Victim of shooting

As firemen apply an oxygen mask, a medic feels the pulse of one of the victims of the shooting spree inside Paris' best-known Jewish restaurant Monday. A group of three or four men armed with automatic weapons killed at least six people and wounded about 15 others in a shooting spree in a Jewish neighborhood in central Paris. After shooting up the restaurant, the gunmen ran down the neighboring street as they fired into the crowd. (AP Laserphoto)

Gunmen kill six in Jewish restaurant

PARIS (AP) — At least three men with automatic weapons sprayed bullets at a lunchtime crowd at a popular Jewish restaurant today, killing at least six people and wounding 15 others, before escaping, police said.

The attackers opened fire shortly after 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EDT) near Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant on the Rue des Rosiers in central Paris, then ran down the street shooting wildly at passersby and escaped on foot down a side street, police and witnesses said.

Earlier unconfirmed reports said the gunmen opened fire near a synagogue. It was the fourth anti-Semitic attack in Paris in a week.

No group immediately claimed responsibility.

A left-wing anarchist group has claimed responsibility for earlier attacks, saying they were retaliations for Israel's 2-month-old invasion of Lebanon to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization.

It was unclear if the shooting started inside or near the restaurant. Witnesses said between two and four gunmen escaped and described them as "Mediterranean looking."

Pools of blood soaked the floor of the popular eatery and the sidewalk outside, and emergency medical teams erected a makeshift hospital across the street to treat the wounded. One of the dead was a plainclothes police officer, police said.

"Don't cry for me," wailed restaurant owner Jo Goldenberg, who was uninjured. "Cry for the others. It was horrible, horrible."

A witness told The Associated Press she was walking her dog when she heard gunfire and saw "two small thin men running into the street. They kept shooting as they ran, shooting at everything and everybody. I thought for sure I'd be killed."

After the shooting spree, police teams roamed the predominantly Jewish area and began clearing the neighborhood after receiving reports that bombs had been planted. The officers often encountered angry residents who said they have been threatened in the past.

"If you can't protect us, we'll protect ourselves!" screamed one heavyset man.

Others said anonymous telephone callers have threatened Goldenberg in the past, telling him there were bombs in his restaurant.

"I don't know if they ever found any," said one resident who said she lived across the street. "His restaurant is the best-known Jewish restaurant in Paris. If someone wanted to make an impact, this is where they'd hit."

Early Sunday, a bomb destroyed a Jewish-owned store but no one was wounded.

Commerce secretary says

Tax cut was a little too large

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige says last year's $350 billion tax cut was too big and that new revenues must now be raised to cut record federal deficits forecast for coming years.

"In the way the budget deficits came out this year, the mere fact that we're asking for a tax increase — part of that back — certainly implies that if we had to do this all over again we would have asked for less of a tax decrease last year," Baldrige said Sunday.

The secretary, interviewed on Cable

News Network's "Newsmaker-Sunday" program, made his observation in response to questions about criticism of the tax cut.

Baldrige's position appears to contradict that of President Reagan, who maintains that the current recession and budget problems are due in part to his failure to get an even larger tax cut from Congress last year.

Reagan, who postponed a California vacation to lobby Congress for a three-year, $100 billion tax increase, is now under attack from "supply-side" conservatives.

They oppose the tax increase on the grounds that it will only make the economy weaker and thus add to the budget deficit.

Baldrige rejected the supply-side contention that tax cuts fuel economic expansion and thus produce lower deficits.

"Unfortunately there are not enough people in the financial markets who believe" the supply-side argument that tax cuts take priority over budget deficits, he said. Rather, he added, the markets appear to believe that deficits now approaching $150 billion a year must be cut so that interest rates will come down.

"The president last year got through a $350 billion tax reduction over a three-year period — the largest in history," the secretary said. "The deficit got much higher than anyone had predicted in the meantime."

"So, we have to make some corrections now," he said. With a $100 billion tax increase, "instead of a $350 billion tax reduction for three years, we have a $250 billion. And I would submit that if we had started out with $250 billion, so that there was no change this year, there would have been the same joy and dancing in the streets and the same laudatory statements from the supply-side economists. It's still the largest tax decrease in history."

Mystery surrounds youth's injury

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

A 14-year-old Pampa boy, suffering from possible head injuries and cuts, was taken to Coronado Community Hospital about 1 a.m. Saturday, but no one today can explain what happened to the youth.

Shawn Davis, whose address is listed as Box 1712, Pampa, is listed in satisfactory condition today at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

The boy was transferred there after initial treatment for his injuries at Coronado Community Hospital.

An hospital spokesman said the boy was reportedly found dazed and injured near a Pampa underpass early Saturday morning.

The spokesman said the boy's bicycle was found undamaged near the underpass.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman is on vacation, and acting chief, Captain Roy Denman said today he knew nothing about the incident.

"I haven't seen anything on that," Denman said.

Richmond Davis, the child's father, brought the boy to the hospital, reports indicate.

Davis was unavailable for comment today at his place of employment, B & L Tank Trucks, where Davis is a trucker.

However, a spokesman for the company said "they don't know" about what happened to cause the child's injuries.

"They think he was hit by a car," he said.

The firm's spokesman said the child was found unconscious by a member of the "Calvary Baptist baseball team" near the underpass at Hobart Street and the Santa Fe Railroad tracks.

Hospital officials report the child remembered little of the incident after suffering a two-inch gash to the head.

The child reportedly lost a quantity of blood before he was discovered.

No report of the incident was listed today in a public summary of police activities, and police announced no investigation of a possible hit-and-run incident in connection with the boy's injuries.

Extra troops at Ankara airport

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The government assigned extra troops to Turkish airports and resort areas to protect them against a followup to the Armenian terrorist attack that killed nine people and wounded 71 at the Ankara airport.

Authorities feared Saturday's three-hour rampage of explosions and gunfire by Armenian nationalists was the first of a series of attacks in Turkey. The Secret Army for the liberation of Armenia claimed credit for the attack Saturday and said more bombings and killings would follow within seven days if 85 Armenians are not released from prisons in the United States, Canada and several Western European countries.

Armenian nationalists have been striking at Turkish targets abroad for the last nine years, but Saturday's attack was their first terrorist action within Turkish borders.

Turkish officials said extra troops were assigned to the international airports at Istanbul, the country's largest city, and Izmir, the second largest seaport after Istanbul. Reinforcements were also sent to resort areas on the Aegean coast where thousands of European and other foreign tourists spend their vacations at this time of the year.

The martial-law government, which took power in September 1980 following a wave of political violence by leftist and rightist groups, began an investigation to find out how the Armenians entered the airport.

Expensive fish dinner

SEATTLE (AP) — A 65-year-old man apparently has caught a million-dollar salmon, but he may wind up with nothing more than a fish dinner.

Joe Smith of Edmonds landed the salmon Saturday while fishing with his son, Ron, about a mile south of Whidbey Island. The fish had been tagged for the recent Schucks salmon derby in Puget Sound, and was worth $1 million if caught during the 12-hour derby.

No one caught the elusive fish in time, but derby sponsors promised $10,000 to any derby entrant who caught it before Oct. 31. If it was caught by a non-entrant, the prize would be $5,000, with another $5,000 given to the United Way.

But Smith may have unknowingly cleaned himself out of the money. He kept the tag, but cleaned the fish immediately and threw the head overboard — along with a second tiny identifying marker that officials implanted in the fish's head to avoid fraud.

"They'll look at the tag and make a decision next week, I guess," said Smith, who added that he won't be too upset if he doesn't get paid, "because it should make a pretty good meal."

Perryton man's body recovered from lake

The body of a 25-year-old Perryton man, who drowned at Lake Meredith Thursday morning, was pulled from the lake early Sunday morning.

Eddie Crawford was last seen alive shortly after the small boat from which he was fishing sank into the deep waters near Blue East Point.

A companion in the boat, Shane Arnold, also from Perryton, told authorities the men were fishing at night when the boat went under.

Arnold told investigators he swam to shore and thought Crawford was close behind.

Instead, Crawford had gone under, and his badly decomposed body was not recovered until early Sunday, when three people on a sailboat spotted the floating corpse about 1:30 a.m.

The best efforts of rangers and park officials failed to locate the body until the sighting by the boaters.

Dragging operations had begun just after Arnold reported the drowning to authorities.

Round-the-clock efforts to locate the victim were fruitless until the tip gave authorities a better location.

The location reported by the boaters about 2:30 a.m. Sunday was about two miles southwest of the spot where Crawford and the fishing boat went down.

The body was finally recovered around 7 a.m., but it was so badly decomposed from more than 72 hours in the warm, summer lake water, that an autopsy was required to make a positive identification.

Forensic pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Childress performed the autopsy in Borger, and using dental impressions, he confirmed Crawford's identity.

It is unknown how the fishing boat sank, resulting in the drowning, but Arnold reportedly told authorities the boat suddenly began taking on water.

Is Israel justified in invading Lebanon to get at the PLO?

Q and

A

Steven Greene, Cabot: "I can see why they're there. I can understand why they have to stop the PLO, either kill them or run them out. If they don't, the PLO'll be right back attacking them again in a few weeks."

Jim Moyer, independent pipeliner: "A friend that protects an enemy isn't much of an ally. I think Israel's 100 per cent justified. The PLO's been giving them hell for years, and they have to put a stop to it."

Lee Brookshire, pumper, Phillips Petroleum: "You can't blame Israel for what they're doing. The PLO has been attacking them and shelling them for years. They have to protect themselves."

Harvie Dunn, welder, Ingersoll-Rand: "I think if Israel makes a cease-fire, they ought to honor it. They have to do something about the PLO, that's true — but they ought to stop the shooting and give it a chance. See if they can't negotiate a settlement."

Warren Joiner, plant operator, Phillips: "I think they should do it. I'm against the PLO, and I think somebody ought to stop them. Since they've been attacking Israel, it makes sense for them to be the ones."

Beirut bombardment continuing

By The Associated Press
War-ravaged west Beirut shattered under yet another heavy bombardment today as Israeli and Palestinian gunners traded punishing salvos of artillery, tank, rocket and mortar fire. Israeli warplanes also bombed Palestinian artillery positions 19 miles east of the Lebanese capital.

The latest shelling came amid reports that Israel has agreed to a phased withdrawal of PLO fighters from west Beirut. But completion of an agreement was stalled by Syria's continued refusal to accept any guerrillas until Israel agrees to withdraw its army from Lebanon, and by nettlesome details about the timing of the withdrawal and the arrival of an international peacekeeping force.

Sporadic shelling overnight picked up intensity after dawn, driving residents back into basements and shelters after a brief weekend respite, during which the Israelis turned on the taps allowing water into west Beirut for the first time in two weeks.

In today's exchanges, witnesses said Israeli tanks fired massive barrages at PLO positions near the National Museum checkpoint on the Green Line, dividing Christian east Beirut from the Moslem western district. The guerrillas battled back with mortars and bazookas.

Associated Press correspondents Tom Baldwin and Samuel Koo, watching from a rooftop vantage point close to the museum line in Christian east Beirut, said there was no sign of an Israeli armor advance despite the intensity of the tank fire.

Blaming PLO fighters for sparking the latest exchange, Israel said its gunners fired at the guerrillas who launched katyusha rockets at Israeli forces near the city's race course. The Tel Aviv command also said its troops "consolidated" their positions around the PLO enclave at the Bourg al-Barajneh refugee camp on the southern edge of the city.

On the political front, Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed optimism Sunday that the Palestine Liberation Organization's forces "will leave soon and we will not have to enter Beirut."

Begin in a speech in Jerusalem said that up to 2,500 guerrillas could remain in west Beirut to protect the Palestinian civilians there until a multinational Western peacekeeping force is deployed. Previously Israel demanded that all the estimated 6,000 to 9,000 guerrillas leave before the peacekeepers from the United States, France, Italy and Greece came in.

Begin added that Israel would evict any guerrillas who refused to leave after the multinational force started moving in.

However, Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon denied a deal had been struck.

"There is no arrangement, agreement or deal possible at the moment," he told Radio Israel after meeting with U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib at his headquarters in the Baabda suburb of Beirut.

Sharon said the main problem was that Arab countries were not willing to give refuge to the bulk of the forces. "Since no state is ready to take them, there is no agreement, no arrangement," he said. He added: "The terrorists are on the verge of being rooted out of Beirut in one way or another."

Sharon said Israel also demanded guarantees that the deployment of the multinational force would not "serve as a screen behind which the terrorists could go on operating."

In Damascus, diplomatic sources who declined to be identified said the Syrian government would not consider accepting any PLO forces until it is assured Israel will withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

Lebanese and Palestinian sources claimed arrangements had in fact been made with various Arab countries to take in the guerrillas. Lebanese sources said the sticking point was the timing of the deployment of the force, that the PLO agreed to begin its withdrawal one day in advance of the arrival of the first contingents of the peacekeeping force, but Israel demanded that at least half the guerrillas leave before the first peacekeeping troops arrived.

PLO spokesman Jamil Hilal said Habib has worked out a plan under which most of the guerrillas would leave Beirut by road to Syria with a U.S. guarantee of safe passage through Israeli lines. Only those guerrillas who belong to Syrian-backed factions of the PLO would stay in Syria, he said.

Governors considering bypassing Reagan

AFTON, Okla. (AP) - The nation's governors are quietly debating the balanced budget amendment President Reagan wants and openly considering bypassing him with an appeal to Congress for the kind of "new federalism" they want.

The proposed constitutional amendment that would require a balanced federal budget is an election year embarrassment for many of the governors attending their annual convention.

But it was scheduled for discussion today during the governors-only work session where it could be argued freely behind closed doors without putting the body on record one way or the other on the issue.

Meanwhile, the group's executive committee approved a preliminary proposal calling for the governors draft a "new federalism" program of their own after failing in six months of negotiations to reach agreement with the White House.
Despite the National Governors' Association's reluctance to take a formal position on the balanced budget measure, its chairman, Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, was among those willing to express a personal opinion. "I think it's nonsense," Snelling said in an opening news conference on Sunday. "My own view is that you ought to have balanced budgets almost all the time, but I personally do not think it is a worthy idea to try to enshrine the call for a balanced budget in the Constitution. I think rather we should elect congressmen and senators who have the political guts to make those decisions necessary to have a balanced budget."

On the other hand, host Gov. George P. Nigh of Oklahoma said, "In Oklahoma it's required to have a balanced budget. I think it should be mandatory at the federal level."

Snelling said before today's the meeting there would be a discussion but no resolution.
Conference leaders otherwise agreed to keep the question off the public agenda and there were no signs of any maverick governor trying to force the issue onto the floor.

John Backe of the Lutheran Peace Fellowship in New York City gave a homily, and about 20 people outside the plant finished the hour-long Sunday morning prayer service by forming a circle and joining hands to sing, "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

"Instead of singing about our home in the sky, let's sing that we can have a better home on earth if we try," said Steve Schroeder, director of Northwest Texas Clergy and Ministry Center.

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Workshops and a prayer vigil outside the gates of the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant capped a weekend of protests here against nuclear arms.

As recipient of the humanitarian award here, Plumlee will be entered in competition for similar honors at the Hospital Corporation of America divisional level, and if successful there, will go on to compete for national honors.

Travis Plumlee receives hospital award

Travis Plumlee was presented with the Dr. Frist Humanitarian Award for 1983 by Coronado Community Hospital for service to the hospital, patients and community.

The award is the highest possible honor for an employee of the hospital. Hospital Administrator Norman Knox presented the award with a check for $250 at recent ceremonies.

Plumlee has served as Director of Social Services at Coronado for the past three years, building the department from its beginnings.

He is active in community affairs and has recently helped form an organization of social service workers to serve as a clearing house for area services.

Continuing his work toward a master's degree, Plumlee also teaches conversational Spanish at Clarendon College in Pampa.

The Pampa Senior Citizens has named Plumlee one of the Men of the Year this year for his special efforts in their behalf. As recipient of the humanitarian award here, Plumlee will be entered in competition for similar honors at the Hospital Corporation of America divisional level, and if successful there, will go on to compete for national honors.

Also honored at the reception were runners-up Dell Turk, a respiratory therapy worker, and Elizabeth Houdashell, head nurse for obstetrics.

Knox said the hospital had many outstanding nominees for the award, "with nominees from virtually every area."

The final selection was made by the Employee Activities Committee, a group with representation from every department and shift in the hospital.

Other nominees for the award were Maxine Bennett, Linda Crabtree, Brenda Dunn, Sumi Hayes, Judy Curry, Terry Hughes, Kathy Land, Judy Grimsley, Jimmie Hines, Kathy Woodard, Beth Doyle, Norma Baggerman, Pearl Robinson, Kay Braddock and Walt Johnson. Plumlee is a native of Amarillo, where he graduated from high school before attending the University of Texas at Arlington.

In college, he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in social work. He also attended Amarillo College and West Texas State University.

Plumlee has been elected to the board of the Texas Society for Hospital Social Work Directors, and has written an article on social work in a rural setting that was published by the THA magazine.

At a recent convention of the society, Plumlee won acclaim for the best educational booth at the convention.

He has also been recently elected to the board of the Society of Social Service Organizations and is president of the Toastmaster's Club of Pampa.

Plumlee and his wife Sharron have one daughter, Alison.

Hinckley in court to waive hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. is returning to court to tell a federal judge he will not "at this time" seek release from a hospital where doctors consider him mentally ill and dangerous.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker ordered Hinckley back into court today, although Hinckley has agreed in writing to waive a hearing on his release.

The last time he was in Parker's courtroom, Hinckley stood, tears streaking down his cheeks, while a jury found him innocent by reason of insanity of the March 30, 1981, shooting of Reagan and three other men. That verdict, seven weeks ago today, generated nationwide outrage and gave new vigor to a congressional drive to change the insanity law.

Hinckley, 27, faced life imprisonment if convicted on charges of attempting to assassinate the president and assaulting, with intent to kill, Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers.

Instead, as required under the law, he was sent to St. Elizabeths mental hospital in Washington for evaluation on June 21. The law entitled him to a hearing within 50 days to determine if he should remain institutionalized. It was that proceeding Parker scheduled for today.

Although Hinckley later stated he wouldn't seek release, prosecutors insisted he be advised in person of his right to a hearing and, possibly, a jury trial to determine his continuing commitment.

U.S. Attorney Stanley S. Harris explained in a letter to Parker he was concerned that unless all precautions were taken to safeguard Hinckley's rights, he could later return to court and claim he should be released because those rights were violated.

Even after today's hearing, Hinckley has the legal right to petition the court every six months for his release, with the determining issue to be whether he is mentally ill and dangerous to himself and others.

Congress tries to tighten medical deductions

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - As Congress struggles to raise taxes by $98.9 billion, some lawmakers are trying to tighten the medical deductions taken by millions of Americans - like the young man who wrote off the cost of a hair transplant.

Medical deductions are among dozens of tax questions and spending cuts under consideration by a House-Senate committee which hopes to finish work this week on a bill to increase taxes by $98.9 billion and cut spending by more than $16 billion.

But the number of unresolved issues far exceeds those that have been settled. One of those is the tax break for medical expenses.

Current law allows a person to deduct half - up to $150 - the cost of medical insurance, even if no other medical expenses are deducted. The other half of insurance costs and other medical expenses may be written off if they exceed 3 percent of adjusted gross income.

to write off his hair transplant. He won his case when the U.S. Tax Court ruled medical deductions are proper for any operation affecting any part of the body, including the scalp.

That case and others like it have been cited as examples of tax abuse by lawmakers searching for revenues to cut the federal deficit. In response, the Senate voted to allow the deduction only for expenses that exceed 7 percent of income, and reduced the off-the-top insurance deduction to $100.

Together, those two changes would bring the government about $4.5 billion over the next three years. But despite the need for revenue, the charges of abuse, and the pledge by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., conference chairman, to drop the 7 percent threshold to 5 percent, the negotiators have not yet reached agreement on the issue.

One reason could be that the deduction appeals to middle-income families, whose members traditionally vote in large numbers. The IRS said 18 million couples and individuals claimed the deduction in 1980, including 14.7 million with income under $50,000 a year.

The changes advocated by the Senate would mean an average tax increase of about $14 a year for those who now claim the deduction. It would raise the taxes of 4.5 million taxpayers in the $20,000-to-$30,000 income range by $98 a year.

When the Senate was debating the bill, Dole said the medical deduction is not doing the job that was intended when it was enacted in 1942. During that era, only about one-fourth of all Americans were covered by health insurance and, for some, the deduction was important. But now as much as 95 percent of the population is covered by private or government-paid insurance.

Most of it at the low end of the income scale, Dole noted. Many don't owe any tax at all so the deduction is worthless; others don't itemize deductions. In short, Dole insisted, the deduction has become a subsidy for questionable expenditures for the wealthy.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who tried to eliminate the changes, denied any wholesale abuse.

Teen's body helped six to better lives

DALLAS (AP) — His final wish was that his ashes be spread across the rocky cliffs of Hawaii where he had hiked as a boy and watched the daredevils soar in their hang gliders.

David Glisson had given other wishes to his parents in case he died, including a desire to donate his organs and body parts to needy patients.

After the 19-year-old died in a fall from a movie marquee, six people from four states received transplants from Glisson with the help of a nationwide network of transplant banks, officials at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School said.

Glisson's decision to donate usable parts of his body to needy patients gave three men a chance to walk normally again, restored vision to a man and a woman, and helped a critically burned man fight for survival.

"I am a very lucky person," said Brian Henderson, now back in San Diego, Calif., recuperating from the surgery at Southwestern Medical School that gave him a new knee.

"That family gave me a new start at life. They must be fine, caring people. I would like to thank them. I would like to tell them what a happy person I am because of what they did," Henderson said.

After Glisson's death July 23, a cornea was flown to Youngstown, Ohio, where a 28-year-old welder feared losing his job because of deteriorating eyesight.

In a Dallas-area hospital, doctors restored vision to a 62-year-old woman blinded by an eye disease that had destroyed her cornea.

From Mullin, Texas, and Columbia, S.C., patients needing bone transplants to walk normally again flew to Dallas.

And surgeons at Parkland Memorial Hospital attempted to save the life of a 34-year-old man who had been burned over 50 percent of his body in an explosion.

James Glisson, the teen's father, said his son's desire to donate his organs to medicine came from surgery he had in 1979 to remove a kidney.

"After undergoing surgery at 16, David made sure we all understood that, if he should die, that he wanted his remains to be used to the absolute fullest," his father said.

"When he talked about it, he almost always related to some child being able to see again. He was very specific in his wishes," Glisson said.

When a hospital chaplain informed the Glissons that their son had been pronounced dead, they told doctors of David's wish, setting in motion a flurry of activity coordinated by the organ bank at Southwestern Medical School.

"It wouldn't have been a rational decision. The hurt was just beginning to sink in," Glisson said. "If the decision hadn't been made before that night, we wouldn't have been able to make it."

"To lose a child is the most horrible thing that can happen to you. It's the reality of your worst nightmare," said David's mother, Dorothy Glisson of Duncanville, a Dallas suburb.

On the same warm Saturday afternoon that doctors were working to transplant part of David Glisson to six others, family and friends gathered at a church to remember his shortened life.

Knowing other people were helped by her son's body "doesn't make losing someone you loved any easier," Mrs. Glisson said, "except that what he wanted is happening."

Descendants of slaves sell land for big bucks

DALLAS (AP) — The land in far north Dallas was settled by a generation of ex-slaves who got it from a former slaveowner or bought it for a cow, a few chickens, or a few dollars.

White businessmen have come bearing watermelons and covered-dish dinners, hoping the descendants of slaves would sell their land cheap. It didn't work. Some of the plots in the old freedman's towns are now going for more than $600,000 an acre.

"The land was so sorry, they could make a living on it, but that was about it. The ticks were so bad, you could hardly stand it in the summer," said Milton Neoll, whose grandfather owned a plantation near the freedman's town on White Rock Creek.

It is golden land now: lying in the exploding north Dallas corridor, surrounded by ritzy shopping centers. It is some of the most expensive land in Dallas, and it's making descendants of former slaves rich.

Ruby Hervey remembers when developers became interested in the property in the 1960s.

"The real estate men would come out here, and they'd be carrying these big watermelons," she said. "And then they'd tell us we should give them our land for nothing near what it was worth. I guess they thought black people liked watermelon or something."

Mrs. Hervey's grandfather, a former slave named Herbert Keller, owned 640 acres in the old Upper White Rock community.

"They tried every story they could to buy our land," said Fletcher Allen, who also owned property in the area.

"They'd lug around covered dishes and go to church and exchange ideas, but their motives were to get the land, and everybody knew it," said Elbert Winn, deputy director of the Dallas regional office of Housing and Urban Development.

Joan Winn, an attorney and former judge, said that her mother, Willie Mae Sowell, told one developer she would sell a parcel of land for $1 a square foot.

"He said she could eat the black dirt before he'd pay that. And she said that was fine, that next week the price would be $2 a square foot," Ms. Winn said.

The parcel eventually sold for more than $1 million, she said.

"I think everyone there sold for market price. The longer they waited, the higher it was," Ms. Winn said. "I don't think anybody sold for a watermelon."

When the Sowells sold their last 42 acres in 1981, it went for almost half a million dollars an acre.

Now the highways are clogged with traffic, old friends' houses have been replaced with stores, and apartment complexes surround the pockets of wooden farmhouses that still stand.

Card delivered 13 years after mailing

DALLAS (AP) — Bernie Niederer says he's no longer surprised by anything the post office does.

Niederer got a postcard in June from his brother, Charlie, bearing a 6-cent Roosevelt stamp. It was mailed in New York on Jan. 30, 1969.

The card conveyed good news — everyone in New York was just fine and Bernie's son, Russell, was doing well with the FBI.

In the 13 years since the card was written, Niederer's son died after being shot by a robber in 1980, and Charlie Niederer developed terminal cancer.

In the hospital, Charlie told Niederer he remembered dropping the card in the mailbox, but the postmark showed the card didn't leave the New York post office until June 1982.

"I could write a book about the post office," said Niederer, 68.

When he built his house in Dallas in 1977, he said the postal service assigned him number 2620 Pearson Drive, even though his was the only house on the street.

"I guess I was losing four or five pieces a month. The post office would return them to sender, saying 'No Such Address,'" Niederer said.

After Charlie's death July 12, some friends mailed Niederer a card expressing sympathy.

"It was just a little condolence card, and it had my correct address, but they got it back," Niederer said. "When they phoned me to tell me about it, I told 'em, 'You don't know the half of it.'"

Authorities find skeletons in dirt-filled abandoned well

BLUM, Texas (AP) — Authorities say a year-long murder investigation led them to the skeletal remains of perhaps four people and prompted them to arrest a "mountain man" who lives in the remote area where the bodies were recovered.

Acting on an informant's tip, authorities burrowed 25 feet into an abandoned, dirt-filled well Sunday to recover the remains.

Hill County Sheriff Brent Button said the man in custody was arrested at his home Saturday and was being held in the county jail. Button said the man would be questioned today, but had not been charged.

"The man is pretty much a mountain man who lives all over these hills," Button said. "He's quite a character."

The sheriff said his office began its investigation after hearing widespread and persistent reports that several missing people had been slain and their bodies dumped in a well.

"Some rumors had them shot and others had them hit in the head with an ax," he said.

Button said investigators believe four more bodies may be concealed in the wooded, remote area of Central Texas. Authorities planned to continue excavating today in the area of the abandoned well, accessible only by a twisting dirt trail.

The sheriff said the only motive so far appears to be a series of "fights between drinking buddies."

He said the victims apparently had been dumped into the well over a long period of time, but authorities could not immediately pinpoint the cause of death.

Button said one intact skeleton of a man and bone fragments of at least two other people were sent to forensic experts in Dallas for analysis. He said the fragments possibly could come from three bodies.

The excavation, aided by the use of heavy construction equipment, was suspended about 6 p.m. Sunday when authorities believed they reached the bottom of the well. The first body was recovered about 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

The 2-foot-wide, tin-lined well once was about 30 feet deep. The old well was covered with brush and filled with dirt. Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said.

Justice of the Peace Leonard Webb said medical examiners would use dental records of people believed missing to make identifications. He said authorities believe they know the identity of the bodies.

"One of bodies looked pretty well intact still. I'd say it had been there two years. The clothing and all was still intact," Webb said. "The other was just bones."

The search began after the Texas Rangers got a tip about 8:30 p.m. Saturday, according to DPS dispatcher Gary Patterson in Waco.

Officials knew where to look, but had trouble finding the abandoned well, digging first in the wrong place, Button said.

He said the investigation included numerous interviews but that it was mainly the informant's tip that led authorities to the well.

Eve Gray, an investigator at the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, said the office was notified about 1:30 p.m. Sunday that the bodies would be brought there for examination.

Methodists are split over homosexual board member

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The election of an avowed homosexual to a church board has split the Southern Baptist Convention in Austin to create such an uproar, including resolutions from several churches condemning the vote.

Dixon said he will decide this week whether church delegates may reconsider the June 2 vote that elected Stokes to the 30-member Board of Church and Society.

Homosexual Methodists have demonstrated at annual meetings since 1971, when San Antonio minister Gene Leggett was stripped of his credentials after he said he was homosexual.

"Some members warned me that Stokes' election was a foot in the door, and they asked me if I did not see it as the beginning of an invasion of gay people who would eventually take over the conference," said Dixon.

"Well, I tell them we are not affirming, we are not condoning. We are trying to do what Jesus would do when he met people with life styles of the first and final days of the meetings," he said.

Dixon, who is black, likened the homosexual controversy within the United Methodist Church, which nationally has 10 million members, to the plight of black church members during the 1960s.

"I told them that back in the 60s, when we (Texas Methodists) were considering merging the all-black conference with the white conferences in the state, folks warned against letting those black folks in because they would take over," Dixon said.

"Well, we're in, and we are a long way from taking over anything," he said.

not in accordance with his teaching," Dixon said.

After his 1980 election, Dixon met with homosexual Methodists in Austin and agreed on a program to include the homosexual community in the conference structure.

"Some accused me of personally rigging the election," Dixon said. "They accused me of waiting until some of the delegates left on the last day and seating alternate delegates."

"We researched 10 years and found that the nominations and elections for the boards were always held

Protestors square off today at state's textbook hearings

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fifty-five protestors representing a political spectrum including feminists and religious conservatives are set today for the start of the battle over which textbooks will be used in Texas schools.

The Texas Education Agency's textbook selection committee begins five days of hearings in Austin today to draft a list of books school districts may purchase.

Texas' textbook selections are of particular importance to publishers because of the volume purchased by Texas schools, about $60 million worth annually.

The hearings this year's have drawn the attention of television situation comedy producer Norman Lear's anti-censorship group, "People for the American Way."

The Lear group announced last month that it would battle conservative textbook protesters Mel and Norma Gabler of Longview at the Texas proceedings. The group asked to testify at the hearing, but was told it could submit only written comment.

"Texas is the second-largest market for textbook sales, accounting for about 8 percent of the nation's textbook purchases," said People for the American Way state coordinator Michael Hudson at a July 29 news conference.

"Education experts agree that a textbook that is rejected by Texas is almost guaranteed to be an economic failure nationally," he said.

The Gablers have received national attention for their conservative approach to textbook selection, protesting books that contain ideas contrary to their interpretation of the Bible, or that do not support their view of "traditional family" values.

Another group that regularly protests textbooks is the National Organization for Women, which objects to books that portray females in stereotypical or inferior roles.

NOW had several representatives signed up for the hearings this week.

After the state textbook committee hears all the objections, it will meet Sept. 7 to compile a list of books it will recommend for adoption.

Testimony resumes in Minica trial

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors were expected to wind up their case today in the murder trial of Jack Lee Minica, accused in the killing of his business partner and her daughter.

Defense lawyers are expected to take at least two days to present their witnesses after prosecutors wrap up their case.

Tandy Bennett, her mother, Molly Jo Farr, and a house guest, former Brady High School football star Robert Shirly Gandy, were shot to death near Brady on Aug. 2, 1979.

Minica, 49, is being tried now only in the slaying of Ms. Bennett, but he is charged with all three slayings.

Ms. Bennett, asleep in the same bed with her mother, died instantly from a single shotgun blast into the lower left back, investigators said. Her mother was killed by a single gunshot blast to the right side of her neck.

Both women had been shot at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun loaded with buckshot, according to Texas Ranger Bob Favor of Brady. The third victim, Gandy, sleeping alone in an adjoining bedroom, had been shot through the head with a .243-caliber rifle bullet.

Prosecutors presented 36 witnesses during the first five days of testimony that began last week in their attempt to prove that Minica wanted to kill only Mrs. Farr, but shot her daughter and Gandy to cover the crime.

District Attorney Ronald Sutton said Minica planned to collect about $50,000 on an insurance policy on her life.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue from McCulloch County.

Five killed in car-truck accident

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) — Five people were killed and six injured when a pickup truck slammed into the rear of a car disabled by a flat tire west of here, state troopers said.

"It was one of those unfortunate things, where they had locked the wheel down where they could not move," said Curtis Goen, Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher in Mineral Wells.

The accident took place about 5:10 p.m. Sunday, as both vehicles were westbound in the center lane of Interstate 20, said Trooper Don Kuykendall, who investigated the accident.

All of the dead were in the car, which had stopped in the middle of the highway and was rear-ended by the pickup, the highway patrolman said.

The trooper identified the dead as the driver, Janita Oswald, 37, of Graham and four members of the Wooter family — Patricia, Chris, Shawn and Christina. The trooper said he had no ages or hometown on the Wooter family.

Two people in the passenger car were injured, Chris Oswald, 14, of Graham, was listed in critical condition at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth, and Sonja Charlene Norton, 20, of Lubbock was in critical condition at Campbell Hospital here, Kuykendall said.

Bandera man killed in plane crash

BANDERA, Texas (AP) — Federal investigators are looking into the crash of a twin-engine Piper Apache six miles south of here.

The plane's pilot and only occupant, Norman Evans, 45, of Bandera, was dead at the scene Sunday afternoon, Bandera County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Marlene Mingo said.

No cause of the crash was known Sunday night, said a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman who asked that his name not be used. He said no flight plan was filed.

It was not known if Evans owned the plane, he said.

Evans took off from an airstrip at the Flying L Ranch subdivision in Bandera and was apparently attempting to land in the field when he clipped a row of trees and crashed at about 4 p.m. near Texas Highway 173, Ms. Mingo said.

THAT HEADACHE HAS A MEANING!

Remember this when a headache occurs. You gamble with your health when you treat the pain rather than its cause.

Most other headaches, however, particularly if chronic or recurring, should be taken more seriously, as they may be a warning signal of a more serious health problem. And often the problem is not related to the head.

Headaches are, of course, result from many conditions. But research has revealed that a common cause — often unrecognized — can be traced to the cervical vertebrae (spinal bones of the neck).

One should not delude oneself into assuming that headaches are "normal" and that they can be easily corrected with a package of "pain killers." Seeking relief by merely drugging the pain often allows the cause of the symptoms to go untreated. The further a condition is permitted to advance, the more serious it becomes, and the more difficult it is to overcome.

Headaches are the most common health complaint in America today. If you have headaches, it would be an act of wisdom to seek qualified professional counsel as early as possible from a doctor of chiropractic. Under chiropractic care, a patient is either treated or referred after a comprehensive differential diagnosis.

Boycotts are legitimate

The U. S. Supreme Court made a prudent decision in ruling that the NAACP, which had conducted a boycott against merchants in Claiborne County, Miss. back in 1966, did not have to pay $1,250,699 to compensate for the business the merchants say they lost as a result.

The economic boycott has a long tradition in this country, stretching back at least to pre-revolutionary colonial days. Furthermore, an economic boycott, at least in its purest forms, is a form of protest consistent with the principles that should prevail in a free marketplace.

Things sometimes get sticky in the real world, of course. When organizers attempt to enforce a boycott through violence, threats or intimidation, it loses legitimacy.

the acts of persons over whom it had no control.

High on the NAACP's potential boycott list now are banks and the movie industry. The organization believes that most moviemakers still hire only "token blacks," especially when it comes to directors, writers and producers.

With this Supreme Court decision out of the way, the NAACP is free to pursue its plans. It may discover, as did the Rev. Donald Widmon, the fundamentalist preacher who heads the Coalition for Better Television, that effective boycotts against the entertainment industry are not easy to carry off.

Support for the right to boycott should not be mistaken as an endorsement of specific actions or the practice generally. Many times it is used toward illegitimate ends. As a general rule, however, such tactics as economic boycotts are to be preferred to calls for more legislation.

Finally, let's have no more of the hypocrisy which wholeheartedly endorses the NAACP and pro-ERA boycotts, while shaking a finger of indignation at fundamentalist boycotts.

As long as force isn't involved, all are equally legitimate.

Just once, to enjoy a real national glut

Remember last year when you couldn't find a peanut even with the trunk of an elephant?

Well, everything comes in its own season and this is the season for peanuts.

Remember the gas shortage and OPEC's unconscionable hiking of gas prices? What happened? In due time, a world glut set in, and the gluttons got it where it hurts most, right in the old pocketbook.

Now, back to peanuts. Know what's happening now? That old Demon Glut is back on the scene and playing havoc with the farmers. There are so many peanuts already on hand and more on the way that some farmers are plowing under their crops to keep the prices up.

Last year's severe drought and horrible crop combined to bring about consumer panic with resulting high prices. This year's good weather, plenty of nuts in the ground and high technology have combined to give his country its best peanut crop on record.

Already there are 1.38 billion pounds of peanuts in storage, more than double last year's level and 25 percent above normal.

Now, you'd think that that would mean lower prices for roasted peanuts and peanut butter and peanut brittle and chocolate candy bars with nuts in them and all that good stuff, wouldn't you?

Yes you would. But the peanut people have a keen mind when it comes to peanuts and what peanuts bring in — money.

They like the high price of last year and they are setting about to keep those prices high. Besides plowing under some of their crops, they are trying to increase exports. Exporting is a healthy idea; plowing under doesn't necessary make that much sense. But that's their business.

There must be a way for everybody to end up happy and that includes the consumer. Somehow, though, he's the little guy who never seems to benefit from falling prices or overproduction.

Let's hear it for the little guy.

Arafat, the funny

Yasir Arafat must have a tremendous sense of humor. He's always laughing.

You see his picture in the paper, and he's laughing. You see him interviewed on television, and he's laughing.

He comes from a conference on PLO strategy and he's laughing. What makes Arafat laugh?

Maybe he knows something that nobody else knows. Maybe he thinks it is funny that the Israelis have chased his Palestine Liberation Organization all the way from Israel's borders to Beirut where the PLO now has its back against the sea. Maybe that's what's so funny.

Maybe he is laughing over the prospects of Israel's storming the place and wiping out the last vestiges of PLO opposition, which Israel with its overwhelming military superiority could do. Maybe he finds that funny.

Or, maybe he's still laughing over PLO murders of innocent women and children in Israeli kibbutzim or the dozens of other terrorist acts for which his group joyously claimed responsibility. That might rattle his giggle box.

Mr. Arafat doesn't believe that Israel should exist. At least, that has been his posture in recent years. Some of his most recent public pronouncements, however, have tended to indicate he might be changing his mind.

He just might allow Israel to exist. That is, if Israel doesn't kill off the PLO completely in the meantime.

Right move, wrong reasons

By ROBERT WALTERS WASHINGTON (NEA) — In a city where the politically powerful regularly act contrary to the public interest, it's always refreshing to find politicians doing the right thing — even if they're motivated by the wrong reasons.

That's the case with the proposed constitutional amendment to require balanced federal budgets in the future, an eminently sensible concept being embraced by many of the country's most reckless and irresponsible spendthrifts.

Atop that list is President Reagan, who holds the dubious distinction of being the first chief executive in the nation's history to submit the Congress an annual budget with a deficit in excess of $100 billion.

Not far behind the president in that category are hundreds of members of Congress who presumably believe they can entice the voters by ostentatiously endorsing the principle of a balanced budget while simultaneously approving record-breaking federal deficits.

Finally, there is the National Tax Limitation Committee, the group principally responsible for the awesome lobbying campaign on behalf of the amendment. NTLT promotes itself as an independent, non-partisan organization but, in fact, it has served as a shell for the Reagan White House.

Oponents of the amendment, noting the shamelessly cynical posturing by its adherents in recent weeks, have vehemently denounced the proposal as a fraud, a hoax, a diversionary scheme and a flimsy public relations gimmick.

To the extent that the amendment indeed is being manipulated by individuals and organizations seeking self-aggrandizement and short-term political gain, that criticism is correct.

Reagan has offered the country an "economic recovery program" that would, according to the Congressional Budget Office, produce more than $564 billion worth of new government deficits during his current four-year term of office.

Yet when recently endorsing the proposed amendment the president had the audacity to proclaim: "We must not, and we will not, permit prospects for lasting economic recovery to be buried beneath an endless tide of red ink."

Citing that dichotomy, Sen. Max

Baucus, D-Mont., suggests that Reagan administration support for the amendment "raises certain questions of credibility." A less circumspect critic might have referred instead to "hypocrisy" and "duplicity."

Those adjectives are equally applicable to Congress, which apparently prefers theory to reality when dealing with balanced budgets. The House and Senate last month approved a resolution clearing the way for a record-shattering deficit of almost $104 billion in the next fiscal year.

Finally, there's NTLT, which claims that it "was founded in 1975 for a single purpose: to constitutionally limit spending and taxes at all levels of government."

In fact, NTLT has devoted much of its energies during the past 18 months to serving as a White House helpmate, promoting a Reagan budget wholly unrelated to any constitutional limitation and attacking "Democratic Party bosses."

When the White House last February unveiled its proposed budget for the next fiscal year, calling for a deficit of $91.5 billion (later recalculated to more than $100 million), NTLT responded with a 500-word press release that didn't even mention the president's name, much less criticize him for abandoning his campaign commitment to a balanced budget.

The proposed constitutional amendment deserves a broader base of support if for no other reason that is potential to serve as a psychological deterrent to future presidents and members of Congress insensitive to the problems posed by adding to a national debt that already totals $1.14 trillion.

Notwithstanding the current sense of euphoria among the proposal's most zealous promoters, amending the Constitution remains very difficult task. Indeed, no new language has been added to the document since 1971.

If the new proposal is viewed as merely a parochial cause embraced by a relatively small group of Reagan allies and self-serving legislators anxious to divert attention from their profligate habits, it will fail — and the nation will have lost an important opportunity to bring some sanity to the budget process.

An American pastime

By RUSTY BROWN

It pains me to see all those petticoats in a row at the stores these days. A lacy petticoat beneath a ruffled prairie skirt is this summer's "in" fashion.

I have been outwitted. Five years ago, when we moved from house to condo, I finally gave away — for reasons of space — my collection of petticoats. They were leftover from a previous fashion trend. I knew at the time it was a mistake. Having pitched what could be worn again wounds the confirmed recycler in me.

I come by this tendency naturally. My father, considered a bit of an eccentric in his time was an uncontrolable recycler. In addition to the string he unknotted and rolled into neat little bundles, he also saved slightly used parts of things for repairs around the house: old pipes, old john floats, washers, light sockets, plugs, etc.

He spent summers at an out-of-the-way island cottage where things were difficult to get. At least he claimed that was the reason he once recycled an old calendar. With a Magic Marker and a bit or relettering, he converted the summer of '76 into '77. It didn't bother him at all that his week started on Monday instead of Sunday!

I, myself, always use last year's cloth calendar for this year's dish towel. Doesn't everybody?

I have never been able to discard exceptional wrapping paper that I might be able to use again on some small present. Ditto bows and ribbon.

I try to squirrel away unusual boxes, too, but my husband thinks that's ridiculous. He had his comeuppance recently, though, when houseguests brought us a gift in a Gucci box they had saved.

"See?" I said to him.

I know others who keep used aluminum foil for one more "go-around"; likewise, heavy brown wrapping paper from the laundry, handy for wrapping a package to mail later on.

One woman never throws out a shirt without cutting off the buttons first — for future spare parts. And another hangs out the paper towels she uses for drying washed lettuce. "We use them for drying hands later," she confided.

Don't we all save the plastic bags that supermarkets give us for fruits and vegetables? What holds today's tomatoes bags tomorrow's opened Swiss cheese.

Recycling is an accepted part of our lifestyle. Witness the popularity of recycled paper for Christmas cards and the public support for depositing aluminum cans at recycling centers.

I remember writing an enthusiastic story about recycled jeans when they first appeared in stores in '73.

"It's not that the jeans are second hand," the saleswoman I interviewed told me. "It's just the denim they're made out of that's recycled. People like them because they don't have to break them in," she said.

Goodwill Industries now competes with designer jeans by putting a "Goodies" label on their recycled denim.

The idea of recycling is apparently here to stay. The wonder of it all is that it took us so long to discover how satisfying it is.

After all, even love can be better the second time around. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Before the ax falls

By ART BUCHWALD

As the earnings statements of large companies get gloomier there is more and more pressure on corporation executives to make economies in their firms. Most companies do this first by firing the office boy, then retrenching in the mail room department, and finally cutting the budget on the softball team.

But as time goes on and stockholders get unhappy, management may have to start making cuts in other levels of the company.

How does someone in a large company save his job when all around him or her are losing theirs? Perhaps I can be of help.

The first bit of advice is DO NOT TAKE A VACATION. No matter how badly you need one, hang in there, or else this is what could happen:

"Maxwell, what are you doing sitting at my desk?"

"Oh, Herndon, how was the Cape?"

"Fine. Now what are you doing in my office?"

"Well, finance decided to merge sales with packaging, and they asked me to take over. I naturally fought the move, but they were adamant. We tried to reach you on the Cape, but they said you were racing in the Hyannis - Nantucket sailboat trials. How did you do?"

"I came in third. Now where have I been moved to?"

"That's what they were trying to reach you about. They've had to cut across the board. I spoke up for you but ..."

The second bit of advice is to institute an economy committee before one is constituted without you. Go into the boss and say, "B.J., I'd like to organize a cost-cutting program so we don't get caught like International Harvester with our pants down. What I suggest we do is form a team and look into every department to see how we can eliminate waste. I could report to you within a month, so you'll have something to show the board."

If your idea is accepted, you must use great tact in suggesting the elimination of somebody else's job, on the off-chance that he might survive and do you in.

You could say, "Gentlemen, I think we'd make a mistake if we let Fowler go. It's true his advertising campaign for Fluff was a complete disaster, but we must remember there has been great consumer resistance in toiletries for dogs this year. Fowler is a genius when it comes to advertising, even though he has a tendency to antagonize everyone he comes into contact with."

If Fowler loses his job, you have the minutes of the meeting to prove that you've defended him.

To show that you have the company's interest at heart before you own, announce some economies you're making in your own department. "I'm happy to announce, gentlemen, that I've furloughed two telephone operators and laid off four watchmen in our Wichita warehouse, thus saving us $33,000. This cuts my department to the bone."

The biggest danger during an economy drive is that the company may hire an outside consulting firm to make a private report on which people should be let go.

If one comes in the plant, stop all work you are doing and spend every waking moment with him. Most consultants know little or nothing about the business they are investigating, and if you can make them look good, they may believe you are necessary to the firm.

"Tell me, Herndon, who sits at this desk?" "Maxwell. He's a great golfer. He always plays on Wednesday afternoon with his doctor." (c) 1982, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The American Diabetes Association

Diet is key to life for the diabetic

Dawn Hasebrook, dietary director at Coronado Community Hospital, will be guest speaker at the next meeting of the American Diabetes Association's Pampa Chapter, at 7 p.m. August 10 in the First United Methodist Church's Fellowship Hall.

Mrs. Hasebrook will discuss the food exchange list and the importance to diabetics of following their diets and the list.

Information on exchange values for fast foods and convenience foods, along with diabetic recipes, will be handed out to those attending.

"Staying on your diet is an absolute must. If you don't, it catches up with you and by the time it does, it's too late," she said. "With all the exchange lists and things, there's no reason why diabetics have to make their diet any different from anybody else's."

The exchange list assigns food values to different foods. A slice of bread, for example, is one bread exchange. Exchanges for fats, fruits, vegetables, milk and meats are also given. A diabetic's noon meal may consist of three meat exchanges, two breads, one vegetable, one fat and two fruit exchanges. Any of the foods listed under each heading may be eaten, as long as the exchange requirements are met.

"It (the diabetic diet) really is good because the things you're eating are good for your whole family. It's a hassle at first until you get adjusted to it, but anything you do the first time is a hassle, and once you've adjusted to it you can go on and live your life," Mrs. Hasebrook said.

Eating out may sometimes pose problems for diabetics, but exchange lists for fast foods have made things easier.

"When I give out the fast food exchanges, I say, 'We aren't encouraging you to eat fast foods, but sometimes there's no reason why you can't carry your fruit and vegetable exchanges and eat out once in awhile,'" she said.

Proper diet and patient education are among the most important factors in controlling diabetes, she added. At Coronado Community Hospital, members of the dietary staff will instruct new diabetics if their doctors request it.

"I encourage people to ask their doctor to have a dietician talk to them," Mrs. Hasebrook said.

A series of films on diabetes is also available at the hospital for those wishing to learn about diabetes management. These films are shown to hospital patients and other interested groups.

Mrs. Hasebrook has been dietary director of the Pampa Hospital since November 1981. She has previously served as food production manager at St. Luke's Methodist Hospital in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The meeting is open to the public.

Who took the "gay" out of fun and put it in homosexual

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am an Illinois state senator. Regardless of how anyone else feels about homosexuality, it galls me that sexual deviates are called "gays."

The word "gay" means joyous, merry, happy and cheerful, as opposed to gloomy, melancholy, dejected or miserable. Therefore, to describe homosexuality as "gay" is a perversion in itself, and I respectfully request that you discontinue the use of the word in that context.

Instead of "gay," the word "queer" would be much more appropriate. "Queer" means to deviate from the normal or expected.

In my opinion, the truly "gay" people of the world are heterosexuals who have relations with persons of the opposite sex.

Won't you join me in an effort to retrieve the word "gay" from ignominy? And if "queer" is unacceptable to describe deviates, then confine their definition to "homosexuals."

NAME WITHHELD ON REQUEST

DEAR NAME WITHHELD: Few are aware of how homosexuals came to be known as "gays."

For hundreds of years, women were not allowed to work in the theater, consequently all the roles were performed by males. In France, the men who played women's roles were known as "les gai."

That word crossed the English Channel and homosexuals used it as a code word to identify themselves.

Most homosexuals find the label "queer" offensive, and only an ignorant, ill-mannered person would call another by a name that's insulting. (Blacks do not like to be called "niggers," Hispanics don't care for "spic," Jews dislike "kike," and Italians resent "wop.")

When you, sir, are willing to have yourself described in print and in introductions to your family, friends, strangers, etc., as "Heterosexual (Name Withheld)," then you may insist that gays be identified by the clinical 19th-century term, "homosexual."

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a letter in your column criticizing doctors who told their patients not to smoke while they themselves were puffing away. You also had some harsh words for fat doctors who could barely get their shirts buttoned while handing their patients the Mayo Clinic diet.

Well, according to Dr. Stephen Goldfinger, chairman of the Harvard Medical School Health Letter, doctors have changed.

His survey, which was mailed to 1,013 Harvard clinical faculty members and drew a 60 percent response, disclosed that only 8 percent of the respondents smoked cigarettes, and nearly 40 percent had quit smoking entirely! (About 33 percent of the general public smokes.) When asked if they felt that they were overweight by 10 pounds, only 29 percent of the doctors said yes!

KAREN

DEAR KAREN: Thanks for the update; I feel better already. But I wonder what happened to the other 40 percent?

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Hurt," who "felt bad" when her husband didn't get her anything for Mother's Day from their 6-month-old beautiful baby girl:

Last Mother's Day came two months after my twin sons were born dead. However, this year the Lord saw fit to give us a son to keep.

My husband didn't buy me anything for Mother's Day this year, either, but I am happy to have a healthy baby. Tell "Hurt" to quit pouting over what she didn't get and start thanking God for what she got!

Counselor's Corner

And while you're at it, promise yourself a good day

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

"Promises, promises, that's all I ever get." Have you ever heard or spoken that statement? It can mean different things. One, perhaps, is that you expect someone to act in a certain behavior, and he failed. Another may be that you put off on someone else something you did not want to do and transferred the blame to him. It could mean that promises are important and need to be followed up. Good! If you believe the last statement, then do these things for yourself.

Recognize today for what today has to offer. There are twenty-four hours to use as your pleasure: sleep, work, play, complain, help out, bore someone, get into trouble, hurt, build up, tear down, etc. It's your choice. Today gives you opportunities: to find a job; to overcome depression; grieve over a loss; appreciate someone; forgive a loved one; rebuild a friendship; avoid a situation in which you or an acquaintance might suffer; and or commit yourself to a satisfying task, project, event or person. In constructive, positive action, you have taken advantage of an opportunity offered to you today.

Strive to progress toward a personal goal. The garden does not get weeded nor the lawn mowed unless you take a step in getting it accomplished. A stride in the direction of overcoming or satisfying a need improves your feelings about today. Covering ground means that you are doing something which will improve your well being. Take the risk of going through the process of completing what you want in order to be satisfied about something.

At the moment an individual makes a move, he shows self confidence and assertiveness which are important in having a good day. Busyness is one thing; intimacy is an entirely different action. Intimacy is inneracting, involvement, on an emotional level with another person. Involvement on an emotional level is to enjoy a person, which compliments that person and is a way of reaching out to touch him personally. As you make a move toward him, you use another opportunity to have a good day.

As today begins to end, confide in yourself what you have accomplished. Look for the satisfying accomplishments, those which give meaning and purpose to your life. Learn from the mistakes; but, believe in the pleasurable events. Pleasure comes by way of personal gains and intimacy leads the way.

As you begin to go to sleep, promise yourself another pleasant day when tomorrow becomes today. If promises, promises is all that you ever get, then promise yourself a good day and let it happen. A good day is up to you, as is your mental health.

(Dave Brummett, MDiv, will accept questions and answer them in this weekly column. Address letters to the Top O' Texas Counseling Center, Suite 530, Hughes Building, Pampa, Texas, 79065.)

Help is available for victims of arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — "Much can be done to control the pain and crippling of arthritis," says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the Arthritis Foundation, "but there is no single cure." There are more than 100 forms of arthritis, which together affect over 31 million Americans. The foundation says the real danger in pursuing unorthodox, unproven remedies for arthritis is the resulting delay in proper treatment. When correct treatment is postponed, joint damage and permanent disability can develop needlessly.

Weekend Workout

Randy Slaybaugh gives the shot put a ride during a weekend workout at Harvester Stadium. Slaybaugh, a 1982 Pampa High graduate, is going to Seoul, Korea next week to compete in a three-day track and field meet, sponsored by the International Sports Exchange. (Staff Photo)

Slaybaugh overcomes injury in time for Seoul, Korea trip

Randy Slaybaugh suffered through some anxious moments this summer.

After the Pampa citizenry raised funds to help send the Angelo State bound athlete to an International Sports Exchange Meet in Korea, the discus and shot thrower was almost put out of commission by an injury.

"I hurt my ankle at work and it slowed me down a little bit," Slaybaugh said. "It's pretty well healed now."

Slaybaugh, a 1982 Pampa High graduate, was invited by the International Sports Exchange to participate in a three-day meet (Aug. 13-15) in Seoul, Korea. He will be making the journey with 120 young athletes (30 men and 30 women), picked by ISE on the basis of past performances.

Slaybaugh, who won the District 3-5A shot and discus titles this year, has expanded his repertoire to include the 10-event decathlon. Those events include the 100, long jump, high jump, 400-meter run, high hurdles, pole vault, 1500-meter run, javelin, and the shot put and discus.

"Coach (Wendall) Palmer worked with me for about a month on the high jump, pole vault and javelin," Slaybaugh said. "The javelin is a funny thing to learn how to throw. It's about seven or eight feet long, weights about a pound and you throw it like a baseball."

During the past few days, however, Slaybaugh has spent most of his time perfecting the discus throw, which got him a second-place finish in the regionals two years ago.

"It's easy to lose your technique when you're spinning out on the discus," Slaybaugh added. "The shot technique seems to stay with me more."

After competing in Korea, the ISE group will journey to Hawaii for a two-day stay. "I'm looking forward to surfing and just relaxing on the beach," Slaybaugh said.

Floyd wins PGA title with 8 under par 272

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The potential humiliation of it all drove Ray Floyd to the 64th PGA Championship.

The man all the other players said couldn't lose was giving it away Sunday among the trees, rough and bunkers of Southern Hills Country Club.

"I don't know if I could have lived it down," said 20-year veteran Floyd. "All I would have read in the newspaper headlines would have been how Ray Floyd blew it... I have a lot of pride."

The 39-year-old Floyd said he gave himself a talk on the 12th tee that was the kind of stuff that would get you committed.

"They'd put me in one of those places if I told you what I said," Floyd laughed. At the time a fat five-shot lead had dwindled to two strokes as Fred Couples eagled the par-5 No. 16th hole.

Determined to be more aggressive, Floyd birdied the 12th, 15th and 16th holes to build the lead to five shots and coasted home despite an 18th-hole double bogey to earn his second PGA title and third major conquest.

Even though he had a three-shot victory at 8-under-par 272 over runner-up Lanny Wadkins, Floyd's final round 2-over-par 72 wouldn't let him enjoy it.

Floyd's first major tournament triumph in six years, will be remembered for 54 holes of pure shotmaking precision including a record opening round of 7-under-par 63 and a record three-round score of 200, 0 under par.

But the pressure built as everyone assumed he was a sure winner.

The struggle in the 94-degree heat, the pressure, the nerves, all hit home as Floyd stood over his second shot on the 434-yard par-4 closing hole.

"I don't remember even standing over the ball. I just know the shot squirted right, low and bad."

From a horrendous lie in the steel wool-thick Bermuda rough, Floyd dumped his next shot into a bunker, exploded out and two-putted for a six.

Floyd earned $6,000 while former PGA champion Wadkins, who sizzled with a final round 7-under-par 67, bagged $45,000 for his 275.

Couples' 66 tied him for third place with steady Calvin Peete, who posted a 69, at 276. Each earned $27,500.

At 277 were Jim Simons, who shot 69, Greg Norman, a 72 final round shooter, and Jay Haas, who shot 72.

Bob Gilder was alone at 278 with a final round 72.

At even par 280 were Tom Kite, 67, Tom Watson, 68, Jerry Pate, 69, and Lon Hinkle, 71.

Jack Nicklaus, seeking to become the first player to win six PGAs, fired a final round 67 and was at 3-over-par 283.

It was Floyd's 18th tour victory, giving him $305,409 this year and $2,097,396 lifetime.

Amarillo couple captures Bonnie & Clyde tourney

Jack and Ruby Holmes of Amarillo shot a 215 to win the Bonnie and Clyde Tournament held this past weekend at the Pampa Country Club course.

Clint Deeds of Pampa and Penny Hughes of Farwell was one shot behind at 214. Jeff Loerwald of Amarillo and Norma O'Neal of Panhandle were third at 212.

First flight winners were Bill Mayo of Pampa and Mary Ann Hughes of Amarillo with a 206. Tom and Beverly Snider of Borger were second with a 203. Paul Prock and Joan Terrell of Pampa were third with a 199.

Doug and Jeffrey McFatrique of Pampa won the second flight with a 187. Mike and Liz Hanning of Borger tied with Stan Lennie Schneider of Pampa for second, but the Hannings won the playoff. Both couples shot 182 during regulation play.

Dwight and Nancy Chase of Pampa were the third flight winners with a 183. Ralph and LaWanda Baker of Pampa were second with a 178. Larry and Pat Casey of Borger were third with a 177.

Many questions face Clemson in quest of another national title

By WILL LESTER Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Clemson's defending national-championship football team will play a bowl game this season no matter what happens.

The Tigers meet Wake Forest Nov. 27 in the Mirage Bowl in Tokyo — a regular-season game arranged and paid for by several Japanese businesses in a yearly effort to bring college football to Japan.

But many questions face the 1982 Tigers after their most successful season. They won the championship with a 12-0 record last year, including a 22-15 win over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. They also brought home an Atlantic Coast Conference Crown with a 6-0 record.

One question coaches would rather not discuss is an investigation of the school's athletic program by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Allegations that Clemson alumni offered money to recruits surfaced last year and had Clemson officials holding their breath, hoping the probe wouldn't spoil their season.

The results of the probe are not known. But as Bob Bradley, Clemson sports information director, put it, "No news is good news."

Coach Danny Ford concedes that the investigation is on his mind, but he said his first priority is trying to match last year's performance. Ford, 34, said the team, which lost 18 seniors including six offensive starters, will have to develop quickly.

The Tigers face Georgia at Athens, Ga., Sept. 6 in a nationally televised rematch of last year's Clemson upset of the then-defending national champs.

The schedule includes the usual lineup of ACC teams, as well as Boston College, Western Carolina, Kentucky and South Carolina.

The offensive line was the hardest hit by graduation, losing four starters. But Ford notes that backup offensive linemen played some last year and won't be totally inexperienced. Star wide receiver Perry Tuttle is now with the pro Buffalo Bills, and newcomers will man the wide-receiving posts.

The best news for Clemson is the return of its entire backfield corps, including senior quarterback Homer Jordan, last year's ACC passing leader. Jordan will have seniors Cliff Austin and Chuck McSwain at tailback and senior Jeff McCall and junior Kevin Mack at fullback. Austin and McSwain combined for 1,500 yards last year.

The eighth-ranked defense last year also has lost key players. Jeff Bryant, second-team All-America defensive tackle, and All-America linebacker Jeff Davis are gone, as well as both cornerbacks. But senior All-America safety Terry Kinard is back, along with all-ACC senior tackle Dan Benish and senior linebacker Danny Triplett.

The kicking game should be strong with the ACC's leading punter, Dale Hatcher, and placekicker Donald Igwebuike, both sophomores.

The preseason forecasts have not been overly optimistic, with Clemson picked to finish second in the ACC, behind North Carolina.

Palmer shoots 69 to win Boston Five Classic LPGA golf crown

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Sandra Palmer, a native Texan, has come a long way since she became interested in golf as a $2 a round caddy when she was 13 and her family lived in Bangor, Maine.

Palmer, now 41, moved up another notch among all-time greats Sunday as she posted her 20th victory in 19 years on the LPGA tour, outdueling rookie Terri Moody down the stretch for a one-stroke triumph in the $175,000 Boston Five Classic.

"Experience certainly helps, but you never stop learning," Palmer said after firing a 3-under-par 69 for a 72-hole total of 281, seven under regulation on Radisson Ferncroft Country Club's short (6,008 yards) but exacting course.

"I don't care how many wins you have, you're always learning," she said. "I learned patience this week. I shot a 74 in my first round, but could've easily had a 76. I had birdies on the last two holes and they got me going, at least psychologically."

Moody, a 21-year-old blonde who looks more like a high school cheerleader than the 1981 national intercollegiate golf champion from Georgia, fired a fourth consecutive sub par round, a 70, for 282, but just missed in a dramatic bid for her first LPGA victory. "I'm just happy to be here and playing so well," said Moody, who recently returned to action after suffering a shattered cheekbone and 180 stitches in an automobile accident May 17 in Georgia.

Palmer collected $26,250 for her first victory in 19 months, becoming the 15th player to go over the $800,000 mark in LPGA history. Moody who had won nearly $12,000 this year, more than doubled her earnings with a payoff of $17,150.

Muffin Spencer-Devin, a former fashion model, also collected her biggest paycheck. After fighting an apparent flu bug Saturday night, and visiting a hospital emergency ward, she birdied four of the last five holes for a 69 and a 283. Her third place finish was worth $12,250.

Judy Clark, who shared the 54-hole lead with Palmer and Moody, slipped to a par 72 and 284, tying Vicki Tabor for fourth place. Tabor had a final round 69.

Vivian Brownlee and JoAnne Carner tied for sixth at 285. Donna Caponi, who won the 1981 Boston Five with a 12-under par total, tied for 18th at 290.

Rangers, Yankees split twinbill

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hey," said New York Yankees Manager Clyde King, "don't you guys want to talk about the game?"

"Yes, there was a baseball game at Yankee Stadium Sunday; two of them, in fact. But the action on the field took a back seat to the developments behind the scenes where the Yankees traded one matinee idol for another, sending shortstop Bucky Dent to the Texas Rangers for outfielder Lee Mazzilli.

When the two teams managed to get in some baseball, they split a doubleheader. Texas won the opener 6-4 on home runs by Dave Hostetler and Larry Parrish and the Yankees took the nightcap 8-5 with Oscar Gamble driving in three runs with a single, double and triple and John Mayberry blasting a three-run homer.

On his 246th at-bat since the Rangers brought him up from the minors May 28, Hostetler, the slugging 26-year-old first baseman, hammered his 19th home run of the season, setting a club record for a rookie. It came in the sixth inning off Shane Rawley and gave Texas a 4-0 lead, but the Rangers needed Parrish's tie-breaking two-run shot off Rudy May in the eighth, with Hostetler aboard via a walk, to fend off a Yankee comeback.

"It was a big thrill for me to play in Yankee Stadium," said Hostetler, who has hit five home runs in his last six games against the Yankees. "I was excited about coming in here. I had a good time this weekend. "That's a big thrill for me to know that I did something that hadn't been done before. I always felt I could do it if I got the opportunity to play. That's the big thing — I got the opportunity and I've done well."

In just 67 games, Hostetler bettered a record which Putnam set over 139 games and 428 at-bats three years ago. If he keeps hitting, the 215-pound slugger has an outside shot at the American League rookie home run record of 37 by Cleveland's Al Rosen in 1950 and the major league mark of 38 shared by Wally Berger of the 1930 Boston Braves and Frank Robinson of the 1956 Cincinnati Reds.

"I don't even think about that," Hostetler said. "I just try to take one game at a time and not let that stuff worry me. So far, it's paid off for me."

In the nightcap, Gamble was most of the show in the early innings with an RBI triple in the first, a two-run double in the second and two outstanding plays in the field. In the second inning, he made a sparkling catch of Lamar Johnson's drive into the right field corner and an inning later he gunned down Bill Stein trying to stretch a double into a triple.

"Ironically, Gamble was fined $500 before the game by King for a temper tantrum in the dugout Saturday when he claimed he wasn't given enough notice before being used as a pinch hitter.

"I just go out and try to do my job," said Gamble, who was benched in the opening game. "I've been playing 13 years and everybody who's been around knows what I can do."

Johnstone slams two home runs to lead Chicago past Phillies

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

While helping the Chicago Cubs win and showing the Los Angeles Dodgers they were wrong, Jay Johnstone is thoroughly enjoying himself. "It's fun to come back and prove some people were wrong," said Johnstone. "The Dodgers said I couldn't play the outfield anymore. That's what the Dodgers said."

Los Angeles released the 36-year-old veteran in May. He signed with the Cubs one week later.

"There were other clubs interested in me: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, San Diego and Houston," Johnstone said. "But (Cub General Manager) Dallas Green told me I'd get the opportunity to play."

On Sunday, Johnstone slammed successive home runs and drove in four runs to lead the Cubs to an 8-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and a sweep of their three-game series at Wrigley Field.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh defeated the New York Mets 4-1, Montreal nipped St. Louis 2-1, Los Angeles blanked Atlanta 2-0, San Diego topped Cincinnati 3-1 and San Francisco downed Houston twice, 3-2 and 8-3.

Pirates 4, Mets 1
Bill Madlock tripled home two runs and winning pitcher Don Robinson singled in another to give Pittsburgh its victory over New York.

Madlock's triple capped a three-run fifth-inning rally. Robinson, who drove in the Pirates' final run in the eighth, had three hits as he raised his record to 12-6.

Dodgers 2, Braves 0
Bob Welch stymied Atlanta on three hits in eight innings of work and Pedro Guerrero singled home a run in the first inning to boost Los Angeles over the Braves and complete a four-game sweep by the Dodgers.

Los Angeles, who also swept a four-game series from Atlanta last week, has moved from 10 1/2 games behind the Braves on July 30 to just 1 1/2 games behind the NL West leader.

Expos 2, Cards 1
Tim Raines and newly-acquired Joel Youngblood drove in runs as the Expos edged St. Louis.

Winner David Palmer, 6-4, needed help from Woodie Fryman, who got his eighth save. Bob Forsch, 11-6, took the loss for the Cardinals.

Padres 3, Reds 1
Tim Flannery drove in two runs to back rookie left-hander Dave Dravecky and lead San Diego past Cincinnati.

Dravecky, 2-1, making his first major league start, went six innings to earn the victory, handing off the Reds on just four hits. The only run he allowed had three hits as he raised his record to 15th save.

Giants 3-8, Astros 2-3
Jack Clark knocked in the winning run in the ninth inning of the opener and added three RBI in the second game to lead San Francisco to a doubleheader sweep of Houston.

The sweep extended the Giants' winning streak to seven games and pulled them to within 6 1/2 games of first-place Atlanta.

Joe Morgan singled home the tying run in the opener before Clark's game-winning hit up the middle.

In the nightcap, the Giants jumped took a 4-0 lead after four innings, including Clark's run-scoring grounder.

Crowley's bases-loaded homer gives Baltimore 10-6 win over Kansas City

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The score was tied in the bottom of the ninth inning, and the Baltimore Orioles needed a big hit.

In other words, it was Terry Crowley time.

"Crowley's not supposed to get a lot of at-bats," says Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "He's supposed to come off the bench as a pinch-hitter in the ninth inning and hit a home run."

Weaver may be half-kidding — but it's close enough to the truth.

The Orioles' Old Reliable came through again Sunday, delivering a pinch-hit grand slam homer with one out in the ninth to give Baltimore a 10-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals. It was the 101st career pinch-hit and fourth career slam for Crowley.

"It was a nice situation in which to hit," said Crowley. "I knew he (reliever Mike Armstrong) had to throw a strike. He was keeping almost everything away, and then he tried to come inside."

With Crowley's blow, incidentally, the Orioles tied the major league record of three grand slam pinch homers in one season. It was Baltimore's ninth pinch home run, one short of the AL record set by the New York Yankees in 1964.

"With one out in the ninth, Eddie Murray reached base on a throwing error by shortstop U.L. Washington and John Lowenstein walked. After a balk by Armstrong, 3-4, Cal Ripken Jr. was walked intentionally to load the bases. Crowley then hit a 2-2 pitch into the bleachers in right field at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium for his third homer of the year.

Altogether, there were six homers in the game. Washington and Jerry Martin hit one each for the Royals, while Lowenstein, Al Bumby and Murray also hit homers for the Orioles.

Kansas City had tied the game 6-6 on a two-out, two-run double by Amos Otis in the ninth.

Elsewhere in the AL, Milwaukee edged Cleveland 7-6; Boston routed Chicago 12-6; Oakland stopped Minnesota 5-2; Toronto beat Detroit twice by 7-4 scores; Texas beat New York 6-4 in the opener of a doubleheader before losing the second game 8-6 and California downed Seattle 9-5; Brewers 7, Indians 6.

Paul Molitor hit a two-out, two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning to lift Milwaukee over Cleveland. With two outs in the top of the ninth and the Brewers trailing 6-5, Jim Gantner singled off Len Barker, 11-7. Molitor then worked the count to 3-1 before hitting his 13th homer.

Cleveland had taken a 6-5 lead in the bottom of the eighth on Andre Thornton's RBI single against Dwight Bernard, 3-1.

Before his homer, Molitor had struck out three times in each of his last two games against Barker.

"I suppose if you keep facing a guy, some time you'll hit him," said Molitor. "Lenny's had my number most of my career. I'm certainly not going to get cocky against him now, because he's one of the best."

"I was looking for a fastball and just tried to hit it," Burroughs said after tagging reliever Terry Felton's second pitch for his big double as the A's won their fourth straight.

"As far as I'm concerned we're still in it (the pennant race) even though we're a long ways off," A's Manager Billy Martin said. The A's are 15 games out in the AL West.

Red Sox 12, White Sox 6
Carney Lansford drove in four runs with three singles and a double and Gary Allenson and Dwight Evans hit solo homers to lead an 18-hit attack that led Boston over Chicago.

Jim Rice also pounded a single, a two-run double and a triple and Wade Boggs added a run-scoring double and two singles as Boston ended its losing streak and Chicago's winning streak at three games each.

"I'm lucky to be playing at all," said Lansford, the AL's defending batting champion who hurt his ankle earlier this year. "When I first hurt the ankle I thought I'd be out for the season. Now, all of a sudden, it isn't that bad and I'm back in the lineup and able to make a solid contribution."

A's 5, Twins 2
Jeff Burroughs hit a two-run double in the fifth, leading Oakland over Minnesota for a sweep of their three-game series. Tom Underwood, 8-4, gained the victory after relieving starter Jeff Jones in the fifth. Brad Havens, 8-8, suffered the loss for Minnesota.

"I was looking for a fastball and just tried to hit it," Burroughs said after tagging reliever Terry Felton's second pitch for his big double as the A's won their fourth straight.

"As far as I'm concerned we're still in it (the pennant race) even though we're a long ways off," A's Manager Billy Martin said. The A's are 15 games out in the AL West.

Richard receives standing ovation
TUCSON (AP) — Applauding fans of R.R. Richard gave the former Houston Astros pitcher three standing ovations as he pitched his way to a comeback from the stroke that felled him two years ago.
Richard left the game Saturday night in the sixth inning with a 4-3 lead, but the Spokane Indians came back to beat the Tucson Toros 5-4 in extra innings. Tucson is the Astros' farm team.
The 6-foot-8 right-hander threw a total of 85 pitches, including 38 in a rocky first inning when he gave up three runs. He retired the side in nine pitches in the second inning and threw only seven pitches in the third, setting down seven batters in a row.
In the sixth inning, Manager Jimmy Johnson decided to take out Richard, replacing him with Daniel Boone, who took the loss.
"I could have kept pitching," Richard said after the game. "It was the manager's decision to take me out and I respect his decision. I was pleased with the outing."
Asked about his shaky first inning, Richard said, "Probably the biggest reason was that I hadn't pitched since Monday and it took time to get loose."
Richard, confident of making it all the way back, said he attributes his rapid progress to his faith in himself and in God.
"I always had the faith and ... never doubted in my mind one second that I would not come back," he said.
The Astros moved Richard up from their Class A team in Daytona Beach after he pitched a complete game Monday night.
