Pampa's luxuries

Bill King with some of Pampa's "experienced

Depressed economy aids Pampa's pawn business

By JEFF LANGLEY Staff Writer

How much for this portable dialysis machine, mister"

There are stories about Las Vegas pawnshops which receive requests for pawn loans on gold teeth, artificial limbs, crutches and "priceless" family heirlooms to folks wanting just one more throw on the crap table.

Though its a thousand miles from the nearest Keno game, the owner of the Pampa AAA Pawnshop also tells the story of the elderly woman who came to him and wanted to hock her hearing aid The stories Bill King hears from people who want a pawn loan range from absurd to desperate

And King believes the local economy has affected his business of giving quick cash loans in return for something of value

"Loans are up - sales are down We have written more loans this month than anytime in the two years we've been here Since all the oil rigs have been stacked, business is way up.

King said Many people are shy about coming into a pawnshop All of the B - grade movies have given them a bad image. I guess." he said

King surely doesn't fit that greasy. swindling. sell - his - mother - for - a tape - deck image

In fact, the tage of western gentleman might fit best. He has a ready and wide smile, as well as a

"Can you give me $30 on this - I need groceries for the kids. I have a job, but they hold the check back for two weeks," said a woman with a portable cassette player.

How much can I get for these two gold rings?" asked another woman. 'Can I leave them here a couple of months and just pay interest?" she asked King

Two more young ladies came into the shop with a diamond ring. Several bawling children waited outside in the

The diamond ring brought out one of shop's most interesting devices, a Diamond Proover

The electonic device has a small. pen - type device attached by a wire to a black box. King ran the pen over the stone and a red light on the box showed the gem to be a diamond

Glass stones won't turn on the light King said Another man brought in a small portable TV and asked for a $30 loan - King gave him $25

"I have to cut you down a little bit on this - some of these discount houses sell these sets new for $60. King told him

'All right I have to get some gas to get out to the job If I don't get the gas. can't make any money." the man

Most of the loans King makes are in the $25 to $30 range, with a maximum

If the items are not claimed within 90 days. King can sell them.

kind word, for the folks who come through the door of the only pawnshop

"I don't know why people feel that way. We are strictly controlled by the state, just like any bank or loan company." King said about the pawnbroker's image

A pawn loan works like this - a person who needs a bit of extra cash takes a TV. stereo. gun. camera. power tool, musical instrument, or some other highly saleable item to a pawnshop, and in return, the person receives a loan at a fraction of the

Then at the end of 30 days or sooner. the person can reclaim the item for the amount of the loan, plus an astronomical annual interest rate of 240 percent

For instance, pawn a TV for $25, and 30 days later buy it back for $30.

It's a high rate of interest, but then it's a quick way to get cash, there are few forms to fill out, and snooty loan officers don't turn anyone down. In a couple of hours at the shop, five customers wanted a loan, one paid the interest only on an existing loan, and one customer reclaimed a gun.

Some of the hard luck stories King hears daily "can really get you down at the end of the day." he said. And more than once. King's heart has won over his sense of business. 'One time a guy came in with an old, scratched Timex watch I didn't need, but I gave him $10 anyway. His only identification was a disabled veteran's card." King said.

King's shop on South Cuyler has bars on the windows and an elaborate electronic security system. A sign in the store says. "If you come in here with robbery in mind, smile ... you're on automatic shotgun.

A .45 automatic sticks out of his belt "I believe in advertising too," he says about the gun.

We have a lot of valuables and cash down here. A person could make a pretty good haul, if he had a mind to "the owner said

The former law officer and Kirby Vacuum dealer, says he has no use for crooks or thiefs and wants no part of stolen merchandise. He said a copy of every pawn ticket is delivered to the police department for tracing stolen items, and his shop is open to inspection.

to be done but to wait on the outcome of the tests. The child and her mother were prepared to stay in Houston for the transplant and treatments for three or four months, but they had to return to Pampa Friday evening

The family rejoiced when told the tissues matched, and Kris could have the last - chance

Carl's 'Funnies

At 19, he's Pampa's King of the Comics

By DAVID CHRISTENSON Staff Writer

Carl Cook's hobby sets him apart from other 19 - year - olds in Pampa, but nationally he is one of tens of thousands

Cook is a comic book collector He keeps 200 to 300 of the "funny books" in a commercial comic book

rack within easy reach, and another 300 400 in storage

And, he said, the "funny books" are not just funny anymore - they deal with the realities of war, human nature and some very possible futures for our

'It's a type of literature, like paperbacks." he said. People generally think of comic books as cheap children's reading, but Cook said comic book companies have. in recent years, expanded their audience to include adults

"There's a variety for all ages." he

Cook began collecting when he inherited his older brother Johnny's comics, which included many juvenile humor titles and some superhero comics from the 1960s.

When he got tired of collecting, I just grabbed onto his comics and added on myself "Carl said

Carl's own tastes are in fantasy particularly about Conan and his fellow barbarians - science fiction, and war comics like "Weird War Tales. "Sergeant Rock," and "GI Combat."

These war comics, sometimes by exaggerating or fantasizing details. give an in - depth look at the realities of war. Cook opened a comic to a story in which an American soldier dies, and pointed out one panel drawing.

"Picking up dogtags... that's something my age group may have to face." he said

Cook related one futuristic story from "Weird War Tales" in which a man is convicted of a crime and sentenced to the "machine," which programs him into continuous mechanized battle and recurring death. Cook said this kind of story intrigues him because of their projection of present trends into the future and the element of the unknown War comics also feature more realistic characters than other types of comics. Many of these characters continue from issue to issue. "Like in soap operas." he said, the reader can get to know the characters and watch their development as the stories progress monthly The two major United States publishers of original comic book material (not reprinted material) are DC Comics Inc. and the Marvel Comics

DC. a company with corporate roots in the late 1930s, is famous primarily for such long - running characters as Batman, Wonder Woman and the first superhero, Superman. Marvel became prominent in the 1960s under the guiding hand of publisher Stan Lee, creator of Spiderman and The

Group

Incredible Hulk. Superheroes are the mainstay of comics companies and have more or less supported the industry since 1938. when "Action Comics" No. 1, featuring

Superman, first hit the stands But the companies have for years produced comic books of other types. such as horror romance. "classics. science fiction. "funny animal" and war comics, all directed at more specialized audiences

The companies have also dipped into other sources for characters and series ideas. One product of these efforts is Marvel's line of comics featuring Conan the Barbarian.

Marvel publishes three separate comic series on the sword - slinging hero: "Conan the Barbarian," "King Conan' and magazine - sized publication "The Savage Sword of Conan

Cook is a diehard fan of the Conan comics, which like the Conan movie,.. are based on novels written by Robert E. Howard.

'Robert E. Howard was an excellent writer, in my opinion," Cook said.

But the Conan movie was "not as good as the books," Cook said. He said scriptwriters for the movie changed some of the books' history of the character, and were not true to the original story.

Conan comics are true to the stories. and help "fill in the gaps that Robert E. Howard left.

The Conan comics and others of the "sword and sorcery" genre are more exciting to Cook than superhero comics. Cook had some superhero comics, but they had limitations - "the more I read of them, the more stupid they became to me.

Superhero stories are limited in story form, he said, but a comic set in a primitive world like Conan's 'has no limits, really."

Comic book collectors come from many age groups and many backgrounds. Some are in it only for the money - and there is a lot of money changing hands. Specialty shops dealing in comic books and related magazines and books have sprung up all over the country in major cities. Comic book conventions - one of the most recent in Dallas attract thousands of dealers, creators and buyers every year. The most valuable comics are rom the "Golden Age," in the 1930s and 1940s, when comic books first began.

The most expensive single comic book is "Action Comics" No. 1, the first magazine in the familiar superhero comics form. According to the Comic Book Price Guide, a standard listing for collectors and dealers for years, an issue of Action No. 1 in mint condition

The state of emergency declared after the rupture was discovered Thursday afternoon continued, and the mayor ordered restaurants and other businesses that use water to close.

The manager of a Burger King was arrested Saturday morning after twice refusing a police officer's order to close his fast-food restaurant, police Lt. Anthony Jeziorski said.

E. German journal falls for a gag

BONN, West Germany (AP) - A gullible East German magazine is giving delighted West Germans a

April Fool's Day gags are common in West German newspapers, and the presence of Dr. Draecker in this story was a tipoff that it was phony Draecker is a legendary phantom in German diplomatic and press circles.

Apparently, however, Draecker's fame did not extend to the offices of Horizont. Nor were the editors aware of the decadent, bourgeois custom of playing jokes with foreign policy matters on April 1.

"Insulting is the interest of the Four cops shoot each other in bar

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Four off-duty sheriff's deputies who apparently failed to recognize each other took part in a shooting incident at a downtown cocktail club early Friday, police reported.

One civilian suffered a bullet wound in the neck, a deputy sheriff fell and broke his arm and all four officers were being questioned by police detectives attempting to sort out details of the shooting.

Ruben Juarez, 21, was listed in fair condition at a hospital with a bullet wound in the neck.

The shooting happened about 5:30 a.m. at the Navy Club, a private lounge that stays open all night?

Police Lt. Walter Hall said the deputies had been County jail guard Mike Navarijo suffered a broken left arm when he fell while running away from armed deputies he failed to

Intelligence lapses must be remedied

President Reagan has insisted twice that the administration was caught completely off guard by Israel's massive invasion of Lebanon on June 6. If so, there ought to be more than a few red faces at the Central Intelligence Agency

If the CIA cannot detect the telltale signs of an imminent invasion involving tens of thousands of massed Israeli troops, a partial callup of reservists, and the movement of several thousand tanks, armored vehicles, artillery pieces, and hundreds of aircraft, something is seriously wrong with America's intelligence community.

And, in fact, something is wrong. This most recent failure of intelligence — made all the more inexcusable by the fact that Israel is an open society and a de facto ally of the United States — is but the latest in a dismal series. Six months ago, the administration was caught similarly unaware by a declaration of martial law in Poland that had obviously been planned months in advance In December 1979, the Carter the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan; an act of premeditated aggression carried out by five Soviet army divisions and requiring a lengthy mobilization along the Soviet Afghan frontier. And a year before that, the CIA had remained blissfully ignorant of the revolutionary storm that would shortly depose America's closest ally in the strategically vital Persian Gulf region.

It is hardly a coincidence that these glaring intelligence lapses followed closely on the heels of the Carter administration's decision to de - emphasize the collection of so - called "human - source" intelligence, known in the trade as HUMINT.

Carter's CIA director, Adm. Stansfield Turner, dutifully purged the agency's HUMINT branch by summarily dismissing more than 800 senior intelligence officers responsible for managing the clandestine collection of intelligence in foreign countries.

The staggering damage inflicted by these wholesale firings has never been repaired, and probably cannot be made good for years to come. Nor have the resulting intelligence gaps been filled, as anticipated, by such electronic intelligence - gathering means as photo reconnaissance from satellites and aircraft and the monitoring of radio transmissions.

One example in particular suggests the terrible cost of the Carter - Turner purge. It has been reliably reported that a full year after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, not one CIA officer in that country could speak Russian. The thought of an agency case officer attempting to recruit Soviet agents a translator would be laughable were it not so pathetic.

Last month, President Reagan went to CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., to sign legislation making it a crime to knowingly reveal the identify of a clandestine American agent. Reagan assured the assembled CIA employees that they were on the "winning side" in the East - West struggle.

The President and his CIA director, William Casey, could lend added credence to that prediction by redoubling efforts to rebuild the still shattered clandestine service.

Congress keeps commodity

Even the Reagan administration's slow - in - coming, punches - pulled proposal to get rid of the Energy Department isn't mushy enough to get the time of day on Capitol Hill, it seems.

The limp compromise would have folded most of the programs of the present agency into the Department of Commerce and spent almost as much taxpayer money as the DOE is wasting now. Compared with Reagan's abolitionist campaign talk, it was pretty pale stuff.

But when Energy Secretary James Edwards, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger urged the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee to smile upon the plan, they got the brush - off from senators of both parties.

To give credit where it's due. Edwards came up with one memorable phrase "Energy is a commodity, not a cause," he offered. He wasn't quite ready to go all the way and suggest that it should be dealt with by the institution best equipped to handle commodities the free market, unencumbered by government interference. But it was a good phrase, stating an uncomfortable truth that

Washington often ignores. Uncomfortable truths weren't selling too well in the Senate. however. Sen. Henry Jackson, D Wa., noted that the Middle East is in turmoil, and the United States is importing about the same percentage of oil from the Persian Gulf - 28.5 percent - as it did at the time of the OPEC embargo in 1973. The fact that the degree of this dependency grew during the period of the Department of Energy's greatest power seemed to have escaped his attention.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D - Mo., said this was no time to be fulfilling a 'glib campaign promise'' (perhaps he was startled that any promise at all would be honored), while Sens. Charles Percy, R - Ill., and William Cohen, R - Me., whined that the conservation cops would get short shrift under the new proposal.

Somehow it seems to have escaped the attention of those alert senators that the single most constructive move in the energy field — the one that did most to hamstring OPEC and encourage domestic production was decontrol of petroleum prices and a thorough dismantling of the federal government's energy bureaucracy. The administration deserves a certain amount of credit for giving it the old college try. It should become increasingly apparent to the public that the primary responsibility for the continuing growth in the size, cost and burden imposed by government rests with Congress, which demonstrates an amazing stubbornness about efforts to pare back even a fingernail of leviathan government. We can't help wondering, though: if the administration got this kind of stonewall in response to a modest, half - hearted effort to trim government, what would have been lost by approaching Congress with a plan actually to abolish most of the functions of the Energy Department instead of transferring them to other

I can't keep up with the humungous amount of things coming into this house

Sometimes I feel I'm drowning in clutter. Most of it collects daily on our kitchen shelf strategically located 8 feet from the front door and 10 feet from the door leading in from the garage.

It's the perfect place to dump keys, caps and catalogs, or items just purchsed at the drugstore. Every day, several daily newspapers (local and national) land on the shelf, too. Ditto four news magazines a week and at least one or two of our monthly publications. We subscribe to all this because, as newspaper people, my husband and I are compulsive about

Unfortunately, it takes days to digest all that news and clip what we may need for future reference. So, even if the newspapers and magazines come and go, the clippings stack up on the shelf - along with the keys caps and catalogs.

And did I mention the library books? Then there's the daily deluge of mail: letters from firends and readers, letters to be put somewhere until they can be answered. Bills arrive non - stop and paychecks come occasionally. They, too, land on the kitchen shelf

There is the mail we hang onto until a decision is made about it: invitations, a form for a T - Bill about to rollover, a questionnaire from a congressman on what new taxes we could stomach in order to get a balanced federal budget. That's hardly a thing to send back by return mail!

I haven't even listed the junkmail arriving uninvited every day. It goes right out, of course, but it still takes time to open, glance at and walk it to the wastebasket.

I sometimes find myself wandering through the house, both hands full of "things," trying to decide where to put them. Some items disappear for long periods, surfacing weeks or months later. Some things disappear, never to be found.

Some are lost and found only after desperate searches through drawers. desk nooks, shelves and closets. That just happened this weekend. Two paychecks "disappeared" overnight. An entire Saturday was spent in a blue funk, as I ran again and again to some new spot thought to be the likely hiding place. No wastebasket or garbage can was left unturned.

Only that evening was the nagging worry resolved. I reached into a drawer for a little - used evening purse and there were the paychecks . . . plus a letter, one magazine and two post cards from carpet cleaners

Suddenly, I remembered. I had carried the mail from the shelf to the table in the hall that day, intending to transport it to the desk later.

A question of geography

By ART BUCHWALD

Why do American secretaries of State have so much trouble with the White House? It's nothing more than a question of geography. In the good old days the State Department was located in the Executive Office Building, which is right next to the White House and considered part of it now. All the secretary would have to do is cross an alley and walk into the Oval Office.

The White House used the excuse that it needed the Executive Office Building to house its own staff. To add insult to injury, they built a new State Department which was the ugliest piece of architecture in Washington. But it served its purpose because it kept the secretary of State from easy accessibility to the boss.

Although State is only about 15 blocks away from the White House, the secretary might as well be stationed in Paraguay.

This is what happens to all secretaries of State since they moved out of the EOB: The President sees his White House staff every day. "Top of the morning to you sir," they say to him. Now it goes without saying that a person who says "Top of the morning" to the President every day is going to have more input than a Cabinet officer who has to taxi over to the White House twice a week

No president spends all his time just signing bills, and making speeches at prayer breakfasts. He is only human and likes to chew the fat with people. Who does he chew the fat with? Gene Gullett never wanted to be a jockey.

Gene said

In addition to his position as assitant checker of drawings in the drafting department of Ingersoll - Rand, he is a jockey with an impressive career. In spite of his riding success, Gene didn't watch horse races as a child and dream of the day he'd win his first race. "The first time I was a jockey was in Pawhuska, Okla., when I was 14 years - old. My dad came up to me and told me that the rider hadn't shown up and that he wanted me to ride

"I was terrified. Lonnie Carmen had been riding for us and he didn't show up. My dad had $50 on a match race and he a asked me if I thought I could ride it.

"It was lap and tap, not out of the gates. I won that first race. From then on I thought it was the only thing to do,"

Gene started riding every Sunday after that in match races on what race horse people call "bush tracks". A bush track is a non - pari - mutuel track (where no gambling is -allowed). They are the only kind of tracks in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas

'There was no picture taken of my first race, but I do have my first win picture. I was 15 years - old and riding a little spotted mare of Gene Herrin's named Pawhuska Rose at a little track in Ponca City, Okla. I was wearing blue jeans, cowboy boots and no helmet. I remember it well because I had to drink three gallons of water so I could weigh 116 pounds," he laughed

Horses have always been a part of Gene's life. He was only 5 years - old when he rode his first horse. His father, Wes Gullett of Pawhuska, Okla., has been training race, roping and barrel horses for many years.

Gene's first few years of racing were hot. He had his choice of all the good horses in the Pawhuska area. He continued to have a weight problem in his early years of · riding and was forced to use a big saddle or carry lead because he didn't weigh enough.

The first time he rode at a pari - mutuel track was in 1969 at Holly, Colo

"Vicki and I had only been married for about six months when we took off for Holly. Up until that time I don't think she had formed an opinion about my riding.

'We stayed in Syracruse, Kans, which was only about 20 miles from Holly. There was this train right behind where we lived that would terrify you about 2 a.m. every morning. Vicki wondered if this was the life, or if she wanted to go

"Even though Holly, Colo. is the armpit of the world, and it was the first place I got ruled off for rough riding, I thought that riding pari - mutuel tracks was the only thing," he

"I got ruled off the track at Holly for cutting off Jim Chesterman, and was he ever p----d! He was the leading . rider up there at the time. My horse swallowed its tongue and I thought I might as well go for it. They ruled me off for seven days," he said.

"We had a good meet at Holly and we returned to . Pawhuska at the end of the meet. In Pawhuska I continued to Gene made many trips back to Raton and included the meet at Centennial race track in Denver, Colo., during his yearly trips. Each fall he returned to Pawhuska to break colts, attend school and ride the bushes.

Life on the road was good for the Gulletts. They lived in a trailer house when they where working the tracks and kept their home in Pawhuska.

"The people on the race track are super, at least 90 per cent of them are. They were good about helping and lending

"The day before Greg was born I got up early that morning, went out and rode some horses for Orbin Garrett, attended 12 hours of classes at school, rode my own horses that evening and about eleven o'clock that night, Vicki decided that it was time togo to the hospital.

He returned to Pawhuska as soon as he was released from the hospital in New Mexico.

There he took up his studies again with more fervor and went to work for a construction company out of Tulsa. He helped in building a new prison at Hominy, Okla. by working as a project chairman drawing plans.

The doctors did not release Gene to ride again until 1978. 'The doctors released me on a Wednesday and I was riding again on Sunday. The first horse I rode was for % of a mile. I thought it would be an easy ride, you know, just sit up there and then smile for the win picture.

"It didn't work that way. He broke late and I had to work

His career was hot again after recovering from the break He was the 8th leading rider for the state of Kansas in 1978; he won the Klotz Bred Futurity held in Eureka, Kans ; the Cricket Bar Appaloosa Futurity run in Stroud, Okla.; the Ozark Downs Futurity run in Springdale, Ark; qualified his mare. Rueful, for the Raton Derby and won the Oklahoma Quarter Horse Championship on the same mare. 'The best horse I ever rode was a gelding named Justacat owned by Gene Herrin. He was the type of horse that Herrin would run twice in the same day and win both or come in a close second on the last race." Gene said.

"I'm not through riding yet. I have about ten more good years left in me. I will be getting more into the breeding stock and training end of racing.

"Why do I ride? It doesn't frighten me. I think that everybody has just so much time. There's a date, a time and a number and when your number comes up, that's it. "The real reason for riding is that I like to win. I like the feeling that I'm there for the other guys to try to outrun. "Before I'm through I think that winning the All American would be nice," Gene said.

"There'd be no living with him," Vicki injected into the conversation.

"It would never do for me to own a horse like Special Effort (a well known race horse in this area). Every time they called race, I'd enter him," he laughed.

Gene does have other interests. One interest in particular, flying.

"I'm only five hours away from my-pilot's license, and if I win the futurity this weekend for Bill Rains I'll get the license next week "Then all I'll have to do is win the Rainbow Futurity to buy an airplane," he laughed. Gene is presently riding for Bill Rains, Johnny Perdue. and M. T. Cannon. He is working with Ed Robinson in breaking and training colts in Pampa at a small training

He lives with his wife Vicki and two sons in White Deer and says, "Enjoy life, you only get one shot and I'm going to make the best of mine.

When the Capri Theatre opened in 1959, business for movies in Pampa was in the middle of a decline that closed hundreds of theaters all across the country

But at the peak of Pampa movie - going, the town had five theaters serving a much smaller population.

Paul W. West, now the purchasing director for Video Independent Theatres, Inc., worked for theaters here in those glory days of the late 1940s.

"It was another era," he said. "That's exactly what you have to call it." "Theaters in those days were a volume business." The prices were low, and there was "no other place to go" in Pampa for a night out.

Even the Pampa Oilers baseball team had stiff competition from the family business at Pampa's two drive in theaters, West said.

But those days are gone with the wind, so to speak.

The word for theater architects today is "efficiency." With fewer movies on the market, fewer people choosing to leave the comfort of their living rooms for entertainment, and ticket prices rising steadily, new theaters have become, as West said, "crackerboxes" grouped together like stores in

The multi - screen theaters are less comfortable and beautiful than the old movie houses. But, West said, they offer the entrepreneur "two, three or four chances at a dollar, in one location and with one crew.'

It wasn't always like this. Pampa's first theater, the Rex, began lighting up its auditorium on Foster Avenue with silent films sometime in the mid - 1920s The Rex was an independently - owned operation, and was "just a brick building with a sign in front," West said.

At about the same time "talkies" took over the film industry, Pampa gained its second theater, the Lenora. Business was good enough for local businessman Pete Crown to open the Crown Theater in 1936 at the corner of Cuyler and Foster streets. But business was business, and show business is no exception. Theater owners began finding more profit and buving power in the theater chain. In 1927, three brothers working as film salesmen in the southwest opened their first theater in San Marcos. They were successful enough to open a second in Yale, Oklahoma the next year. The Griffith brothers, L.C., R.E., and H.J., continued having such successes, and organized a partnership that was to own 130 theaters in the southwest, a total that doesn't include drive - ins. Griffith Amusement Co. bought out all of the Pampa theaters in the 1940s. The company took over the Crown in about 1942 and the Rex in 1949. The Rex underwent a "complete facelift," West said, adding an elaborate marquee and interior decorations, and gaining a new name: The LaVista. The Griffith company was as successful here as it was elsewhere. But because of separation and illness among the brothers, the company reorganized as Video Independent Theaters Inc. in 1949. Video Independent opened the Pampa Drive In and the Top O' Texas Drive In in 1950 on the south and north sides of the city Drive - in business was booming, and before the novelty wore off, going to see a movie in a car was a family event. The company was even planning a third drive - in on the Borger highway in 1951.

Then came television The new technology of home entertainment forced the movie theater business into a panic. Theaters closed everywhere and movies became "bigger and better than ever' to compete with the advantages of staying home. In the Panhandle, in one winter of about 1953, West said,

"that coaxial cable hit Amarillo, and then things began 'Just overnight there was a sea of television antennaes of the house" to pull in Amarillo roadcasting, West said. In the first year, television had a major impact on the movie business, "then things levelled out," West said. But they levelled out at a lower pace for theaters. The glory days were over.

The Crown theater closed in 1956 to make way for a Pittsburgh Paint store.

The LaVista went on, becoming a part time theater showing occasional big features through the 1960s, then closing in the 1970's. The building now houses the Palace

The Top O' Texas Drive In on the north side of Pampa was closed, but the Pampa Drive In took on the name and expanded to two screens. The old Top O' Texas site is now partly occupied by a McDonald's restaurant.

The Lenora, built on the present site of Heard & Jones Rexall Drug, was not so lucky. It burned after the last showing of a film in 1959.

In the 1930s. West said, theaters were not built as safely as they are now. Although the Lenora, like other theaters, had a film booth with metal walls and fire shutters, it used flammable film and was decorated with elaborate wood and flammable theater seat material.

When the Lenora's beautiful Spanish architecture went up in flames, the Griffith company decided to replace it, and built the Capri. The company bought the old Frank Dial Tire Shop and filling station down the street from the Lenora, and used parts of that building to construct the new theater that same

In what West said was a "feat of engineering" for its time, the lower parts of the Dial building were raised about 12 feet on jacks to provide more vertical space.

The rest of the building was actually built under the roof, and even now, the theater's roof is supported by the original steel beams. The Capri was the only sit - down show in town for a while.

But the movie business picked up, and Jerry Norrod, who already owned a theater in Canyon, decided to take on some Pampa movie business. The Cinema III theater was completed in September two years ago in the old Anthony's building at Coronado Center. It fit the modern ideals for theater architecture: three smaller screening rooms offering three different movies. Norrod, in recognition of Pampa's theater tradition, obtained and installed the original poster cases from the Rex theater in Cinema III. The glory days are over, but the lean days are over, too.

Cinema III was popular enough for Norrod to add a fourth screening room to the building last month, creating Cinema

People are coming back to the movies these days, and West said the bigger theater chains are "all just doing great and continue expanding.

The past three years have been "fine" for the movies, although "some of the biggies didn't click," West said. 'The general public knows more about pictures than we do," Norrod said. "People simply want to go into a theater and get away from their troubles, not inhale somebody

Or, in other words, the qualities that made movies boom in the golden age are still working now. But theater owners today are at a disadvantage, and at the mercy of distribution companies and studios, especially when theater owners don't know what they're getting. Still, Norrod said he wishes for "more of these pictures that stay around for 10 or 12 weeks." But, he said, "Nobody in this industry is really sour grapes on the movie business — or we wouldn't be in it."

Faith in the future

Norrod is optomistic enough about the movie business to from Video Independent, making Pampa a one - owner have purchased the Capri and the Top O' Texas Drive In theater town as of Friday.

One man now owns all the movie theatres in Pampa. The Capri Theatre, the last of Pampa's old movie palaces, has been sold to Jerry Norrod, owner of Cinema IV, the first of Pampa's modern movie houses.

"I don't want all the apples in town just to have all the apples in town," said Norrod, who also finalized his purchase of the Top O' Texas Twin Drive In last week.

But the opportunity for the purchase arose when the chain that owned the two theaters, Video Independent Theatres Inc., was "spun off" from Capital City Communications Co.

of New York and began selling all its holdings. Norrod has closed the Capri for the time being, because his plans for it are "up in the air."

The drive - in will continue doing business, at least for this summer. "The season's about over" for the outdoor theater, Norrod said, "so we're just going to pull in our skirts and see Norrod did say, however, that "the Capri, frankly, would make a nice twin theater. A lot of the older theaters you can't

Like the 22 - year - old Capri, many beautiful theaters built at a peak of movie - going, in the 1940s and early 1950s, have suffered from the modern movie market, which attracts fewer filmgoers at higher prices.

Norrod said he admires the architecture of older theaters, and that it's a "shame" that theaters with 500 or more seats 'don't tend to be as efficient as theaters with smaller screens and fewer seats."

He said the "big theater" now has 300 to 400 seats. A typical old movie palace in a larger city had a capacity

The Cinema IV in Coronado Center, Norrod's first movie house property, features four smaller screening rooms in one building

The Capri building has separate heating and cooling systems for each side, and all the new owner would have to do is remove a line of seats down the center of the auditorium and build a wall there

"It's not as simple as it sounds, though," Norrod said. He said the cost of such a renovation would approach $100,000. Norrod now has a monopoly on movies in Pampa. "It makes for a little more profitable operation when a town's theaters are controlled by one person or one company," said.

"The more screens you have, the less risk there is of having a lack of good products."

In Pampa, films are booked on a "blind bidding" basis, meaning that an independent theater owner like Norrad* doesn't know what he's getting from movie distributors until . he's committed to showing it.

"I've made many bookings I've regretted later," he said, and said he would not have shown some films if he had seen .

Owning all the theaters in town, he said, will give him an advantage by allowing him to move films from one theater to another, and giving him access to more of the films on the

Paul West, director of purchasing for Video Independent. said the Capri and Top O' Texas theaters have been doing well - "Business was always good," he said - and the sale was motivated only by the corporate decision.

Pampa is the fifth town with one of the chain's theaters to be affected by the move. The chain, based in Oklahoma City, also owns movie houses in Borger, Lubbock and 12 other Texas towns, and some in New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Capital City owns a variety of media services, including newspapers, trade magazines, television stations and the cable television franchise for Detroit.

Mexican cops held a pair for ransom...

By SARA P. WILKS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) -Two Maryland businessmen on a fishing trip in Mazatlan, Mexico, say they were dragged from a bar and jailed for seven days last month in what they claim was an attempt by Mexican police to extort a bribe from them.

The story comes amid concern that Nicholas Schrock, a Colorado economics professor, was the victim of foul play at about the same time in San Ignacio, a town about 50 miles north of Mazatlan.

Schrock, 42, disappeared May 30 after driving to Mexico for a summer job in Guadalajara. Schrock's 1981 pickup truck was recovered in San Ignacio, where it was being used by the town's police chief.

The chief has admitted killing a man Mexican officials thought was Schrock. But subsequent investigation determined that the body originally thought to be that of Schrock was another man, not yet identified.

Schrock is still missing. What we went through can happen to anybody down there," said Doug Harris, 31, vice president of Oak Lawn Building, Inc., of Clinton, Md. "I'm just lucky to be here talking about this.

Harris and Michael Lewis, a 27-year-old banker from Deale, Md., said in an interview last week they were held in Mazatlan for seven days before the State Department apparently intervened and secured their release June 16.

"We came home and read about that professor," said Lewis: "We knew nothing about it when we were down there."

The Maryland men don't know exactly what or who brought about their release.

'The best we can determine," Harris said, "is that Michael Oreste at the State Department was told by his boss in Mexico City that if no action was taken President Reagan's office was going to be contacted. It appears that simply the threat was just enough to get us out."

Oreste, vice counsel at the U.S. Consulate in Mazatlan. "was instrumental in getting us out of there," Harris said "I don't know what he did or what the State Department did, but we're here today and we're lucky.''

The State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs in Washington confirmed that it was aware of the case. But a spokeswoman who asked that her name not be used said she could not "discuss any confidential interaction between the U.S. and Mexican governments."

She said she was advised by U.S. Ambassador John Gavin that he was putting together a team involved in "investigatory activities" to probe the matter. The search so far, she asserted, has been marked by 'shoddy, sloppy, unprofessional activity.'

Mrs. Schrock, who appeared at a Saturday news conference at the economics department where her husband taught for 15 years, said she had hoped to clip a lock of her dead husband's hair when the body was examined.

But the mummified body inside the plastic bag shipped from Mexico was older than her husband, had a mustache unlike her husband's, had black hair instead of her husband's prematurely gray hair and had no fillings in its teeth, she said

Mexican authorities said last week they had made a positive identification of the body through dental records sent from Colorado. The professor had gold crowns in his teeth, Mrs. Schrock said.

Asked about the misidentification, Tom Johnson of the U.S. Embassy said only, "It was a Mexican police matter.

The case has attracted widespread experiments and continuing research worldwide could be invalidated because of a genetic impurity found in a strain of laboratory mice, scientists say.

"This is a major contamination problem of almost inestimable consequence," said Robert Auerbach, a zoologist at the University of Wisconsin. He cited examples of commercial and academic research projects that were unsuccessful, possibly because of the inconsistent response of the impure mice.

Brenda Kahan, another university zoologist, said a nine-month experiment on mice purchased in January 1981 showed they were not the genetically pure BALB-c strain, important for cancer research and other experiments because of their susceptibility to cancer.

MOSQUITO CONTROL Mosquitoes continue to be a nuisance throughout the area. In order to reduce potential breeding sites, home owners should eliminate any standing water around the home. If the standing water can't be eliminated, treatment with a larvicide will be necessary. No. 2 diesel bil with a spreading agent applied at the rate of 20 gal. per surface acre of water, or approximately 6 oz. per 100 square feet of surface is an effective larvicide. Abate, malathion, or Dursban applied to standing water is also effective. Residual treatments of malathion, Dibram, methoxychlor, or Dursban will help control adult mosquitoes around the home. Aerosol bombs containing pyrethrins will knock down mosquitoes within the home. CONTROL SPIDER MITE IN GARDENS

Spider mites, or red spiders, are probably the most difficult pests to control in vegetable gardens. With hot dry weather approaching, gardeners should be on the lookout for this pest by checking the underside of plant leaves. Actually, spider mites are not insects but are eight - legged relatives of ticks and spiders. Their small size, about 1-60 of an inch, makes them difficult to see without a magnifying lens. They range in color from red, green a yellow to white and brown. Spider mites deposit their eggs on the undersides of leaves. These hatch in about five days. There may be 10 to 15 or more generations per year.

Mites can cause considerable plant damage by sticking their needle - like mouth parts into leaf tissue and sucking out the juice while injecting a toxic substance into the leaf. Heavy infestations will cause leaves to appear blotched or spotted, turn pale or yellowish in color, curl up, turn brown and eventually fall off. A thin webbing may cover leaves and Begin a control program as soon as spider mites are detected and before plant damage is obvious. A light infestation of spider mites can be reduced and kept at low levels by spraying plants with a strong stream of cool water every few days.

County Extension Agent The 1982 wheat harvest is over and it was the latest harvest in a long time. The area around Pampa had suffered a lot of weather damage this spring and summer from all the storms which resulted in hail, tornadoes, excess rain and the resulting growth of weeds that literally took over some fields. The area as a whole probably produced about half a crop but even at that the yields were a little better than what was expected on some of the dryland fields

The real problem for all wheat farmers is the cash price - around $3.15 per bushel. In general terms and on a comparative basis, I believe wheat is about as cheap as it has ever been priced. In 1972 wheat was worth about $1.50 per bushel. However, I think the price of most farm production items have more than doubled in the last ten years. Even back in the depression - 1932 the average price was 33 cents per bushel and prices have generally all increased more than 10 times in the last fifty years. Therefore, the farm situation is extremely critical for all farmers and it is really magnified when you add weather disaster damage to the production yields.

INSECT SITUATION Some sorghum fields have corn leaf aphids in the whorl. This aphid which is dark green with black legs, antennae, and cornicles is considered very important in the peat management strategy in sorghum. The aphid seldom causes economic damage and is important in establishing a predator and parasite complex in sorghum that will aid in controlling greenbugs later.

HERBICIDE DAMAGE IN SORGHUM Frank Petr, area agronomist, reports he has seen several sorghum fields with a high percentage of plants with abnormal root development and plant deformity. In almost every case a combination of 2, 4 - D and atrazine was applied. For some reason the combination of these herbicides intensifies crop damage. Phenoxy her bicides such as 2, 4 D have a tendency to arrest root development and cause onion leaf and other abnormalities if applied too early in the growth stage of the sorghum or at too high a rate per acre. Sorghum hybrids with wheatland parentage are especially susceptible to 2.4 - D damage. If you plant to use 2. 4 - D. ask your dealer if your hybrid has a wheatland parent. Avoid using a combination of 2, 4 - D and atrazine on your

There's not much anyone can do about the hot summer weather in Texas, but something certainly can be done about improving our. work situation.

Working in hot, humid conditions not only causes discomfort but can also present safety and health hazards.

Body fatique sets in sooner when an individual has to work in a hot environment, and performance also may suffer, depending on the job involved. In addition, certain safety problems are common, such as slippery, sweaty hands, dizziness and fogging glasses. Accidents are more frequent in the heat due to lowered physical performance and mental alertness.

Among physical disorders than can result from working in a hot environment are heat stroke, heat exhaustion, heat cramps, fainting, heat rash and momemtary or transient heat fatigue. Since most people can adjust to hot weather and hot environments, heat disorders most often occur among workers who have not been given time to adjust to working in the heat or among those who have been away from hot conditions for an extended time.

To reduce on - the - job heat stress that may lead to certain phyusical problems, these steps may help:

- temporarily make work easier

- decrease the speed at which work is done - increase the frequency or length of rest periods.

Since many heat disorders are due to dehydration and loss of salt, it is important to drink plenty of water. Water intake during the workday must equal the amount of sweat. A worker may sweat away as much as three gallons of fluid during a hot workday.

Clothing is also a key factor in coping with a hot environment. Avoid tight, closely fit garments and synthetic fabrics which interfere with evaporation of sweat. Loosely fitted garments made of loosely woven fabrics permit air movement close to the skin and enhance sweat evaporation, thus cooling

Reducing heat in the workplace will often boost overall production by increasing work efficiency while decreasing fatigue and time needed for rest periods. Among things that will help from this standpoint are shielding or insulating equipment heat sources, using exhaust fans near heat - producing equipment, opening windows and using fans where possible to maximize air flow and in general, providing well - ventilated work

Giants vie for mobile phone licenses

By Robert J. Wagman WASHINGTON (NEA) -

The Federal Communications Commission soon will begin awarding licenses that could turn out to be worth billions of dollars.

The intense competition for these licenses will pit the giants of the communications industry against one another in a lobbying freefor-all.

The licenses are for the operation of wire-free communications services that make use of a new technology known as "cellular" mobile radio transmission.

Today, mobile phone service in a given city usually is broadcast from a single radio transmitter over the few channels that the FCC has reserved for radio-tele-

In New York City, for instance, only 12 mobile conversations can occur simultaneously; service is thus limited to 700 customers. Because of this limited capacity, some people who want the service have been on a waiting list for years.

The new technology employs a series of "cells that is, low-powered transmitters operating in a small area. A computer tracks the caller's movements and automatically switches the call from cell

The low power of these transmitters enables the same frequencies to be reused within a metropolitian area. This means that many more people can use the

In New York City, a cellular system could increase the number of available mobile phones to 250,000 Except during the busiest hours, all customers could expect to get a free channel whenever they wanted to place a call.

Moreover, phones using the cellular technology will be truly portable. Mobile phones now require a heavy radio: even those designed to fit in a briefcase weigh 30 pounds. The new phones will weigh only a couple of pounds and will easily fit into a briefcase or Within a few years the phones will be even smaller. There may even be a reallife variation of the Dick Tracy wristwatch phone!

All of this demonstrates the potential bonanza awaiting the companies that are licensed to offer this service.

Morale plunges at Reagan White House

By Robert J. Wagman WASHINGTON (NEA) -

Most presidential administrations are affected by mid-term doldrums. But the Reaganites seem to be experiencing this letdown earlier and more severely than many of their predecessors.

New presidents, or reelected ones, ride into town on a wave of post-election euphoria. Morale is high as the administration works feverishly to implement its program.
This "high" usually lasts

until the program is enacted or until it clearly fails to fly. Then the blahs set in, typically during the third year of the administration. But they have arrived already for Ronald Reagan

These are not happy times inner circle. All had counted on a triumphant European tour to revive the flagging image of the president and his administration. But that was not to be.

The trip was designed — and exhaustively produced — to serve two main purposes: to show Reagan firmly in charge as presi-dent and "leader of the free world" and to provide a platform for the enunciation of a coherent foreign policy that critics charged was long overdue from this administration.

Measured against these goals, the trip was not merely a failure but a disaster. First, there was the economic summit at Versailles.

Reagan had sent former Treasury Secretary George Shultz on a pre-summit round of visits with Western leaders to try to work out some compromises

In exchange for U.S. promises to consider various concessions sought by the Europeans - namely strong U.S. intervention in foreign currency markets to support weakened European currencies - the administration wanted the Europeans to mute their criticism of the Reagan economic program.

The White House thought that it had the makings of a deal. But any tentative accord dissolved quickly as the summit turned into a gripe session against Reaganomics and its effects on other Western economies. The administration then went on to suffer a whole series of foreign-policy reversals while Reagan was in Europe.

For months the world had been looking to the United States to prevent an Israeli invasion of Lebanon. But when the invasion began Reagan's trip, the States was clearly powerless to stop it or to limit its scope.

There was also the mishandling of the United Nations vote on the Falklands, which was quickly followed by the spectacle of our secretary of state publicly feuding with our U.N.

Then Reagan tried to persuade British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to show the Argentines some mercy. She rejected the sug-gestion out-of-hand.

These events shattered any hope of portraying the administration as being firmly in charge and as having a coherent and comprehensive foreign policy. As bad as the European trip was as a public-relations venture, the events occurring at the same time or disabled, may be removed from the rolls entirely.

The budget resolution also sets a target of some $20 billion in additional tax revenues to be raised in fiscal 1983 - $100 billion through fiscal 1985 — without elimis nating the third phase of the personal tax cut.

Battling the federal government over boundaries of property

By BOB FICK Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In southern New Mexico, property owners in the small town of Cloudcroft are battling the federal government over national forest land where private citizens have inadvertently trespassed.

"It's not like getting along with an ordinary neighbor," says Dorsey Bonnell, a local leader of the fight and owner of 185 acres caught up in the dispute. Temporary boundary markers left by government surveyors started the argument.

"The government's a bad neighbor." charges Bonnell. "They just say, 'It's our way or none.' What can you do? You're just an individual."

But in northern Washington state, the federal government had to pay $480,000 after discovering that the national forest timber it sold to an adjacent landowner was actually on his land. The price for that mistake was nearly 20 times more than the government felt the timber was worth.

And officials say they're uncovering more and more instances of inaccurate private and public land survey work as they search out the real boundaries separating millions of acres of valuable federal and private lands.

They say long-standing land titles are being jeopardized and the government's losing vast sums in undeveloped resources because of uncertainty about the exact ownership of border

"Those are not everyday horror stories, but they're not atypical either," says George Liddicoatt, deputy director of the National Forest Service's lands division.

"We have 50,000 claims on the system... and we're accumulating them faster than we can resolve them." says Liddicoatt, who headed up the service's survey program for a

Church survives burglaries

DALLAS (AP) - Monsignor John Brady has turned the there but to burglarize

St. Edward's Catholic Church has been burglarized at least three times in the last three years, and robbers have terrorized Brady and his secretary, Aida LaBelle.

The rectory has been ransacked and Brady, 86, and Mrs LaBelle, 73, have both been assaulted there

Despite the crimes, Brady said he will not retire

"I like work. If you retire, you get old," he said in an Irish brogue. "Try me again in 20 years.

In a 1980 robbery, Brady was clubbed over the head and his wallet was taken by two men brandishing revolvers. They tied up Mrs. LaBelle and another priest, the Rev. Daniel O'Connor. He said the robbers forced him to the floor, demanding, 'Where is your money? Where is the wine? Where is your

Mrs. LaBelle, who is confined to a wheelchair, fought off three knife-wielding assailants with a frying pan in a 1979 robbery attempt

She said she faked a heart attack when they tried to pull her from her wheelchair by her hair. Mrs. LaBelle, who has only one leg, said the men then took her prosthetic limb

Brady said the attacks have forced him to lock the church doors, "and that hurts me. But Mrs. LaBelle said winos who sometime sleep on the porch deter burglars and robbers. But others have been more brazen

Thieves entered the church's school this month by prying the hinges off a door during daylight hours. Stolen were an air conditioner and a film projector.

while. "The problem's mostly in the West, but it's pretty well scattered through the country. Congress is now considering legislation to expedite the boundary survey program and let the Forest Service trade off or sell outright small parcels of federal land in dispute.

The problem in Cloudcroft, where only a handful of individuals and few acres of land are involved, meant "land titles were no longer considered clear, property transactions were halted, tax assessments were in disarray and property improvements were presumably lost," according to Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M.,

The national forest system has 272,000 miles of boundary. Most of it was laid out decades ago by what are today considered crude surveying techniques with wide margins for error. In some cases the work was fraudulent, Liddicoatt says, 'done in the back of a bar or a wagon."

The accuracy of the boundaries, originally marked by blazes on trees and piles of stone or charcoal, was of little concern through the first half of the century because neither the publicly owned lands or the private plots abutting them were being developed. Many of those surveys were privately done.

After World War II, however, the value of those lands and their resources began soaring and the need for true boundary lines became apparent.

But the magnitude of the resurveying job and the high cost of modern technology that limits errors to less than six inches per mile have permitted only a few thousand miles of boundary line to be resurveyed each year

Just 47,000 miles of work has been finished to date, and each additional mile surveyed, sometimes at a cost of $10,000 or more, turns up one or two new cases of encroachment, either by the government or a private landowner

'In the absence of known federal land boundaries, there's bedlam," Schmitt says.

People on both sides agree that it's partly the government's fault for not making true boundary designations a high priority and partly the individuals' fault for not being certain about what they own.

But nobody really wants to place blame for the uncertainty that the American Congress of Surveying and Mapping says could cost the government $112 million in trespass and litigation costs. Officials say accusations would serve no

"It's just a messy situation that should be corrected and there's no reason it shouldn't be corrected," says Julian Barber, an aide to Schmitt

In most cases, private landowners have encroached on federal land with a fence, a shed or woodpile but sometimes with a home or other building. The Forest Service ignores the violation or issues a special use permit. Rarely, Congress grants the land to the individual. Sometimes the government takes the landowners to court.

In other cases, the government's the trespasser. For example, it relied on a Utah landowner's fence line and wound up encroaching on his property. In Minnesota, a 15-unit federal campground turned out to be built on private property.

In many cases, the situation leaves everyone dissatisfied. 'Somebody who finds out he doesn't have what he thought he had will think he's been treated inequitably. I don't blame him. But basically, people have not been treated inequitably, Liddicoatt contends. "You just pay, that's all, and it's because of our own stupidity, both the government's and individuals'.'

Kickapoos await federal action

By MACK SISK

Associated Press Writer EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) - A band of Indians whose ancestors once ruled 13 million acres near the Great Lakes are sweltering through another hot summer on the banks of the Rio Grande - waiting for the U.S. Senate to act on their request for a small plot of Texas land.

The Traditional Kickapoos claim the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs has treated them like renegades for the 150 years they have migrated through this Texas-Mexico border city, living in cardboard and cane wickiups, speaking the same Algonquin dialect and worshipping the same Indian God they have for centuries.

The House of Representatives has approved a bill by Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen, D-Texas, that would clarify the citizenship of about 700 impoverished Kickapoos who fled from reservations in Kansas and Oklahoma in the 1830s, alleging Christian missionaries interfered with their freedom of

Since then, the aborigine tribe has migrated back and forth from Eagle Pass to a holy ground granted them early in this century by President Benito Juarez in Mexico. Eagle Pass is their home base for they travel throughout the United States as migrant farmworkers.

The Laredo congressman said the Traditional Kickapoos may be the most pure tribe of native Americans.

"It may be difficult to believe in our modern age of space travel and scientific marvels that such a situation exists, but it does." Kazen said

Kazen's bill now goes to the Senate and tribal supporters have scheduled a meeting in San Antonio next week to plan strategy should Congress decide not to fund the proposed land

Kurt Blue Dog, an attorney for the Native American Rights Fund, headquartered in Boulder, Colo., said representatives of the Kickapoos from Eagle Pass and Oklahoma would attend the Monday meeting in San Antonio to discuss raising private funds should Congress decide against spending any money.

"I guess we're realistic enough to realize that (funding) portion of the bill is going to be real tough to get passed. What we're trying to do is do as much as we can on our own and possibly the government may augment it,"the Sioux lawyer

"We're going to get some land. If not by federal funding, then we'll do it through contributions. There are still some people in the world with a good heart," said Nakai Breen, a Cherokee Indian reared since she was 12 among the

Mrs. Breen and her husband, Bud, a western artist who has sold paintings to help the indigent Kickapoos, planned to meet with Blue Dog, the Oklahoma Kickapoo chairman, and the Rev. James McCloud of McAllen, a Presbyterian minister who has taken an interest in the plight of the tribe.

"It is important that they have the funds to back them up if Congress doesn't go the money part," said Breen at his home in Brackettville, Texas.

Although the Kickapoos were declared an official Texas tribe by the state legislature in 1977, Attorney General Mark White ruled that they were not eligible for any state assistance because the federal government is constitutionally authorized __ to deal with them.

Kazen's legislation also would, for the first time, extend all federal rights to the Traditional Kickapoos, whereas the Bureau of Indian Affairs until now has taken the stance they must go to the reservation in Oklahoma to receive any

Mrs. Breen said the Kickapoos occupied 13 million acres in Wisconsin and Illinois until the early 1800s when white settlers

Hobby wants TEC examined

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has asked the Legislative Budget Board and the Sunset Advisory Commission to devote special attention to the Texas Employment Commission.

Hobby, chairman of the budget board, noted that the TEC is one of the agencies under review by the Sunset Commission and would cease to exist on Sept. 1, 1983, unless renewed by the Legislature.

The TEC recently projected a 2,000 percent increase in employer taxes as a result of an increasing percentage of layoffs. New rates for unemployment insurance would go into effect Oct. 1.

"The financial structure of the agency should be able to accommodate significant swings in demand such as are now being experienced without the possible result of sudden and dramatic increases in payroll taxes," Hobby said in a

The TEC also was forced to make substantial cuts in its job service program earlier this year due to the uncertainty of federal funding, and Hobby said, "A greater degree of flexibility both in the administration of the programs and in the financing of these programs is necessary.

Clamplett slips to 78, but still leads by one stroke

TROON, Scotland (AP) - Bobby Clampett, in the title hunt. lines of pain and strain etched upon his young face, struggled through brisk, gusty winds to a wildly erratic 78 but retained a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 111th British Open Golf Championship.

In British Open

It was a bizarre chapter in the long history of this ancient event.

While the winds were up, conditions were no more severe, said Tom Watson, than those that prevailed on the first two days when Clampett shot rounds of 67 and 66.

This time the 22-year-old Californian couldn't cope with the subtle demands of the tough old Troon Golf Links, which stretch 7,067 yards along the Firth of Clyde.

But, then, neither could anyone else. With Clampett falling victim to a wide variety of golfing horrors, it seemed the gate would be opened to a large number of challengers.

But no one made a move. Clampett, the leader all the way in his first appearance in the British Open, completed three rounds in 211 - 5-under par. That compares with the lofty 11-under-par total and a five-shot lead with which he started the day's play.

Nick Price of Zimbabwe, a 25-year-old journeyman pro on the European circuit, held onto second place with a 74, which included numerous missed opportunities, and a 212 total.

Two strokes off the pace at 213 were Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Des Smyth of Ireland. Lyle managed a 73 and Smyth a 74 despite a double bogey-5 on the fifth hole where he chipped into a bunker

Watson, the U.S. Open champion and a three-time winner of this event, accomplished part of his goal in spite of

Seven shots back when the third round started, he "wasted a lot of shots early in the round," he said, but got in with a 74 that left him at 214, three strokes back and very much

The only others under par after 54 holes were Peter Oosterhuis, an Englishman now living in the United States, and Japan's Masahiro Kuramoto. They were tied at 215, one under. Oosterhuis had a third-round 74 and Kuramoto was one of only three men able to beat Troon's par of 72. He shot a 71.

The other two subpar shooters, Keith Waters of Great Britain and Lee Trevino, each with a 71, recorded their efforts before the winds freshened. Both were too far back to be a factor. Trevino has a 221 total, Waters

Jack Nicklaus also appeared to be out of it. The holder of 17 major professional championships moved up with a round of par-72 and was treated to a warm, standing ovation from the golf-mad Scots as he strode up the 18th fairway. But, with a 219 total, he was 3-over par and eight strokes back with only 18 holes to play.

Arnold Palmer, the 52-year-old living legend who won the British Open on Troon 20 years ago, once got into contention. He was 1-under par for the tournament when he finished nine holes and made the turn back into the homeward nine, which plays straight into the teeth of the prevailing winds.

And, like so many others, the test was too much. Palmer played the back in 43 and finished with a 78 that left him at 221.

But he had plenty of company in his trials and tribulations over that double-tough back

There was PGA champ Larry Nelson. He played that side in 42, completing a 77 and a

There was Masters champ Craig Stadler. He came home in 42, finishing a 79 and 224. There was Curtis Strange. He required 40 strokes on the back and had a 76-221.

There was Ray Floyd. He had 42 on the back, 77 and 224.

Whatever happened to . that brash young man?

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

TROON, Scotland (AP) - Four years ago, Bobby Clampettwas guilty of a youthful golfing indiscretion.

As an 18-year-old amateur, he'd missed the cut for the final two rounds in the United States Open at Cherry Hills. An uneven number of players made the cut and Clampett was nominated to go out as a non-competing marker, a playing partner for the odd man.

About halfway through the round, Clampett, clowning around, elected to hit a shot from a kneeling position.

The staid U.S. Golf Association failed to see the humor of the situation, viewed it as a disgrace and escorted Clampett from * the course; a teen-ager nailed for a prank by an unforgiving

It is a much more mature Clampett, now 22, tempered and . tamed by two full years of grinding competition on the U.S. PGA Tour, who is leading the 111th British Open.

"I'm bubbling like crazy inside," Clampett said. But he's made a determined effort to keep his public performance low

He's been so successful that he's even been criticized in print

by some British golf correspondents as being dull. That's a 180-degree turnaround. If there's been any criticism of the skinny young man in the United States, it has been for a tendency to be a bit on the brash and cocky side.

The young bachelor, whose sharp features and cap of kinky-curly blond hair have won him the nickname "Little Harpo," is a resident of Carmel Valley, Calif. He joined the U.S. pro tour after gaining an associate's degree in French from Brigham Young in 1980.

With him, he brought a growing talent, a burning desire and a guitar, on which he is an adept performer.

Trevino impressed with British Open leader

TROON, Scotland (AP) - Lee Trevino says do not sell Bobby Clampett short in the 111th British Open golf championship just because he's never won a tournament

"As I recall, the first tournament I won was a big one (the U.S. Open) and you can say the same thing for Jack Nicklaus and Jerry Pate," said Trevino after Clampett's 11-under-par 133 gave himm a 5-shot lead after two rounds at Royal Troon Golf Club Friday

Trevino said. "He really impresses me because he is so long out there ... he reaches the par 5's and the long par 4's in the wind." Trevino said Clampett wouldn't choke in the event.

"The kid is good, real good, I've been watching him,"

"The kid can play under pressure, believe me," he said. "He works hard. I bet he's out on the practice tee right now hitting

Trevino, a two-time winner of the British Open, shot par 72 Friday but was out of contention because of a first-round 78. 'My back is feeling a lot better," he said. "I'm staying over to play in a tournament at Yorkshire but when I get back to the States I may have something done with a laser needle." Trevino was involved in a humorous sidelight to the event Friday when London cab driver Michael Everest arrived as a guest of Keith McKenzie of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of Everest named a son after Trevino following the Texan's triumph in 1972 at Muirfield.

McKenzie brought Everest here to meet Trevino.

"I hope he's a helluva player because I'm on my way out," said Trevino of Lee Trevino Everest, now 10 years old. "Be sure to teach him a closed stance.'

Everest said he and his wife had decided to name their son after the British Open champion a decade ago

"It started worrying me when Kermit Zarley was doing so rell." Everest said. "We didn't want to name him Kermit Zarley Everest ... anything would have been better than Pampa National could manage only three hits in the game.

"Our team only got four hits in two games against Dumas," said manager John W. Warner. "The Dumas pitchers did a good job of mixing speeds and had excellent control. We played excellent defensively, but just could not stay with their hitting.

"I was very pleased with the attitudes of the kids on our team." Warner continued. "We went to restaurants in Dumas and Borger and played in Sunray and Dumas. Everywhere we went people raved about how well-mannered our kids were. They represented Pampa well. Our kids hustled and gave it all they had. We won two and lost two in the tournament although the other teams outhit us every time and made 44 hits to Pampa's only runs came in the fifth inning. Chad McDougall tripled and scored on a fielder's choice on a ball hit by Brian Fleming. David Doke was safe on a fielder's choice and scored on a single by Brian Hogan.

Miller leads Boston past Kansas City, 8-4

BOSTON (AP) - Rick Miller broke a 2-2 tie with a bases-loaded triple in the eighth inning Saturday as the Boston Red Sox defeated Kansas City 8-4.

Held to one run and six hits by starter Paul Splittorff, the Red Sox jumped on relief ace Dan Quisenberry, 4-4, for a tying run in the seventh and six more in the eighth.

With one out in the eighth, Dave Stapleton beat out a hit off Quisenberry's leg. Pinch-hitting Carl Yastrzemski singled, sending Stapleton to third. Rich Gedman then grounded sharply back to the mound and Quisenberry had apparent rundown. But Stapleton got back to third safely, and the bases were loaded Miller's triple cleared the bases, making it 5-2. Jim Rice. Tony Perez and Wade Boggs also drove in runs in the inning.

Mark Clear, 7-4, who relieved Bruce Hurst in the eighth, earned the victory. Kansas City got its final two runs in the ninth on solo homers by Hal McRae, his second of the game, and

Frank White. The Royals took a 2-1 lead in the seventh when Jerry Martin hit his seventh homer of the season. Stapleton trapped in an Major League standings

The French Canadians at Montreal had a word for it: "Partie d'Etoiles." On all their logos and banners for baseball's 53rd All-Star Game Tuesday night, that was the event's French translation

They didn't say "Jeu d'Etoilles," as they might in referring to a soccer match. They didn't call it a "guerre," or war, as reporters sometimes call such intense games.

They said, "partie." So be it.

"Partie" in French is not equivalent of "party" in English. Nor does it have the same connotation as "jeu," match or contest, or even "match," which is accepted as such in both languages.

So. let's say the French Canadians put their finger on the All-Star Game. first time ever played out of the United States. It was indeed a 'partie." a fete, a carnival, a celebration of sorts.

Now, if we could just accept it and quit getting all lathered up about killer instincts, motivation, depth of talent, racial bias and whether it's true that the National League plays better baseball on the whole than the American League

That the National League has won 11 games in a row, 19 of the last 20, is indeed an oddity in sports. It is as inexplicable as a guy at the dice table in Las Vegas running off 11 passes in a row - not likely, yet not impossible.

It seems rather naive to believe that superiority of one league or another can be determined from such a hectic one-day enterprise - calling in 56 hand-picked players from the two leagues, tossing them into a stadium without any cohesive work, shuttling them in and out every two innings or so and expecting them to prove

If a gauge is to be used to determine comparative strength, the best-of-seven World Series certainly should be a more legitimate barometer. It brings together teams which have won their chevrons through a rigorous 162-game schedule and have been honed on the anvil of competition. It is one league's best against the other league's best in a knockout series.

Yet, even this is not a foolproof system. In so short a series, luck and momentary hot streaks play too big a part in the final outcome. Over the same period of the All-Star Game's existence, 1933-82, The American League holds a 27-23 World Series

So what does that prove? The AL is better in the World Series, the NL in the All-Star Game. Which leaves us back at square one. The same players compete in both extravaganzas.

That was a silly scene at the All-Star luncheon Monday when Pete Rose jumped on the American League's top vote-getter, Carlton Fisk, for what he interpreted as a cavalier attitude toward the game.

Fisk made the mistake of saying the All-Star Game is a one-day showpiece for the fans, which players have taken lightly for years, and winning, while nice, isn't everything.

"I can't believe Carlton meant that," Rose retorted. "For me, losing stinks (he used a raunchier word). A hundred percent is not enough. You gotta give 110 per cent. If you don't try to win, why even put on a uniform?"

Tennis ace

Is Ivan Lendl really that good?

RENO, Nev. (NEA) — Ivan Lendl of Ostrava, Czechoslovakia, and Boca West, Florida, has been quietly solidifying his capitalistic position.

Disdaining the prestige of playing at Wimbledon, Ivan has been girding himself to work on his second million That's dollars, not korunas (the Czech currency) - and for 1982 alone!

Not bad for a 22-year-old kid out of Eastern Europe. As an instance of his financial acumen, Ivan picked up $75,000 for a quick two hours of work recently in a challenge match with Guillermo Vilas. It was billed here by Harrah's, the sponsor, as a "$125,000 Shoot-out." Vilas got 50 grand for losing in straight sets. This was while Ivan ostensibly was shunning Wimbledon because he wanted to rest up for the arduous tennis campaigning the second half of the year. "If you're looking for a eak," says Lendl, "and don't know when to take it, you start looking for tournaments which are not your favorite.

Ivan says this in quite passable English, which, as a bright young man, he has picked up quickly in the four years he has spent in the Western world.

He makes no secret of his England Club.

"It's just not a great place for the players," he elaborates. "Last year and the years before, we were not treated like usual. For example, if your parents come and you want to get a ticket, you just got to go on the street and buy it. It's not very nice.'

Lendl was quickly eliminated in the opening round at Wimbledon last year by an Australian named Char-

Actually, Ivan abhors playing on grass. He has psyched himself out on the subject, and a rumor has even started that the young Czech is allergic to green herbage. That seems

IVAN LENDL is thought by some to be the top tennis player in the world. Experts say his forehand is the most powerful in the game. But he has never won a grand slam event

Ivan proceeded to play in the Pro-Am at the Westchester Golf Classic without sneezing once.

Golf, a nice capitalistic pastime, too, has become his latest passion. He is more worried about his proclivity for slicing drives than his volleys at the net.

The fact is, Lendl's tennis game has already been perfected to the point there is serious speculation about his right to be called the top tennis player in the world.

That goes in the face of the record which shows he has never won a grand slam event (Australian, French, U.S. Opens and Wimbledon). The closest he came to it was in losing the finals of the 1981 French Open to Bjorn Borg in five tough sets. He has, however, displayed an ability to beat John McEnroe, defeating for the Volvo Masters and WCT Finals championships. Lendl's ascendancy began in September 1981 when he started a winning streak that reached 45 straight matches, surpassed in tennis history only by the 50 straight Vilas won in 1977. Included were eight straight tournament triumphs.

As he prepared to play in the U.S. Pro Championships in Boston in mid-July, the Czech clouter had dropped only four of his last 92 matches. Once prone to emotional displays when the action didn't go his way, he has become a poker-faced, tough competitor with devastating ability.

If he has a major weakness, it's in the face he turns to the public. The chiseled - high Slavic cheekbones, deep set eyes, sharp jawline — and ridges of often curt manner of speak ing. Ivan comes across as aloof, though his close friends, like old Polish pro Woitek Fibak, insist he is warm and fun-loving in private. About his intensity and abilities there is no

His forehand is the most powerful in tennis, capable of putting away a winner from any place on the court. Promoter Barry MacKay, once a national champion himself, calls it the strongest weapon since Pancho Segura's two-fisted fore-hand.

Lendl's backhand is versatile and solid. He is rangy at 6-foot-2, and quick. He has developed a good serveand volley attack which makes him effective on fast surfaces, though like many Europeans he was schooled on clay. Czechoslovakia has had a strong tennis tradition. On the women's side currently featured are Martina Nav ratilova (now a naturalized American) and Hana Mandlikova. Well rementbered on the international circuit are Jaroslav Drobny and Jan Kodes, both of whom were champions at

But Lendl seems destined to become the best player produced by that country Certainly, he'll be the most affluent. And probably, because he has the game for it, he'll reach a point where even the whims of Wimbledon don't faze him and he can prove himself in that arena, too.

Meanwhile, to borrow from Liberace, he's scowling all the way to the bank.

SAN DIEGO, Calif (AP) -Basketball coach Richie Spears of the San Diego State women's team was out scouting highschool players and came back with a unique report on one player.

Peete continued his hot streak with his fifth straight sub-70 round. He opened with two 67s in this $200,000 tournament, which carries a first prize

"I'm still pumped up from week," said Peete. "That's the reason I'm playing so well. When you're making birdies, it's always fun.

Barber also posted a 67-67 start. Butch Baird, another veteran. matched Mitchell's 63. They joined eight others who share the mark at this 6.514-yard layout not far from the

Happy Shahan plans to sell the 'Movie Capitol of Texas'

By MACK SISK Associated Press Writer

BRACKETTVILLE, Texas (AP) -Rancher James T. "Happy" Shahan says he plans to sell or convert to private use his Alamo Village, "The Movie Capitol of Texas" where 20 major motion pictures and television shows have been filmed over the last 31

"Anybody in the world can buy Alamo Village who has the money, said Shahan

His $4 million asking price includes a section of land, the largest reproduction of the Alamo ever built, and an authentic 1800s western town that includes a jail, saloons, general stores, an often-robbed bank, hotels, school, church, blacksmith shop, stables and other buildings

Thousands of tourists have trooped through the streets of Alamo Village where photos of John Wayne, Richard Widmark, Dean Martin, Raquel Welch. Dennis Weaver, Linda Cristal, Richard Boone, Chill Wills, Ken Curtis, Jimmy Stewart, George Kennedy, Will Greer and numerous other actors are displayed in museums, along with many of the props they used in movies filmed here

Regardless of whether he sells the town - which contains memorabilia of Wayne's 1959 epic "The Alamo," the 1967 "Bandolero," the 1980 'Barbarosa'' and other films - Shahan said this probably will be the last summer Alamo Village is open daily to tourists.

"Wayne dropped $4 million here in 51/2 months," said Shahan, a six times mayor of Brackettville who personally convinced Wayne to change his plans to film the movie in Mexico. "The Alamo" wound up costing "The Duke" $12 million, making it the most expensive motion picture ever filmed to that time. Shahan said he wants to discontinue opening the village on his sprawling 35-square-mile ranch to the public from Memorial Day to Labor Day, as he has for years, to devote more time to raising Longhorns and his other pursuits, such as managing several

If a buyer does not come forth, Shahan said he has other plans for Alamo Village.

"In the meantime, we'll use it to. make movies and for television. It's like a private commissary to me."

Shahan said. He said he probably would stage two or three Longhorn sales a year at the site, plus perhaps an art show a year featuring paintings and bronze statues.

Shahan, a history and arts buff among his many other pursuits, has begun collection of Indian paintings and Old West statues. His wife, Virginia, collects arrowheads she ferrets out in the nearby countryside and has an extensive collection of Indian jewelry. He said one group has an option to lease Alamo Village by Nov. 1, after it closes on Sept. 30.

"If they don't lease it, then there'll either be somebody buy it or we'll continue operating it like a private commissary," Shahan said.

But incest is real and figures reveal that at least one in every 100 women in the United States have been involved in an

Could those figures also reflect that one in every 100 women in Pampa have been a victim of incest?

Victims and offenders suffer. The pain can come back to haunt them many years after the incident took place.

Are they destined to forever hide in shame because the subject is too horrible to talk about?

Society may now talk about incest and take action in a positive manner to help victims and offenders. More important, people may try to prevent the recurrance of incest through knowledge and a better understanding of human

In the definition above, taken from Webster's New World Dictionary, incest is described as "sexual intercourse between persons too closely related to marry legally" What it does not say is that individuals involved in sexual play with family members suffer severe pschological damage which can not be repaired by ignoring the facts. According to a study conducted by Paul Gebhardt and his associates at the Institue for Sex Research at Indiana University, in Bloomington, 3.9 per cent of people in the United States have experienced incest. According to the United States census, that is equivalent to nine million people.

Of all the possible forms of incest, father - daughter relations is the most commonly reported and legally prosecuted form. In a typical case, the relationship occurs over an average span of three and a half years.

The relationship usually starts when the child is between the ages of 5 and 12. What can begin as a very close, affectionate relationship changes when the father begins stroking and fondling the child's genital area. Actual intercourse doesn't normally occur until after the child has reached puberty.

Studies differ in their findings on the occurance of alcoholism in association with incest. Many first experiences do occur when the father has been drinking and between 20 and 50 per cent of the offenders are alcoholics.

Other studies have concluded that there is not a high · incidence of mental illness or of criminal activity among incestuous fathers. The intelligence of these men also appears to be within the normal range.

Although there is no way to explain the behavior of these men, there appears to be a pattern in the life situations of families studied. Similarities usually include: 1. The absence of the mother due to death, separation, divorce or working schedules. 2. A social environment which tolerates incestuous behavior. 3. An isolated environment, either social or geographical.

Personalities of family members has also shown a definite pattern. Fathers show a dominant personality. Mothers tend to be passive and dependent, and the daughter who is victimized has usually assumed a "little mother" role.

These personality traits are also present in many families * where there is no incest.

Although father-daughter incest is the one people hear the most about, brother - sister incest is believed to be the most common. Many people view it as a harmless, learning

Although many incidents of brother - sister incest result from mutual consent, some are the result of an older brother forcing himself on a younger sister.

Researchers do not view this form of incest as harmless or normal. They have found that it tends to occur most in families where serious problems exist. Many of these families believe this is normal behavior for children.

Naturally not all forms of sexual contact among children can be considered incestuous. Researchers say the parents should use common sense in determining the extent of the contact.

Mother - son incest is the least reported form of family sexual contact. Little is known about it or its victims.

What happens to the victims of incest? Most of them suffer from guilt, choosing to blame themselves for what has happened to them. They find it hard to believe that they were the victims, even if they actively resisted. The recovery process is even harder for the victims who passively complied with advances from family members. Counseling groups are being formed all over the country to help both victims and offenders.

The Potter - Randall Child Welfare Program for incest treatment report reads: "Traditional treatment of incest has been destructive to the family. The criminal justice system either punished the offender by incarcerating him or dropped charges due to insufficient evidence, leaving the family in worse condition than before the disclosure. The victimized child feels abandoned and must face the hostile family alone. Removal of the child from the home is usually perceived by the child as banishment from the family. Foster care placements frequently do not work for these children due to their self - abusive behavior. Where criminal charges are brought against the offender, the family may be left with no income due to incarceration of In most communities, few services are available to the family following disclosure of incest.' Pampa has established a special counseling group for victims and offenders. Through the Department of Human Resources (DHR) and with the counseling services of Dave Brummett, a special open counseling group is held every Thursday evening at 7 p.m. in the DHR offices on Hobart Persons seeking help or guidance may call Dave Brummett at his private number, 665 - 7239. Dave will tell them, in confidence, about what resources are available.

Anyone who suspects an incident of incest is obligated to report it to the DHR. This can be done in the strictest confidence without revealing the identity of the informer.

hat to do if

Dave Brummett of the Top O' Texas Counseling Service is working with the Department of Human Resources in developing a counseling service for incest victims and offenders. He offers these suggestions. IF YOU ARE THE VICTIM

The victim should find someone they can trust and give them the information. Even if they are afraid of the consequences, if they can find someone they trust then this person will keep it confidential and obtain help for them

The next thing to do is bring it to the attention of the parents. If the victim does not trust the parents, the person they confide in can help them in approaching the

The most important thing is to obtain professional counseling. This will help them realize they aren't responsible for the problem.

When a person is victimized they should realize they aren't the person who set it up. The victim needs to know that he or she isn't valued simply for sex, but is an important person whose rights have been violated. This is what they can learn through special counseling.

If people will contact me, I will explain to them the law and how it will effect their family IF YOU ARE THE OFFENDER

The first thing an offender should do is admit it. As soon as they can admit they are doing something wrong then they can seek help.

They shouldn't wait to seek help because they become very afraid of the consequences. If help is sought immediately, chances are they won't have to suffer the traumas that they set themselves up for.

These people are normally confused, unhappy, disoriented and feel a lack of self - worth. The problems they have been having for some time have not been handled wisely and they feel this sense of inadequacy and think, 'Why not' IF YOU SUSPECT INCESTUOUS BEHAVIOR Whether they are family members or are outside the family realm, if anyone suspects incestuous behavior they should should bring it to the attention of the

If they are sure that incestuous behavior is taking place it should be reported, that's a state law.

Suggest that the family seek counseling immediately. That's one of the most important things to do

Mary's story

(Editor's Note: Mary's story is sadly not an unusual one. Statistics reveal that over 20 million Americans have been involved in incest.

Mary is not this woman's real name, of course, but she was raised in the Texas Panhandle and now lives in Pampa with her second husband and children. She is presently under the care of a counselor and wants to tell her story to help other people.)
It started when I was about 13 or 14 years old.

My father would come into my bedroom in the mornings when he was getting ready to go to work. My mother was there but she would sleep late every

I would act like I was asleep because I was so frightened of him. He wouldn't get in bed with me but he would just feel of me - all over.

One weekend my mother had to go out of town and leave me alone with my father for two days.

When night came he tried to get me to sleep in his bed

I wouldn't do it. I was so scared that night I slept behind my bed on the floor with my covers piled on top of That next morning when he got up to go to work, he told me that he had had a little too much to drink and not to mention what he said to my mother. He knew I was afraid that morning when he found where I was sleeping. I think it was then that he figured out that I knew what he was doing all this time while he thought I was asleep. I knew that it wasn't right — what he had been doing to

I'm not sure why I knew it wasn't right; my mother never really talked to me about sex or anything. We

I guess it was from all the things I had heard and by talking to my girlfriends.

One of the things that really bothered me was that my girl friends didn't like to spend the night with me because my father would chase them around the house trying to tickle them and play with them. I did have one friend who was very close who had no father living at home. I told her what was happening to

She was very sympathetic about it. She and I are still I do remember that my parents weren't getting along

My little sister was only six or seven years old at the time and I began to worry about what he might do to her.

We shared a bedroom and slept in bunk beds. I finally told my mother what had been going on after she had left for the weekend.

At first she asked me if I was sure. It wasn't long after that until she and my father got a divorce. I don't know if she divorced him because of what he had been doing to me or if that was just the straw that broke the camel's back. My father remarried later to a woman with two little girls. The first thing I did was tell her about what my father had done to me so that she could prevent it from happening to her children.

My father did say things to his oldest step - daughter like, 'Chicken, I know that you do things.' Her mother told her that if he ever approached her to

As far as I know he never did do anything to her.

I didn't date much when I was in high school.

I did marry when I was 16 years old It started all over again when my first husband and I got a divorce. He took off with my kids and took them to another state to live with he and his girlfriend.

Then he came back here and ran his girlfriend off. It was after his girlfriend was gone that he forced our little girl, who was only five years old, to have oral sex

She was afraid to tell me and ended up telling my mother.

At the time there was nothing legally that I could do about it, the laws wouldn't protect her. She had nightmares for about a year after she came back to live with me. She's nine years old now and it doesn't seem to bother

I hope it doesn't come back to haunt her.

For about the first two years of my married life I wasn't interested in sex. I just didn't want to have anything to do with it. Things are better now. I am married to a wonderful man and have terrific children.

I do find it very hard for me to be close to my children My father never apologized to me.

My father is very bitter towards me. He was especially bitter right after he and my mother got a divorce. I still see him occasionally when I go to see my stepmother. If he is there when I go to see her I usually cut my visit short. If I stay, we usually end up in an argument. The best thing is that I'm not afraid of him anymore.

The main thing that I want to try to do is to help prevent this from happening to other children.

Children should know that their bodies are private and that no one has the right to touch them.

It's also very important that they tell someone. They should never keep it to themselves. The problem will not go away by itself.

Children should not act like they don't know what's going on. If they know it's wrong, say so.
I can't change what happened to me, but I can say that.

all parents should talk to their children and stress to them that their bodies belong to them and that no one has the right to violate their bodies.

How to plan the perfect wedding

Beautiful weddings don't just happen — they take months and months of careful planning! Here are some guidelines for getting it all together as efficiently as possible: At least four months beforehand, visit your clergyman and set the date and place for the ceremony. Make your plans at this time for the reception as well, including music for the Choose your attendants and draw up the invitation lists.

Select your gown and accessories, plus your bridesmaids' dresses; consult a men's formal - wear expert with your Now is also the time to decide who will be taking your wedding photographs, and to make arrangements with a Three months prior to your wedding, order your invitations plus any other stationery you will be needing. This is also the time to make an appointment with your doctor and arrange for your blood test. After these details are taken care of, enjoy planning your honeymoon and shopping for your trouseau! Two months before - hand, address your invitations and go shopping for the wedding ring. Choose your attendants' gifts and see about that all-important marriage license. A month before the wedding, you should have final fittings on your gown and your bridesmaids' gowns, and your invitations should be mailed at this time. If you plan on having a rehearsal dinner, now's the time to make the arrangements. You can also have your formal wedding portrait taken now. And, don't forget to get a gift for your groom! If you plan on sending an announcement to your local paper, do so two weeks before the wedding. One week before the wedding you should finalize plans for

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - I have a new heavy-duty electric mixer which is supposed to be capable of kneading bread dough. But whenever I mix a heavy dough, it climbs up the beaters, all the way to the bottom of the motor housing. This means I have to stop the machine repeatedly to scrape down the dough. It would be faster to do the whole thing by hand! Is there any way to solve this problem? - PEARL

Consultation and a second and a second as a second

DEAR PEARL — I know all too well how frustrating this situation is. You've just acquired a machine that's supposed to be making life easier — but it's proving to be just the reverse! A common solution for "batter creep" is to mix a thinner batter initially, beating it for several minutes with the electric mixer, then finish it off by hand, adding flour as you knead until the dough reaches the right consistency. The initial beating will develop the flour's gluten sufficiently so that the final, by-hand kneading will go very quickly.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY — Since it's vacation time again, I'd like to share my travel "emergency check list" with you.

Make a list of names of those traveling in the car. Include ages, special medications and our destination. I place a copy of this in the glove compartment, each suitcase, my purse, everyone's wallets, even the diaper bag.

Parents, be sure to have a written and signed medical permission sheet giving a specific, trusted friend or relative the power to authorize medical attention for your children. This is important if you and your husband should become unconscious or incoherent in an accident. Be sure to list the person's name, address and phone numbers, and be sure that he or she is aware of the duty that they might have to perform. There is no special form needed. Just write out something like: "We, Mr. & Mrs. John Doe, give our permission to Mr. or Mrs. Joe Smith, to attend to the medical attention of our children listed below." Remember, it must be signed. - A CONCERNED MOTHER

At breakfast the other morning all I said was, "How come you don't know our college shoool

My husband put down the paper and said "What school song?'

"The one you never sing when we go back for reunions. I think it's disgusting that a man with three college degrees sits there and moves his lips like a chimpanzee.'

"I get so few requests for it anymore." he said. going back to his paper. "What's so hard about:

'Through mountains and through hillsides. Through medows and through dell,

'In busy marts an hamelts,

'Where songs their sories tell'?"

He said, "The words arent' relevant. Who ever heard of meadows, dells, marts and hamelts?"

"Those are romantic words," I snapped. "Be honest, what do you think of when you think of meadows, dells, marts and hamelts?'

He thought a minute. "Jayne, Ictesen, Fed and Hamburger.

"You're pretty cute, aren't you?" I said. "Someone went to a lot of trouble to give you a class song that painted a musical picture of tranquility and you can't even relate to it. I suppose you'd like a few 'whoa, whoas,' and 'baby, baby, babys.' ''

"Look, I don't like to sing. I don't even sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner' when it's played."
"And why not, Mr. American?"

"Every time it get to the rockets' red glare, I get a pain shooting down the inside of my left leg.'

"And to think men have died for that flag and you complain about a little pain on the inside of your left leg. But then, what do you expect from a man who refuses to sing in church?"

"Beverly Sills couldn't sing those songs." "Beverly Sills would certainly try!"

He put down the paper again. "Let me guess. You're in a rotten mood. You're picking arguments out of thin air. You have a dental appointment,

Glad the new motel is getting started. Good that personable Jack and Doris Jones, along with attractive Craig and Debbie Jones, will be increasing our town's supply of rooms. Conventions, tournaments, etc. will be happy about it. So will all of us who often have more visiting guests than our houses

Picked up so much information about the marvelous reunion of the P. H. S. Class of 1956 that I may have to defer some of it until next week. This was surely one of the most enthusiastic, and perhaps the best attended, of any of the get - togethers of

They met in the high school cafeteria on Saturday morning, July 3, and made a big day of it. Got their name tags first and, according to one member, took right up where they had left off 26 years before. Somebody said, "What a reunion it was, filled with laughter and remembrances and memories in Gratitude was given to the core committee, who tracked down all but three of their classmates and completed a directory for each class member. This committe consisted of Nancy Coley Wilson, Mary Janie Silcott Lewis, Jane Brown Langford, Barbara McNeill Shaw, Betty Turnbo Marak, Barabara Matthews Smith, Glenda Weeks Malone, Charlene Koenig Cox and Jerrie Shelton Clark.

A poignant moment came when olassmates read the lovely memorial tribute paid to deceased members Jackie Becker, Donald Cox, Henry Lee Ledrick III, Roger McWaters, Norita Sasser Culberson, Kent Upton and Richard White.

The registration; breakfast; group picture; business meeting was the highlight of the morning. Duggan Smith presented buttons proclaiming, "I love Pampa '56". The most changed graduate was voted to be Loy Studebaker. Some of the former teachers and administrators who attended the festivities were Jack Nichols, Cameron Marsh, Elizabeth Hurley, Elaine Ledbetter, Nova Mayo, Mary Jean Dozier, Mrjorie Gaut, Mrs. E. L. Norman, Inez Club, Mrs. Roy Kilgore and Hazel Poole.

The afternoon picnic in Central Park included family members - spouses, children and grandchildren. Carol Henry Halley's mother, Ann Henry, was in the hospital and several of Carol's special friends visited Ann, including Mary Young Stull, Cynthia Cantrell, Russel Ingle, Anita Wedgeworth Pickle, Dixie Sue Rhoades Clay and Sheila Chisholm Hood, Of this group, Mary and her husband were found to have the youngest baby - Karen, ten months old.

Evening was spent at Pamcel Hall with a catered barbecue for 160. (Must have included friends and relatives - but can any other class claim this large a crowd for a reunion dinner?) David Gantz, class president in 1956, was Master of Ceremonies. Understand he had a little trouble reading his script - and that Dr. John Jones, opthalmologist, told David if he would put his script on the floor, he would do just fine. A trip "Down Memory Lane" recalled highlights of the sophomore, junior and senior years spent at Pampa High.

Many awards were announced. Lawanda Andrews had the youngest - looking face. Tomy Rhoten was voted the most filled - out figure. Kenneth Gorman was "sugar - daddy" Jackie Edwards had the most children and Sandra Cooper Lake had the most grandchildren. Jerome Weinheimer had the shiniest hairline.

Hearty applause went to Nelda Swain and her husband when she announced they had helped to rear 30 foster children. Jim Enlow kept the class in hysterics with his spontaneous humor During the musical part of the evening Dr. Joan Robertson Cross's services as a psychologist were playfully sought.

After the evening program, several of the group went dancing. The last - night observation was, "We haven't changed a bit!" And the joyous reunion ended with the query,

'Do you know how old we'll be in 1991, when we meet again?' Have heard several people trying to remember who the classmates of 1956 all were. I have the list and will give it here next week if I hear anybody saying it would be appreciated. It's always fun to remember when the absent ones lived here, who they were, what they did, who their folks were, etc. See you in a week. PAM.

Am I handling the situation right? A CARING MOM

DEAR MOM: No. You are using your position of authority to "punish" the boy because you're angry with him for defying you. I know you mean well, flom, but no boy ever died of blackheads. Lay off. And one of these days when he wants the bestlooking face he can get, he'll clean up his act. And his

DEAR ABBY: I've read you for years, but this is my first letter to you because I don't know where to turn. Lately when my husband and I go shopping together in a big store or a shopping mall, he "hides" from me and I have to go looking for him. When I can't find him, I panic and get almost hysterical, then he comes out of hiding, laughing like was some kind of joke.

Do you think this is all in fun? It really upsets me, and I end up nervous, shaking and in tears. We have been married for 40 years and he has never been cruel or mean to me before, but lately he seems to take pleasure in upsetting me. Could something be wrong with him?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Yes. First tell him lovingly but firmly that his "hiding" stunt upsets you terribly and to please never do it again. Then if he repeats it, get him to his physician for a thorough physical checkup. A sudden change of behavior such as you have described could be symptomatic of a physical and/or mental problem. Sometimes that which appears to be meanness" is illness.

DEAR ABBY: My live-in boyfriend is a very kind and gentle-natured person. He is always well-groomed and wellressed. He is also a very private person.

After two years of a very intimate relationship, I am certain that he wears a toupee. (He's 27.) He has never told me, and I would never ask him outright, but he has never let me touch his hair.

His hairpiece is getting pretty scruffy around the edges and I think he needs a new one. I'm afraid if something isn't done about it soon someone else will notice it and mention it, which would embarrass him no end. Have you any ideas on how I can get him to replace it without confronting him? Perhaps if you print this he will see it and get the message without losing face.

HIS LIVE-IN LADY

DEAR LADY: Take no chances. Play it straight. Say, "Darling, your hair is looking a little scruffy. I think it's time for you to see your barber.'

IZABEL LAM "A SEASON OF ATTITUDE AND OPTION'

The focal point of the IZABEL LAM fall collection for 1982 is "American Style" American style that not only describes the clothes, but the way they are worn, and the women who wear them. Izabel understands that more is expected now of clothes than "fashion statements." Hers is not fashion that succeeds or fails on the length of a hemline or the width of a shoulder - it succeeds because it gives a woman what is needed and in the most attractive way possible. She knows the needs of her customers - what is going to work, and what is not.

Within the IZABEL LAM fall collection are clothes with character - STRONG, BOLD, CASUAL! From earth-toned plaids to Venetian-paisley prints to soft touches of angora.

IZABEL LAM'S fall statement could easily be summed up as, "Dressed, but relaxed. Casual is the base, yet within that framework is option and contrast. A style which keeps on going with an accent on ease.

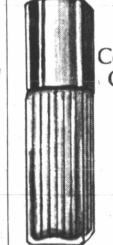

Overall, the look is soft, uncomplicated, casual - but everything has strength and character! ASSERTIVE SWEATERS...KEY COVERINGS...TEXTURE BALANCE AND DASH...COLOR IMPACT...Clothes that give more options and "prove out" in the way American Style lives.

Izabel Lam's special New York Envoy, Ellen Zornberg, will be here to assist you.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB About three years ago my husband had a severe depression. We took him to a well-known doctor in a psyehiatric clinic. He was given 14 electro-convulsive treatments (ECT) and placed on medicine. He got along very well and seemed to be in very good health. Recently the depression has returned and he is in the hospital again. They plan to give him three more ECTs.

He is 66 years old. He did drink some until he got sick. He has not drunk a drop of alcohol since, during the past three-and-a-half years.

And there may be associated inherited tendencies. Just how environmental stress, inherited tendencies and brain chemistry work together is still under research. Mending Mature Marriage Dealing with allergies

"Dear Louise: My problem is eating at other people's houses. T and I are retired and love all our friends, especially the ten couples of us that spend a lot of time together. But my diet is always spoiling my pleasure.

"I'm allergic to almost everything you can name. Every time I get off the diet my doctor gave me, my head stops up and I sneeze and cough awful bad. The hostess always fusses over me and apologizes for not remembering I can't have pork and chocolate and most of the other things she's cooked up. It puts a damper on everybody's fun.

"I tried not eating at all but then they all thought I was sick and started dosing me and telling me what pills to take and all. "T is awful upset about me spoiling our friends' good times as well as our own. If we stay overnight at somebody's house and I've eaten stuff that upsets me, I cough and sneeze all night. It keeps everybody in the house awake.

I remember reading in your column that you have allergies. How do you manage not to upset hostesses and other guests when you're invited to friends' houses? N. W.

DEAR N. M.: I do my best to keep my allergies from bothering other people. I take very small portions of everything and don't eat the things I know will cause me trouble. I cut food into bites and sort of "play" with it, pretending to eat but avoiding whatever I need to.

Hostesses and other guests don't seem to notice. And I don't leave hungry because there is always something, at least bread and butter, that will satisfy me.

I have found that people who aren't allergic sometimes think we are imagining our ailments, so I seldom mention mine. Also, my years of pills and shots and check - ups by my allergist have greatly lessened my problems.

As for overnight visits, I try to stay only with close friends who love me in spite of my sniffles. And sticking to my diet usually avoids that problem anyway. If I'm invited to stay overnight with casual acquaintancs, I decline politely and stay at a motel.

"DEAR LOUISE: I'm not sure this is a marriage problem but it's a family annoyance, causing trouble for three generations of us.

'My mother died at 85 and left my father alone at 90. He had plenty to live on but doctors said he shouldn't live alone because his health wasn't good.

"I couldn't take him in because we have just one bedroom. But my sister has a big house and said she and her husband and son would take him if he paid her room and board.

"She did. And he paid her a fortune. But you can't believe how mean they've been to him. If they have company, they make him stay in his room and eat left - overs. They won't let him take part in conversations but say shut up every time he

"But the worst thing they do is abuse him. I cried when I was over there one day and my sister's husband shoved Daddy toward a chair. He missed the chair and fell on the floor. I was the only one who helped him up.

"They hurt him other ways too, I'm sure. He's got black and blue marks on his face and arms.

"Surely other readers worry about their old folks baing treated bad. Are there many people like that? What can be

DEAR M. F.: According to Congressional investigations. about 1,000,000 elderly Americans, close to one of every five, are abused by their relatives. Often the elderly do not want to bring trouble to their children or they are afraid of reprisals if they complain, especially to people who may visit them and spread the But you, M. F. know what your father is going through. Get him out of your sister's house as soon as possible. You say he has money, so he should be able to afford a good retirement home where he would have good care, find congenial companionship and avoid further mistreatment If your sister resists your moving Grandpa from her home.

which she might do because she could want to continue getting his room - and - board money, stand your ground. Resort to the law if you have to. Most states have laws against abuse of the elderly. This shameful treatment of older relatives is only slightly less prevalent than child abuse

When your father is safely in the care of people who will be kind to him, be on guard for your own health. Don't let anyone abuse you when you are 90 - and you may reach that age. There are over 11,000 Americans who are over 100 years old today. Centenarians deserve special kindness and respect.

Food caution

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

Food safety is always of great concern to those of us associated with food and nutrition education. With government controls and tests it is apparent that food safety is important on a national level as well.

There are several issues reagarding food safety of which consumers should be aware.

BABY FOOD IN THE MICROWAVE

Most varieties of baby foods can be heated in the microwave, but there are some which should not. The following baby foods should not be heated in a microwave: plain meats and poultry, high meat dinners, egg yolks, meat and poultry sticks. There should be a reminder on the label of these foods. Microwave heating of these products results in uneven heating that could cause them to explode. Droplets of water in the products heat faster by microwaves than the dense protein and fat particles. Some companies do not recommend heating any type of baby food in a microwave.

If a consumer wants to use their microwave to heat baby food, the following procedure should be used: remove the cap from the jar before heating. Place the opened jar on a plate and put into oven. Start heating at the lowest level of heat and test frequently until the food reaches feeding temperature.

Avoid overheating. METAL FROM COOKWARE

Does metal from cookware ever get into our food in dangerous amounts? In general, the FDA considers food prepared in copper, aluminum, iron, stainless steel, glass and pottery to be safe. Consumers have raised questions about the safety of cooking utensils made of aluminum, copper, and pottery coated with lead glaze. Under normal conditions the total amount of aluminum added to the food from cookware is relatively small. However, prolonged retention in aluminum cookware is relatively small. However, prolonged retention in aluminum cookware (from five to six hours to several days) of certain highly acidic foods such as tomato sauce, sauerkraut and carbonated drinks may cause more aluminum than usual to enter the food. Cooking food in aluminum is safe, but it is better not to store food in aluminum.

Copper is a desirable metal for cookware because it is an excellent heat conductor and has a nice appearance. Most copper cookware is lined with time and presents no problem of copper migration into food, although the pan must be relined when the tin starts wearing thin. Using unlined copper utensils for cooking or storing food may be harmful. Copper migrates to any food with which it comes in contact, especially those high in acid. The FDA recommends that consumers use only thin - lined copper cooking utensils for cooking or storing food. COOKING FRESH PORK

The United States Department of Agriculture is now extending to all rapid cooking methods the temperature safety warning that fresh pork be cooked to a consistent temperature of 170 F. throughout the meat to destroy trichinae organisms that on rare occasions may be present. Consumers are encouraged to cook fresh pork by a method other than microwaving until USDA studies and those from the microwave industry are completed.

FAD DIET WARNINGS

A popular fad diet in the Gray county area is a low calorie diet including powdered instant mix formulas and premixed liquid preparation. This type of diet poses a significant health hazard to dieters not under continuous and immediate medical supervision by a physician knowledgeable in the metabolism and nutrition of such diets. This type of diet provides only 75 percent of recommended protein intake. Diets of this type have caused cardiac irregularities due to electrolyte imbalances. Anyone in a restricted diet below 1200 calories should be under supervision of a physician or registered Sound off on page 4

Children in intact families saw their fathers as higher in psychological control than did children in divorced families. Children in both sets of families saw their mothers as relatively low on psychological control.

Mrs. Teleki found differences in discipline were related to children's perception of fathers. Divorced fathers were seen as less firm in discipline than married fathers

Children saw both divorced and married mothers as relatively firm in discipline.

Mothers in divorced families reported themselves less firm in discipline than did mothers in married families. In other aspects of the study, mothers in both types of families gave similar reports of acceptance and psychological control.

Mrs. Teleki's study is part of a larger research project in the OSU Family Study Center dealing with the management of relationships and resources of one-parent and two-parent

Prior to her doctoral studies, Mrs. Teleki taught child development courses at the University of Oklahoma, in Norman. She is now assistant professor and chairperson of the department of child development and family relations at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. She and her husband are parents of a girl, 13, and a boy, 10.

Mrs. Teleki selected parental behavior for her research because at least a third of the children born in the 1970s and growing up in the '80s are expected to experience the divorce of their parents, she said.

"The child's perception of the parent's behavior is more related to the child's behavior and adjustment than is the actual behavior of that parent," she said.

Findings of her study are contrary to some past research in that she found no differences in acceptance in both sets of

By MARY CAMPBELL

AP Newsfeatures Writer Toto had a big hit from its first album, "Toto," which was "Hold the Line." That was January 1979. Now it has a big hit from its fourth album, "IV," which is "Rosanna."

'Rosanna'' was No. 3 and climbing on the best-selling chart of June 26. The album was No. 9 and climbing on that

David Paich, keyboard player of the six-man group, says, "This is a bigger hit. Hold the Line' only got to No. 5. But we're in a different time slot now. It's a slower record mar-ket and actually No. 5 then was representative of more sales than No. 3 is at this point."

There have been two albums in between, "Hydra" and "Turn Back." "Toto" was a platinum album and "Hydra" was gold. All four are on Columbia Records.

And members of Toto have played on a lot of record sessions. Paich grew up around recording studios. He says, "My father was a successful arranger on the West Coast. He did jazz arrangements in the 50s. Then he started getting into rock 'n' roll. He did most of Ray Charles' arrangements in the early '60s. He did a lot of pop arranging. He'd finish working on Carly Simon's album and work with Kenny Loggins. Through him I was around, watching sessions and the best sessions players since Frank Sinatra still gives Marty Paich credit from the stage when he sings a song using one of his arrangements. The elder Paich also arranged for Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan and Peggy Lee, among others.

Toto was formed as a band, Paich says, "to duplicate the Beatles concept in theory. We have a lot of talent in the band. Everybody's a writer. When each one is playing on somebody's song, he's identifying and conceptualizing it, instead of just worrying about his own instrument's part."
Singer Bobby Kimball says.

"I've been in the studio with other groups trying to cut their basic tracks. Some of them drill the nail too far. They burn themselves out on the feel of the tune trying to get it played right. These guys can play something through once or twice and they're going to be playing it the best they're ever going to play it. These guys have their technique built in."

Critics haven't loved them, by and large, Paich says. "Session players aren't supposed to be rock 'n' roll players. They think we formed in the studio as a money-making venture. We actually were formed as a band before we became sessions players.

"And we play on some kinds of music that aren't New Wave. They think we couldn't possibly be hip if we played behind

Sometimes they've received from Steely Dan, Boz Scaggs ally they haven't, Paich says. They don't care.

He says, "They'll sometimes our own private little joke." The group will tour in America in July and August.

Time to work on other people's records is less now that Toto has a hit single. Drummer Jeff Porcaro and guitarist Steve Lukather do them the most, Paich says. Lukather also co-wrote George Benson's hit single, "Turn Your -Love Around.'

He and keyboard player Steve Porcaro usually turn down session offers, Paich says, working to duplicate Toto's records for live performances. "We occasionally do something for Quincy Jones. Michael Jackson and Paul McCartney did a duet record for Quincy. I'm not going to say I don't have time to meet Paul McCartney. He is asking me to kick off a tune he wrote. I'm not going to say I'm too busy to do that."

Mike Porcaro, brother of two members of Toto, replaced David Hungate on 'IV" album.

Today's market is having a healthy as well as detrimental effect on groups, Paich believes. He says, "Buyers aren't patronizing anybody because they've had great records in the past. You have to keep up with great records. No one is on the charts because of who they are. That's healthy. It makes everybody constantly keep up on their toes and keep changing.

Some change isn't for the good, though. Some groups he had liked have lost confidence and changed - not for the better - Paich says.

Toto's second album, "Hydra," had one hit, "99," a soft pop tune with a rhythm 'n' blues feel. Paich says, "We thought we established our hit album. Now we wanted to stretch out and not be-conservative. We thought we were making a very commercial album. And we meant to show the audiences we were taking chances, which is why we formed the band.

The third album was an attempt to make music that. when performed live, would have greater impact. I knew it when I was writing it. I was writing songs that were easier to perform live and would come across in large places better. They weren't so subtle.

Kimball savs. "Why didn't you tell us? We didn't know Paich continues, "The songs off the third album do come across live the best of our stuff to date. They're more straight-ahead rock 'n' roll. It's hard to send off-the-wall stuff to the back rows.

"But the third album only sold 900,000 worldwide. That's a lot of people. But it's not considered a lot in the business today. We almost got booted off the label. You've almost got to make a gold record these days just to be allowed to make an-

It's Greek to William Christopher of M-A-S-H

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Christopher can read Homer's classic legends in the original Greek text, but it's doubtful if he could order a bottle of ouzo in the native tongue. Christopher, currently touring Athens, Delphi and Peloponnesus, is a student of ancient Greece.

But Christopher, who plays Father John Mulcahy on 'M-A-S-H," can't speak a word of the modern language. "It seems that everybody in 'M-A-S-H' has been going to Greece," he said. "Jamie Farr just got back and he said I should have been there with him. I told him I only speak ancient Greek. He said, 'Good, you can talk to the gods.

Christopher is one of the few actors in the hit CBS series who's been with it since the beginning in 1972. The only others are Alan Alda and Loretta Swit.

Each year my role has gotten bigger," he says. "I always felt I was a part of the show and I felt very much a part of it. We all do our special thing. That's why 'M-A-S-H' has worked so well. We have wonderful writers writing wonderful things for us. Father Mulcahy often wrestles with his feeling of inadequacy and finds ways to be of more service.

Christoper says the character is a serious one but there's still a lot of humor in Father Mulcahy.

He studied ancient Greece for a year at Wesleyan University and has pursued it ever since. His own production company is called Iliad Productions.

"M-A-S-H" is Christopher's second series. He was in uniform for the first one. He was a semi-regular for three years on "Gomer Pyle, USMC." He has been a guest on many other series, and was in movies including "The Fortune Cookie," "With Six You Get Eggroll," "The Shakiest Gun in the West" and "Hearts of the West."

The upcoming season will be the final one for the celebrated series. It will wind up with a a two-hour show, or four half-hour shows, in which the Korean War ends and all the denizens of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital head home.

Helen Mirren is a Shakespearean moll

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) -The English don't like to admit it, but they keep copying us. They have adopted our hamburgers, our slang, our dress habits — and now, lo and behold, the English have made themselves a gangster movie.

It's called "The Long

like a gun moll.

She doesn't call the film a gangster movie. She says it is a "duck and dive" movie, meaning that it involves a class of people the proper Londoner calls "duck and dive" - their terminology for street people. Helen Mirren is hardly duck and dive herself. She is a good-looking blonde who is fighting hard to avoid being typed as a Shakespearean actress. That's one big reason why she plays Victoria in "The Long Good Friday."

"If you're typed as a Shakespearean anything in England today," she says, "it's goodbye, because that has become almost a cultur-al backwater." You may remember Hel-

Paraplegic climbers crawl to top of Texas

PARK, Texas (AP) - Three paraplegic mountaineers, sore and blistered from a five-day climb up a rugged. twisting trail, triumphantly doused themselves with champagne as they reached the highest point in Texas.

wheelchair-bound climbers set out to scale Guadalupe Peak, but only three completed the trek Friday. They endured torrid heat and crossed treacherous ledges on a rocky path lined with cactus and mesquite to crawl the last few hundred yards to the 8,751-foot summit.

"If you've ever done anything unimaginable, this is twice that," climber Dave Kiley said by radio from the Park Superintendent Bill Dunmire said the men "whooped it up on the top" and doused themselves with champagne as they watched "a great sunset from the summit.'

He said Kiley, 29, of Los Angeles, Donnie Rogers, 26, and Joe Moss, 32, both of Dallas, camped just beneath the summit Friday night and would come down today wheelchairs with pneumatic buttocks, received when they aboard an Army helicopter.

"It took me five days to get to the top of the mountain; now I can do anything I want the rest of my life," Rogers said via radio.

The men pushed their way up the mountain in special tires - "almost like snow tires" - that gripped the gravel horse trail, said Dunmire. Each climber carried his own tool kit, camping gear and food. All three had sores and blisters on their hands and dismounted and dragged their chairs across rocky Kiley led as the group neared the top, but waited until the others caught up. They touched a monument on

Soviet spy ship lies in wait

Columbia (AP) - A Soviet spy ship bristling with antennas is lurking off the Northwest coast, possibly waiting for the arrival of America's first Trident submarine, Canadian officials say.

"As you well know, your first Trident will be in our area very soon, and it (the ship's presence) could well be tied to that," said Rear Adm. Gordon Edwards. commander of Canada's Maritime Forces Pacific. 'But maybe it's a long-scheduled job for them or maybe just a coincidence, it's hard to say."

U.S. Navy forces in the western Pacific had tracked the 2.600-ton Aavril Sarychev entered the Canadian surveillance area Wednesday morning, Edwards said in a telephone interview Friday 'At the moment it looks like he's arrived in his area of operations and he's going to stay there and do whatever he's going to do," he said. The Soviet vessel carries a crew of 50 and is equipped spokesmen said. U.S. Navy spokesmen in both Seattle and Washington, D.C., confirmed the presence of a Soviet intelligence vessel off the coast of Washington state, but declined further comment.

for "quite a while" before it west-southwest of the entrance to the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which separates Canada's Vancouver Island from Washington state's Olympic Peninsula. The ship's position is just outside Canadian territorial waters, which extend 12 miles offshore, Edwards said.

> The USS Ohio, the first of the Trident subs, which carry nuclear missiles, is supposed to pass through the strait later this summer en route to a new base near Bangor, Wash., on Hood Canal, where the Navy eventually plans to hase 10 Tridents

Prisoners finding a full house at Texas's Iron Door Motel

By KATHY BAKER Associated Press Writer

Prosecutors offered the accused a 10-year sentence if he would plead guilty to the robbery charge. But he was a first-timer and thought he could do better than that. He demanded a jury of his peers. He got one.

They sentenced him to 50 years in prison.

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes offers. that case as just one example of a changing psychology among Texans that is "to serve," he said. "Used to creating a population boom in Texas prisons — so serious, the Texas Department of Corrections was forced to hang out a "No Vacancy" sign this spring. He and others say that meaner criminals and for the prison population crisis, even more so than the commonly blamed factors of jobless migrants coming into the state spurring a crime

Texas criminals are getting meaner and fed-up citizens are fighting back the only way they know how - by handing out longer prison sentences and giving hard time more often, even to first-time offenders.

TDC officials predict that an already overburdened prison system will net 500 new inmates each month for the foreseeable future.

Criminal justice experts agree the criminal caseload is up, forcing them to send more offenders into a penal system that cannot handle any more prisoners. But they also agree that the psychology of both criminals and the communities they offend is changing, out of sync with increases in crime or population.

box ly When sugh"

Texas' crime rate rose 2.5 percent from 1980 to 1981. Violent crimes rose about 2 percent. But Texas' prison population more than doubled that percentage over the same period, about 5.4

The population as a whole has paced the crime rate, so the prison population has grown at about double that figure as well.

The number of inmates continued upward during the first half of 1982. In June, there were 33.097 prisoners in the Texas Department of

"There has been an increase in the criminal caseload, but that's not the reason for the increase in the population at the penitentiary, in my opinion," said Holmes. "I think people are fed up with criminality, and it's being reflected in what they do sitting as jurors.

"Time and time again people sitting in those boxes are reflecting in their verdicts and sentences the attitude of the public in general. It's no longer 'turn the other cheek, this is just a poor boy gone bad. Let's give this guy some professional

"The public has seen we've tried that. We don't put our money where our mouth is to fund those types of programs adequately to do any good. They're frustrated with it. and they say, 'Well, dammit, at least if we throw away the key, they're not going to be out there hitting us again." Across the state in El Paso. Assistant District Attorney Bill Moody sees the same thing happening:

"We are seeing a trend of less probation and more time be in this city 20 years was considered a long sentence on a murder case. Now we're getting 50 years on the average.

The crime rate does affect sentencing. More of those sitting in judgment have been directly affected by crime, or know someone who has. Their lawlessness may be out of proportion to the hard numbers, but it is causing them to "throw the book" at offenders.

"In the past, except for very heinous crimes, they almost always gave probation, but that's not the case now." said State District Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville. "They or one of their neighbors has had their car stolen or had their house burglarized. They are righteously indignant. You see it in voir dire. The lawyers will ask if anyone has had any experience with burglarly or the like and the hands go up all over the place. The majority of criminal cases are tried before judges. not juries. Most judges will say they mete justice without regard to the swing of public opinion, but they must mirror the prevailing community

"If I started deviating from what the jury would do," said Hester, "the lawyers would want to try all their cases before a jury."

"Recently, (State District Judge Sam) Callan gave these two guys life for murder," said Moody. "It was almost unheard of before that a judge would sentence people to life."

Texans did not suddenly get tough on crime. The latest prison overcrowding crisis is part of a long-time trend, not a just a result of 1980s economic woes triggering more crime, statistics show. The Legislature's House Study Group issued a 1979 report that showed Texas' "rate of imprisonment" in 1950 was 17 percent below the national average. It had jumped to 54 percent higher than the national average by

The report also found that between 1968 and 1978, Texas' population increased by 19 percent, while its prison population jumped a whopping 101 percent.
"A lot of the criminals here are transients," said defense attorney Joseph Calamia of El Paso. "The economy has a lot to do with it. They won't hesitate to pull feed themselves.

"I see more serious, violent crimes now, unfortunately. There are more of the senseless crimes where, say, a robber will kill a store clerk just to squeeze the trigger There's no reason for them.'

State District Judge Wallace Moore of Houston says economic factors combine with the pressures of big-city living to turn average Joes into criminals.

"(Crimes) are becoming more violent," Moore said. "The aggravated assault cases — aggravated robbery, one-on-one confrontations. Of course, burglaries are out of sight. But the crimes of violence - damn. With all the traffic we have down here. they just get out and shoot one another now over a fender-bender." The May special session of the Legislature gave extra funding to probation and parole officials.

But paroles have maintained a fairly steady level in the past, as have revocations, and an increased probation staff won't stop angry jurors from giving out

Legislators also gave the corrections department $55 million to build more units. gesture may have the an jit begins. But according to some, that effect opposite the one desired and expected.

Sociologists say prison expansion creates a "need" for more prisoners and actually contributes to prison overcrowding.

That sounds like a lot of 'hocus-pocus,' but University of Texas sociology professor Sheldon Olson says it is a sound organizational theory

In fact, he suggests, there is a mirror image to the theory, too, and prison overcrowding may force the whole sociological cycle to reverse itself and eliminate the Public Notices

an nome in Heaven, dear ones; Oh so happy and so bright. There is perfect joy and beauty In this everlasting light. All the pain and grief is over. Every restless tossing passed; I am now at peace forever Safely home in Heaven at last. Did you wonder I so calmly Trod the valley of the sahde? Oh, but Jesus love illumed Every dark and fearful glade. lumed Every dark and fearful glade. And he came himself to meet me In the way so hard to tread; and with Jesus' arm to lean on Could I have one doubt or dread? Then you must not grieve so sorely For I love you dearly still. Try to look beyond death's shadows. Pray to trust our Father's will. There is work still waiting for you so you must not idly stand. Do it now while life remaineth You shall rest in Jesus' land When You shall rest in Jesus' land. When that work is all completed. He will gently call you Home Oh, the rapture of that meeting!
