was reached before final approval by the PUC.

McMorries and Associates, an Amarillo engineering firm, has again been retained by the cities to study the company's rate request.

SPS provides electricity to a 45,000-square-mile area, including the Panhandle and south plains of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas. The company had more than 300,000 customers during 1981.

SPS has 10 principal power plants with 41 generating units, which are all interconnected and together supply power to all points on the system.

SPS is presently constructing its second, huge coal-fired power plant near Muleshoe. Unit No. 1 at the Tolk Station is expected to come on line this summer, with Unit No. 2 expected for completion in 1985.

Each unit at the Tolk Station can generate 561 megawatts (million watts). In comparison, average electric billing for all customers in the Pampa District is about 50 megawatts, so each unit at Tolk Station can provide more than 10 times the electric power needs of the entire local district.

Total cost for constructing the Tolk Station is estimated at more than $640 million.

The last of three 350-megawatt generators at the Harrington Station near Amarillo, the company's first coal-fired power plant, was recently completed on schedule.

Gidden explained that the company does not build a coal-fired plant until a long-term contract for coal supplies is reached. SPS is under contract for coal with a Wyoming mining affiliate of Arco Oil Company.

The coal from a mine in Gillette is transported by train and stockpiled in huge quantities at each plant.

Gidden said SPS engineers decided long ago that coal-fired power plants were "the cheapest way to go." At one time the company considered an experimental nuclear breeder reactor, but nixed the plan "when the red tape started piling up."

Electric utilities in some parts of the country are in serious financial trouble after spending huge sums to construct idle nuclear power plants. Some newly constructed nuclear plants have never been brought on line due to regulatory hassles and public protest over safety.

Gidden explained that utilities must phase out gas-powered electric generators due to higher gas prices and increased government penalties for using gas to generate electricity.

The local manager said SPS transmission lines are interconnected with both the eastern and western electric grids. He said excess power generated by SPS could be sold to a customer as far away as California.

In addition to the base rate approved by PUC, the electric company is allowed to automatically pass along to customers any increase in cost of fuel used to generate electricity. During 1981, this fuel cost adjustment was responsible for a $27,427,000 increase in revenue over 1980.

At one time, SPS owned its own fuel supply company, TUCO. When it was suggested that TUCO's fuel price increases, passed along to customers by parent SPS, represented a possible conflict of interest, SPS sold its fuel supply company to Cabot Corporation in May 1979 for nearly $34 million. SPS is still under long-term contract with Cabot for TUCO's gas supplies.

According to the company's 1981 annual report, SPS's operation of TUCO is under investigation for possible DOE violations in connection with past sales of certain liquid hydrocarbons, amounting to more than $4 million. Cabot will be reimbursed for any past violations before the sale of TUCO.

The report also mentions that SPS is under investigation by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for more than $4 million in deferred income taxes. The company's law firm informed the utility that an "unfavorable outcome in such litigation is reasonably possible" in connection with the deferred taxes.

Bosarge said both cases are pending action from the Washington agencies and have "no relationship to the current rate proceeding."

Operating revenue during 1981 was more than $530 million from the sale of electricity, with an additional small share earned from SPS's water plant in Clovis, N.M.

Total operating expenses during the same period was more than $456 million. The largest expense was more than $302 million for fuel.

The company reported total assets at $1,088,000,000.

SPS reported $1.91 earnings per common share and a dividend of $1.38 (See SPS rate hike, Page 2)

British snagged on sovereignty

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today rejected an Argentine plan for averting war with Britain over the Falkland Islands, but said she was sending Foreign Secretary Francis Pym to Washington with counter-proposals.

She told the House of Commons that the Argentine proposal, cabled to London from Buenos Aires by U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., "falls short in some important respects" of what Britain would deem an acceptable solution to the crisis, precipitated by Argentina's invasion of the Falklands April 2.

She did not disclose details of the Argentine plan, but said one important defect was its failure to give the 1,800 British-descended islanders a say in their own future.

"We shall seek to put forward our own proposals, I hope, to Mr. Haig, and Mr. Pym with that in mind plans to go to Washington on Thursday."

Although Mrs. Thatcher effectively rejected the Argentine plan as presented, she said Britain considered it "a stage in the negotiating process which must now be continued. We are examining the proposals very closely."

Press Association, the domestic British news agency, said the cool British response "strongly damped down any hopes raised by Mr. Haig's latest proposals."

Haig, after four days of intensive negotiations in the Argentine capital, flew back to Washington. He told reporters during a refueling stop in Caracas, Venezuela, he would "discuss the situation with President Reagan and await further developments."

British press reports said he was expected in London Thursday.

With a 68-ship British war fleet expected to be within striking distance of the Falklands by the weekend, Haig said as he took off from Buenos Aires that he was "more convinced than ever that war in the South Atlantic would be the greatest of tragedies and that time is indeed running out."

The permanent council of the Organization of American States was meeting in Washington today at Argentina's request to consider application of the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance against Britain.

Argentina could count on the support of most Latin-American countries, but the Reagan administration was caught between traditional U.S. support of Britain, its closest ally, and its desire to enlist Argentina in its war against communism in Latin America.

The Buenos Aires newspaper Clarin reported the new proposals included withdrawal of the estimated 9,000 Argentine troops that occupied the islands April 2 and recall of the British fleet, lifting of the British blockade, joint temporary British-Argentine administration of the islands with the United States as overseer and a time limit for the United Nations to determine sovereignty over the Falklands.

ABC World News Tonight said Argentinean sources reported "after Dec. 31, the Argentine flag and only the Argentine flag will fly over the islands, thus confirming ultimate Argentine sovereignty."

Argentina requests sanctions against Britain

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Organization of American States met today to consider Argentina's request for hemispheric sanctions against Great Britain over the Falkland Islands dispute, the British government rejected an Argentine peace proposal and said it would present one of its own to U.S. mediator Alexander M. Haig Jr. The Argentine request for sanctions, made only hours after the secretary of state ended four days of talks in Buenos Aires and left for Washington on Monday, claimed that the British pledge to retake the islands by force represented a "grave and imminent danger" to hemispheric security.

Argentina said it was asking the OAS to impose the collective provisions against Britain under a 1947 treaty.

In London, meanwhile, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons that the Argentine peace plan fails to satisfy British conditions — namely in giving the 1,800 Falkland Islanders a say in their future — but that Foreign Secretary Francis Pym will present her government's counter-proposals to Haig on Thursday.

"We shall seek to put forward our own proposals, I hope, to Mr. Haig, and Mr. Pym, with that in mind, plans to go to Washington on Thursday," the prime minister said.

Haig, landing at nearby Andrews Air Force Base early today, said that he would continue his peace-making efforts and that his next step would be to hear the British response to the Argentine plan he had earlier conveyed to London.

He declined to express optimism when asked by reporters whether he thought a solution was at hand.

"I haven't described myself from the beginning as either hopeful or unhelpful," he said. "We're continuing the talks and we will see where they lead."

Haig told reporters he had held "arduous discussions" in Argentina and had "further defined and delineated the position of that government."

He indicated he may take to the air again on his peace-seeking mission, which already has covered 28,000 miles of shuttling to Buenos Aires and London.

Hours after Haig ended his marathon, four-day talks in Buenos Aires Monday, Argentina said it would ask the Organization of American States to impose collective provisions against Britain under a 1947 treaty.

And the British government reacted swiftly to Haig's latest proposals Monday night, saying they do not, at first sight, "meet the requirements strongly expressed by Parliament, particularly on the need to regard as paramount the wishes of the Islanders."

The OAS planned to meet here today to take up Argentina's claim that the British pledge to retake the islands by force represented a "grave and imminent danger" to hemispheric security.

The British have a fleet steaming toward the South Atlantic. The lead vessels in the armada reportedly could be within striking distance of the Falklands this weekend.

In Buenos Aires Monday, Haig warned that time "is indeed running out."

Haig opposed the Argentine move at the OAS, saying the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, also known as the Rio Treaty, was not a proper tool for dealing with the Falklands crisis. He also noted that in addition to its commitments under that treaty, the United States has long-standing treaty obligations to Great Britain.

Positive signs of compromise on budget emerge from meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Republican congressional leaders conferred on the budget today at the White House and, minutes later, Reagan called Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to say he hoped the negotiators can reach a compromise.

The two men, who have not taken part in the discussions but who must approve any compromise, spoke for about six minutes, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

A spokesman for O'Neill, Chris Mathews, said of the call, "the speaker sees it as a positive sign."

Sen. Howard H. Baker, the Senate majority leader, told reporters, "The president has now indicated very clearly that he is willing to go the extra mile." He added that Reagan "wants to play ball. He wants to cooperate."

Baker added, however, that the main stumbling block to agreement is that Reagan and O'Neill have not met. Nor did Reagan suggest such a meeting in his call to the speaker, according to Gergen.

The phone call, Gergen said, was an "opportunity for the president to express his hope that the talks would come to a successful conclusion."

Meanwhile, Sen. Paul Laxalt, one of Reagan's closest allies on Capitol Hill, said he was "very optimistic" a compromise can be reached but said spending cuts and some form of tax increase would have to be part of a compromise.

He also said that defense spending cuts and "Social Security will have to be part of the overall package." At some time, he said, cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients would have to be "considered in trimming spending."

"We've got to do it, even if it's an election year," he said.

But the Nevada Republican said the president made no commitments in the morning meeting.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said the negotiators were trying to resolve the dispute over the budget within two days. "We'd like to get it done in the next 48 hours, if possible," he said.

School board considers $1.2 million increase

The Pampa Independent School District Board will meet 5 p.m. today in the Carver Educational Center to consider an increase in budget expenditures of $1,213,942 for fiscal year 1982.

Most of the new expense would be $1,200,000 for building improvements. Other new expenses are in plant maintenance and operation, instructional supplies, administration, and staff travel.

The present expenditures budget for the year is $8,712,184. If the increase is approved, the expenditures will be $9,926,126. Estimated funds available for the district in 1982 are $10,773,991.

The board has also estimated an increase of $130,000 in income from investment interest.

Other items on the agenda include the appointment of members to serve on the Tax Appraisal Review Board and a renewal of the district's contract for the collection of delinquent taxes.

1982 is the last year the Tax Appraisal Review Board will operate. For the 1982-1983 fiscal year, the school board and other bodies will review their own appraisals.

The school board is planning to contract with Perdue, Brandon, Blair and Fielder, an Amarillo law firm, to collect delinquent taxes. A resolution will be considered at the meeting that would add a standard penalty of 15 percent plus interest and expenses to taxes collected after July 1.

SPS rate hike per common share for 1981. The company paid more than $30 million in interest during that fiscal year and paid more than $40 million in current and deferred taxes.

The rates requested by the company are broken into a myriad of schedules, including four different rates for residential customers alone.

Many of the rate increases are based on demand, load factor and total electricity used per month.

The proposed price increases for residential customers are based on average total kilowatt hours (KWH) used per month and on four different categories of homes.

Different rates apply to standard residential homes, homes with an electric water heater, homes with electric space heating and all-electric homes.

Depending on average KWH used and type of home, the following are average examples of the proposed new residential rate increases:
 Standard Residential — 15.35 to 15.67 percent.

Black attorney to defend IRS racial ban on tax exemptions

WASHINGTON (AP) — William T. Coleman Jr., the first black to hold the post of Supreme Court law clerk, will defend before the nine justices a ban on federal tax breaks for racially discriminatory private schools.

The court said Monday it will decide whether the Reagan administration can grant tax exemptions to private schools that discriminate against blacks. Oral arguments in the politically volatile case are expected to be held next fall and a ruling is not expected until next year.

The justices picked Coleman, a former transportation secretary under President Ford, to defend the 1½-year Internal Revenue Service ban on tax exemptions for such schools.

The Reagan administration, which wants to scrap the IRS policy, says it cannot defend the IRS ban, arguing there is no congressional authority for it.

Coleman, a 61-year-old Republican lawyer now in private practice, was a law clerk for Justice Felix Frankfurter in 1948 and 1949 after graduating with high honors from Harvard Law School in 1946.

Reached by telephone after the Supreme Court announced his appointment, he said he did not think the court picked him because he is black.

"I think you would do the court a great disservice to suggest that," he said. "I was just asked whether I would be available for a matter of public service."

Coleman also worked on the legal team which convinced the high court to issue its historic 1954 ruling that separate public schools for black and white children were inherently unequal.

The Reagan administration sparked an outcry among blacks, civil rights groups and others when it announced Jan. 8 that it would lift the ban on tax exemptions for racially discriminatory schools.

At that time, the administration also asked the Supreme Court to dismiss appeals by Bob Jones University of Greenville, S.C., and Goldsboro Christian Schools of Goldsboro, N.C., of lower-court rulings denying them federal tax exemptions.

The Reagan administration said its policy reversal made a high court decision unnecessary, even though last October the court had agreed to decide the cases.

Bob Jones bars interracial dating and interracial marriage, while Goldsboro admits no black students.

Convicted Israeli minister says he is ready to resign

JERUSALEM (AP) — The first Israeli Cabinet minister ever convicted of a crime has told Prime Minister Menachem Begin he is ready to resign but is waiting to get the reaction of his political party, Israel Radio reported today.

Aharon Abu-Hatzeira, the minister of labor, welfare and immigration and a former minister of religious affairs, faces up to seven years in prison. He was convicted Monday of using $1,750 from a state-subsidized charity fund to buy groceries for himself and pay other personal expenses while mayor of the Tel Aviv suburb of Ramleh.

He is to be sentenced Wednesday and if he gets more than a year would be required by law to resign. But one member of Begin's Likud Bloc said he should resign voluntarily to "avoid a problem for the government."

Members of the minister's Tami party said he would not quit and would appeal the verdict to the Supreme Court. But the state radio said he told its correspondent after a meeting with Begin he was ready to quit and would make his final decision after conferring with the other members of his faction.

"They will not break me physically, spiritually or bodily," Abu-Hatzeira told a rally of his party Monday. The crowd chanted, "Aharon, King of Israel."

Abu-Hatzeira's refusal to resign would put Begin in an embarrassing position that could bring down his government. If the prime minister didn't fire Abu-Hatzeira, the opposition Labor Party would probably accuse him of sanctioning corruption. But if he dismissed him, he would lose Tami's three votes in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, and his own two-vote majority. Begin has been expected to call elections in November, but if he loses his majority he may have to do so earlier.

That, however, could be an advantage to Begin if he can retain the support of Tami. An opinion poll published today in the Jerusalem Post, based on the questioning of 1,260 people at the beginning of April, indicated Begin's Likud bloc would win 54 of the 120 Knesset seats and his present coalition allies would get 12, giving him a majority of 12.

The dispute is also a manifestation of the division in Israeli society between the Ashkenazim, or European-descended Jews, who have dominated the political scene since the founding of Israel, and the Sephardim, or oriental Jews from the Middle East and North Africa, who now comprise about 60 percent of the population.

Abu-Hatzeira, a native of Morocco, is a leading Sephardi, and his supporters shouted "racism" in the courthouse corridors when Judge Victoria Ostrovsky-Cohen announced her verdict against him. He was tried last year on bribery charges but was acquitted for lack of evidence.

U.S. to bar travel to Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, citing Cuban sponsorship of "armed violence against our friends and allies," is moving to bar most business and tourist travel to the Caribbean island nation.

"Cuba will not be allowed to earn hard currency from business and tourist travel at a time when they are sponsoring armed violence against our friends and allies," John Walker, assistant treasury secretary for enforcement and operations, said Monday.

Instead of seeking directly to ban travel to Cuba, the administration aims to accomplish the same goal by banning financial transactions necessary for most business or tourist travel.

Such transactions include credit card purchases, cash payments for transportation, and living expenses while in Cuba.

Limiting or banning such transactions is authorized by the Trading With the Enemy Act, which first was applied to trade with Cuba at the time of the Cuban missile crisis in 1962. Treasury officials said. Penalties for violations could range up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, Walker said.

Restrictions on U.S. travel to Cuba were eased in 1977 by the Carter administration, he noted. They were not lifted, however.

"Today's actions are an important part of this government's policy of tightening the current trade and financial embargo against Cuba," Walker said.

600 supporters turn out for fund-raiser for former coroner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dr. Thomas T. Noguchi, the demoted county coroner who was accused of sensationalizing deaths of celebrities, told 600 supporters gathered at a fund-raising dinner he is confident he will be reinstated.

The scholarly physician who told Americans how Natalie Wood and William Holden died was the toast of a Monday night testimonial dinner, which included entertainers Flip Wilson and Nanette Fabray.

Proceeds from the dinner are to be used to support a campaign to reinstate Noguchi.

"I'm overjoyed," Noguchi said as he arrived under the glare of television lights at the Studio City hotel where the dinner took place. "It shows the people of this county know Dr. Noguchi, they know who he is."

Noguchi told the crowd in a speech that "I think within a few months I will be returning to my office to continue my work."

"I am really the luckiest man in the world," he added, acknowledging the support. As he returned to his seat, the band struck up "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors criticized the 55-year-old coroner for alleged mismanagement and sensationalizing celebrity deaths and suspended him in March. The board on Thursday demoted him to physician specialist, the job title for a doctor who works under the coroner. Japanese-Americans rallied behind Noguchi when supervisors attempted to fire him in 1969, and they're backing him this time, too. Organizers said more than 400 people were turned away from Monday's dinner, the first of several fund-raisers.

"Despite the allegations and innuendoes from the supervisors, people in this community believe in the independence of the coroner's office," Noguchi said.

Wilson, who presented Noguchi with a $1,000 check, said he was at the dinner "to support a superstar of a man."

Tickets to the dinner cost $30 each, and money raised is to be used to pay for advertisements supporting Noguchi, said John J. Saito, regional director for the Japanese American Citizens League.

Telephone competition will cost users more

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If Congress adopts a proposal that aims to spur competition in the telephone industry, Texas phone customers can expect to pay higher rates, say Southwestern Bell officials.

Congress has been trying for several years to amend the Communications Act of 1934, but the process has been slow because of intense interest in the subject by a number of big communications companies.

But last year, the U.S. Senate finally passed a telecommunications deregulation bill — which Bell generally supported. Now a House version, sponsored by Colorado Rep. Tim Wirth, is pending full committee hearings, and Bell officials held a news conference Monday to say just how much they don't like Wirth's bill.

Southwestern Bell Vice President Paul Roth said Bell plans an "all out effort to kill" the bill and will ask stockholders to write their congressmen.

In January, AT&T and the Justice Department reached a tentative settlement of the government's anti-trust suit against the telephone company. The agreement, which still must be approved by a federal judge, splits local phone companies off from AT&T. AT&T takes over long-distance service.

Bell officials say that means long-distance revenues no longer will subsidize local rates, leading to a rate increase.

Roth said that even if the legislation is not passed, Bell expects to ask for a rate increase mid-year.

But, he said, the rate increase could be even higher if the House bill is passed. He was particularly critical of one provision that would freeze for about three years the amount of access charges paid by long-distance competitors of AT&T.

Currently, long-distance re-sellers, like MCI and U.S. Tel, pay AT&T for access to the phone lines. When the local companies are split off, AT&T will be put in the position of paying for access to what used to be its lines.

The House bill, Roth complained, would have AT&T pay full-cost access charges, while giving the competitors a short-term break.

"Southwestern Bell ratepayers in Texas would have to subsidize the unregulated long-distance carriers," he said. "That is special interest legislation personified."

The discrepancy is fair, she said, since AT&T "still has 97 percent of the business." "If anything, the bill would keep rates down" by increasing competition, she said.

Martin in courtroom, challengers campaign

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — While challengers for his Texas House seat are campaigning in Longview, Rep. Mike Martin today returned to Central Texas courtroom watch as jurors are picked, his perjury trial.

The selection process, carefully mapped out and scheduled by State District Judge Robert Barton, got off to a slow start Monday. Barton planned to complete individual interviews with the first five jurors in 90 minutes.

However, it took three hours to talk to the first three, and Barton had to revamp his plan.

Martin is charged with aggravated perjury for allegedly lying to Travis County grand jurors when he denied that his July 31 shooting was a publicity stunt.

The Longview Republican's legal problems helped persuade several challengers, including the Democratic legislator Martin unseated in 1980, to seek the seat. Former Rep. Jimmy Mankins is one of several candidates in the Democratic primary.

Martin also has drawn opposition in the May 1 GOP primary.

Fifty Gillespie County residents were chosen for the jury panel. Barton granted a defense motion for individual interviews with each potential juror, instead of the usual group session. The judge laid out a schedule that included five interviews every 90 minutes.

Under that schedule the interviews would end Wednesday. However, the slow start on Monday probably will delay the finish.

The case was moved here from Austin because of extensive publicity in the capital. Several weeks ago, Barton turned down defense lawyer Frank Maloney's request for a second change of venue.

Barton has banned lawyers, witnesses and potential jurors in the case from talking with reporters.

He also issued a stern order warning reporters and photographers not to get in the way in the courthouse or on sidewalks near the courthouse. The judge said his orders were an attempt to guarantee "dignity and decorum" during the trial of the much-publicized case.

Martin suffered a minor elbow wound when he was hit with shotgun fire around 2 a.m. on July 31 in an Austin trailer park. After offering several differing stories, Martin finally said he believed the shooting was related to hometown politics.

But the indictment alleges Martin planned the shooting. Charles Goff, Martin's cousin, has said he fired the shots at Martin's instructions as part of a publicity stunt. Barton told the potential jurors the trial could last as long as three weeks.

The jurors were told by Maloney that the defense has not decided whether Martin will testify. The prosecution has subpoenaed more than 50 witnesses.

After a jury is selected, Barton will consider several pretrial motions, including a defense request for a psychiatric examination of Goff.

Wife on trial in doctor's murder

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jury selection continues today in the murder trial of a woman accused of shooting her wealthy husband 17 times.

Pamela Ruth Fielder, 37, is charged in the July 23, 1981 death of her husband, Darwin, a gynecologist. Monday, 67 people were called for possible jury selection.

Police investigators claim Mrs. Fielder sobbed to them the night of the killing. "I did it. I shot him. I killed him with my 45." The investigators contend she made similar remarks in telephone conversations with two friends shortly after the slaying.

Fielder was found dead in an overstuffed easy chair in the couple's home.

Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes delayed jury selection Monday morning by strenuously objecting when the bloody chair was carried into the courtroom. Haynes and associates claim the chair was taken during an illegal search and should not be allowed into evidence.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Worley is expected to introduce scientific evidence portraying the crime's violence — descriptions of the easy chair and an autopsy report on the doctor's many wounds.

Haynes is expected to bring up Fielder's reputation during the trial. Police reports indicate he may have been involved in an extramarital affair at the time he was killed. Scheduled witnesses include the president of the local chamber of commerce, numerous prominent lawyers, and Fielder's first wife and her two teen-age sons.

After their father was killed, the youths filed a lawsuit that indefinitely ties up the family estate.

Mrs. Fielder is a friend of Fort Worth multimillionaire Cullen Davis and his wife Karen, who raised $5,000 for Mrs. Fielder to hire Haynes.

Navy's repair logic needs fix-up, too

Question: If a floating dry dock moored at the Navy's Long Beach shipyard could be overhauled there or in San Diego just down the coast, where would the Pentagon order the work done?

The answer: Why, Guam, of course. That, at least, was the Navy's answer last August when it ordered the huge YFD-71 towed across the Pacific to Pearl Harbor and then to Guam for a $34 million overhaul that might just as well have been accomplished at Long Beach or in San Diego.

According to the Navy, this seemingly inexplicable decision resulted from a congressional mandate to provide work for the shipyard on out-of-the-way Guam. Peeling back the next layer of this mystery discloses that it was the Navy itself that asked Congress for the mandate.

In fairness to the Navy, it must be said that the request made since give the uncertain turture of the 7th Fleet's primary logistics base at Subic Bay in the Philippines. If the Subic Bay facility is denied the Navy, Guam would be a logical choice as a successor.

Accordingly, the Navy has a justifiable interest in providing enough work for the shipyard there to keep the facility and its workforce occupied at least until the next round of U.S.-Philippine negotiations over base rights at Subic.

All well and good. But what still bothers us is why the Navy couldn't find a 7th Fleet vessel already in the Western Pacific and also in need of an overhaul. Was there really no alternative but to tow a floating dry dock from Long Beach to Pearl Harbor to Guam and, once the job is done, to tow it back just to keep the ship fitters and welders on Guam from drawing unemployment compensation?

Arms control talks should take priority

President Reagan recently announced his support for negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on a nuclear weapons freeze. That's good.

During his campaign for the presidency, Reagan promised that he would negotiate with the Russians on a reduction of nuclear weapons, even though he opposed and criticized SALT I and SALT II, the two previously negotiated agreements on strategic arms limitation.

So far, his administration has either been unwilling or unready to begin such talks. Now he says he will be ready this summer. It's time.

"We arm to parley," said Winston Churchill. And that is what the Reagan administration has been doing, seeking to rebuild this country's defenses as a precondition for arms control talks, in order to bargain from a position of strength.

And now the president has made it a condition of any strategic arms control agreement that weapons stocks be reduced to equality between the United States and the Soviet Union.

SALT II, which was never ratified by the U.S. Senate, did that in terms of strategic weapons launchers — missiles and bombers. It set a limit on the number of launchers. The limit would have required the Soviet Union to reduce its stock. The limit would have allowed the United States to increase its stock.

But how should you measure equality? The number of launchers is one measure but not the only measure. According to intelligence estimates, they have nearly 2,500 launchers now, and we have less than 2,000. Comparisons of accuracy and reliability of launchers would be highly significant but seem impossible to make. We have more than 9,000 deliverable nuclear warheads, and they have fewer than 7,000. On the other hand, their warheads are bigger than ours. They have more than 45 million pounds of payload in their launchers; we have little more than 40 million pounds.

And the question arises, how much is enough?

Equality to the Russians will mean their forces must be equal to the combined forces of all the nuclear powers they see as potentially hostile to them — and that would have to include Britain, France and China, as well as the United States.

The negotiations will be difficult, and will not be made less so by President Reagan's continuing perception of the Russians as inclined to lie and cheat. There is support or that view in Russian history and in the doctrines of Leninism, so that any agreement will have to provide ironclad verification techniques. Some of Reagan's advisers were not satisfied with the SALT II verification arrangement, depending on satellites and electronic monitoring.

Yes, arms control talks will be tricky. They are sure to be lengthy. The more reason to get to the table as soon as possible.

Polls show about 60 percent of the American people are in favor of a freeze. The president agrees, with reservations. He correctly argues that an immediate freeze, at current levels, would give the Soviets a definite superior advantage.

Reagan is correct when he says the U.S. and Soviets should begin talks to reduce nuclear weapons stockpiles.

By ROBERT WALTERS

MELBOURNE, Fla. (NEA) — As with most other forms of human endeavor, talk about "reindustrialization" is cheap and relatively worthless. Virtually everyone thinks it's a fine idea, but almost nobody does much about it.

Experts familiar with the malaise afflicting the auto and steel industries, for example, suggest privately that those operations may well be permanently and drastically scaled down as the nation enters the "post-industrial" era.

But most public-opinion leaders — especially elected officials — are unwilling to discuss the problem candidly or to press for the necessary remedial action that could lead to temporary but severe economic dislocation for many workers.

In other industries, executives readily pay lip service to the concept of protecting their companies' profits and their employees' jobs in the decades to come by moving into high-technology fields — but relatively few firms have actually begun to implement those lofty goals.

Located in this community on Florida's East Coast, however, is the headquarters of a major corporation that has transformed itself from a traditional "smokestack industry" to a firm positioned at the leading edge of technology.

The Harris Corp. stands as a model of what other domestic corporations must do if they are to compete successfully with firms based in Japan and other nations where public policy stresses the importance of developing products and services that will meet 21st century market demands.

Founded in 1895 as the Harris Automatic Press Co., the firm was headquartered in Cleveland, an old-line industrial city, and its energies were devoted exclusively to the production of printing presses and associated equipment.

"When I joined the company in 1948," recalls Harris official Fred W. Baker, "we were selling two products — sheetfed printing presses and gillotine paper cutters."

When Harris purchased Gates Radio, a major manufacturer of communications equipment, in 1957, "people thought we were off our rocker," says Baker. "They couldn't understand why a solid company like Harris would go into a new field."

In 1967, Harris took an even bigger step toward the company's almost total transformation when it acquired Radiation Inc., a firm that specialized in digital technology and space communications.

Although Radiation was only one-quarter as large as Harris it provided the technical expertise necessary to dramatically shift the consolidated firm's emphasis away from the production of printing equipment, a field with limited growth potential, into the rapidly expanding area of communication and information processing systems.

Harris, which moved from Cleveland to Melbourne in 1978, racked up annual sales of $1.55 billion last year, compared with $292 million only 10 years earlier. Profits soared from $15.7 million to $104 million during the same period.

The company today is the biggest supplier of satellite earth stations to the federal government, the largest domestic producer of radio broadcasting transmitters and a close second in the sale of television transmitters.

Harris is experimenting with multisource data acquisition, wideband information transmission, adaptive phased arrays, date compression, hybrid circuit technology, electro-optic systems, laser technology, holographic techniques, waveform processing and satellite imagery systems.

Its client list includes such blue-chip customers as AT & T, The New York Times, Shell Oil, Atlantic Richfield, McDonnell Douglas, Boeing and General Dynamics.

Although the headquarters staff here numbers only 220, the company employs 25,700 people worldwide, with domestic manufacturing facilities in Florida, New York, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California.

Finally, although Harris has de-emphasized its original product line, the firm has not abandoned the business that its founders started almost 85 years ago. The company today is the country's largest manufacturer of printing presses.

A strange British custom

The thing I admire most about the British political system is the ability of their leaders to admit they have made a mistake and immediately resign from the government when it is pointed out to them.

To my knowledge Great Britain is the only country in the civilized world that maintains this strange political tradition.

We've seen it brilliantly dramatized once again during the Falkland crisis with Argentina.

Lord Carrington, the British foreign secretary, went on worldwide television last week to admit he had blundered, and since his judgment was in question he had no choice but to depart from Margaret Thatcher's government.

It was exactly the type of gesture one expects of Her Majesty's public servants, and no British citizen was surprised when his Lordship made the announcement.

Last week when I mentioned to Dr. Alan Smith, a British subject, how admirable it was for Lord Carrington to have walked the plank, my friend seemed perplexed.

"What other option was left open to him?" Smith wanted to know. "The man blotted his copy book. He had to resign."

"Couldn't he have stonewalled it, like our American officials do?" I said.

"What do you mean 'stonewall'?" "We have a tradition in this country that when a high official makes a boo-boo, he never admits it publicly, because it would only give aid and comfort to the enemy."

"How do you deal with it?"

"Let's assume that the U.S. owned the Falkland Islands and the Argentinians took them from us in an unexpected show of force. The first thing a high American official would do is attack the media for breaking the story. Then he would ask the FBI to find out who leaked it to the press."

"But when would the official resign?"

"He would NEVER resign," I told Smith. "He would have his staff put together a slide show proving the Soviets were behind the takeover of the Falklands, and that Cuban advisers had accompanied the Argentine troops. He would also produce a captured Nicaraguan soldier to show Castro had financed the whole damn thing."

"Would Congress accept his explanation?"

"Those who questioned it would be attacked by the official for using the Falkland incident for their own personal political gain."

"That doesn't seem cricket."

"Wait, there's more. The high official, to protect himself, would leak stories to the press that he was misled by the CIA, the Defense Department, and certain people in the White House who have been out to get him since he took the job."

"He'd do that before admitting his mistake?"

"The official would then demand the President support him publicly, pointing out that if his head rolls now the administration would be mortally wounded."

"And the President would go along with it?"

"He has to, particularly if the press reports the official is going to be bounced. The bigger the goof, the safer the official's job is, because no President wants to admit he's appointed a dummy."

"Is there any time in your political system when a high administration official might resign and take the blame for a catastrophe?" Smith asked.

"It has never happened. If a person in authority offered to resign every time he made a gaffe, we wouldn't have a government. The reason our system works so well, as opposed to yours, is that no one in Washington ever admits he has made a mistake. Once he has tasted power, it's impossible to embarrass an American official to the point where he offers to take leave of his post for the good of the country."

Chagra attorneys lose first bond motion

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two El Paso attorneys accused of plotting the assassination of a federal judge lost a bid to have a hearing in their hometown on efforts to reduce bonds totaling $2.7 million.

U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor scheduled a bond reduction hearing here for Joseph Chagra at 1:45 p.m. Wednesday and one for Elizabeth Chagra at 1:45 p.m. Thursday.

The two Chagras, Mrs. Chagra's husband, imprisoned drug trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, and convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson were indicted last Thursday with conspiring to murder U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Grand jurors also charged Harrelson, 43, and Jimmy Chagra, 37, with the Wood's May 29, 1979, slaying, alleging Jimmy paid Harrelson about $250,000 to kill the judge scheduled to preside over his pending drug-related criminal enterprise trial.

O'Connor scheduled the hearings an hour after U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions denied a motion Monday to hold the proceedings in El Paso because it was inconvenient and expensive for defense witnesses to travel 550 miles to San Antonio.

Defense lawyers said they planned to call numerous witnesses to testify the Chagras were reliable and would show up for court appearances if released on bond.

The Chagra brothers, Mrs. Chagra, Harrelson and his wife, Jo Ann, also are charged with conspiring to obstruct justice during the massive three-year-long investigation of the slaying.

Joe Chagra, 35, is jailed on $1.6 million bond in the Federal Correctional Institute at Bastrop. Mrs. Chagra, 28, is being held in the Bexar County jail in lieu of $1.1 million bond.

Jimmy Chagra, who was later convicted of criminal enterprise and sentenced to 30 years in prison without parole, is in the federal penitentiary at Marion, Ill. Harrelson is in the state prison at Huntsville serving 40 years on unrelated state convictions.

Harrelson and Jimmy Chagra face a mandatory life-in-prison sentence if convicted of killing Wood. Conspiracy to kill a federal judge carries a maximum sentence of life in prison, and obstruction of justice carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The five defendants are scheduled for formal arraignment here on April 28 on the charges contained in Thursday's indictments.

Attorney General gets second dining room

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Congress must pass laws penalizing employers who hire illegal aliens before a "large and growing fugitive class of aliens" in the United States can be curtailed, Attorney General William French Smith contends.

Smith told a joint meeting Monday of the local bar association and chamber of commerce Monday the public is demanding an "all-out effort" to stop the unwanted migration of a half-million illegal aliens a year.

"Beginning 100 years ago this year, Congress recognized the necessity of imposing some limitation upon immigration by passing the first act restricting general immigration," Smith said.

"In recent years, however, we have had to recognize that our successive attempts to improve upon our immigration laws and policies have been an abysmal failure. No great nation can long endure the kind of ineffectiveness evidenced in recent years by our own immigration laws," he said.

Smith said one recent study concluded more than 1 million illegal aliens work in U.S. construction jobs alone, with a payroll of $7 billion annually.

Less than half of all illegal aliens are Mexicans, 25 percent come from other countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, and the remainder from Asia and Europe, he said.

"Illegal migration is a national problem of alarming and growing dimensions. In the mid 1970s it was estimated that there were 3 to 6 million illegal aliens living in the United States. These numbers have grown by perhaps a half a million each year, and these estimates may be conservative. It is the nature of illegal migration that we do not know just how many come," Smith said.

Child killed by dogs

BEN WHEELER, Texas (AP) — A baby boy apparently was killed by a pack of dogs that dragged him out of his front yard, officials say.

Pathologists in the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office completed their autopsy on 17-month-old Sean Jimmy Myers on Monday, but results were not made public.

Van Zandt County peace justice Clarence Lewis was withholding a ruling on the cause of the little boy's death.

The child's father, Charles Peter Myers, found his son's mutilated body lying 25 yards across the street from his house about 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Van Zandt County District Attorney Tommy Wallace said no one had seen dogs near the child before he died, and details of the attack were sketchy.

Sean and his 10-year-old brother had been riding together on a mini-bike in front of their home, but the older boy put Sean down on the driveway and rode off, officers said.

"The brother then went riding for about 15 or 20 minutes, and when he came back the infant was gone," Wallace said, adding that the 10-year-old thought he saw a neighbor's four dogs "chewing on something in the bar ditch" as he rode by.

The owner of the dogs, which are medium-sized mixed-breed animals, turned them over to authorities. Van Zandt County game warden Rock Ellis said two of the dogs had blood on them, but they did not seem vicious.

The animals were taken to a veterinarian in Van for observation, and samples of their stomachs' contents were taken for analysis.

growing fugitive class of aliens living outside society's sanctions and protections.

"Not only are American jobs lost and wages depressed, but the invisibility of so many illegal aliens fosters their exploitation and intimidation and denies them the essential dignity and protections to which all are entitled. Cynicism and further disrespect for the law itself results," he said.

He said no plan that does not include penalties against employing aliens will stop the illegal flow.

"Any line drawn will seem harsh to those denied the opportunity to come here, but lines must be drawn," he said.

"How long will this country hold out the cruel and false hope to illegal aliens that all immigration takes is getting here, while disappointing the dreams of those who wait patiently and legally for their turn to come?"

Smith said Reagan Administration legislation to require employee identification and fines against employers of illegal workers is needed.

"Without a law against hiring illegal aliens, illegal immigration will not be stopped or even slowed. Other efforts in the past were unrealistic and have failed," he said.

Dear Abby

Teen-age father flunks first test of manhood

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our 19-year-old son is facing a rather messy and uncomfortable predicament. He has gotten two girls pregnant and he doesn't want to marry either one of them. One is 15 and the other is 19. We've never met either girl. Both have informed our son that abortion is out — they want marriage, and they're waiting for him to make things "right."

I think he has a greater responsibility to the younger girl because she's a minor. My husband says the boy was just testing his manhood; he doesn't have to marry either one of them.

I'd like your thoughts on this. If these girls were good enough for him to sleep with, don't you think they're good enough to marry?

TROUBLE IN TEXAS

DEAR TROUBLE: Marriage should be voluntary — not mandatory. Your son is sadly lacking in "manhood," regardless of how many girls he gets pregnant. Furthermore, he has a moral and legal responsibility for any children he fathers. A lawyer should be consulted at once. Impregnating a minor is a serious offense. Please try to instill a sense of decency and moral responsibility in your son, Mother. It's apparent that he will never learn it from his father.

DEAR ABBY: I am a married woman in my early 20s. Am I still required to buy my mother a gift for Mother's Day? Last year I sent her a Mother's Day card, and she seemed so disappointed. She said, "Three kids, and all I get is one little card — no flowers or anything!"

Granted, I love my mom, but we can't afford gifts for every holiday that comes along.

GOT THE MOTHER'S DAY BLUES

DEAR GOT: One is never "required" to send a gift or card. It's the thought that counts. As long as you remembered your mother on Mother's Day, you need not feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: "Nora" asked, "Why would a man get upset because his wife or girlfriend wanted to see a male stripper?"

You replied: "Probably for the same reason some women get upset because their husbands or boyfriends want to see female strippers. They fear comparisons will be made and they won't measure up."

I would not go to see male or female strippers for the same reason I would not go to a porno movie. Not so much because comparisons might be made, but for reasons that go much deeper.

Norman Cousins stated this viewpoint quite well in an article that appeared in Saturday Review in September 1975:

"The trouble with this wide-open pornography... is not that it corrupts but that it desensitizes; not that it unleashes the passions but that it cripples the emotions; not that it encourages a mature attitude but that it is a reversion to infantile obsessions; not that it removes the blinders but that it distorts the view. Prowess is proclaimed but love is denied. What we have is not liberation but dehumanization."

Just sign me...

HAPPY

DEAR HAPPY: I too am a Norman Cousins admirer. His newest book, "Human Options," is a treasury of wisdom and philosophy. I recommend it highly.

Pampa Board of Realtors to hold Senior Citizens Seminar April 22

The Pampa Board of Realtors will sponsor a Senior Citizen Seminar on Thursday, April 22 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Flame Room of the Energas Building. One of the main topics to be discussed will be the Emergency Response System - Lifeline. Linda Clayton will present a film describing the services available.

The Emergency Response System - Lifeline is a personal emergency response system which allows the elderly and handicapped to live independently in their own homes and yet have the capability of seeking help with the push of a button. ERS involves the use of electronic equipment, 24-hour monitoring system by hospital staff and community based volunteers who act as responders when an emergency occurs.

The objectives of the program, sponsored by Northwest Texas Hospital, include providing emergency assistance as quickly as possible, support of families in their efforts to care for their relatives and reducing care costs for the elderly and handicapped.

The equipment for the ERS program is purchased from Lifeline Systems, Inc. Lifeline now serves over 250 locations in the U. S. There are 15 lifeline locations in Texas including Austin, Fort Worth, Dallas, Abilene, Houston and San Antonio.

The Emergency Response System - Lifeline was begun in April, 1981 as a regional program for the 25 counties in the Texas Panhandle. The base station, located at the new Northwest Texas Hospital, receives all alarms from clients and is monitored by hospital staff 24 hours a day, seven days a week, every day of the year. This base station has the capability of handling 1,000 clients. Recently the 100th ERS - Lifeline unit was installed.

Currently units are located in 20 different locations in the Texas Panhandle. These locations include Pampa, Borger, Dumas, Wellington, Shamrock, Fritch, Hereford, Memphis, Silverton, Sunray, Dalhart, Farwell, Wheeler, Dimmitt, Friona and Clarendon.

ERS - Lifeline is available to those who meet specific criteria on a private pay, semi-private or Texas Department of Human Resources basis.

The Senior Citizens Seminar is free and the public is invited to attend.

Cover all facets of faucets

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

People skillful in coping with most breakdowns around the house will often shy away from any repair pertaining to plumbing.

Whatever justification there is for this attitude with some plumbing repairs, there is none for a refusal to tackle the replacement of a washer on the ordinary stem or compression faucet. This type, still in the large majority of houses throughout the country despite the inroads made by single-lever and other newer kinds of faucets, is especially prone to dripping from the spout.

No matter how much of a novice you are in the matter of plumbing repairs, you can tackle the chore of replacing a washer and stopping a drip if you remember to turn off the water to the faucet before you do anything else. Forget it and you will soon have a stream of water shooting out and often up to the ceiling.

On some faucets, you will have to remove the handle, which requires only a screwdriver. On others, you need not do so. In either case, you must loosen the packing nut that is usually under the handle by turning it counterclockwise. This will enable you to take out the faucet spindle, at the end of which you will find a washer, held in place by a screw. When this washer gets chewed up or dislodged, water gets up and past it, creating the drip you are trying to halt.

Every home should have a box of assorted washers and screws in a handy place. Get one of the proper size and replace the old one, at the same time replacing the screw. Put back everything in the reverse order in which you removed it, turn on the water and your leak should be gone. This happens nine times out of 10 without any problem. Occasionally, the screw won't turn or is so beat-up you cannot get the screwdriver bit into the slot to make it turn. In that case, cut away the old washer with an awl or some other pointed tool, then grasp the head of the screw with a pliers and turn it.

If the leak was at the packing nut rather than from the spout, first try tightening the nut, which may have worked loose. If that doesn't help, take off the nut and replace the old packing under the nut with similar material, which can be bought in a hardware store and looks something like string. If there is a packing washer, replace it with one of the same size.

When a faucet continues to leak from the spout even after the washer has been replaced, it may mean the faucet seat is rough and needs refacing. A small tool can be purchased for this purpose. It usually comes on a cardboard holder which tells how to use it. If not, ask your dealer for advice.

These days, newer kinds of faucets are of the washerless types, including single-lever models. Different kinds, as well as different brands, require slightly different repair methods. Many use cartridges that require replacement when there is a leak. Removal in some is easy, in others tricky. If uncertain, take down all the necessary data about the faucet, including its brand name, and ask your dealer to advise you how to handle the problem. If you have access to a plumbing supply establishment, it may be able to supply you with the faucet manufacturer's repair instructions.

(Details about faucet repairs, toilet-tank troubles, noisy pipes and clogged drains are contained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Home owners want change in home decorating

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Not long ago, Blair Catterton visited a home he had decorated 27 years ago. And there at the windows were the draperies that had been installed so long ago — looking just like new.

The designer, whose home furnishings career began before World War II, says those curtains dated his client.

"Nowadays, people don't want anything to last that long," he said. On balance, he is not sorry to see the changes which have occurred in the way people furnish their homes. "It used to be such a serious business. Today, people buy more for fun, and novelty is more important than endurance. They buy to please the eye."

Catterton, who began as a designer in the early 1940s in Indianapolis, remembers when it was standard practice for the fanciest families to patronize the best department store in town for furnishings. In those days, it was not uncommon for a large Midwestern department store to have as many as 50 decorators on its staff.

By the early 1960s, he had relocated to New York, joining several large stores where he did interior design and helped pioneer the concept of store model rooms. But he is best known in the home furnishings industry for his work as an antiques importer, and at present runs Blair House, an importer of furniture and antiques.

Through the years, he has had an armchair view of changes in attitude about the home. Catterton finds that while interest in home decoration is at an all-time high and the practice of consulting interior designers has become commonplace, some things have not changed much.

"People with lots of money to spend still tend to buy antiques and traditional-style furnishings. Even young people buy antiques, just as their parents did," he said.

Life holds few surprises for a man who has seen many decorating fads. He remembers the year when everyone had to have a French barometer. Then it was skirted tables, matched pairs of lamps, washbowls and pitchers, and sofa tables that had to be exactly the same height as the arm of the sofa, he recalled.

Today's habit of integrating old things with new in a warm and cozy interior is very much to his taste, and the designer offered some tips for mixing furnishings from various periods.

"There are no rules for mixing styles, except for the rules of scale and compatibility of styles," he said. "I always tell people not to throw everything out and start over."

Instead, he urges refurbishing a room by changing the colors, adding new fabric, selecting new wall coverings and window coverings or changing the floor coverings.

Period chairs can go around a modern table and an old buffet can enliven a dining room or living room whose other furnishings are modern. The basic sofa that has been in place for years takes on new life when a more contemporary fabric is selected and it is reupholstered.

A change of texture can also do wonders for a room, he said, adding that today's wide range of fabrics, wall coverings and floor coverings represents a real stride forward in home decoration. Today's variety is much greater than in the past and it has greatly reduced the need for custom services that used to be offered routinely.

Carpeting, for example, comes in so many color choices that custom dyeing is no longer particularly important, in his opinion.

Catterton, for one, is glad we are coming out of the "bathed in beige" bland color schemes that once characterized quiet good taste. He is all for livelier and more vivid colors in the home.

As for very advanced modern furnishing and room designs, he simply averts his eyes and waits for the fad to pass.

The past 40 years have proven to him that home decoration styles are bound to change as people tire of one way of doing things and look for a novel approach.

Test refrigerator door for leaks

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q — We have a fairly old refrigerator. It is not self-defrosting. Lately it seems to be building up more frost on the inside than it used to. Somebody told us that the refrigerator door probably is not airtight, but it seems all right to us. I remember reading a long time ago about a test that could be made with a $1 bill, but don't remember how it works? Can you tell me?

A — It's a test that can be made with any bill — $1 or $10. It was painted some years ago just close the door on a bill and now is getting a bit messy. That is placed so that you can still hold part of it. Now pull gently on the bill. If it moves or comes out without opening the door, there is a space letting in air. When you pull on the bill and it does not move or come out, try it in several other places before deciding whether air is getting inside. If so, a new gasket or seal around the edges of the door will usually correct the trouble.

Q — I have a home-made wooden deck behind our house. It was painted some years ago and now is getting a bit messy. What I would like to do is to refinish it with a wood preservative that has a little color in it. Can this be done without taking off the paint? If not, can I get off the paint with a regular paint remover?

A — You cannot apply a colored wood preservative over the paint. Yes, you probably can get off the old paint with a remover, but it would be one tough chore. It would be much better to scrape off any loose paint and get the surface in shape for a new coat of paint. Use an outdoor deck enamel or one of the other outdoor paints which can be walked on.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

First woman, black slated for space flights

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronaut who will become America's first woman in space greeted the news with uncharacteristic excitement, while the first black to be chosen for a mission tackled a pile of paperwork to control his enthusiasm.

Dr. Sally K. Ride, 30, and Air Force Lt. Col. Guion S. Bluford Jr., 39, were assigned Tuesday as mission specialists on the second and third flights of the space shuttle Challenger, both in 1983.

There will be two more missions on the Columbia before the Challenger begins operations.

Miss Ride, an astrophysicist, will fly with three male military officers on the mission.

Her voyage is scheduled to blast off one year from today — nearly two decades after Soviet cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova circled the Earth for four days in 1963 as the first and only woman ever to fly in space.

The publicity is nothing new for Miss Ride, an Encino, Calif., native who was one of six women originally tapped by NASA.

She served as the first female capsule communicator during the Columbia's second and third flights, relaying orders from Mission Control to astronauts testing the spacecraft's robot arm.

But the cool, calm and reserved voice of the first woman cap-com was bursting with excitement when she told her mother she had been selected to ride aboard the 38th U.S. space mission.

"Sally is normally very cool, very low-key but when she called to tell me the news she was bordering on breathlessness," said Joyce Ride, her mother.

Bluford, who was assigned to the Challenger's three-day mission set for July 4, 1983, said he returned to his office and a stack of work.

"The four of us assigned to the STS-8 were called in together and told the news. But they told us that we couldn't tell anyone until it was officially announced. So I went back to my office and finished some paperwork," said Bluford, who is married and the father of two teen-age boys.

Both Miss Ride and Bluford were among 35 candidates picked in 1978.

Miss Ride, a Stanford graduate, said she applied as a lark.

"Being an astronaut was never a life-long dream," Miss Ride said in a recent interview. "There was an advertisement in the Stanford newspaper that NASA was accepting applications. I thought, 'Why not?'"

For Philadelphia-born Bluford, one of four blacks in the corps, becoming an astronaut was "more of an evolutionary thing."

Attorney General says employer sanctions needed to halt illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith has installed a second private dining room near his Justice Department office because the first one is not private enough for small, working lunches, a spokesman says.

Of the 12 other Cabinet secretaries who run departments, 10 have only one private dining room and two have none.

Justice Department spokesman Art Brill said on Monday that the new, smaller private dining room was needed because "the one we had has only one table." He said the new dining room cost $4,300.

The original dining room is in the attorney general's suite of offices. Decorated by former Attorney General John N. Mitchell's late wife, Martha, it has a long, mahogany table, 12 mahogany chairs, flowered wallpaper and draperies.

It is used for lunches by Smith, his staff and assistant attorneys general, each of whom pays $2.50 for lunch. Breakfast at $2 apiece is also served there when the attorney general is in town, Brill said.

Brill said the additional dining room would enable Smith or other top department executives to have guests for private, working lunches or breakfasts without disturbing those in the other dining room.

"This is not a waste of the taxpayers' money, because it is more efficient and cost effective for them to have those lunches here where materials and people who may be needed can easily be brought in," Brill said.

Asked why Smith did not follow the practice of one predecessor, Griffin Bell, and hold occasional small, private lunches on a table in his office or in his conference room, Brill said: "The atmosphere there is not conducive to a working lunch."

The cost of the new dining room, which was installed over the weekend, includes cutting a swinging door to the new dining room from the attorney general's kitchen and moving three department officials to new offices on the attorney general's floor.

Rampage kills one, hurts three

CARPENTERSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Steve Schwartz was supposed to be at the courthouse where his wife was filing divorce papers, but instead he walked into a restaurant that had employed his wife and shot the manager to death in view of 30 people, police said.

Schwartz, the father of two children, was found Monday outside the hamburger restaurant, critically wounded by a shotgun blast, and authorities said he told them he had shot himself by accident.

Authorities allege that before he went to the hamburger restaurant, Schwartz, a 26-year-old former firefighter, shot a dog to death and set his own house afire Monday. Two firefighters were injured trying to put out the blaze.

Kane County officials said they planned to seek indictments today against Schwartz, according to Joseph P. Donohoe, a police detective in this town of 25,000 people 45 miles northwest of Chicago.

At the time of the shooting, Schwartz's estranged wife, Cathy, "was in the Kane County Courthouse with her attorney, filing divorce papers," said Carpentersville Police Chief John Skillman. "Steve was supposed to be there."

Detective Sgt. Robert Emerick said Schwartz apparently disconnected the kitchen stove from the wall in the couple's Carpentersville home, opened the gas valve, soaked some clothes in a nearby room with lighter fluid and lit them, before leaving for the restaurant managed by Raul Tio, 29.

Firefighters from Schwartz's former crew responding to an alarm opened the front door of the house, Skillman said, and the oxygen rushing in touched off an explosion.

"Spanning the Future"

With the First Truly Fully Automatic Hearing Aid

THE AUTOMATIC SIGNAL PROCESSOR... functions in this way... it is designed to operate essentially like any other conventional hearing aid when used in the presence of speech only or noise only. However, when speech and noise are presented to the hearing aid simultaneously, these two sounds are recognized by the hearing aid circuit and the circuit then begins to function in a way that allows the hearing aid wearer to distinguish and understand (in most cases) speech over noise. This activity within the hearing aid system is called phonetic compression.

THE AUTOMATIC SIGNAL PROCESSOR... was developed and designed for those hearing impaired people who have difficulty in hearing speech in noisy environments.

LEADS THE PACK. Alberto Salazar, 2, of Wayland, Mass. leads the pack as the Boston Marathon gets underway for the 26-mile, 385-yard run to Boston. Salazar won the race with the time of 2:08.51. Others identifiable are Neil Cusack, 16, of Ireland and Doug Kurtis, 12, of Michigan. (AP Laserphoto)

Salazar wins marathon

BOSTON (AP) — He has the speed for 10,000 meters and the endurance for the marathon. Now Alberto Salazar knows he can prepare for both the same way.

He won the Boston Marathon Monday in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 51 seconds, the fourth fastest marathon in history. Nine days earlier, he was second in a 10,000-meter race in Eugene, Ore. His 27:30 clocking was the fifth swiftest at that distance.

At the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, the races are expected to be run four days apart, and America's 23-year-old distance king is eyeing both. No Boston Marathon winner has ever won the 26-mile, 385-yard race in the Olympics. "I'll see" about running both, he said. "It depends on what my chances are."

His chances were excellent Monday in one of the weaker Boston Marathon fields in recent years. But Dick Beardsley of Rush City, Minn., turned it into a dogfight, finishing just two seconds behind.

Harvesters welcome Caprock today

Pampa looks for its first District 3-5A baseball win today as Caprock comes to town.

Gametime is 4 p.m. at Optimist Park. Pampa is 1-12 overall and 0-3 in district play. Caprock has had its problems also, even though the Longhorns were expected to make a strong bid for the loop title.

The Longhorns have lost three games in a row, including a doubleheader loss to Amarillo High Saturday.

"Caprock is 2-3 in district, but they've got a very good team," Pampa coach Gary Haynes said. "They can ill-afford to lose another game, so I anticipate them coming in throwing one of their best pitchers against us."

Overall, Caprock is 12-11. Haynes said the Harvesters have been playing solid defense, but are falling short in the rbi department.

"We need to get some runs across the plate," Haynes said. "We're 0-3 in district, but we've played tough. We need to start making a few breaks go our way."

Tascosa is atop the district standings with a 4-0 mark while Amarillo High is 3-0.

Tigers slip by Royals on Gibson's two-run homer

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The only thing Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson liked more than the sight of the ball going over the wall was the sight of it going over the plate.

Kirk Gibson broke out of a 1-for-30 batting slump with a vengeance Monday night by pounding a two-run homer into the upper deck in right field, catapulting the Tigers to a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

But as pleased as Anderson was over that blast, and Glenn Wilson's first major league homer in the seventh inning, he was even happier at the showing of pitcher Larry Pashnick.

In his first major league start, the right-hander scattered eight hits over seven innings, including Jerry Martin's third-inning homer and sixth-inning RBI-single. Anderson said he was rewarding Pashnick with the No.5 starting spot in the Tigers' pitching rotation.

In three other American League games on the abbreviated schedule, Toronto edged Boston 5-4, Minnesota stunned Oakland 5-2 and California beat Seattle 3-1.

Gibson's game-winner, following an Enos Cabell single, came on a full-count pitch from Royals relief ace Dan Quisenberry.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4
Boston reliever Mark Clear put a pitch right in Barry Bonnell's wheelhouse and the Toronto outfielder planted in the screen above the Green Monster left-field wall to break a 4-4 eighth-inning tie.

Two of the Blue Jays' other runs came on homers by Ernie Whitt and Lloyd Moseby.

Twins 5, A's 2
For eight innings, Oakland pitcher Rick Langford was virtually untouchable. Then he lost his touch — and the game.

"He's a good pitcher... a great pitcher. But it was our turn and we put almost all our hits together instead of spacing them out for nine innings," said Kent Hrbek, whose two-out, three-run double gave the Twins the game. Butch Wynegar, with a leadoff double in the third inning, had been Minnesota's only runner before John Castino singled to open the ninth.

Then Jim Eisenreich walked, Mickey Hatcher singled and Hrbek brought them all home with a hit that just eluded diving right fielder Tony Armas. Gary Gaetti's single sent Hrbek to third, Randy Johnson singled him home and Wynegar's single scored Gaetti.

Angels 3, Mariners 1
Mike Witt and relievers Luis Sanchez and Don Aase muffed the Mariners on seven hits while Bobby Grich doubled twice and scored two runs for California.

At the same time, Bell Labs has the loosest possible definition of what a common task is. In Penzias' case, the sky was the limit. This permissiveness dates to Theodore Vail, perhaps AT&T's greatest president, who believed in the early 1900s that the Bell System's near monopoly of the telephone carried an equal obligation of universal service. "Do anything, he believed," says Penzias. "Putting blinders on nature's most successful animal doesn't work." Pure research projects such as Penzias' and Wilson's are condoned because, among other things, radio carries 70 percent of the Bell System's traffic, so cosmic static could conceivably have some relevance. Having a Nobel prize or two around doesn't hurt recruiting, either. And if you do enough basic research, you're more apt to have a brand new technology on hand just when you need it. For instance, three Bell Labs scientists invented the transistor just in time to handle the immense upsurge in telephone traffic in the early '50s. Similarly, one technology, the laser, grew up independently from another, photonics, and the transmission of signals by light over glass fibers. The laser people start talking to the photonic people. The glass people at Bell Labs and elsewhere in 10 years have clarified glass as much as has been done in the 4,000 preceding. Lasers are improved. The technologies are combined. They are wizardries today. POTS tomorrow when phone calls will become light and wire glass. By then Bell Labs will have turned over the concept to its engineers and those at Western Electric, Ma Bell's manufacturing offspring, and will be long gone in search of the POTS of the day after tomorrow. It is push-pull on a fast track. A constantly expanding telephone usage demands constantly improved technology and constantly reduced costs. Bell Labs occasionally misses the boat. The cost of a new switching system was estimated at $45 million some years ago. It took $500 million and 4,000 man-years to develop. The Princess phone was so light it kept falling off tables. Picture phone never caught the public's fancy or its pocketbook. But Bell Lab's on-time record of coming up with breakthroughs almost on order is remarkable. "You can't schedule inventions," says Mel Cohen, head of crystal and glass research. But one seems to be always coming down the corridor just when it's needed. Size may be one reason. Bell Labs is big enough — 22,500 employees, 3,100 of them Ph.D.s — that it has a "critical mass," says Venky Narayanamurti, director of solid state electronics research. So many ideas bouncing off so many people generate more ideas on a self-sustaining basis. "We get the best," exclaims Penzias an hour later still brandishing a half-eaten bagel. "The kind of person who's pleased to be working with someone brighter than he is. We can guarantee our recruits they won't be the brightest in their group." Bell Labs' headquarters is here. It has almost as many other electronic outposts scattered across the New Jersey countryside as Radio Shack.

— Ma Bell, a very rich divorcee, is now a liberated woman. What's more, she keeps custody of the family genius. This is Bell Telephone Laboratories, the Yankee Stadium of think tanks that Ma's biographer, John Brooks, has called "probably the greatest invention factory ... that the world (has) ever seen."

Bell Labs has averaged one patent for almost every day of its existence. And that is 57 years. Its scientists have won seven Nobel prizes.

But Ma's prodigy has not been allowed to go out and play with the big boys. Antitrust and all that. Its wizardry was confined ultimately to what Bell Labs folk call POTS — Plain Old Telephone Service.

No longer. At the cost of giving up her 22 operating phone companies Ma — more formally, American Telephone and Telegraph Co. — is now free to take on the electronic world in any way her family's fertile mind can devise. Bell Labs is very fertile.

One day in 1965 Bob Wilson and Arno Penzias are listening to radio signals bouncing off a satellite. They have a very good listener, too good, in fact, for all the static they are receiving. So they start listening more to the static than to the signals. This is OK with management because you never know what research may turn up. Wilson-Penzias decide they are hearing noise left over from the Big Bang that created the cosmos. This wins them Nobels. Penzias becomes head of research. That's the kind of place Bell Labs is. Smart. Innovative. Flexible. So what do you do after you've invented POTS, and it works?

You probably wish that your uncle, Sam, would let you make computers and what-all like IBM and Silicon Valley and the Japanese. Last January the Justice Department tentatively settled a far-reaching antitrust action on just those terms.

It is transcendently difficult to find a Bell Labs scientist who is not inwardly delighted to be able finally to compete without fetters. How the players already in the game feel may be another matter. Bell Labs is a late entry.

But if, as it seems, the next technological giant step is to connect every middlesex, home and farm to the computer age, Ma Bell already has a large foot in the door. Just about everybody has a phone. Most of them are AT&T's. And they are already hooked up to computers.

Arno Penzias arrives for work every morning with a fresh bag of bagels he's bought along the way. He generates ideas, opinion and energy the rest of the day like an exploding supernova. A corporate research lab, he points out, is different from one run by the government or a university. It has to make money.

"In government you might work on ultrasonics for 15 years. But what if it's a good idea for only five?"

"If I'd been at Ohio State when I realized I wanted to listen to the Milky Way, I'd have done 15 experiments first. At Bell Labs you don't have the time. If you can't do it in three years, what are we paying you for? Bell Labs is what a university ought to be. The time scale is set by the importance of the work, not how much funding you can get.

"We have teamwork here. You don't in a university where professors are competing for tenure. People are helping you all the time. At the Institute for Advanced Studies (in Princeton) you come in in the morning and sit down in a leather chair spaced apart from the others
