Kristina's last hope: more pain for the embattled preschooler

A Pampa child stricken with blood cancer checked into M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston early this morning, where she will undergo a bone marrow transplant in a last resort effort to save her life.

Kristina Ennis, 4, daughter of Derek and Carla Ennis, is scheduled to receive the needed tissue from her older sister, Amber Dawn, 5.

The child has known little more than pain since she was 18 - months - old, when her disease was diagnosed by a Pampa doctor and treatment began Pampa doctor and treatment began Kris. Amber, their mother and grandma Barbara Flemming all left Pampa in a car bound for Houston early Wednesday morning.

The child's grandpa Jim Flemming. great - grandma Ruby Flemming and aunt Cathy Arnold gathered around the kitchen table at the matriarch's home here and told a story of pain.

Kristina has three sisters, Amber, Candice (Kristina's twin), and Megan, I.

To understand how the Ennis family began is to travel back in time to the seventh - grade romance of Derek Ennis and Carla Flemming.

The pair have been sweethearts ever since, and they married shortly after attending Pampa High School, just before Derek entered the service.

The newlyweds were sent by the Army to Germany where Kristina and her twin sister were born.

Everything was fine with the new family, and they returned to hometown Pampa to raise the kids.

But when Kristina was 18 - months old, her parents noticed what looked like black - and - blue bruises all over her body, accompanied by a high favor.

They went to a Pampa doctor, and "he took one look and told them what it was — leukemia."

For Kris, it meant immediate hospitalization, blood transfusions and painful chemotherapy.

"She looked horrible — like one of those kid's on TV from another country — nothing but skin and bones," grandpa Jim Flemming said. Since her parents first were told the

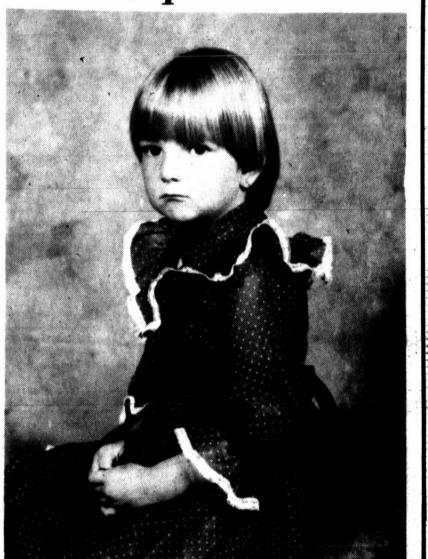

Since her parents first were told the shocking news. Kris has suffered endless bouts with the disease — first remission, then another round of cancer cells gone wild.

She was referred for treatment to Amarillo doctor Philip Periman, a cancer and blood specialist who now practices at the Harrington Cancer Center there.

$300 million in aid coming to Panhandle

DALLAS (AP) — The Reagan administration will approve disaster relief that could exceed $300 million for High Plains and eastern New Mexico farmers whose crops were ruined by rain and hail this year, U.S. Sen. John

Secretary of Agriculture John Block will announce the program as early as Thursday. Tower. R-Texas, said in a statement issued Wednesday

The program will provide relief for western Texas and eastern New Mexico cotton and wheat growers and may be extended to producers of other crops. Tower said.

"I am very pleased with the expeditious way which Secretary Block has conducted his analysis of this natural disaster, and I think this is a positive step toward alleviating the economic emergency that now confronts the people of West Texas." Tower said.

Cotton growers could get disaster payments of about 20 cents a pound on 75 percent of their losses. Tower said.

Budget Director David Stockman assured Tower Wednesday that the Office of Management and Budget would approve the disaster aid payments, said Elvin Caraway, the senator's West Texas office director.

But government sources, who asked not to be identified, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal that the Office of Management and Budget was considering three or four plans and the plan Tower talked about had not yet been approved.

It will not be known which counties and what other crops besides cotton and wheat will come under the disaster program until Block releases his plans. Caraway said

Spring and early summer storms have damaged about 2 million acres of the 4.3 acres in High Plains cotton planted this spring. Caraway said. About a million acres of cotton were completely destroyed, he said.

Another 1.7 million acres of wheat were damaged by the weather, he said. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, praised the administration for its handling of the farmers' requests for the disaster

"I am pleased that the administration has responded to our requests to provide disaster assistance to hard-pressed cotton farmers in West Texas," Bentsen said

"Although we do not yet know the area to be included in the disaster declaration, the terms of the proposed assistance, as I understand them, are good," he said.

Tower said the Department of Agriculture also would outline a new program for wheat growers for the 1983 crop.

The new plan will include emergency conservation funds to repair erosion and soil deterioration, and natural disaster assistance loans at below market interest rates from the Farmers Home Administration.

Tower said he met with President Reagan and Chief of Staff James Baker at the White House Wednesday morning to stress the farmers need for immediate aid.

Clements wants Gray County on the aid list

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday requested that 26 counties be declared disaster areas because heavy rains, hail and tornadoes during May and June destroyed or severely damaged crops.

The governor's request to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block seeks emergency loans and disaster payments to farmers in the following counties:

Bailey, Castro, Cochran, Coleman, Cottle, Delta, Duval, Fannin, Floyd, Franklin, Glasscock, Gray, Hale, Haskell, Hockley, Hopkins, Jones, King, Knox, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Nolan, Parmer, Reagan and Terry.

Defendants in the case are: Judy Oil

The suits claim these companies have sold the disputed gas to Cabot Corporation. Getty Oil. Northern Natural Gas Company and other buyers

The oil producers may have assigned interests in the oil leases to other Dorchester's ownership of those gas rights.

The gas rights in question are on fields located in the following sites: section 117, 126, 182, 183 and 208 in Block B - 2, H & GN Ry. Co. survey, and section 134, Block 3, I & GN Ry. Co. survey.

Similar lawsuits have been filed by Dorchester. Pioneer and Phillips concerning Carson County fields in the controversy between oil and gas rights that has been brewing in the oil fields since late 1975.

Oil companies have filed countersuits in reply to the gas companies' court action in Carson.

Rights to natural gas on the Gray County properties were sold to Nalam Corporation by Panoma Corporation July 1, 1954. Nalam, according to the lawsuits, then "sold all gas located in all formations produced in whole or in part above sea level" to Dorchester Corporation for $37 million dollars and other considerations.

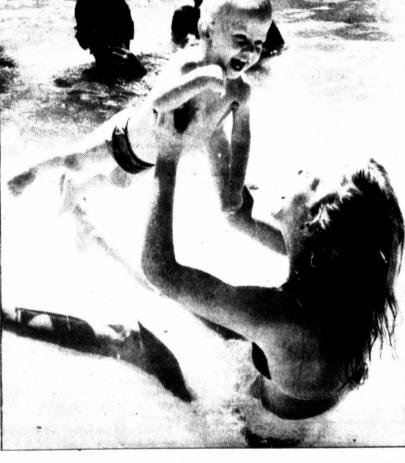

Dorchester Gas was formed to acquire all rights to the gas fields from Dorchester Corporation.

The suits claim Dorchester holds the deed to all gas in formations or horizons "situated in whole or in part above sea level" on the properties, and that the company has produced gas continuously from its gas wells on the sites.

Dorchester acquired farmout agreements with the oil producers allowing them to produce oil from horizons above sea level on the sites, but, according to the suits, the companies have perforated and pumped from gas formations there "with full knowledge that it is owned by the Plaintiff."

Granny cops a plea

HOUSTON (AP) — An 82-year-old grandmother says she is too ill and too tired to wage a court battle over the marijuana she said she grew to treat her arthritis

Laura Clark telephoned the Harris County district attorney's office and agreed to plead guilty to a marijuana possession charge. A hearing to receive the plea was scheduled July 27, authorities said.

Mrs. Clark, the grandmother of five, was arrested May 4 at her home after police received an anonymous tip that she was growing marijuana. The woman willingly showed police where the weed was being grown.

She told officers she thought the weed was a herb that could be mixed with an ointment to treat her arthritis.

"I still say I didn't know what it was," Mrs. Clark said Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Glenn Gotschall offered earlier to arrange a probated sentence for Mrs. Clark, but the elderly woman refused, claiming "I've done nothing wrong."

But after several court appearances, Mrs. Clark said she changed her mind. She said she was too weak to endure a long, drawn-out court fight.

"I've got this thing on my neck and I think they have to operate," she said. "I just can't keep going down there (to court)."

Gotschall said the plea bargain arrangement, if accepted by District Judge Michael McSpadden, will mean a sentence of two years' probation. Under the arrangement, Mrs. Clark will have no criminal record if she successfully completes her probation, he said.

Gotschall said he felt the arrangement will be "a fair resolution."

Iran - Iraq: a war of dirty names and death

By The Associated Press

Iraq claimed today its troops expelled and humiliated the Iranian forces who invaded Iraq in a powerful thrust apparently aimed at conquering the major oil-refining port of Basra.

"The invasion has been broken," an Iraqi war communique said. "The aggressors' perfidy boomeranged on them. They retreated in failure across the border, pursued by blows and curses."

The communique, monitored in London, said "Iraqi troops fought outstandingly, the invaders were routed and suffered the most terrible defeat, their forces annihilated on the battlefield."

There was no immediate comment from Iran on the Iraqi claim but earlier Iranian broadcasts today said Iran's "Operation Ramadan" invasion forces had completed a 12-mile thrust into Iraq and were consolidating positions near Basra, Iraq's second largest city across the Shatt-al-Arab waterway. The communiques, monitored in London, said the Iranians were preparing to drive toward the Iraqi city of Tannumah, on the east bank of the waterway opposite Basra.

Earlier in Tehran, Interior Minister Hojatoleslam Nategh Nouri said in an interview with the Jomhuri Islami newspaper that his country would make war on Iraq until Iranian cities were safe from attacks and "as long as our rights are not met completely."

The interview, seen in Nicosia, Cyprus, apparently contradicted earlier promises to fight until Iran's fundamentalist Moslem armies toppled Iraq's regime and marched to Israeli-held Jerusalem.

narched to Israeli-held Jerusalem. While an estimated 200,000 Iranian and Iraqi troops fought what was said to be a bloody ground battle Wednesday in the southeastern corner of Iraq, Iran sent jets to attack Basra.

Iraq said its air force retaliated by bombing Kharg Island, Iran's vital Persian Gulf oil port, and three western Iranian cities where hundreds of casualties were reported. Iraqi communiques acknowledged losing four planes in the attack on Kharg Island.

Both sides claimed to have inflicted heavy enemy losses and taken hundreds of prisoners in the clash on a narrow strip of land between the Iraq-Iran frontier and the east bank of the Shatt-al-Arab opposite Basra, 75 miles north of the

Persian Gulf
The conflicting claims could not be independently verified because foreign reporters are not allowed into the war zone, but the combat clearly was large-scale.

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington estimated Iran sent 100,000 troops into Iraq in its drive to "liberate" its Moslem neighbor and topple President Saddam Hussein, and that Iraq had a force of equal size in the battle zone?

Iran's invasion Tuesday, code-named for the Moslem holy month of Ramadan, escalated a 22-month-old war. The Shatt-al-Arab is Iraq's only shipping outlet to the Persian Gulf and its southern end forms part of the border between Arab Moslem Iraq and Persian Moslem Iran, two of the Middle East's oldest enemies.

Wheat farmers must reduce acres 20% next year to get subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers will have to reduce 1983 wheat plantings 20 percent in order to collect federal price supports and related benefits, says the Agriculture Department

The 1983 cutback compares with a 15 percent reduction for this year's wheat crop. Back-to-back record crops and indications for another bumper harvest have triggered one of the sharpest U.S. grain buildups in history

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Wednesday that according to current estimates, farmers are expected to take 6 million to 10 million acres of wheat land from production next year. Department officials say farmers have only 1.44 million fewer acres for harvest this year than they did in 1981, despite the reduction program.

Block rejected proposals by some farm groups and members of Congress to pay farmers direct subsidies for taking some of their land out of production next year.

The National Association of Wheat Growers said the program will make farmers "clients of the government" by increasing their dependence on federal support programs.

Block also announced resumption of a loan program to help farmers build grain storage bins, up to a total of $40 million beginning Oct. 1.

Also, he told a news conference, an additional $300 million has been made available to help selected foreign countries to buy U.S. farm commodities. That boosted the credit program to $2.8 billion.

Block said the wheat acreage reduction "will have a negligible effect on consumer prices" because the farm value of grain has so little impact on processed food prices.

At the same time, he said, reduced output is expected to help farmers financially, including the possiblity of some strengthening in wheat prices in 1983.

In a move to help encourage participation in the 1983 wheat program, Block said farmers would be eligible to collect cash payments at the time they sign up. beginning on Sept. 7 for winter wheat producers.

The advance payments would be equal to half of the estimated 1983 crop deficiency payments which would be due them. The payments make up the difference between the market price level - or the loan rate, whichever is higher and a "target price" set under a formula.

Block said that tentatively the deficiency payment for wheat in 1983 is estimated at about 50 cents a bushel, meaning the advance payment would be about 25 cents a bushel on their normal production.

Block said he had no estimate on how much the deficieny payments and the cash advances might total because it is not known how many farmers will enroll in the program.

The 1983 wheat program includes a regular price support loan rate of $3.55 per bushel and $4 per bushel for wheat place in the farmer-owned reserve program. Both rates are unchanged from this year.

Government storage payments to farmers who have grain in the reserve will remain at 26.5 cents per bushel per year. But the target price, which is adjusted under a formula in the law. will go to $4.30 a bushel next year from $4.05 in 1982.

"Farmers participating in the 1983 acreage reduction program must reduce their wheat acreage for harvest by at least 20 percent from an established wheat base." the USDA's background paper said.

"If the farmer participated in the 1982 wheat program, the 1983 wheat acreage base will be the same as the 1982 base. For producers who did not participate in the 1982 wheat program, their 1983 acreage base will be the average acreage planted for harvest of the 1981 and 1982 crops."

For example, a farmer with a 1983 base of 100 acres can plant no more than 80 acres of wheat for harvest next year. The remaining 20 acres must be devoted to conservation uses and be protected from wind and water erosion.

Block said farmers will be able to divert eligible cropland for permanent conservation uses such as grass and qualify for federal cost-sharing payments to cover part of their

The latest USDA projections issued this week show that the wheat stockpile when the 1983-84 marketing year begins next June 1 will be around 1.25 billion bushels, up from 1.16 billion last June 1.

White House to build $9,000 beauty parlor to keep peace

at the White House has resulted in a decision to build a $9,000 beauty salon, climaxing 18 months of bickering between the barber and the beauticians.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said Wednesday the barber and the beauticians, who share the same quarters on alternate days, have been embroiled in a Baker said the barbershop dispute "has been a problem for us for the 18 months that we've been here," adding, "We think there ought to be a facility both for men to get haircuts and women to get their hair done. So we're going to have to see to it that there are those two facilities.

Milton Pitts, the barber who occupies the small room in the White House basement on Tuesdays and Thursdays, told the AP recently he thought it was wise to build a separate

But the beauticians, Yves and Nancy Graux, who use the salon on Wednesdays and Fridays, are upset about being moved to quarters in the Old Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House. 'It just seems unnecessary to spend the money," said

Nancy Graux. John Rogers, director of administration at the White . House, said the new quarters should be ready in a few weeks.

He said the $9,000 would be paid from the regular White House operating budget. Rogers said there were no plans to allow anyone but the beauticians to occupy the new salon. In a recent AP interview, Baker said the new salon was being built "because we think it's important that the president's barbershop be the way it was through all presidencies up until the Carter presidency." That means he wants the shop reserved for the president, although Pitts also cuts the hair of Vice President George Bush, the Cabinet, and several senior staff members. When Carter switched from Pitts to a new barber, he also allowed the beauticians to come in twice a week to style hair for women and some men. Pitts had the barbershop to imself under Presidents Nixon and Ford

Nancy Reagan has a room upstairs in the living quarters and does not patronize the staff beauty salon.

Many times the childhood leukemia will respond to standard treatment, but Kris was losing the battle. Her doctor decided on the bone marrow transplant.

Kris will go into complete isolation at the Houston hospital, so other germs cannot attack her system. Then, she will receive massive doses of radiation and chemotherapy in an attempt to destroy the cancer cells in her bone

The process also will destroy much of her immune system. That's why she needs a transplant, so her sister's donated tissue can take over the function for a while. Hopefully, the cancer cells will disappear, and later normal blood cell growth can take over. Ruby Flemming said the operation is the child's last chance, a "last resort."

"I guess she will just die a slow death," Jim Flemming said.

Kris and her mother will be in Houston for the transplant, treatments and tests for about three or four

They only knew a time to check into the hospital there, it was unknown Wednesday where they would stay in Houston, or how they would pay for it.

Even before the expensive Houston trip, the medical bills piled up on the Ennis family.

John B. Rogers, district director for the Texas Railroad Commission, said the problem is complicated by the fact that petroleum formations in the area are interconnected by either natural or man - made avenues.

Since the battle for gas rights began, he said, the commission has assigned employees to witness all perforations of petroleum formations in the area, hoping to avoid further disputes of this kind.

Dr. William Stacey and Dr. Andy Shupe of the University of Texas at Arlington said they also came up with psychological profiles of the victims and the men who beat them, and those profiles do not fit accepted stereotypes.

Stacey said statisties are hard to come by, but varying authorities report that either one out of two or two out of five wives are beaten by their husbands.

He said experts predict there will be 4.5 million marriages in Texas this year, and that there are about 2 million cases of spouse abuse reported each year.

Most of the women who sought help from publicly funded shelters were Anglo and only 10 percent received some kind of welfare assistance. Shupe said.

He said the average victim is 25 years old, does not abuse drugs or alcohol, has at least two children, does not work outside the home and has a high school education or less. Most have less than $20 when they arrive at the shelter, he said. 'We see them as survivors, not as losers," Shupe said.

Most left their husbands in desperation, citing most often economic dependency as the reason they stayed. Only 15 percent stayed because they still loved their husbands. Shupe

Stacey said the average wife-beater is 29 years old, has at least a high school education, is employed and makes $15,000 a

But he is not an "all-American male," Stacey said. He probably was a battered child and likely has been arrested before. He considers violence acceptable and usually is drunk or on drugs when he beats his wife.

"A marriage license does not give a man the right to commit the attrocities we're talking about," said Stacey, who complained about police indifference to domestic violence

"The typical response is, 'Why don't you file a report?' 'Why don't you leave?' or, 'You're not hurt bad enough,'" Stacey said. "Twenty percent of the women who go to shelters have broken bones. How bad do you have to be hurt?

The women surveyed said they called police 60 percent to 70 percent of the time when their husbands became violent, but reported police showed up only 30 percent of the time. Stacey

Police need more incentive for intervening in domestic disturbances, Stacey said, as well as more training. Although police report that 50 percent of their calls involve family violence, police cadets average only a week of training to deal with such situations. Stacey said. An indirect casualty of wife-beating is the psychological effect on children. Shupe said. He said 80 percent of the children of the surveyed mothers had witnessed violence between their parents.

HOUSTON (AP) - Capital murder charges were filed against a 23-year-old man in connection with the death of a police officer, who was shot after stopping two men in a car for a traffic violation, officials said.

A passing motorist and another officer were wounded and one of the two men in the car was killed.

Ricardo Aldane Guerra was being held without bond late Wednesday in the Harris County jail, the district attorney's office said. Guerra was charged in the shooting death of Officer J.D. Harris, 29.

Another officer. Lawrence J. Trephenier, was listed in fair condition at Hermann Hospital, and Jose Francisco Armijo, 33, of Houston, a passing motorist, was in critical condition at Ben Taub Hospital

Oak Wednesday. A woman was held for questioning in connection with the shooting that left one person dead and four wounded. (AP Laserphoto)

Police seek shooting spree motive

LIVE OAK, Texas (AP) - Police pondered today why a woman who lived alone and attended church almost daily would go on a shooting rampage that left one neighbor dead and four others wounded in their low-rent apartment.

Less than two hours after the Wednesday morning shootings, police said they arrested Joyce Ann Vanguilder, who was found with a broken leg, lying beside an interstate highway and babbling about shooting snakes or rats.

Chuck Boltz, a boy of about 10, said the woman rushed into his family's home and began shooting at his parents while screaming, "You killed everybody and you're going to pay.

Miss Vanguilder, 42, was charged with one count of murder and four counts of attempted murder at about 11 p.m. Wednesday, said night Magistrate Quon Lew He said he set bonds totalling $110,000

She was hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio. Hospital spokesman Ralph Cortez said Miss Vanguilder suffered a broken left lower leg and multiple contusions and abrasions

The dead woman was identified by the Bexar County medical examiners' office as Sue Bunderman, 32.

All of the victims had moved to this San Antonio suburb of about 8.000 people from the Lebanon, Pa., area about nine months ago looking for jobs. said Sterling J. Ditzler, who was wounded in the attack.

Three other young boys were inside the apartment where the shooting took place, but were not injured, police said.

Dozens of police officers from five agencies, including the San Antonio SWAT team, laid seige to the apartment complex for two hours late Wednesday morning until they were told a woman already was in custody.

Mayor Ralph Cullip said a construction crew found Miss Vanguilder lying on the side of IH-35, talking incoherently and saying she "did some shooting at some snakes and rats in her home

He said the woman was not carrying a weapon when she was found near the highway, where she had apparently fallen or jumped from an embankment.

The mayor said the woman was known to own a .22-caliber pistol and a .25-caliber pistol. He said police had twice before investigated disturbances at the apartment complex involving the woman Dr. Charles Kemble, pastor of the Universal Baptist Church and a friend of the widow who owns the apartments, said the suspect lived in a cottage at the back of the series of rent houses and did odd jobs around the complex

Some apartment residents said the woman walked around the grounds with a pistol strapped to her side in a holster and told them she was in charge of security

She said she was a security guard. I never questioned that she didn't have a right to carry the gun," said a resident, who asked not to be identified.

But Kemble and apartment owner Elva Ferrell denied Miss Vanguilder was a security guard.

Mrs. Ferrell said Miss Vanguilder, who lived alone at the apartments for the past seven years, attended a non-denominational church nearly Reporters observed some religious tapes, a large Bible open to II Samuel chapters 19 and 20, and a notebook containing incoherent writings inside the small unkempt cottage where Miss Vanguilder lived

The four wounded people were taken to Brooke Army Medical Center and Northeast Baptist Hospital.

Ditzler, 19, was listed in serious condition, and Vivian Boltz, 27, was in undetermined condition at Brooke Army Medical Center. Tim Schwartz, 13, was in fair condition and his mother Karen Schwartz, 33, was in good condition at Northeast Baptist Hospital.

Nine charges have been filed in Oklahoma County distric court against Larry Livingston Lawson, 32, of DeSoto, Texas in connection with the incident, authorities said. Lawson, who was arrested earlier this month in connection

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment

Freedom to fail

The freedom to succeed and the freedom to fail are two edges of the same very sharp sword. You have the one only in proportion to how you have the other.

Beginning tomorrow, the federal government (which means US) is expected to pay Panhandle cotton farmers more than $300 million to keep them from going broke. That $300 million will mean that those same farmers will be farming again next year. Also, it means that for all businesses in farming towns, including this newspaper, there won't be the catastrophic loss of income that would've taken place if the cotton crop had been allowed to fail with the hail.

There will undoubtedly be celebrating tonight. The Republicans will be glad to point out that Reagan has a "heart" and the Democrats will take credit for putting the pressure on him. The businessmen will be happy for the farmers, and the farmers will be happy for themselves.

But for everything we receive, there is a price.

Farmers have always been among the most independent workers in America. They feed us. They work with their hands and their brains and they set their own hours, and they receive the satisfaction of watching their handiwork grow in front of their eyes. In good years, they are also rewarded by being able to build beautiful homes and buy tractors that cost the same as a Grevhound bus.

But the other side of that sword is that farming is a gamble. Some years are bumper crops Some years the hail comes. Or the drought. Or the bugs. Or the freezes. Or tornadoes.

Some years the crop grows beautifully, but the price is below what it costs to grow it, such as the situation wheat farmers find themselves in this year.

What will this $300 million cost? Obviously, it will cost all taxpayers $300 million. But the hidden costs to the farmer may be more than that. In the same breath with the $300 million, the government is telling wheat farmers to cut back on their acreage next year by 20 per cent.

It may sound ridiculous, right now, to speculate on a program of federally subsidized agriculture where everyone plants what the government wants, in the amount the government wants us to, and sells it for what the government tells us to. But that is the logical and inevitable result of starting down this path.

There is no job more vital to life, perhaps, than farming, and we wish good years and bumper crops and happy prices to everyone. But farmers must also be allowed to fail. If they fail, what happens?

Someone else will farm that land. And that someone should also be given the right to fail, as well as the right to succeed. This is basic to the American way of life, and should be protected with all our will.

For the land will still be there. Take care of the land, and the land will take care of you. We must learn to farm better, preserve it better, make every acre count. And we will do that only if the incentive is there for us to do it. The land will sustain us in the long run. It's a shame the federal government doesn't have that kind of track record.

This $300 million may be the most expensive helping hand farmers have ever grasped. - Anthony

He's the Scrooge of GPO

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Danford L. Sawyer Jr. certainly isn't one of President Reagan's best - known federal appointees, but he's well on his way to becoming one of the most unpopular officials in government and he's proud of it. Sawyer's title, public printer, dates back to the 18th century, but his contentious style of dealing with people is of more recent vintage. It's reminiscent of the 19th century novels written by Charles Dickens, which featured such lovable characters as Ebenezer Scrooge and Uriah Heep.

In a mere 10 months as chief executive officer of the Government Printing Office, Sawyer has managed to antagonize most of GPO's employees, alienate the congressional committee that has jurisdiction over GPO's activities and unnecessarily impugn the integrity of the committee's chairman.

When the Joint Committee on Printing last month unanimously approved a resolution firmly noting that federal law gives it - not Sawyer exclusive authority to establish GPO policy, he responded a day later with a press release proclaiming that "we consider it (the resolution) without legal basis" because of "its apparent conflict with controlling statutes.

The confrontational approach probably will produce only one result -Sawyer's prompt return to Sarasota, Fla.; where he was an advertising agency executive before accepting this first government job. Indeed, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R - Md., chairman of the joint committee, reportedly has twice asked the White House to find a new public printer. Sawyer apparently is aware that his disputatious behavior doesn't win friends or influence people. "We might as well go all the way on this," he told one interviewer. "I'd like to get back to Florida anyway." An associate bluntly describes Sawyer's current activities as "a last - ditch effort. Much of the controversy involves

Sawyer's relationship with GPO's 6,200 - member work force, about 5,000 of whom are stationed here in

Sawyer says he has "uncovered extraordinary waste and inefficiency' at GPO, much of it attributable to institutionalized featherbedding, a bloated work force and excessive wage

Although the figures Sawyer cites to support those claims have failed to withstand careful scrutiny, he has proposed a series of draconian solutions: Lay off all GPO employees for six days apiece during the remainder of 1982, slash the payroll by firing 1,200 to 1,700 people and rewrite contracts with the remaining workers to require them to accept pay cuts averaging 22 percent during the next three years. "A typical (printing) job produced by GPO costs about twice what it would if we produced it in the private sector." says Sawyer. But his own figures show that fully 72 percent of the $646 million worth of printing for which GPO was responsible in fiscal 1981 was, in fact, subcontracted to private firms. The remaining 28 percent of the printing was done principally for Congress and included the Congressional Record, committee transcripts and reports and similar documents.

When the congressional oversight committee balked at Sawyer's plans to slash both employment and wage rates, he lashed out at the panel:

"If you check members of the committee, the Democrat and Republican members, but primarily the Democrat members, you will find AFL - CIO funding of their campaigns to a very large degree. Mathias was singled out for special criticism: "If (he) were being judged by the same (conflict of interest) standards that I was judged by going through the confirmation process, he wouldn't be allowed to be chairman of the committee . . . He should disqualify himself. There is no Washington practice more scandalous than the use of generous campaign contributions by special - interest groups to curry favor with members of select committees - but Sawyer certainly isn't going to launch a successful reform crusade with his bull - in - a - china - shop approach. Indeed, his abrasive style has made him a likely candidate for an early and well - deserved - departure from

FCC does its bit

An Associated Press writer. anticipating the Federal Communications Commission action a few days ago, wrote that the FCC was "posed to push television toward a new future this week." After the action, perhaps having observed what really happened with a little better perspective, the same writer wrote that the FCC. "determined not to stand in the way of new technology, has authorized the transmission os television programs directly from orbiting satellites to the home.

We're delighted that first - hand observation moved the writer to a more accurate statement of what the FCC as actually doing, and almost as delighted that his earlier formulation offers an opportunity to comment on one of the more widespread, almost unconscious misperceptions of our

The technology the FCC authorized, the direct broadiasting satellite (DBS), has been available for several years. Io depends on special high - power satellites that can beam a signal to the Earth with such intensity that a small antenna, perhaps as small as 21/2 feet across. can pick it up. Development costs will be high, but when the system is in place. it could mean a much wider range of choices for TV viewers, especially those in remote or rural locations. Many people in the United States cannot receive any over - the air TV signals, and millions more can get only one or two signals. An operational DBS system could give them as many as 35 channels of available programming, with the first service likely to start in 1985. There are other possible applications of the DBS technology, including a high - definition TV picture so clear that it would rival the quality of a picture on the best motion - picture screen. Such pictures couldn't even be received on conventional TV screens, but the technology is available to offer sets capable of receiving such a picture. The interesting point is that the face of some pressure. The National Association of Broadcasters, representing the status quo, didn't want the FCC to authorize any DBS facilities, arguing that only Congress had the authority to authorize and regulate what would be, in effect, a new group of nationwide broadcasters. One can understand their position, though it's difficult to admire it. The networks and local stations don't want any more competition, and the habit of asking government to outlaw potential competition is all too deeply

There's still some unnecessary bureaucracy for DBS providers to hurdle. The FCC has nine applications on file, and it plans to wait until after a 1983 international conference on DBS service before it begins to process them in earnest. That will be another unnecessary, government - created delay. For the present, however, the FCC is to be congratulated for declining to stand Broadcasters should go back to the drawing board and return with a more plausible argument. If the FCC plans to permit DBS service without the same kind of licensing and programming requirements it now imposes on conventional TV, perhaps it's time to lift the restrictions now imposed on the networks and local stations. The FCC just might listen with sympathy to such a plea.

One small dividend for man

By ART BUCHWALD

When Neil Armstrong landed on the lunar surface many moons ago, and said, "One small step for a man; one gaint leap for mankind," I'll have to admit I was worried. I couldn't believe that the United States would invest all that brainpower and money just to find out what made the universe tick.

I recall turning to my wife, or somebody like her, and saying, 'There's got to be a military dividend in all this.

My wife, or whoever it was, is a romantic by nature. "Why does there always have to be a military dividend in everything?" she demanded. "Why can't we use scientific achievements for peace instead of war?"

'We could if THEY would," I told her. "There is only one reason the Soviets want to get into space and that's so they can conquer us on earth.' "So, why did Neil Armstrong just say what he did? "Because the military never tells anyone the real reason they send someone up in a rocket. If they had Armstrong say, 'One small killer satellite for a man; one giant killer satellite for mankind,' it would have just tipped off the Russians we knew that they were planning to use the sky for military purposes. This way they think we just landed on the moon, because no human on earth had ever done it before." 'Maybe we do plan to use space exploration for peace," my wife said. Women live in a dream world. Even if that was its original purpose, no military establishment worth its salt would ignore the opportunities of space for waging all - out war. Just think, in our lifetime there will be weapons poised up in the heavens aimed at any target on the globe. Man, by just pressing a button, will be able to send them hurtling down on us at the speed of light." "Is that your dream world?" she asked.

By ART BUCHWALD

"Of course not. But we have to face reality. The nation that dominates space will dominate the world. Do you think we're going to continue to spend billions of dollars on a program which doesn't have any strategic defensive value? We're not idiots. Mark my words. In a few years from now we're going to send up a space shuttle with a tiny military package in it. Then the Soviets are going to send up one with a larger military package. Then we're going to send one up even bigger than a bread box. And before you know it, the only thing that will be allowed on space vehicles will be military equipment. "Hip - hip - hooray," my wife said. "Of course we won't use ours unless they use theirs. We don't want to start a war. We just want to deter one. What better deterrent than a satellité bristling with atomic weapons flying over the Soviet Union every 24 hours. It might finally bring about the dream for peace that all mankind has been waiting for. Once we have parity in the heavens, we can all sleep better on

"So that's what you think this space program is all about?"

They may not have had it in mind when they started it. But now that we know what we can do in space, we've got to make it pay off militarily, or it won't make any scientific sense.

And so the other day when I watched the space shuttle land, and knew the tiny military package on board was safe, I, like all Americans, breathed a sigh of relief.

I said to my wife, or whoever was with me, "Fasten your seat belt baby. It's a whole new ball game.'

Two of the original group of wheelchair-bound climbers quit the first day. And Wednesday, painful sores and blisters forced Bobby Leyes, 30, of Raleigh, N.C. to turn back.

The three remaining climbers camped less than two miles from the mountain's 8,751-foot summit Wednesday night, park superintendent Bill Dunmire said Wednesday

They could reach the top by Friday, Dunmire said

Dunmire said that after talking with the climbers, park rangers were confident they could make the summit

"They reinforced that they're feeling stronger as they're going along." . Dunmire said. "We don't have any real concern for their safety.

Today's stretch of the rocky, 4%-mile trail leads through a shaded canyon and will be easier than Wednesday's, Dunmire said. Rangers have expressed concern about how the men would handle the 90-degree heat that bakes the West Texas mountain.

"They've been in a pretty rough section," Dunmire said Wednesday. "They had to negotiate a pretty rocky portion of the trip today. They don't seem at all discouraged."

"The next mile won't be nearly as difficult as what they've been going

The group will try to reach the trail's last camp tonight, Dunmire said. An unimpaired person in good physical condition could make the 91/2-mile round trip in six to eight hours, he said.

Leyes, accompanied by the group's scout, Pete Sevy of Denver, returned from the trail Wednesday morning, Dunmire said.

"Leyes developed really severe blisters on his hands and body,' Dunmire said. "So the party is reduced to three, but they're three really strong guys, still in good spirits and determined to continue.

Donnie Rogers, 26, of Dallas, the only experienced climber in the group, led the expedition. With him were Dave Kiley, 29, of Los Angeles and Joe Moss. 32, of Dallas. Moss lost his legs in the Vietnam war. The others were paralyzed in accidents.

The original expedition leader, Michael "Shorty" Powers, 30, of Dallas, dropped out when he developed muscle spasms. John Galland, 31, of Mound, Minn., showed up but didn't start because he had a kidney infection.

Powers said the remaining climbers all reported they were getting sores on their buttocks and hands when they dismounted and scooted over the rocky terrain while dragging their chairs on the edges of sheer cliffs.

The last day's climb will be the toughest, because the trail near the summit is too narrow and steep for the climbers' wheelchairs. They will have to crawl the last few hundred yards.

Park rangers check on the group only occasionally, because the men. members of Powers' group, POINT -Paraplegics On Independent Nature Trips - want to make the expedition unaided, Dunmire said.

They hope to reach the summit Friday afternoon, return to the campsite that night, and begin the descent the next day. Powers said the park service had asked the men to accept helicopter rides down from the peak, to avoid the dangerous descent.

Until the men rounded a steep curve, Powers watched them through a telescope at the foot of the mountain and talked to them on a two-way radio.

"There are moments when you're close to tears, it's so exciting," Powers said. "They're so close now, you couldn't stop these guys if you shot

The expedition is benefitting the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, a non-profit corporation that operates therapy centers in Abilene, Snyder and San Angelo. Contributors are donating up to 10 cents for every foot that the climbers ascend, with all of the money going to the rehabilitation centers.

War aftermath

Argentine armored vehicles and jeeps abandoned by the forces who surrendered to British troops on June 15. line the docks in front of the Falklands Islands Company headquarters in Port Stanley last week. Disposal of Argentine equipment, munitions and mines is a major task facing British forces and civilians on the Falklands.

Troops go home, but Britain's task in Falklands just beginning

Associated Press Writer

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) -The last of the troops that won back the Falklands from Argentina will be home within a month. But Britain's job here is only beginning.

Not only is a military garrison larger than the population to be established, but explosive mines must be cleared. homes rebuilt, the Stanley airfield extended and the islands' economy revived.

"After three months of occupation we've got a lot of rehabilitation and reconstruction to do," said Rex Hunt, former Falklands go End Of Directoryned as civil commissioner.

Of Stanley's 368 houses, 27 were destroyed or so badly damaged during the fighting as to be inhabitable. An additional 167 sustained less serious damage.

The town's water and power supplies were knocked out by shell fire, the police station had its roof blown off by a rocket and Stanley airfield, though operating, is strewn with the remains of Argentine aircraft and equipment.

Abandoned jeeps, tanks and armored vehicles line the Stanley docks. Argentine booby-traps and mines. scattered aimlessly in the panic of defeat, are sown in and around the

The British military hopes to prevent any repetition of Argentina's April 2 invasion by establishing a garrison large enough to deter initial threats and an airstrip long enough to take airborne reinforcements

Government officials estimate the garrison force at 2,500, according to British press reports. By contrast, when the Argentines invaded, there were just 42 Royal Marines here to guard a civilian population of about

In about three weeks, the airfield will be shut down so Royal Engineers can begin lengthening the 4,000-foot runway to accommodate large transports and high-performance fighter planes.

The British-descended islanders have long sought the extension to establish a direct air link to Britain. But the British government in 1977 refused to spend the 3 million pounds ($5.2 million) then needed.

Defense Secretary John Nott in London has projected the cost of British military operations at a billion pounds ($1.73 billion); estimates on maintaining the garrison, plus the ships, submarines and warplanes that will patrol the South Atlantic for the foreseeable future, run into the hundreds of millions of dollars a year. The troops are helping in the civilian reconstruction, too. As Royal Engineers clear Argentine minefields, other soldiers are repairing water and power lines. The military is shipping to the Falklands a new water treatment plant, building materials to repair homes and fuel for heating them.

"The Argentines used the peat we normally burn to make their barricades," said John Broderick, director of public works. "We can't cut more right now as our peat banks are suspect because of the mine hazard."

The fighting and the mine hazard have disrupted the islands' principal industry, sheep-raising. Thousands of the 600,000 sheep were slaughtered by Argentine soldiers for food, others were destroyed by mines and many are roaming free after the destruction of fences and pens.

For Hunt, economic reconstruction is a top priority. He hopes the conflict will attract not only aid from London but investment from abroad. He also would like to see more islanders own their own land. Currently, the Falkland Islands Co., which controls the wool trade and much of the islands' commerce, owns 46 percent of the land

Lebanese want foreign forces out

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - With Israeli jets thundering overhead, the Lebanese government took its first public stand on the six-week-old invasion crisis, calling on Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces to leave the bloodied country.

In a communique Wednesday, the government, stuggling to reassert its authority, asked for a multinational peacekeeping force to supervise evacuation of Yasser Arafat's 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas trapped by Israeli forces in west Beirut

Although the communique did not specify which countries would contribute to such a force, the United States has offered 1,000 Marines. France and other countries have also volunteered troops.

The government supports efforts by President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan "to deal with the crisis emanating from the Israeli occupation," and "ensure the withdrawal of all non-Lebanese/armed forces," the communique said.

Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6 to annihilate PLO forces and has threatened to storm their west Beirut bunkers unless the guerrillas leave Lebanon. But Israeli officials say they will give more time to U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib's efforts to peacefully extricate the PLO fighters. A four-day-old cease-fire arranged by Habib appeared to be holding, although sporadic shootouts were reported between Israeli and PLO forces around the besieged capital. Negotiations to evacuate the PLO have been complicated because it is unclear when the multinational force would be deployed. It is also uncertain where the guerrillas would go because no Arab country is prepared to host the armed fighters.

The Lebanese communique was issued by the Cabinet as Israeli warplanes roared over west Beirut in mock air raids designed to pressure the guerrillas to flee their final retreat without a fight.

beach. The federal government is planning to auction 17 acres of the fort to ease the national debt. Which 17 acres will be sold has not been revealed. (AP Laserphoto)

Selling Waikiki military resort to help ease the national debt

HONOLULU (AP) — For sale: 17 acres prime Waikiki beach front. Parcel may include World War II artillery battery currently housing Army Museum, picnic tables, and handball courts. Zoned: Park. Value: $221 million. Contact: 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.

It hasn't gone on the auction block yet, but many residents are shocked that Fort DeRussy, an oasis of lawn and sand amid the hotel high-rises and condo canyons of Waikiki, might be auctioned to the highest bidder to diminish the national debt. "Will the scrap metal in the Statue of Liberty go to the highest bidder?" asked one irate reader in a letter to a local newspaper. "Why not tell New York City to sell Central Park?" wrote

"It is the perfect example of the kind of property we need to sell to begin to bring down our $1 trillion national debt," counters Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., an advocate of the sale.

"The times call for this kind of sacrifice," said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a letter to Percy last March, but he noted that the sale of the unique military recreation area undoubtedly would damage military Seventeen acres of the 72-acre military recreation area have been declared excess land by the Federal Property Review Board. If Congress passes a suitable law, the board plans to sell the land at auction.

More than 300 parcels of land ranging from a penitentiary in Indiana to a vacant city block in Philadelphia were included in a preliminary nationwide list released June 26 by review board.

The huge transfer of public land to the private domain is expected to generate $1.3 billion in revenue in 1983, and more than $4 billion annually in succeeding years, federal officials say.

David Stockman, Reagan's director of the federal budget, figures the value of the Fort DeRussy parcel at $13 million an acre. But whoever bids on the land will have to contend with stiff local opposition - backed by strong zoning ordinances.

"I will do everything in my power to prevent its sale to the highest bidder,' said Honolulu Mayor Eileen R. Anderson. "We will use all our land use, planning, zoning and permit procedure powers to discourage sale or use of the lands at Fort DeRussy.'

City officials say the land is within the Waikiki Special Design District, a section of beachfront under strict zoning laws. In Fort DeRussy, the city prohibits all buildings in a 100-foot beach-front area and beyond the beach, building heights are limited to 25 feet or need in Waikiki is another major construction site for hotels and condominiums," Mrs. Anderson said in a speech earlier this year. "What we really need is more open beachfront and green space."

Located next to the Hilton Hawaiian Village, the fort is named after Rene DeRussy, a Civil War general. Its spacious grounds and public pathways are used by an estimated 500,000 people each month, according to Capt. Dick Hooter, a former post commander.

Residents mingle with the mainstays of Hawaii's economy - tourists and members of the military. Girl Scouts picnic and American Legionnaires convene beneath its towering shade trees. And nearly every parade in Waikiki assembles or disperses there.

An artillery battery may be included in the surplus acreage. From 1915 to 1946, it housed two 14-inch guns protecting the coast of Oahu; now it is now home to the U.S. Army Museum.

A 417-room hotel, Kale Koa, was opened in 1975 for military personnel and their families and occupies nearly nine acres of the land. A spokesman for Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, says the hotel apparently is not included in the proposed sale.

Congress moving ahead on business

WASHINGTON (AP) - George P. Shultz' confirmation as secretary of state is considered virtually certain after two days of Senate hearings.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee ended its questioning of the 61-year-old economist Wednesday and voted 17-0 to recommend that the full Senate confirm him. Senate leaders scheduled action for today.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., committee chairman, urged the quick confirmation vote, saying he felt "a sense of urgency about having a secretary of state" at a time of turmoil in the

Meanwhile, House and Senate negotiators wrote a compromise $5.5 billion emergency spending bill that parallels a Senate-passed measure endorsed by President Reagan's

The full House was expected to consider the bill today. If approved by the House, Senate action would soon follow.

Reagan rejected as too costly two emergency bills sent to him so far. Quick congressional action on the compromise would avert the need for the government to furlough thousands of workers later this month and end an impasse that has dragged on since March.

The Equal Rights Amendment was reintroduced Wednesday in Congress

"Fairness, decency and simple justice demand that while there is still discrimination, the struggle for equality must go on," said Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., the major House sponsor. He was joined by 204 co-sponsors and a similar measure in the Senate drew 51 supporters.

A 10-year effort to win ratification of the amendment failed June 30 when the deadline for ratification expired with only 35 of the required 38 states passing the measure.

On budget matters, a House Ways and Means subcommittee approved increasing income taxes on unemployment compensation and using the money to increase jobless and program to be responsible for such costs.

Family planning agencies angry over contraceptive rule

WASHINGTON (AP) - Family planning agencies are protesting what appears to be the Reagan administration's attempt to link federal aid with its proposed plan requiring that parents be notified when minors seek contraceptives. The Department of Health and Human Services recently sent notices to 67 family planning agencies around the country informing them that continued federal assistance was contingent on acceptance of the rule, which is not yet final. The agencies, which were due to have their grants renewed July 1, were told if they took federal money, they would be subject to "any final regulations ... regarding notification of parents of unemancipated minors who seek certain family planning services.

The controversial regulation, which was formally propose on Feb. 22, would require that parents be notified if a gir sought prescription contraceptives like birth control pills, an intrauterine device, or a diaphragm from a clinic receiving

Officials in one state - Tennessee - have already objected to the government's notice.

Eugene W. Fowinkle, head of Tennessee's department of public health, sent a telegram to Washington saying his state won't be bound by a regulation which isn't even on the books.

Anne Stringham, an administrative assistant in Tennessee' public health department, said the proposed regulation is i conflict with state's law. The state law requires provision of contraceptives and information to every person regardless of sex, race, age income, number of children, marital status, citizenship or motive, she said. The District of Columbia and 29 other state. have similar laws. "We will either be in violation of federal regulations or state law," Ms. Stringham said in a telephone interview. Russell Mack, a health and human services spokesman, said he wasn't aware of Tennessee's response to the department's notice and couldn't comment on it.

Two national family planning groups also are protesting the department's action. Both the Planned Parenthood Federat of America and the National Family Planning and Reproductive Health Association have written their affiliate to suggest that they complain. "It's almost insulting to have this letter sent by HH; because it calls into question the integrity of family planning providers," said Scott Swirl, who handles legislation for th national family group. "They will comply with all laws tha are legally valid.

Jackson, Winfield discuss Steinbrenner

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent MONTREAL (AP) - The 53rd All-Star Game gave two former teammates a chance to get together and talk about how an impetuous shipbuilder from Tampa, Fla., had affected their respective baseball

George Steinbrenner's ears had to be stinging

"Sure, I miss New York - I miss the fans, my friends, the guys," said Reggie Jackson, whose home run bat and crowd appeal gave sparkle to the New York Yankees before Steinbrenner, by default, let him slip away to the California Angels.

"Now I am happier and more relaxed than I've been in years. The controversies and needling from upstairs kept me always tense while I was a Yankee.

Tall, talented Dave Winfield, whom Steinbrenner hoped would fill the Jackson void, needed less than two years to learn that even a $22 million contract couldn't save him from similar pressures.

Last month, after Winfield acoused Steinbrenner of balking on a written pledge to provide funds for the Winfield Foundation's underprivileged kids, the boss lashed out at his highly paid

"I am disappointed in Winfield."

Steinbrenner said. "He is not a superstar but just a good player. He can't carry a club the way Reggie could.

Winfield appeared more amused than chagrined by this criticism when he suited up at Montreal's Olympic Stadium Tuesday night for baseball's one-day, midsummer spectacle.
"That's funny," he sa

he said. "I remember when Steinbrenner told Jackson when he was still a Yankee: 'Why can't you be a ballplayer like Dave Winfield?' Reggie remembers that, too."

After Steinbrenner's upbraiding, Winfield went on a hitting tear on the Yankees' recent road trip, hitting six home runs in six games and breaking a perilous Yankee skid.

Some baseball observers insisted that Winfield was responding to an old Steinbrenner trick - embarrass a guy in public and he'll take out his anger on the ball.

was one of the top vote-getters among outfieldiers. "It never worked that way with me. In fact, it had the reverse

"That's stupid," said Jackson, who

"I only recall one exception. George yelled at the ball club and the next day I went out and got a home run. I think it was subconscious.

Winfield said he did not hear about George's statement until he returned

East from his recent West Coast tripafter he had gone on his home run

"I don't worry about what he says," the 6-foot-6, 220-pound millionaire said. "I am a damned good ballplayer. I do my job. I don't create problems. I get my numbers.' Big Dave's numbers are better than creditable in view of the fact that the Yankees have been floundering in the American League East. Through the All-Star break, he was batting .295 with 15 home runs and 47 runs batted in.

Meanwhile, Jackson, who seems to have a faculty for inspiring championship performances (three World Series crowns with the Oakland A's before joining the Yankees), has been a motivating force for the Angels, strongly in contention in the AL West. Although batting only .257, he has 20 home runs and 47 RBI.

"I got off to a bad start," Reggie said. "I think I was pressing too much. I wanted to show everybody I could still play. But Gene Mauch (manager) kept me in there and Buzzy Bavasi (Angel president) kept calling and assuring me the team had confidence in me.

"If I had got off to that bad a start with the Yankees, they would have branded me. Earlier this year when I got a home run off Ron Guidry, George called me an aging left-handed hitter who can't hit fastball pitchers."

ilas rallies for win in protennis tourney

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) - After rough starts in his first two matches, top-seeded Guillermo Vilas admits he'll have to do much better to win the 55th U.S. Pro tennis championship.

"I haven't adjusted yet to the surface here," Vilas said Wednesday after rallying to take the figal two sets and defeat Craig Wittus, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, in second-round action.

"It takes me one set to start playing and get into the match," the veteran Argentine said. "I have to start playing well sooner because I can't keep doing this the whole tournament.

Vilas dropped the first set in his opening match to Brad Drewett and trailed in the third set, 3-1, before pulling out a victory Tuesday.

He looked even worse after the start of his match against Wittus, a 25-year-old Californian who dominated

Yale linebacker signs with Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Second-round draft pick Jeff Rohrer agreed to terms and signed a contract with the Cowboys just one day after a team official predicted Rohrer would never play for Dallas, officials of the National Football League team announced. Rohrer, a linebacker from Yale, agreed to a three-year contract said to be worth $310,000 after Rohrer flew to Dallas late Wednesday for a personal meeting with Gil Brandt who negotiates with Cowboy rookies

Rozelle was scheduled to meet with Stabler in late June to discuss an NFL probe into Stabler's alleged association with convicted New York bookmaker Nicholas Dudich. Stabler's agent Henry Pitts showed up alone. however

NFL public relations director Jim Heffernan says Stabler's case will remain open until Rozelle has a face to face meeting

Stabler showed up Wednesday night at the opening of his second country and western night club here but declined to discu questions about football.

On Tuesday, Brandt had said, "We just have no chance of making a deal. Our second pick (Rohrer) is not going to play in the NFL with the Dallas Cowboys

Agent Tom Toner had refused to let Rohrer participate in negotiations before Wednesday. The Cowboys have now signed all 16 of their draft picks and only defensive end Ed Jones remains unsigned among the veterans

Abercrombie signs with Steelers The matter became moot when the deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After beating a contract deadline. No 1 draft pick Walter Abercrombie wants to help the Pittsburgh Steelers win another Super Bowl.

"I was ready to be a Steeler from the day they drafted me. I've been working out twice a day," the running back from Baylor said with grin Wednesday night after signing a multi-year deal for undisclosed terms.

We're extremely happy that Walter is a Steeler." team President Dan Rooney said with a relieved smile.

The deal was reached over the telephone in the face of a deadline at midnight tonight when the contract expires between the National Football League and the NFL Players Association.

The union contends that once the agreement expires, unsigned players will be unable to bargain individually until after agreement is reached on a new general pact.

Agent Gerry Argovitz, who represents Abercrombie and several other top picks, claims such unsigned players will become free agents at midnight tonight. Rooney downplayed the deadline. "We never believed the situation existed as far as free-agency," said Rooney. "But we're going to camp next week and Walter wanted to be was announced at a Three Rivers Stadium press conference, where the 5-foot-11, 201-pound Abercrombie posed with a Steeler jersey bearing his name. "I wanted to be in camp and I didn't want, the deadline to be any problem." said Abercrombie. "So we got together and we worked out a compromise with which myself, my agent and Mr. Rooney were satisfied. Argovitz also represented the Steelers' No.

1 pick last year - defensive end Keith Gary of Oklahoma - who signed with Montreal of the Canadian Football League.

Abercrombie and Argovitz were in St. Louis Tuesday night when the breakthrough came in the contract talks.

Argovitz's associate, Gene Burrough, recounted the rookie's first reaction when he hung up the phone after finalizing the deal Wednesday morning.

"The first thing he did was say, 'Wow!' I'm going to take them to the Super Bowl," said Burrough, who attended the press conference while Argovitz remained in St. Louis. Abercrombie smiled sheepishly whenasked about that comment

Record Soviet grain purchases expected

Union will need to import a record-matching amount of foreign grain to help offset another poor harvest, says the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Tuesday in a new analysis that Soviet imports may total 46 million metric tons in 1982-83, equal to last year's record.

The latest import estimate was an increase of four million metric tons from department estimates published a month ag5)

But even with the huge imports, the Soviets "may encounter problems in launching a recovery in their livestock sector," the report

On Monday, the department estimated 1982 Soviet grain output at 170 million metric tons, down 15 million tons from prospects in June and the smallest since 1975 when production plummeted to a 10-year low of 140 million metric tons.

"With a poor 1982 grain crop and depleted stocks, the Soviets will be the dominant factor in world grain trade." the latest report said.

Meanwhile, senior administration officials said that it is unlikely the United States will negotiate a new long-term grain agreement with the Soviet Union. although they left open the possibility that the current pact — due to expire Sept. 30 - may be extended.

The Soviet Union set a harvest record of 237 million million in 1980 and, according to preliminary estimates, 175 million in 1981.

Looking at the international marketing year which ended on June 30, the report said the United States regained the top position as a exporter of grain to the Soviet Union after a one-year loss to Argentina.

In 1981-82, the report showed, the Soviets imported 15.3 million metric tons of grain from the United States and 13.2 million from Argentina. In the previous year. Argentina provided 11.2 million tons and the United States 8 million.

Other major suppliers include Canada, Australia and the European Common Market countries.

The report said the Soviet Union has bought about 14 million metric tons of wheat and corn in the sixth and final metric tons in 1978, followed year of a long-term negotiate a new grain by: 179 million in 1979, 189 agreement with the United agreement with the Soviet States.

That agreement expires on Sept. 30, and President Reagan has been urged by many farm groups, members of Congress and Agriculture Secretary John R. Block to seek a new arrangement with the Soviets.

But earlier on Tuesday, William E. Brock, special U.S. trade representative, said a new agreement "would be very difficult to achieve at the present time." However, he held out the possibility that the current pact might be extended beyond its Sept. 30 expiration.

"Last year we were in somewhat similar circumstances and had to do nothing more than to extend the old agreement," Brock said. "So, whether we would even do that, I guess, remains to be seen.'

Union last December after the military crackdown in Poland.

The current agreement, which has been in operation since Oct. 1, 1976, calls on the Soviets to buy minimum amounts of U.S. wheat and corn each year, up to a maximum of eight million metric tons. More can be obtained with U.S.

agreement. Originally, the pact was for five years, but it was extended for another year in

For the current and last year of the agreement, Moscow was told it could buy up to 23 million metric tons, nine million more than the Soviets have bought so far.

Brock said the situation in Poland and "perhaps in other areas as well" make it difficult to consider Reagan suspended plans to negotiating any new

"I guess anything is possible, but at the moment I do not see a change in policy with regard to any new agreement," he said. However, Brock said that "the possibilities of a renewal of the current one with higher limits, I think, is certainly viable at this time." George P. Shultz. nominated to be secretary of state, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during his confirmation hearing Tuesday that "this would not be the time to negotiate a true long-term grain agreement" with the Soviet Union. He added, however, that this "leaves open many options that will provide for the sale of grain to the Soviets."

If there is no new agreement or the present one is not extended, it will not mean the Soviet Union cannot buy U.S. grain.

Is tunnel new beginning or last extravagance?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Some see it as a key element in development plans for the region. Others feel it may be nothing more than an expensive parking garage for railroad cars, a "sick transit tunnel." Nonetheless, the complex construction of an 8,000-foot tunnel through Philadelphia is more than half finished, and digging.

By BRUCE DALLAS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) —
Like the nave of a concrete cathedral, the tunnel stands silent and empty as it bends north.

Workers toil a half-mile ahead and behind, but here the enormity of the 20-foot-high, 80-foot-wide passage quietly awaits the laying of track and an within two years, the 8,000-foot tunnel through the heart of the 300-year-old city will be ready for trains, marking either a new beginning for the region's commuter rail system — or a last extravagance.

The Center City Commuter Connection will unite 580 miles of 13 regional commuter rail lines from the old Penn Central and Reading Railroad systems.

Gomplicated by the fact that the Penn Central tracks are three stories below ground and the Reading tracks, four blocks away, terminate two stories above ground, the $325-million project required a 30-foot-deep excavation, 1.7 miles long.

The four-chamber tunnel goes over one subway, under another. Building foundations were replaced and streets torn up and spanned by thick planks during construction. The Reading terminal was raised so the tunnel could go through, and Fairmount Avenue was lowered to allow the tunnel ramp to connect with the raised Reading

The tunnel, however, is more than four sets of tracks and a new underground station. It is also the main element of extensive development plans for the downtown area east of City Hall. Structural steel skeletons for new offices and skeletons for new offices and shops already rise from the platforms of the new underground 10th Street station.

The financing of the tunnel through a federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration grant took 20 years, largely because of objections from Washington that the tunnel project would do more for downtown development than it would for transportation.

Even with the project more

Even with the project more than half completed, the tunnel's value, a controversial measure since its inception in 1958, remains debatable.

"If we still have trains, the tunnel will be a nice thing," says David Gunn, general manager of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA).

"If it's worth the hundreds of millions of dollars put into it, that's another thing," Gunn says. "It will provide access to the downtown area and services will open up, but I question the value. We should have fixed up track, signals and bridges. That's where I think the money should have gone, because now we have a tunnel connecting two systems in terrible shape."

SEPTA reported a $13.7 million deficit in the $104 million railroad, and financial problems still loom ahead. Daily ridership is 100,000, down 20,000 since last year when fares were boosted 65 percent.

Yet the man overseeing the spending of federal dollars. UMTA regional engineer Joseph T. Mayer, says the tunnel 'will provide a substantial transportation benefit when completed."

"The Center City tunnel is one of the key elements in improving the (regional) commuter rail system," Mayer says.

"There's no question in my mind that the city should realize substantial economic benefits if the tunnel operates the way transportation planners say it should operate," says George Shaeffer, the city's coordinator for the project. "There's no reason to believe it won't save money."

John L. Barringer doesn't worry whether there will be trains when the tunnel is was tough."

completed. His job, as assistant project manager for Philadelphia Railway Consultants, the engineering consortium responsible for the construction, is to get the tunnel built.

consortium responsible for the construction, is to get the tunnel built.

"Presently we're shooting for test service by December 1983," Barringer says. "It really looks today as if we'll top the job out for $325 million, which I think is pretty good."

The commuter tunnel was originally budgeted for $300 million when approved in 1977, $240 million from the federal government and $30 million each from Philadelphia and Pennsylvania. Despite double-digit inflation the last four years, the cost has risen only $25 million, about $17 million of which will be paid by the 80 percent federal grant, Mayer says.

An uncharted graveyard, a water main and a seven-foot thick, long-line telephone cable were among the surprises as the trench was dug. "We thought we knew a lot about what was under the city, says Shaeffer. "But..."

"One day we just saw skulls," he says of the discovery of a small cemetery for free blacks dating back to the 1840s.

There have been other construction problems, too. For instance, putting the tunnel through above the Broad Street subway at City Hall left only three feet of ground overhead. "We had water, high-pressure fire, gas, telephone, electric, fire and police, Western Union, storm sewer and sanitary sewer lines that had to be put back in," Barringer says. "It was tough."

S&Ls put uninsured money into banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan associations and credit unions routinely put more money into banks than is covered by federal insurance, executives of those institutions

The danger of this practice became apparent last week when the Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma collapsed, catching about 170 credit unions and savings and loans with more than $100 million above the insured limit of $100,000 per depositor.

S&L and credit union executives interviewed said they place large blocks of money in institutions above the insurance cap because the money earns more interest at those levels and because it's more convenient.

But before they do, they say, the finances of the banks and S&Ls with which they do business are closely examined.

"As an institutional philosophy, we are extremely cautious about where we place any of our money," said Rollin Barnard, president of Denver's Midland Federal Savings and Loan Association.

An executive of an Illinois S&L, who asked not to be identified, said, "If you deal with large and fairly safe banks, the risks (of loss) are very minimal."

Robert Von der Ohe, a vice president of the Credit Union National Association, contended that S&Ls and credit unions had been "lulled into feeling" their money was protected by the insurance funds "even if the institution failed."

Pant styles fancier in Europe

Tierney and Randles wed in newsroom ceremony

Jean Tierney and Anthony "Slim" Randles were united in marriage in an afternoon ceremony on Friday, July 9 in the newsroom of the Pampa News with Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge, Guests at the ceremony were representatives from each department of the Pampa News. A small reception was held following the ceremony.

The most exciting moment of the occasion took place when the groom popped the cork on the champagne and shattered the lights at the reception. The festivities were resumed after repairing the light fixture and clearing the broken glass off the wedding cake.

The bride, a native of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, is the daughter of Mrs. Lilda Tierney of that city and the late Milton Tierney. She is a graduate of Sir George Williams University in Montreal. She is a former teacher of elementary school in Saskatchewan, Canada, and is employed as wire editor of the Victor Valley Daily Press in Victorville, Calif.

The groom, a 1978 graduate of Owens Valley High School in Independence, California, is an 18 - year veteran of journalism, and is the managing editor of The Pampa News.

He is also a member of the Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club, is a charter member of the Alaska Professional Hunters Association, and the Montana Creek Dog Mushers Association in Alaska. Randles is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Randles, of Arcadia, California.

The couple will reside in Pampa.

Women of the Moose met June 19 for the installation of their new officers for 1982 - 83. Dinner was served after the open meeting and a dance was held in honor of the new officers.

The newly elected officers are: Geneva Corcoran, senior regent; Betty Johnson, junior graduate; Dottie Weil, junior regent; Jean Bennett, recorder; Gerry Ingram, treasurer; and Mary Caither, chaplain.

Appointed to serve as committee chairpersons for the new year are Lula Mae Engle, college of regents; Marilyn Searl, child care; Freida Caulder, membership; Betty Alexander, publicity; Vivian Baggerman, hospital; Vircie Twigg, ritual director; Bert Couch, guide; Brunetta Hambeck, moose haven; Yvonne Smith, academy of friendship; Mary Basham, assistant guide; Mary Hallet, library; Ann Pitcock, social services; Bunny Anderson, star recorder; Brenda Hulsey, moose heart; Ruby Jones, sentinel; Melba Haggard, argus; Lorena Henderson, musician.

The Women of the Moose met July 13 for College of Regents and chapter night. Nancy Davis served as Jr. Regent and opened the ceremonies.

College of Regents Abbie Archer introduced her committee which is comprised of Nancy Davis, Lula Mae Engle, chaplains; Jean Bennett, recorder; and Dovie Toler.

Jean Bennett invested Abbie Archer with her red tassle. Also enrolled as a new member in the defending circle was Sandra Raya. The centerpiece door prize was won by Abbie Archer. Relish trays were served as refreshments.

The next meeting is a business meeting to be held July 27. All co - workers are urged to attend. THE ALTRUSA CLUB OF PAMPA

The Altrusa Club of Pampa held its annual installation of new officers June 28, in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Irené Smith and Vijay Murgai were in charge of the program which included a report of the year's activities by outgoing president, Leona Willis.

The incoming president, Marilyn McClure, chose as her theme - 'Seek New Heights Under the Big Top - This Year the Brass Ring'. Mary McDaniel, the incoming president's mother was the installing officer. The incoming officers were escorted to the center ring by Tammie Lane and Nisha Murgai. The escorts then presented the officers with brass rings as each officer was charged with her duties.

Officers being installed were Marilyn McClure, president; Chler Worley, vice president; Betty Casey, corresponding secretary; Billie Bruner, recording secretary; Dovye Massie, treasurer; Mary Lou Lane and Marian Jameson, directors; and Leona Willis, past president.

Dear Abby

Julia Child offers food for thought

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was in Memphis doing some fund-raising cooking demonstrations for Planned Parenthood, and on every occasion I was picketed by a dozen or so Right-to-Lifers. I didn't talk to them because it was not the place to make a scene, but I did want to ask them this:

born? Are you going to help provide, for instance, for the child of a retarded 13-year-old daughter of a syphilitic prostitute? What about the child of a convicted wife-beater and child molester? Or that of a tubercular and abandoned welfare mother who already has six children?

"These are extreme cases, of course, but there are plenty of them, and these are the future citizens who, for the most part, end up in our juvenile courts and in our jails. If you insist on their birth, you must also assume responsibility for their lives.'

What do Right-to-Lifers have to say on this subject? Let's hear from them - if indeed they have considered this matter at all, which I very much doubt.

DEAR JULIA: For the world's most famous cook to have whipped up a world-famous controversy is a case of just deserts!

DEAR ABBY: We work in an office. Our boss is a difficult man. In the morning he barely says hello, and he never says good night when he leaves. He never compliments us. And regardless of how well a task has been performed, his tone implies that he expected more.

On his birthday we all pitched in and bought him a beautifully decorated cake, and his only comment was, "I hope I don't have to eat it all now; I just finished a huge lunch!" Then he put the cake in the refrigerator. The flowers and streamers he never even noticed.

Are we fools to stav

DEAR FOOLS: That depends. If the pay is good, why look for another job? You have no guarantee your next boss will be better. (He could be even Since his birthday means so little to him, forget it next year. Don't expect any cheery "Good mornings" or any kind of a "Good night," and you won't be disappointed.

And praise the Lord that he's only your boss. How would you like to go home to a sourpuss like that?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old boy who still wets the bed. I am embarrassed about it and would die if my friends found out. My sister (she's 10) holds this over me, and when she wants to upset me she threatens to tell my friends.

I really try not to wet my bed, but I can't help it. My mom is always complaining about the wash and I feel terrible, but I don't do it on purpose. I guess I must be very heavy sleeper. I've been to doctors and they all say I will grow out of it. But what should I do now?

DEAR BED WETTER: Ask your mother to get a Wee Alert Buzzer (it's in the Sears catalog). It's a pad that goes under the bedsheet, and when the slightest moisture hits it, the buzzer goes off and awakens you before you wet the bed. I have been recommending it to my readers for years. It's the most effective solution to bed-wetting I have ever found. In the meantime, be assured that you are not alone. Many more kids your age wet the bed than you know, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for agreeing with "Bothered and Bewildered," the bride's mother who resented having to cart home her daughter's wedding gifts from the reception hall!

I thought I was the only person in the world who resented the thoughtlessness of those who hand-carried wedding gifts to a reception. I am from a foreign country where gifts were always delivered to the home of the bride or bride-groom, whichever was most convenient. I am with you 100 percent.

CORPUS CHRISTI

DEAR CORPUS: So far, my mail is running 10-to-1 against us. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I strongly disagree with your answer to "Bothered and Bewildered." There are at least three good reasons why carrying wedding gifts to the reception is Most stores charge a delivery fee for gifts under $50.

 Deliveries left at the door are not "safe" these days. (Many couples arrange their own weddings and both work during the day. Parents may live elsewhere.)

3. Hand-delivering gifts eliminates the uncertainty as to

a. The store sent the gift.
b. The gift was actually received.
c. The bride is a slowpoke with her "thank-you" notes.
I agree that it is a burden imposed on the bride's family, but it's still the safest way to handle the gift. The bride and groom are not obligated to open any gifts at the reception. Every reception that I have ever attended has had a table available for gifts — which is in itself a subtle reminder to those guests who still haven't bought a gift.

You say that hand-carrying a wedding gift to the eception is not an acceptable practice. I say it is a practical olution, and no one should look a gift horse in the mouth. JANE IN SAN JOSE

Indulge in fantasy at-home fashions

NEW YORK (NEA) When Bill Tice entered the world of what used to be called "lingerie," and is now more often named "intimate apparel" or "at-home wear," he doomed the reign of the cotton duster. It took him a few years, but now even conservative "lingerie" firms follow the glamour trends Tice introduced. Tice believed that women would indulge in fantasies at home that they'd never wear outside Did gypsy, ethnic and Oriental influences come into fashion? He used them all in gowns, robes and loungewear of riotous colors and prints. His prices were higher than the usual run of at-home wear, but still only a fraction of the couture trends from which he took his inspiration.

This spring, for example, Tice thinks the time is right for '30s movie star glamour, such as his Jean Harlow cream satin nightgown and peignoir. The gown flows in bias cut, while the peignoir is lavished with feathers. Another white gown, strapless, bosom-shaped and caped, looks like an evening ensemble in crepe.

Barad, does large collections, so the house can create whole groups in various fashion trends. Their all-cotton gowns, trimmed in ribbon-beaded lace, look charmingly Victorian. A flounced, satin-striped group harks back to the 'prairie skirt" inspiration so popular right now.

Barad's forte is the matching of the right kind of styling to the fabric. A special Enkalure nylon in fresh pansy print makes a group of demure gowns and pajamas. Polyester satin is used for a group of classic gowns and wrap robe. Barad's feeling that nautical would be big this spring led to their soft group in white cottonpoly blend trimmed with soutache of red and royal

When Vanity Fair, long a bastion of conservative lingerie styling, gets excited about fashion, you know the designer influence has arrived. They call their spring collection "Reminiscence," because it includes their versions of the lacetouched Gibson Girl, the '30s yachting look, the dotted swiss innocence of a Pickford-heroine and the movie star look.

They've even managed to combine inspirations, such today's ethnic favorite, the caftan, with trapunto stitching accents around the short belled sleeves and rectangu-

You've heard a lot about the dangers of too much sun, but did you know that it also has great healing powers for certain hair problems? Dandruff is a nagging condition that is noticeably improved by sunlight. The infra-red rays dry out an oily scalp the main cause of common dandruff - and help regulate the peeling of the scalp. Dermatologists often recommend sunlamp treatments to cure dandruff, but a sunbath is a much more pleasant way to ease the condition.

Tummy tilt

One of the hardest spots to firm and tone is the lower half of the abdomen. This excercise - the pelvic tilt - can help. Lie on your back, knees bent and feet on the floor, with your hands at your side. Tuck in your stomach, and raise pelvis toward your Hold for a count of 5, then relax. Repeat 5 times, then work up to 20 times.

No-fail nails

A little nail polish knowhow can camouflage your feet's imperfections and even enhance their appearance. The shade you choose and how you apply it is the key. If, for example, your feet are large and you want them to look smaller, you should choose muted, subtle shades: pastel pinks, mauve, soft coral, or sandy beige. Women with heavily veined or bony feet look best in light, soft colors too. When you apply the polish, don't fill-in the entire nail; stroke it on the center of the nail only, not the sides. This trick will make stubby, short toes

A Shoe-In

Espadrilles are a comfortable, versatile shoe style for summer. Here are some tips for choosing a good pair: look for a sturdy sole, with reinforced tips at heel and toe. All trimming and seams should be sewn cleanly and securely, with no frayed or ragged edges. Most espadrilles are made of canvas, which stretches, so choose a pair that fits snugly. To make your shoes last, don't wear them on wet shower, dry thoroughly and repair loose trim with glue.

Pillow talk

Whenever the talented actress Nancy Dussault gets insomnia, she knows what to do. "When I can't sleep," she told Beauty Digest magazine, "I get up and eat a snack. Next, I lie flat on my back and exercise to work off all the calories I just consumed! Then I climb back into bed, and before long, I'm in Dreamland.'

Roll a braid

This easy braiding technique will keep long hair smooth and neat on sultry summer days. First, part hair in the middle and roll each side back. Form two separate braids with the rolled side pieces. Then, take these two braids and form one large one by combining them with the hair in back. This is an excellent style to wear with a sun hat, since the fullness is concentrated on the base of the head.

A liquid lunch doesn't have to be fattening. Thanks to the blender, delicious low-calories dishes are a snap. What's more, a blender-funch can be easily poured into a thermos, and eaten right at your desk. Try this tasty "sockeye special." In your blender, combine one cup fresh cooked spinach (drained), with a halfcup each of light cream and low fat milk. Add four ounces of canned salmon, crumbled. Whirl until smooth, and pour into ther-mos. At lunchtime, garnish with chopped, hard-cooked

nism about atomic energy plant has eroded

EDITOR'S NOTE Recent demonstrations have underscored the debate about the future of atomic energy in the nation. Is it safe? Is it sound? Is it practical? An atomic energy plant on New York's Long Island provides a microcosm of that national uncertainty, where the optimism of a decade ago has evolved into far less than glowing predictions.

By G.G. LaBELLE Associated Press Writer SHOREHAM, N.Y. (AP) -This massive project, they once said, could be built in something under four years for less than $250 million. It would satisfy a growing electrical demand that. unfed, could bring blackouts and disruption to Long Island's busy suburbs.

Nearly a decade later, the nuclear power plant at Shoreham — with its 130,000 cubic vards of concrete, its 18,000 tons of reinforcing steel and its potential appetite for 112 tons of radioactive fuel is not vet operating

Its estimated cost has jumped to nearly $2.5 billion. It is locked in debate and controversy, and the area it would serve has turned out not to need nearly so much electricity as early planners estimated.

The silent plant, some 60 miles east of New York City. mirrors what has happened to atomic power in the United States. Its history bespeaks nearly 15 years of conflict in an industry that has not seen a new order for a nuclear power plant since 1978.

Shoreham was born in the nuclear optimism of the 1960s, saw debate and demonstrations through the 1970s, and now faces uncertainty in the 1980s, as hearings on whether to license the plant grind on.

The latest hearings began in May and - with a local opposition group and the government of Suffolk County raising safety questions are likely to last at least through the summer.

Moreover, the county has taken the Long Island Lighting Co. to court to insist on a full, independent inspection before the plant can open. The county also disagrees with LILCO on the scope of an emergency plan in case of an accident at the plant.

When LILCO and many other utilities decided to go nuclear in the late 1960s, the public had been coached for 20 years — in books and magazines - about the wondrous future of the atom

There would be atomic airplanes and cars to carry people vast distances. Wooden furniture and paneling, even baseball bats, would be irradiated for durability. Indeed, Lewis Strauss, then chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, suggested in 1954 that nuclear-generated power could be "too cheap to meter

Then the nation's economic growth faltered, costs of building and borrowing increased, questions about safety were intensified by the Three Mile Island accident. and Americans looked at energy costs and learned to turn the heat down and the lights off.

A decade ago, a government survey predicted that nuclear power would generate 132 million watts by 1980. This year, in fact, the country's generating reactors will turn out less than half of that - about 60,000 megawatts, or 12 percent of total U.S. electricity.

In microcosm, the Shoreham plant underlines that faltering optimism of an earlier time. In 1970, then-LILCO President Edward C. Duffy said that by 1975 Long Island would have a peak power demand of 4,000 megawatts. Actually. demand reached only 3,000 megawatts by 1981, and current estimates say even by 1990 it will hit only 3,400.

Looking back, Ira Freilicher, a LILCO vice president, says, ruefully, 'There were all sorts of glowing predictions about the economics of nuclear.

There were indeed. Only 19 atomic plants had been ordered in the United States by 1965. But in the 10 years following, utilities ordered 218 more

It was on May 24, 1968, that the Long Island utility announced it would build a 540-megawatt plant costing $150 million near Shoreham. The mostly rural area - with some residents employees of a nearby government atomic research lab - seemed to offer few obstacles to nuclear Earlier, however, LILCO had considered putting the plant in another Long Island village nearer New York City called Lloyd Harbor.

fight a nuclear power plant being put amid their substantial homes. Fight they did, even after LILCO decided on a site in Shoreham

20 miles away In fact, a Lloyd Harbor group and its lawyer, Irving Like, turned out to be the major opposition to a construction permit for Shoreham at hearings before an Atomic Energy Commission board. Like remains an opponent to this

By the time of the 1970 AEC construction-permit hearings. LILCO planned a larger plant, 820 megawatts. Some 300 people showed up for the first hearing. The town's most controversial the people "had the dough" to issue previously - a dog-leash law - had drawn only 40.

The lines were drawn at Shoreham as they were in the nation. Irving Like's witnesses questioned not only the Shoreham plant, but the idea of atomic power itself. A group of employees from the federal atomic lab in nearby Brookhaven, the Suffolk Scientists for a Cleaner and Safer Environment, called their own witnesses to support the plant. AEC construction-plant hearings generally ran only a day or two, but the Shoreham hearings dragged on for almost three years. They contained some of the bizarre features that came to confrontations - a mixture of statistics that would not hold in time and simple no-holds-barred polemics. One opposition witness who claimed to have both a Ph.D. and a medical degree and to have been a nuclear consultant to Congress, turned out to be a sometime real-estate salesman who had attended two colleges and graduated from neither.

Nobelist James D. Watson, the geneticist, testified against the plant. Nuclear power was not needed, he said, because "there will be enough oil."

The hearings became and remain - the longest of their kind. LILCO got its 1973. The cost of the plant was then estimated at $600 million with a completion date in

Then, in fall 1973, came the Arab oil embargo, triggering what would become a broad energy-conservation movement. At the same time the environmentalists were gathering momentum, challenging industry statements on the need for and safety of nuclear power. The government had also adopted new regulations for atomic power plants.

Still answering safety arguments in 1976, LILCO vice president Wilfred O. Uhl, later to head the utility, said, "The danger from a nuclear being hit by a falling meteorite.

That graphic statistic was drawn from a 1975 AEC report and became a staple argument for utility spokesmen. But the report was repudiated by AEC's successor, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, in January 1979 - two months before Three Mile Island.

Though there has never been a catastrophic nuclear accident - even at TMI, no one was killed -the NRC is now taking the possibility seriously enough to discuss a safety assessment entirely different from the 1975 report.

Nuclear advocates see control of accidents as evidence that safety systems worked. Opponents argue that accidents show the vulnerability of the huge plants to the smallest

While no member of the public has ever been injured in a nuclear plant accident, anti-nuclear groups argue that the health effects of even normal plant operations on people living nearby are unknown, but may be

Richard Udell of the anti-nuclear group Critical Mass says that "the nuclear industry decided to work the bugs out not on a test model but with plants operating....They grew too fast for their britches. They

no experience to guide

The repercussions from-TMI hit the Long Island plant. Freilicher remembers people asking: "You told us this couldn't happen and it's happened.

Within a week of the accident, a demonstration was held outside LILCOheadquarters in Mineola, and a 35-year-old woman named Kathy Boylan demanded an end to construction of nuclear plants. Her husband is LILCO vice president for cares about is: Will it make money? Wall Street's buttoned-down analysts are increasingly finding themselves cast as critics of Hollywood's creative offerings. Their opinions, while of little interest to the movie-goer, can influence a substantial audience in the financial community - and as a result, the price of a movie company's stock.

"The question I have to ask is: Are the regular movie-goers going to get excited about this film? And will, it bring out the people who only occasionally go to movies?" says Hoffman, of A.G. Becker Inc.

But he shrugs off the title of critic. "The whole business of us being film critics is ludicrous," he says. "If a film had to depend on drawing people from my demographic group, it'd be in trouble.

Securities analysts all pore through trade journals, but Hoffman and about a dozen others like him even search the gossip columns for tidbits about film production problems (could mean higher costs, lower profit) and box office stars.

Last week some negative words from investment analysts about "Tron" sent Disney stock spinning down $2.50, to $56.37, in one day of Theodore James Jr., of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, advised clients to sell Disney stock until the price dropped to $52 a share because the $20 million film told a "seriously flawed, disjointed story."

Several other analysts predict the film won't do well. But they say it won't hurt Disney's overall financial

"I didn't think 'Tron' was all that great, but I never thought it was going to be a major contributor to the company's overall financial situation," says Harold Vogel, of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. Vogel cut his profit estimateby a nickel, to $3.45 a-share, after the screening.

"I've been saying to buy this stock aggressively if it comes down, and I still feel that way," he adds. Although analysts often attend other studios' screenings, it was the first time Disney had invited them — and perhaps the last.

"What does a securities analyst know?" complained Mike Bagnell, senior vice president of finance at

The creative merits of "Tron" is not what bothers other analysts. They say the movie is geared for a narrow audience, ages 12 to 19, and is unlikely to be very profitable.

"The most important thing is what the numbers are after a film is released," says Dennis Forst, of Bateman, Elchler, Hill Richards Inc., in Los Angeles. "That's where these things are judged—not on whether an analyst or machine had been returned to use after undergoing repairs just before Carson's arrest.

Carson was stopped Feb. 27. He said he had been at a local restaurant with his wife. Joanna, and friends.

If convicted, Carson could face either a jail sentence ranging from 48 hours to six months or a 90-day restriction, allowing him to drive to and from work only. He also could be fined $375 to $500 and be required to attend

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — A visit to Winnipeg by Princess Anne began in a fashion no one anticipated: A $10,000 horse race named in her honor was canceled.

The princess, an equestrian enthusiast, arrived Wednesday for a four-day visit to Manitoba, and had planned to be present for the $10,000 Princess Anne Stakes at Assiniboia Downs.

Nation short of blood

By The Associated Press

With schools out, plants idle and Americans on vacation, hospitals in many of the nation's cities are facing an annual summer blood shortage amid growing demand. One St. Louis hospital is even asking for donations from visitors.

Appeals for donors have been issued in New York and Arkansas, where blood supplies are at a "seriously low level," while officials in Seattle were to decide today whether to broadcast a plea for blood.

New York City's two-day supply - down from an optimal five-day reserve threatened to worsen today, disrupting the Northeast blood network. Hospital workers were poised to walk out in a labor dispute that could shut down the Greater New York Blood program.

In New Jersey, 65 hospitals depend on the Greater New York blood program for supplies and would be "very badly hit," said spokesman Michael Scahill. Hospitals in New England are monitoring the threat.

Rudy Joe Baca, left, and Emilio Gonzales, both of Pueblo, Colo., tail two steers simultaneously during an exhibition charro rodeo, or charreada, at the Pueblo Charro Associtaion grounds east of Pueblo recently. In the tailing event, the charro chases a steer on horseback at full speed down a chute, tips his hat, slaps the bull on the rump, grabs the steer by the tail and tries to flip the steer head over heels by jerking on the tail. (AP

Bag lady: 'I just live all over Fort Worth'

By BILL CELIS Fort Worth Star-Telegram FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Her home is where she just happens to be at the moment.

For the last five years, home for Laura Benton, 77, has been the streets of Fort Worth. She pushes her worldly belongings around downtown in two shopping carts, sleeps in a bus shelter, uses bathrooms in office buildings and cooks her meals in a park

Laura Benton is a bag lady.

"I don't want to live with no one," she said as she cooked her evening meal of chicken and dumplings over a small, portable barbeque grill in downtown Burnett Park. "Even though I'm old, I'm still a young woman in body.

She flexed a muscle in one of her arms to prove the point; a small mound appeared on her sunburned arm

Mrs. Benton left her husband after he returned from fighting in World War II. 'We were always fighting and quarreling," she said. "One of us had to leave. He wasn't going to, so I did." She packed a suitcase, took $50 and teft her husband and their seven children in St. Louis after she lost a custody battle.

The Louisville, Ky. native then took to the highways, living in Detroit, New Orleans, Miami, Houston and Austin before coming to Fort Worth. For a while, she worked as a nurse, a skill she said she learned in a St. Louis hospital. For the last several years, however, Mrs. Benton has been unemployed and lived wherever the winds have taken

"I'm self-sufficient. I intend to paddle my own canoe. If I can't be happy, I'd rather die," she said, her gray-blue eyes teeming with determination. "I just live all over Fort Worth.'

She has refused help from a sister. Mrs. Benton's children, ranging in age from 31 to 54, have been unable to convince their mother to seek a more conventional life.

"Some people think that everyone should be like them," she said. "I'm firecely independent. When people start bothering me, I call the police. If I can't get them, I use my cattle prod.'

Mrs. Benton reached for an electric, stainless-steel prod from one of her carts and handled it with care.

"Have that jammed in your stomach and it's like a live wire stuck in your stomach," she said, waving the prod in the air. "The police told me it's OK to use it to protect myself. Just don't hit someone over the head. I'll hit them over the head with it if I have to.'

Mrs. Benton said she's used the prod four times since she's lived here.

The petite woman, whose snow-white cap covered with a green scarf, was at home Tuesday on a park bench. The two shoping carts were laden with plastic bags, which hold her clothes. A paper bag sitting on the bench contained cookies, potato chips, crackers, coffee and sugar.

"I do pretty well. I eat breakfast and another meal. If I ate three meals a day. I'd get sick," she said. "If I lived in an apartment, I wouldn't have enough to do the things I like.

Mrs. Benton receives $284 a month from Social Security.

What she likes are her magazine subscriptions. She subscribes to Ladies Home Journal, Cosmopolitan, Southern Living and Redbook, to name a few. She picks them up daily at her downtown post office box. She also spends some money renting a storage closet in north Fort Worth, where she keeps all her winter clothes, books and magazines.

Mrs. Benton even sends some of her money to President Reagan.

"I've been sending him money since January. Next month I hope to send him $20 because he needs it," she said. "This way I'm helping the country get back on its feet. If everybody sent him some money then we'd get out of this

Her subscriptions, donations to Reagan and food take nearly every penny of her monthly check.
