Weekend rains drench region

Compiled from local reports and The Associated Press

Dense clouds dumped another 2 1/2 inches of rain on Pampa across the weekend, while rain, hail, tornadoes and storm scares were general across the rest of the state, and Wichita Falls residents again headed for high ground. Much of the central and eastern Panhandle was under flash flood watches until late Sunday, as drenching rains met already-soaked earth, leaving the new water no place to go.

In the southern part of the state, at least two people were killed and one was missing today as torrential downpours, high winds and hail continued for the second consecutive week.

Authorities were searching for a woman whose pickup was washed over a bridge in west Bexar County. Officers recovered the body of 27-year-old Michael Murray of San Antonio, who was trying to help the woman start her truck when both were swept away in rising waters.

Also killed was 17-year-old Sandra Bustamante, whose car was swept away after it stalled in high water in San Antonio, where 5 inches of rain fell overnight.

Heavy rains caused more flooding in the Wichita Falls area during the night. Residents along Holiday Creek were evacuated, some for the second time in less than a week after the drenching rains struck Wichita Falls.

A flood warning was in effect today for Wichita Falls. A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect for much of North Texas and flash flood watches covered most of North Texas and South Texas.

A home was destroyed, apparently by a tornado, on the Waggoner Ranch in Wilbarger County, but no injuries were reported. A tornado was sighted near Snyder in Scurry County early today, one near Silverton and another near Justiceburg in the Abilene area.

Baseball-size hail pelted an area south of Matador on the South Plains. Golf ball-size fell at San Antonio, where heavy rains caused some creek flooding in northern and western sections of the city. Baseball-size hail was reported near Grassland.

Heavy rain caused flooding of some low-water crossings and farm roads in the Laredo area.

Winds gusted to 80 mph at Sherman as a line of heavy thunderstorms passed through the area.

The Texas Highway Department reported water up to 10 inches deep across Texas 380 between Swenson and Aspermont in West Texas.

The weekend's 2.25" rainfall, logged by Pampa's official weather spotter, brought May's total to 3.62 inches, a third of an inch above normal for the month. The rain is not yet excessive, according to Gray County Agricultural Extension Agent Joe VanZandt, and there have been no reports of crop damage.

"We've got all we can use beneficially now," VanZandt said. "For the wheat crop growing now, we've got enough moisture to take it to harvest."

Evidence of the rain's effects are especially visible to the northeast of Pampa. Toward Miami and Canadian, the News Sunday observed stock tanks brimming, water standing in most low areas, and even the smallest creeks running.

The rain-producing cloud system in that area blacked the skies from

Insanity defense attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prosecutor suggested today that John W. Hinckley Jr. was able to get good marks in college, travel alone to California and work as a bus boy during the time a defense psychiatrist said the presidential assailant was developing a serious mental illness.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger M. Adelman cross-examined the psychiatrist, William T. Carpenter Jr., about the period in 1976-77 when Carpenter said Hinckley developed "process schizophrenia."

Carpenter has testified that the disease caused the defendant to withdraw into a fantasy world, leaving him emotionally unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of shooting President Reagan and three other men.

The jury in Hinckley's trial must decide whether he appreciated the wrongfulness of his actions and could conform his conduct to the law's requirements as it decides whether the defendant is innocent by reason of insanity.

Adelman asked Carpenter if he knew that Hinckley received A's and B's at Texas Tech University during 1976-77. Carpenter answered he was aware of Hinckley's grades.

Q: He got an A in writing?

A: Yes.

Q: He held a job in 1977 at the Taylor Supper Club (in Colorado) as a busboy?

A: Yes.

Q: This was the time he was suffering from process schizophrenia?

A: Yes.

Q: In 1976 he traveled by himself in California for several months?

Carpenter said that was the case. But the psychiatrist added that during this period, Hinckley was fantasizing, inventing people and events and behaving in an increasingly erratic way.

Carpenter told jurors at Hinckley's trial Friday that the defendant was controlled by an inner world of fantasy at the time of the March 30, 1981 shooting. The 26-year-old defendant was unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct, the doctor said.

When Adelman began his cross-examination Friday, he attacked the techniques used by the psychiatrist in forming his conclusion.

The prosecutor suggested that the University of Maryland doctor was looking for mental illness when he first examined Hinckley two months after he shot Reagan.

"You were trying to find evidence that Mr. Hinckley was mentally ill?" Adelman asked, jabbing his finger at Carpenter.

Ambulances still running

Pampa's Metropolitan Ambulance Service is operating today, despite reports of the company's pending demise, according to City Manager Mack Wofford.

Reports that the service is about to fold follow loss of phone service at the company April 22 and confiscation of equipment by creditors.

Since the emergency phone has been disconnected, creditors have filed claims for ambulance repairs and have confiscated communications pagers from the company.

Since the latest round of financial horizon to horizon, causing an eerie, other-worldly effect Sunday afternoon.

About daybreak this morning, Pampa was under dense fog which limited visibility to about a city block. Skies were clear in extreme western and eastern sections of the state early today and partly cloudy to cloudy elsewhere.

Sunday's high temperature was 57 degrees, and the overnight low stood at 48. A warming trend should bring the high mark today into the 70s, and temperatures around 80 are forecast for Tuesday.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s elsewhere.

Forecasts called for scattered thunderstorms over most of the state with some expected to be severe.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s, ranging from the 70s in the Panhandle to the 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s over the rest of the state, and highs Tuesday in the 80s.

Budget brawl expands

WASHINGTON — Divisions within the ranks of both Republicans and Democrats promise stormy fights on Capitol Hill this week as the 1983 budget is taken up by the full Senate and House.

The Republican-controlled Senate acts first, resuming consideration today of a $779.1 billion 1983 budget blueprint drafted by the GOP majority on the Senate Budget Committee and embraced by President Reagan. It includes a controversial provision for $40 billion in unspecified savings from the Social Security system over three years.

A $780.5 billion package fashioned by the Democratic majority on the House Budget Committee goes to the full House on Friday. It leaves Social Security untouched and calls for $52 billion more in taxes and $25 billion less in military spending than the Senate plan over three years.

Both plans project 1983 deficits of just over $100 billion.

In remarks prepared for delivery on the Senate floor today, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., told his colleagues that the election-year decisions he is asking them to make are unpleasant but, nonetheless, must be made.

"You cannot hide from the precarious nature of our national economy now and the prospects for even more serious problems in the future, unless we act boldly," Domenici said.

Domenici also told senators they "cannot hide from the impending bankruptcy of Social Security," adding "that in order to buy the good things this Congress wants to buy for trouble at the company, Metropolitan owner La Wayne Guengerich has remained unavailable for comment or discussion with city officials about the problems.

Wofford said today Guengerich still has not contacted city officials.

With the loss of equipment to creditors, the only remaining link between victims and the ambulance service is two-way radio contact between the Pampa Police Department and Metropolitan.

Emergency ambulance calls should be routed through the police department.

Falkland invasion seen

By The Associated Press

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is expected to decide within the next 48 hours whether to abandon U.N. efforts to solve the Falkland Islands crisis and order a British invasion, Britain's domestic news agency said today.

"Unless there is an unexpected breakthrough at the United Nations... the invasion now appears certain," the Press Association said.

On Sunday, Britain's defense minister said Argentina had a week to reach a settlement at the United Nations or face an invasion of the South Atlantic islands by troops aboard the Royal Navy fleet of 82-plus ships.

Press Association said Mrs. Thatcher and her advisers "are convinced that Argentina will never agree to withdraw" its forces from the Falklands until Britain agrees to surrender sovereignty over the islands. Britain has refused to discuss sovereignty as a precondition for withdrawal.

The news agency did not identify sources for the report by political and defense correspondents. But they are regularly briefed by Defense Ministry, Foreign Office and other government officials on a non-attributable basis.

The Argentines "are acting like someone playing a game of tennis and giving a precondition before the game that it is being played on the understanding that they win," Britain's U.N. Ambassador Anthony Parsons told reporters at London's Heathrow airport today.

"It is not an acceptable basis to start a game and it is not an acceptable way to start negotiations. We should not prejudice the outcome of the talks," Parsons said before boarding a Concorde flight back to New York to resume bargaining at the United Nations.

Parsons was recalled over the weekend to brief Mrs. Thatcher and her "War Cabinet." British press reports said Parsons was instructed to give Argentina another 48 hours to reach agreement. After that, the papers said, Mrs. Thatcher would give British fleet commander Rear Adm. John Woodward, the go-ahead to retake the Falklands.

Britain tightened its blockade Sunday with air raids on the Stanley airfield and two Argentine ships, forcing the crew of one to abandon it.

In Luxembourg, Britain pressured its European Economic Community partners to renew the one-month boycott of Argentine goods scheduled to expire tonight, warning that a show of weakness would encourage Argentina to stall a negotiated settlement. The 10-member bloc scheduled an evening meeting to decide.

In Buenos Aires, the U.S. Embassy strongly denied Ambassador Harry W. Schlaudeman was consorting with government dissidents in what newspapers called an effort to destabilize the ruling junta. The press accusations were seen as further indications of Argentine anger over U.S. support for the British.

Military sources reported today that Britain planned to step up its attacks on Argentine-held airfields, radar installations and communications facilities on the islands in advance of an invasion.

Argentina accused Britain of mounting "indiscriminate attacks" on unarmed freighters carrying food, medicine and fuel to the people of the Falklands and said it would take "appropriate steps to protect the residents' legitimate rights."

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez accused Britain of delaying talks held by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to arrange a cease-fire and negotiations on the future of the islands. Costa Mendez said this would be a "difficult week" at the United Nations.

One of the reporters with the British fleet, Michael Nicholson of Independent Television News, said in a report passed by British naval censors that the 8,364-ton freighter Rio Carcarana was hit Sunday with bombs and 30mm cannon fire in Port King Bay on the east-central shore of East Falkland Island.

At the same time, jets strafed another ship, identified by the Argentines as the Bahia Buen Suceso, tied up to the jetty near Fox Bay Settlement on West Falkland but "the Harrier pilots did not drop their bombs because it was too close to the village," Nicholson said.

The pilots said "the ship did return fire, hitting one of the Harriers in the tail," Nicholson reported. He said the plane made it back safely to the carrier Hermes and the pilot was not hurt.

The Argentine military command said the Rio Carcarana was set afire and the other ship was damaged. A British communique said one of the crews, presumably of the Rio Carcarana, abandoned the ship. The Argentines said each ship carried a crew of 30 to 50 men, and there was no loss of life on the Rio Carcarana.

Argentina also reported that the supply ship Isla de los Estados, reported missing Friday with a crew of 30 to 40 men, apparently was "sunk by British ships." It said parts of the ship had been found.

Britain said last week that the frigate Alacrity fired on an Argentine ship May 10 in Falkland Sound, and there was a large explosion.

British correspondents with the fleet said Harriers also bombed the airfield at the Falklands capital of Stanley Sunday for the sixth time since May 1. There was another air strike on the Stanley airfield Saturday, and on Friday night helicopter-borne commandos demolished 11 Argentine planes and an ammunition dump at the small Pebble Island airstrip at the northern tip of West Falkland. Argentina, however, admitted the loss of only three planes in the first British land assault on the main Falklands group.

British Defense Secretary John Nott warned Sunday that Britain would step up its military efforts and could invade the islands if no breakthrough is made in the U.N. peace talks "within the course of the next week."

Water reservoir gets cleaning

The shared reservoir for Lake Meredith water to the cities of Pampa and Borger is being drained and cleaned today, in preparation for the cities' return to lake water.

The holding pond for the two cities contains about 5 or 6 million gallons of water and is located next to the treatment plant in Borger.

Crews from the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, which supplies water to cities on the system, are draining the reservoir's water and are pumping a layer of muck from the bottom of the pond.

Once accumulated sludge is pumped out of the tank, the pond will be treated with chlorine, according to City Manager Mack Wofford.

CRMWA General Manager John Williams was unavailable for comment about the cleanup operation this morning. A spokeswoman for Williams's office said, "They are all over at the reservoir — they are working day and night to finish the job."

Wofford said before Pampa returns to lake water, the holding tank and pipeline to Pampa both must be cleaned and flushed.

Presently, there is about 10 million gallons of old water inside the Pampa pipeline. That water must be dumped, and the pipeline also will be treated and cleaned.

Pampa and Borger shut off lake water to city systems and began pumping 100 percent well water, following a terrible taste and odor problem with lake water.

City and CRMWA officials worked with private experts during April and May to find a solution to the foul water problem.

An expert determined that actinomycetes, microorganisms, and blue-green algae probably were working together to produce substances that cause taste and odor problems.

However, the expert said identified substances would not oxidize with other chemicals and said the only thing to do is "drink the water and be happy."

The researcher said the taste and odor problems are common with all Texas reservoirs, and he said intensity of bad taste or odor usually varies with the weather and season.

Still, officials think the present cleanup operation can improve the condition of the water, at least temporarily.

Wofford said unless there is an emergency, Pampa will begin using lake water again about the middle of the week. "Unless we have a large fire, we will not use lake water until the holding pond and pipeline have been cleaned and flushed," the City Manager said.

Postal Service enraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private overnight mail carrier is reassessing a television advertisement that depicts aged U.S. Postal Service clerks chatting about their pensions while a frustrated customer seeks their help. The Postal Service and its unions say the ad is insulting and unfair.

Frederick W. Smith, chairman of the board of Federal Express, said the advertisement was not intended to "denigrate an individual. It was an attempt at good, major ribbing" of a competitor.

"The Postal Service has obviously taken it differently," he said.

School board to review construction projects

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Education will meet Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert, to discuss a report on construction and renovation projects and to consider approval of revisions on tax appraisal notice requirements.

Bob Phillips, superintendent, said the committee on construction and renovation is expected to recommend advertisements for bids on roofing projects at Horace Mann and Wilson Elementary Schools, Pampa High School and Pampa Middle School.

The board is planning new roofs at the elementary schools, a partial roof replacement at Pampa High and repairs at the Middle School.

Two separate bids, one for standard materials and one for urethane roofing, will be required. The board will compare energy efficiency of the two materials before a decision is made.

The tax appraisal notice revisions include a clause that states notice of tax appraisal is not required if the increase of property value from last year is $1000 or less.

Weather

Partly cloudy with a slight chance of showers this afternoon, partly cloudy and cool tonight, fair and warmer Tuesday. Highs today near 70, lows tonight near 50, highs Tuesday near 80. Northeast winds 5-10 mph today, light and variable tonight and southeasterly at 10-20 mph Tuesday.

Economic boon that went bust

WASHINGTON (AP) - Millions of Americans waited in line last October to buy the new "All Savers Certificate," jumping at the chance to make a tax-free investment advertised as a boon to the economy.

But after that $32.6-billion start in October, monthly sales of All Savers plunged a low of $1.6 billion, in February. And latest figures from the Federal Reserve Board show that sales in October through March totaled $49.1 billion - far below the forecast.

Average monthly sales for the six months were $8.18 billion. But excluding October, sales have averaged $3.3 billion a month - a rate that if sustained would result in less than $80 billion in total sales over the 15-month life of the program. That's less than one-third the volume predicted by backers when All Savers was approved.

Economists blame competition from liberalized tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts and the drop in All Savers' yields. An All Savers Certificate purchased in early October brought tax-free interest of 12.61 percent. In less than two months, the payoff dropped to 8.34 percent; it is back up to 9.87 percent starting today.

All Savers is attractive mainly to taxpayers in the 30-percent or higher brackets (single persons with taxable income above about $15,000 and couples above $25,000). Those paying a lower rate of tax are better off with taxable investments.

A congressional economist, who asked not to be named, offered this explanation for All Savers' problems:

"The program was written to lure the high-bracket saver, but then they put a limit on how much such a saver could invest. There just aren't enough people in the 30-percent bracket or higher to buy the number of All Savers Certificates that would be required to make the program a success."

An individual is limited to a one-time exemption for $1,000 of All Savers interest; a couple gets $2,000.

Depending on the interest rate at the time, that limits a person's investment to about $8,000 ($16,000 for a couple).

Congress approved All Savers principally to prop up the savings and loan industry, which was being squeezed by paying record-high interest to get funds while holding a portfolio of old low-rate mortgages.

Helping the savings and loan industry would also yield dividends for the economy by creating a new pool of mortgage money, Congress contended.

The government now doubts either of those goals is being reached.

One government report released last week said most people are not increasing their savings through All Savers but are just moving money from a taxable, lower-paying account to one yielding a higher, tax-free rate.

As for any benefit to the homebuyers, none is visible, authorities say. The housing industry expects to start only 1 million homes in 1982 - the lowest on record.

Government candidate takes lead

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) - Government candidate Salvador Jorge Blanco claimed the Dominican Republic's presidency today on the basis of a substantial early lead after a big voter turnout.

Jorge Blanco, a 55-year-old left-of-center senator from President Antonio Guzman's Dominican Revolutionary Party, was running stronger than Guzman did four years ago.

Their party also was leading in races for the House and Senate.

In party primaries, Jorge Blanco was the candidate of the government party's left wing and opposed Guzman's centrist faction. But after the preliminaries were over, he picked up support from a number of more conservative businessmen and bankers. He also promised no radical changes in foreign policy - specifically not to reopen relations with Cuba.

Returns from 105 of the 5,611 polling places gave Jorge Blanco 15,630 votes, or 50.83 percent; former President Joaquin Balaguer, 75, of the right-wing Reformist Party, 9,848, or 32.02 percent, and former President Juan Bosch, the leftist who was deposed in 1963, 3,370, or 10.96 percent.

Five other candidates ran far behind.

The balloting Sunday was conducted in an atmosphere of calm unmatched in the recent turbulent history of this country of 5.6 million people who emerged from a 30-year dictatorship in 1961 and spent the next 20 years in an often painful transition to fragile democracy.

In recent weeks, however, there were sporadic street clashes in which nine people were killed and about 100 injured.

Election officials predicted the turnout might approach 90 percent of the 2.6 million voters. People waited patiently in lines that stretch for blocks. In the 1978 election, the turnout was about 85 percent.

The military, which four years ago tried to stop the vote count when Guzman started winning, was conspicuously absent from the streets of the capital. In the last four years, Guzman rearranged the military leadership, and this time the commanders pledged to remain neutral.

It was the fifth election in the Dominican Republic since a civil war following Bosch's ouster and U.S. intervention in 1965. But it was the first conducted in conditions approaching those normal for a democracy.

In 1966, Balaguer won while foreign troops were still on the island. He was re-elected in 1970 and 1974, but his opponents charged the voting was rigged and boycotted the election.

Graham stands by comments in Russia

NEW YORK (AP) - The Rev. Billy Graham, just back from the Soviet Union, says he noticed in the Soviet people "a hunger for something" which he believed was God.

The evangelist said Sunday on ABC's

"This Week With David Brinkley," he hopes to return to the Soviet Union for a preaching tour, and acknowledged that his change of heart toward Soviets may appear to be "an element of opportunism."

"I believe that there are millions of people in the Soviet Union that go to church on Sunday and practice their religious faith," Graham said.

"I'm not an expert...I learned that there are two sides to all these questions," said Graham, who more than 30 years ago called communists "Satan worshippers."

Graham, who returned from Moscow last Thursday, said he noticed in the Soviet people "a hunger for something, not necessarily God. I believe it's God... (but) they don't know it's God."

He said he visited the Soviet Union because "Jesus said 'go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel.' He didn't say 'go into the capitalist countries only.'"

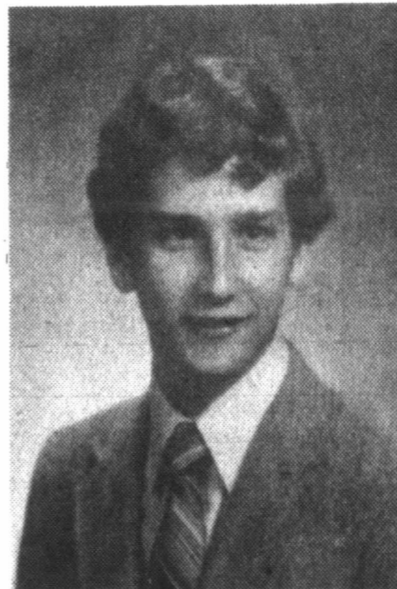

Graham agreed he had changed his tone since the beginning of the Cold War. He admitted it might look as if there were an element of opportunism in his change of heart.

"It looks that way to the outsider and probably looks that way a little bit to me," he said.

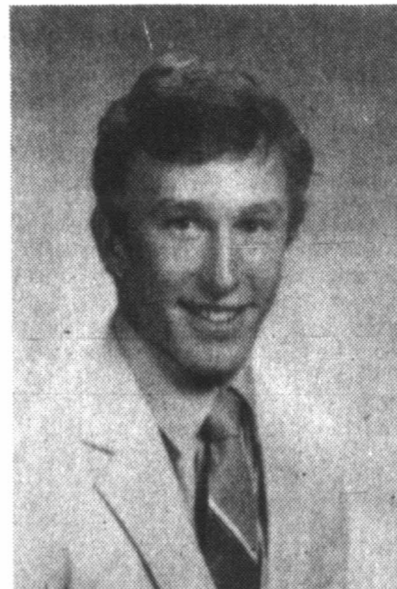

But he said his desire to preach in the Soviet Union was not egotistical: "It's not my ego, it's my calling."

He said he tried to focus on the gospel and stay away from political problems. During his visit, he attended an international conference against nuclear war and preached at Moscow's only Baptist church. He also prayed with six Pentecostals who live in the basement of the U.S. Embassy, while seeking permission to leave the Soviet Union.

Graham's comments about religious freedom in the Soviet Union were protested Sunday by demonstrators who gathered at his alma mater Wheaton College in Wheaton, Ill.

Miami to graduate 18

MIAMI - Wayne Smith is valedictorian of the 18-member graduating class of Miami High School. The senior class salutatorian is Craig Sullivan.

Baccalaureate services for the senior class were held Sunday evening in the school auditorium with Rev. Jerry Howe, pastor of the First Baptist Church, the speaker.

Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. John

Smith, had a grade average of 95.65 while Sullivan, son of Mike Sullivan of Houston, maintained a 93.56 average.

Other members of the graduating class include: Brian Bengel, Shann Billingsley, Mark Clark, Danny Clark, Kim Crouch, Mary Lou Grantham, Keith Gray, Mark Higgenbotham, Lisa Hinton, Rebecca Hoffer, Lewis Lisenby, Aaron Mercedr, Suie Morgenstern, Tania Stevens, Karla Stone and Wendy Hamby Weston.

Attacker still at large, women vulnerable

DALLAS (AP) - Police say they don't know what women can do to protect themselves from a man who went on a bizarre weekend spree of rape, humiliation and terror.

The man, about 30 and dressed in a gray, hooded sweatshirt, forced about 50 women to strip at health spas in three North Texas communities Saturday, police said.

Officers said they are convinced the man is the same person who raped one woman and terrorized nine others at apartment complexes here Friday. But the investigation is moving slowly.

"We haven't got a thing," said Dallas police Sgt. Randy Jones. "He has not set a sufficient pattern. He's changed his pattern. He's hit apartment complexes and then hit health spas."

"I don't know what women can do to protect themselves," Sgt. B.R. Little said Sunday. "These victims sure weren't doing anything out of the ordinary, and he got them anyway."

Between 9:15 a.m. and noon Saturday, a man wearing a gray sweatshirt entered three Elaine Powers Figure Salons - in suburban Garland and Carrollton and nearby Denton - and forced groups of women to strip at gunpoint.

Witnesses said that at one spa, the man told the manager to open the door and ordered the women outside. The naked women ran out the door and fled down an alley, investigators said.

Beginning at 1:15 p.m. and continuing until midnight Friday, nine young women and a man were victimized by a gunman in five incidents at apartment complexes, police said.

A man approached one woman clad in a bathing suit and ordered her to undress, but she refused and he left, police said.

Another sunbathing woman several blocks away told police she was forced to take a gunman to her apartment and commit sex acts.

An hour later, police said a gunman ordered a sunbathing couple to strip and then forced the woman to pose.

Lengthy special legislative session looms

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators gather back in Austin next Monday with a strong smell of politics in the air.

Gov. Bill Clements at first said the special session could be resolved in a couple of days, before the June 5 runoff elections.

More recent speculation points toward a maximum 30-day session.

"What better place can these guys find to carry on their campaigns than Austin in the midst of an election year," said a prominent Austin lobbyist. "The state will be paying their living expenses and the lobbyists will be entertaining them day and night."

The second special session of the 67th Legislature gets underway at 10 a.m. Monday, May 24, with some committee meetings scheduled the latter part of this week.

Clements, who is in the midst of an active campaign for re-election, called the session for the specific purposes of abolishing the state property tax and providing emergency funding to 17 state colleges for construction and repair.

Clements controls the issues the special session can consider and could expand the call later.

When the first called session met July 13, 1981, Clements gave it only five issues — including abolishment of the state property tax.

The session went the full 30 days and before it was over he added 12 more subjects including additional veterans land bonds, gasohol, bingo game regulation and licensing of psychotherapists.

The big failure of the session was the property tax issue.

The House approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would have abolished the 10-cent state property tax in the constitution but it stalled in the Senate. Senators wanted guaranteed sources of construction and remodeling money for state colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems, and voted 23-7 on the final day of the session for a 3-cent tax.

The House refused to accept the 3-cent tax and all efforts at changing the state property tax failed at the session ended.

This time, Sen. Pete Snellson, D-Midland, who sponsored the 3-cent property tax in 1981, will be sponsoring a constitution change that merely calls for repeal of the state property tax. A Senate committee hearing on Snellson's measure is set for 11 a.m. an hour after the new session begins.

Snellson did not seek re-election to the Senate but is a runoff candidate in the June 5 second Democratic primary for state land commissioner.

There likely will be other political interests obvious during senate debate.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who faces a vigorous November opponent in former Republican Secretary of State George Strake, will be the top elected Democratic state official facing Republican Clements on many legislative issues.

Other political interests include Sen. Bill Meigs, Euless, who recently switched to GOP ranks as their nominee for state attorney general in the November election, and Sen. Mike Richards of Houston, the Republican nominee for comptroller.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee meets this Thursday before the session begins to discuss the state property tax. At least five different measures have already been introduced in the House to change or repeal the state property tax.

The House Higher Education Committee meets Friday afternoon to discuss legislation to help school construction funds.

In the House, there are 22 contests for House seats on June 5 but only two of them involve present House members — Republican Reps. Frank Gaston of Dallas and Milton Fox of Katy.

Official: dirty tricks aided Braniff's demise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Braniff International executive says he believes an indictment will result from a grand jury investigation he predicts will show that senior officials at American Airlines instructed their workers to sabotage Braniff's reservations system.

Braniff vice president Sam Coats also said such dirty tricks were among the factors leading to the airline's demise and he added that Braniff's creditors might be able to win some compensation for their losses by suing American.

"In my view, one of the largest potential claims that the shareholders, employees and creditors have is a potential claim against American Airlines for violation of the criminal antitrust laws," Coats said Sunday, declining to speculate on how much money such a claim might seek.

American has denied past allegations of dirty tricks and on Sunday spokesman Al Becker said Coats' comments were "unworthy of comment."

Coats said he based his comments on "statements that have been made to me, documents that have been brought to me and turned over to the Justice Department, and various conversations that have been held during the past seven months." He refused to say who made the statements and provided the documents.

In a telephone interview from his Austin home, Coats stressed that no suit has been filed against American and none is being prepared. He also said he was talking about his personal opinions as an officer of Braniff, adding, "Braniff as an entity has made no allegations."

"I feel there will be evidence developed that American talked to some of Braniff's bankers and convinced them not to restructure Braniff's debts," Coats said.

He said he also believes it will be shown that American — Tried to persuade travel agents not to use Braniff.

—Discriminated against Braniff through the SABRE computer reservation system, which is owned by American but also used by other airlines.

—Instructed its agents to try to avoid booking Braniff for connecting flights with American's flights.

A federal grand jury in Fort Worth is investigating allegations that American employed dirty tricks in its fierce competition against Braniff. The two Dallas-area airlines shared many of the same routes until Braniff suspended all flights last Wednesday.

On Thursday, Braniff filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Act. Its chairman, Howard Putnam, said then that Braniff might reorganize and renew operations later. In an interview published Sunday in The Dallas Morning News, Putnam said that if operations are resumed, it would be a much smaller airline and would not carry the Braniff name.

Coats said Sunday that he hoped the investigation into allegations of dirty tricks "does not die just because Braniff is dying. Braniff is dead, but the court may have this claim and be able to make the shareholders, employees and creditors a little more whole than they might be otherwise."

"In my opinion, there will be an indictment that will arise from the grand jury investigation," he said.

Coats said he believes it will be shown that "there were instructions from above that activity be undertaken to avoid booking Braniff flights, to cast doubts on Braniff, to dissuade the public from using Braniff services, to not properly display Braniff flights with the SABRE system and also to preferentially display American's flights."

He said he also believes that some Braniff flights were not listed and that some people were told "that Braniff did not serve given markets by American when in fact Braniff did serve that market."

Coats declined to say how high he believed the orders came from, saying only he believed they came from "senior management levels of American Airlines."

"Basically it boils down to an attempt to monopolize the Dallas-Fort Worth hub," he said.

Senator calls again for income tax reforms

HOUSTON (AP) — Senate Finance Committee chairman Robert Dole says the number of people refusing to pay taxes is growing faster than the gross national product and almost as rapidly as the national debt.

Dole, R-Kansas, called for sweeping reforms to halt "the retreat from responsibility" that costs the nation billions of dollars in uncollected taxes and preferential tax policies.

"A few years ago, it was said that computers had taken the place of taxpayers' consciences, but now, even the computers can't stem the tide of under-reporting, fraudulent exemptions and just plain concealment that undermines tax collection," Dole said in a speech Sunday to the 2,000 delegates attending the League of Women Voters' biennial convention.

Dole estimated noncompliance now costs the nation $75 billion. He predicted the number would nearly double by 1985 if "the retreat from responsibility is allowed to go unchecked."

Recently, Dole said, the Senate Budget Committee adopted a proposal calling for $95 billion in additional revenue over the next three years. Unpaid taxes during that same period will exceed $200 billion, he said.

"We could collect the taxes proposed by the budget committee, drastically cut the deficit and in a stroke eliminate the fears now inhibiting the fall of interest rates simply by collecting taxes already owed but illegally withheld," he said.

Dole said reforms were needed to simplify the complex tax system and "to even the odds."

He said a simpler system with less paperwork and confusion would reduce concerns that the wealthy or privileged get special tax breaks unavailable to the average worker.

Admissions plan expected today

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — State officials who suspended admissions to Texas prisons and paroled about 600 inmates to ease overcrowding prepared to unveil their plan to accept new inmates.

However, the officials said they don't expect to admit many prisoners immediately.

"The plan for controlled admissions hasn't been totally worked out yet," said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley. "But we hope to be getting in touch with the sheriffs Monday and letting them know what the situation is."

"But I don't see a big flood of prisoners coming in, because we have to evaluate our space, look at the numbers and see what's available," Hartley said.

Because of a court order to stop overcrowding, the TDC on May 10 began refusing to admit new prisoners from county jails.

Officials had released about 600 inmates from Thursday through Sunday to make room for new prisoners, Hartley said. Under consideration as a possible plan for readmitting prisoners is a proposal to accept prisoners first from county jails that were hit hardest by the admission ban, he said.

Like the state prison system, county jails in Harris, El Paso, Bexar, Travis, Smith and Victoria counties are under federal court order to end overcrowding.

"We have a court order; they have court orders. We're certainly sympathetic,"

Livestock, art sale brings $3.45 million

HOUSTON (AP) — A chandelier-dotted ballroom replaced the smelly sales barn, tuxedos and couturier gowns took the place of jeans and cowboy boots and pure-bred livestock paraded by tables adorned with white linens and silver.

Hosts for the Western Heritage Sales were former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally and his wife, Nellie.

About 1,200 consignors, prospective buyers and guests hailing from 40 states and five nations received engraved invitations to bid Saturday night for the "most gorgeous purebreds on four feet," Connally said 800 others were turned away.

Breeders from the nation's leading ranch sold 26 American quarter horses and 26 Santa Gertrudis bulls, heifers and calves. The quarter horse is America's only native breed, and Santa Gertrudis cattle are a cross of Shorthorn and Brahman stock first bred on the King Ranch in South Texas.

Twenty-seven pieces of contemporary Western art also were placed on the auction block.

When the sales were tallied early Sunday, more than $3.46 million had been spent within a five-hour period, about $500,000 less than last year's record total.

"That may seem like a lot of money, especially since we're not living in the most encouraging of economic times," said Connally, who organized the extravaganza in 1976 with millionaire ranchers Louis Pearce of Houston and Joe Marchman of Dallas to inspire appreciation for American West heritage.

"This is an investment, not a toy," Connally said. Auction-goers dined on shrimp, steak and asparagus during spirited bidding at the Shamrock Hilton's grand ballroom.

The Derrick Dolls — cheerleaders for the Houston Oilers' football team — carried huge placards matching animals to program numbers and men dressed in black coats and ties carried shovels around after the animals.

"This is serious business, not a rich man's game," said Jim Reno, a Kerrville horse trainer whose one-of-a-kind bronze sculpture sold for $50,000.

Students correspond with 'keeper of the flame'

HOUSTON (AP) — A man known as the "keeper of the flame" at the Statue of Liberty has become a hero to a group of fourth graders at Ed White Elementary School.

A textbook essay about the Statue of Liberty sparked the interest of students in Room 14 recently. Later classmate Meredith Francis found a magazine article about Charles DeLeo, a maintenance worker in the torch for the past 10 years.

Students began corresponding with DeLeo to get to know more about him.

"How is the Statue of Liberty?" asked 10-year-old Scott Grissom. "I'm glad you are taking care of it. Is it ok to send a donation?"

Another student, Fang-Yi Liao, wrote, "I wish I had seen you when I visited the Statue of Liberty. I want to know how it looks up in the torch."

To the children's delight, DeLeo answered each letter and included a post card and a booklet about the statue.

The students thanked DeLeo by sending him a class photograph and a tape recording in which they sang the "Star Spangled Banner."

In the next package from New York came a flag flown at the Statue of Liberty.

"I raised the flag on the 100-foot flag pole on 80 different mornings."

Mailbox improvement

An easily overlooked part of the home that may be due Spring repair and improvement — the mailbox — is the subject of the U.S. Postal Service Mailbox Improvement Week beginning Monday, May 17.

Mailboxes — especially those on rural routes, curblines and highways — need to be kept in good repair to make it easy for the postal carrier to deliver mail, the U.S. postmaster points out. Weather damage, vandalism, abuse and neglect can wreak serious damage to these exposed but vital parts of the American home.

The postmaster recommends that citizens repair any structural damage, deterioration or corrosion they find on their mailboxes. He also suggests they make sure their boxes fit postal regulations. A number of styles of commercially available boxes are available.

It's some families' most frequent link with friends, relatives and the rest of the world. Be kind to your mailbox.

Stamp acts

When President Reagan proposed a tightening-up of the runaway foodstamp program last year, he was immediately portrayed as heartless and uncaring.

But if ever a program has been hideously abused and needed the knife — Food Stamps this year will reach 23 million recipients and cost $12 billion — it has been this one.

For a graphic illustration, consider:

Since 1977, regulations posted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (which administers food stamps) have contained a provision giving an unusual benefit to the American-born children of illegal aliens.

In brief, the regulation declares that while the undocumented are not entitled to food stamps, their children are. Going further, the food stamp allocation to the children must be computed on the basis of the parents having "no income," the problem being that if the parents are "illegal," their income cannot be legally recognized.

Thus, since 1977, local food-stamp administrators have faced such anomalies as:

— A family of seven with an income of $1,500 monthly (two adult "illegals" with 5 U.S.-born children) being declared eligible for food stamps.

— A family of seven with an income of $1,500 monthly (two native-born U.S. residents with five children) being declared not eligible for food stamps.

School controversy endless

There is a fatal flaw infecting the reasoning of both sides currently embroiled in the dispute over what are "acceptable" and "unacceptable" textbooks used in the public schools. At bottom, both sides want their views to prevail with little thought of the injustice dealt to those who disagree.

It is the nature of an organization that establishes an effective state monopoly over some part of our life that it renders injustice to others. The government schools system is no exception. If schooling were entirely a voluntary phenomenon, this whole brouhaha over teaching "secular humanism" and the propriety of school prayer would not be taking place. Everyone would select a school environment for their children congenial to their values and views and that would be that.

Once the state is injected as an instrument for operating the schools, competing sides vie for the power to control, and it's tough luck for those who lose out. Injustice to some is an integral part of the structure.

For years, we have observed the only way to avoid this situation is to have the government out of the school business, rendering education a voluntary enterprise after the fashion of churches, grocery stores, you name it.

About a century ago when government schools were in their infancy, a Princeton theologian, Dr. A.A. Hodge, made the following observation on the ultimate consequences of government schools as conveyors of conventional Judeo-Christian values:

"It is capable of exact demonstration that if every party in the state has the right of excluding from the public schools whatever he does not believe to be true, then he that believes most must give way to him that believes least, and that he that believes least must give way to him that believes absolutely nothing, no matter in how small a minority the atheist or the agnostics may be."

Dr. Hodge's foresight now seems to be confirmed. With government having the effective monopoly of force in education, there will be a continuation of conflict, conflict and more conflict over the value system, or lack thereof, taught.

Education as a voluntary market and or charity enterprise is the only resolution of this problem. Otherwise, we have no future but the throat clawing which has become a continuous part of the daily news.

Unique fundraising problem

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The National Republican Congressional Committee, which provides assistance to GOP candidates in House races, has a problem that's probably unique in politics — it is being perceived as having too much money.

As a result, some potential contributors say they declined to purchase tickets to the $1,000-per-person May 4 dinner jointly sponsored by the NRCC and its Senate counterpart, the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

The two committees last year sold a record-breaking $3.5 million worth of tickets to that party, but sales for this year's "Salute to Ronald Reagan" were well below that mark.

Final figures won't be available for several weeks, but less than a week prior to the dinner — the year's biggest Republican fund-raising event — its sponsors said donations and pledges totaled about $2.4 million.

Much of the blame for the decline has been attributed to a running feud between the White House and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate committee.

Packwood has publicly criticized President Reagan on several occasions in recent months, provoking indignant protests from some Republicans who boycotted the dinner and demanded his resignation as committee chairman.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., the NRCC chairman, says those who refused to attend the dinner "say they're mad at Packwood." But some traditional GOP donors say they've also become disillusioned with Vander Jagt's committee.

"Packwood is getting a bad rap on this," says one longtime party contributor. "The House committee has stirred up some bad feelings because it's no longer the lean and mean operation people expect from a political committee."

Another Republican contributor noted that the NRCC had more than $4 million remaining in its treasury at the end of the 1979-80 campaign cycle, compared with $2.3 million for all other national Republican and Democratic committees.

"That money should have gone into House races," he says. "The committee seems to be losing sight of its mission — to elect Republican candidates — and is devoting its resources instead to perpetuating its own bureaucracy."

NRCC Finance Director Wyatt A. Stewart III insists those charges are unfair. The big surplus is deceptive, he says, because almost $2 million of the total came from a major solicitation in November and December of 1980 — after the elections.

The NRCC is operated as "a carefully budgeted and well-managed business," adds Stewart. "Every dime of the money we spend is allocated in a line item."

The NRCC's $37.6 million operating budget this year is the largest of any political organization in the country. Even the well-heeled Republican National Committee has a more modest 1982 budget of about $32 million.

With a staff of more than 80 people, the NRCC has an annual payroll estimated at $2 million. At the beginning of this year, it had almost $14.7 million in cash on hand.

The NRCC does not fare well in statistical comparisons with other political committees in terms of the direct and indirect financial assistance provided to candidates.

In 1979-80, for instance, the NRCC spent $26 million, but only $2.3 million of that total — just under 12.4 percent — was in the form of contributions to candidates or expenditures on their behalf.

More than 25.6 percent of the expenditures made by the party's Senate campaign committee during the same period went to candidates. The NRCC's Democratic counterpart, which has substantially less money, earmarked more than 31.8 percent of its 1979-80 expenditures for aid to candidates.

"The year isn't even half over and I'm already worried about being 'maxed out,'" says one wealthy Republican supporter, referring to the federal limitations on individual contributions to candidates and committees.

"The congressional committee does a good job, but I've got to worry about who needs my money most and where I can get the biggest bang for a buck," he adds. "Under those standards, they just don't qualify."

Deficient in Merit

By DON GRAFF

The president's endorsement of a balanced-budget constitutional amendment during his television address on the current budget impasse has received minimal press attention, which on its merits is about what it deserves.

More than "political camouflage," as the New York Times editorially labeled it, it is the rankest political hypocrisy coming from a president who, if he has his way, would preside over the most massive series of deficits in the nation's history and who, repudiating the rhetoric of an entire political career, earlier this year depreciated the impact of deficits upon economic recovery.

What he is now saying is that goes only for his own recovery program. He can argue, as he does, that he has inherited a situation with inherent deficit-creating pressures requiring extraordinary measures.

But what he would now do is tie the future presidents' hands, denying them similar options in dealing with future extraordinary situations. Do as I say, not as I choose to do.

So much for the merits of the amendment endorsement. What about the merits of an amendment?

The idea has been kicking around for some time, longest as a grass-roots drive for a constitutional convention on the issue. Thirty-one of the required 34 states have to date approved invoking an amending procedure never before used and that many, in government and out, fear could prove to be a political Pandora's box.

The basic argument against a convention is that once convened, it need not limit itself to budget balancing but could act on other controversial issues, theoretically rewriting the Constitution.

Congressional interest in an amendment has been spurred by the desire to head off a convention through the traditional amending process — two-thirds approval by both houses of a specifically worded proposal and subsequent ratification by three-fourths of the state legislatures.

There is a proposal on this track now awaiting Senate approval with wording designed to meet opposition arguments that a constitutionally mandated deficit ban would prevent Congress from responding to national emergencies.

Three-fifths majorities of both houses could override the requirement to balance the budget in any given fiscal year. Simple majorities would be sufficient to inactivate limitation of growth in federal expenditures to the rate of economic expansion. War automatically would release Congress from budget restrictions.

So what else is new? Congress would in effect be confirmed in the deficit-creating powers it has always possessed and could be counted upon to use again when pressed — or pressured.

The basic argument against a balanced-budget amendment is that it is no substitute for conscientious lawmaking designed to meet the needs of a particular time. It is not a magic formula for fiscal responsibility.

The specific argument against the proposal now under consideration, and that the president appeared to have in mind in his endorsement, is that it purports to address a problem but is so worded that it would effect no real change at all.

That is playing the rankest sort of politics with the Constitution. It merits better of us than that.

Dentist talks back

By PAUL HARVEY

From the mailbox: Dear Paul Harvey News...

The other day you mentioned a dentist being sued by a woman who says the dentist grabbed her mouth and told her to stop acting like a child.

I know nothing more about that doctor, that patient or that case...but I am a practicing dentist and the experience of any dentist suggests there is a "rest of the story."

Judging from experiences of my own, here is what might have happened:

1 — The young woman was in the dental office for an extraction which should have been attended to two years before.

2 — She had endured the onset of pain for two weeks before she called the dentist for "emergency care." She also specified that she must be seen at such and such a time TODAY — because that was the only time she had free.

3 — After the doctor squeezed her into his busy schedule, she arrived 35 minutes late; said her car would not start.

Ten minutes later she was complaining because the doctor had not seen her yet.

4 — Now she is seated in a treatment room telling a frustrated assistant that she certainly does not want any X-rays because they might damage her health and X-rays are taken only to boost the dental fee anyway.

5 — At this point the doctor enters, looks in her mouth, orders an X-ray so that he can see what's really going on, taps on the tooth to see if it is abscessed. He explains the benefits of a root canal which will allow the tooth to remain functional; the patient refuses because it is too "expensive."

6 — In his desire to relieve the patient's pain the dentist takes from his assistant an anesthetic syringe and is immediately told by the patient, "I hate needles; can't you knock me out?"

He then spends five minutes, further delaying treatment for patients who are waiting, explaining why general anesthesia is impossible in a normal dental office.

7 — While the X-ray is being processed and the anesthesia, administered to the accompaniment of screams, is taking effect, the doctor is apologizing to the other patients for the delay — and will continue to apologize for the three hours it takes him to get back on schedule.

8 — When the doctor returns to remove the offending tooth, the patient screams at the top of her lungs — unsettling the dentist and alarming the entire office.

9 — The dentist seeks to immobilize the patient's head to keep her from injuring herself on sharp tools already in her mouth and tells her to stop acting like a child because this has happened several times this week, and he is at the end of his rope.

10 — After the tooth is gone the patient tells the receptionist and everyone waiting that she is going to "sue hell" out of that so-and-so dentist — and leaves without paying her bill.

Mr. Harvey, there is not enough money in the world to coerce me into reliving that experience — yet I do — several times a month — because it's "part of the territory."

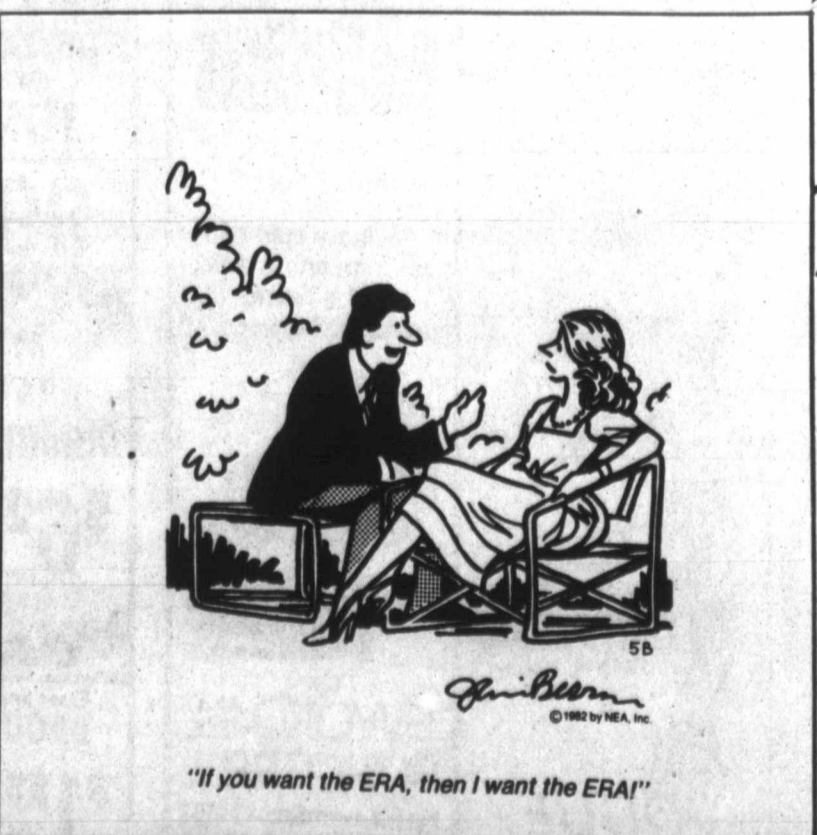

Dentists commit suicide at higher rates than any other occupational group probably because of such experiences.

Won't you please tell THE REST OF THE STORY. End quote.

Dear Abby

How much is a billion dollars?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our politicians toss the term "billions of dollars" around so casually that it might interest your readers to know how much a billion dollars really is. To illustrate:

A man gave his wife a million dollars and told her to spend $1000 every day and come back when she ran out of money. She did so, and returned, broke, after about three years.

He then gave her a billion dollars. After spending $1000 a day, she returned — after about 2,740 years!

FELIX IN LA.

DEAR FELIX: Thanks for explaining in understandable terms how much a billion dollars really is.

Now let me explain it in terms of today's economy: Let's say Mohammed Khalid Ibn Jamal (not his real name) gave his wife a billion dollars and told her to go shopping on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills and buy whatever she wanted. She started on Monday and came back on Friday. Broke.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Counselor's Corner

Take responsibility for your own life

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

You make me so mad! I'm unhappy because you made me late! She told me we wouldn't get caught; it's all her fault. He will not let me go. I get depressed when you get drunk because you scare me. If I do, my wife will make me feel guilty. My husband will not put up with that and has already told me I'll get hurt if it's done. We don't do that in our house, do we. Every time I come in the house somebody does something to aggravate me. Sound familiar?

These are often heard complaints from individuals who are not taking responsibility for themselves. Someone else is at fault, wrong. Another person made me do or feel a certain way. In the television, soap opera, Dynasty, Mr. Blake Carrington finds himself in all kinds of trouble because another person made the wrong decision, didn't follow the same pattern for goal attainment as he regularly chooses. The main source of the intense predicaments is his insensitivity to his ruthless, obsessive, hunger to control everyone and everything within reach. When Mr. Carrington becomes aware of his irresponsible behavior, and changes, the show will probably end. Most theatrical success arrives through projecting more blame on the other people in the show than their competition on the next channel. We may be living proof that soap operas are an example of our every day ways of not handling our behavior responsibly.

Being responsible for yourself is essential to good, mental health. Strength is noticeable in such a person. She will state her beliefs and defend them only so far as her health is concerned. There is no reason to get upset because someone disagrees or has a contrary belief. We follow our beliefs and behave accordingly.

Often our beliefs are in error. One person perceives a situation different than those around him. There may be a conscientious effort by the many to over-ride the one; but, the one is responsible only for himself. His responsibility lies in evaluating the action for him alone, then acting as he believes. Charles Bronson followed this pattern in the movie Death Wish II. Some believe his behavior was irresponsible. He must have believed otherwise.

This point is certain: no one can make another person do or feel any way. Yes, temptation is present, persuasion and manipulation too; but, I am responsible for the final choice and belief. It is symptomatic of mistakes.

A desire to associate with a certain person occurs when that certain person is responsible. He leaves himself choices. Sometimes couples, in arguing, make the remark, or similar remarks, "If you ever say that again, I'm leaving forever." When the topic surfaces at a later time, he has to leave forever, or else be a liar. Leave yourself choices. That's being responsible.

Belonging to someone or being owned by someone is irresponsible. Each of us is free to come and to go as we please, regardless of the circumstances. He or she can associate with whomever. No one has the right to limit your choices. Life is full of free choices. I am the one who will be responsible for the consequences. Freedom is a responsible gift: what I do with it is my responsibility.

This writer has followed a self-imposed rule for many years. As long as my behavior, choices, do not bring harm to myself or another person, I am being responsible. Should anyone suffer as a result of my behavior, it must have been a poor judgement at that particular time. Each of us must decide, within our cultural territory, what is responsible.

Good mental health is evident when I am able to take responsibility for my feelings because I chose anger, fear, joy and the consequences which accompany them. The devil did not make me do it. The truth is that my choice needs improvement. Maturity is the most responsible way to sound, mental health.

Harry S. Truman took responsibility for mankind, it seems, in the bombing of Hiroshima. Americans may believe it was a good decision. There are others who disagree. President Truman made a personal, responsible decision as a world leader. He did not back away from the consequences. Sometimes it is hard to make a decision; but, right or wrong, President Truman made sure you and I have the choice to be strong, free, unlimited and responsible for ourselves.

President Ronald Reagan believes his budget package is fool proof. He does not want to alter its content because adverse results might follow. This is taking responsibility for one's self. The British Prime Minister believes that the Falkland Islands belong to Britain and is willing to take responsibility to have them under her control. She is taking responsibility for herself. Pete Rose wanted to reach a certain number of base hits, and a accomplished his goal. He took responsibility for himself. The Pampa Harvesters wanted to play in the state basketball tournament last season. They took responsibility for themselves and played.

Success! When I take responsibility for myself, I become a successful person. I won myself, which includes my feelings, my habits and my behavior. I am responsible is the best way of complimenting those with whom I live, work and play. Even though the risk is a big one, the results are worth the price.

American Diabetes Assoc. to hold meeting

Diabetes now affects 10 million Americans and, along with its complications, is recognized as the third leading cause of death in the United States. It claims over 300,000 lives annually. Because of concern for those affected by diabetes in Pampa, the "Make America Better" Committee of the Pampa Board of Realtors is sponsoring the formation of a chapter of the American Diabetes Association. A meeting for those interested in forming such a chapter will be held Tuesday, May 18 at 7:00 in the Flame Room of the Energas Building.

When diabetes develops in a person the body either does not produce enough insulin or may not be able to use what is produced, thus causing high sugar level in the blood or urine. There is evidence that the high sugar level in blood directly causes damage to eyes, kidneys and nerves.

On the average diabetes decreases life expectancy by approximately one-third. It is now the leading cause of new cases of blindness. People with diabetes are 17 times more prone to kidney disease, over 5 times more prone to gangrene (often leading to amputation) and twice as prone to heart disease and stroke. Diabetes lessens the chance of a successful pregnancy and increases the frequency of birth defects and death of the new born.

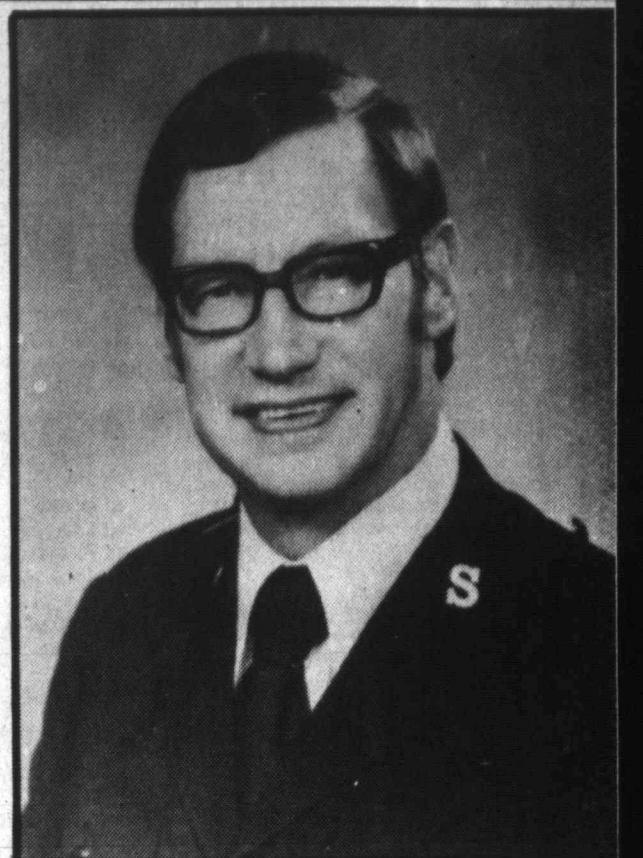

There are two basic types of diabetes; insulin dependent and non-insulin dependent. The insulin dependent accounts for about 10 percent and usually appears abruptly in children and young adults and progresses rapidly. Before the discovery of insulin this type was always fatal. Insulin dependent diabetes is characterized by the sudden appearance of: constant urination, abnormal thirst, unusual hunger, rapid weight loss, irritability, obvious weakness and fatigue, nausea and vomiting.

Non-insulin dependent is much more common and usually occurs in middle or old age. This type is usually controlled by diet alone, sometimes with oral medication. The progress of the disease is usually slower and it may go undetected for years. It usually occurs after the age of 30 and may include any of the signs of insulin dependent diabetes or the following: drowsiness, itching, a family history of diabetes, blurred vision, excessive weight, tingling, numbness in feet, easy fatigue, skin infections and slow healing.

Any of the insulin dependent symptoms appear suddenly and a person should see a doctor immediately and any one of the other symptoms can mean diabetes in an older adult, and a doctor should be consulted.

The aim of the American Diabetes Association chapters is to help people learn how to live with diabetes and to keep people concerned with the disease fully informed of the need for proper management of the disease.

Anyone desiring further information of the scheduled meeting can call 669-6240 or 665-5919.

LT.-COLONEL JOHN MIKLES will speak to the last regular meeting of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, May 11 at 11:45 a.m. at the Pampa Country Club. Lt.-Colonel Mikles came to the Texas Salvation Army Division from the Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi Division where he served as Divisional Commander. Mikles received his secondary education in Tulsa, Okla. He later attended the University of Tulsa, Wheaton College and Oklahoma City University where he received his B.A. degree. He has also done graduate work at the Candler School of Theology, Emory University.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

WINNER'S STYLE. Jack Nicklaus bites his tongue as his putt rolls toward the cup on the 16th hole of Sunday's final round of the Colonial Invitation Tournament.

Nicklaus went 7 under on the 16th after his birdie fell, causing him to reel around in excitement. Nicklaus on the tournament, his first PGA win in over a year.

Nicklaus wins Colonial title

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Jack Nicklaus was on the 10th green studying his birdie putt when he glanced at the scoreboard.

"I said, 'hmm, something's changed,'" Nicklaus muttered to himself.

What was about to change Sunday was Nicklaus winning his first tournament in two years, the elusive Colonial National Invitation which had eluded him in nine tries.

Nicklaus saw that challengers Andy North and Danny Edwards had found disaster on the tricky pond-fronted ninth hole. North had made double bogey and Edwards triple bogey.

"I decided to do something about it, and I turned around and made the putt for birdie," Nicklaus said.

It was a familiar scenario for the man who now has earned 69 tour victories and $3,907,320. Give him an opening and he'll bury you with his putter.

North temporarily recovered from the shock with two birdies to tie; then,

Nicklaus' killer instinct took over again.

North, trying to win his first tournament since the 1980 U.S. Open, three-putted the 15th hole.

Nicklaus responded by canning a 17-footer that broke a foot for birdie. The tournament was over. Nicklaus strolled to the clubhouse with a 3-under-par 67 and a 72-hole total of 7-under-par 273, pocketing the $63,000 first prize check.

North was three shots back, winning $37,800 with a final round 72 and a four-day total of 276.

Jerry Pate shot 71 for third place, a shot behind North, and Tom Kite was a stroke behind with a final round 68.

"Anytime you go through a period where you haven't won and you feel you should have well (the feeling) is just great," said Nicklaus. "I kept wondering when the wheels would come off, and it didn't happen."

Nicklaus hadn't played at "Hogan's Alley," the nickname of Colonial Country Club because Ben Hogan won here five times, since 1975.

He was 0-for-9. He also hadn't won a tournament since the 1980 PGA.

"I haven't played well here before because I didn't use my head," said Nicklaus. "I had failed to do so to this point."

Asked if he was starting to doubt whether he would ever win again, Nicklaus replied: "No! Now let's get off that question."

He added "The feeling to doubt whether he would ever win again is a nice feeling... when they get far apart you sometimes forget how good it is."

Nicklaus' sense of humor bubbled to the surface when he walked into the press room, eyed some of his critics, and quipped: "Well, it's been about a half-hour since I've won."

Nicklaus had some seeing-eye help for his putts. Son Steve caddied and Nicklaus decided he would ask for advice reading the greens.

Public golf course survey draws favorable response

A public golf course in Pampa could be a reality in the not-too-distant future, according to an opinion survey being conducted by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce's sports and recreation committee.

"We've had a lot of favorable response toward it," said Chamber assistant manager Brad Mink. "We're in the process now of getting the names of people who call in."

The Chamber committee started the survey last week.

A meeting will be called later to discuss the project if enough citizens show interest, according to Mink.

Interested persons may call the chamber office at 669-3241 to express their opinion on the public course idea.

The city's only course is located at the Pampa Country Club, but it is for private membership only. A public course would be open to anyone who could pay a daily green fee.

76ers take 3-1 lead over Celtics

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia 76ers needed no reminders about what happened the last time they took a 3-1 lead in a conference championship series against the Boston Celtics.

"We all realize it's not over because of what we've been through before," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said Sunday after Philadelphia routed the defending National B sketball Association champion Celtics 119-94.

What they have "been through before" was a reference to the Eastern Conference final series a year ago when the 76ers also took a 3-1 lead only to lose the last three games by a total of five points.

In 1980, Philadelphia beat Boston 4-1 before losing the NBA championship series in six games to the Los Angeles Lakers, who now await the Celtics-76ers after sweeping the San Antonio Spurs 4-0 in the Western Conference finals.

Despite the overwhelming victory over their archrivals in Game 4, which saw 76ers guard Andrew Toney score 39 points, Philadelphia was in no mood to celebrate.

"We've beaten the Celtics three in a row (since a 40-point defeat in Game 1)," said Cunningham. "and they've surely got the ability to win three in a row from us. What we've got to avoid are the emotional peaks and valleys."

"There's a possibility we could lose three in a row," said the 76ers' Julius Erving, who scored 17 points. "Anything's possible in the NBA. But if we prepare ourselves properly, we shouldn't lose any."

Echoing Cunningham, Erving added, "It's necessary that we be confident, but not overconfident. We can't celebrate."

The Celtics, who are on the verge of elimination after going 63-19 in the regular season, were totally dominated in the final 15 minutes of the game, when they were outscored 47-27.

They sorely missed the offensive spark of injured guard Nate "Tiny" Archibald, who suffered a dislocated shoulder in Saturday's loss.

Asked if he was more or less optimistic than when the Celtics were down 3-1 last year, Fitch said:

In Sunday's game, Fitch said, "We just couldn't stop Toney, either by guarding him or making him guard someone. But our game just wasn't there. It wasn't all Toney, not all the absence of Tiny."

The 6-foot-3 Toney was brilliant throughout the game, hitting 11 of 12 free throws and 14 of 20 shots from the field, from all ranges and angles.

But he was at his best in the third quarter, when he scored 15 points: Eight of those came in a 2½-minute span during which the 76ers outscored the Celtics 12-2, extending a 72-67 lead to 84-69 with 47 seconds left in the period.

Boston never led in the game, and managed only one tie, at 44-44 with 3:31 left in the first half. But the 76ers outscored Boston 11-4 the rest of the second quarter for a 55-48 halftime lead.

Robert Parish led the Celtics with 18 points, while Darryl Dawkins contributed 16 for Philadelphia.

Dugger wins Classic

T.R. Dugger defeated defending champion Forrest Cole, 269-201, Sunday to win the third annual Pampa Merchants Classic held at Harvester Lanes.

Dugger, who finished second in Saturday's 10-game qualifying round, had to use a rolloff to get past third-place qualifier Donny Nail after the pair had tied at 217 in the semi-finals. That put Dugger into the finals against Cole, who had the top qualifying round of 2.339.

In the opening game of Sunday's championship round, Van Vandebrook defeated Roy Don Stephens, 211-190. Vandebrook then fell to Nail, 194-174.

Skelleytown wins game

Brent Bridwell pitched a one-hitter as Skelleytown defeated Panhandle Two, 14-1, last week in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

Will Brown had a home run and knocked in six runs for Skelleytown. Rabbit Roger scored four runs while Johnny Furguson, Jeff Cox, and Kent Tice tallied two runs apiece while Bridwell, Michael Walden and Max Hinds had one run each. Furguson had two rbis while Tice and Walden had one rbi each.

Panhandle's only run off Bridwell came in the sixth inning when Tony Roche scored.

State track results

Keith Gray of Miami placed seventh in the long jump with a 20-9 leap Saturday in the Class 1A state track meet in Austin.

In the Class 2A division, Panhandle was fourth in the final team standings with 33 points.

Navy man killed, not sure it was political

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Police are hunting the gunmen who killed a U.S. Navy sailor and wounded three others returning to their ship after a night on the town, but they don't know whether it was a political attack or an attempted robbery. Authorities said the four young enlisted men were wearing civilian clothes early Sunday when an automobile pulled to the curb and those inside opened fire on the sailors walking back to the pier where the USS Pensacola was tied up. Petty Officer 3rd Class Darryl T. Phillips, 22, of Dublin, Ga., was killed while Petty Officer 3rd Class Larry S. Skowronski, 21, of Erie, Pa., Petty Officer 3rd Class Randall L. Keyte, 23, of Adrian, Mich., and Seaman Anthony L. Phaneuf, 20, of Ashville, Maine, were wounded. The Navy reported Skowronski was wounded in the abdomen, was reported in stable condition in the Veterans Administration Hospital with a good prognosis. Lt. Drew Malcolm, a spokesman at the Navy's Roosevelt Roads Base, said the other two were in the intensive care unit at the Puerto Rico Medical Center's University Hospital, in San Juan, with guarded prognoses. Keyte reportedly had gunshot wounds in the right arm and the abdomen and Phaneuf had a bullet wound in the right side of his body that might have hit his liver. It was the bloodiest attack on U.S. military personnel in Puerto Rico since pro-independence terrorists attacked a Navy bus in December 1979, killing two sailors and wounding 10 others in an attack on a Navy bus in December 1979. The same extremist organization that claimed responsibility for that attack acknowledged shooting at ROTC officers a few months later and claimed it destroyed nine jet fighters worth $45 million belonging to the Puerto Rico Air National Guard last year. But nobody had claimed responsibility for Sunday's attack 24 hours after it took place. That and the fact that the sailors were in civilian clothes indicated political terrorists may not have been involved, said one federal official who asked that his name not be used. Malcolm said authorities had no motive for the attack and could rule out neither an attempted robbery nor a terrorist attack. The FBI, the Naval Investigative Service and the Puerto Rican police were all investigating the shooting. Malcolm said the "unprovoked attack" occurred between 1 and 1:30 a.m. The four sailors had left a nightclub in an area of clubs and restaurants frequented by sailors in the Miramar area of San Juan and were walking along Fernandez Juncos Avenue toward their ship, police sources said. They were gunned down just after crossing a bridge from which the lights of the port and Old San Juan were visible to the west and the nearby towers of the Condado Beach tourist area could be seen to the east. There were large bloodstains on the sidewalk and trails of blood left as the young men had tried to run from their attackers.

Recession arrives in oil country

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's oil-fueled economy raced full speed as hard times hobbled the rest of the nation. But a slowdown in the search for energy is costing the state thousands of jobs and its "recession-proof" image. For the past two years the boom in gas and unregulated oil gave the state surpluses — $350 million is projected this year — while other states paid the bus fare to send their unemployed to Oklahoma. Jobless workers lured by the state's unemployment rate, once the nation's lowest, flocked from the Frost Belt to live in tent cities and labor in the oil fields. Firms sprang up virtually overnight looking for oil, and companies expanded to produce the goods needed to keep the boom going. Now a glut of oil worldwide, which has depressed prices, has sharply slowed the petroleum business. Workers in industries throughout the drilling process are getting pink slips. And many of the overnight "oilies" and firms have vanished as quickly as they appeared. The same thing is happening in other oil states. The drop in oil prices has cost the Louisiana state treasury about $80 million. Texas is in a state budget standoff because petroleum-related tax receipts are down.

Alaska, which counts on oil for 90 percent of its revenue, has cut state spending plans by 25 percent. "It's hit like somebody just threw a switch," said Thomas McLane, staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America in Tulsa. "This is just an indication that Oklahoma is feeling the effects of the recession just like the rest of the country." Industry officials say there's less oil being drilled because it isn't profitable to get it out of the ground. And because of the lack of profits, many new firms have bailed out. Most of the wells in Oklahoma are drilled by independents, who claim they take all of the chances in the risky drilling process, and then provide petroleum to the major oil companies. Spokesmen for the independents blame the slowdown on a worldwide oil glut, the falling price of crude, inflation, high interest rates and what many see as a vacillating government policy toward energy. Will Bowman of the Oklahoma Employment and Securities Commission estimates that unemployment among the oil-related manufacturing industries has reached "into the low thousands."

Bowman said Oklahoma's overall jobless rate could soon reach 6 percent — double the figure of one year ago — but still well below the national jobless rate of 9.4 percent.

Names in News

HOUSTON (AP) — The dress was black tie. The host was John B. Connally, former U.S. Treasury secretary and governor of Texas. The guests came from 40 states and five nations, by invitation only. The event was a cattle auction. It was the sixth annual black-tie Western Heritage Sale that Connally had arranged, and 1,200 people attended Saturday night. Cattle wasn't the only commodity being auctioned. Included were 26 American quarter horses, 26 Santa Gertrudis bulls and 27 objects of contemporary art. Auction officials said they netted about $3.46 million. Last year, about $4 million in sales was recorded.

U.S. seeking permission to arrest crewmen in mutiny plot

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The United States has asked the Panamanian government or permission to arrest five men suspected of killing the first officer of their ship and plotting to kill seven others in a mutiny, authorities say. The motor vessel Evergreen was expected to arrive at the Houston Coast Guards today after the Coast Guard and FBI collaborated Saturday night to quell the uprising at sea. In New Orleans, Petty Officer Jim Munro said the men would be returned to Panama for trial if the Panamanian government gives the United States permission to arrest them. He said the permission was required because First Officer Dajit Suberoi, 42, of Alibudur, India, was killed Saturday morning in international waters, about 110 miles south-southeast of Port Eads, La. "It's kind of a ticklish area," Munro said. A Special Weapons and Tactics team of 11 FBI agents boarded the Evergreen on Saturday night near the mouth of the Mississippi River. It anchored there after Suberoi was stabbed and thrown overboard, the Coast Guard said. "All we did was restore control of the vessel to the master and make sure these people were subdued and contained," Munro said. The ship was enroute from Italy to Houston with a load of steel pipe, he said. Before the ship left Louisiana waters, Gulf and Eastern Steamship and Chartering Corp., the Evergreen's U.S. agent, hired two private guards to make the 30-hour trip to Houston.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Alex Haley put Juffure, Gambia, on the map in his best-selling novel "Roots," but he says the West African village feels it was given short shrift from the writer. Haley said in an interview published Sunday in the Baltimore Sun that Juffure — the village Haley traced as his ancestral home in the novel spanning hundreds of years of black history — got only one promise from him: help to build a mosque. He told the paper he has fulfilled that promise by sending $6,000 to an engineer in Juffure to quote the mosque started. The paper quoted the chief of Juffure, 78-year-old Bakary Taal, as saying that Haley had promised more. "He made a lot of promises," Taal told the Sun through an interpreter. "He

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mary Martin thinks New York Mayor Edward Koch is "a pixie" like Peter Pan and says she'd even enjoy teaching him how to grow up. "I think of Mayor Koch in flight," the 67-year-old star said Sunday on WNBC-TV's News Forum. Miss Martin, who has played Peter Pan on Broadway and television, praised the mayor's theatrical talent, saying he has "magic" and "rapport with people." When she compared Koch to "a pixie," an interviewer asked if that meant he was "like Peter Pan." "Yeah, I think he is," Miss Martin answered. After demonstrating the crow she made famous as Pan, she mused, "I wonder if I could ever have the time to teach him (Koch) and (if) he'd have the time to learn."

BOSTON (AP) — An animated Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis rose and cheered as her family made the Boston University commencement a family outing. Mrs. Onassis, in a white frock with navy polka-dots, was accompanied by her son, John F. Kennedy Jr., a student at Brown University, and her daughter, Caroline, who was at the ceremony with her nephew, Anthony Radziwill, who was one of the graduates.
