Beutler Bros. best

A bareback bronc is an eight-second lesson in punishment. Rougher on the posterior than either a saddle bronc or a bull, they will pop and snap a man until his backbone starts coming through his hat. Some famous bareback horses have been known to leave a cowboy bleeding from the nose and ears from the concussion. This bareback horse of the Beutler Bros. string is doing a creditable job on this hapless cowboy in Thursday's action at the Top 'O Texas Rodeo. (Staff photo by Tom Allston)

Pan Am crash

All it left were rubble and bodies

KENNER, La. (AP) — Scores of bodies rested in refrigerated trucks, and a neighborhood lay in rubble today after a Pan Am jet crashed in a thunderstorm minutes after takeoff, killing all 145 aboard and at least 10 people on the ground.

The crash Friday of Pan American World Airways Flight 759 was the second worst in the nation's history and the third this year in poor weather.

Dazed and horrified disaster crews searched the suburban neighborhood where the jetliner crashed in flames, damaging or destroying eight houses and injuring at least eight people, one of whom later died.

Kenner Police Chief Sal Lentini said today that 10 of the killed were in their homes when the plane crashed — but others feared that toll could go higher.

"We could be talking about 160 or 170 dead in all," said Jefferson Parish sheriff's Lt. Nick Congem.

The search for victims produced quick results after it resumed this morning, with workers calling out the discovery of scores of bodies in and around the jet's twisted and still-smoldering tail section.

The search had been suspended during the night because rescue crews said the glare and shadows from portable floodlights made it impossible to identify remains mixed with the rubble.

Officials met shortly after dawn to decide on tactical arrangements for the second day of searching for victims. Sheriff's Capt. Mike Demma said about 10 separate search teams, including doctors, were fanning out over the devastated neighborhood carrying body bags and red stakes to mark the places where remains are found.

Demma said the effort was complicated a large, mangled section of the plane's fuselage that blocked part of the search area.

He said authorities were worried about moving the wreckage because the airliner was fully fueled when it took off and about 36,000 gallons of highly volatile aviation fuel had leaked onto the ground. He said fire crews hosed down the fuel, but added it was uncertain how safe it would be to bring in heavy equipment.

Another black body bag was lugged through police lines at 7:44 a.m. as the search crews began their grim work.

Let your farm grab some gusto

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Beer in large quantities can pack quite a wallop — as a fertilizer as well as an intoxicant, Cornell University researchers say.

Research associate Lewis Naylor said beer sludge used on six experimental plots in Oswego County has increased per acre yields from 1.6 tons to 3.4 tons of hay.

Naylor, who is conducting further experiments on Tompkins County fields, said farmers would welcome an inexpensive fertilizer and the Miller Brewing Co. would be glad to get rid of unwanted waste.

Beer sludge consists of hops, barley malt and corn grits strained from the beer before it's bottled.

Stephen Chirello, manager of Miller's Fulton facility, said some farmers have already recognized the nutritional value of the sludge and buy the spent grain to mix with cow feed.

Naylor hopes his second round of testing will produce conclusive results by December.

Thousands watch rodeo parade

Saturday's Top 'O Texas Rodeo Parade featured a colorful variety of entries, including this float and its upside-down rider.

Pictured at right is the entry from Gymnastics of Pampa, the winner of the Most Attractive Commercial Entry award. Second place in this category went to the Pampa By-Products entry.

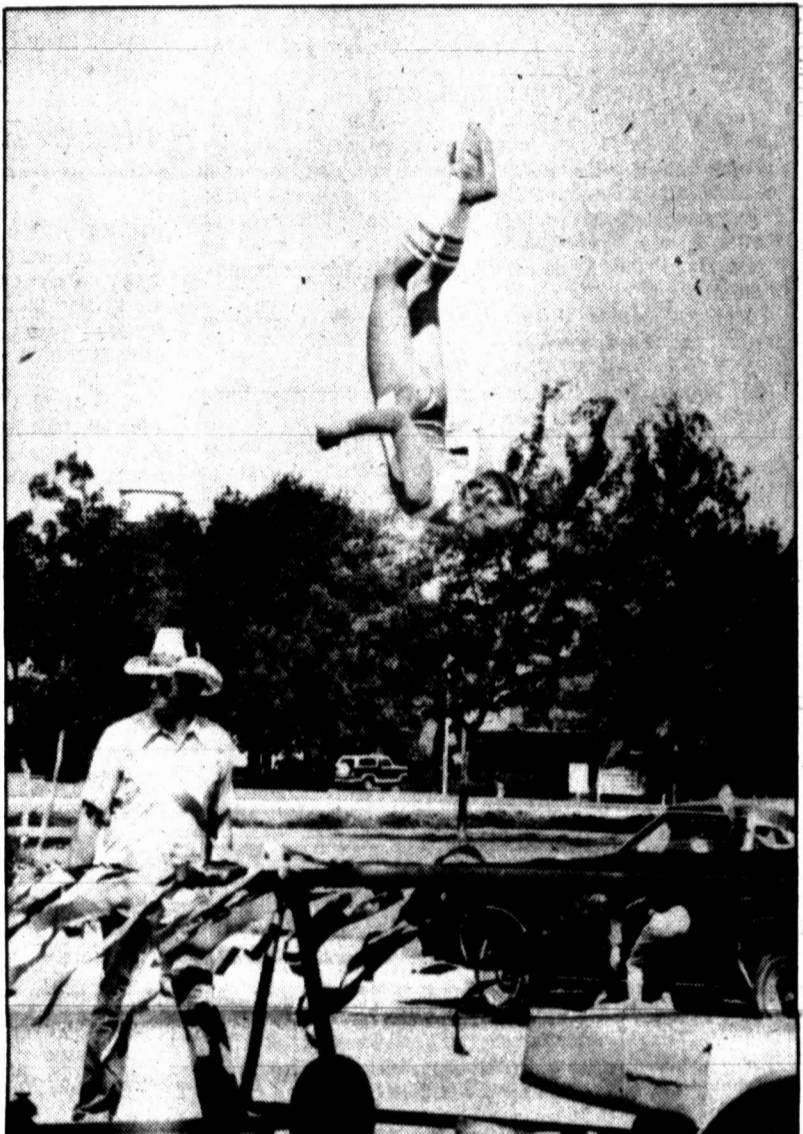

First place for Most Typical Ranch Entry went to Otto Mangold of Pampa for his covered wagon and horses. A wagon and mule team, contributed by Pat Helton of Pampa won second place.

The Khiva Shrine Clowns were judged the Best Civic Club or Organization Entry, and the W.T.S.U. Herdsmen took second place here, herding a buffalo down the parade route.

The Best Riding Club entry was made by the Gray County 4-H Riding Club, with the Hutchinson County Sheriff's Posse taking second and Amarillo's Valley Riding Club riding into third place.

Chad Taylor and Margie Eckelberry wore the Best Western Costumes in Saturday's parade.

The judges' favorite Classic Car was a 1920 Mercedes-Benz owned by John McGuire of Pampa. The second place winner was a 1955 Ford Crown Victoria contributed by Robert Brogdon of Pampa, and a 1928 Ford from Covalt's Home Supply of Pampa won third place.

Where 145 died

A burned out car and the tail section of the Pan-American jetliner clutter a residential street in Kenner, Louisiana, Friday afternoon. The plane crashed shortly after takeoff, killing all 145 passengers aboard and at least 10 persons in their homes. Firemen and rescue workers worked into the night, sifting through the charred rubble. (AP Laserphoto)

'Dirty Money Bandit' sentenced to the pen

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

The so-called "Dirty Money Bandit" and two other men were sentenced Friday to terms in the state penitentiary after pleading guilty to felony charges in 223rd District Court.

Calvin John Cockrell, 25, was sentenced to nine years' imprisonment by presiding judge Grainger McIlhaney for aggravated robbery.

Cockrell pleaded guilty to the May 21 robbery of Crawford C Plus Mart, 304 E. 17th St., in which he confronted a store clerk with a small caliber pistol and made off with $490 in cash and about 50 checks.

Police said Cockrell escaped the scene on a motorcycle, but was followed by a customer to the Hi-Land Mobile Home Park on West Kentucky.

The pursuer called police to the scene, and Cockrell was arrested in the home of acquaintances, where he was found in the bathroom, shaving.

Police recovered a mask, a gun and the cash in the arrest, but the checks were not recovered until police received a report of a clogged toilet from the mobile home residents.

Officers cut open a sewer line under the trailer and pulled out the "dirty money."

Wayne Nelson O'Brien Jr., 18, a former Pampa resident, was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment Friday after his guilty plea to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. O'Brien was charged with the use of a 1977 Chevrolet belonging to Top 'O Texas New and Used Cars, 503 E. Atchison, and reported missing May 20.

He was arrested May 26 in California by highway patrol officers when he was spotted driving through San Bernardino in a 1977 Oldsmobile reported missing from the Tom Rose Motor Co.'s used car lot May 21.

Court records show the plea bargain recommendation took into account the "admitted but unadjudicated" offense involving the Oldsmobile.

C.R. Karnes, also known as Carey Richard Karnes, was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment after a guilty plea to a charge of theft of property by check.

Karnes was charged with the May 15 purchase of a ladies' opal and diamond ring, valued at $619.75, using a bad check on his account at Citizen's Bank and Trust Co.

He was arrested in South Dakota and extradited from Rapid City.

The plea bargain agreement, according to records, took into account checks written by Karnes between Feb. 1 and March 31.

Former district attorney Harold Comer, appointed D.A. Pro Tem, and 31st District Court Judge McIlhaney were in court for the three cases.

McIlhaney said he and Comer were appointed to the cases because of the belief that the attempted murder trial of Leta Louise Jones would require a week of courtroom work by 223rd District Judge Don E. Cain and assistant district attorney Joe Hendley.

Paul Berry Bush retrial to begin

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK - The capital murder retrial of Paul Berry Bush, who is accused of the July 12, 1980 shotgun killing of Hemphill County Sheriff's deputy Marion Lee "Corky" Guthrie in Canadian, begins Monday in Lubbock.

District Attorney Guy Hardin will prosecute the case there, which is scheduled to begin with considerations of pre-trial motions Monday and go into jury selection Tuesday.

31st District Judge Grainger McIlhaney has been granted a request to be replaced in the proceedings by Judge Claude Williams of Dallas.

Bush was convicted of the slaying and sentenced to death in August, 1980 by a Wichita Falls jury. But the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the verdict because of testimony in the trial concerning Bush's alleged use of drugs.

The testimony was termed improper by Appellate Judge Wendell Odom because it involved an offense separate from the murder charge.

Bush was convicted on drug charges in a 1979 Potter County trial, but that conviction was overturned by the Court of Criminal Appeals on grounds of entrapment.

Guthrie was answering a silent alarm at Lad's Pharmacy in Canadian, investigating an apparent break-in, when he was shot to death by someone already in the store.

Bush was arrested about 15 hours after the murder in Dumas.

Investigators said at the time that the break-in was probably made in order to steal drugs, because the cash register had not been opened.

Witnesses at the Wichita Falls trial testified Bush's motive for entering the pharmacy had been drugs, and that he shot Guthrie outside the front of the store when he discovered the front door was the only way out.

Former District Attorney Harold Comer, who prosecuted the case originally, attempted unsuccessfully to gain a hearing on the overturned conviction on the grounds that testimony on drug use was admissible as evidence describing circumstances leading to the offense.

'Resign to Run' ruling in courts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says he will wait for the courts to rule on whether a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision means several Texas officeholders running for other offices have inadvertently resigned their posts or are ineligible candidates.

White had said he would issue an opinion in the case, but in a statement released Friday, he said he could not because of lawsuits filed by two affected candidates.

Earlier this month, the high court upheld the constitutionality of two Texas "resign to run" laws that said certain officeholders who have a year or more remaining in their terms automatically resign their posts if they run for another office.

Another provision upheld by the court says paid officeholders are not "eligible" for the Legislature during their current terms.

Lower courts had held otherwise, and several candidates ran for office on the presumption the lower court rulings would stand.

Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard, who ran for Houston mayor, and Bexar County Court Judge Caroline Spears, who won the Democratic nomination for district judge, filed suit to stop enforcement of the law.

Heard had two years remaining in his term when he ran unsuccessfully for mayor last year. Spears announced her candidacy with more than a year left in her term, which is up in January.

Republican Secretary of State David Dean on Friday criticized White, Democratic nominee for governor, for "avoiding" issuing an opinion.

Dean had sought White's opinion on whether officeholders whose current terms overlap with that of the legislative seat they seek are ineligible candidates, or whether simply declaring candidacy during their current term disqualifies them from running.

Dean also said it was up to White to declare sitting officeholders affected by the "automatic resignation" provision out of a job.

White responded with a press release later Friday saying he would not "give official opinions on any issue pending before the courts" because it would be "presumptuous" and because a court decision would usurp his opinion anyway.

Board upholds firing of teacher who slapped laughing 2nd grader

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education on Saturday upheld the dismissals of two teachers — one who slapped a second-grader for laughing during the singing of "The Eyes of Texas" and one who cursed when he got excited at athletic events.

The board also denied the appeal of a Midland high school student who was suspended after she kicked a teacher who had dressed as a witch for an off-campus "Spook House" fundraiser.

Mary Mathis, who had taught for more than 20 years, was fired by the Angleton Independent School District for slapping a boy who laughed during singing May 28, 1980. The laughter was prompted by another student who sang out a vulgar word.

The boy's babysitter complained to the school principal that the blow had left a mark on the boy's face, and an examination the next day verified there was a welt on his face.

In a brief submitted to State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum, Ms. Mathis' lawyer recalled that Gen. George Patton had "impulsively slapped a hospitalized combat veteran and accused him of cowardice" yet Patton was only reprimanded — not discharged.

Bynum on May 7 said Ms. Mathis' action "represents a clear and present danger to the welfare and safety of the child," and he denied the teacher's appeal.

On Saturday the board upheld the commissioner's ruling 16-4, although board member Jim Hollingsworth of DeSoto said, "I don't think any irreparable harm was done to the child. ... I might have done the same thing myself."

Teacher-coach Jesse Johnson of the Karnack Independent School District lost his appeal from a Dec. 1, 1980, dismissal when the board voted to uphold another ruling by Bynum. Johnson had been accused of using profanity, failing to pay school bills, leaving his classes unattended, making long-distance telephone calls on the school phone and of failing to turn in grade books.

Bynum's May 5 decision said Johnson "readily admits" having used profanity during particularly excitable moments while coaching.

In support of his motion to overturn Bynum's ruling against the teacher, board member Don Cook of Mesquite said, "How many coaches do you know across the state of Texas who have used profanity during the heat of an athletic event?"

"I would object very much to a coach using profanity with my own children," said board member Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard.

If profanity were used as a test, Hollingsworth said, "You'd have to fire about half the fans and coaches in Texas — all of them maybe."

Cook's motion failed 13-6, and the board then voted 14-4 to uphold Bynum's ruling.

The board voted 19-1 to uphold the 2½-month suspension of a 15-year-old sophomore at Midland Lee High School who kicked choir teacher Marilyn Jones during a struggle at a Halloween Spook House on Oct. 30, 1980.

Bynum said there had been "considerable friction" between Ms. Jones and the student, Lori Davis. Ms. Jones had volunteered to dress as a witch as part of a fundraiser to send the school choir to Vienna, Austria.

When Ms. Jones grasped the girl's arm and asked her to reach into a grab bag, the girl drew back, Bynum said, and flailed her arms about. Another student grabbed the girl from behind and in the struggle, he was kicked in the shin and Ms. Jones was kicked or kneed one or more times in the groin and lower abdomen.

Convict cop has new trial witness

PARKLAND, Fla. (AP) — A new witness should have a chance to tell the court what she knows about William Cobb, a former Parkland policeman waiting to go to prison for shooting two men in 1976, Cobb's lawyer says.

"Hey, I know it sounds bizarre and far out," attorney Alexander Siegel said Thursday. "But until the evidence is considered, I don't think William Cobb has had due process or a complete trial."

Cobb, 31, now living in Clinton, Md., is expected to be ordered to prison next week. But Siegel has asked the Florida Supreme Court to grant his client a new trial based on testimony from a neighbor who says a youth who was 16 at the time had a rifle and was shaking when she approached the scene of the shootout.

But Cobb told The Miami Herald he has doubts about the youth's involvement. "The last thing I want to do is pin a rap on this kid. I don't think they would indict him if it came down to it, but it's the best shot I've got right now."

The former policeman admitted during his trial that he shot Donald Eldridge and Roger Daugherty, who were picking hallucinogenic mushrooms in a cow pasture. He was acquitted in one of the men's deaths, but a jury convicted him of the other death.

Siegel said the new sworn statement from Doris Robertson, a former resident of Parkland now living in North Lauderdale, suggests that another person, David Graham, may have been involved in the shootings.

Graham, a Parkland resident at the time, testified at Cobb's trial that he had accosted two other mushroom-picking trespassers earlier that day, and was with Cobb when the fatal shootings occurred.

Graham testified that he remained close to the cruiser while Cobb tried to arrest

Eldridge and Daugherty. Ms. Robertson, in her two-page affidavit, said she and her daughter were driving past the scene when they saw Graham on the hood of the police car, his rifle beside him.

She said he "appeared to be in a state of hysteria, he was crying, sobbing, shaking and appeared to be ashen white." She said she reached over and touched his rifle and it was "warm to her touch."

Siegel said he believes Cobb will be granted a new trial. But Robert Bogen, an assistant state attorney general, said Siegel is "grasping at straws."

Energy chief says gas prices should stabilize

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Secretary of Energy James Edwards says gasoline prices should stabilize for the next year if the Middle East remains crisis-free.

Edwards said Friday that the United States has larger oil reserves and less reliance on foreign supplies than when President Reagan first took office.

He said the United States has cut the amount of oil imported each year from the Middle East to 15 percent of what the country uses.

"In 1980, we had only 118 million gallons of fuel on hand, and now we have a reserve of 264 million gallons," Edwards said at a fund-raising luncheon for 26th Congressional candidate Jim Bradshaw.

Edwards said that the federal government has also committed $20 billion to synthetic fuels research.

But he said the U.S. could still be affected by a cutoff of Middle East oil.

"We still import 3.7 million barrels a day," he said.

American producers must make up the difference, Edwards said, and nuclear energy could be a safe alternate energy source.

He said the U.S. is in a better energy position than when he became energy secretary because "we have increased oil reserves for the first time in 11 years ... are mining and exporting more coal than ever before," and are receiving benefits from oil shale projects.

Belushi's widow refutes attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The widow of comedian John Belushi says she is "baffled" by police characterizations of her husband and has accused them of making a "vile and vicious" attack on his character.

On Wednesday, Police Chief Daryl Gates was harshly critical of Belushi's admitted drug use, calling him "nothing more than a guy looking for something and the only place he could find it was in drugs."

"He died vomiting in the toilet and lay on some bed nude and to me that's a disgusting way to die. Kids need to know that so we don't have this hero worship of a man who abused himself and really abused the public significantly."

Arnold V. Hale is like a lot of other people. He's a retired road construction worker, originally from Arkansas, now living quietly in a quiet residential neighborhood in Pampa. But in at least one way, he's an unusual man, because he has an unusual hobby.

Arnold Hale is a beekeeper. "Yes, some people think I'm crazy," he said, standing next to a hive with honeybees — the stinging kind — whizzing around his head and crawling up his coveralls.

"But I've had people come out with me that never had anything to do with bees before, and they liked it." He and his friend Wiley Feese own and operate 25 hives in the Mobeetie area, and visit the hives several times a year — just for fun.

"I just like to fool with bees, that's about all," Hale said. "There's no money in it. I just do it as a hobby."

Hale, who lives at 932 S. Banks St., first encountered the little creatures as a youngster. "My daddy had bees when I was a kid, and I learned to fool with them then." He said he started working with bees at the age of 12.

His father's 20 hives were in homemade boxes, and all the honey had to be scraped out by hand.

Hale now harvests about 100 gallons of honey a year with modern equipment, and works with his wife Mavis to package the sweet stuff for local sales.

Feese inherited five hives when his son moved away from Pampa. "It's just like he said, a hobby. It takes up a lot of time if you want to spend it."

Both said they were not particularly nervous when they started beekeeping.

"I knew I'd have to let them know I wasn't afraid of them," Feese said, "just like any wildlife."

Hale and Feese were spending time robbing honey from hives Saturday in their 11-hive beeyard north of Highway 152, and about a mile northwest of Mobeetie.

Feese owns five hives in the yard, and Hale owns the rest.

Hale said when he married and moved to Pampa six years ago, he knew a Mobeetie area man who had a wild swarm of bees on his property, and Hale put his first five hives there knowing it was a good location, with alfalfa and clover blossoms nearby.

He later moved the hives to the property of Pete Seitz to have better access to them, he said.

In any beekeeping work, the first step in the process is firing up the smokescreen, a metal cylinder fitted with a nozzle on top and a bellows in the rear and filled with smoldering wood.

The smoke is later puffed onto the top of the open hive to calm the bees and force them to move down out of the way.

Hale and Feese don elbow-length gloves, coveralls over their clothing and hardhats and veils tied at the neck.

Do they ever get stung?

"Not as long as we're careful. We get careless once in a while," Feese said. "On one layer of clothing they'll get through sometimes," he said, displaying his right arm where he has been stung three times.

"They get under the veil sometimes," Hale said. But if they do, "if a man can control himself, he'll get by with one sting, instead of 10 or 15 if he knocks the veil off."

Feese began by opening the rectangular wooden boxes of the hives with a flat metal hive tool made especially for beekeeping work.

"Good morning, little fellas. Let's be good to each other all day," Feese said, prying up the cover on a humming swarm.

Each box in a hive contains wooden "frames" which hang vertically and are filled with wax honeycomb.

The interior of the hive is in two parts. In two lower boxes dark wax comb used by the bees for raising brood from eggs, storing pollen for food, and storing honey for their own use.

The upper boxes are called supers, and are placed on top of the other boxes for bees to fill with honey.

Hale and Feese pulled the frames from the supers one by one and looked at them with discerning eyes.

Some of the cells in the honeycomb were capped with wax, some were not.

"It's best to wait until they're capped," Hale said, because the capped honey is "ripe."

Hale literally swept the bees off the combs with a brush and put the frames in other boxes for transportation home.

When one particularly full frame came out, Feese said "If there weren't bees on it, I'd like to take a bite out of it."

"I've got to be sure there's no bees in here when I bring it home," Hale said. "My wife is allergic to bee stings."

"One sting and he has to take her to the hospital," Feese said.

Hobby with a sting

When the honey reaches Hale's house, some combs are cut out of the wooden frames to sell whole, and on others the wax caps are cut off with an electrically-powered hot knife.

These frames are then placed into a hand cranked "extractor," which whirls the honey out of the familiar octagonal cells by centrifugal force.

The honey runs down the walls of the round extractor and is collected into bottles.

Hale also saves and melts down the wax into blocks. He said he has sold two or three pounds of the wax. "One fellow bought some to make medicine out of. Another fellow bought some to use for traps," Hale said.

Hale's main product is raw honey. Most honey that can be purchased in stores has been filtered, mixed with honey from different areas and processed.

"My customers tell me that this is a lot better," Hale said, "but I don't know."

This will be a good year for harvest, according to Hale. Bees make honey using nectar from blossoms, and the alfalfa crop in the area was in "pretty good bloom."

The bees begin their gathering work in May, he said, and his harvest comes sometime in early or mid-July.

The rest of the summer Hale watches out for diseases, extra honey or breeding problems in the swarm, and in November he "winterizes" the hives by plugging holes to keep mice out and feeding the needy ones with sugar water.

He has come to the rescue of homeowners in the area who have had wild bee swarms move into the walls of their houses.

"Most of them are used to these bees before we get there," he said.

The yearly routine, and its occasional surprises, keep Hale and Feese involved in the bees. "They're odd critters," Hale said.

"Every time you go out you can learn something," Feese said. "It's just amazing and real interesting."

But neither would advise others to get into the hobby on a whim.

"So many people have beehives that don't take care of them," Feese said.

"Some people think all they have to do is get some bees and put them in a box somewhere, getting honey whenever they get thirsty for it," Hale said.

"There's a lot of work to it," Feese said.

What kind of person does it take to keep bees?

"Calm, kind of slow..." Hale said.

"...easygoing..." added Feese.

"If a guy starts working too fast with them, he'll get in trouble." "You have to talk to them once in a while. Cuss them out."

Hale said by keeping the number of hives within his working limits he has avoided some problems.

A type of moth called the wax moth will occasionally lay eggs in a weak hive, and the larvae of the moth will eat holes through the wax and destroy the hive's usefulness.

Mice also like to move into weak hives and chew the wax and wood, building nests for the winter.

And bees will occasionally attempt to raise a second queen and split in two swarms, leaving a weak swarm behind.

Hale said occasional visits to each hive can nip these troubles in the bud. It's a hobby that keeps he and Feese busy but happy.

"I don't like it, it's too much work," Feese joked.

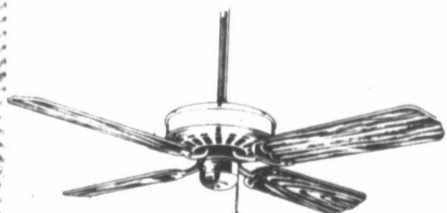

"Now Wiley, if you didn't have bees to fool with, I don't know what you'd do," Hale replied.

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

We had a lot of participation at the Sick Plant Clinic recently.

A lot of the problems centered around Mimosa trees with Fusarium Wilt, tomatoes with Septoria Leaf Spot Fungus and Cottonwood tree leaves with leaf miners.

On the subject of the fusarium wilt, it is bad news for mimosa tree owners.

The symptoms include leaves wilting, drying and shriveling, although they may remain green or yellowish for some time. Later the leaves fall and the branch dies. Sometimes only one side of a tree may be affected the first year, but trees usually wilt and die within a year of onset of symptoms.

Suckers may sprout from the main trunk, but there is usually no recovery. Brown discoloration can be found in the sapwood of trunks and branches even before leaves wilt. Discolored areas of cut stems may appear as complete rings. Dark rings are also present in the roots. Infection is through the roots. The fungus can be carried over in seed from diseased trees.

Our advice is not to spend any money on trying to save a sick mimosa tree. It will die anyway — use the money to buy you a good replacement tree if it is in a valuable location.

On the subject of the Septoria leaf spot on tomatoes — infection usually occurs on the lower leaves near the ground, after plants begin to set fruit. At first, small, watersoaked spots are observed, which under ideal conditions will become numerous. Large areas of the leaves may be affected, but the individual spots can be recognized. The watersoaked spots become roughly circular, with dark margins surrounding a light gray center with time, black specks which are spore producing bodies, can be seen in the center of the spots. If the spots are numerous, the lower leaves will turn yellow, die and progressively drop from the plant, until only a few leaves remain on the top of the plant. The fungus is most active when temperatures range from 60 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit, and humidity conditions are high. The disease is usually not serious during periods of hot, dry weather. The fungus can overwinter on crop residues from previous crops, decaying vegetation and some tomato related wild hosts. Crop rotation plowing under crop residues, and clean cultivation will reduce the amount of inoculum in tomato fields. Repeated applications of such fungicides as: captan, dyrene, maneb, or zineb can assist in controlling the disease.

For the leaf miners on the cottonwood trees, you can essentially forget them. They have only one generation per year and after they get between the two leaf surfaces an insecticidal application will not control them.

REDUCE LANDSCAPE GARDEN WATERING

You can reduce the use of water in your home garden and landscape by following these eight tips.

1. Mulch to conserve water. A mulch is anything which covers the ground around plants and between rows. Mulching conserves moisture in the soil by reducing the rate of evaporation. Mulch also greatly reduces the presence of weeds, which compete with your plants for precious water and nutrients.

Many organic materials may be used as mulches, such as grass clippings (let the grass dry a bit before applying to the garden), wheat, straw, partially decomposed leaves or compost.

Plastic mulch also works well, is easy to use and prevents surface evaporation. Plastic mulch, when applied in the spring, keeps soil warmer and gives summer crops like tomatoes and peppers a faster start.

Try to put on the mulches when the soil is moist, even if you're not ready to plant. You can easily push back organic mulch at planting time, or cut slits or holes in plastic mulch. Ground mulched when dry is apt to stay dry if rain is sparse.

2. Grow cool-weather crops. In many areas, rainfall is heaviest in spring and fall. Ground water evaporates more slowly in cool weather, too, so take full advantage of spring and fall growing seasons for crops that like cool conditions: beets, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, collards, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard greens, onions, peas, spinach, Swiss chard and tarragon. Plant these crops early in spring so they finish production before hot summer.

3. Plant summer crops early. Transplant your indoor-started tomatoes, peppers and eggplants — and direct-sow beans, cucumbers and squash — a little earlier than usual to encourage bearing before sizzling temperatures arrive. If unusually late spring frost threatens, cover the young plants at night with hotcaps, inverted plastic milk jugs or other protective devices. Remove covers in the morning.

4. Use shade to advantage. Moisture evaporates more slowly in shaded soil than in sun. Leafy vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce, spinach and Swiss chard do well in partial (not complete) shade — that is, areas which receive full sun for only part of the day. Basil, mint, parsley and tarragon are a few herbs which thrive in partial shade. But fruiting vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers and vine crops need full sun for satisfactory production.

5. Space plants closely. Space plants and rows so maturing plants just overlap. This will shade the ground to reduce moisture loss and weed competition. If you use a mechanical cultivator, you may need to switch to hand cultivation in narrower rows.

6. Harvest young. Pick your vegetables when they are at their prime — don't let them overripen. Picking reduces moisture requirements of plants and encourages continued production.

7. Weed regularly. Weeds compete with vegetables and flowers for every drop of water — and often the stronger, deep-rooted weeds win the competition! Remove weeds as soon as they show themselves in your garden. Some weeds, like purslane, lamb's quarter and chickweed, may be eaten if picked young.

8. Water deeply, not often. Water in the evening or early morning. Use special soil-soaking hoses which allow water to drip slowly into the ground, and place hoses close to plants.

UNLICENSED. Nightclub owner Klaus Lehman of Phoenix, Ariz., stands in front of the auto license plates customers have been trading for free drinks, a policy he began when he learned that Arizona would be switching from requiring two plates per vehicle to only one. But, what he learned only recently is that authorities now are saying car owners must retain that second plate if they were issued two originally. (AP Laserphoto)

Shark found in Lake Sabine

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Here's a whale of a fish story: a 26-foot-long, five-ton shark showed up in Lake Sabine.

Anglers spotted the enormous fish swimming in the lake earlier this week. Scientists identified it as an immature whale shark, a docile fish harmless to man.

Lake Sabine, a salty to brackish lake, is connected to the Gulf of Mexico by the Sabine-Neches ship channel and officials theorize the whale shark swam up the channel to the lake.

The shark died, probably because the water was not deep enough for it to swim and get necessary oxygen, scientists said. City sanitation crews had to find a way Thursday to haul the the huge beast out of the lake and to the city dump.

The shark was so heavy it snapped ropes, and when officials hooked up a tow chain, the heavy corpse dragged the trucks toward the water. Finally a crane hoist was used to lift the dead fish into a waiting garbage truck.

The shark measured 26 feet, 2 inches from the tip of its nose to the end of its rear fin. The eyes measured a full six feet apart and its girth — measured behind its pectoral, or front fins — was 12 feet, 2 inches.

"That's a big fish story, isn't it?" said marine biologist W.C. Runnels, director of Oceanographic Technology at Lamar University in nearby Beaumont.

Send Your Opinion To Austin

WE MUST PLAN AHEAD

AUSTIN — One issue the Legislature must face in the 1983 session is that of a statewide water plan for Texas. Such a plan is important for the whole state, although sometimes it seems like people in our area are the only ones who realize how important it is.

Actually, most people would agree on the need for such a plan. We would go further. We believe we not only need a good water plan, but we also need to begin to implement that plan.

One thing seems certain. We need more water in our area. The water table of the Ogallala is dropping. Even though we sometimes have too much water in one place at one time, flooding is rare.

Flooding like that we have experienced recently in some counties is just one example of why we need a comprehensive water plan for the state. If we had the proper reservoirs, we could retain much of the flood water that pours through the Panhandle and South Plains. Many residents of East Texas take up arms every time someone from our part of the state mentions a water plan. They are afraid we will try to steal their water.

With a good plan to catch our own flood water, we should not need any East Texas contribution.

Where should these reservoirs be located?

How many of them do we need? What size should they be? How should we transport water from the reservoirs to the site where it is needed? What effect will this storage and transportation system have on the environment?

These are just some of the questions we must answer. The nation is losing 12 square miles of farmland every day. We must protect the farmland we have in Texas and we must make sure we have the water that farmland needs.

We must examine our water and wastewater problems for urban areas, too. Texas will be the second most populous state in five years or so, and most Texans will live in cities.

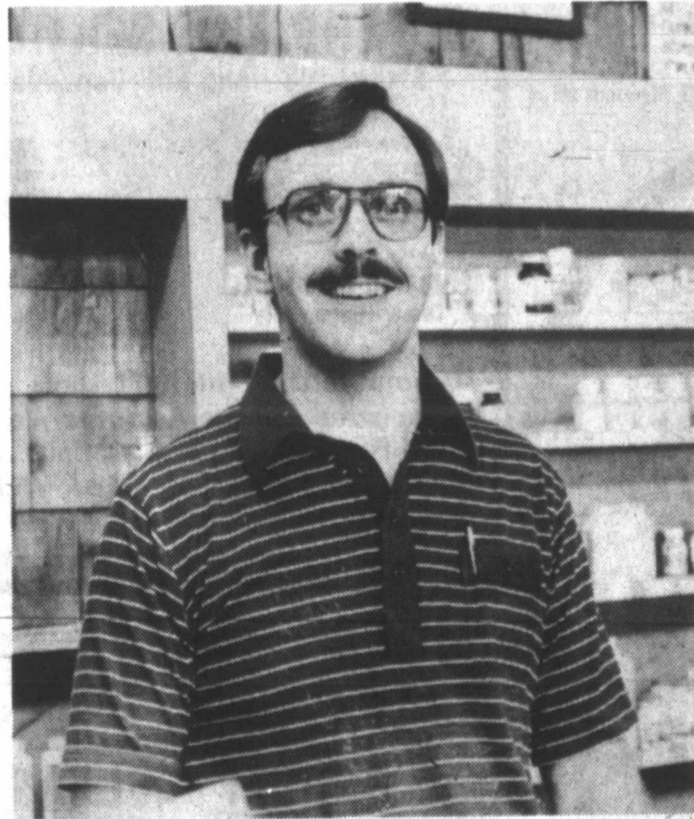

Despite the defeat of the "Water Trust Fund," the Water Development Board has $40 million to spend on water development: conservation, transportation, flood control, wastewater and related fields. This is not enough money, but the expenditure of this money needs guidance. We need a master plan for the development of water.

We will be working, during the next session of the Legislature, for a plan to develop water wisely. We need your help in deciding what type of development is important. We hope you will write Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711, and tell us about your water needs.

Once the rains let up wheat harvest has progressed real rapidly. Our wheat crop has had a lot of problems such as weather with its hail, tornadoes, too dry, then too wet, too many weeds. However, probably the worst problem is the price.

G A M E B I R D C O N F E R E N C E
In response to the increased interest in game bird production, the Texas Agricultural Extension and the Department of Poultry Science at Texas A & M University, have developed the Texas Game Bird Conference.

This all-day conference is scheduled for Saturday, July 17, in the Kleberg Center, on the campus of Texas A & M University in College Station. The program will get underway at 9 a.m.

Highly qualified personnel from the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station will speak on such timely topics as selecting breeders for better performance, maintenance and repair of small incubators and the effect of incubation procedures on young birds.

Other topics to be covered include release techniques, feeding for eggs, feathers and meat, and reproduction problems.

Game bird health is a major problem for all producers at one time or another. Dr. Tom Eleazer, DVM, a nationally known avian pathologist from Clemson University, Elgin, S.C., will be speaking on this subject.

Perhaps the highlight of the day will be the two workshop sessions. Two successful operators will head up the workshop on "commercial game bird production," Jack Campbell, Duck Creek Farms, Spur, and Frank Thompson, C & F Game Bird Farm, Tyler, and they are coming to share their thoughts with the group.

Leading the "ornamental game bird workshop" will be Dave McKelvey, game farm consultant from Wetmore. McKelvey was curator of birds at the Brackenridge Zoo in San Antonio, featured on several national television shows and hosted his own radio show.

Horace Gore, project leader, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, will take a look at "The Law and the Game Bird Feeder."

There will be a $15 individual registration fee at the door. A spouse may accompany the participant for an additional $5. These fees include the cost of the conference, lunch, and two coffee breaks. There will also be a $1 charge for the printed proceedings.

For further information and a copy of the complete program, contact the Gray County Extension office.

HOME FIRE SAFETY
Most fires happen when everyone is asleep. So, every home needs at least one smoke detector close to where the family sleeps to awaken everyone in case of fire.

Once awake, most persons have a good chance to escape since inhaled smoke and gases cause many fire-related deaths and injuries.

Each year, more than 6,000 deaths and nearly 30,000 injuries happen as a result of home fires. These fires start from many sources, like gasoline, flammable fabrics in clothes, cigarettes and space heaters. But, if you follow these tips, you can minimize the possibility of a fire loss in your home.

1. Store gasoline outside the house and well away from ignition sources.
2. Store gasoline only in containers designed specifically for this purpose.
3. Never use gasoline for cleaning clothing, machine parts or anything else.
4. Use only charcoal starter for lighting outdoor grills. Never throw any flammable liquid, like gasoline, on burning or smoldering fires.
5. Follow washing instructions for flame resistant clothing to preserve its protective quality.

6. Teach everyone in the household to "drop and roll" on the floor or ground in case clothing catches fire.
7. Don't wear loose robes or other loose clothing when cooking.
8. Keep upholstered furniture away from wood stoves, ranges, space heaters and fireplaces.
9. Caution smokers against placing ashtrays on upholstered furniture or smoking when drowsy, drinking alcohol or taking medication.
10. Make sure every gas or fuel-burning space heater is properly vented.
11. Check electric space heaters for a shutoff switch that activates if the heater tips over and be sure heaters have protective grills around heating elements.

4-H'ERS COMBINE NUTRITION, PHYSICAL FITNESS
Even teenagers sometimes have trouble staying physically fit. And, since they're still growing, the combination of improper diet and lack of exercise can produce extra pounds and the beginning of a life-long weight problem.

4-H'ers across the land are learning how to combine fitness and nutrition through programs conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service.

The national 4-H bread program, supported by Standard Brands Inc., helps boys and girls learn the importance of including foods from the bread-cereal food group in the daily diet.

Economists expect livestock price improvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists continue to see some improvement in the livestock financial picture over the next half year or so.

Meat and poultry output in the first six months of 1982 was down 3 percent from a earlier levels, which helped trigger higher cattle and hog prices.

Combined with lower feed costs, the improved prices created the most profitable situation for livestock producers since mid-1979," the department's Economic Research Service said Thursday.

"In the second half of the year, total meat production will continue well below a year ago as further declines in pork production more than offset modest gains in beef and broiler output."

As a consequence, the report said, consumers have seen retail meat prices increase, a trend which probably will continue "through at least mid-summer."

"Reduced production, some boost from the July 1 tax cut, and increase Social Security payments may help support these higher retail prices," it said.

The recent return to profits and prospects for large feed supplies "are expected to encourage hog producers to begin expanding their breeding herds" through the fall months.

In remarks prepared for a meeting earlier Thursday with American Farm Bureau leaders, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said the higher livestock prices were among some of the "positive aspects in agriculture."

Block acknowledged that there have been "downward pressures" on farmers but that "I think we've got an awful lot to be optimistic about."

Blowing of whistle can backfire

EDITOR'S NOTE — Blowing the whistle, in business or government, means to call attention to some wrongdoing in an effort to stop the practice. But what about the whistleblower? Here's a report on the growing number of whistleblowers — and their fate.

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

On March 28, 1978, doctors at Ellis Fischel State Cancer Hospital in Columbia, Mo., discovered that iridium pellets had mistakenly been left in a woman on whom they had operated three months earlier. A few days later, Clifford Richter, the hospital's radiation safety officer, routinely reported that to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Suddenly, Richter's career turned around. A 30 percent raise due him was canceled, excellent personnel evaluations turned to poor, and the hospital finally abolished his job as head of the department of medical physics.

The hospital did not dispute the facts of the original allegation, but contended that Richter should have reported the iridium incident first to the hospital administration. His job was abolished because of a routine staff reduction, the hospital said.

Richter blew the whistle. Today, Richter is back at work — by court order. But his salary, much of it used for legal fees, remains frozen at its 1977 level; he's no longer given research projects to work on, even those he originally developed, and many of his co-workers avoid him. He can't, however, find another job. "My field is a small one and I've been made to feel like a professional leper," he says. "Word gets around that you're a troublemaker."

The whistleblowers have emerged, in large measure, from the post-'60s, post-Watergate culture, with its emphasis on business and government ethics, on environmentalism and consumerism, on civil rights.

The Reagan Administration has pointedly encouraged government employees to report waste and corruption. A number of major corporations, including IBM, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing, Citibank and the Bank of America, have established channels by which employees can report malfeasance.

But laws and official encouragement still don't make whistleblowing easy. Even Ralph Nader advises those who have a case to tread softly before going public, working within channels until all remedies are exhausted.

Most whistleblowers become outcasts and usually remain so when reinstated, even if their complaint is valid.

"You can't make people like you," says Richter, who knows. "No law covers shunning," says Michael Baker, research director for the Educational Fund for Individual Rights, a New York-based group dedicated to improving rights in the workplace.

Some whistleblowers become famous:

Ralph Nader in the broadest sense; A. Ernest Fitzgerald, who was fired by the Pentagon in 1969 for reporting cost overruns on the C-5A transport plane and finally settled his case last month for $200,000 in legal fees and a promotion; Frank Camps, who complained to Ford about the Pinto; John Loftus, a former Justice Department lawyer who took to CBS' "60 Minutes" his allegation that hundreds of one-time Nazis had entered this country under government auspices.

Others operate in secret: The Deep Throats. The people who call the investigator at home or meet him on the parking lot to whisper. "Next time you bring the auditing team around, why don't you have them look at..."

However, on the other side, Alan Westin, a Columbia University professor who heads the Educational Fund, writes in his book "Whistle Blowing: "If it were possible to collect all the instances of corporate-employee whistleblowing charges in the United States in a given year and then determine how often managements were justified in their actions and the employees mistaken, my guess is that employers would deserve to win many of these disputes.... Putting the whistle to one's lips does not guarantee that one's facts are correct."

"The whistleblower who goes public is the guy I don't entirely trust," says a federal inspector who prefers elevator meetings and midnight phone calls. "I assume he's got mixed motives or a problem on the job. A lot of them seem to get their ego involved so deeply it's hard to tell what's real and what's self-aggrandizement."

Whistleblowers and critics alike agree on this: an enlightened management is the best deterrent.

With all the problems, why do whistleblowers do it? Clifford Richter, who is working on a book about his experiences entitled "Why Cancer Wins," suggests that the events set off by his report uncovered problems that would have otherwise stayed buried.

"The professional damage to my reputation is irreparable and so is the wear and tear on my family," he says. "But one thing makes it worth it: I think I uncovered, however inadvertently, some facts about cancer treatment that the public needs to know."

Still, many potential whistleblowers become cynics. They learn early that it's easier to go along.

A survey taken last year by the Merit Systems Protection Board found that 45 percent of the 8,600 federal employees who responded claimed to have personally seen or had evidence of illegal activity in their agencies within the previous year. One in 10 said that more than $100,000 was involved.

But only a third of that 45 percent bothered to report it. Even in that group, 53 percent said they believed nothing would be done about the complaint.

Six in wheelchairs plan peak climb

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Guadalupe Peak, the highest point in Texas, is a monolith of stone that dominates the surrounding plains. But for six men, the mountain is merely a stepping stone toward other goals.

The six — all bound to wheelchairs because of paralysis or amputation — will begin an expedition up the mountain Monday to draw attention to the capabilities of the handicapped and to raise money for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

"They're magnificent men and it's a magnificent thing to do," said Jack Grimm, an Abilene oilman who is helping organize the climb.

The "Mountain Men," as the climbers call themselves, face a grueling, 4 1/2-mile trail that rises 3,000 feet to the flat summit of the red and orange peak, which has a total altitude of 8,751 feet. Michael "Shorty" Powers, 30, of Dallas, leader of the expedition, says the ascent probably will take two days and the descent will take one day.

"But we might just spend a day on the top after we get up there," he said confidently. Powers and two other members of the team — Donnie Rogers, 26, of Dallas and John Galland, 31, of Mound, Minn. — took part in a climb last year in the Uintah Mountains in Utah. They and the other members participate in wheelchair athletics and rehabilitation programs for the handicapped.

The others are Dave Kiley, 29, of Los Angeles; Bobby Lyles, 30, of Raleigh, N.C.; and Joe Moss, 32, of Dallas. Moss lost his legs in the Vietnam War and the other climbers are paralyzed from a variety of accidents.

"We're doing it all ourselves," Powers said. "Nobody is going to touch us. The only help that we're going to get is that they're going to drop off water for us."

"If we have to get out of the chairs, we'll use whatever talent, ropes and equipment that we have to keep going. If it gets too steep of an incline, we'll have to do the same thing — get out and crawl up it."

The climbers will use specially designed wheelchairs being produced on a rush order by a California firm called the Quadra Co. Powers said. The chairs have backpacks built into them and have special wheels that will grip the rocky surface. The expedition is the cornerstone for an organization called Paraplegics on Independent Nature Trips, or POINT, that Powers has founded.

"The climb is just to get exposure," he said. "We'll climb once, twice, maybe three times a year. But what we say will mean more than the physical things we do."

What POINT is saying is that handicapped people are capable of accomplishing feats in the outdoors without the assistance of those who aren't handicapped.

"We're really working to get the so-called 'normal' handicapped person involved," Powers said. "We have scuba-diving and kayaking classes. We're going to have our basketball team and track and tennis teams. We're trying to get away from able-bodied people's help."

Grimm, who is known for his attempts to locate the wreckage of the ocean liner Titanic, is funding a film crew that will record the attempt up the mountain.

"What we want to do is make films and send them to rehabilitation centers and have them play them on their video machines," Powers said. "We hope it will be very inspirational."

At Grimm's suggestion, the climb has been turned into a "Mountathon," with contributors paying up to 10 cents per foot that the team covers. The money will go to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, a private non-profit corporation that has centers in Abilene, Snyder and San Angelo.

Along Mexican border

Bandits plague railroad police

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — It sounds like a horse opera — Mexican bandits jumping onto moving trains and plundering the riches they find there.

But it's a very real modern-day problem that has railroad police working long hours and searching for new enforcement methods.

Trains traveling tracks near the Rio Grande are targets of gangs who cross the river from Mexico and burglarize boxcars.

"Cargo theft is our worst problem," says Southern Pacific division special agent Charles Wood. "All along this route, we've had more problems than in other parts of the country... I don't know of any way we could halt it completely."

Railroad police, certified law enforcement officers employed by the rail lines, have beefed up their staffs and have begun using locks to protect boxcars loaded with valuables such as food, furniture, electronic equipment and department store goods.

Santa Fe Railroad special agent Joe Moran says his company is having success with the new methods, but adds, "We still have one hell of a problem with that kind of crime."

It's not a new problem. Wood said the Southern Pacific line was laid in the 1880s and, "We were having problems with theft and vandalism then."

The predicament is the nearness of the Rio Grande, a muddy ribbon that separates El Paso from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, a bustling city of nearly one million residents.

"Our track's only 20 or 25 yards from the middle of the river," drawled Santa Fe special agent Leon Puckett. "They can hit us and they're gone before we know it."

Fellow agent Mario Reyes recalled a radio call he received from another agent one night. The agent had discovered bandits had broken into a boxcar and furniture was scattered across a nearby levee road, abandoned when the officer's car was spotted.

The agent secured the boxcar and made the two-minute drive to the office to pick up Reyes. When they returned, the car had been pilfered again. They locked it again and the agent returned Reyes to the office.

"He called me again and said, 'Mario, you're not going to believe what's happened,'" Reyes said. "They had hit us again. There must have been 20 to 25 guys working and we couldn't find a soul."

The bandits cross the river at the railroad bridges in Mexico, many scrambling over tall, jagged steel gates erected to keep them out.

"Four or five of them will come over on our side of the gate and come up there and steal stuff out of the train," Puckett said. "Then they'll pass the stuff back to the gate like a water brigade. They know that once they get across that river, there's nothing we can do."

Southern Pacific's problem is with moving trains, said T.J. Monsen, assistant special agent in charge of the El Paso office. "Two years ago, we knew we were being hit on moving trains in the Globe Mills area," Monsen said. "As trains went through there, a group of about 15 guys would constantly hit the trains."

Monsen and his men dressed as hoboes and started riding the trains. They made arrests, but Monsen won't reveal how many or the method used because, "We've got a group like that one operating right now." Southern Pacific has more traffic than Santa Fe because its main line runs through El Paso. Moran says bandits rarely strike Santa Fe's moving trains, preferring to strike in the trainyard.

He said Santa Fe's yard is more accessible to the aliens because it is at one end of the so-called "Tortilla Curtain," a hole-riddled fence erected by the government to try to slow the flow of illegal aliens.

"The railroad police are convinced that illegal aliens are responsible for virtually all of the cargo thefts. Moran said almost every burglar arrested in the past five years at the Santa Fe yard was illegally in the country."

"Most are in their early teens to early 20s and most are illegal aliens," Monsen said.

Monsen said Southern Pacific arrests between 30 and 40 burglars a year. Moran said his men made 32 arrests in the first five months of the year.

Burglary is not the only problem the railroad police have with aliens. Many illegal aliens find the relatively deserted rail yards preferable to the busy downtown area as a crossing point.

Monsen said the Border Patrol apprehended 2,000 aliens in the Southern Pacific yard during the first four months of the year. Moran said 2,200 were picked up at Santa Fe's yard in the first six months.

Another problem is what Moran calls the "river rats," gangs of youths who virtually live under railroad bridges and who prey on other aliens attempting to get into the United States.

Moran conducted negotiations with Mexican authorities that led to joint raids on the bridges. He thinks further cooperation may be the way to slow the burglaries.

"We've been pretty successful with these raids," he said. "They'll run toward Mexico because they know we can't cross the river. What they don't know is that the Mexican authorities are waiting for them on the other side."

The railroad police also are trying other methods in their battle with the burglars.

Southern Pacific has added canine patrols on its night shift. Both railroads have begun putting padlocks or cable locks on boxcar doors and Santa Fe has added rail clamps that keep doors from sliding open.

"While they're trying to work those things off, it gives us time to get up there and scare them off or catch them," Moran said, adding, however, that some burglars are scarcely slowed by the locks.

"They know what kind of cars to look for, what kind of tools to use to get into a car," he said. "It's a profession and they're very good at it."

Putting on the locks is a slow, expensive process. Moran said each of his rail clamps costs $40.

Wood, who runs Southern Pacific security in Arizona, New Mexico and West Texas, said the burglaries have increased since the advent of piggyback freight. The semi-truck trailers mounted on flatcars are more vulnerable than boxcars, he said.

Also vulnerable are cars carrying new automobiles.

"We had a very serious series of thefts of radios from new automobiles," Wood said. "We lost something like 62 radios from the beginning of March to about the 15th of May... We never did actually apprehend anyone."

Wood said burglars took more than $200,000 in merchandise from Southern Pacific trains in his district in 1981. He said the number of thefts was up 75 percent during the first five months of this year. Santa Fe would not reveal its losses.

Jim Britton of the American Association of Railroads in Chicago said losses to theft rank second only to train accidents in costs to railroads nationwide. Railroads estimated their losses from theft last year at $19.1 million, he said.

Levi, Zokol locked in tie in Milwaukee golf tourney

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Hawaiian Open champion Wayne Levi, the only top 10 money-winner in this field, moved into a 54-hole tie for the lead Saturday with Canadian rookie Dick Zokol in the Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

The 29-year-old Levi, one of the most consistent players on the PGA Tour, posted a third consecutive 68 for a total of 204, 12 under par for three trips around the Tuckaway Country Club course.

Zokol, who barely made this field with a 73 qualifying score, blew the lead with consecutive bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes.

However, the 1981 Canadian Amateur champion, wearing a radio headset between shots to settle his nerves this week, kept a share of the top spot for the second straight day with a 70. Tied for third place, a single shot behind, were 1979 Milwaukee champion Calvin Peete and veteran Victor Regalado of Mexico.

Regalado had 68 and Peete 69. They were at 205, 11 under par.

Meanwhile, Terry Diehl, the 36-hole leader with Zokol, bogeyed two of his first three holes and slipped from the lead. He still matched par 72 and was next at 10-under 206 with Jim Colbert, the winner here 10 years ago. Colbert posted a 70.

Jay Haas, the defending champion, also came in with a 72 and was all but out of contention with 211, nine shots off the lead.

Barring a total collapse in the final round, Zokol assured himself of his best American tournament with his steady play Saturday. He has finished no higher than 32nd in 20 tournaments this year.

He needs a 22nd-place finish here Sunday for $2,800, beating his entire 1982 money total.

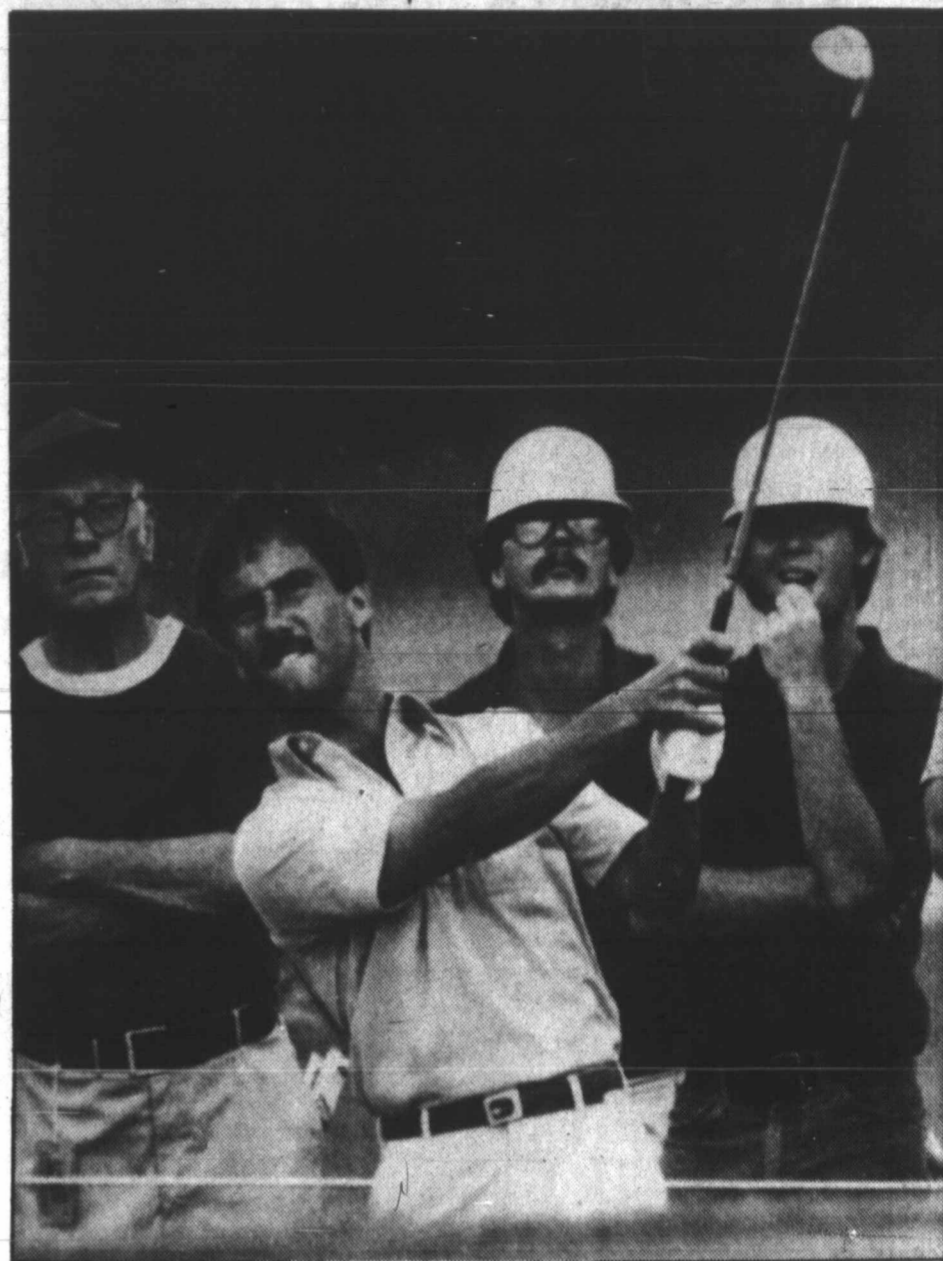

Levi and Zokol were never more than one shot apart after the Canadian newcomer bogeyed his opening hole.

An eagle-3 on the 524-yard sixth hole pulled Levi, the No. 8 money-winner with almost $180,000 this year, into a tie with his less-heralded opponent.

Zokol, after a birdie on the seventh, led briefly before successive bogeys at eight and nine dropped him back into a tie with Levi.

They remained deadlocked until Zokol's seventh birdie of the round gave him the lead at 14. He stayed in front until his fourth and fifth bogeys of the windy, rainy day at 16 and 17.

"Watching a blastoff ..."

Spectators watch as Dick Zokol from Canada blasts from a trap on the 16th hole during the second round of the Greater Milwaukee Open Friday. Zokol took a bogey on the hole and finished in a tie for the lead with Terry Diehl at 10-under-par 134.

Pressure: McEnroe weapon

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — John McEnroe and pressure are constant companions, and the tempestuous left-hander from New York turns it into another weapon in his well-equipped arsenal.

"It's tough to stay on top," McEnroe said after he teamed with Peter Fleming to crush Anders Jarryd and Hans Simonsson 6-4, 6-3, 6-0 in doubles Saturday and give the United States a 2-1 lead over Sweden in their Davis Cup tennis quarterfinal match. "It's a lot easier when you're trying to get there."

It was the first time the American pair have faced competition since they lost the doubles final at Wimbledon last Sunday in straight sets to Australians Peter McNamara and Paul McNamee.

"We're not playing better as a team than we ever have before," McEnroe said. "Lately, we've had our problems. We should play all our matches like this."

McEnroe said the Swedish players "were not at their best today. But they are young and will be back in the future."

Sunday's final two singles will send Jarryd against American Eliot Teltscher and McEnroe against Mats Wilander, the 17-year-old Swede who was the surprise winner of the French Open last month.

The winner of this best-of-five-match international tennis competition will advance to the semifinals against Australia, which has an unbeatable 3-0 lead over Chile.

For Jarryd and Simonsson, it was their first Davis Cup doubles defeat. But it was administered by one of the world's top doubles teams.

The hard-serving Simonsson held his first two serves at love, and Jarryd, who had to battle through a deuce before holding his first service, appeared the weaker of the two.

But it was against Simonsson that the Americans made the first break. The right-hander double-faulted to begin the 10th game, then netted a backhand as the Swedes quickly fell behind love-30.

The Swedes won the next two points to pull even before the U.S. pair swept the next two points and the opening set.

Again it was Simonsson's serve which was broken in the fourth game of the second set, giving the Americans a 3-1 lead. Fleming then served two double-faults to fall behind 15-40.

It was the closest the Swedes would come the rest of the afternoon.

The Americans ran off the next four points to take a 4-1 lead, then held serve the rest of the way to capture the second set.

In the third set, McEnroe and Fleming delivered a clinic on how to play doubles, serving well when they had to, dominating the net, changing pace and stroking winners from the baseline when they had to.

In Friday's opening singles, McEnroe downed Jarryd 10-8, 6-3, 6-3, while Wilander stopped Teltscher 6-4, 7-5, 3-6, 3-6, 6-0.

Former boxing champ dies

ALTOONA, Pa. (AP) — Former light heavyweight champion Tommy Loughran, a member of the Boxing Hall of Fame, is dead at age 79.

Loughran was living at the Holidaysburg veterans home when he died in his sleep Wednesday night, the New York Daily News reported in its Saturday editions.

Loughran started his boxing career in 1919 and, in a period from 1926 to 1929, went undefeated in 43 straight bouts. In 1927, he won the light heavyweight crown with a 15-round decision over Mike McTigue. He held the crown until 1929.

NFL group in bargaining

NEW YORK (AP) — All unsigned rookies can expect to get written contract offers from the National Football League in the next six days.

And if they don't sign them, there's a chance it'll be a while before they're allowed to suit up and begin working out.

The NFL Players Association, seeking to work out a new collective bargaining agreement with the league through talks with the owners' Management Council, says players will not be permitted to conduct contract talks with teams either directly or through agents when the existing agreement expires at midnight next Thursday.

The union will become the sole negotiating agent for all players — but says it will not negotiate for them individually. The union wants future player salaries to be determined by a percentage of the league's gross revenues, with all players' base pay determined solely by years of service.

Unsigned veterans will be able to report to training camp. They will receive either a 10 percent pay raise over their 1981 salary or the amount of the team's last written offer, whichever is more, said Ed Garvey, executive director of the union.

But rookies cannot suit up and work out unless they are signed.

Rangers take first of two

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Lee Mazzilli's home run with one out and the bases empty in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the Texas Rangers a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers in the first game of Saturday's two-night doubleheader.

Earlier, Larry Parrish of the Rangers tied a major league record set in 1968 by Detroit's Jim Northrup with his third grand slam homer of the week.

Mazzilli's third home run of the season came on the first pitch from Tigers reliever Dave Tobik, 2-4. It was the third time in the last four games that a ninth-inning homer beat the Tigrs, who have lost five games in a row and 22 of their last 27.

Texas reliever Danny Darwin, 6-2, pitched two scoreless innings and was the winning pitcher.

Billy Sample and Mazzilli

opened the Texas first inning with singles off Milt Wilcox. Dave Hostetter walked and Parrish hit the first pitch into the left field seats for his sixth home run of the year. Parrish also hit grand slam homers last Sunday in Oakland and here Wednesday against Boston.

Detroit's Alan Trammell hit a solo home run off Jon Matlack in the third to cut the lead to 4-1 and John Wockenfuss tied the score with a three-run homer in the fourth. Wockenfuss' homer followed singles by Larry Herndon and Mike Ivie and a forceout.

The Tigers went ahead 5-4 in the fifth when Trammell doubled and scored on two consecutive wild pitches by Texas reliever Dan Boitano.

Texas tied the score again in the fifth. Buddy Bell singled, advanced on an infield out and scored on a single by Parrish.

Record miler ...

Mary Decker-Tabb, of the USA, wins the mile race Friday during the international track meeting held at Jean Boin Stadium of Paris. She broke the world mile record for women with a time of 4 minutes 18.08 seconds. The old record of 4:20.89 belonged to Ludmila Veselkova of the Soviet Union.

Ranger debt looming as growing problem

ARLINGTON (AP) — Texas Rangers owner Eddie Giles says he expects his club to lose as much money as it did last year, but a Dallas newspaper reports it may be considerably more.

A club source says the franchise is projected to lose between $6 million and $7 million this year. The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

"But this team has lost money every year; we lost four million last year," said Giles. "So this is no big deal. We're going as well as we can with the conditions we're working under."

Italian, German stars crucial in final World Cup matchup

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

MADRID (AP) — Paolo Rossi of Italy and Karl-Heinz Rummenigge of West Germany, co-scoring leaders in the World Cup soccer tournament, could be the key players in today's final at Santiago Bernabeu Stadium in Madrid.

They have scored five goals apiece, and each has the ability to turn a match with a lightning shot.

The match, in which each team will be trying to win its third title, should be the final 90 minutes of the biggest-ever World Cup, which has matched 24 national teams in a month-long tournament in 17 stadiums in 14 Spanish cities. About 1.5 billion television viewers around the world will be watching the championship game.

If the title cannot be decided in regulation times or after a 30-minute overtime period, then it will be replayed Tuesday.

Rummenigge has a thigh injury, and Jupp Derwall, the West German coach, doesn't plan to start him.

However, Enzo Bearzot, the Italian manager, had serious doubts that Rummenigge will fail to appear in the German lineup.

The Germans have always been masters of the substitute strategy. Rummenigge, twice European Footballer of the Year, sat on the bench for 90 minutes during Thursday's semifinal against France. Then he got into action in the 30-minute overtime period and scored a vital goal that helped his team rally from a 3-1 deficit to tie, then win on penalty kicks.

At whatever stage Rummenigge goes onto the field, the Italians will have a man waiting to deal with him — Claudio Gentile, the big defender of Juventus of Turin. He will be the Italian team's policeman to try to keep Rummenigge out of shooting range.

Rossi scored all three goals in Italy's sensational 3-2 win over Brazil, the favorite for the Cup, last Monday. He also scored both goals when the Italians downed Poland 2-0 in the semifinals Thursday.

Rossi is currently a national hero in Italy — a story-book figure who has bounced back to world stardom after a bribery scandal and a two-year suspension.

Gentile missed the game against Poland because he was serving a one-match suspension. But in Italy's previous games he was given the job of tying up stars Zbigniew Boniek of Poland, Diego Maradona of Argentina and Zico of Brazil — three of the most dangerous shooters in the tournament — and he succeeded every time.

Million-dollar legs ...

Paolo Rossi, the Italian soccer star player who scored five goals in the last two games in the World Cup Soccer championships, shows his right leg. The one that kicked the goals, while aboard a plane from Barcelona to Madrid Friday. The Italian team faces West Germany for the final match on Sunday in Madrid.

Four perfect rides made

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four men scored perfect rides in the equestrian event Saturday to tie for the first-day lead in the U.S. Modern Pentathlon national championships at Fort Sam Houston.

Greg Losey, Chuck Michaels, Blair Driggs and John Moreau, all of San Antonio, scored 1,100 points with perfect performances in the equestrian event.

Five men were tied for fifth at 1,070 points, including defending national champion Mike Burley and 1979 world champion Bob Nieman.

Janet Simpson of Nashville took the first-day lead in the women's division, winning 38 of 46 fencing bouts and scoring 1,144 points.

Leeann Skomski of Royal Oak, Mich., and Alison Reid of Cincinnati tied for second by winning 31 of 46 bouts and scoring 976 points.

In the junior division, Jamie McNeil of Tallahassee, Fla., turned in the only perfect ride, scoring the maximum 1,100 points in the equestrian event.

The men will fence on Sunday and the women will compete in the equestrian event. Other events in the pentathlon include swimming, pistol shooting and a cross-country run.

The top finishers will represent the United States in the world championships that are scheduled for Aug. 5-14 in Paris for Women and Oct. 4-8 in Rome for men.

What's happening in Pampa's Barnyard?

Most children dream of owning a pet. Many want more than the usual domesticated animals found in suburban America, they want their own horse, goat, sheep or pig.

This dream is virtually impossible for most "city" kids, but not in Pampa.

Pampa has been blessed with its own barnyard which is privately owned and maintained by the individuals who house their pets there.

Located south of the Borger highway and outside the city limits, the Pampa Barnyard (or better known as Horse Holler or Horse Alley) contains an exciting array of almost every type of farm animal imaginable.

Fancy Quarter horses, Appaloosa horses, Shetland ponies, pigs, goats, donkeys, chickens and calves all live peacefully in adjoining pens. Kids involved in 4-H projects have a place to raise their stock and learn the basics of caring and showing farm animals.

Pleasure horses wait patiently for evenings and weekends when they are called upon to perform.

Wide-eyed calves watch the road for their evening meals.

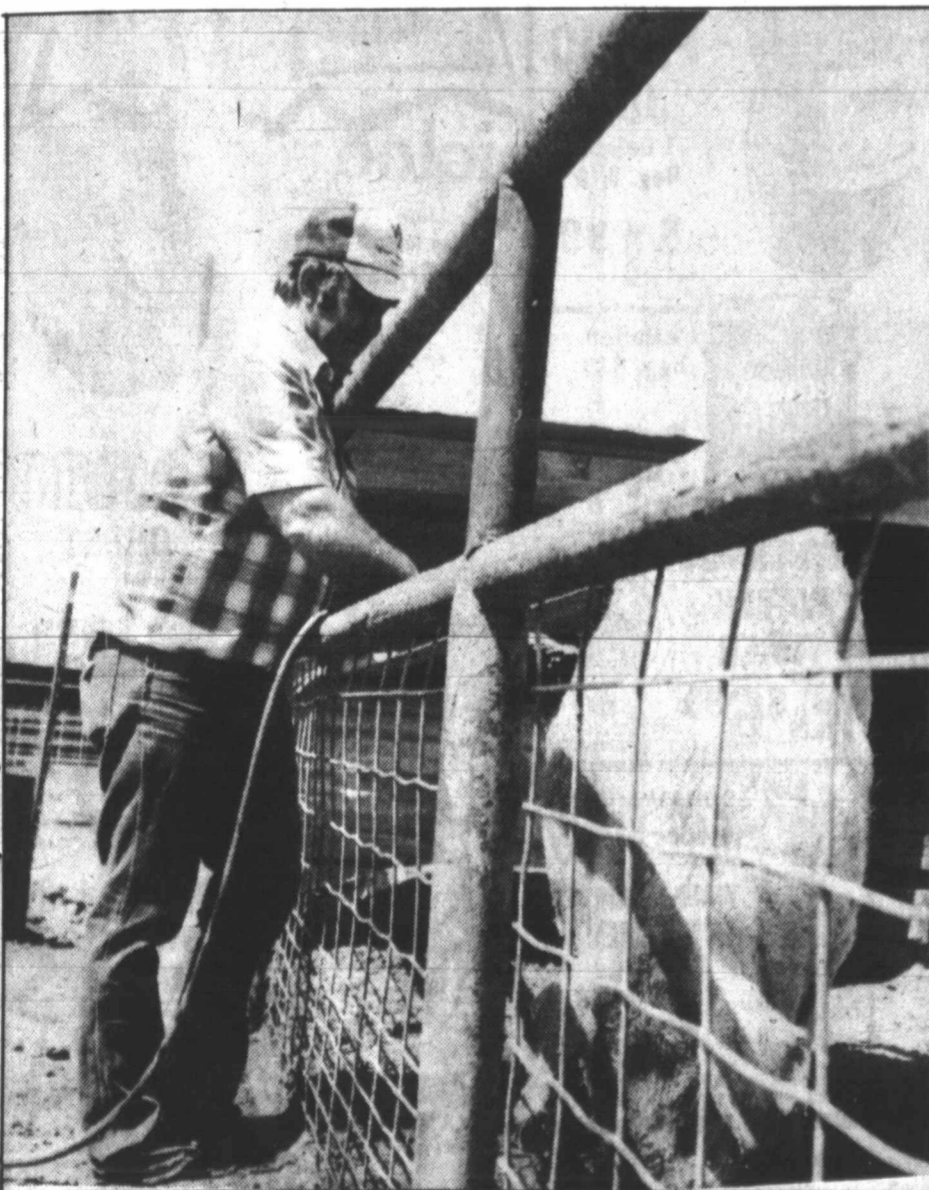

Ponies play through the fences with their next-door neighbors.

All is well at the Pampa Barnyard.

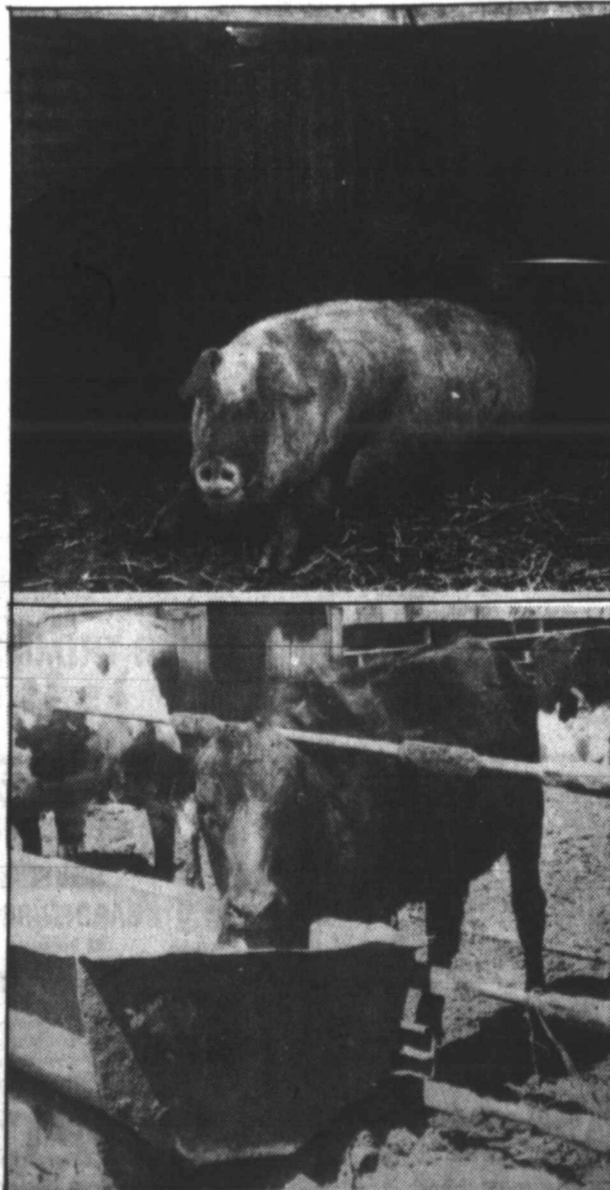

What's up doc? The horses in the Pampa Barnyard appear to be fat, healthy and very curious.

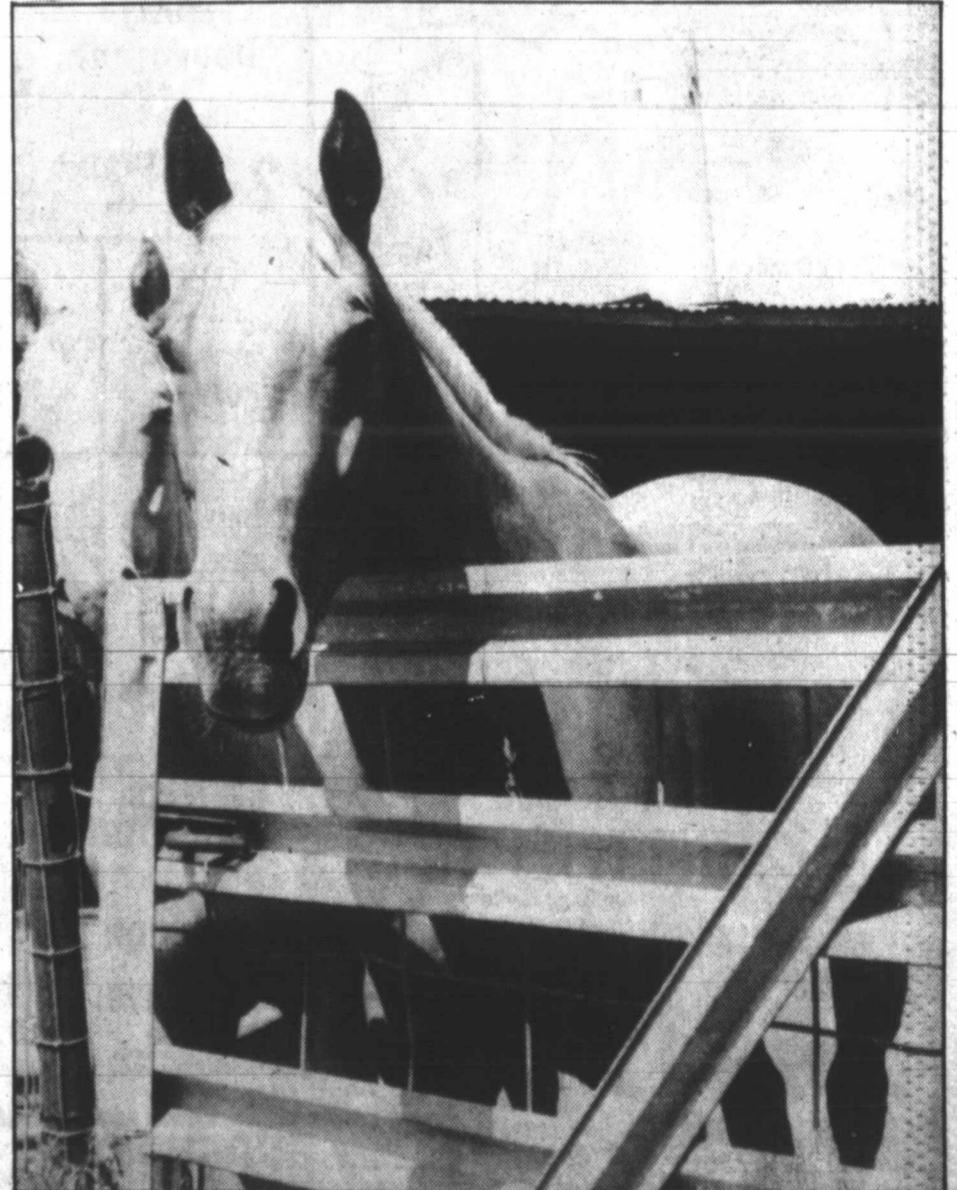

Nothing is neater than a calf when you feed her. Tom Connor takes over the daily chore of feeding his baby calf its daily ration of formula from a rather large bottle.

Neil Fulton cools off his boar hog, Harvey, with a water hose before he begins the daily feeding chores.

Could this beautiful palomino horse be saying nuzzle my muzzle?

CLOISONNE Jewelry In Stock

Cloisonne originated in Central Asia, but was refined and improved upon in China. The intricate technique begins with each line of design being formed of a ribbon copper wire; creating 'cloisons' or cells. The wires are then fused to the copper base. The enamel, ground to a powder and moistened with water, is then laid into the cells and fired in a kiln at 1400 F. This process of filling is repeated, layer upon layer, to achieve a depth of color and shading. Finally the piece is hand ground to a smooth surface and then polished and plated.

Dear Abby

Wife doesn't get the picture

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The wife of a professional photographer is "Baffled" because they've been friends with another couple for 20 years, but when it came time for their friends' daughter's wedding, another photographer was engaged to take the pictures. May I be "Dear Abby" for a minute?

"Dear Baffled: Haven't you ever heard that it's not wise to mix friendship with business? Perhaps because this couple values your friendship so much, they hired an outside photographer.

"Reason No. 1: They want you to attend as a guest — not someone who has come there to work. (Taking pictures is a lot of work if it is done properly.)

"Reason No. 2: Even if your husband is the greatest photographer in the world, something could go wrong, or the bride might not like the shots, and she will scream, 'You ruined my day!' Then a 20-year-old friendship would be ended.

"Please give your friends the benefit of the doubt. Believe me, they're doing you a big favor."

SADDER BUT WISER

DEAR SADDER: "Understanding in Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y." adds Reason No. 3:

"Your friend may have engaged another photographer because she feared that your husband might use his professional talents and materials without charging you, and this is her way of avoiding an embarrassing situation."

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to add my 2 cents' worth about wedding pictures: It doesn't really matter who takes them as long as they're taken by a professional. The worst mistake anyone can make is letting a friend or some member of the family take pictures of a wedding — or any other memorable occasion.

I know. My brother was an amateur photographer, and some of his pictures were pretty good, so when he offered to take the pictures of my wedding I said OK.

That was the dumbest thing I've ever done. Some of the film was bad, and most of the pictures didn't turn out at all. Also, he was trying to make an impression on a girl at the time, so he brought her to the wedding, and, Abby, every single picture he took had this girl in it!

He just followed her around and took pictures of her. We do not have one really decent picture of the bride and groom. The family and members of the wedding party were totally ignored.

It's been years now, but every time I think of it I get mad all over again.

HAD IT WITH AMATEURS

DEAR HAD IT: If my readers can stand one more bit of recycled advice: "Hire the best photographer you can get to cover special occasions, because once the occasion has passed, it's gone forever. Don't rely on well-meaning amateurs just because they have a fortune in equipment and 'love' to take pictures."

DEAR ABBY: To the bride's mother who included little notes with the wedding invitations to "remind" the guests that her daughter had everything she needed, so an ideal gift would be "something that could be tucked into a purse or pocket".

How thoughtful! My suggestion would be two handkerchieves: One for the bride and one for the groom. And possibly a third for the bride's mother to be used to wipe away the tears when she realizes that no cash will be forthcoming.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to John J. Jones for nearly three years, and I am still being confused with John's ex-wife because she insists on using the name that now belongs to me. I am the one and only "Mrs. John J. Jones." To further complicate matters, my first name is Joanne and so is hers. And to make matters worse, we live in the same apartment building!

When I married John, his ex-wife became "Joanne Cohen (her maiden name) Jones." Or "Mrs. Joanne Jones" — not "Mrs. John J. Jones."

Our personal mail, bills and magazines are constantly being misdirected to each other. It's a mess!

I can't believe she doesn't know better, so please print this so I can mail it to her. Or do you think she knows better, but enjoys giving me a headache?

THE ONLY MRS. JOHN J. JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: Since you are both inconvenienced by the confusion, it's highly unlikely that she "knows better." Here's your letter. Mail it to her. And I hope it doesn't wind up in your mailbox.

...

Working wonders with wicker furniture

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Summertime furnishings convince consumers to "think wicker!" Wicker comes to consumers worldwide as headrests, floor mats, hats, shoes, tea strainers, spice containers, all styles of boxes and baskets and even houses and hearses. The way Texans know wicker best is furniture.

WHY WICKER?
Wicker furniture has had its fashion ins and outs over the history of home furnishings. People were especially wild about wicker during the Victorian times when they put it in every room in the house.

People are doing the same thing today and probably for the same reasons: wicker is natural, handmade, and comfortable. Wicker is new at the same time, old. It's rustic, yet exotic. Wicker is homey — simply, practically, naturally, comfortably, and appealing to almost everyone.

KEEPING IT CLEAN
An important part of keeping that "forever - new" look in your wicker furniture is keeping it clean. Go over it thoroughly with a soft brush and warm soapy water. Use a toothbrush for hard - to - get - at places.

Wicker pieces made of reed and willow (both natural and painted) should be periodically wiped with a soft wet cloth. If this type of wicker becomes brittle take it outside and hose it off. The water will feed the reeds and ensure greater flexibility.

Wicker made of either fiber (twisted paper) or sea grass should never be hosed off because water will weaken the weave as well as the individual fibers. To clean this type of wicker furniture use a damp cloth only.

Very diluted domestic bleach will whiten soiled reed and willow pieces that have been left in their natural state, but this procedure should be used with great caution and only if scrubbing with warm soapy water does not do the job.

Wicker furnishings kept clean and in good condition will continue to give any decor the international flavor and feeling of comfort they have graced the world with for centuries.

COLLECTING WICKER
The collection of antique wicker furniture as a hobby seems to be ever increasing.

It is important to know what to look for when buying old wicker furniture.

One of the first things to determine when buying wicker furniture is its age. The older the piece is the more valuable it is to the collector or antique dealer. One of the main problems in collecting is identifying old wicker and spotting reproductions. There are a few key points to look for if you are not sure whether a piece is old or a reproduction.

The seats on reproduction wicker chairs are never cane seats with wooden frames but rather flimsy circular - woven reed seats. Reproductions are also much lighter than old wicker pieces because the framework is made of bamboo rather than wood. Another clue is the poor quality of reeds used in reproductions - they are fibrous and usually very brittle.

The next thing to consider is the condition of the piece. Almost any damage to the wickerwork itself can be restored. Examine the framework carefully. Many older pieces have been left outdoors for years and the framework has warped or in some cases been rotted by the elements. Most structural damage can easily be repaired, but any weak joints that are hidden under the wickerwork usually entail removal of wicker around the joint repairing the joint, and then restoring the wickerwork to its original condition. This long process usually requires a professional repairman and can be quite costly.

Sewing up a fashion review

The Gray County Fashion Revue was held Tuesday, July 6. Shelly Cochran received the sewing machine donated by Sanders Sewing Center.

Gauloise

A fragrance combining Ylang-Ylang from Reunion, the Rose De Pays (Country Roses), Nutmeg from Sumatra, Frankincense from Somalia, Sandalwood from Mysore and East-Indian Musk Seed into a perfume with a wonderfully arresting top note and a superbly romantic lingering dry down that reasserts the supremacy of French taste and ingenuity in the creation of a perfume. Its Passport is its Infectious, Impulsive Gallic Charm.

Peeking at Pampa

Always good to hear of the outstanding accomplishments of our younger generation. Just found out about the many honors won by Ann Carmichael, daughter of Bob and Virginia, granddaughter of Paul and Myrtle. She graduated from T.C.U. in May and is spending the summer at home in Pampa. She has won enough awards for half a dozen students.

She majored in elementary education, specializing in work with the mentally retarded. She won the Noel - Bailey Educational Scholarship and the Academic Achievement Scholarship. She was on the Dean's List many times during her college years and she is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. She was a T.C.U. Scholar. She hopes to teach in an elementary school or in special education in the Dallas area. A remarkable girl — and a most attractive one too, possessed of a musical speaking voice and beautiful smile.

Susan Orina, wife of Dr. Adolf ("Dino") Orina, recently hosted a party at a local Oriental - food restaurant. Guests at the party included Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neslage, Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Bowers, Georgia Mack and Jimmy Kay Williams, wife of Tommie Wayne Williams. A seven - course meal was served, including a birthday cake for Dr. Orina.

Understand Susan Orina is a master chef in cooking oriental food herself. She always wears a lovely smile, and her radiant personality is loved by all who know her. She is involved in many community activities. The mother of four daughters, she still finds time for worthwhile deeds in Pampa. A friend recently said of her, "To know Susan is like viewing the Mona Lisa — she projects love and concern for human beings everywhere." Don't we all wish we could get a compliment like that?

My, my, the longtime wedding anniversaries keep happening here. Thought the 60 - year dates were unsurpassed, but there are older ones. Not long ago Monte and Ruth Williams celebrated their 65th anniversary. Family and friends gave them a lovely party to honor the occasion.

Pampa Civic Clubs always make much of their installation banquets. Just heard that the Rotary club had a joyous evening in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn on June 29, entertaining wives and other guests.

Especially enjoyed was the talk by humorist Delbert Downing, who kept the audience laughing every minute. Don Nelson was made Rotary Fellow, the highest award a Rotarian can achieve. The District Governor, John Collard of Spearman, was present with his wife, Margery.

New officers installed by Gary Stevens of Amarillo (formerly of Pampa) were LaWayne Hogan, president; George Warren, vice - president; Darville Orr, president - elect; Paul Payne, secretary; Mike Ruff, treasurer; and directors Joe Gidden, Lee Waters, Phil Gentry and Marion John. Claude Wilson is sergeant - at - arms and Doris Smith is executive secretary. Julie Piphahm furnished dinner music for the banquet.

A guest said the ladies wore elegant dresses. And every wife whose husband had perfect attendance for a given number of years was given a corsage. Naturally the ones who had attended the greatest number of years without missing (say 15 to 30 or thereabouts) wore orchids.

Pot pourri: Dr. Frank and Mary Ann Kelley's daughter, Patsy Smith, in business here with her husband, Kenneth. Such a vicious, delightful girl, such a look - alike for her mother. . . Lawanda Baker, wife of Ralph and president of the Women's Golf Association, a lady of possibly the most beautiful sun tan in town, planning the part that her group will have in the Senior Tournament the last of the month, an important role in the success of the event. . . Dr. and Mrs. Harbord Cox, honored at the Oklahoma City Horse Capital of the World Celebration because their horse, Run For Blue, was National Halter Champion and represented the Appaloosa Breed in the show. . .

See you next week. — PAM.

Jones places in talent portion of pageant

Sharing her award

Sandy Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones, Jr. of Pampa, won the 2nd place Talent Award during the 1982 Miss Texas Teenworld state finals held this past weekend at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Ft. Worth. The winner of the pageant was Miss Lou Ann Shoultz of Arlington. The State contestants, ranging in age from 14 to 18, competed in a fast moving schedule of activities during the Teenworld Pageant. These girls, representing the most outstanding young women in Texas, were judged on scholastic and civic achievements, grooming, poise, personality, and speech or talent. They must maintain a "B" or better grade average and are required to participate in the Teenworld volunteer service program. This program is an incentive for young people to contribute substantial hours of community service in their home towns. The Teenworld Pageant is coordinated by Executive Director Carol Connery at the Teenworld Office, 4550 W. 109th St., no 300, Overland Park, KS. 66211.

Other winners and awards included: Lou Ann Shoultz of Arlington, talent winner; Janet Reagan of Palestine, speech winner; Peggy Winn of Muenster, Miss Congeniality; Janet Reagan of Palestine, Miss Photogenic; Barbie Lively of Odessa, Citizenship Award; and Mary Ann Perales of Gonzales, Volunteer Service Award.

Troy Garrison of Mid-America Performing Arts, Kansas City, was Master of Ceremonies for the State competition, held under the direction of Carol Connery.

Miss Shoultz, the 1982 Texas Teenworld winner, will receive an all-expense paid trip to the Court of Flags Hotel in Orlando, Florida, to compete in the National Teenworld Finals, December 19-23. The National winner will receive a $5,000 personal appearance contract, and many other prizes.

Sandy Jones, winner of the second place talent award in the 1982 Miss Texas Teenworld state finals, shares her trophy with her nephew, Shawn. Club News

THE WORTHWHILE EXTENSION HOMEMAKER CLUB

The Worthwhile Extension Homemakers club met June 18th at 420 N. Crest St. with Lottie Reynolds and Maggie Smith as hostesses, for a birthday party and covered dish luncheon.

President, Gladys Stone, read the club prayer and G. C. Davis giving the devotional.

Each member brought some needle work, that she was doing, to show, followed by a short business meeting.

The next meeting will be July 16th at the Miami.

Texas park for a sack lunch and a tour of the Miami Museum.

The Club members will meet at the Courthouse Annex, at 11 a. m. and leave for Miami all together.

GOODWILL HOMEMAKERS CLUB
The Goodwill Homemakers Club met in the home of Mrs. G. B. Hogan, July 6 at 12 noon for a covered dish luncheon.

The business meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Hogan. The club prayer was given and scripture was read by Mrs. L. V. Smith.

Roll call was answered by telling of a plant I have success in growing. After the meeting members visited the White Deer Land Museum.

The next meeting will be August 3, at 2 p. m. in the home of Mrs. I. T. Goodnight.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

If you have considered breastfeeding your baby, but have questions about this womanly art, contact La Leche League of Pampa. This month's meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 13, 1982 at 10 a. m., at 617 Hazel. The discussion for the morning will include encouragement and information on how to establish a happy nursing relationship. Babies are welcome. For further information call 665-6127 or 665-6774.

Fiddler's contest part of anniversary celebration

Entries are now being received for the Fiddler's Contest to be held during Gray County's 80th birthday celebration. The contest will be Saturday, October 16, 1 p. m. to 4 p. m. in the M. K. Brown Auditorium in Pampa.

There will be four age categories with 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place prizes given in each category. Each contestant performs 3 kinds of music: waltz, break -down and a tune of his or her choice. Any one may enter, local or out of town fiddlers.

Age groups are 0 to 12 yrs., 13 to 25 yrs., 26 to 59 yrs., 60 yrs. and up. Prize money will be $50.00 for 1st prize, $30.00 for 2nd prize and $20.00 for 3rd prize. There will be no entry fee.

Registration will be held 12 noon to 1 p. m. prior to the contest at the M. K. Brown Auditorium. No late registrations will be accepted. The decision of the judges will be final. The award money will be presented at 4 p. m. immediately after the contest. For more information contact Jack Selby, 2634 Navajo, Pampa, TX 79065 or call him at 669-7737.

A local Blue Grass Band "The Vinings" will also entertain during the afternoon.

Don't waste money on excessive doses of vitamin c

By Gaynor Maddox

The money being spent on large doses of vitamin C is sadly wasted.

Researchers say that excessive use of this vitamin is impractical and sometimes even dangerous.

In an article published in Nutrition Reports International, the researchers point out that there is no clinical support for the theory that huge doses of vitamin C prevent the common cold.

Nevertheless, more than 11 percent of the 2,451 people sampled in seven Western states consumed between 2 and 8 grams of the vitamin per day, a level considered potentially harmful. Eight of those questioned consumed more than 8 grams per day, a level that can be distinctly harmful.

Very large doses of vitamin C can cause serious problems ranging from diarrhea to stone formation in the urinary tract.

So, stop and think before you dose yourself.

Don't be like my young acquaintance, the father of three children, who rushed into a department store, plunked $20 down on the counter and demanded, "I want vitamins."

The astonished clerk asked, "Which vitamins?"

He replied: "I don't care. I just don't want my kids getting colds all the time!"

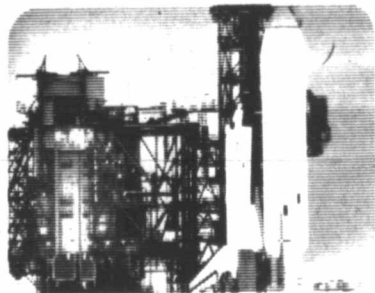

Morning glories are beautiful and vividly colored. And now there is hope that natural food color from this flower can be developed for commercial use.

This is the prediction of Pericles Markakis, professor of food science and human nutrition at Michigan State University. He is also the editor of the new book "Anthocyanins as Food Colors" (Academic Press). Markakis explains that anthocyanins are the reds, blues, purples and variations of these colors often seen in flowers such as morning glories and fruits such as berries and red apples.

The challenge in using the pigments from these flowers and fruits is twofold, he says: "We must learn how to maintain the color of the pigment, then how to use the pigment as an additive in foods."

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

You should do very well in your career or chosen field this coming year, provided you can subdue your restless desires for change. Build upon your present position and make yourself more valuable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This will be a very enjoyable day if you treat whatever occurs philosophically. Know in your mind that everything will work out fine in the long run. Predictions of what's in store for you for each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your gifts to research, probe or detect are exceptionally keen today. If there's information you'd like to ferret out, you'll have no difficulty doing so.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Persons with whom you deal on a one-to-one basis today will predicate their actions upon the way you treat them. If you are cooperative they'll be so, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's important to involve yourself in worthy projects today. If you fail to be industrious and productive you'll later feel guilty about wasting your time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It will help your romance considerably if you are more demonstrative today with the one you love by letting him or her know how you really feel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to have a few select friends over to y place. You'll know how to entertain them so that everyone will have an enjoyable evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You need a change of pace today, but try to select fun things to do which are more mental than manual. Do nothing related to your usual work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't let your income and expenditures get out of balance at this time. See to it that the items you buy don't exceed the surplus you have on hand.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You won't do so unless you feel it's necessary, but if you think your leadership is required you'll take change in a manner none will find objectionable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let the manana syndrome take over today. Fight tendencies to sweep responsibilities under the rug or postpone what needs doing today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Select companions today with whom you feel comfortable. If you choose types you feel you have to entertain, they won't be much fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're capable of major achievements today, but you're not likely to put forth your best efforts unless you feel strongly motivated or challenged.

Actress pounds typewriter in TV series and at home

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — Valerie Curtin pounds a typewriter as a secretary on the new ABC series "9 to 5," and at home she's also at the typewriter as a successful movie screenwriter.

Miss Curtin stars in the series as Judy Bernly, recently divorced and a beginner office worker befuddled by her unaccustomed surroundings in a big conglomerate. The show, based on the hit movie that pitted working women against chauvinistic management, also stars Rita Moreno and Rachel Dennison.

Miss Curtin and her writing partner, Barry Levinson, were nominated for an Academy Award for their first screenplay, "Annie Hall" in 1976. And Justice For All" in 1978. Two years later they wrote "Inside Moves" and their latest effort, "Best Friends," is in production starring Burt Reynolds and Goldie Hawn.

In "9 to 5," Miss Curtin plays the role created in the movie by Jane Fonda. She also had the opportunity to re-create her role of Vera in the movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" in the CBS series "Alice." "They approached me the first time they tried to do the series," says Miss Curtin, "but the thought of being locked into the first character I'd created wasn't appealing. And I was also under contract to ABC at the time."

When she was approached about "9 to 5," she met with Miss Fonda. "I wasn't sure what to do," she says. "I wanted to keep writing. But I loved the idea of the people I'd be working with. I tested with Rita and Rachel. That helped me decide. Rita is such a generous actress. And Rachel is a Christmas angel. There is a simplicity and truth in what she does and I'm learning from her."

She says she does not intend to write any scripts for the series. "I'm approaching this project strictly as an actress," she says. "I'm not sure that I'd know how to write for a half-hour comedy. Although I did start out doing that." Miss Curtin says that with Levinson, with whom she's lived for eight years, "our sensibilities are so similar it's as though it's just one expanded brain at work. We almost never have any conceptual differences. Our only arguments are over who's going to type."

She was born in New York, where her father, Joseph L. Curtin, was a radio actor who starred in the long-running "Mr. and Mrs. North" radio serial. She made her TV debut in "Happy Days" and appeared in a number of episodes.

"You don't have time in a series to really define your character the way you do in a movie. In "9 to 5" Judy has a vulnerability that I can identify with. Unlike Vera, Judy is not dumb, just naive. She's newly divorced, a neophyte at life."

'Little Shop of Horrors' at the Orpheum

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not your basic off-Broadway musical. Not with a jive-talking star that enters in a small pot, goes on a diet of human hors d'oeuvres and grows to be 8 1/2 feet tall. 18 feet wide.

The star is Audrey II, a plant that puts the bite on people, fatally. It's the main event in "Little Shop of Horrors." It, with eight actors, starts its leafy capering here July 27 at the Orpheum.

The show, loosely based a 1960 Roger Corman horror flick, is goofy, cheerfully macabre. It goes for chuckles, not chills. But it's a safe bet some will call it a distant cousin of Broadway's dark, grim, people-in-pies tableau, "Sweeney Todd."

"Yeah," grins Howard Ashman, "Shop" lyricist, book author and director. "An actor friend of mine already calls it 'Sweeney Pod.'" concocted with comp for Alan Menken, occurs in a seedy flower shop down on Skid Row. It revolves around what you might call a Faustian floral arrangement.

His supertuber spectacular.

A shy, tumbling clerk named Seymour discovers and brings in this rare plant. He learns that it can talk. But when it roars "Feed me!" it means with people much.

Seymour, longing for fame, fortune and the love of a sweet ex-hooker, uses the plant to achieve all this. Alas, the plant, in return for not disclosing its love of humanity, demands a steady flow of humanity.

It grows and grows, likewise Seymour's horror at this pistil-packing monster, which in full bloom resembles a very big Big Mac with fangs.

"Shop" not your basic off-Broadway musical, even though Menken cheerfully insists, "we kill people all in good fun."

"Shop" is their second musical. The first, in 1979, was off-Broadway's whimsical "God Bless You Mr. Rosewater," based on Kurt Vonnegut's novel about a gentle, eccentric millionaire with the hots to be a fireman.

Ashman, 32, a lean, wiry native of Baltimore, says he began thinking of both "Rosewater" and "Little Shop" as potential musicals a long time ago, when he was 15.

"I can't wait to hear what else he was thinking of at 15," murmurs Menken. A short, animated man who talks and moves at a brisk clip, Menken is Ashman's age and hail from New Rochelle, N.Y.

The two met in 1978 when studying here at a musical theater workshop run by Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI), a major music-publishing company. Ashman, then working on "Rosewater," was in need of a composer.

Anthony Costello, the actor-novelist

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — You know Anthony Costello, the actor. Now meet Anthony Costello, the novelist. He may be following in the reasonably illustrious footsteps of other actor-novelists, such as Tom Tryon and Lilli Palmer.

But the others had always wanted to write. Costello took up writing so he could write himself a good part.

The irony of that is that his first published novel, "Jericho," is a dandy story — but there's not one part in it that Costello can play.

"I'm too old to be either of the male protagonists," he says. "They are both in their early 20s. And I'm not old enough to play their fathers."

"Jericho" is not only Costello's first novel, it is his first anything of a written nature, unless you count a screenplay that was never produced and an outline for a TV mini-series that was never made.

But the mini-series outline was the genesis of "Jericho," so it wasn't a total loss. When he wrote it, a few big producers liked it; but Costello wouldn't sell it unless they'd let him write the screenplay, and they said no. Then Bantam decided it might make a good novel and signed him to a contract. It took Costello six years to finish it, but he figures it was worth the wait.

Costello had done pretty well as an actor, except that his choices were poor. He had great parts in flops, like "Will Penny" and "Blue" and "The Molly Maguires" and "Doctor's Wives." He did a pilot for CBS that didn't sell, and then had another good part in another movie that went nowhere, "Night Moves," with Gene Hackman.

He's still acting — he guest-starred on a recent episode of "Hart to Hart" — and says he thinks he's acting better now, since the novel was published, "because the pressure is off." He knows if he can't find acting jobs, he can always write.

AFTER I READ Peter Benchley's new book, "The Girl of the Sea of Cortez," I told Benchley it was a wonderful book but it could never be filmed. It has too many things, such as a girl riding on the back of a manta ray, that are impossible.

"You're wrong," said Benchley, politely but firmly. "Not only can it be filmed, but it can be filmed cheaply. And as for the girl on the manta ray, that can be done — and I know, because I've done it."

He says that, as a matter of fact, the spark for the book came from that manta ray ride in the Sea of Cortez, the narrow strip of water that separates Baja California from the mainland of Mexico. He was there, doing one of the "American Sportsman" shows for ABC when one of the group's experts (Michele Binder) did it, and he did it, too.

Benchley wrote "Jaws" and "The Deep" and "The Island," but his new one is not in that genre.
