PLO Beirut evacuation set

By The Associated Press
U.S. Presidential envoy Philip C. Habib returned to Beirut today with major concessions from the Israeli government on his plan for the withdrawal of Palestinian guerrillas from West Beirut. Lebanese sources said the evacuation could begin as early as Saturday.

After talks in Jerusalem Sunday between Habib and Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the Israeli Cabinet withdrew its objections to French troops spearheading the entry of the multi-national peacekeeping force into west Beirut and the timing of that deployment.

A Cabinet communique also appeared to soften Israel's insistence on checking each outgoing guerrilla against Israeli intelligence lists. It said verification must be made but left open the mechanics.

At least one major stumbling block remained: Israel's insistence that the PLO return an Israeli pilot, Aharon Ahiaz, who was shot down and captured in southern Lebanon on the first day of the invasion June 6, and the bodies of nine soldiers missing since Israel's 90-day invasion of southern Lebanon in 1978.

Lebanese sources said the PLO proposed a swap for guerrillas captured by Israel. But the Cabinet communique insisted the "pilot and the missing persons will be handed over to the International Red Cross before the beginning of the terrorist departure...."

Lebanon's President Elias Sarkis, Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and Foreign Minister Fuad Butros were in conference at the presidential palace, waiting for Habib to inform them of the Israeli position, the Lebanese state radio said.

"The demand to deliver the captured Israeli pilot and the remains of nine Israeli soldiers already is under discussion between the PLO and the International Red Cross," Beirut newspapers quoted Lebanon's Moslem elder statesman, Saeb Salam, as saying.

The papers quoted the 77-year-old Salam, a former prime minister and a key intermediary in the Habib negotiations, as saying he was optimistic that a final agreement could be reached in a few days. Foreign Ministry sources said next Saturday was the tentative deadline to begin the PLO evacuation.

Another possible problem was Israel's demand that Syrian troops in Beirut leave Lebanon. Syria reportedly has offered to move its 1,500 - 2,000 troops in Beirut to the Bekaa Valley, where the bulk of its estimated 30,000 troops in the country are concentrated.

Israel is expected to turn its sights on the Syrians in the valley once the PLO leaves west Beirut. Israel insisted since the invasion that it will not leave Lebanon until all foreign forces leave.

A senior Israeli official who declined to be identified said Israel wants to verify that all PLO forces leave Beirut because it suspects the PLO plans to leave several thousand fighters behind, perhaps by putting teen-agers on the evacuation vehicles in their place.

But the official said despite the remaining "technicalities," he saw no new obstacles to the pullout, and Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor said a final evacuation agreement might be reached this week.

Lebanese Foreign Ministry sources were even more optimistic. They said the nations supplying the peace force had been informed the guerrilla exodus would begin Saturday.

Begin objected earlier to the French vanguard and the participation of a token U.N. force, claiming both were hostile to Israel.

Votes still lacking for Reagan tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of the compromise bill boosting taxes by $98.3 billion over the next three years is uncertain as the House and Senate prepare to vote on the measure under intense pressure from the White House.

For now, President Reagan's congressional backers concede they are short of votes for the bill, mainly because conservative House Republicans — usually the backbone of Reagan's support — are fighting the increase.

But top administration officials say they intend to be celebrating victory by the end of the week.

"We hope and believe that when the vote comes later this week — Thursday or Friday — that we'll have a majority in both houses," White House chief of staff James Baker said Sunday.

The tax increase would be split about evenly between business and individuals. It includes higher taxes on cigarettes, telephone service and families with large medical bills and several new measures — including tax withholding on interest and dividends — to reduce tax cheating.

Reagan planned a nationally broadcast speech at 8 p.m. EDT tonight to outline the bill as an essential element of his campaign to revitalize the economy. Reagan says the tax increase and $15.2 billion worth of spending cuts attached to the measure will reduce the federal deficit and the government's borrowing and help bring down interest rates.

Hospitals and physicians would receive smaller federal reimbursements for treating Medicare patients.

Subscribers to supplementary Medicare insurance for doctors' fees would have to pay $13.70 a month for coverage starting next July 1 and $15.30 monthly a year later. The current premium is $12.20.

Key tax provisions would double for three years the 8-cent-a-pack cigarette tax paid by 55 million smokers; triple the 1-percent tax on telephone service for three years and then let it die; allow deduction of only those medical expenses that exceed 5 percent of adjusted gross income, instead of the current 3 percent.

Also, it would end the special medical-insurance deduction of up to $150 a year, now claimed by 16 million couples and individuals, and permit deduction of uninsured fire and other casualty losses only after they exceed 10 percent of income.

At bar Saturday night

Local man murdered

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

The barroom gaiety of a Mexican dance late Saturday night here ended with gunfire and the murder of a 24-year-old Pampa man.

Six shots fired from a 22-caliber gun at the Tex 'S Rose lounge, 758 W. Brown, sent patrons diving for cover and fatally wounded Carlos Jose Soto, of 415 N. Crest, according to Pampa police.

Soto was playing pool at the bar when the shots rang out about 11 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Police were dispatched to the scene of the murder, and there they found the blood-soaked victim, lying on the floor, partially outside the front door of the lounge.

Police officers King, Goes and Boydston administered first aid to the victim before he was transported to Coronado Community Hospital by Pampa Medical Services ambulance.

Investigators said Soto was dead on arrival at the hospital.

According to police reports, Soto was standing near a pool table while about "a dozen" other people danced and looked on.

While they watched in horror, a "person," standing between two cars outside the bar's back door, began spraying bullets into the lounge, police said today.

Police said Soto was hit "several times in the upper chest," before he staggered to his death.

No other victims of the multiple gunshots were reported, even though bullets hit the victim, the pool table and the wall, according to police.

A Spanish-speaking officer was called to the scene to act as an interpreter for witnesses to the brutal death, Chief J.J. Ryzman said.

Police said several witnesses and suspects have been questioned in connection with the shooting death.

Soto was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge, who ordered an autopsy.

Prestidge said the autopsy was performed by Childress pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann Sunday night, and today the justice of the peace ruled "homicide" in connection with the shooting.

Prestidge said the preliminary autopsy report indicated Soto was hit "five times" by the gunfire.

According to the preliminary report, "two" of the gunshots could have caused Soto's death.

Services for Soto are pending with Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

He was born Nov. 3, 1957 at Juan Aldama Zacatecas, Mexico.

Soto had lived in Pampa for 12 years and married Suzi Rodriguez in May 1981 at Pampa.

He was an employee of an oil field servicing company here.

Survivors include his wife; and one son, Steven Soto, both of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Soto of Mexico; three sisters, Alma Soto, Delia Soto and Lourdes Soto, all of Mexico; six brothers, Armando Soto, Alvaro Soto, Enrique Soto, Jose Soto, Jorge Soto and Guillermo Soto, all of Mexico.

Soto became Pampa's second murder victim this year.

About 4:30 on the morning of January 10th, 42-year-old Coa Janelle Freeman was shot to death at 453 Pitts.

Police said they discovered the January murder when they were called to break up a fight over a gun between two men.

Police said Joseph Wayne Rowsey, 41, and the victim's husband, Billy Freeman, were fighting over a weapon near the scene of Pampa's first murder this year.

After being called to the fight scene, the woman's murder was discovered, according to police.

Rowsey is set to go to trial for the murder of Freeman later this month.

Many Americans don't think a balanced budget is possible

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans favor a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, but half don't think it would work, the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

Sixty-three percent said they favor a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget, while 24 percent said they oppose it and 13 percent were not sure.

Faced with projected federal deficits of more than $100 billion a year for the next three years, President Reagan has asked Congress to begin the procedure for an amendment to require a balanced budget.

The Senate already has approved the amendment, but it is still pending in the House. Even with congressional approval this year, it would require ratification by three-quarters of the states and would probably not go into effect before the late 1980s at the earliest.

In the poll, 1,594 adults across the country were interviewed by telephone last Monday and Tuesday in a scientific random sampling.

Fifty percent of them agreed that such an amendment, even if enacted, would not result in balanced budgets, while 32 percent said it would and 18 percent were not sure.

But even among those who said the amendment would not balance the budget, 55 percent said they wanted it anyway.

The amendment provides a procedure by which the House and Senate could vote to run a deficit.

Politically, Republicans were more likely to want the amendment, but a majority of the Democrats polled said they wanted it, too.

A frequent criticism of the balanced-budget amendment is that it would mean higher taxes in order to wipe out deficits. But among those who said they favor the amendment, 63 percent said they would still favor it even if it meant taxes would have to be increased.

Another major criticism of the amendment is that it would require drastic cuts in federal spending.

"Among all respondents, sentiment was divided over cutting spending for national defense and social programs to make a balanced-budget amendment work, but was solidly against limiting cost-of-living increases for Social Security.

Soviet naval cruise missile said ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union appears ready to start flight testing an advanced naval cruise missile for deployment on surface warships and submarines, U.S. intelligence sources report.

The Soviet navy already is ahead of the U.S. Navy in cruise missiles capable of hitting enemy warships hundreds of miles away. The U.S. Navy has yet to deploy missiles with that kind of range on its fighting vessels.

The intelligence sources, who declined to be identified, said in recent interviews there are indications the Soviets are getting ready for a new flight series, probably starting this fall at a naval missile test center.

This center was used for land-based flight tests of the 300-mile range SSN-12 cruise missile, now rated one of the most important weapons in the Soviet fleet.

American analysts said they believe the new missile will be a replacement for the SSN-12, which has been operational for about seven years. After the tests are under way, the experts say they expect to be able to learn the characteristics of the new missile.

According to naval specialists, the advanced cruise missile may be intended for deployment on a new class of heavy cruiser, on the Kiev-class aircraft carrier and aboard Soviet nuclear-powered Echo II submarines.

Do you approve of city and school tax hikes?

Wade Wright, stocker for Furr's Supermarket:
"I don't think it's a good idea. I really think things are high enough. Probably the schools need it more — we always need better education. But I just got married, and it's tough on me."

Tim Quarles, machinist for Titan Specialties:
"I don't think it's much of an issue whether they deserve it or not. They're going to do what they want to anyway. I'd hope it would be for better services, but I don't think we'd get anything better out of it."

Carolyn Jacobs, executive secretary for Serico:
"I just think taxes are high enough the way they are... I probably would say the school system needs money more than the city would, but as far as raising taxes, I think they've been raised enough now."

Chuck Crane, field representative, Reed Rock Bit Co.:
"Well, on the school taxes, we need to keep the school system... I agree with that (funding for the city's Perryton Parkway construction) — it's getting to be murder out there. Somebody's going to get themselves hurt."

B.J. Abernathy, merchandise records clerk for Montgomery Ward:
"We've been taxed too much lately. With all your utilities going up, why should we be taxed higher too? I think they (schools) need their money for improved services... but they don't need all the fancy programs."

United States continues slide in World Bank's economic report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, continuing a decade-long slide, has fallen to ninth place among industrial countries in output per person, a report shows. Ranked seventh last year, the United States has been overtaken by France and the Netherlands in per capita gross national product, the World Bank said in its 1982 annual report, released Sunday. When non-industrial countries are included, the United States ranks 11th, trailing two tiny, oil-rich Mideast states as well. The World Bank's report also warned, in an unusually somber economic outlook, that the 1980s increasingly are turning into a decade of slow growth and high unemployment for the industrial nations and worsening poverty for the poorest countries. The bank said the outlook for the Soviet bloc nations "has also worsened over the past year as the magnitude of their structural crises has become apparent."

Nevertheless, prospects remain bright that middle-income developing countries will continue making relatively swift economic progress over the decade, the 1982 report said. The bank's rankings of per capita output — or national income — is based on a country's gross national product, which measures its income from its sale of goods and services both at home and abroad. Using 1980 figures, the latest available, the bank said the United States had a per capita GNP of $11,360. Switzerland is first with a per capita GNP of $16,440. Including non-industrial countries, the United Arab Emirates ranks first with a per capita GNP of $26,850. Once the wealthiest nation in terms of per capita GNP, the United States has been losing ground over the past decade because of a slower rate of growth. Five years ago, it was ranked fourth. In terms of total GNP, the United States is the leader by far due to its large population, now about 230 million. The U.S. GNP currently is $3 trillion, twice that of Japan, which is second in total GNP. Among the few bright notes in its 1982 report, the bank predicted that inflation and interest rates in the industrial countries will decline over the decade. "Slow growth in many low-income countries reinforces the central worldwide concern with the growing gap between rich and poor," the bank said. The report estimated that more than one billion people — a quarter of all humanity — live in absolute poverty. The World Bank, with 144 member nations, makes long-term loans on favorable terms to promote economic growth in poor countries. It said 30 million people are out of work in the industrial countries. Unless growth prospects improve, "it is unlikely that they will be able to reduce unemployment to acceptable levels in this decade," the bank said.

Abortion foes begin Senate battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — After more than a year of delay, impatient foes of legalized abortion are getting their first chance in the Senate to limit or eliminate the right of a woman to end pregnancy. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker has scheduled the start of debate today on two separate anti-abortion proposals — a constitutional amendment and a measure declaring that "the life of each human being begins at concept." A 1973 Supreme Court ruling legalized most abortions, and conservatives have been seeking to reverse a national policy under which about 1.5 million pregnancies are terminated annually in the United States. In that ruling, the high court said most abortions are protected under a woman's right to privacy under the Constitution.

Abortion foes say a fetus has an overriding constitutional right to life which supersedes a woman's prerogative to choose an abortion over giving birth. Since President Reagan and a Republican Senate were swept into office in the 1980 elections, there have been intensified efforts to get the issue to the floor of the Senate. In a letter to conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Reagan said abortions "amount to a great moral evil and assault on the sacredness of life." But divisions within the anti-abortion movement on tactics, and Reagan's reluctance to make the volatile issue a political priority of his administration, had postponed any resolution. With time running out in the 97th Congress, anti-abortion groups and ultraconservatives in the Senate are putting together a united front. But resolution of the issue could be further delayed this week by a likely filibuster staged by opponents of the anti-abortion measures. One of the two proposals to be voted on this week is a constitutional amendment approved by the Senate-Judiciary Committee which would allow both Congress and state legislatures to prohibit or regulate abortion. "A right to abortion is not secured by this Constitution," says the amendment which would require a two-thirds vote in the House and Senate, and ratification by three fourths of the state legislatures. "The Congress and the several states shall have the concurrent power to restrict and prohibit abortions, provided that a law of a state which is more restrictive than a law of Congress shall govern," it says. Computer outsmarted by man in chess

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Even though computers can consider more than 160,000 moves a second, Ron Zaffuto and his lucky cap outsmarted one of the best chess-playing electronic brains in a man vs. machine chess tournament. After the first round Sunday, the score was Humans 2, Computers 0. A third match ended in a probable draw with the three-day contest entering its second day today. The machines hum along, looking at thousands of moves in the time it takes a person to think of just one step. But one scientist says that doesn't mean computers have an unfair advantage. "The human is a lot smarter at what he'll look at," said Hans Berliner, a senior research scientist at Carnegie-Mellon University, where the $2,600 tournament is being held. "But the machine is going to look at a lot of nonsense." Four players qualified as experts by the U.S. Chess Federation are challenging the world's best chess-playing computers, linked by phone lines to terminals in the university tournament room. Although none of the players on the first day said they had sweaty palms staring across a chessboard at a computer terminal, Zaffuto wore a lucky Pirates baseball cap for his match against Nuchess, the pride of Northwestern University. "It gives me confidence," said Zaffuto, 30, who answers customer complaints for United Parcel Service. The competition is a warm-up for the second National Conference on Artificial Intelligence, starting Wednesday at CMU and the University of Pittsburgh. About 1,200 researchers and business executives interested in smart machines were expected to attend. The Fredkin Prize Committee has a standing offer of $100,000 for anyone who designs a computer program that checkmates the world chess champion. Berliner, the head of the prize committee, said a machine that clever won't be made before 1990. "But I feel it's almost certainly going to be handed out by the end of the century," he said. "We're running annual events which test the best programs in the world to see how close we are to that goal," he said. Human error kept Belle, the electronic top-seed, from competing. Belle's computer operators were delayed by travel arrangements and the match will be made up later, a university spokesman said. Belle, designed specifically for chess at Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J., has a rating of 2,150 points, or expert level. Last year, Belle was beaten by a master level player, a step above expert. Even so, Belle is no pushover. In her last 50 games, Belle has won more games against masters than she has lost. She's beaten every computer she's played in the last two years.

Mother-in-law arrested in bridegroom's death

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A bridegroom was shot to death with a rifle during a wedding reception at his in-laws' home, and his mother-in-law was arrested, authorities said. Marvin Simmons, a 24-year-old soldier at nearby Fort Carson, was shot through the head Sunday night with a .22-caliber rifle, the El Paso County sheriff's office said. A nursing supervisor at Penrose Community Hospital said Simmons was dead on arrival. His mother-in-law, 31-year-old Shirley May Harris of Colorado Springs, fainted after the shooting and was taken to a hospital. Sheriff's Sgt. Mark Denton said she was arrested within hours of the shooting and booked for investigation of first-degree murder.

A weapon was found in her possession, a sheriff's spokesman said, and she was held without bond today. Authorities were called to the home of Mrs. Harris and her husband, Lonnie, in El Paso County's Cimarron Hills neighborhood just before 7:30 p.m., Denton said. Neighbors said Simmons had married Sherry Harris, 17, at the home about six hours before. Sherry Harris Simmons recently graduated from Mitchell High School, they said. Disc jockey Ronnie Wherry, who played records at the wedding reception, said he was putting away his equipment when "I heard a shot and saw everybody running for their lives, so I ran, too." "What a thing to happen — for a man to get shot on his wedding day."

Way with words not for everyone

NEW YORK (AP) — A bond analyst who has a way with words won the U.S. Open Crossword Puzzle Championship, but says he wouldn't urge his obsession on "those who lead a normal life." Stanley Newman, 30, completed an intricate final puzzle in 13 minutes and 23 seconds to claim a $1,500 prize. There's no secret to knowing that a "colorful Hopi Indian doll" is called a Kachina, or that an aardvark is an "ant antagonist," said Newman. "I started out with a fund of trivial knowledge and I read a lot of reference books, encyclopedias and stuff like that." He added: "I wouldn't recommend it to those who lead a normal life." He said he finishes the New York Times crossword puzzle in a few minutes each day as he waits for a bus near his Brooklyn home to take him to his Wall Street office. He once finished a Times puzzle in less than three minutes as co-workers timed him.

His form was even better than usual for the U.S. Open, he said. The answers were coming so quickly, "I was even frightening myself," he said. "I guess I peaked at the right time." A crossword-puzzle addict since childhood, Newman says he's entered five crossword contests, winning three. Newman was among 261 participants in the day-long U.S. Open competition at New York University on Saturday. The contestants were the best of 7,700 people who filled out a qualifying puzzle in the March-April issue of Games magazine, the event sponsor. About 60 percent answered the puzzle correctly and were sent four more puzzles to solve within three weeks. Just nine contestants finished all four without error.

Pentagon plan for nuclear war victory is revealed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A top-secret Pentagon plan on how the United States could win a prolonged nuclear war was delivered to President Reagan, the Los Angeles Times reports. The Pentagon strategic plan, drafted at the request of the Reagan administration, was completed and delivered to the National Security Council last week, the newspaper reported Sunday. The plan provides guidelines on how the United States could win a strategic nuclear war of up to six months by protecting its vital command and communications systems, the newspaper said. According to the newspaper, the plan was ordered in response to a top-secret presidential directive, which the Times said represents the "first reported time the U.S. government has declared that nuclear war with the Soviets can be won." The account said the presidential directive that prompted the plan was part of a national security decision document drawn up in fall 1981 to supersede Presidential Directive 59, approved during the last six months of the Carter administration. That directive, indicating that nuclear war could be survived, was intended to deter any Soviet expectations of winning a nuclear war, said Harold Brown, the secretary of defense under Carter.

Unemployed man who shot wife, self cited Reaganomics

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Out of work, out of luck and out of money, Antonio C. Garza and his wife left their bankrupt 7-year-old aerial mapping firm in Ohio hoping to find work in Texas, friends and relatives said.

They found none.

Police found the couple fatally shot Friday in the front seat of their car with a suicide note, bankruptcy papers, boxes of belongings, an empty wallet and a rifle.

The note, which compared the current recession to the economic hardships of the 1920s and 1930s, said government economic policies had contributed to the couple's demise.

"We came to San Antonio to work, not to die," read the note in Garza's shirt pocket. "But Reagan economics has nothing trickling down to us."

"I have gone as far as I can go with our lives. My wife, Kay, and I are hard-working people that have been reduced to beggars almost," police said the note read.

"Both of them were very hard-working people. They really tried to make a go of things. They tried so hard and things just seemed to be going downhill," said Casetta Dunch, a neighbor of the Garzas in Galena, Ohio, where the couple lived on a five-acre plot for 10 years before moving to Texas last month.

"They were good people as far as I know," Mrs. Dunch said Sunday. "I would never say Tony would do something like this. He just wasn't the type."

"He seemed to be happy. Nothing seemed to bother him that much. ... It's such a shock to know those people all that time and then to hear that," she said.

Authorities said Garza apparently turned his high-powered rifle on his wife, Kay, believed to be in her 40s, and then shot himself.

Bexar County medical investigator Roy Aguilar said Sunday both Garzas died of a single gunshot wound to the head. The deaths were ruled murder and suicide, Aguilar said.

Garza's brother-in-law, Chris Gomez of Brackettville, said Sunday relatives still are not sure why Garza killed his wife and himself.

"He was a good, hard-working guy. We just don't know how this could happen," he said.

Gomez said the Garzas had been living in motels since they arrived in San Antonio in July. The couple will be buried Tuesday in Brackettville, where Garza grew up, he said.

Unemployment in Texas has been significantly below the national average in recent years, but much of the job market is drying up.

Most voters approve bingo

By The Associated Press

A state law to legalize bingo for charity received the necessary approval from voters in most local elections over the weekend, but the issue failed in Henderson and Abilene.

Voters in Dallas and Houston approved charity bingo in their areas. Only two percent of the registered voters in Dallas County turned out for the measure, which passed by a four-to-one margin. Turnout was heavier in Houston, where ballots included other local issues.

Bingo also passed in Odessa, Tyler, Austin, Lufkin, Palestine, Arlington, Brownwood and Ballinger.

Less than 2 percent of the voters in Austin turned out for the referendum.

"We've never had this small of a turnout before," said Travis County Clerk Doris Shropshire.

Voters in Abilene turned down the bingo option, 2,804 to 1,565. Nearly one-fourth of the ballots cast against the referendum came from boxes near Abilene Christian and Hardin-Simmons universities. Henderson voters also vetoed charity bingo.

Voters in 17 counties, 34 precincts and five cities went to the polls Saturday.

Last year, the Texas Legislature approved local-option bingo games for charity. Before the lawmakers' action, bingo was considered a lottery and was outlawed.

Ban helping fish, hurts commercial fishermen

PORT MANSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A state law enacted to protect the dwindling populations of trout and redfish in the Gulf of Mexico has bolstered the number of fish, but shrunk the ranks of fishermen, state officials say.

Fishermen in Port Mansfield, many of whom have given up fishing for carpentry or painting, say the law approved by the Legislature in September was not needed.

"The law was passed for the fat cats, the sport fishermen," said Augie Monjaras, a local fisherman. Monjaras contends sport fishermen lobbied for the law so they would have exclusive fishing rights to redfish and trout.

"There wasn't a shortage of redfish. As far as I'm concerned, the bay was overrun with redfish and trout," Monjaras said. "But I don't think we will ever be allowed to catch redfish commercially again."

The law makes it a misdemeanor offense for wholesalers to buy redfish and trout from Texas commercial fishermen, although they can buy redfish from out of state. Fishermen may not catch more than 10 redfish or 20 trout a day.

Supporters of the law say it has increased fish populations that were endangered by commercial catches.

Data from the wildlife commission shows that commercial fishermen caught about 2 million pounds of redfish in Texas waters in 1974 and 1975. By 1979, that figure dropped to just over 820,000 pounds.

Recent figures gathered by the commission show that redfish and trout populations have increased about 20 percent, based on the number of fish caught per hour, since the imposition of the ban, said Gary Matlock, assistant chief of coastal fisheries.

"There are a lot more redfish out there now. You can see them in the water," said Longview sport fisherman Victor Norman. "And we are catching a little bigger fish. I supported the ban, but the only thing I have against it is that it did throw a lot of commercial fishermen out of work."

"The only choices we have now are the drum, crabbing and floundering," said Ben Carrier, a Port Mansfield fisherman. "And you can't make much of a living doing that."

Carrier said his income fell from $700 a week to $200 or less since the ban was imposed. In Port Mansfield, the number of commercial fishermen has dropped from 40 to less than a dozen.

Monjaras said. Monjaras, a weathered man who has spent his life stalking the plump, tasty redfish that inhabit the warm waters of the Laguna Madre off the South Texas Coast, said he "just about went flat broke" when the law was enacted.

"At first, some fishermen tried to sell the reds on the black market, but I don't think much of that goes on now," he said.

But William C. Walker, coastal law enforcement supervisor for the commission, said some fishermen continue to catch redfish and trout and sell them illegally.

"There has been about a 40 percent increase in illegal fishing activity. We are talking about the number of cases (filed against fishermen) jumping from about 1,000 to 1,400 since the ban," Walker said.

About 25 to 30 fishermen are caught each month by commission patrols, he said. Game wardens have confiscated 72,800 pounds of illegally caught fish this year, compared 52,000 last year, and Walker said most of the contraband was redfish.

Outlaw fishermen generally use nets, which are illegal, and fish at night, Walker said. The fish are sold to wholesalers who falsify invoices so that records indicate the fish were bought from an out-of-state fisherman.

Most commercial fishermen now are working in oil fields as carpenters, painters or mechanics, said Brownsville fish wholesaler Pat Pace.

Gene Autry's hometown is up for sale

TIOGA, Texas (AP) — During an auction here in October, $100,000 worth of antiques and an oversized bit of Gene Autry memorabilia will be on the block.

His hometown. Downtown Tioga, once a famous mineral water spa where turn-of-the-century trains stopped 10 times a day, will be sold to the highest bidder.

But Autry, who said in an interview from Palm Springs, Calif., that he is still fond of the place, won't be here for the bidding.

"Maybe if I was 40 years old, I might think about buying it, but not at this stage of my life," the 74-year-old former movie star said.

"I lived there the better part of my young life, and I think you always have a soft spot for your childhood home," said Autry, Tioga's favorite son and the owner of the California Angels baseball team.

Lawyer, oilman and land developer Jim

Wendover owns the Tioga town square. He spruced up the dilapidated buildings, bought a bunch of antiques, and started an antiques trading center.

Now, he says, "I'm tired and retired."

Tioga is the hometown of the "Singing Cowboy" — but a little Oklahoma community carries his name. Berwin, Okla., was rechristened Gene Autry, Okla., when he bought a ranch nearby in 1941.

The development boom that spread from Dallas to surrounding areas passed by Tioga, just as the trains did after the mineral water spa faded.

Fourteen of the 18 downtown buildings, along with the $100,000 in antiques, will be sold Oct. 2 at the bidding. Downtown Tioga will go in 13 parcels covering a little more than six acres.

"This is a big deal for us," said auctioneer Pat Long of Kaufman, who will handle the sale along with Mike Jones of Gainesville. "How many times do you get the chance to auction off a town? I've sold everything from beer cans to heavy equipment, but I've never sold a town."

Wendover's wife, Mignon, said she expects Tioga to grow when Lake Ray Roberts, which will border the town on the three sides, is completed in 1986.

"This joint is going to jump. There's no doubt about that," she said. "It just depends on how much cash someone wants to put into it."

But some of the town's 500 residents disagree, and they also don't like the Wendovers' publicity about selling the town.

"Tioga is just a little hole-in-the-wall, but it's our hole-in-the-wall," said Nadine Graves, who runs Joe Graves' Grocery & Feed, the only old-time business left on Main Street. "No matter who buys it, they can't come in and push us around."

Wendover, who began buying up the town in 1972, says he doesn't know how the townspeople feel about the sale.

"We don't communicate on the same frequency," he said.

Investigation of mass slayings reaching end

HOUSTON (AP) — A bus mechanic who police say admits to 11 murders in Southeast Texas had a day of rest from questioning this weekend, and detectives said they hope to conclude their investigation soon.

Coral Eugene Watts, 28, directed authorities to the graves of three victims last week and admitted to eight other unsolved killings, police said. Harris an galveston county authorities have agreed to grant Watts immunity from prosecution if he provides police information about the murders.

State District Judge Doug Shaver was expected to sentence him to 60 years in prison on a burglary charge Tuesday as part of the plea bargain arrangement.

Detectives said Sunday their interrogation has produced no explanation for the 11 strangulations and fatal stabbings to which Watts has admitted.

Watts, who was not questioned Sunday, "is either not allowed to answer (by his attorneys) or refuses to answer" when asked what could have driven him to strangle or fatally stab the young women, homicide detective Ted Thomas said.

Police said Watts described the 11 killings in minute detail.

"He won't say why he followed them," homicide Lt. Guy Mason said Sunday. "He just picked them at random. We don't know why. Maybe he doesn't know."

The attacks occurred late at night or before dawn. Each victim was a woman and most were in their 20s.

Psychological tests at a state mental hospital showed that Watts has a pathological hatred of women.

Mason said interrogations of Watts have been calm, adding that more confessions are gotten with "hamburgers and Cokes and cigarettes" than with high-pressure tactics.

Police say they also suspect Watts in more than a dozen slayings in Texas, Michigan and Canada. He moved from Michigan to Houston early last year.

Detective Ken Williamson said law enforcement agencies from many states have called the Houston homicide bureau to inquire whether Watts is linked to unsolved murders elsewhere.

"We've received about 40 calls from all over the country," he said.

Officers from Michigan, investigating murders in that state left Houston last week.

Corrections department begins program

DALLAS (AP) — A plan by a county correctional officer to coordinate pretrial services and post-prison programs into one organization could serve as a model for other cities across the nation, officials say.

Robert M. March, a career law enforcement officer, said the newly created Dallas County Department of Community Corrections is the first such program in the state.

March became the department's director last month, and said the new job may change his law enforcement perspective. He said he is trying to regain his faith in the Texas Department of Corrections.

County commissioners said they hope the department, designed to coordinate a myriad of correctional services, will serve as a national model.

March, 49, said prisons do not help reform convicts. He said he wants to coordinate law enforcement agencies in the county to gather information on about 200 state parolees sent here monthly.

He is responsible for overseeing state-licensed halfway houses in Dallas County.

March said he envisions a center that would serve as a clearinghouse for employment and housing to every parolee coming to the county. Information would be gathered on the ex-convicts and tests conducted on their emotional, educational and job placement qualities, he said.

He also wants to work with schools and families to correct delinquency problems before a youth is charged with felony crimes.

"With a center, people coming to Dallas from TDC would have a point of origin, someplace to prepare them for reorientation," March said. "If they don't have a job, there's a temptation to return to what got them in trouble."

Currently, parolees released from TDC are given $200 and a destination, where many arrive homeless and jobless. March said his proposed center could decrease recidivism that prompts 65 percent of felons released in Texas to return to the prison system.

Fire destroys remote motel

LAJITAS, Texas (AP) — An explosion in a diesel truck sparked a fire that destroyed an adobe and wood motel in this isolated West Texas town and forced the evacuation of the motel's guests, fire officials say.

The motel was engulfed in flames within minutes and "was gone" by the time firefighters arrived, said Brewster County Fire Deputy Larry Jackson.

No injuries were reported, he said.

Guests in the 15 occupied rooms at the 26-room Cavalry Post Motel, owned by Houston developer Walter Mischer, were evacuated at about 9 p.m. Saturday, Jackson said.

A hotel next door also owned by Mischer, who is developing about 50,000 acres in the area, was not damaged.

Lajitas is 55 miles from Presidio and neighbors the ghost town of Terlingua, site of the annual Wick Fowler Memorial World Championship Chili Cookoff.

The development of Lajitas began about five years ago when Mischer built the Cavalry Post Motel on the foundations of a cavalry outpost erected in 1916 by Gen. Jack "Black Jack" Pershing to keep bands of Mexican revolutionaries from making raids on the U.S. side of the border.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Japan rewriting history

The Japanese Education Ministry has asked publishers of textbooks used in Japanese schools to fuzzle over the record of Japanese imperialism that contributed to World War II. Where postwar textbooks once conceded that the Japanese had "invaded" China, Southeast Asia and Pacific Islands, they would henceforth describe these aggressive acts as "advances" by Japanese forces. School texts, for example, would no longer acknowledge Japanese responsibility for the "rape of Nanking" in 1937, in which 90,000 Chinese civilians lost their lives. A ministry spokesman says the new guidelines are an effort to present history in terms that would respect the "sensitivities" of the Japanese people. That's a poor excuse, and it's not surprising that many teachers, scholars and newspapers in Japan are protesting. The Japanese could take a leaf from the way the American people have dealt with a wartime issue of their own — the dropping of atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945 to bring the war in the Pacific to an end. Americans have been able to debate the morality of the decision to use the A-bomb only on the basis of an accurate account of the circumstances and considerations that led to the decision. Hiding truth merely delays the day of coming to grips with truth. Fortunately, the proposed revision tells it straight on at least one count. Pearl Harbor is still a "surprise attack" and not an "advance."

Court's decision should aid housing

Time should quickly tell what impact the U. S. Supreme Court's epic decision on the due - on - sale clause will have on both homeowners and the millions of Americans shut out of the housing market by sky-high interest rates the past 33 months. Briefly, the Court upheld legality of "due - on - sale" clauses inserted in most deeds of trust. That means if someone sells a property before paying off the mortgage, the lender has an opportunity to renegotiate and, if necessary, increase the interest to present market levels. In theory, mortgage rates should soon drop somewhat from the 16 - 17 percent level as the federally chartered S & Ls slowly mop up on the sub - 10 percent loans that were the centerpieces of "creative financing." And a sharp drop in standard financing costs should lead to a revival of the dormant real - estate market whether home prices fall or not. It was financing costs, not prices alone, that brought home sales to a walk beginning in 1980. However, what should happen and what will happen could be poles apart. If anything has been learned these past two - plus years it is that the old theories of economic cause - and - effect don't necessarily work any more, particularly where interest rates are concerned. At this point, the only "certainly" on the horizon is that state - chartered S & Ls will seek the same foreclosure authority as the federally chartered thrifts. Congress already is considering the necessary legislation and, given the court decision, we suspect action will be quick in coming. Whatever else lies ahead, the past two or three years of economic turmoil are a sad commentary on government's ability to toy with the money system with such disastrous results for so many. In moving the nation from relative stability to a period of rampant inflation and then back down to a deepening recession the government has raised havoc with the entire population. Meanwhile, we see Washington adding to our economic peril by spending policies that defy reason. In trying to catch every fallen sparrow, the federal government will spend $100 billion more than it takes in during the coming fiscal year and plans even greater deficits in the years ahead. Anyone who doesn't realize these spending policies have inflated the costs of borrowing money for homes, autos or any other commodity hasn't been paying attention. The Supreme Court in its decision on de la Cuesta vs. Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan not only may have given the real - estate market a great boost, we believe, but it took the correct stance when it upheld the sanctity of written contracts. The due - on - sale clause (a standard feature of mortgage agreements) has been around for a long time. It became acutely unpopular politically when interest rates went through the roof two years ago, but that was no justification for the subsequent court decision that momentarily put the clause in jeopardy. The cause was written to protect the S&Ls from disaster. If it had not been tampered with by earlier state court decisions, perhaps the real estate market would not have experienced its recent traumas.

No match

A spokesman for the Soviet embassy in Washington didn't think it was much to get excited about. "They do it to us, we do it to them," he said. Is it too much to hope that Americans will not be equally biased? The issue is the travel restrictions placed on Soviet "diplomats" in the United States. A mildly pretentious conference on U. S. - Soviet relations is being held this week on the campus of Whittier College. Vladimir M. Kulagin, Soviet consul general in San Francisco, had been invited to attend a session Sunday. But State Department restrictions, dating from the 1950s, permit Soviet diplomats to travel only a certain distance beyond the heart of central cities and along certain transportation corridors. Soviet diplomats may travel to Disneyland, but Whittier happens to be off - limits. As a result, the conference had to be based to Hancock Park, where Whittier College, fortuitously enough, has a law school campus, to hear Kulagin. An utterly pointless and unnecessary flap ensued, and the United States looked ridiculous. The policy of restricting travel by Soviet diplomats came about through an interpretation of the idea of reciprocity. The Soviet Union places travel restrictions on all foreign visitors, not just diplomats. So the U. S. decided to go tit - for - tat and restrict the travel of Soviet diplomats — some of whom, likely as not, are spies. The idea was to put pressure on the Soviet union to lift its travel restrictions. It has not been notably successful. Never mind the high - minded hope that permitting visiting Soviets to see rural and suburban America would be a great propaganda coup, perhaps convincing a few that this great land is truly the land of promise. The Soviets are unlikely to send over any diplomats susceptible to such persuasions. On its own (de) merits, rather, the policy of reciprocal travel restrictions is foolish, childish and, in the deepest sense, un - American. It locks this country into a policy of fighting communism by imitating communism, a dead - end alley if there ever was one. All travel restrictions on Soviet diplomats should be lifted immediately (except for obvious exceptions like highly classified military installations, a different issue altogether). Furthermore, the notion of reciprocity should be abandoned forthwith. So long as the idea of reciprocity is a factor, this country is held hostage to whatever foolishness or tyranny some other country wants to impose on foreign visitors. It would be far better for the United States to go its own way, glorying in its freedom for its own sake, abandoning childish diplomatic gamesmanship.

New perspectives on China

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER
NEW YORK (NEA) - Ever since Richard Nixon inaugurated U.S. relations with Red China in 1971, Peking has enjoyed almost uniformly favorable treatment by the American media and our intellectual community generally. An why not? American liberals worked long and hard for U.S. recognition of the Communist regime, and it would have been asking too much of human nature to expect them to find it obnoxious, however strenuously they had insisted that recognition would not necessarily imply approval. So, all during the 1970s successive U.S. administrations, leading American journalists and enterprising businessmen fawned first over Mao (in his final and probably craziest stage) and then over his disgusting widow and finally over the clique that overthrew her and has all but repudiated him: Mainland China became the trendy place for the globe - trotting set to visit, and you are lucky indeed if you made it through the 70s without being forced to watch some acquaintance's color slides or home movies of T'ien - an - men Square and the Great Wall. To hear such glib visitors talk, Communist China was practically Paradise. Not only was everybody happier than in the dark ages before Liberation (1949), but China's entire population (minus, after 1976, Four) simply adored their Communist bosses. And there weren't even any flies! To be sure, as the decade wore on an occasional discordant note burped out of the lute. I saw about 1978 in the Asian Wall Street Journal (published in Hong Kong) a mention of a great rat one businessman had discovered sitting in the middle of his Peking hotel room. And just last year a friend told me that in Peking, in October 1980, "even before they turned on in November the little coal stoves they use for heating," tge pollution was so bad he couldn't see across a city street. But only within the past few months, thanks to two big new books by American reporters freshly back from the People's Republic, have alert stay - at - homes been able to learn what life there is really like. As you probably suspected if you have ever studied communism on the hoof, it is stultifying, intimidating, degrading and dull. "From the Center of the Earth: The Search for the Truth about China" is by Richard Bernstein, Time magazine's first resident correspondent in Peking. In the words of John Fraser, himself a former Peking correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail: "It is unlikely that any study of China and the Chinese Communist Party will present a bleaker picture... If his conclusions are unremittingly harsh — and I can't think of a single positive thing he has written about institutional communism in China — they are also necessary antidote to the fluff that has been served up." Equally harsh is the verdict of Fox Butterfield, first head of the New York Times' bureau in Peking. He calls his book "China: Alive in the Bitter Sea," and when you read his sensitive account of the often desperate lives of the Chinese he met and befriended (he speaks the language), you will know just what he means. Savor these lines: "Almost every Chinese I got to know during my 20 months in Peking had a tale of political persecution... From their stories it seemed as if a whole generation of Chinese (and 650 million of China's 1 billion people have been born since 1949) had known nothing but arbitrary accusations, violent swings in the political line, unjustified arrests, torture and imprisonment. Few Chinese I knew felt free from the fear of physical or psychological abuse and a pervasive sense of injustice." Read that to your liberal Uncle Herman the next time he starts getting teary-eyed about the situation in Chile. Make no mistake: The Bernstein and Butterfield books are aimed squarely at the solar plexus of American opinion on the subject of Red China, and they are bound to have a powerful impact. No longer, for one thing, will quite so many American tourists make it all the way to Peking and back with their ideological blinkers still firmly in place: It's wonderful what people can see when others have already noticed it. And the next time Deng Hsiao - ping visits this country, we can hope for some better description of him than "cute." With a little luck, we may ever realize we are holding hands with a gang of marauders. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

El Salvador again.

By DON GRAFF
Credit the administration's certification of progress in El Salvador on curbing human - rights abuses and implementing political and economic reforms with at least being a semi - serious effort at compliance with congressional conditions for continuing U.S. aid. Although critics in and out of Congress dispute its conclusions, the report is not a total whitewash. It detects a few blemishes on the Salvadoran regime for which it urges $366 million in economic and military support. Continuing human - rights violations, it acknowledges, are not only the work of the guerrilla left but also of "right - wing terrorists, and members of the government's military and security forces." Landowners continue resistant to U.S. - inspired agrarian reforms and evictions of poor farmers from expropriated estates are occurring. It could hardly do otherwise. Although El Salvador has receded from front pages since the March 28 election, it is all too obvious that the killing goes on. Compounded recently by reports of police torture credible enough to disturb the U.S. Embassy and bring

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for human rights, flying down to San Salvador. Abrams, in a contribution to the New York Times on the subject of certification, questions whether the process may not be diverting attention from key issues, making it "harder, not easier, to discuss the situation in El Salvador." Not, it would seem, on the evidence of the current report in which responsibility for the continuing slaughter — certainly a key issue — is addressed with an unaccustomed degree of candor. Abrams goes on to identify what he sees as the central facts of the Salvadoran situation, including the military's backing of the country's return to democracy. True as far as it goes, but a discussion of that situation needs to go farther. The military leadership is aware of the seriousness of American concern over the Salvadoran system and of the consequences should it lead to a cutoff of aid. To that extent, pressure on the human - rights issue is having an effect. As is American support for reform. When the rightist - dominated constituent assembly that emerged from the March elections appeared to be renegeing, the military made it clear that, whatever modifications might emerge from that body, the basic programs were still on track. The deputies earlier had been compelled to choose a moderate president to the officers' liking, rather than one of their own right - wingers. All making it perfectly clear who remains in charge in El Salvador and demonstrating that whatever the country has returned to, it is not democracy. Meanwhile, the murders and disappearances continue. In a current report contesting the administration contention that there has been a marked decline in incidents since the election, Amnesty International, the British - based world - wide rights watchdog, finds a "gross and consistent pattern" of abuses by the Salvadoran military. It includes details of post - election incidents, such as the following: "Leonardo Esteban Landaverde Hernandez — Student, aged 18, living in San Salvador, detained between 9 and 10 a.m. on 15 April 1982 near the Terraza Cinema by uniformed National Guard members who took him away in a green jeep in the direction of the National Guard Barracks... "Leopoldo Alberto Bolanos Zolorzano — Small businessman, aged 40, living in Colonia Santa Lucia, Ilopango, Departamento de San Salvador, abducted at his home between 10 and 10:30 p.m. on 16 April 1982 by uniformed Treasury Police and taken away in an unidentified vehicle... "Margarita Pascaccio de Lopez — Retired teacher, aged 56, living in Ciudad Satellite, San Salvador, detained at 7 a.m. on 7 May 1982 near Colegio Garcia Flamenco while taking her grandchild to school, by heavily armed men in civilian clothes who dragged her out of the car she was driving and put her in a yellow mini - bus..." They — and many more — remain missing. But they can't be dismissed from the discussion of El Salvador. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Reganomics so far

By PAUL HARVEY
The headlines cannot agree as to whether the recession is worsening, bottoming - out or behind us. What do the numbers say? Before Reagan, our dollar was shrinking 13 cents a year; today it's shrinking at an annual rate of less than 6 cents. Gasoline is selling for 7 cents less than a year ago. Interest rates were more than 21 percent; today 15. A year ago Americans were saving less than 5 percent of their earnings; today more than 6 percent. A year ago federal spending was increasing 14 percent a year; today less than half that. Waste and fraud in government is $2 billion less than a year ago and 8,500 dead people are no longer collecting Social Security. The pessimists are wearing red faces. Unemployment did not worsen last month; held steady at 9 1/2 percent. And our country's total employment is near or at an all - time record high. Besides, we can hardly blame Reganomics for something that is worse most every elsewhere. In Italy unemployment is 9.9 percent, in Britain 11.8, in Ireland 12 percent, in Belgium more than 13 percent. Partisan politicians have been helping you forget that auto workers were 20 percent unemployed before Reagan; unemployment in construction was more than 14 percent before Reagan. Car companies are profitable again; Ford especially. And housing starts are inching up as interest rates moderate. Our nation's GNP, total output of goods and services, increased the second quarter a respectable 1.7 percent. Our economy is growing again for the first time in a year. Our index of leading indicators held steadily last month. Indeed, were it not for the roller - coaster stock market, that index would have increased. Both hourly earnings and spendable income are up from a year ago. White collar pay for the first time since 1979 is increasing faster than the cost of living. And while Americans are depicted by some headline writers as hungry and deprived, Americans this year are spending $262 billion on recreation; that's more than our government spends on national defense. Just video products alone this year are a $9.2 billion business. And Illinois state lottery sales are running 55 percent ahead of a year ago. Again, as Mark Twain is said to have said about Richard Wagner's music, "It's not nearly as bad as it sounds." (c) 1982, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Today in History

Today is Monday, Aug. 16th, the 228th day of 1982. There are 137 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: On Aug. 16, 1977, singer Elvis Presley died at his Memphis, Tenn., home at the age of 42. On this date: In 1777, American troops defeated a Hessian force under British command at Bennington, Vt., during the Revolutionary War. In 1894, labor leader George Meany was born. In 1914, the British Expeditionary Force landed in France during World War I. In 1960, Britain granted independence to the crown colony of Cyprus, with Archbishop Makarios as president. Ten years ago: Former President Lyndon Johnson endorsed the presidential candidacy of Democrat George McGovern despite major differences between them. Five years ago: Former President Gerald Ford gave full backing to the Carter administration's Panama Canal agreement.

Solidarity will demonstrate

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity supporters planned the first of a two-week series of demonstrations today after the martial law government allowed quiet protests in Warsaw and Gdansk.

The first demonstrations were scheduled for the anniversary of the formation on Aug. 16, 1980, of the strike committee in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport, that 15 days later founded Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's first labor union independent of Communist Party control.

Solidarity leaders still at large are urging peaceful protests against martial law for the next two weeks, culminating in nationwide demonstrations Aug. 31 on the anniversary of the birth of the labor federation. It enrolled an estimated 9.5 million workers who kept the country in turmoil with demands for sweeping economic and political reforms until the Communist government proclaimed martial law last Dec. 13, suspended the union and arrested thousands of its leaders.

Police used water cannons and tear gas to disperse thousands of anti-government demonstrators Friday in Warsaw, Gdansk, Krakow and Wroclaw. But there was no police interference Sunday as scores of Poles in the capital quietly demonstrated support for the outlawed union with a tribute to its chief, Lech Walesa, who has been under house arrest since martial law was proclaimed.

The police stood by and took no action as the unionists placed a portrait of Walesa and arranged flowers to form his initials at the memorial to the late Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, in Victory Square.

In Gdansk, witnesses said police also did not interfere with Solidarity supporters who placed flowers at the monument outside the Lenin Shipyards to workers killed in food riots in 1970.

The sources also reported that leaflets appeared on Gdansk shop windows showing an unshaven young man complaining, "I have nothing — instead we have socialism and junta."

Archbishop Jozef Glemp, who succeeded Wyszynski as the Polish primate, appealed Sunday for the government and its opponents to communicate with each other and end "hatred, which sometimes can be invisible but still exists when people keep silent and grind their teeth."

He addressed 120,000 pilgrims in the southern city of Czestochowa on the 600th anniversary of the installation of the country's most revered religious icon.

Murder suspect arrested at home of Ireland's attorney general

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Charles Haughey recalled Attorney General Patrick Connolly from a vacation in the United States today because a man charged with a double murder was arrested at Connolly's penthouse and told police he was living there.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said Connolly's resignation as the Irish Republic's highest-ranking legal officer "seems likely," but the government said the resignation had not been requested.

Malcolm Edward Daniel MacArthur, the 36-year-old son of a wealthy farmer family, was arrested Friday at the attorney general's penthouse apartment overlooking the sea in the fashionable Dalkey district outside Dublin.

MacArthur gave the apartment as his home address when he appeared in court on Saturday.

He was charged with the murders of farmer Donal Dunne at Edenberry, 30 miles west of Dublin, on July 25 and of Bridie Gargan, a 28-year-old nurse, in Dublin the next day. He was also charged with burglary.

MacArthur entered no plea at the hearing. He was ordered held without bail for further investigation and another appearance in court on Thursday.

The BBC said it understood Connolly was in the apartment when MacArthur was arrested after "one of the biggest manhunts in Irish history." It said the police questioned the attorney general, and he went to the United States on Saturday.

Political observers viewed the cloud over the attorney general as a setback to Haughey's minority government, which is struggling with severe economic and political problems.

By thousands of fans Lighted candles carried past grave

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — More than 5,000 people, some weeping and placing kisses on the tomb, gathered at Elvis Presley's grave early today to mark the fifth anniversary of the rock 'n' roll singer's death.

The fans, most clutching candles, walked single file on the quarter-mile, winding driveway of Graceland estate to Meditation Garden, where the singer, his parents and grandmother are buried.

The graves are just south of the mansion where Presley lived.

A memorial service was planned later today across the street from the mansion, with admission $7 a person.

Earlier, there was intermittent drizzle as fans paused briefly at the grave. Through their tears, some kissed their fingers, then knelt to touch the grave, before kissing their fingers again.

"I think he's looking down; I think he's smiling real big right now," said J.D. Sumner, who was the leader of Presley's backup singing group, The Stamps Quartet.

"Elvis wouldn't have believed that the fans were this loyal," Sumner said. "I do think that anybody that has ever been born, except for Jesus Christ, has fans this loyal. It's phenomenal."

Presley, whose hit songs included "Hound Dog," "Heartbreak Hotel" and "Jailhouse Rock," died Aug. 16, 1977, at the age of 42. The cause of his death was listed as heart failure.

Fans have conducted candlelight services outside Graceland every year since Presley's death, but today was the first time they were allowed onto the grounds.

Sumner, who worked with Presley for 7½ years, led the candlelight service.

Fans began gathering at Graceland's wrought-iron gates hours before the service began shortly after 11 p.m. EDT Sunday.

Police blocked traffic along Elvis Presley Boulevard as hundreds of people spilled from a football field-sized tent where Sumner's new gospel group, the Masters V, performed a concert Sunday night. Hundreds of other fans abandoned the nearby souvenir shops to join the throng.

Reganomics goal is out of focus

NEW YORK (AP) — The once sharply defined goal of Reganomics, to promote saving and investing for long-term productivity rather than borrowing and spending for short-term consumption, is now blurred.

People wonder about the shape of things they see. In part, the problem might lie with them, not the administration.

You must strain, for example, to understand how the administration can seek a consumer-led economic recovery, which would require retail spending, while seeking an increase in savings to fund investments.

"Unfortunately, consumers cannot take the lead in both directions simultaneously," says Douglas L. Bendt, an economist with Chase Manhattan Bank. Consumers might not be able to lead anyway, he says.

The reliance on consumer activity is also seen by some people as a contradiction of policy, since the quickly ated goal of the eage administration is to end n era of wasteful, unproductive spending.

CONSUMER SPENDING IN ITSELF IS NOT WASTEFUL: IT IS, OF COURSE, WHAT KEEPS FACTORIES ACTIVE AND WORKERS EMPLOYED. The waste, it is said, comes when so much of the nation's effort goes into consuming that there are insufficient funds to maintain efficient production.

If production becomes more costly, because plant and equipment haven't been maintained or because efficient technologies aren't employed, the cost of goods rises. This happened during the 1970s.

The administration sought to correct that situation through tax and savings incentives that supposedly would finance modernization of the economy's production segment. But it doesn't seem to be happening.

Industry isn't investing in plant and equipment. It is, in fact, steadily cutting existing investment plans, and that trend could accelerate. Morgan Guaranty, for one, thinks it will.

In the monthly Morgan Guaranty Survey, in the mail to clients, staff economists say capital spending weakness "will almost certainly turn out to be worse than the average investment slump since the end of World War II."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The income of married women is pushing family income figures steadily upward, the U.S. Census Bureau says.

And if the trend of married women entering the work force continues, family income levels will continue to climb, the bureau said in a study released Sunday.

Married working women push family incomes up

The study said that by March 1980, 51 percent of all married women were in the labor force, compared to 41 percent in 1970 and 24 percent in 1950.

A large share of the growth came among women with children under 6 years of age, with 45 percent of these women working or seeking jobs in 1980, up from 30 percent in 1970.

Participation of this age group allows women more time and experience on the job which, the bureau noted, "may widen career opportunities and advancement and could result in higher income levels for women."

The study, a more detailed version of a report issued a year ago, listed 1980 median household income as $21,020, up from 1979 but actually representing a net decline in real income because of inflation.

A subsequent survey released last month added 1981 figures, estimating median family income at $22,390, an apparent increase from 1980 but actually another inflation-caused real income decline her factor working to push family income upwards in the next few years is the aging of the "baby boom" generation, the bureau said.

This large group of young people — born between 1946 and 1965 — has been swarming into the labor force over the last 15 years, but primarily in lower paying jobs because of the group's relative youth and inexperience.

Now, however, these young people will swell the 35 to 44 age group by 40 percent during the 1980s, increasing the average age and experience of the workforce.

Fashionable 4-H'ers beat the competition

AMARILLO — Four clothing construction champions from Gray, Sherman, and Moore counties will represent the Panhandle District at the State 4-H Fashion Revue in Corpus Christi, September 15-17.

Earning that honor at the district fashion show here on July 29 were Kim Watson, daytime tailored attire, and Amy Diedrichsen, active sportswear, both of Moore County; Penny Miller of Gray County, evening and specialty wear; and Christy Pittman of Sherman County, daytime non-tailored wear.

A special award for the best outfit made from wool and mohair went to Miss Watson. Miss Pittman captured the special award for the best all-cotton outfit.

Selected as alternate representatives for the state contest were Dalynn Krebs of Randall County, daytime tailored attire; Camille Farris of Dallam County, evening and specialty wear; Johanna Thompson of Hartley County, daytime non-tailored wear; and Stephanie Stromberg of Potter County, active sportswear.

Receiving honors as the best model in each of the three age groups were: Sandra Straufuss of Deaf Smith, beginners aged 9-11; Kristi Harrison of Sherman, intermediates aged 12-13; and Kathy Jo Morrison of Deaf Smith County, seniors aged 14-19.

A total of 146 contestants from the 20-county district participated in three age and skill classifications. Beginners and intermediates don't advance beyond the district level.

Contestants were judged on sewing skills, clothing construction and overall appearance in their garment, explained Mrs. Sue Farris, district director for the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. Four-H is the youth program of Extension.

The revue was narrated by Joy Sherrrod of KGNC Radio. State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa assisted in presenting the awards.

Fashionable Champions

Taking top honors in the Panhandle District 4-H Fashion Show at Amarillo are, from left, Christy Pittman of Sherman County; Penny Miller of Gray County; Kim Watson and Amy Diedrichsen, both of Moore County. They will be representing the 20-county district in the state contest at Corpus Christi in September.

Cancer Prevention Study II — a close look

If you possess a Sherlock Homesian penchant for mystery-solving, your chance to help conduct a research project exploring one of the medical enigmas of our time is coming up. The Unit 15 of the American Cancer Society needs 18 "research volunteers" to implement the Society's Cancer prevention Study II, which starts this September.

The national study will address a major health concern: what factors are related to cancer and how can this disease be prevented? For answers, Cancer Prevention Study II will look at the American Lifestyle — the food we eat, the products we use, the conditions we live and work under — to see if these have any bearing on cancer and other diseases.

With information from the study, the American Cancer Society hopes to develop programs to help people reduce their cancer risk. As Dr. Robert V. P. Hutter, National President of the American Cancer Society, notes: "The nations and the world must have definitive answers from Cancer Prevention Study II to plan a world without cancer for our children and for theirs."

Modeled after the first ACS Cancer Prevention Study, which was conducted from 1959-1972, CPS II will also draw upon a large sample of the U. S. population: one million men and women from all walks of life. These individuals will be asked to answer a comprehensive questionnaire about their health history and current living, working, and eating habits.

It will be up to a dedicated nation-wide army of more than 80,000 research volunteers to gain the cooperation of their friends, neighbors, and relatives to join in the study. In Gray County alone, research volunteers are expected to enlist close to 275 participants.

Acknowledging the contribution research volunteers will make to Cancer Prevention Study II, Shirley Woodridge, Chairman of the Unit 15 of the American Cancer Society said, "Research volunteers will be the backbone of Cancer Prevention Study II. Without them, there simply would be no study. It would be too expensive to conduct a study the scope of CPS II without volunteers."

Every volunteer will be responsible for selecting about ten families (or more if possible) in accordance with study guidelines. Each family group must have one member over the age of 45, though anyone over thirty in that family can participate. Volunteers will be counted on to explain and distribute the study's four-page confidential questionnaire, retrieve the completed forms, and do necessary follow-up work.

This entails keeping track of the families for the next six years. Once every other year, the volunteers will contact the family groups, and then report to ACS headquarters on their status and whereabouts. If and when participants die, health statisticians will be able to determine how their lifestyles affected their health by referring to information in the questionnaires.

Though the formal start-up of CPS II isn't till September 1, 1982 the Unit 15 of the American Cancer Society has begun its recruitment of research volunteers. According to Shirley Woodridge, "We're particularly interested in individuals who have lived in the Gray County area for some time, are planning to remain in the region for the next six years, and have friends and relatives living close by whom they could enroll. We'd also like to attract a good number of minority volunteers, in order to help us enroll many minority members in the Study."

The American Cancer Society's first cancer prevention study was instrumental in pinpointing many health risk factors. Topping the list: the hazard of cigarette smoking. Smoking was linked to heart disease, lung cancer, and several other types of cancer. Low tar and nicotine cigarettes reduce a person's risk of these diseases to some extent, the study showed, but they still pose a health risk. The study also revealed a connection between obesity and certain cancers, the profiles of women at risk for breast cancer and cervical cancer, and the beneficial effects of exercise in prevention heart attacks and strokes.

Honey is a sweet alternative

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Every civilization has had its culinary traditions and although the cuisines have differed, many of the same basic foods were used by the cooks of each period. Honey has been a favored sweetener through the ages. Almost every civilization has valued honey as a food, a medicine, a trading commodity, and a social and spiritual force.

Americans consume an average of 285,000,000 pounds of honey every year. It takes 556 worker bees flying 35,584 miles to produce one pound of honey. If honey were to be priced according to the effort that goes into its production, none of us could afford to enjoy it!

HONEY FACTS
Honey is a natural, unrefined food. Since seventy-five to eighty percent of its composition is sugars, honey has an energy-producing value second to few foods. Honey is made up of the simple sugars dextrose and levulose. Absorption takes place quickly, with little digestion necessary. A cup of honey weighs 12 ounces of which not quite one-fifth is moisture. This yields approximately 9¼ ounces of carbohydrate as compared with the 7 ounces contained in a cup of granulated sugar.

PURCHASING AND STORING
When purchasing honey, select the flavor you desire. The flavor depends upon the kind of flowers from which the bees gather nectar. Honey producers frequently mix several honeys by heating moderately and stirring to produce a blend with a flavor which is most satisfactory.

If you have storage space, it is more economical to buy honey in large size containers. Keep liquid honey in a dry place. Freezing does not injure the color or flavor, but may hasten granulation. Avoid damp places for storage because honey has the property of absorbing and retaining moisture. Do not put honey in the refrigerator.

TO LIQUEFY HONEY THAT HAS GRANULATED OR SOLIDIFIED
Place the container in a bowl of warm water - not warmer than the hand can bear - until all crystals are melted. See that the honey container does not rest on the bottom of the water container.

RECIPE CONVERSIONS FROM SUGAR TO HONEY
In puddings, custards, pie fillings, breads and rolls, use cup for cup, honey for sugar. In cakes and cookies use ¾ cup honey for one cup of sugar and reduce liquid in the recipe by 3 tablespoons for each cup of honey substituted. Unless sour milk or cream is used in the recipe, add ¼ to ½ teaspoon baking soda per cup of honey. If used in jams, jellies, or candies, a higher degree of heat is necessary in cooking.

RECIPES
If you are interested in receiving copies of recipes using honey, contact the County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex.

Golf Is Great Exercise...If You Run After The Ball!

Query the average business executive as to what he does to keep in condition, and you'll get an answer something like this: "Oh I get plenty of exercise. I play golf at least twice a week."

As he says the word "exercise," you notice that his paunch is popping over his pants, and he's out of breath just from showing you his two-over-par stroke.

You wonder why. The fact is that playing golf is not a game of exercise. Not the way it's being played nowadays.

True, years ago it entailed a great deal of walking, including the carrying of a heavy golf bag for a full 18 holes. This develops stamina. Today, golf is nothing more than a game of skill in which you ride "the full length and breadth of the course on a golf cart, do a great deal of talking and betting, which is followed by a full course of heavy drinking and eating on the 19th hole. This develops the paunch.

Before all the golf enthusiasts get up in arms about anyone criticizing their beloved sport, let it be known here and now that golf is one of the most popular games in America. It's produced some great performers like Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, and has benefited some great charities thanks to people like Bob Hope and Perry Como. And it's fun and develops coordination. But that's all that it is. Don't deceive yourself into believing that it gives you the adequate exercise you need.

What's the alternative? Doctors of chiropractic, who place a great deal of emphasis on the value of physical fitness for the maintenance of your body's structural integrity and health, recommend good old-fashioned exercise such as moderate calisthenics, brisk walking and swimming. Try sit-ups, push-ups, side twists, neck-rotations.

Still play golf, but do that in addition to, not instead of, more stimulating exercise. And if you happen to belong to a golf club that still allows you to walk and carry your own clubs, do it. In fact, running after the ball isn't as silly as it sounds. It's certainly more interesting than just running, and healthier than riding.

Before you go off and try to make up for all the exercise you've been missing by thinking golf is an exercise, here's a warning from your doctor of chiropractic.

Don't overdo it. You have to build your capacity for exercise by increasing your involvement slowly. And never, never try to push yourself beyond your limitations. To protect your health, it is wise to have a check-up, including an examination of your spine and nervous system on a regular basis. If an exercise program is advisable, your doctor of chiropractic can outline a practical and sensible regimen for you.

When boredom becomes unnecessary

BY DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

Sometimes it's easy to recognize a person who is bored, definitely someone who is boring. Most of us have experienced boredom.

It feels lonely, having given up, unworthy, dissatisfied, complacent, restless, bored. Being around a boring person makes one feel like wanting to disappear, going to sleep, retiring from a lack of interest, escaping in order to be free, bothered, bored. It's hard to get away from the experience once involved; but here are some ways.

Find a special person. He is someone to know whose interests compliment yours, such as sports. If the two of you enjoy baseball, there is enough of it to participate together all summer. Water sports are plentiful should you and a special person like them. Sailing can be relaxing and enjoyable with this special person. Hobbies are significant too.

Coin and stamp collecting are known to bring satisfaction. Wouldn't it be more enjoyable to collect with a special person?

In these relating ways, boredom becomes unnecessary because you want to be with the special person in a particular interest. Other complimentary interests may develop too, some which were at one time boring.

You might consider finding someone to be your friend, one whom you will not take advantage under any circumstance.

Friendship is important. Be a person who can give generously without lowering your level of functioning.

It is easy to become dependent. The friendship in context is the way of relating to someone whose gifts are not assuming you will repay with kindness, friendship and love; however, few of us will not be appreciative of this person's generosity because it seems uncommon. Boredome becomes unnecessary in receiving free gifts of love and care from a friend.

Along with receiving a friend is finding someone who accepts your friendship without obligation, and is free of expectations. Once friendship is accepted without obligation, it becomes free of expectations. Now it is time for you to offer the free gifts. Giving is sometimes more difficult, with many seeming to have their palms open for a hand out.

The friend in context is one whose reception of your gift is grateful, rested and satisfied. Where can you find such a person? Everywhere!

Boredome becomes unnecessary when giving to someone else. A calmness surrounds you; a peace engulfs you. It's a feeling unrelated to being bored.

Another way to overcome boredom is to find a charitable organization, civic club, church family or other group of persons with whom your special qualities and abilities will enhance their purposes. Let's call it getting involved. There is something renewing about a goal oriented group of people. The purpose is contracted as appropriate. At the moment a goal is reached, everyone in the group rejoices, cheers, achieves. Excitement is soaked up; success is realized. Boredome becomes unnecessary in group participation for a worthy prize - helping someone else live easier and/or longer.

Finally, regardless of your way to cope with boring situations, at the moment you find meaning in your experiences with a single person or a group of people, boredom becomes unnecessary. Meaning surfaces when you're with a special person whose interests are complimentary.

In receiving a friend, meaning washes away ulterior motives, leaving the path clear for a long term relationship. Taking advantage is set aside because the gift of life has no strings attached. The reason for friendship is to give.

At the moment you begin to be generous with your life, there will be a person present who wants to receive. He will open his soul for you to fill with understanding, patience, sincerity, endurance, self-confidence, excitement.

This friend will not take advantage; but, he will receive.

Be selective because you know what is meaningful. Choose carefully and optimistically. Would you make the wrong decision, pursue elsewhere. Find those who are important to your well being, happiness and contentment, then boredom becomes an unnecessary companion. Your mental health depends on pleasure.

Dear Abby

Pain provides man's pleasure

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man I'll call Rick, and we hit it off from the minute we met. He's a nice-looking guy who works at a health club during the day and tends bar at a classy club three nights a week.

One thing led to another, and he told me if we were going to have any kind of intimate relationship, he wanted to be perfectly honest with me. Then he said he was a "masochist." He said he likes to be "spanked" — hard! I told him I didn't care for violence. He said if he enjoys it, it's not violence. He asked me to go ahead and hit him, and I said no. Then he asked me to think about it. It sounds weird to me.

I don't know what to think of him now. I like him a lot, but I'm afraid if I go along with his wishes, he may try to hurt me. I was married to a wife-beater for a year and have had enough broken bones for one lifetime.

I'm 22, and Rick is 29. Is it dangerous to get mixed up with a masochist? And can you tell me more about masochism? I'm not sure I understand what it is.

WONDERING ABOUT RICK

DEAR WONDERING: You are wise to wonder. "Masochism" is a sexual perversion characterized by a desire to be physically abused in order to achieve sexual gratification. It can be dangerous, so do not agree to engage in any practice that you consider frightening, abnormal or weird.

DEAR ABBY: A couple we have known for many years visited us recently. We truly love them as friends, but the lady is a cleaning nut! Believe me, I am a very good housekeeper and I am not lazy, but just watching her digging in the corners wore me out.

I don't mind if a houseguest helps with the dishes or keeps the guest room picked up, but this friend was vacuuming and dusting the whole time she was here. She made me feel "dirty" and hurt my feelings.

Why would a guest come into someone's home and work like a horse? I wouldn't do this to my own family. Abby, please tell folks that when they're guests they should relax and not work so hard.

FEELING DIRTY IN KENTUCKY

DEAR FEELING: I'll tell them, but I doubt if it will help compulsive cleaners. Such people work like a horse, digging and cleaning, not because they think the place is "dirty," but because it provides an outlet for their nervous energy.

DEAR ABBY: Last year at a county fair I won first place in the pie category with "Dear Abby's Pecan Pie." This year, I won first place with your "Dear Abby's Cheesecake." I really am thrilled and want to thank you for sharing your terrific recipes. Love,

MRS. DIXIE CORDLE, BLAINE, KY.

DEAR DIXIE: My pleasure. And if anyone else out there wants the above-mentioned recipes, they're yours for the asking. Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

What you don't know can hurt you. For Abby's booklet, "What Teen-Agers Ought to Know," send $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Close-up on crows

Crows have something to crow about. Why? Because they are a lot smarter than a lot of people think they are.

Who says so? Sport Afield magazine says so in the August issue, and backs the statements up with proof after proof. "When wits were handed out to all of nature's creatures," says the magazine, "crows somehow got an extra helping." And it quotes the statement of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher more than 100 years ago: "If men had wings and bore black feathers, few of them would be clever enough to be crows."

Item. A crow in Charlottesville, Va., watched a milkman make his rounds. After each delivery, the crow would work the cap off the milk bottle, drink down as far as its thick bill allowed and then moved on to the milkman's next stop to repeat the procedure.

Item. In Scandinavia, a crow watched ice fisherman at work. When the fisherman went to their ice shack for hot coffee, the crow waited for a flag to pop up, pulled the line and ate the fish without getting caught on the hook.

Item. At the famous winter crow roost near Fort Cobb, Oklahoma, millions gather. Authorities say most are migrants who fly south just far enough to be sure of a food supply during the winter cold.

Eleanor Brown, a doctoral candidate in zoology at the University of Maryland, says crows socialize at their roosts, "hang around" and gossip. She says they have their own language, and can imitate the cry of a baby, the coo of a dove, the crow of a rooster, the whistle of a train and the sound of human laughter.

Ellie Brown says each group of crows has its own song, used to reinforce a social bond, while most bird songs are used to establish territory or to ward off rivals. "The nice thing about crows as pets," she says, "is that they treat you like a crow."

But crows are not widely like. Farmers, and others, believe they damage crops and destroy the nests of gamebirds. But they undoubtedly help clean up roadkills and serve, in effect, as a clean-up crew.

"To sum up," says Sports Afield, "the crow has a dubious reputation among men and fellow wildlings. Despite its remarkable intelligence, the crow has been cast in the role of the bad guy since biblical days.

"Like others dressed in black, its feathers may have marked it forever as a symbol of evil and mistrust. One must speculate on what its historical image might have been had the crow been dressed in white feathers."

Reference checks

ATLANTA (AP) — "In conducting any type of background check, whether it's for an entry-level or higher-echelon job, the investigator should be wary of accepting certain papers or documents as valid identifying information," says an expert in the field.

Paul T. Hill, director of investigations for Advance Security Inc., says Social Security cards are not considered adequate proof of identity because they can be forged or additional Social Security numbers can be obtained rather easily.

Hill also recommends employers be careful about accepting hand-carried documents or educational credentials because, in many cases, these papers can be forged. "Particularly for higher-level jobs, education credentials should always be verified, either by letter, phone or personal contact," he advises.

Opportunities will develop this coming year which will enable you to sever situations that you feel have restricted you in the past. Your new attitude will permit bygones to be bygones. LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) You'll fare far better today if you don't hold any grudges. Being vindictive will only create greater dissension. Try to turn the other cheek. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birth date and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Ask yourself: "Is my budget taking an unnecessary beating? Making excuses for needing nonessentials won't resolve your financial dilemma. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Using back-street tactics today may help you win the battle against your competitors, but you could lose the allies you'll need to win the war. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If that same, old repetitive problem hits you on the head again today, perhaps it's time to realize there may be something you are doing wrong. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There is a good chance that today your curiosity may involve you in another's troubled affairs. You'd be wise to mind your own business.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The brick wall facing you today may have been built by a vengeful individual. Rather than try to scale it, backtrack and find a new route. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Unfortunately, it won't do you any good to grumble about that pile of work today. The only way you'll get it out of your hair is to do it. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You shouldn't allow anyone to wield power over you or your children today. They could be trying to accomplish a selfish purpose at your expense. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Some day you may have to resolve an issue that keeps popping up at home, but today is not the time. All you'll do is add kindling to the fire. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to be forgiving of co-workers today if their errors have created work for you. Remember, you're not perfect. One day, you may need the same consideration. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The only way to correct a mistake on a project into which you've already poured substantial sums may be to add more funds. Before you do, make certain it's all worth it. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your goals might be worthy of extra effort, but your tactics in enlisting family cooperation to accomplish them may leave a lot to be desired.

AL roundup Kansas City returns to first place

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
Dennis Leonard is back in business... and the Kansas City Royals are back in first place.

Leonard's business is winning baseball games — 120 in his first seven seasons. But he hasn't had much of a chance since May 21 when he suffered two fractured fingers on his pitching hand thanks to a line drive off the bat of Texas' Buddy Bell.

After some rehabilitation in the minors, Leonard returned to action with the Royals last Monday in a no-decision outing. He got back in the winner's circle Sunday, allowing four hits in eight innings as Kansas City trimmed the Detroit Tigers 6-1. KC's 16th triumph in its last 22 games, coupled with California's 3-2 loss to Oakland, put the Royals one-half game ahead of the Angels in the American League West.

"The slider broke better today than it has since I got hurt," Leonard said. "Then the curve started coming around, too. It's a good feeling. I feel I have to help if we're going to win the championship."

In other AL games, the Chicago White Sox downed the New York Yankees 6-4, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Milwaukee Brewers 3-2, the Boston Red Sox blanked the Baltimore Orioles 8-0, the Seattle Mariners pounded the Minnesota Twins 10-2 and the Cleveland Indians shaded the Texas Rangers 6-4.

A's 3, Angels 2
Mitchell Page, leading off the bottom of the ninth inning against Dave Goltz, broke a tie with his second home run of the season and second in two days.

"I was told that if the third baseman was playing back, I should try to bunt my way on," Page said. "But I got a high fast ball, not a good pitch to bunt. When I hit it, I had a good feeling it would be gone."

Rickey Henderson's 109th stolen base — it came on a pitchout — keyed a two-run third inning and left him nine away from Lou Brock's single-season record of 118. California scored in the first inning on Brian Downing's leadoff homer and tied the score 2-2 in the ninth when Reggie Jackson doubled and came around on two fly balls.

White Sox 6, Yankees 4
Steve Kemp's two-run double drove in the tying and lead runs as the White Sox jumped on New York relief ace Rich Gossage for four runs in the eighth inning. Gossage walked pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston and Tony Bernazard to open the eighth and they advanced on a passed ball.

Tom Paciorek struck out, but Greg Luzinski beat out a topped roller to third, scoring Hairston. Kemp then delivered his double off the left-center field wall to score Bernazard and pinch-runner Rudy Law. Kemp scored on a single by Carlton Fisk.

Blue Jays 3, Brewers 2
Ernie Whitt singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning and Jim Clancy scattered six hits over eight innings. Alfredo Griffin led off the Toronto ninth with a walk off Jim Slaton and was sacrificed to second. One out later, Whitt lined his game-winning single between short and third. Milwaukee scored on Gorman Thomas' 32nd homer in the second inning and Robin Yount's 20th in the sixth. Hosken Powell's grounder and Whitt's sacrifice fly drove in Toronto's first two runs.

Red Sox 8, Orioles 0
Held to an infield hit for six innings by Scott McGregor, Boston paraded 14 batters to the plate in the seventh and scored all eight runs. Mike Torrez, who was hit in the head by a line drive in the fourth inning, and Bob Stanley combined on a six-hitger as the Red Sox pulled within 4½ games of Milwaukee in the AL East.

Piersall, Deeds win tournament

Mickey Piersall and Clint Deeds of Pampa shot a 125 to win the pro-scratch team event held this past weekend at the Pro-Member North Plains Country Club Tournament. Harold Friga of Pampa and Wiley McIntire of Amarillo shot a 127 to finish in a three-way tie for third. Deeds and Friga placed third and fourth respectively in amateur low scores.

Astros blast Cincinnati, 7-3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Houston's Don Sutton had billed his match-up against Cincinnati's Tom Seaver as "an old-timers' game."

When the pair of 37-year-old pitchers took the mound Sunday at Riverfront Stadium, one of them looked like an up-and-coming right hander while the other looked his age. Sutton struck out ten batters in eight innings and scattered five hits to notch his 253rd career victory with a 7-3 drubbing of the Reds.

"My control of all my pitches was as good today as it's been in my two years with Houston," said Sutton, 12-8, who has won three of his last four decisions. "I was lucky I had some runs to play with, and I was lucky I had good defense behind me.... That's a pretty darn good blend."

It was a different story for Seaver, who was going after career victory No. 265. The three-time Cy Young Award winner thought he had overcome a shoulder problem that kept him out of the rotation earlier this year — until he started warming up before the game Sunday and discovered a stiff shoulder.

"You think it might loosen up. I came in (to the clubhouse), got another stretch from the trainer, and went back out there. It didn't do any good," Seaver said.

He was back in the clubhouse after just nine pitches. Dickie Thon and Terry Puhl started the game with doubles to produce a run, and Seaver walked Ray Knight on four pitches. That was enough.

"On the first pitch he threw me, I knew something was wrong," Knight said. "There was something different in his delivery. He didn't have any arm speed at all. It looked like all the pitches he threw me were changeups. They weren't."

"It's a shame to see a guy I watched for those years (in Cincinnati) labor like that. It was obvious he was in pain. There was no velocity on the ball."

"I was expecting fastballs the way he used to throw them to me; he'd challenge you," said Thon, who went 4-for-5 with three doubles and two runs scored Sunday. "He threw me two balls away, and I was kind of confused. They were a changeup and a breaking pitch.... He looked like he was hurting."

Seaver, 5-13, said he'll rest the shoulder and hope he can pitch again before the season is over.

Pampa shooter takes second at nationals

Glen Brummett of Pampa broke a record while placing second in the Hunter Pistol Silhouette Championships held recently at Raton, N.M.

Brummett, who is employed at Titan Specialties, shot a 55 to set a new best of 60 record. However, Brummett's second-day record performance wasn't enough to push him past the marksmanship of Charles Davis of Columbus, Ga. Davis fired a record-breaking 104 out of a possible 120 to capture the two-day competition. In the first round of competition, Davis set a new record of 53, which only held up until Brummett came along the next day.

Brummett, who has been shooting competitively for three years, finished second with a total of 101.

Floyd Wine of Durango, Colo. finished third with a 97. The previous two-round record was held by Wine, who shot a 103 at this year's Colorado State Championships.

The junior champion was Joseph Benjamin Repola of Tucson, Ariz., who was shooting in only his sixth match ever. Repola chalked up an 89 in the two days.

The high woman scorer was Jean Hendricks of Belen, N.M., who scored an 84. The top senior shooter was George Rodenberg of El Paso, scoring an 83.

This marks the fourth year the national championships have been held. The competition was held at the Whittington Center in Raton.

The nationals are sponsored by the National Rifle Association of America and conducted by the New Mexico Shooting Sports Association.

Silhouette shooting consists of competitors firing at four animal silhouettes (chicken, turkey, pig, ram) from different distances. The shooters are scored on hits and misses.

Bills slip by Dallas

IRVING, Texas (AP) — This will not be a good week to be a Dallas Cowboy in Thousand Oaks, Calif., training camp.

Cocher Tom Landry had considered easing off two-a-day practices before Saturday night's National Football League exhibition game in Texas Stadium against the Buffalo Bills.

That was before the offense sputtered and coughed and the defense melted in the clutch.

The Bills then took a last-second 14-10 victory. "There's not much you can say when you're mixing players the way we were," said Landry. "The problem is that we had one good offensive drive."

In the second half we didn't have anything but fumbles and interceptions. We were in jeopardy of getting beat the whole second half, so it wasn't surprising that we got beat."

Tony Dorsett's 9-yard touchdown run and Rafael Septien's 48-yard field goal gave Dallas a 10-0 halftime lead but that's all the offense the Cowboys showed.

Landry wasn't happy with his defense, either.

"We did few positive things," he said. "It was disappointing... A lot of the Buffalo players were hurt and this should have been the pre-season game that we won."

Former Southern Methodist tailback Arthur Whittington killed the Cowboys.

Whittington, who stormed out of the Raiders' camp in a salary dispute and had worked out with the Bills only a week, caught a 2-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Matt Robinson with 39 seconds left.

"I have to make this ballclub, it's a must," said Whittington. "This is a good ballclub, a great one. This ballclub almost made the Super Bowl last year."

Whittington was put on waivers by the Raiders and claimed by the Bills. He still has a year left on his contract.

He saw considerable playing time because Buffalo's No. 1 running back, Joe Cribbs, is in a contract dispute and Rob Riddick and Van Williams have knee injuries.

"I wanted out of that place," Whittington said. "I didn't like the situation with the Raiders. They treated me badly... They brought every back they could find into camp."

Whittington was an All-State running back at Cuero, Texas, and was SMU's third-leading rusher of all-time before he left in 1977.
