At the bottom of your city budget, please pencil in another $400,000

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Payments taxpayers will make to meet three city debts are not included in the proposed $6,957,559 budget, set for consideration at a public hearing at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, according to City Manager Mack Wofford.

Also left out of the budget are the property taxes the city will use to make the $390,720 debt payments. When the expenditures to pay the debts are added to the budget, city management proposes to spend a total of $7,348,279 during fiscal 1983, which begins October 1st this year.

"This is an operating budget only," Wofford said as the reason the debt expenditures paid directly with property taxes are not listed in the budget.

Wofford said only those city debts, or obligations financed through revenue, or user fees, are included in the budget.

Three general obligation bonds, or debts to be paid directly from tax revenues and previously approved by commissioners during various years, have not been listed in the budget, Wofford said.

"They are separate budgets," Wofford said about the operating budget and the missing $400,000 obligation payments.

However, state law contained in Vernon's Annotated Texas Statutes, Art. 689a - 13, says city budgets "shall contain a complete financial statement of the city, town or village, showing all outstanding obligations of such city, town or village."

Since the budget Wofford filed with the city secretary August 4th does not list the general obligation debt expenses, nor the revenue required to fund them, he was asked about the statute.

"I don't know about that," Wofford said of the state law.

The city manager said the city expenses for next year which were left out of the proposed budget include annual payments of $79,920 and 171,680 for general obligation bonds issued by the city for street improvements in 1966 and 67 and $139,120 to pay for an obligation of about $1 million to pay for a new storm sewer along Hobart Street, approved by the city commission this year.

Wofford said the missing debt payments will show up when the city approves the tax rate for fiscal 1983. He said the tax rate will show a certain number of cents per $100 valuation dedicated to fund general city operations and a certain number of cents per $100 dedicated to the interest and sinking, or debt fund.

Of a proposed city tax rate of 60 cents per $100 valuation, Wofford said 46.8 cents will fund general operations, and 13.2 will fund the unbudgeted city debt.

Wofford's budget also shows actual spending during the previous year, fiscal 1981, was $5,592,568.

However, the outside audit conducted of city finances for the same year shows total spending was actually $6,233,116, a difference of $640,548.

Again, Wofford said his report of actual spending did not include expenditure of tax money used to pay for debt service that year, accounting for the different figures.

Also not included in the city budget is a figure of how much surplus cash or investments, if any, the city will have on hand when the new fiscal year begins.

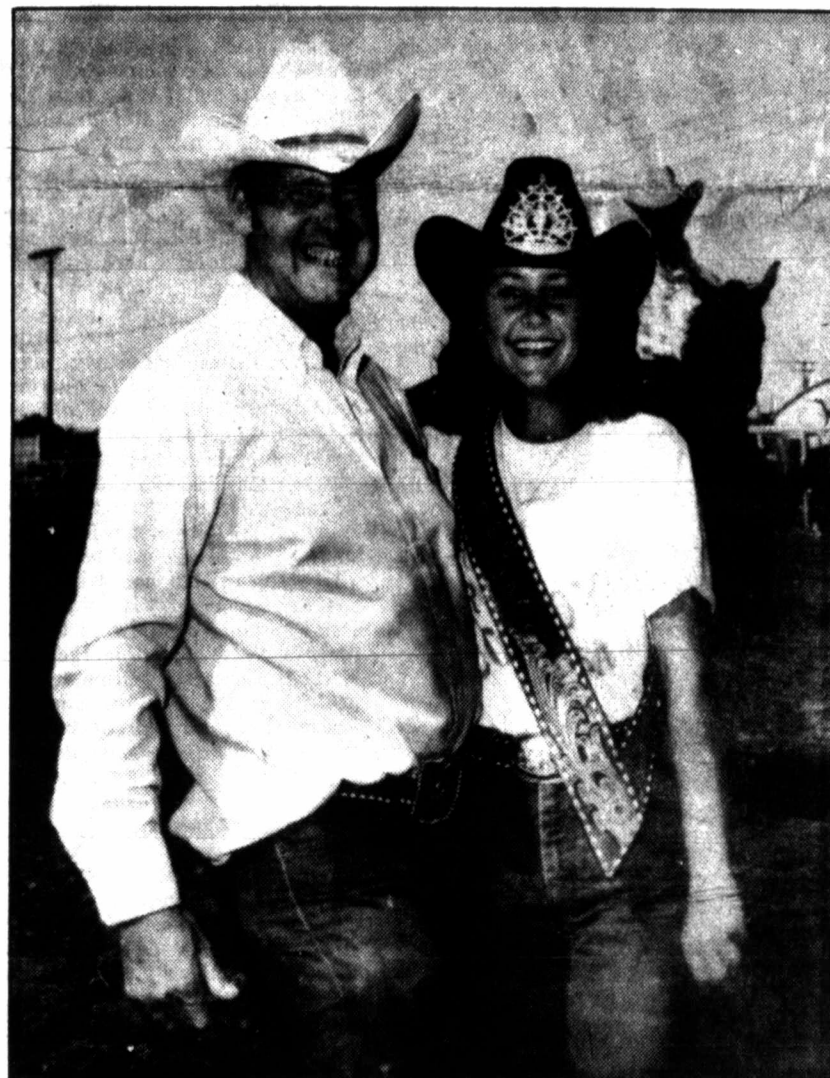

When the current year began, the city had fund balances and retained earnings of nearly $6 million.

When the year began, the city had a "fund balance" of $3,526,814, according to the audit.

In the separate water and sewer enterprise fund, the city had "retained earnings" of $2,409,975 at the start of this

Wayne Scarborough, of the Gruver-Guymon area, grins his pleasure at being named Mr. Cowboy USA in the contest held in Perryton in connection with the Miss Wheatheart festivities during the past week. With him is XIT Rodeo Queen Deana Lane, who was one of the judges in the contest, to pick the man who "looks best on a horse."

Miss Wheatheart for 1982, named at the conclusion of Friday night's pageant at the Perryton High School auditorium, is Tammy Donnell, Miss Canyon. The 18-year-old Canyon High School graduate is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Dowell of Canyon. A blue-eyed blonde, she is currently Miss Texas Teenager, and had been photographed for Texas Monthly magazine 17 times.

The 36th Annual Miss Wheatheart of America pageant was emceed by Shirley Cotran Barret of Denton, Miss America 1975, and featured cast members from UP With People as special entertainment.

Nancy Poore, 19-year-old from Norman, Okla., was named first runner-up and Mitzi Pearson, 17, of Shattuck, Okla. was second runner-up.

Murder trial begins tomorrow

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

The jury trial of Joseph Wayne Rowsey, 40, of Pampa on a charge of murder is set to begin at 9 a.m. Monday in 31st District Court here.

Rowsey is accused of killing 42-year-old Coa Janelle Freeman in a pre-dawn shooting on Sunday, January 10. The Freeman murder was the first in Pampa since 1980.

The trial will be held in the Gray County Courthouse with 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny presiding.

First to be considered in the trial are motions by defense attorney John T. White of Borger.

White filed a motion recently to dismiss the charge because of lack of speedy trial.

In another motion, he claims evidence for the prosecution was gained by an illegal search by Pampa police and the Gray County Sheriff's Department.

He has also claimed the announcement of grand jury proceedings for the trial was "premature" because no autopsy report on the victim, report of firearm identification or "other essential elements of proof" were available.

White has filed an application for probation for the accused killer.

According to first reports, at 4:48 a.m. on Jan. 10, Pampa police were notified by a passing motorist that two men were fighting over a gun at the 900 block of East Frederic.

When they arrived at the scene, police found that the men were fighting for control of a pistol in the middle of the street.

Police said the fight began at a residence two blocks away, at 453 Pitts Street.

Police found Freeman's body there, lying on a couch. Officers said she had been shot once in the arm and once in the head.

Both men, identified by police as Joseph Rowsey and Billy Freeman, Janelle Freeman's husband, were taken into custody, and a .22 caliber pistol, believed to be the murder weapon, was confiscated.

Billy Freeman was released later.

The woman was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge, who ordered an autopsy to be performed by Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Childress.

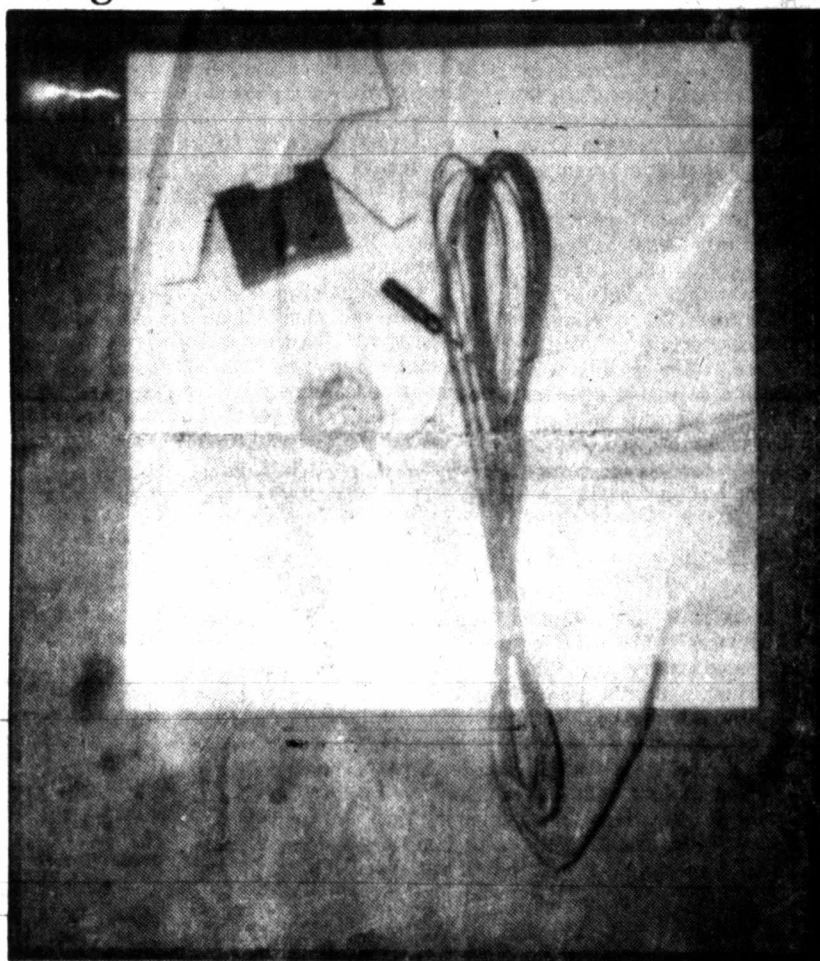

Police said witnesses' reports indicated the Freemans had been visiting the Pitts Street residence for most of that Sunday.

They said several shots were fired before the fatal shooting, and that another weapon was confiscated at the residence.

Rowsey was formally arraigned the next afternoon on the murder charge, and bond was set at $25,000 by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford.

Rowsey was detained in the county jail for several days before making bond, and was indicted Jan. 21 by grand jury on the murder charge.

Danger at the dump!

These live blasting caps were found at the city dump Saturday, and the Pampa Police Department is warning Pampa residents to look out for them. Police said the caps, used by oil drillers to perforate well pipes, may have been picked up by unwary children or adults, and they may be deadly. They can be set off by radio waves, high impacts or a slight electrical charge, according to Sergeant Johnny Bennett. The dump will be closed most of the day today as police and employees of the Welox company search the area for the explosives. (Staff photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

'Boiling oil' lawsuit starts Monday

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

Jury selection is set to begin at 9 a.m. Monday on a 223rd District Court civil suit between the parents of nine-year-old burn victim Derek Earl Holder.

Elaine Holder, the mother, claims the company part-owned by Carl Ellis Holder, the father, was negligent by allowing Derek to fall into a hot grease pit at the Laketon Processing Plant east of Pampa on August 18, 1979.

The boy suffered first, second and third degree burns over 60 percent of his body in that incident, according to the plaintiffs, and the mother has sued for $2,639,603.01 in damages for the boy's injuries.

Five days have been set aside for the proceedings.

The original petition for the suit, filed claimed damages Elaine Holder claims the boy was walking on the north side of the main rendering building at the Laketon plant, 19 miles east of Pampa, when he "slipped, walked or fell into a pit" containing "hot, near boiling grease."

In the amended petition for the suit, filed August 12, she claims he was "severely burned and permanently injured," causing him permanent injury and disfigurement.

The attorney for the plaintiff, Daniel K. Zorn of Oklahoma City, filed a medical record as evidence that shows the boy was treated at the Health Science Center in Lubbock for nearly two months in 1979 and has since then had therapy treatments.

The original petition says the pit, used to drain grease from water or steam lines, was not clearly visible because it was the same color as the concrete around it.

It is also claimed that the outside of the pit was slippery with the grease and there were no warning signs or railings around it.

The father said in answers to the plaintiff's written interrogatories that there was a "four-inch concrete ledge or curb" around the pit, and that the grease in the pit was "greenish" in color.

Carl Ellis Holder was a partner in ownership of the plant with Joseph J. Janousek at the time of the alleged incident.

Since then, he has sold his share of the company to Janousek, but a motion to change the reading of the suit to include the company only as defendant was denied by 223rd District Court Judge Don E. Cain.

The defense, represented by Richard E. Stokes Jr. of Amarillo, has invoked the doctrine of parental immunity on behalf of the father.

Cain said the parental immunity issue is to be decided during the trial.

In the defense's first amended answer to the petition, filed August 12, they claimed the boy's injuries were the "result of an unavoidable accident."

New ward boundaries reflect growth in Pampa

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

When 110 Pampa voters approved new ward boundaries for the city Saturday, the majority voted for new areas of representation that have gone unchanged for about 20 years despite population shifts.

City Manager Mack Wofford said "the growth of the city has been to the north, generally," and the new wards reflect that growth.

Because only one city commissioner represents each of the four wards, population differences between wards were evened out to make representation more fair.

Population levels in each ward were estimated by city officials before the proposal went to the election, and new boundaries drawn to include a more even number of residents in each ward.

Before the change, the population in each ward was as follows: Ward 1, in the northwest section of the city - 8,437; Ward 2, in the northeast section - 7,290; Ward 3, in the southeast section - 2,684; Ward 4, in the southwest section - 5,887.

The new population in each ward is: Ward 1 - 4,773; Ward 2 - 5,434; Ward 3 - 5,520; Ward 4 - 5,687.

Both ward-by-ward population estimates were calculated to add up to a total of 21,414, the official population of the city as determined by the 1980 census.

Wofford said he was not sure when the last ward boundary change came, but it was probably in 1963.

Since then, he said, the south wards have not decreased in

He said there also may be aesthetic reasons for the north side growth, and flatter terrain there may have made the land easier to develop.

The west boundary for Ward 2 has been moved further west, and will run along the center line of Hamilton Street, parallel to Hobart Street.

That boundary change means that Ward 1 commissioner O.M. Prigmore, who lives on Charles Street, is now living in Proposition 3, which allows commissioners to serve their current terms even though changes put them in a different ward.

Although the opinion of the Secretary of State's office was that the city election did not follow state laws because no absentee balloting was held, the resolution adopted Thursday by the commission said "it appears that the same was in all respects legally held."

No one has surfaced yet to contest the election results, however, and they will stand unless a citizen takes the city to court.

In other decisions in the election, Proposition 1 states that the commission must fill vacancies in the office of mayor or one vacancy on the commission by appointment within 30 days.

After that, the seat must be filled by special city election. Propositions 4 and 5, both passed, stipulate that the city advertise for bids on purchases of $5,000, where the previous minimum was $3,000, and require bonding for city employees that receive or disburse any funds of the city.

population, but north wards have increased due to annexation and building there.

Expansion on the north side has been "a matter of available land," he said. Landowners to the south of the city have been "less interested" in selling to developers, according to Wofford.

Ward 2.

Prigmore will be forced out of the commission in 1983, when his present term runs out, unless he chooses to change residence or contest Ward 2 commissioner Calvin Whatley in 1984.

Prigmore's present term was saved by the passage of Budget...

 fiscal year, according to the audit.
 The two money funds gave the city a balance of $5,936,789 when fiscal 1982 began.
 How much money the city will have on hand when the new year and proposed budget begin is unknown to Wofford.
 A financial expert said it would be impossible to determine from the balances shown in the audit how much of the city's money was scheduled to pay for something, or was encumbered, or how much was actually surplus cash without a specific use.
 According to the last outside audit, the city does not account for which funds have been committed for spending or for which funds are surplus.
 "Encumbrance accounting, under which purchase orders, contracts, and other commitments for the expenditure of funds are recorded in order to reserve that portion of the applicable appropriation, has not been employed by the city, the audit says."
 Wofford said, "I don't know," when he was asked for the total of the city's unencumbered fund balances, or total surplus cash.
 In his legal notice publishing the city's effective tax rate, a legal step toward setting a city tax rate, city - school Tax Assessor - Collector Charles Rand previously listed unencumbered fund balances at the city of $60,000 in the general fund and $48,000 in the interest and sinking fund.
 Wofford was asked where Rand got the figures.
 "I guess he got them from us," Wofford said.
 "I really don't know how we would find out," the city manager said about the city's surplus funds to be on hand at the start of the new year.
 "It would probably cost us our unencumbered fund balance to find out what the unencumbered fund balance is," Wofford said.
 However, the city boss said a surplus is necessary to operate the city at the start of a new fiscal year.
 "When we say we are going to spend $6.4 million, nobody brings in a box with $6.4 million on October 1st and dumps it on the floor."
 "There must be a beginning balance between the beginning of the fiscal year and the start of cash flow," Wofford said.
 The budget filed and to be considered Tuesday is based on a tax rate increase of four cents per $100 valuation, from 56 cents to 60 cents per $100.
 The tax rate hike would raise property taxes on a $30,000 home about $12 per year.
 Also included in the budget is an increase for city services, sewer, water and garbage collection, of seven percent.

 Commissioners previously said during a previous budget study session, that the city goal would be to eliminate the proposed increases.
 Commissioners suggested cutting capital expenditures for improvements to city streets and cutting a city pay raise from 7.5 to 6 percent.
 The city employs about 209 people, with about 204 as full-time workers, according to Wofford.
 According to figures released by the city manager, the city salaries total $2,991,648 per year.
 Based on 209 employees, the average city salary is $14,314 per year, or $1,192 per month.
 Wofford estimates "personal services," or total city salaries plus benefits, will cost $3,960,204 during fiscal 1983.
 He previously said the city plans to hire no additional employees next year.
 The city manager also said there has been "no proposal to reduce" the number of city employees.
 The public hearing Tuesday morning is open to any citizen of Pampa.

Fonda leaves all to wife, other daughter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Henry Fonda left the bulk of his estate to his widow Shirlee and his adopted daughter Amy, leaving nothing to his other children, actors Peter and Jane, according to court documents.
 Fonda, 77, died Aug. 12 of a chronic heart ailment.
 "They are financially independent," Fonda's will said of his decision to omit Jane and Peter Fonda, his children by his second wife, Frances Brokaw. "My decision is not in any sense a measure of my deep affection for them."
 Fonda said he was providing primarily for his wife and adopted daughter "because they are dependent on me for their support."
 William Stinehart Jr., law partner of Paul Ziffren who was named as co-executor of the estate, refused to estimate the value of Fonda's assets.
 The will, written last year, gave $200,000 to Amy Fonda Fishman, who was adopted by Fonda and his third wife, actress Susan Blanchard. Mrs. Fishman lives in Colorado with her husband.
 The rest of the estate, including his personal effects and art works, was bequeathed to his widow, according to documents filed in Superior Court on Friday.

Faltering Mexican peso takes hold after agreement, but how long will it stay?

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The Mexican peso strengthened slightly along the border Friday, but bankers said it was too early to tell when the ailing currency might stabilize.

"It's been changing constantly," said Tom Martinez, international loan officer for El Paso National Bank. "The rate depends on the market. We don't want to hold a lot of pesos because we could lose if there was another sudden drop."

Don Shuffstall, international banking officer at State National Bank in El Paso, said exchange business probably would be quiet until further announcements are made about Mexico's struggling economy.

"I think it's going to quiet down over the weekend," Shuffstall said. "I don't see much change for next week. It'll probably continue to open high and then stabilize during the day, but we're getting used to that now."

Friday, the two banks were selling pesos for 80 to the dollar and buying them at 100 to the dollar — a considerable drop from Thursday, when rates were as high as 130 pesos per dollar.

Exchange business at border banks reflected that gain. Thursday, it had been a mob scene at the two banks as customers packed into lines at teller windows to get the cheap pesos for purchases across the border.

"The lines have gotten down to almost nothing now," Shuffstall said Friday.

The strengthening of the peso occurred after an announcement that bankers from the United States and other countries had agreed to delay repayment of $10 billion in loans owed by Mexico.

Mexican finance minister Jesus Silva Herzog said the agreement calls for Mexico to continue paying interest on the loans, but to delay payment on the principal for 90 days.

Shuffstall said the announcement caused the peso to gain on markets in Mexico City, leading to corresponding changes along the border. Banks on the Mexican side of the border were exchanging pesos at an average rate of about 102 to the dollar, he said.

Some border banks, however, continued to stay out of the peso trading business Friday because Mexican banks were not giving out dollars in exchange for pesos. The dollar has remained essentially frozen in Mexico since a week after the Aug. 5 devaluation because the government wants the more stable U.S. currency to bolster its treasury.

"We're not trading at all because we have no place to sell them," said Irma Garcia, an international banking officer at Texas Commerce Bank in McAllen. "We just have to be patient and wait."

A growing number of businesses on the American side of the border are refusing to accept the peso because of its instability, Martinez said.

"We're telling them they shouldn't accept pesos right now because we can't exchange them for dollars at the Mexican banks," he said.

The dollar freeze has hurt businessmen on the Mexican side of the border because they need dollars to import goods from their neighboring cities and to pay off loans on the American side, Martinez said.

"Right now, we don't have much of a problem (collecting on loans) because most of the loans were up to date," he said. "But if they keep the dollar frozen, then we might have problems."

Lawyers ask murder trial be moved

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Lawyers for a man accused of fatally stabbing a high school cheerleader 38 times have asked a state judge to relocate the murder trial scheduled to begin next month.

Defense attorneys for Wesley Wayne Miller, a former football player at Castleberry High School who friends say was a spurned suitor of the victim, filed the change of venue motion Friday in state district court.

Miller, 19, is accused of the Jan. 21 killing of Retha

Stratton, also a Castleberry student. Ms. Stratton's body, stabbed 38 times with a kitchen knife, was found in the closet of her Fort Worth duplex.

Attorney Jack Strickland said a fair jury probably could not be selected in Fort Worth because of extensive news coverage of the case.

Strickland said the change of venue motion was based on local news coverage and on a story in a recent issue of Detective magazine, titled "Who Butchered the Pom Pom Girl?"

"We feel like the excessive publicity is going to make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to get a fair and impartial jury here," Strickland said.

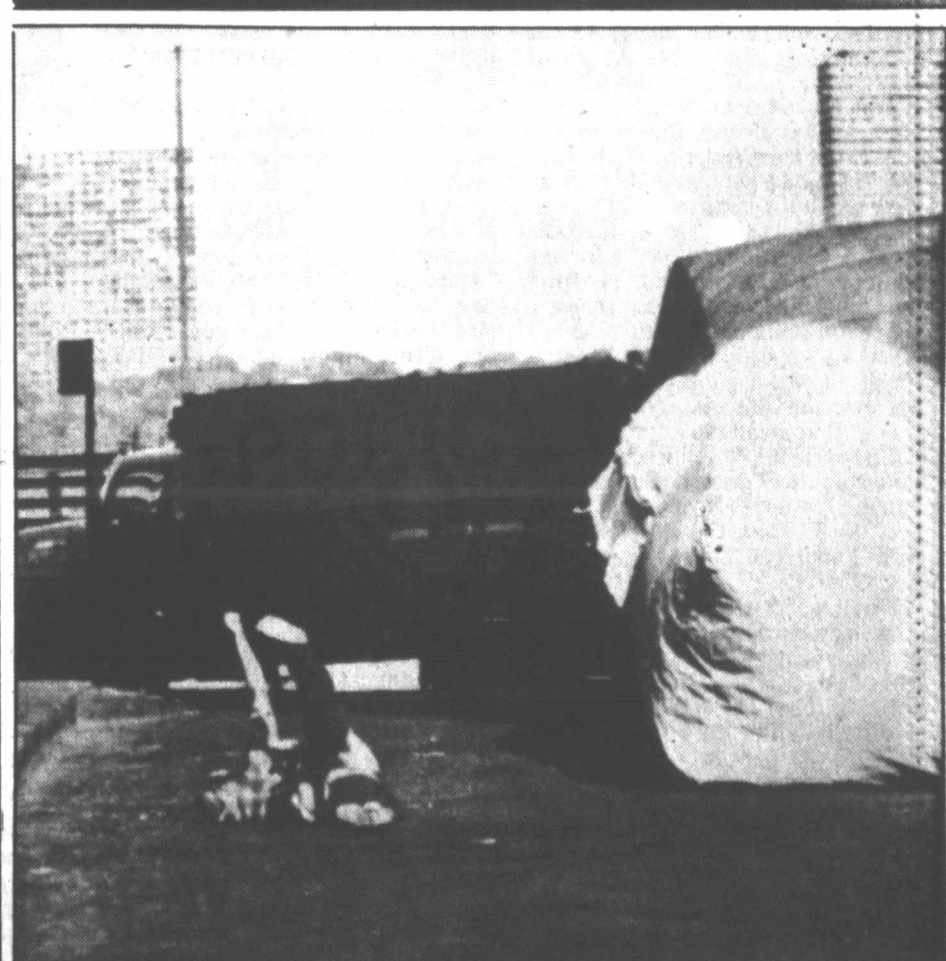

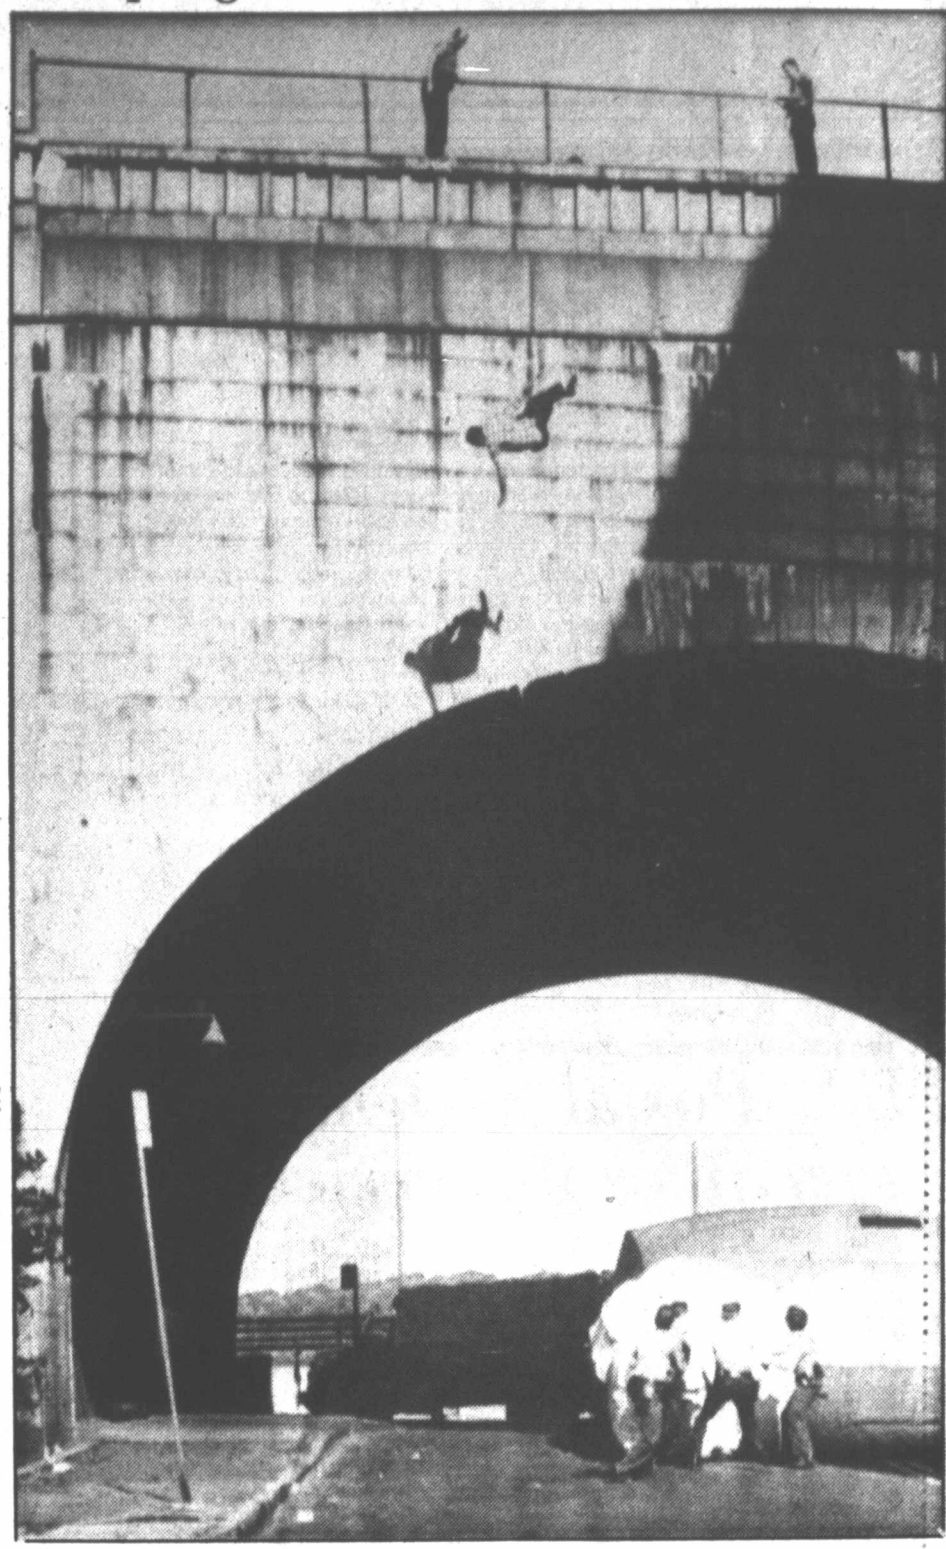

"I don't think you can ever give enough weight to the prejudicial nature of a story like that" in the magazine, he said.

Strickland and defense attorney Bill Lane also filed a request to bar the public and the press from a pretrial hearing scheduled Sept. 3 to discuss Miller's confession to the crime.

State District Judge Gordon Gray scheduled a hearing on the pretrial motions Sept. 1. The trial is set to begin Sept. 13.

Death plunge

Despite the efforts of New York police, a man later identified as Ralph Garcia jumped to his death from a bridge in Manhattan Saturday. Two police officers on the bridge were unable to talk the man out of the suicide jump, and officers below worked frantically to position an air cushion bag beneath him to break his fall. Garcia purposely jumped wide to miss the bag. Garcia told police he had nothing to live for when he jumped. (AP Laserphotos)

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

U.S. Postal System sacrifices its service

In 10 years as a public corporation, the U.S. Postal Service has served commercial mailers better than it has the 200 million private citizens.

According to a recent study by the National Academy of Public Administration, postal patrons are regularly affronted by out-of-order stamp vending machines, branch post office lobbies locked at night, and 20-cent letters that take as long to get there as 8-cent letters did a decade ago.

Still, the Nixon administration's massive reorganization in 1971 surely saved the doddering, 200-year-old Post Office Department from collapse under the weight of archaic practices and rising mail volume.

As a public corporation, the Postal Service has increased its capital assets by $3 billion, handled a larger volume of mail with fewer employees, and reduced its operating deficit substantially. In fact, it has learned to serve bulk mailers so well that residents are being snowed under by junk mail.

Nevertheless, the survey points out that the Postal Service has made these gains at the sacrifice of employee courtesy and customer services. The National Academy recommends the Postal Service begin simplifying its "excessively complex" rate structure with four classes and 38 subclasses of mail, and requiring all employees, rather than just some, to be helpful and courteous to patrons.

Despite all the misrouted 20-cent letters, it might be of some comfort to note that, while postage rates rose 88 percent from 1971 to 1980, the cost of first class mail is still cheaper in this country than in any other Western industrialized nation.

The Persian Gulf burden

One way to break the cycle of increased spending and taxes is to challenge the tenets of received political wisdom, to entertain the notion that some of the things that "everybody knows" just aren't so.

Let's start with the Persian Gulf. "Everybody knows" that the United States has a vital stake in stability in that region. We've got to keep the oil flowing or suffer serious economic and political consequences. That's why we shuttle diplomats, send foreign aid to all and sundry, sell AWACS to Saudi Arabia, and need to assemble a Rapid Deployment Force of 200,000 personnel.

If you'll excuse the metaphor, most of these assumptions are built on shifting sand.

For starters, a total cutoff of oil from the Middle East would create, by itself, only minor inconvenience for American consumers. As late as this June, 8.93 percent of the petroleum used in the U.S. came from Arab countries. One percent of that came from Algeria, so the U.S. got less than 8 percent of its oil from Persian Gulf countries. That's not a misprint. Since the price of domestic crude was deregulated, foreign dependency has been steadily declining. And, for various reasons, we're importing increasing amounts of what we do use from Nigeria, Venezuela, Mexico, the Virgin Islands and even the United Kingdom.

Does that mean the Persian Gulf is not important? No, indeed. It's very important to Western Europe and Japan. Western Europe gets about half its oil from the Persian Gulf, while Japan gets about 75 percent of its oil there.

This dependence has been made an American burden, however, because of agreements our government has entered into. Through the International Energy Authority, established after the oil embargo of 1974, a 7 percent shortfall in international oil shipments triggers a complex shortage-sharing mechanism. So if the Persian Gulf were in flames, the U.S. would not only lose the oil shipped from that region, but would be obliged to share what it's importing from other countries with Western Europe and Japan.

Does this serve to explain why the Rapid Deployment Force, designed to "protect our interests" in the Persian Gulf, and estimated to cost about $20 billion in start-up costs and perhaps another $20 billion in additional fighters, cargo planes, tanks, assault ships and aircraft carriers related to Persian Gulf interests, is an all-American affair? Perhaps the Europeans and Japanese know a free ride when they see one. Or, perhaps they're aware of the difficulties that would be involved in any effort by outsiders to keep oil flowing from the Persian Gulf. There's a big difference between occupying an oil field and running it. In Saudi Arabia more than 700 oil wells are connected by 7,000 miles of pipelines and 150 processing plants and pumping stations. A few well-placed missiles or even a few sticks of dynamite could knock the system out of commission for a long time.

The current disarray of OPEC should tell us that the Persian Gulf countries need the U.S. more than it needs them. Even a newly installed revolutionary regime would have to sell oil somewhere (note Iran). Any oil cutoff is likely to be temporary and only mildly discomfiting to the United States. If anything, Western Europe and Japan are likely to adjust to new political circumstances more quickly than the U.S. would.

There may be legitimate concerns about Soviet expansionism in the Middle East. However, the Soviets might be more effectively deterred from outright military expansionism by their debacle in Afghanistan than by counter-threats from a Rapid Deployment Force. Insofar as the Soviets operate through subversion and revolutionary stooges rather than direct military action, the RDF, we say again, is an inappropriate response.

There are large American companies with substantial investments and prospects in the Middle East. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has built $24 billion worth of construction projects there. U.S. weapons manufacturers have sold $34 billion worth of arms to Saudi Arabia since 1973. Powerful special interests do have large-scale concerns about the Middle East.

But for the average American, the importance of the Persian Gulf has been vastly overstated. Should the worst happen, even with the unfortunate sacrificial arrangements made with U.S. trading partners, the result for us would be lower thermostats and longer gasoline lines for a while. Should we be willing to sacrifice American lives and our personal treasure to forestall even serious inconveniences?

The United States needs to rethink its "vital interests" in the Persian Gulf and dismantle the ambitious Rapid Deployment Force before it becomes a permanent Force and inviolable part of the military establishment. Junk the shortage-sharing scheme, and the myth of U.S. oil dependency, if it ever had any validity, is a thing of the past. Recognition of the new reality could save us tens of billions — right now — in military spending.

We need ramps
I am writing to you to see if we could get something done in the downtown area on ramps for the handicapped.

For you see, I am handicapped and in a wheelchair. I like to go shopping just like anyone else, but the only place a person like me can shop is the new Pampa Mall. Don't get me wrong, I am proud of the Pampa Mall, but every once in a while there are things I like to go and shop for in the downtown area. It is very difficult since there are no ramps.

I needed some items from one of the stores on the west side of the downtown area and there was no way my sister could get me up the two steps. If people only knew how frustrating that is, they would want to change it too.

I don't think I am the only handicapped person in Pampa that has been upset about this.

The downtown area is not the only place that doesn't have ramps or parking spaces for the handicapped. Let's change it, Okay?

I hope the right people read this and can do something to help us that can't help ourselves.

Thank you for letting me speak my peace.

P.S. I feel I should also mention that Coronado Center has ramps in different areas and I do appreciate it also.

We, the government
Please tell me why that when Mr. Reagan was running for office he was all for the people? He was quoted several times stating about what our country was built on — (1) honor (2) pride (3) backbone (4) hard work (5) free enterprises. Now what is he doing? He wants to cut Social Security and raise taxes — why does he not cut crazy things in Washington like salaries?

Inflation goes up a point and Congress gives themselves a raise, at our expense. I'm curious to know if the majority of the American people know just who the government is. I hear comments of "We will get that from the government." Well dear old buddies — that's us! That's you and me. The American population is the government. It's not some kind of Santa Claus.

Get rid of these silly billion dollar programs that tell us how long it takes the American housewife to make a tuna casserole in her kitchen.

Social Security is not a handout from the government. This was and is a fund that was established to supplement retired American incomes. This was paid into by the working people of our economy. The only reason we are out of Social Security money is because our trusted and honest elected officials took this money out of its account and put it in the General Fund Account that they had so misappropriately misused! Why should our elderly pay for their mistakes?

This country was not built on handouts — why must we try and run it that way now? The only people as a society that we are indebted to should only be the elderly as previously mentioned, the mentally retarded and the handicapped. Why should the American people support the able bodied so they can lay around on their backsides in order to go get their food stamps and have us pay their rent through HUD? Why doesn't Washington take the free rent and free meal tickets away and leave Social Security alone?

Without the free handouts, our economy could only become stronger because we would have able bodied people out hustling for a living instead of lazily laying around not using their backs nor minds.

And about this across the board 10 percent tax, I hear everyone talking about it and everyone is for it but I have read nothing in print that Washington is considering it! If we could get that measure passed it's a proven fact that we (the government) would be out of debt in two years, and our elected officials could still continue to give themselves raises that the general public is against.

I'm like Eddy Childs — I'm mad too! So is the general public as a whole. When are we going to band together and do something instead of talk?

Public hearing a farce
Yesterday's newspaper advertisement in The Pampa News (8-17), advertising a public hearing pertaining to school taxes was nothing less than a farce. It was indeed a ridiculous proceeding and a failure from the taxpayer's standpoint. Two of the board members were absent including the chairman. The Acting chairman and board members present, with the school superintendent, were huddled around a table mumbling to themselves, performing their parliamentary duties, and it was impossible for the taxpaying audience present to comprehend what was taking place.

The chairman was asked to turn on the speaker system by one in the audience, or stand to deliver his comments, but the chairman refused.

Each item on the agenda was quickly passed, including increased tax rates and amending last year's budget to conform to expenditures exceeding the budget of approximately $1,200,000.00. In other words, public hearings of a budget are a folly and even though we're into a new year of expenditures, last year's budget was doctored or amended to conform with the board's past actions. An excess spending above the adopted budget means nothing to the board and superintendent, and evidently the board figures the taxpayer is too stupid to understand what goes on.

The board and superintendent's actions indicate that the only qualifications the taxpayer has in picking up the tab for their fiscal irresponsibility.

Up Close

Scott Hahn, the 40-year-old manager of the Pampa Firestone Tire Store, is a thankful man these days.

"I just thank God he put me in the right place at the right time, with the proper knowledge."

The "right place" was a swimming beach at Lake Altus, Okla.

The "right time" was about 4 p.m., July 15th.

The "proper knowledge" was Hahn's study of artificial respiration as a Boy Scout.

What the Pampa man did when the circumstances came together was to bring a little girl back from the other side.

The other side is death, the place where a 4-year-old Altus girl would be today without her chance meeting with Scott Hahn.

Hahn was born and raised here in Pampa and, is a 1960 graduate of Pampa High School.

He has been with the Firestone Company since he graduated from college at Texas Tech University in 1965.

His service with the tire company was interrupted in 1966 when he was drafted by the army.

Hahn served as a Spanish translator at the National Security Agency in Washington, D.C., during his four years of service in the army.

He learned his Spanish in high school, college and during army training, and he said his job with the NSA was "interesting and good duty."

"Since it was during Vietnam, it was a lot better than the options," Hahn said.

Hahn was on educational leave from the army, working on a master's degree at Tech, when he met his wife, Jana.

When Jana's job transferred her from Lubbock to Detroit, Mich., Scott followed with another position with Firestone.

The couple married there and had their first child, Scott, 10.

"We lived in Grosse Point Woods, a suburb of Detroit. We like to say we lived there. Grosse Point is a pretty nice place — Detroit is such a hole," Hahn said.

After another transfer with Hahn's company, the couple moved to Oklahoma City, where the couple's other children, Sean, 8, and Suzie, 5, were born.

The Hahns enjoyed Oklahoma City, but Scott wanted to return to Pampa. He transferred here in 1977 and plans to stay in his hometown for good.

"It is a good place to raise kids, and we are involved in a lot of things, like church and scouting," Hahn said about Pampa.

Reluctant hero

It is not glamorous, but Hahn enjoys his life here with his family.

Every year, Hahn takes one of his four weeks of vacation time, and he and his sons go off by themselves, usually camping.

It was on a Tuesday morning last month that Hahn and his boys left Pampa in a 1973 Buick, pulling a camper trailer.

The group set out for a week of camping at Lake Altus.

"It's the first time I have been there — it is a real nice lake, about the size of Lake Meredith.

"We pulled into a trailer site with all the hook ups, near the roped-off swimming area of the lake, about noon.

"There is a big, sandy beach, and no boats are allowed in the area.

"The boys like to swim — my wife is the only fisherman in the family.

"We swam, laid around, and just enjoyed doing nothing. We cooked our meals in the trailer. My oldest son thinks he's something of a chef now," Hahn said about the first two and a half days of the family outing.

Nothing out of the ordinary there, just a family enjoying a restful vacation together outdoors in the sun.

But what happened that Thursday afternoon was to become, "Without a doubt, the single, most important thing that's ever happened to me," Hahn said.

It was about 3:30 or 4 in the afternoon, and Hahn and his boys were in the swimming area, floating on tubes and rubber rafts.

"I was out about 60 or 70 feet from the beach, and I saw a man, in his 30s, carrying a limp girl out of the water.

"The man turned out to be her father, and the little girl had drowned.

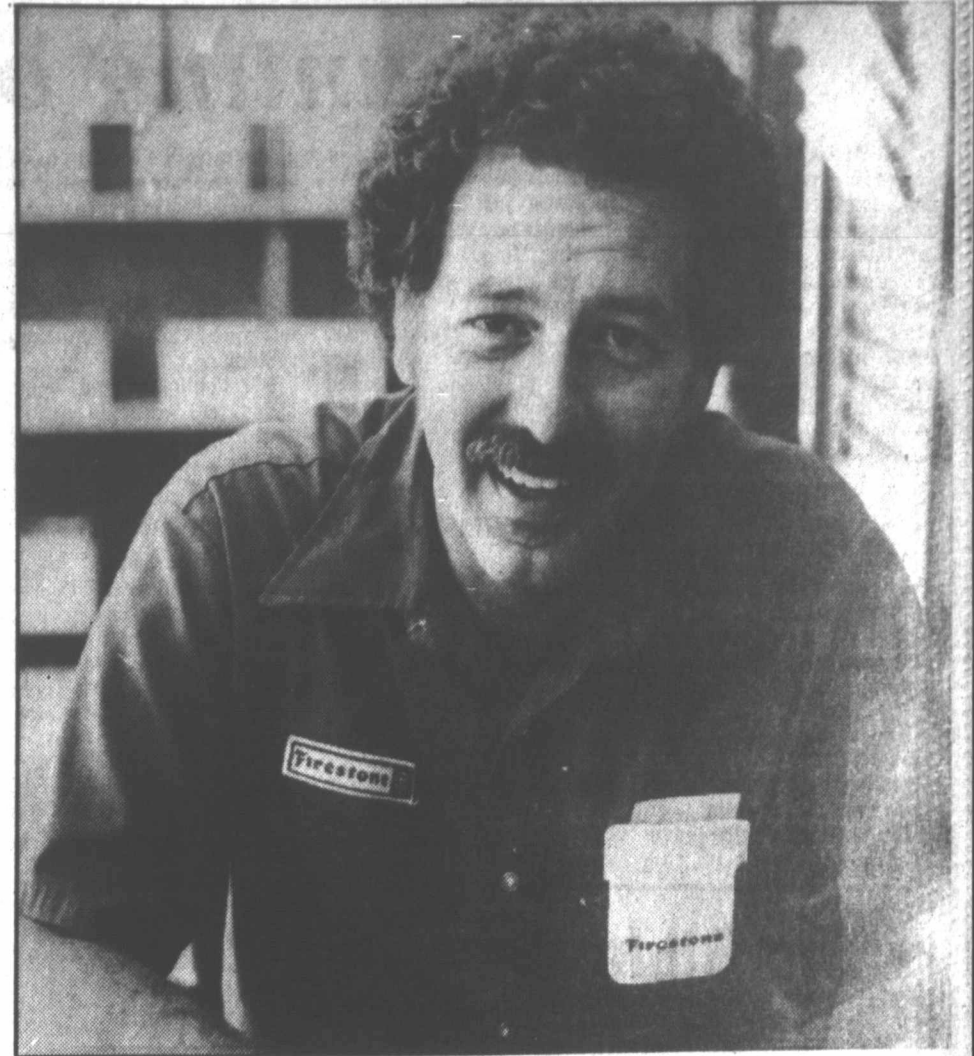

"The water was about five - feet deep, and I guess the parents turned their backs on her for about a minute.

"Her daddy found her floating and carried her to the beach.

"Her mother began screaming and crying, over and over again, 'Allie, Allie, Allie!' She was hysterical, totally irrational, the way a mother might get.

"Another man began mouth - to - mouth. I hate to say he wasn't doing it right, but he wasn't. Her chest wasn't rising.

Story and photos by Jeff Langley

"According to what I learned as a scout and what I later taught as a scout leader, I could see he wasn't doing it right — her chin wasn't tilted up. And when an adult gives a child mouth - to - mouth, he covers the entire mouth and nose.

"I went to see if I could help, and I told the man to do two things. But it didn't come out that way — it came out all garbled. I was scared and excited.

"Somehow, I don't know how it happened, but I just replaced him.

"When I arrived, her face was totally purple. I tilted her head back and gave her breaths.

"I probably gave her a dozen or two breaths, and each time her chest rose, there were these gurgling sounds and cherry juice and stuff came out of her mouth.

"She had been eating cherries, but I don't know if that had anything to do with her drowning.

"Anyway, I kept giving her breaths and saying 'breathe, honey, breathe, honey.'

"Finally, she took one shallow breath. I kept giving her breaths, and then she would take one, shallow breath. Then, she began breathing on her own, until I tapered off completely.

"After about 30 minutes, the ambulance arrived from Lone Wolf, Okla., and they gave her oxygen and took her to the hospital.

"Only then did I get scared. I realized then she had been dead and might have stayed that way. I got scared.

"I called my wife later and told her what happened. She was real proud and called the preacher, my mother and my friends.

"My wife tracked down the hospital where the girl was taken, and she found out her name and age.

"The hospital told her, 'she's sitting up in bed, and she's going to be fine.'

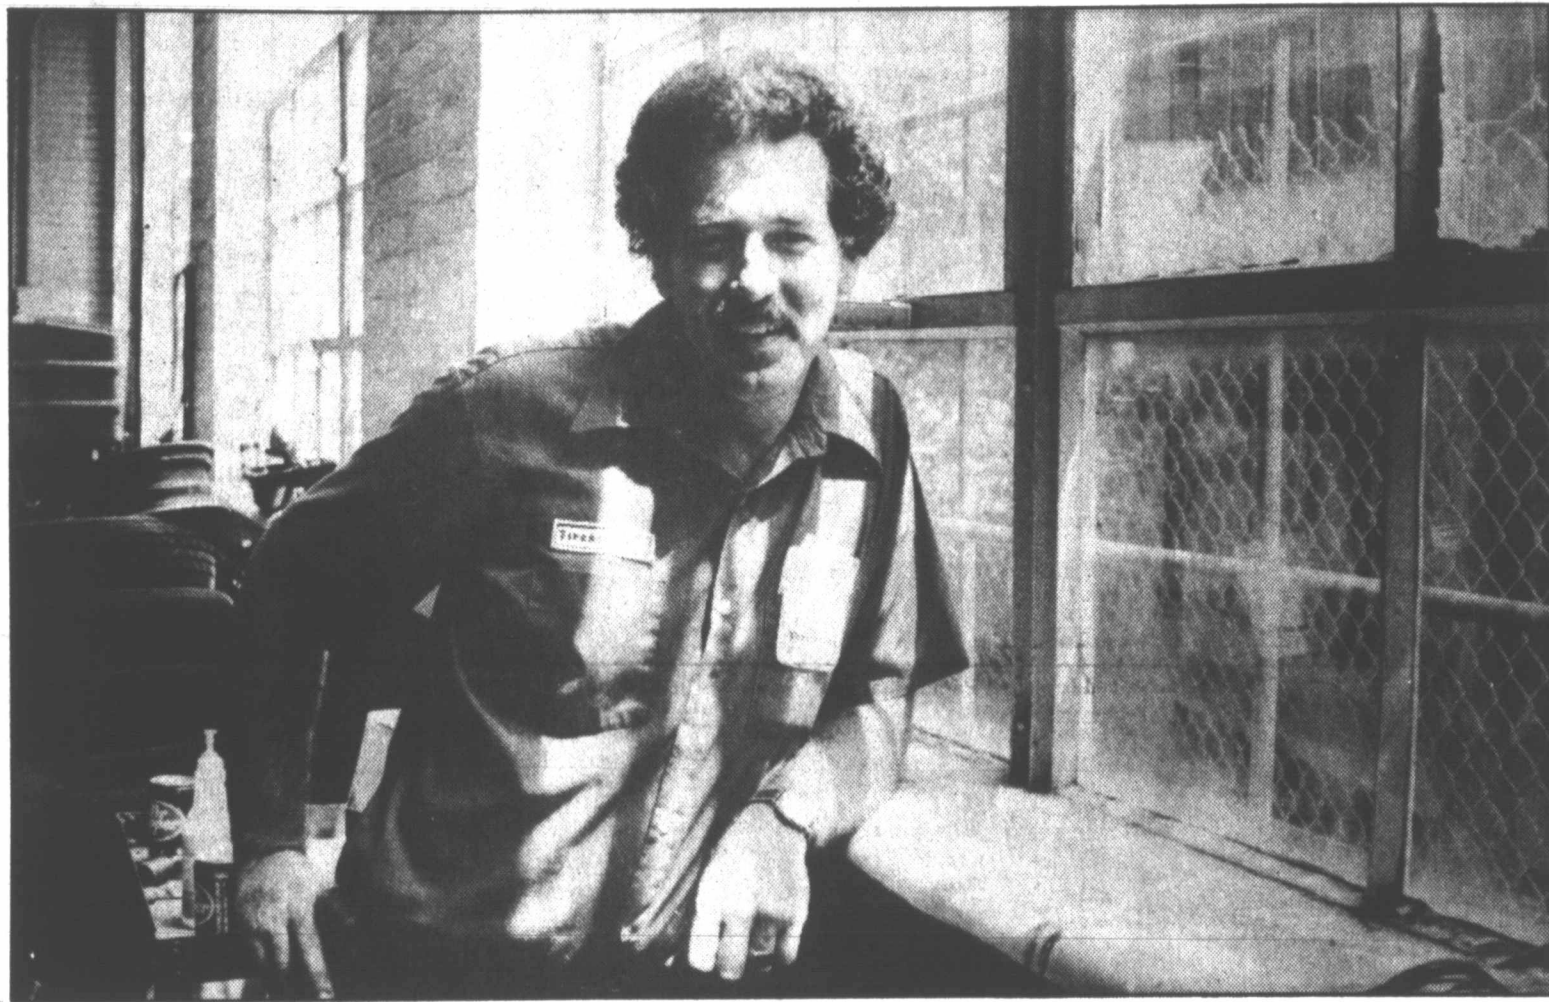

"I didn't even know it until we got home.

"My wife found out she was from Altus and called her parents to talk to them. I didn't want to talk — they might have thought I was just looking for thanks or something.

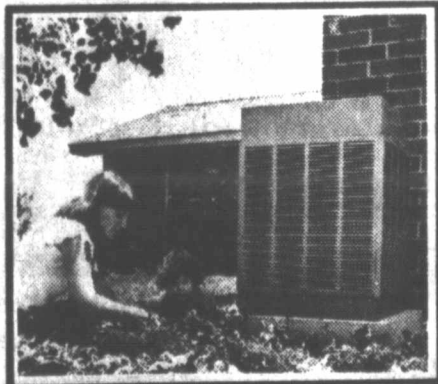

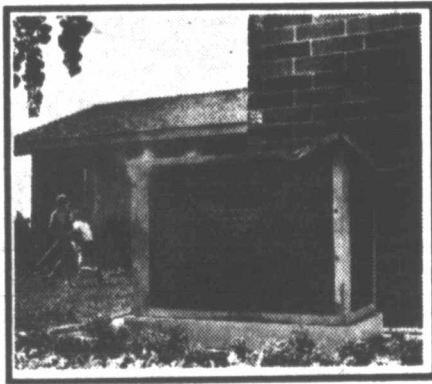

"I'm thankful that a whole lot of circumstances led to what happened.

"For one thing, my training as a scout. I was an Eagle Scout when I was a kid. Except, when you are an Eagle Scout, we say you are always an Eagle Scout," Hahn said.

Little Arlie Harliss and her parents are happy Hahn took seriously his motto, "Be Prepared."

Feds counting on enforcement to collect tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and the Reagan administration are counting on tougher enforcement of the tax laws to produce a big chunk of the $98.3 billion that would be raised over the next three years under a bill awaiting the president's signature.

The most disputed portion of the bill is a compliance measure requiring that 10 percent of most interest and dividends be withheld for tax purposes, just as a part of wages are now withheld.

Withholding would bring in an estimated $10.6 billion over the next three years. During the first year, Treasury officials estimate, two-thirds of the increased collections would represent advance payment of taxes on such income, because the government would have gotten the money anyway at tax time. But in future years, almost all the money would come from people who now are avoiding taxes, because they wouldn't ever had paid without the withholding system.

Withholding would begin July 1, 1983. Accounts earning less than $150 a year would be exempt. No withholding would be required from individuals who paid less than $600 in total tax the previous year or from elderly persons who paid $1,500 or less.

The compliance provisions include tougher penalties and stiffer reporting requirements on such income as state and local tax refunds, capital gains and government securities. Most pensions would be subject to withholding unless the recipient signs a paper opposing it.

Restaurants with more than 10 employees would have to provide the Internal Revenue Service sales figures to help improve tax collections from tips.

Withholding and other compliance measures in the bill would bring in about $21 billion. Another $6.9 billion increase in collections is expected from hiring additional IRS agents.

Other key provisions:

— INDIVIDUAL DEDUCTIONS: Only medical expenses that exceed 5 percent (rather than 3 percent) of gross income could be deducted. The up-to-$150 deduction for half the cost of health insurance, even if no other medical deductions are claimed, would be eliminated. Starting in 1984, all prescription drugs and insulin could be lumped with other expenses in reaching that 5 percent threshold. Over-the-counter drugs could not be deducted.

Present law allows a deduction for all but $100 of uninsured casualty losses, such as from fire. The bill allows a deduction for losses that exceed 10 percent of gross income and after the first $100 is paid.

— CIGARETTES: The federal tax on cigarettes would be doubled to 16 cents a pack; on Oct. 1, 1985, the tax would drop back to eight cents.

— TELEPHONES: The 1-percent tax on phone service would rise to 3 percent in 1983 through 1985 and expire in 1986.

— AIR TAXES: Effective Sept. 1, the 5-percent tax on passenger tickets would rise to 8 percent; passengers leaving on international flights would have to pay an extra $3; a 5-percent tax would be imposed on air freight; the tax of 4 cents per gallon on gasoline for non-commercial aviation would rise to 12 cents; a 14-cent tax would be imposed on non-commercial jet fuel.

— UNEMPLOYMENT TAX: The employer-paid tax that finances unemployment compensation would be raised by about $1.20 a month per worker.

No deductions on their paychecks

Gerald Hankins, the authority administrator, said a plant employee suggested buying the sheep. One worker had been paid $75 a week to spend eight hours mowing the

PLO begin leaving Beirut under French guns and declare victory

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The first contingent of PLO guerrillas evacuated Lebanon by ship today, waving Palestinian flags and huge portraits of Yasser Arafat and chanting "Revolution Until Victory" as their comrades in west Beirut saluted them with thunderous volleys of gunfire.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, architect of the Lebanese invasion that began 11 weeks ago, watched the ship, a chartered car-ferry, leave and told Israeli reporters at the Beirut harbor the guerrillas had suffered "a crushing defeat... It is a blow from which it will be hard to recover..."

"The PLO has lost its kingdom of terrorism" from which it carried out "the cruelest, most atrocious terrorist actions against Israel and throughout the world," Sharon said.

The ferry, a Cypriot ship named the Sol Georgious, carrying about 500 guerrillas, their AK-47 assault rifles and packs, left about 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT), bound for Larnaca, Cyprus. A gunboat believed to be French trailed the ferry. The departure was about two hours ahead of schedule and came nine hours after French paratroopers deployed at the port.

Some of the guerrillas wore garlands of white flowers around their necks and settled into striped lounge chairs on the canvas-topped upper deck of the ferry, painted white, with two yellow smokestacks at the stern. One guerrilla draped a red, white, green and black Palestinian flag over the side of the ferry, and another blew a kiss to Beirut before boarding.

In Christian east Beirut, AP correspondent Samuel Koo reported people crowded around radios, applauding when news bulletins gave updated reports on the departure preparations. "Millions of thanks to Mr. (Philip C.) Habib," said Carlos Berberian, a haberdasher. "There will be peace and our city will be one once again," he told Koo. Habib kept a telephone line open to Washington from the U.S. ambassador's residence in suburban Baabda.

The stage was set Friday for the arrival of the peacekeeping force when the PLO handed over two captured Israelis and the bodies of nine Israeli dead. Then the guerrillas began detonating the land mines they had laid during the 2½-month Israeli siege of the city.

The United States is contributing 800 Marines to the peacekeeping force; they are due to arrive Wednesday. President Reagan said Friday they will play a "carefully limited, non-combatant role" of no more than 30 days' duration and will be withdrawn if fired upon. An additional 500 French troops and 530 Italian troops will round out the peacekeeping force.

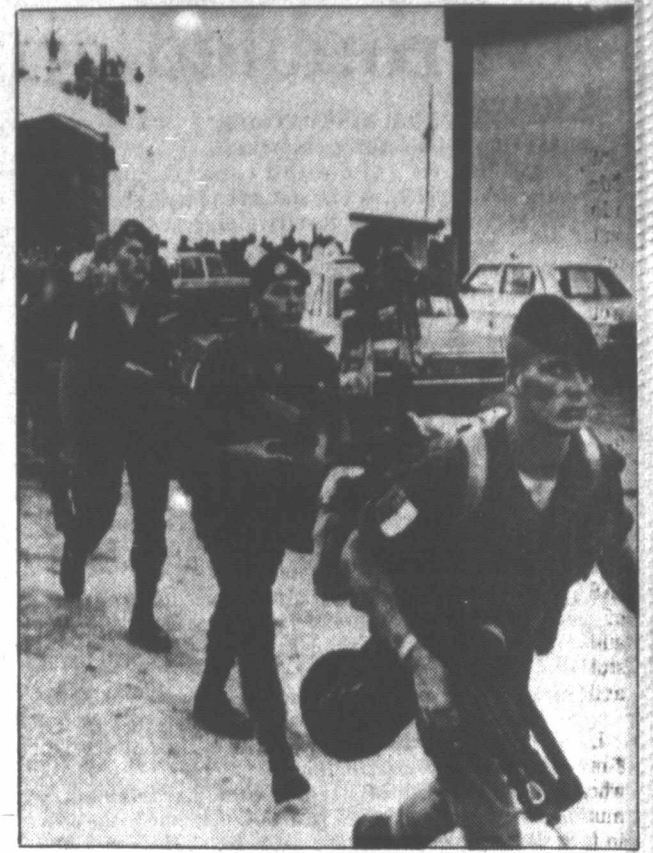

PLO spokesman Zuhail Nature said the first contingent of 400 guerrillas will go to Larnaca, Cyprus, about 125 miles northwest of Beirut.

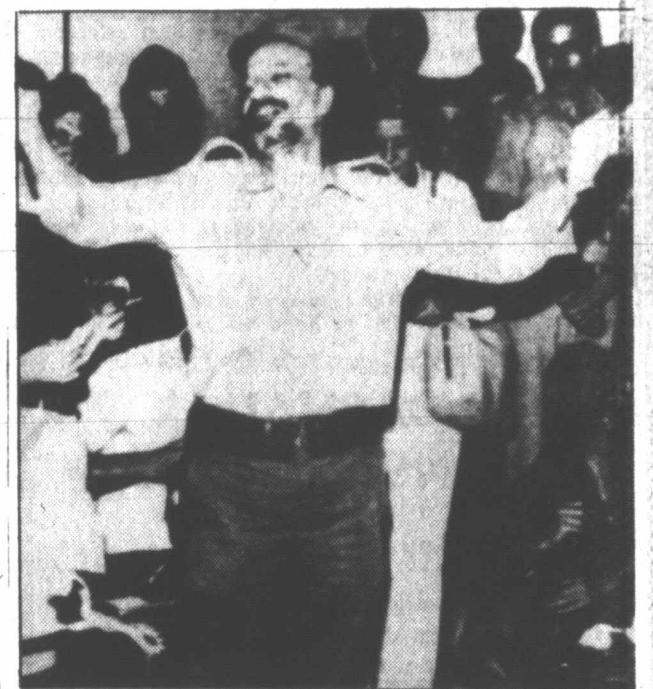

Every Palestinian who owned a gun fired it as the first boatload of PLO terrorists were loaded at a West Beirut dock Saturday. The noisy celebration left several people injured. (AP Laserphoto)

Troubled centennial for America's 'Good News' newspaper

By RICH KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Grit turned a troubled 100th birthday, beset by declining circulation and rising costs that could spell bad news for the country's biggest little "good news" newspaper.

Largely unknown in the nation's big cities, the tabloid-sized weekly newspaper offers a smorgasbord of family features with such titles as "Twins: Twice the Fun for Mom and Dad," "Old Grape Juice Provokes Barnyard Uproar" and "Indiana Pop. Uses Puppets to Solve Crimes," mixed among recipes, press patterns and ads for mail order products, farm equipment and health aids.

Its contents remain relatively unchanged since Dietrick Lamade, a 23-year-old German-born printer, took over the paper in 1884, two years after it was first published.

No one's sure where Grit got its name, says President James Crossley. "We think it comes from the old American stick-to-it fortitude," he said. "It means 'true grit.'"

Grit's bread-and-butter readers have been people from rural areas, particularly the South and Midwest. But its audience has aged and new, younger readers have not picked up the paper loved and revered by an older generation.

Huge postal and newsprint increases severely pinched revenues and forced Lamade's grandchildren to sell the weekly in March 1981 to ADVO-System Inc., a direct-mail printer and distributor based in Hartford, Conn.

"We were running out of steam," said James Lamade, a grandson and former Grit vice president. "It came to the point where we didn't have the wherewithal to continue it as a viable publication."

With a new owner came change. Long-time editors, born and raised here, were replaced and Edwin Goodpaster, a veteran editor with Time and the Washington Post, was hired as president and publisher.

During new and younger readers was a high priority for Goodpaster, an avid outdoorsman who once edited a string of rural papers. Hired in November, he jumped into the job with a zest that impressed the Grit news staff.

For the first time, copies of the paper, marked with praise or criticism, came down to the newsroom from the front office.

The national edition, which in 1978 was dressed up with a picture coverage to attract newstand and supermarket sales, was steered on a course closer to America's rural heart.

A network of stringers was revitalized; editorials were turned over to reader-written essays; and columnists focusing on family or rural life were added.

One letter-writer, Corrine Pollak of Hartwick, N.Y., so impressed Goodpaster that he hired her to write a weekly column chronicling day-to-day events as seen from the restaurant she and her husband own.

But Goodpaster left abruptly in June. His departure reportedly stemmed from differences over spending priorities, but neither he nor Crossley would comment.

Then the new owners announced a layoff that trimmed 10 percent of Grit's workforce and cut the editorial staff from 25 to 15, sparking rumors the paper was about to fold.

The paper's problems are reflected in its circulation figures. From a peak of 1.5 million in 1962, Grit steadily lost readers until last year when its circulation sank to about 650,000.

Grit also lost many of its biggest boosters, a sales force of boys and girls which at one time numbered 35,000. They hawked the paper in return for $3 to $5 in weekly profits or prizes. That figure has now fallen to 12,000.

Over the years, Grit has counted John Glenn, Gene Autry,

Tommy Dorsey, Burl Ives and Loretta Lynn among its sales crew. Today they sell the paper at 45 cents per copy; on the newsstand it costs 50 cents.

Changing and more affluent lifestyles have dried up that delivery system.

"Kids seem less willing to spend the effort and time to deliver the paper for peanuts when they can get more money from their parents in weekly allowance," said Terry Ziegler, former Grit editor.

To compensate, Grit is working harder on mail subscriptions, which, at $13.50 a year, stand at an all-time high of about 400,000, said Crossley, who started with the paper 18 years ago as an assistant treasurer.

Crossley says the paper will survive.

"We are not planning on closing our doors," he said in an interview at Grit's headquarters, a distinctive turn-of-the-century brick and stone building. Overall national circulation is expected to climb to 725,000 this year, according to Crossley, the first annual circulation gain in years.

A recent cover featured a picture of a father-daughter arm-wrestling team and teased readers with headlines for stories on "The Community Where Clergy Join Police on Patrol" and "Artist Recalls Days of the Noble Outhouse."

"We're not going to change the paper into a scandal sheet," Crossley said. "We're going to stick with the basic ingredients."

He and the paper's editors are convinced there is an audience for what he called "a wholesome family publication."

Referring to the recent local centennial edition that marked the paper's anniversary, Crossley said:

'Love link' of insects may have been found

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the long search for biological weaponry to fight destructive crops pests, Agriculture Department scientists think they may have found a love link that could wreak "sexual chaos" among susceptible insects.

Cotton bollworms and tobacco budworms, as an example, are being used in experiments which apparently drive the insects into such frenzy that they literally love each other to death.

According to scientists of the department's Agricultural Research Service, males of one species mate with females of another species. The mismaesults in death for both.

The lethal union was prompted between male cotton bollworms and female tobacco budworms after exposure to sex attractants called pheromones which mimic an insect's sex odors. Usually, these natural chemicals are extracted from a specific species and attract only that species.

But something else happened when two of the pheromones were tested on crop-damaging insect pests in fields near Brownsville, Texas, "to learn more about the confusion that pheromones can cause in insect courtship."

Donald E. Hendricks, an entomologist on the agency's staff in the Brownsville experiments, said that "such sexual chaos" may lead to another way of controlling insects naturally.

Hendricks and colleagues Juan D. Lopez and Ted N. Shaver observed the deadly results of mis-mating while conducting the field tests.

"What the researchers found was that the pheromones caused male cotton bollworms to attempt to mate with female tobacco budworms," the report said Thursday. "Because of mismatched genitalia, the two species became locked together and eventually died."

Hendricks said it was "the first time biological researchers have purposely caused copulation between two different species" in open field conditions. Previously, such mating had been observed only when cotton bollworms and tobacco budworms were confined in a small space such as a gallon carton.

The USDA scientists tested two pheromones while seeking to disrupt the mating of tobacco budworms. They found that scented traps baited with female budworms caught male cotton bollworms.

"In a later test, the researchers tethered female budworms to platforms in the field and again permeated the air with pheromones," the report said. "This time, the two species were found fatally mating."

The report said further tests were conducted by putting female budworms on tables in fields — "and male bollworms succumbed to the pheromones, again locked in deadly courtship."

Hendricks said the experiments raise the possibility of applying pheromones to large crop acreages to suppress both insect species. The budworm has a voracious appetite for cotton as well as tomato plants, and the cotton bollworm is a major pest of cotton, corn and tomatoes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning on Sept. 20, sausage manufacturers will be allowed to make braunschweiger and liver sausage without pork, which had been traditionally required by federal regulations.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday that the changes will allow more flexibility in making the sausages.

Braunschweiger will be allowed to contain beef fat, which previously has been permitted only in liver sausage, officials said. The new standards also will permit the use of veal liver to meet the minimum 30 percent liver content requirement. Only beef or pork liver could be used before.

"These revisions will increase the types of sausage products that food processors can offer consumers," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "Additionally, they will permit persons who do not eat pork for religious reasons to enjoy these sausages."

The agency proposed the changes more than a year ago. One proposed change that was dropped in the final rules would have required braunschweiger to have a smoked taste from the use of smoked meats, smoke flavoring or smoking.

BIG TRACTOR CONFERENCE

A conference to help farmers and implement dealers improve efficiency will be held Wednesday, Sept. 1, in Lubbock.

The "Big Tractor Conference" is designed to help area farmers make the most economical use of their tractors and assist equipment dealers in matching the most desirable equipment to their customers' needs.

The conference will be held at the South Park Inn, South Loop 289 at the Indiana Avenue exit in Lubbock and begins at 10 a.m. Registration opens at 9 a.m. A $7.50 registration fee includes lunch and conference proceedings.

Opening the conference will be Warren Lenius, test department manager for Versatile Manufacturing Co., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. He will examine the place of increasing horsepower on the farm.

High speed farming with two-wheel-drive and four-wheel-drive equipment will be discussed by J. Charles Steinman, factory marketing manager for John Deere Tractor Works, Waterloo, Iowa.

The use of computerized management tools to analyze tractor costs will be explained by Extension agricultural economist, Gary D. Condra of Lubbock.

Bob Beaman, merchandising manager for Stieger Tractor Co., Fargo, N.D., will report on electronics, the "wave of the future" in agricultural tractors. William P. Simpson, product information specialist with J.I. Case Co., Racine, Wis., will discuss tractor weighting and its effect on performance.

Tractor size and implement matching will be covered by Wally Post, Arlington district manager for Allis Chalmers Corp. A comparative analysis of radial and bias-ply drive wheel tractor tires will be made by Lyle Bohnert, senior field development engineer for B.F. Goodrich Co., Franklin Park, Ill.

The role of four-wheel-drive tractors in row crop farming will be examined by Dave Hess, advanced design manager for crop production systems, International Harvester, Hinsdale, Ill.

Soil compaction and its management will be discussed by Edwin Colburn, Extension agronomist and soil management specialist, College Station.

The program will conclude with a panel discussion by area farmers and equipment dealers. Henry O'Neal, Extension agricultural engineer from College Station, will moderate the discussion.

WHEAT VARIETIES
The following wheat varieties have been recommended for our area as a result of research and demonstration results. Research and Extension agronomists have assisted with compiling this recommended list. Varieties are shown alphabetically and the order of listing does not reflect productivity. These recommendations pertain to grain production only.

For irrigated wheat production, the following are recommended: Newton, Sturdy, TAM W-101, TAM W-105 and Vona.

For either dryland or irrigated situations, the following are recommended: Centurk, Concho, Improved Triumph, Larned, Osage, Pala Duro, Rall, Sage, Scout 66 and Tascosa.

INSECT SITUATION
Over the Panhandle, greenbugs are causing economic damage in some isolated fields. Parasitism of greenbugs by the parasitic wasp is being detected in most fields.

Spider mites need to be watched for in sorghum fields. Although mites can be observed early in the growing season, density increases generally occur after the boot stage of development. Spider mites become established on the underside of lower plant leaves.

Mites migrate upward and sometimes move into the head on sorghum as mite density and plant damage increase. Extremely high populations cause extensive webbing of sorghum heads and may be associated with stalk rot and lodging. Periods of hot, dry weather favor rapid mite population increase. Plants will tolerate mite damage better if protected from water stress.

Mite density, size and maturity of the plants will dictate the need for miticide applications. Research has shown no yield increase or reduced plant lodging following treatments in the hard dough or later stages of crop maturity.

Begin checking blooming sorghum for headworms. Treatment is recommended when infestations average 1 per head in seed production fields or 2 per head in feed grain fields.

With a lot of late blooming sorghum, producers may need to be watchful for the sorghum midge.

Sorghum that is blooming should be checked closely for midge activity. The midge, a tiny, fragile, orange-colored fly, lays its eggs in the flowers. The midge larvae feeds on the developing seed, causing blasted heads and reduced yields.

HOT WEATHER TIPS FOR FALL GARDENS

The Texas summer heat can be threatening to early fall vegetable gardeners.

However, for a successful fall garden, many vegetables must be planted during high temperature conditions to mature during late fall or early winter.

To avoid this problem, set out your own transplants. Finding a good healthy transplant can be done by purchasing you fall vegetable seeds and growing you own plant.

Vegetable seed may be planted in flats, coffee cans, milk cartons, peat pots or peat pellets in areas that can protect them from the heat.

However, to avoid transplanting, most gardeners prefer seeding vegetables directly in the garden.

The biggest problem with this is poor seed germination due to summer heat. This can be cured simply by modifying the garden seeding area.

In Texas, bedding the soil prior to seeding or planting is important. After bedding the garden and marking off rows, take a hoe or stick and make seed furrows.

Apply water directly in the seed furrow and allow it to soak in, then scatter seed evenly along the furrow.

After seed are sown, cover them with a material such as compost, potting soil, peat moss or vermiculite. These materials will provide a better environment to help the seed germinate and grow.

Light colored material will help keep the seeding area cooler.

It's important during germination not to allow soil around young seedling to dry out.

Once plants have emerged, a protective shade or cover made of board, cardboard or shade cloth, on the west side of the row, can help protect plants from the afternoon summer sun.

When the plants reach one to two inches tall, thin them to the proper stand.

From now through early September is the time to sow seed for fall crop English peas, spinach, turnips, mustard greens, and beets.

ADVICE ON STORING EXCESS VEGETABLES
Gardeners often produce more vegetables than can be used during the summer months and wonder what to do with the produce not used immediately or preserved.

Certain vegetables like cucumbers, eggplant, peppers and tomatoes can be stored from a few days up to a month if handled correctly.

These other vegetables are also suitable for storage: beets, onions, cabbage, carrots, turnips, peas, kohlrabi, potatoes, pumpkins, dry beans, winter squash, sweet potatoes, chinese cabbage and radishes.

For successful storage, consider the quality of the original product, preparation or handling before storage, control of spoilage organisms and proper storage conditions.

Temperature control is the most important factor in vegetable storage, especially avoiding high temperatures because of rapid growth decay organisms.

Humidity must also be considered when storing vegetables. A moist atmosphere prevents water loss and helps root and leafy crops stay fresh longer. Moist sand, wet burlap bags or a layer of wet sphagnum moss will help raise the humidity in a dry storage area, but do not let too much moisture collect on the stored product.

Avoid excess ventilation, but keep sufficient air movement in the storage area to keep the temperature down, humidity correct and foul odors out.

It is important to remember a good quality product is a must for success when storing excess produce. Overripe, rough, hard vegetables do not improve in quality during storage.

Store only mature vegetables at the best stage for eating.

As for harvesting vegetables, these general guidelines for gardeners are suggested:

1. Harvest at the proper stage of maturity.

2. Harvest on time, especially okra, summer squash, beans, southern peas and cucumbers.

3. Harvest when the foliage is dry because moving through a wet garden spreads disease.

4. Don't damage plant foliage by stepping on vines or breaking stems.

5. Do not harvest if the plant is wilted or under any stress.

6. Place freshly harvested vegetables in the shade immediately and keep them cool.

7. Avoid injuring the plant during harvest by gently removing the part to be harvested.

Once vegetables have been properly harvested and are ready for storage, use a clean, sanitary storage area. The most widely used structures are cellars, pits or banks, buried barrels or trenches.

Homestead law changes opposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Letting consumers take out second mortgages on their homes for purposes other than home improvement would result in mass foreclosures, consumer groups warned last week.

Rebecca Lightsey of the Texas Consumer Association told a Capitol news conference that lenders are once again trying to dilute the constitutional provision that protects homesteads from foreclosure.

The only second mortgage Texans can get now are home improvement loans.

A legislative hearing was scheduled today to hear testimony about changing the law.

Ms. Lightsey said in other states that allow a variety of second mortgages, homeowners put up property as collateral for car loans and credit card accounts.

"In just one county, Orange County, California, 100 to 150 families a day are losing their homes from second and third mortgage foreclosures," she said, warning that the same thing could happen in Texas.

Coe wins 800-Meter run despite recent leg injury

LONDON (AP) — Sebastian Coe, who just recovered from a stress fracture of the right leg, is considering running both the 800 and 1,500 meters at the European Track and Field Championships at Athens next month.

The Olympic 800 meters champion proved his recovery after two months of inactivity when he won in 1 minute, 45.85 seconds over that distance in the Talbot Games at London's Crystal Palace Friday night.

It was the 25-year-old Englishman's second win over 800 meters in three days.

Martina is taking toll of opponents

MONTREAL (AP) — It's a truism that the underdog is always gunning for No. 1, but the evidence suggests that Martina Navratilova's opponents are going to have load up with more ammunition.

The American is the top-ranked player in the world according to the Women's Tennis Association computer and has won 62 of 63 matches this year. She added another notch Friday night when she dismissed Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia 6-2 to advance to the semifinals of the $200,000 Player's Challenge tennis championship.

"I hope they shake, but I don't know," said Navratilova, when asked whether the awesome winning streak and No. 1 ranking gave her a psychological edge. "You hope you've earned their respect but you also know they want to be the one to beat you."

Budarova, ranked 83rd in the world, didn't display any instinct for the jugular in her match with Navratilova, which lasted just 42 minutes.

Navratilova's booming serves and pin-point drop shots kept Budarova off balance for most of the match.

Stewart, Strange duel to tie in Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Payne Stewart and Curtis Strange put on a dramatic, head-to-head duel Saturday and finished tied at 12-under-par 204 after three rounds of the $350,000 Buick Open.

Strange, the second-round leader started the day at 9-under, 2 strokes better than Stewart and four others — Fred Couples, John Cook, Lanny Wadkins and Masters champion Craig Stadler.

Strange, playing in a threesome with Stewart and Couples, shot 33-36 and carded a 3-under-69 while Stewart, who has become a gallery favorite by wearing brightly colored knickers, caught fire on the back nine and finished with a 36-31—67.

The co-leaders entered the final round 3 strokes ahead of Peter Jacobsen, Bob Eastwood, Tom Kite and defending Buick Open champion Hale Irwin.

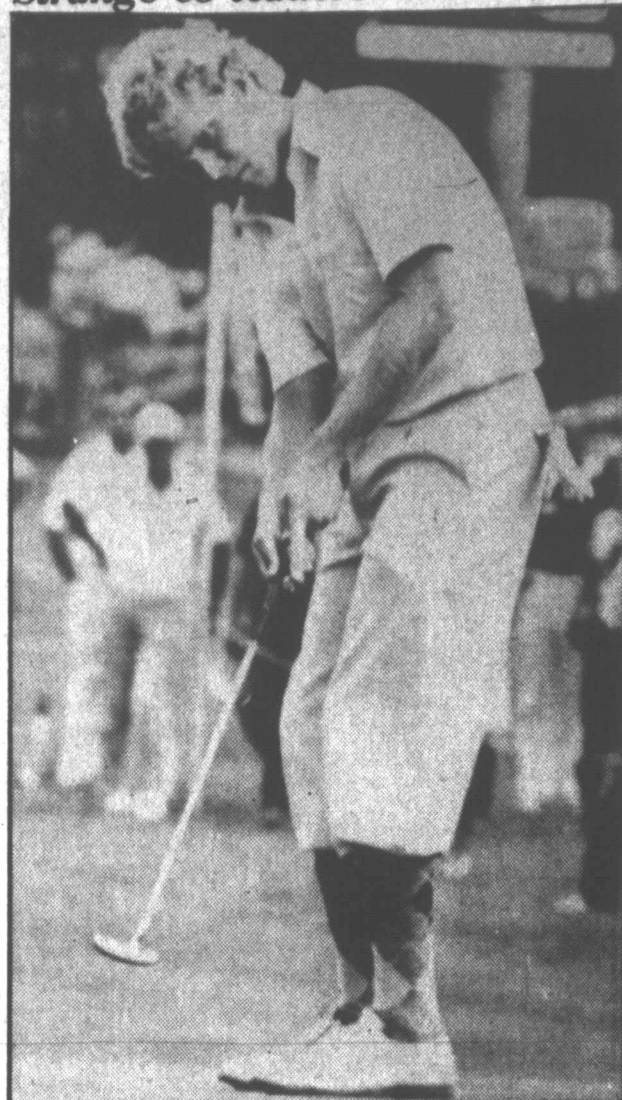

A stroke back at 208 were Stadler, Cook, Wadkins, Larry Ziegler and Mike Donald.

Couples was tied with Wayne Levi and Gavin Levenson.

The turning point for Stewart came on the par-4, 398-yard 10th hole where he chipped in for a birdie from about 18 feet away, over a high, rolling bank.

The 25-year-old Southern Methodist University graduate, who won the Quad Cities Open a few weeks ago, then birdied 11, 12 and 13 to pull within one stroke of Strange. Then Strange, who has not won on the PGA Tour since 1980, bogeyed the 456-yard, par-4 15th and the two were even at 11-under.

Carner holds lead in LPGA

CLEVELAND (AP) — JoAnne Carner may successfully fight a balky driver right into the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

She has struck the ball erratically, if not poorly, off the tee in the first two rounds of the $150,000 Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf and still holds a one-shot lead after 36 holes.

"I haven't driven the ball well all week," said the 43-year-old Carner, who needs a 35th career victory today to become the 10th player to qualify for the LPGA shrine.

"The rough areas seem to be placed right in the way of my tee shots," she said Friday. "So I've just resigned myself to hitting it out of the rough."

Carner's 70 Friday gave her a total of 142, 2 under par for two trips around the 6,225-yard Shaker Heights Country Club layout.

Amy Alcott, taking advantage of the best round of 3-under-par 69 on the misty, overcast day, moved into second place in the quest for the first prize of $50,000, the richest in women's golf.

Alcott stood at 143 and was the only other player in this select international field of 12 golfers to break par for 36 holes.

"In a lot of ways, the course played tougher today, but it needed some moisture," Alcott said. "These are the fastest greens I've ever putted on. It's just a great course. You've got to play really smart golf here."

Carner agreed after using consecutive birdies on the 14th, 15th and 16th holes to forge a three-shot margin. However, Alcott answered that spurt with birdies on her last two holes.

"Everything is playing longer," Carner said. "You get absolutely no roll with the rain. And this is not a course you can make up ground on."

Ayako Okamoto of Japan, playing in only her second American tour event, matched par of 72 for third place at 145.

"I played much better than yesterday. I played better than my score indicates," she said through an interpreter.

The only amateur in the field, Marta Figueras-Dotti of Spain, moved into contention with a 71, tied for fourth place at 146 with first-round co-leader Hollis Stacy, LPGA champion Jan Stephenson and veteran Sandra Haynie. Stephenson had 70, Haynie 71 and Stacy 74.

Beth Daniel, the winner of this event the past two years and her last two tournaments, struggled to a 78, the day's highest round. That left her at 154.

Also at 154, tied for last place, was Sally Little of South Africa. Little, this year's leading money-winner, settled for a 76.

Janet Alex, the reigning U.S. Women's Open champion, shot 75 and was tied with Patty Sheehan at 149. Sheehan had a 73. Nancy Lopez was next at 151, shooting a 77.

Oilers, with Luck, may survive 'Sack Exchange'

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, a brainy rookie from West Virginia, will try to survive the New York Jets' Sack Exchange today when the Oilers host the Jets in a National Football League exhibition game in the Astrodome.

Kickoff is at 11:35 a.m. CDT. Luck, who made one grade below an A as a collegian, will need all of his wits against the Jets' defensive front four, nicknamed the Sack Exchange. The Exchange led the NFL with 66 sacks last season, one short of the league record and the overall defense rated first in the American Football Conference.

Luck will have to face only half of the Sack Exchange for his first professional start. Defensive tackles Marty Lyons and Abdul Salaam will miss the game with injuries. Salaam has a knee injury and Lyons fractured a thumb during Wednesday's practice.

"Half is enough," said Luck. "They are known for their outstanding pass defense. It will be a challenge to go against them. They may break through and sack me a couple of times but that's what you have to expect."

The Oilers still must contend with defensive ends Joe Klecko and Mark Gastineau, who ranked 1-2 in NFL sacks last season. Klecko led the league with 20 1/2 and Gastineau was second with 20.

Luck, projected as a backup to Oilers starter Gifford Nielsen, is expected to play the first half against the Jets in the first starting assignment of his brief pro career.

Luck completed three of seven passes for 31 yards in his first action last week in Houston's 22-20 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

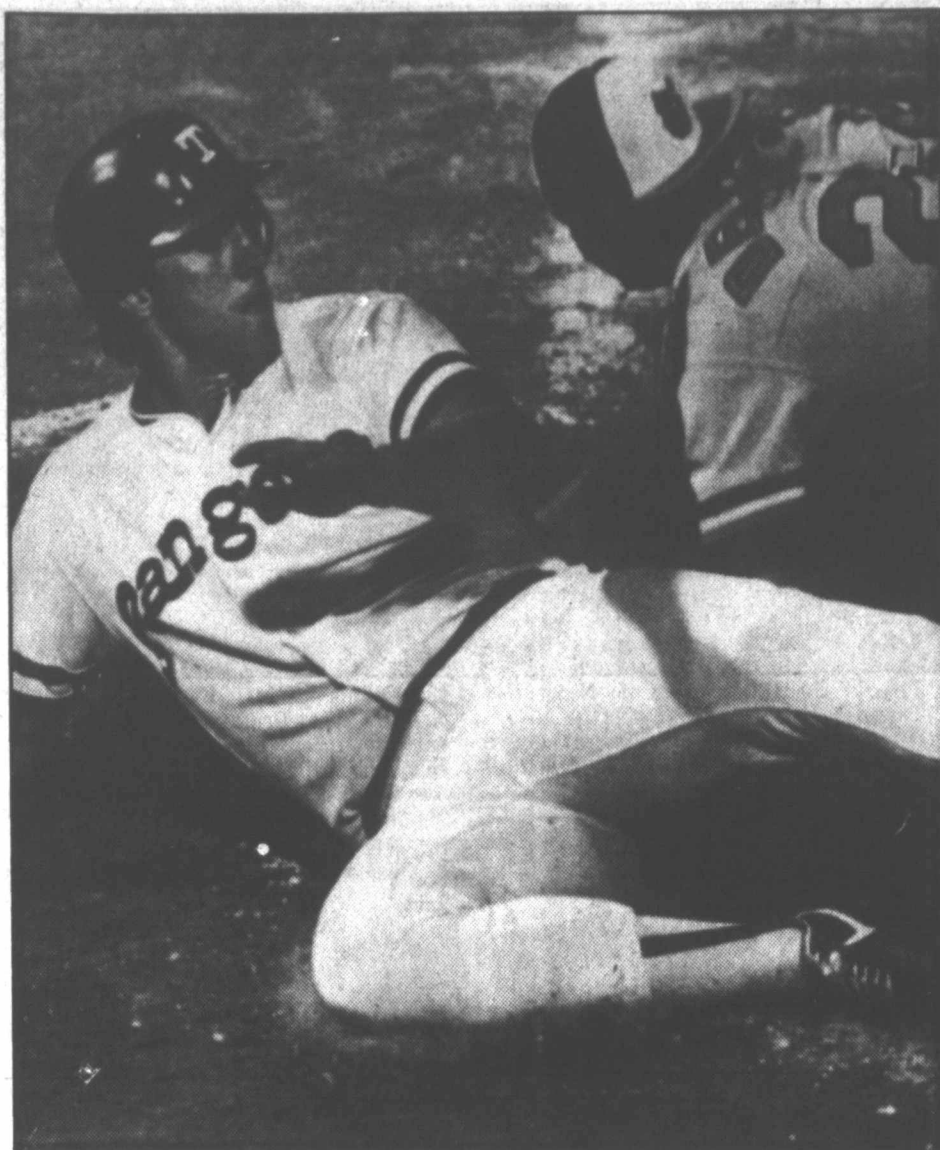

Oilers Coach Ed Biles said Nielsen would play one quarter against the Jets and 10th-round draft choice Ron Reeves of Texas Tech may also see his first action as a pro.

Jets Coach Walt Michaels used 74 players in last week's 21-19 loss to Green Bay but plans to let the veterans play more against the Oilers.

Quarterback Richard Todd will play at least the first half, Michaels said, and wide receivers Johnny "Lam" Jones, Derrick Gaffney and Bobby Jones, will play for the first time this preseason. Klecko and Gastineau missed last week's opener with injuries.

"The tempo will be dictated by the Oilers," Michaels said. "If there is a lot of blitzing and slanting, we'll keep our offensive line in there longer."

Rangers get new lease

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers and Arlington city officials have reached tentative agreement on a new lease for Arlington Stadium that gives the team an option to buy the park in 2004, a city official said.

The two sides expect to have the pact ready for a vote by the Arlington city council and Rangers' directors within 30 days according to the official, who asked not to be identified.

The Dallas Morning News quoted informed sources as saying the agreement is similar to a proposal team attorneys presented to the city in April.

Under that proposal, the Rangers would pay the city $1.8 million through 2004 and would then have the option of paying $1 million to take over ownership of the park.

Arlington Mayor S.J. Stovall confirmed that final details were being worked out, but refused to discuss details.

"Negotiations are continuing, and although I cannot discuss any details, hopefully very soon we'll be able to announce the main points of what has been proposed by the Rangers and the city," Stovall said.

Rangers officials also refused comment.

Ryan pitches Astros to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan pitched a five-hitter and earned second place on the all-time strikeout list while pitching the Houston Astros to a 5-3 decision over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

Ryan, 33-9, struck out five, giving him 3,433 career strikeouts.

Dickie Thon hit the first pitch from loser Ray Burris, 4-13, for a double and went to third on Denny Walling's groundout. Ray Knight's sacrifice fly to first brought in Thon to give Houston a 1-0 lead.

In the third, Phil Garner hit to first and went to third on Jose Cruz's single to right. Art Howe's RBI forceout gave Houston a 2-0 edge.

Cruz gave Ryan additional breathing room in the sixth inning with his eighth homer of the year, a two-run shot to center field that brought in Garner. The Astros scored their last run in the eighth when Garner doubled, took third on Cruz's sacrifice, and scored on Howe's sacrifice fly to left.

Major league roundup

National League

An easy topper mishandled by New York third baseman Hubie Brooks let an Atlanta run in in the 10th inning, and the Braves went on to win 2-1 on a bases-loaded walk.

Brooks' error allowed the Braves to advance runners to second and third. Reliever Pat Zachry then walked Claudell Washington intentionally to load the bases and next walked Dale Murphy on four pitches, forcing in the winning run.

Brooks' throwing error offset Brian Giles' first major-league homer that had given the Mets a 1-0 lead in the 10th.

It was the first time in 23 games that the Braves had won two consecutive outings and their first extra-inning triumph in seven tries since their prolonged losing streak that saw them lose a huge lead in the National League West and drop into second place behind the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Los Angeles 1, Pittsburgh 0; Philadelphia 9, Cincinnati 2; San Francisco 8, St. Louis 7; Chicago 3, San Diego 2 and Houston 4, Montreal 3 in 10 innings.

DODGERS 1, PIRATES 0

Fernando Valenzuela fired a two-hitter and Ron Cey slammed a solo homer to lead Los Angeles over Pittsburgh. Valenzuela, 16-9, allowed only two singles and didn't permit a runner past second base in pitching his third shutout of the year. The left-hander struck out nine and walked three.

Cey's homer, his 18th, was one of four hits given up by Pittsburgh starter Larry McWilliams, 7-7, who pitched 7 and 2-3 innings. Cey hit a 2-1 pitch over the left-center field wall at Three Rivers Stadium leading off the second inning.

PADRES 2, CUBS 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Tim Lollar and Luis DeLeon combined on a two-hitter and Gene Richards and Tony Gwynn each drove in a run in the sixth inning Saturday, leading the San Diego Padres to a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Lollar, 12-7, struck out six and walked three before needing relief help in the ninth from DeLeon, who gained his 12th save. Allen Ripley, 12-7, was the loser.

TWINS 4, INDIANS 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gary Ward knocked in two runs and Al Williams and two relievers combined to scatter nine hits Saturday to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Williams, 4-7, blanked Cleveland on five hits over the first six innings before Terry Felton and Tony Davis finished up. Davis struggled to his 16th save after the Indians scored three times in the eighth.

With the score 3-0, Ron Washington and Tom Brunansky singled to open the Minnesota eighth, and Kent Hrbek walked to load the bases. After Dan Spillner came in to relieve Larry Sorensen, Ward hit a sacrifice fly to center and Gary Gaetti followed with an RBI single for a 4-0 Minnesota lead.

American League

The 13-5 loss suffered by the Chicago White Sox was embarrassing in more ways than the simple fact that it was their fourth defeat in a row.

Manager Tony LaRussa was kicked out of Friday night's game by home plate umpire Dale Ford.

Third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez, shortstop Vance Law and second baseman Tony Bernazard each committed errors during Kansas City's five-run fifth inning.

Rookie pitcher Jim Siwy, making his major league debut, gave up a three-run homer to Hal McRae, which has happened a lot this season, but he also surrendered Willie Aikens' first triple in 1,717 regular season at-bats.

"There is one outstanding part of this game," LaRussa said, "and that is tomorrow the score is 0-0 when we start."

In other AL games, Cleveland beat Minnesota 7-5, New York tripped Toronto 4-2, Baltimore stopped Texas 4-2 in 12 innings, Detroit outlasted California 8-6, Oakland edged Boston 4-3 and Milwaukee nipped Seattle 6-5.

The victory by Kansas City, combined with the loss by California, pulled the Royals into a tie for first with the Angels in the AL West, both with 69-52 records.

TIGERS 6, ANGELS 6

Detroit bombed California for 17 hits, including Glenn Wilson's two-run homer and Larry Herndon's two-run single.

Every batter in the starting lineup got a hit for the Tigers, who broke away from a 2-2 tie after the first inning with a four-run outburst in the second. Wilson's homer came in the first and Herndon's single in the second.

Reggie Jackson and Bob Boone homered for the Angels.

A's 4, RED SOX 3

Wayne Gross hit a solo homer to give Oakland a 3-2 lead, then squeezed home Mike Heath with the winning run in the ninth.

Gross laid down his bunt to the left of the mound and pitcher Mark Clear's throw to the plate was too late to get the sliding Heath.

After Gross hit his sixth homer in the sixth inning for the A's third run, the Red Sox tied the game with two outs in the top of the ninth on Carl Yastrzemski's RBI double, the 3,284th hit of his career. He now is in eighth place on the all-time list, ahead of Willie Mays.

Longshot wins Travers Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Runaway Groom, a 12-1 longshot from Canada, rushed past speedsters Aloma's Ruler and Conquistador Cielo with about a sixteenth of a mile to go and won the $221,500 Travers Stakes at Saratoga on Saturday as the "Graveyard of Champions" claimed another victim.

Belmont winner, engaged in a head-and-head duel for most of the 1 1/4-mile race before tiring as Runaway Groom, who had never won a stakes race on the dirt, surged in the stretch. Aloma's Ruler finished a half-length behind the winner and three-quarters in front of Conquistador Cielo.

The loss snapped the seven-race winning streak for Conquistador Cielo, who was recently syndicated for a record $36.4 million.

Watkins has hole in one

Elmer Watkins of Pampa had a hole in one Friday on the 170-yard No. 16 hole at Pampa Country Club course.

It was Watkins first ace in 34 years of playing golf. He used a 6-iron.

Witnesses were Hart Warren, Gary Gustin, Ralph Prock, Ralph Baker and Mike Brent.

"It was something to see," Brent said. "The ball didn't bounce. It just went straight into the hole."

Watkins total score was a 71 for 18 holes.

Biggest ... then bigger.

Steve Denton, shown here during Friday's upset of fifth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis in the ATP Tennis Championships, said the victory was his biggest ever in a major tournament. He then advanced to Saturday's semifinals, where he defeated John McEnroe, 7-6, 6-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Denton to ATP tennis finals

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Steve Denton powered his way into the final of the $300,000 ATP Tennis Championships by upsetting lethargic John McEnroe 7-6, 6-4 Saturday.

Seeded 11th in the 64-player field, Denton advanced to Sunday's final against the winner of Saturday night's semifinal between second-seeded Jimmy Connors and No. 3 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

Denton had reached the semifinals by beating fifth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis.

Saturday, McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world and the defending champion in this hardcourt tournament, played spiritless tennis, serving five doublefaults — four in one game — and being dominated by Denton's hard serve.

Denton, ranked 19th on the Association of Tennis Professionals computer, fired five aces and nine service winners. But the statistics don't tell the story.

Repeatedly, McEnroe got his racket on Denton's booming serve, but either put it into the net or out of the court. And Denton dominated the net as the New Yorker never was able to find his game.

McEnroe had to stave off four set points in the 10th game of the first set to force a tiebreaker.

McEnroe and Denton, a University of Texas graduate who lives in Driscoll, Texas, traded breaks on the first two points, then traded aces on the next two serves.

On the ninth point, McEnroe broke Denton with a running forehand passing shot. But Denton, who finished second in the Australian Open last year, took the next two points on McEnroe's serve as the top seed made two unforced errors.

McEnroe fought off a fifth set point, but Denton closed out the tiebreaker 8-6 with a slam off a short lob.

It was another disappointing tournament for McEnroe, who has won only two tournaments this year, the U.S. Pro Indoor in Philadelphia in January and a small grass court tournament in England prior to Wimbledon. He lost his Wimbledon crown to Connors, but will be defending his U.S. Open title beginning Aug. 31.

The Open will be played on DecoTurf II, the same type of courts used here.

Boosters to meet

Pampa's first football game is scheduled for Sept. 3 at Hereford.

Cowboys figured to take NFC East division

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Winners come and winners go. And then there are the Dallas Cowboys. They've strung together 16 consecutive winning seasons, the National Football League record. They've won the National Conference's Eastern Division title five of the past six seasons. And they've been in five Super Bowls, more than any other team. Until Dwight Clark's fingers and Jim Stuckey's hands got in their way last Jan. 10, it appeared the Cowboys were headed to Super Bowl XVI. Instead, it was San Francisco, the Western Division champ, which won the NFC title game 28-27 (thanks to Clark's leaping touchdown catch with 31 seconds to play and Stuckey's fumble recovery 13 seconds later). And it was the 49ers who climaxed their remarkable season by winning the NFL title, beating Cincinnati 26-21 in the Silverdome, just a short, snowy drive from the Motor City. The Detroit Lions figured they'd win the Central Division in 1981 and find a way to reach the Super Bowl in their own stadium. But things have a way of going wrong, even for teams which look like sure winners. The Lions never even made the playoffs, losing out to Tampa Bay in the division. Look for the Lions to finish atop the Central Division (their first playoff appearance since 1970 and first title since 1957), for the 49ers to show that 1981 was no fluke — and for the Cowboys to keep on winning. In other words, here's how the NFC should line up this year:

EAST DIVISION
Dallas Cowboys
x-New York Giants
Philadelphia Eagles
Washington Redskins
St. Louis Cardinals
CENTRAL DIVISION
Detroit Lions
Minnesota Vikings

Green Bay Packers
Tampa Bay Buccaneers
Chicago Bears
WEST DIVISION
San Francisco 49ers
x-Atlanta Falcons
Los Angeles Rams
New Orleans Saints
x-probable wild cards
"The last couple of years I've been just trying to be accepted as one of the NFL's starting quarterbacks," Dallas' Danny White said. "Now I have to start thinking about establishing myself as the best in the NFL."
He came close in 1981, finishing second in conference passing (behind Joe Montana) and fifth in the league. There's no reason to expect any less this year from White, no longer merely Roger Staubach's successor but a top-flight passer in his own right. The Cowboys' ground game (they were second in NFL rushing last year) is as solid as ever, with Tony Dorsett gunning for a sixth successive

1,000-yard season, supported by James Jones, Ron Springs and Robert Newhouse. And White will be passing not only to Tony Hill, Drew Pearson and Butch Johnson, but to second-year man Doug Donley, too. Even the retirements of two defensive stars, safety Charlie Waters and linebacker D.D. Lewis, should have little effect on talent-deep Dallas. The apparent arrival in New York of a solid running game will propel the Giants into second place. Rookies Butch Woolfolk and Joe Morris will join last year's savior, fullback Rob Carpenter — if Carpenter ends his holdout. A slowly aging defense and an offense still relying too heavily on too few people will hurt Philadelphia. The Redskins came on strong after a dismal start in 1981, but this year's tough schedule should keep Washington from serious contention. How well Neil Lomax does at quarterback and how organized the defense becomes will determine how close to .500 the Cardinals get. Any team which loses a starting quarterback and has a reserve who can play the way Eric Hipple did, which has the league's third-best offense and No. 1 rushing offense, and which has the league's fourth-best defense and No. 1 rushing defense would win its own division, to say the least. But the Lions could't break .500. Five times they were beaten in the final minute. No wonder Detroit's first five picks, starting with Jimmy Williams, were spent on linebackers and defensive backs. And All-Pro running back Billy Sims is a training-camp holdout. Mike Lynn, the Vikings' general manager, said last year he was assembling an "indoor" team for the Metrodome — speed instead of the durability Minnesota's frozen tundra required. He's got speed in rookie runner Darrin Nelson, but the defense still lacks quickness. Green Bay's defense has become one of the more opportunistic, but the Packers' offense has foundered.

NFL players hope bargainers will provide good proposals

By The Associated Press
The New England Patriots and Philadelphia Eagles shook hands and came out fighting Friday night. The players' union hopes the owners' bargainers will shake hands and come out proposing next Wednesday. The Eagles and Pats, continuing the union's symbolic show of solidarity, met at midfield in Veterans Stadium and shook hands, then Harold Carmichael and rookie Mike Quick shook loose from their defenders and caught Ron Jaworski touchdown passes for a 14-7 victory over New England. In the night's other exhibition, Green Bay and Cincinnati didn't shake hands — the Bengals didn't want to say their player rep, Mike Fuller — but they came out playing fast and loose, the Packers eventually winning 41-27. On Saturday, the Minnesota Vikings inaugurate their first indoor season at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome against the Seattle Seahawks. Also, it's the Los Angeles Raiders at Detroit, Chicago at Buffalo, Dallas at San Diego, Kansas City at New Orleans, Miami at Denver, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, St. Louis at San Francisco, Washington at Tampa Bay and Atlanta vs. Baltimore in Tempe, Ariz.

The New York Jets visit the Houston Oilers Sunday. Earlier Friday, the NFL Management Council, representing the owners, sent a message to the players association requesting a resumption of talks aimed at achieving a collective bargaining agreement. The union agreed to the meeting in Washington. The two sides haven't met in a month. The previous five-year agreement expired July 15. The union's decision to accept the owners' offer is a change in position. It had turned down Management Council requests for sessions in New York or Washington and had demanded they be held at teams' training sites, something the owners said would be disruptive. Most previous sessions have been relatively brief, the players demanding 58 percent of the owners' gross revenues, the owners rejecting the percentage concept. The players have rejected the owners' proposal, an increase in money but retention of the existing system. Jaworski put the Eagles on top in the first quarter with his 26-yard toss to Carmichael in the end zone and threw the game-winning TD to Quick, Philadelphia's No. 1 draft choice, to complete a 12-play, 91-yard drive in the third period. New England's only touchdown came in the fourth period when Steve Grogan, the Patriots' quarterback, responded to a third-and-15 situation with a 41-yard end zone bomb to wide receiver Stanley Morgan. Rich Campbell passed for third-quarter TDs of 9 yards to Gary Lewis and 11 to Wamon Buggs as the Packers, trailing 27-14 late in the second period, rallied to beat the American Conference's defending champs.

USC's Mazur going to A&M

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Mazur, who started at quarterback for the University of Southern California last fall, is transferring to Texas A&M, it was announced Saturday. Mazur, from nearby Woodland Hills, Calif., must sit out the 1982 season but will be eligible to play for Aggies for two years starting with the 1983 season. Mazur had lost his starting job to Sean Salisbury in spring practice. The move is in John's best interests," said Southern Cal

Coach John Robinson in announcing the transfer. "I know he will be a very fine quarterback at Texas A&M." Mazur, 20, didn't play at all as a freshman for the Trojans in 1980, but won the starting job prior to last season and guided Southern Cal to a 9-3 record. The left-hander completed 93 of 194 passing attempts for 1,128 yards and seven touchdowns. Mazur, a 6-foot-3, 200-pounder, didn't throw an interception in his first 62 passes and wound up being intercepted only five times in Southern Cal's 12 games. Salisbury, a 6-foot-5½, 210-pound sophomore, appeared in only three games for the Trojans last season, completing nine of 15 passes for 145 yards and two touchdowns. He was intercepted once.

A Cape Buffalo takes a drink from the Olifants River as it runs through Kruger Park

The Face of SOUTH AFRICA

Photos and observations
by DR. JOE PIERATT

SOUTH AFRICA, SUMMER 1982 — "Actually, Capetown reminds me of Southern California: add a few hills and you have San Francisco. The city is a patchwork, really. A group of modern, 15-story buildings next to structures that are quite old.

"They have a unique social structure. There are three groups: Whites, Coloreds and Blacks. It's a legal status and may not follow color lines.

"The Whites — Afrikaners (Boers) and English — run things. The Coloreds are native, mixed blood, and have social and job preference over the Blacks, who are almost always from some other country, and are treated like 'bracers.' But if a Black asks Parliament for legal status as a White, they are usually more than glad to grant it, as the Blacks pay no income taxes, their schooling is free and their housing partially free also.

"They're brought in for the heavy work, in the gold mines. One day, after a riot, the authorities trucked 11,000 workers they considered troublemakers back to Mozambique — and brought back another 11,000. The next day it was business as usual in the mines.

"South African riot police may carry machine guns. The ruling South Africans are very tolerant — up to a point. Then they can be deadly.

"But you see the Blacks zipping all over in little Fords and Toyotas: they don't appear at all mistreated.

"There are two official languages: Afrikaans and English. In the courts, colleges, and so forth, it's English. In the trades and many businesses it's Afrikaans.

"The Whites have a dilemma: they are a minority, but they want to include the Coloreds in the political process. They're looking for a way to bring the Coloreds into the system without voting themselves out.

"There is only one television network — government-run, as are the restaurants, hospitals and national parks — and it broadcasts from 6 to 10 p.m. One day it's in English, the next day in Afrikaans. Few people speak both languages really well: everybody has video games so they can play on the screen the day they can't understand the programming.

"The most popular program is 'Dallas.' Oddly, enough, they consider Texas a far-off, exotic place. The most popular cigarette is 'Texan' and a popular candy is 'Tex-Bar.' The commercial for the candy is to the tune of 'The Eyes of Texas.'

"Of the 21 days I spent in South Africa, most of the time was in Kruger Park — largest of the nine national parks there. It's on the northeastern corner, bordering Mozambique and Zambabwe.

"Accommodations in the parks are clean and very inexpensive, so there's always a waiting list. The living areas are closed at 5:30 p.m., and you must be back in by that time.

"Cafes and restaurants are also not expensive, and they usually have a tremendous variety of foods available at the restaurants, on an all-you-can-eat basis.

"In the parks, you're usually never more than 50 yards from a paved road. On tours in the parks, you see many giraffes and tremendous numbers of antelopes. You occasionally see predators — leopards, hyenas, crocodiles. On one trip, we came across a huge heap of dung from a rhino. The animal tramps through the heap and then outlines his territory with it.

"One thing the park rangers pointed out that isn't at all obvious is the reason guests are forbidden to feed the animals. The animals in the parks learn extremely quickly. If you feed one, it loses the willingness to forage for food in a normal manner: it becomes a beggar and a nuisance, and must be destroyed.

"Feeding a park animal is exactly the same as shooting it.

"Except for the park rangers, most of the workers there speak only the native languages, so it's very hard to talk to them. The two dominant native languages are Zulu and Swahili; the rangers usually speak them, as well as English and Afrikaans.

"Natal Park, the other park I visited, is in Transkei, actually an independent country within South Africa. The capital city of Transkei is called Umtata: oom-tah-tah.

"There is a beautiful new, modern university in Umtata, and they advertised for faculty in the London papers. Quite a number of applicants came from London solely on the strength of that name. They felt that with such a musical name, it must be a beautiful place.

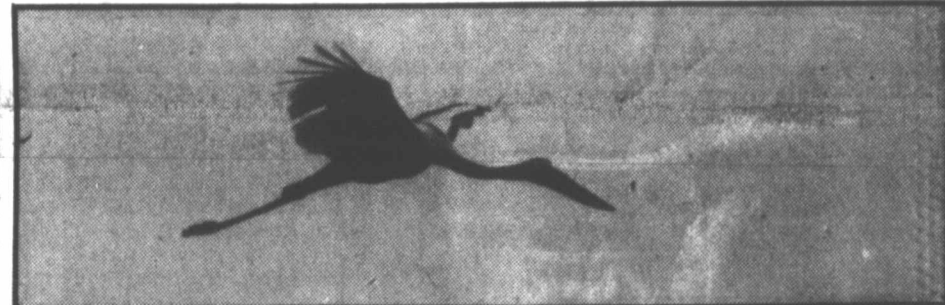

"A number of them liked the city, and did stay.

Antelopes drink from the Olifants; crocodiles watch intently

The kudu: horse-size antelope with unique corkscrew horns.

Aerial grace of a crane in flight is the same the world over.

South Africa's Black Mountains: the terrain could be in the American Southwest.

At this farm near Oozhorn the livestock is ostriches. Another farm nearby raises crocodiles.

An almost-familiar scene: it could be the Panhandle... if we had striped horses.

CHAUTAUQUA '82, a festival of the arts in Pampa's Central Park on Labor Day, will be a first for many of its visitors. In addition to the exhibitors and service organization booths, there will be staged events scheduled throughout the day.

As a gift to the community, Mr. Sanders will also be on hand all day to autograph the front of everyone's telephone book making it a collector's item.

Creation music will be supplied by Wanetta Hill. Tai Kwan Do demonstrations will be conducted throughout the day by Cho. Gary Kelton, local KPND radio personality, will share his creative talents. Mr. Bob Weaver, curator of ethnology at Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon will be on hand to deliver a humorous lecture about the discovery and development of the petroleum industry as it relates to our history, pre-history, through the oil patch of near past and the present.

Mr. Weaver is responsible for the oil and gas branch of the Museum and is working with the local industry to insure a superior museum exhibit.

Mr. Charles Pinzino of St. Joseph, Missouri will play the classical guitar on stage and then stroll and play in the park for the remainder of the day. The world famous Kawadi Indian Dancers will set up their authentic teepees in Pampa's Central Park and perform tribal dances. The Kawadi Indians have danced such dances as the war, eagle, hoop, and rain dance for audiences from all over the world.

A petting zoo will be situated on the north side of Central Park in the tennis court area. Among the interesting animals to be available for viewing are two baby llamas. The Fine Arts Association is looking for other interesting pettable animals.

The Purple Crayon from Atlanta will be touring the schools prior to the Chautauqua to promote the festival in the park. The Purple Crayon is the creation of Tamara Chambliss, a native of Pampa now living in Atlanta, Georgia. The Purple Crayon will be in the park all day to delight and amaze the kids.

The Tri State Bluegrass Band will perform on center stage at 12 noon. A kissing booth is being sponsored by a local business. Proceeds go to the fund to beautify and replant the park. Beautiful lips will be in abundance. Friends of the Library, Pampa Board of Realtors, Diabetes Foundation, Pampa Beautification, Boy Scouts, Calvary Assembly of God, and United Way are among the many service organizations who will participate in the activities.

Hospice Comfort in the final days

Hospice — a place, an idea, a concept. An old concept revived, hospice is a way to make death more livable. In medieval Europe the hospice was a place offering comfort and replenishment to travelers. The modern term is appropriate because hospice helps the traveler on his last journey. Hospice is a service provided by dedicated volunteers who work with terminally ill individuals and their families in cases where the patient's physician anticipates that life may end in a few months.

It is also a team effort to relieve pain, ease fears and to enrich, rather than prolong the final days of a patient. The hospice also works with the family during the final days and through the period of bereavement.

The hospice team is comprised of doctors, nurses, clergymen, psychologists, social workers and specially trained volunteers.

The hospice program now exists in Brittan and the United States. The programs grew out of the needs of terminally ill patients and their families.

A terminally ill patient, his doctor and his family must request the services of a hospice before they are administered. These services can provide loving support in the home of a patient facing death.

Hospice treats the patient, not the illness. A patient is encouraged to enjoy his final days in comfort surrounded by the things he loves and the people who are important to him.

Pain is relieved and side effects are treated. The disease is set aside. It is not a process of giving up, rather an approach to life as being too important to waste.

A hospice is not connected to any one religious affiliation. But, faith is part of the philosophy and the patient is encouraged to seek support from the clergy of his choice.

Death is just another phase of life, something we all must face. Some people have the unpleasant knowledge of approximately how long they have before their time on Earth is over. Dealing with that knowledge is another part of the hospice concept.

A hospice is possible in Pampa. A meeting will be held in the Parish Hall of the Episcopal Church on Tuesday, August 24 at 7:30 p.m. All persons interested are invited to attend.

For more information, contact Fern Root at 665-4042.

Mending Mature Marriage Procrastination - the fear of failure

By LOUISE PIERCE

"DEAR LOUISE: Two of us are writing this letter, my husband and me both. We're worried about what's happening to us and we want to know if you can give us any idea what to do.

"We're not sick. We get physicals regular and there's nothing wrong with our bodies. But we've got a real problem and don't know what to do about it. I guess I mean we don't know why the problem suddenly dropped on us and won't let go. We'll appreciate it if you can tell us what you think.

"We always used to be proud of the things we accomplished. We had a nice little store for years and did real well. But when times got a little hard, we got scared we'd go broke so we sold out. We thought we were lucky to get out of it with enough to live on.

"Then, all of a sudden, things didn't look so good for us. We couldn't get anything done. And we still can't.

"We leave things half finished and just don't want to get them done. That's not how it used to be with us but it's what we are now.

"Half done jobs are every place we are. We start letters but don't finish them. Our house is half painted, our yard never gets mowed, our car doesn't get all washed, things like that. We tell each other we don't have any real reason for wanting to get anything done like we used to.

"Are we losing our minds? And if we are, why? O.M. and WIFE."

DEAR O.M. AND W: In my opinion you are not mental cases at all. You are simply procrastinating because you are afraid of failing.

This belief is not mine alone. The University of California conducted a study, not long ago, that showed procrastination often results from fear of failure. The study pointed out that people often fail to finish jobs because they are afraid to try.

When you sold your store, did you feel you would never again have the success you once had? If you did, it could have set a pattern of fear of failing.

I suggest you sit down together and select one of the smallest of your unfinished tasks, determine to complete it — and force yourselves to do so. The next time try a more difficult one, again urging yourselves and each other, to stay with it until it is done. Each success will become easier and will increase your self esteem. Eventually you should finish everything you start.

"DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I both forget a lot and it's bothering us. He says we always did forget a little and I guess we did, but never like now.

"Seems like the more we talk about it, the more we do it. We start into rooms but when we get there we can't remember what we wanted to get.

"We've taken to sitting and watching TV a lot, trying to keep our minds off ourselves. We're nearly 80 but we'd feel good if we didn't worry so much about forgetting.

"We are afraid we'll start criticizing each other. We already do it a little, especially when one of us forgets something they promised the other they'd do.

"Are we getting senile and ought to think about getting into a nursing home or somewhere that might keep us from losing our minds?"

"How many people are senile anyway? J. E."

DEAR J.E.: Not many. According to the President's Commission on Mental Health, as reported in U. S. News & World Report, between 10 and 15 percent of our population seeks some kind of psychiatric care or counseling for emotional problems. Mental disabilities that require long-term hospitalization or outpatient care inflict from 1.5 to 2 million people, this report says.

That's not too pessimistic, considering the over-200 million or so there are of us in the U. S.

Doesn't that make you feel better? Almost everybody forgets a little, so don't worry over it. I think all you need to do is think positively, forget about possible senility, exercise more and find interesting activities or hobbies. Remember you have a 99 percent chance of being healthy mentally.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa TX, 79065.

A reception followed the ceremony in the University City Club with Kim Birdwell, Bonnie Beecher and Elizabeth Rogers serving.

The couple took a Caribbean Cruise.

Outdoor wedding - a popular choice

An outdoor wedding in a favorite place can be a charming way to celebrate this momentous, once-in-a-lifetime occasion.

But, no matter how much you planned, there is still a chance that the unforeseen will occur.

The neighbor's dog might decide to take a stroll down the aisle with the bride; it could start raining; or some bees might attach themselves to the bridal bouquet.

But, whatever happens the best remedy is to remain gracious and keep smiling.

There should be an alternative space available in case it rains. If the ground is relatively flat, a large tent could be set up.

New plastic trash pails are perfect for storing ice, and light foods such as seafood salads, quiches, cold soup and fresh fruit are good choices.

Peeking at Pampa

The P.H.S. class of 1947 held their first reunion a week or so ago — and one class member came from Washington, D.C. That's class loyalty — and a real desire to return to the old home town. He is Tommy Riggs, a member of the Board of Indian Affairs in our nation's capital.

Planners for the week - end get - together spent a lot of time in preparation. Betty Myatt Bohlander, Marjorie Taylor Rogers, Angela Duncan Spearman, Grace Gething, Marjorie Lawrence Stephens and perhaps others served on this committee.

They invited class members to send in their personal histories of the 35 years since graduation. The histories were compiled in a booklet and a copy was given to each member at the banquet on Saturday night. Fifty - eight class members attended the reunion, many of them with spouses.

They had a Howdy Party, a brunch, a barbecue, a banquet and a dance. Prizes were awarded to several. Tommy Riggs was given a toy car for coming the farthest distance. Robert Sailor was chosen as the baldest and was presented a cowboy hat; he also won the prize for stying in Pampa the longest and was awarded a set of toy luggage to get out of town once in a while. Eulah Meers Tankersley was voted the most changed and was awarded a mirror. The least changed (didn't get the name) was given a clock that said, "Time Has Stood Still". The member with the largest family was Barbara Morrison Pocht, daughter of Grundy and Ruth Morrison of Pampa. Harold Anderson gave out the prizes, which had been planned by Betty Bohlander. Harold also made a talk at the banquet that was so good classmates requested copies.

Another reunion of the class is planned for five years from now.

Heard something nice about a Pampa family. Seems the three Reynolds brothers always play in the Tri - State Senior Tournament here each year. Wiley and wife, Phebe, as well as Tennie and wife, Marge, live here. Henry and wife, Hope, come from Tempe, Arizona. The whole family is so friendly, so glad to be together that it's inspirational to everybody.

Want to hear a novel deterrent for mosquito bites? Somebody said you won't be bitten if you wear a plastic rain coat when you work in the back yard or go picnicking or do anything else outside the house. But, granting this probably works, how about the heat you'd feel under that rain coat? Guess you'd have to take your choice between perspiration and scratching. Bet there are some of you who don't read the sports pages. If you don't, you need me to tell you about Wendell Palmer, P.H.S. track coach. He's 50 year's old and still a big winner in sports himself. He won the discus in the 50 - 54 age division in the National Master's track and field meet in Wichita, Kansas recently. He has won that state title seven times in that sport. This time he also placed second in the shot, third in the high jump, fourth in the hammer and fifth in the javelin. How's that for one of our Pampa athletic coaches.

Heard the Kretzmeier family (children, grandchildren and one great - grandchild) held a reunion on August 6, 7 and 8 in the home of Stanley and Theresa Kretzmeier, northwest of Pampa.

The group included Mary Kretzmeier Adair and family of Amarillo; Mike and Lea Adair of Forth Worth; Lisa and Norman Butts of Casper, Wyoming; Mark and Cindy and Joshua Adair of Pampa; Bill and Margaret Kretzmeier Hartman and family of Southgate, Kentucky; Leonard and Roberta Kretzmeier Schwind of Borger, Susie Krueger of Ft. Thomas, Kentucky; and Warren and Rita Jackson Kretzmeier of Fritch. Many of the couples had their families with them.

The only family member missing was Teresa Adair Meichen and her husband, Vernon, and their children. The Meichens live in Augsburg, Germany.

The three - day festivities included trips to area museums, Palo Duro Canyon, the Pageant "Texas" and fishing trips. Members said they had a wonderful time remembering old times as well as looking at old photos and taking new ones.

Heard that eleven residents and 4 wheel chair residents of the Coronado Nursing Center were accompanied by three nurses and other members of the staff to Canyon to view the musical production "Texas". One of the staff members said that everyone had a wonderful time, even if they didn't get home until about 2 a.m.

Everybody's heard about two women wearing new dresses to parties, meeting other women in identical dresses — and getting upset about it. Just heard about this happening in Pampa without either lady getting upset. As they met, one said, "It shows we both have good taste!" When they met again, later in the evening, the other lady said, "Hi, little sister!" without a trace of bitterness. Sounds like two happy, sensible ladies. Hope I can remember it.

Options for baby's first food - Milk

BY DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Have you noticed the number of new babies in the Gray County area? Population is definitely on the increase. With new babies comes the need for educating mothers about the importance of baby's diet.

Baby's first food is, of course, milk. The baby's mother has a very important decision to make before the baby is born concerning how the baby will get milk - by breast or by bottle.

The most perfect food for infants is mother's milk. Infants have special nutritional needs. The nutrients in human breast milk tend to be digested and absorbed more easily than those in cow's milk. The decision to breast feed or bottle feed, however, rests on several factors.

NUTRITIONAL CONSIDERATIONS
Mother's milk is best suited to the growth needs of baby. In addition, some antibodies and immunity factors may be passed on to baby in colostrum and human milk. These antibodies from the mother do help the baby in preventing colds and illnesses especially diarrhea.

Many formulas are available which approximate the composition of breast milk. Special formulas that meet baby's nutritional needs may be bottle fed if the mother is in poor health or if the baby is allergic to cow's milk. None provide the immunological benefits of human milk.

ECONOMIC CONSIDERATIONS
The latest cost comparisons of milks will give mothers something to think about when making a decision between breast and bottle.

BREAST MILK (includes cost of extra food for mother) - Cost per day for 27 ounces of milk - .56; Cost per week - $3.92; Cost per year - $204.40.

EVAPORATED MILK - corn syrup formula and vitamin drops - Cost per day for 27 ounces - .81; Cost per week - $5.47; Cost per year - $295.65.

COMMERCIAL FORMULA POWDER - Cost per day for 27 ounces - .97; Cost per week - $6.57; Cost per year - $354.05.

COMMERCIAL FORMULA CONCENTRATE - Cost per day for 27 ounces - .99; Cost per week - $6.73; Cost per year - $361.35.

COMMERCIAL FORMULA READY TO SERVE - Cost per day for 27 ounces - $1.29; cost per week - $8.63; Cost per year - $470.65.

Figures for formulas do not include the costs for bottles, caps, nipples or equipment needed for sterilizing formulas.

PSYCHOLOGICAL CONSIDERATIONS
A feeling of intimacy develops when mother nurses her baby. Baby responds to this love and security which develops into a warm relationship between mother and baby. The same feeling of intimacy can exist when a parent holds the baby and feeds from the bottle. In addition, other family members can share this experience.

SOCIAL CONSIDERATIONS
Breast feeding has gained acceptance. Since the 1960s breast feeding has become a more common practice among upper middle class women in the United States.

Bottle feeding may offer more flexibility for the professional woman. Bottle feeding may be more desirable if mother must return to work shortly after baby is born. However, other arrangements may be made for the nursing mother who returns to work such as hand pressing the breast.

Remember, infants do have special nutritional needs. During the first year of life, the growth rate is rapid. Help give your baby a good start nutritionally.

Dear Abby

Birthday girl gets surprise but no gift

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday, Mac, a guy I've been dating, called and asked me to go shopping with him. He knew it was my birthday, so I got all dressed up expecting an exciting day. (Mac is 46 and I'm 42.)

He took me to two stores — both men's stores — where he went on a shopping spree, buying himself shirts, pants, socks, ties, etc. From there he took me to an appliance store. I was sure he was going to ask me to pick out something for my birthday, but instead he bought a TV set for his mother.

From there he took me to Joe's Place — his favorite hangout — saying there was something going on there. I thought he had a little surprise party planned for me, but I was wrong again. The "something" that was going on was a birthday party for Joe's girlfriend who worked there. A vase with a dozen red roses was standing on the bar, so Mac took a rose, handed it to me and said, "Happy Birthday!"

After a few drinks he suggested we go to my place and raid the fridge. No present, no card, and he hadn't even planned on taking me to dinner! I felt so hurt I started to cry. He said he couldn't stand to see a woman cry, and if I didn't stop he would take me home and leave me there!

I couldn't stop crying, so he took me home, said goodbye, and I haven't seen him since. How should I handle this? I'm afraid I've lost him.

UNHAPPY BIRTHDAY IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR UNHAPPY: What's to handle? Praise the Lord and pray you've lost him! Then evaluate what you've lost — a selfish, thoughtless, insensitive cheapskate who would deny you the luxury of a good cry.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl. The last time I wrote to you I was 15. At that time I was very depressed because I had never had a date. You told me to be patient — that my time would come. I thought, "Yeah, oh sure!" But you were right, Abby. Now I have two boyfriends and I've never been happier.

Here's my question: What is meant by going to "first base," "second base," "third base" and "making a home run"? I know kissing and petting and going all the way are involved, but I would like to know exactly what each base means.

UP TO BAT

DEAR UP: Unless the terms have changed since I was pitched, "first base" means kissing, "second base" is petting above the waist, "third base" below the waist, and a "home run" means going all the way. (P.S. And a "switch-hitter" still means what it's always meant.)

DEAR ABBY: Our son is engaged to marry a Chinese woman. We have accepted her without qualms or reservations, as she is a fine person, but her parents have not accepted our son. They have refused to meet us, so our first meeting will be at the wedding ceremony.

We are a white, upper middle-class family. The bride-to-be has convinced my son that according to Chinese tradition the groom must pay for the entire wedding. This includes the ceremony, dinner and reception. I have never heard of this "tradition," nor has anyone else I mentioned it to — including several Oriental people.

Will you please advise if this is an old Chinese custom, or is my son being taken over the hurdles?

WITHHOLD OUR NAMES

DEAR WITHHOLD: The bride's parents are apparently still clinging to old-world Chinese tradition whereby the groom's family pays for the wedding and reception. However, the family of the bride is expected to contribute as handsome a dowry as they can afford — money, jewelry, etc., and at the very least, the bridal couple's bedroom set!

Careful and sensible management of your material affairs is necessary in the year ahead. Utilizing such methods will provide a slow but sure upturn.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you may be tempted to do otherwise, it's best not to speak of others today unless you have something complimentary to say. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birth date and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Beware of tendencies toward being stingy with your resources or possessions today, especially when dealing with persons who have helped you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are noted for your fairness and willingness to compromise, but today you may surprise those who know you by keeping these qualities hidden.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unfortunately, it may be difficult for you to disguise your true feelings today. Someone who likes you might be hurt by your actions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's important to avoid the company of negative friends today, or else they may convince you that you can't do something that you really can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you have the ability to smile at your own mistakes today, then others will laugh along with you and not at you. Lighten up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be selective regarding the topics you choose to talk about with friends today. They may not wish to hear your more serious views.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't try to pry secrets today from one who is reluctant to discuss his or her personal matters. In due time this person will tell you all.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of looking on the sunny side as you usually do, you may dwell on negative aspects today. Get back in character.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others may impose upon your time today and ask you to help them with things you'd rather not do. Don't back out by using frail excuses.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Improper conduct on the playing field could get you labeled as a poor sport. If you're behind, act as graciously as you would if you were winning.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can accomplish what you set out to do today, provided you aren't looking for easy outs. Keep your shoulder to the wheel.

Austinites take movie-making into own hands

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cars swishing down the tree-shaded South Austin residential street suddenly slow to a crawl when they come upon the huge, stone house bathed in light. Even though it is after dark, the temperature is still over 90.

Buzzers sound and a man shouts "Quiet!" but crickets, cars and distant radios don't obey. Nevertheless, the director calls for "action," and the movie's star, Aldo Ray, emerges from some bushes and shouts his lines at two young actors crouched below him out of the frame.

Another Hollywood movie being filmed on location in Texas, right? Wrong — not a Hollywood movie. This movie is being made by Austinites who say it will be every bit as good as the expensive Hollywood brand.

Robert Burns has enjoyed a fair amount of success creating ghoulish effects for other people's horror films. He was art director on "Texas Chain Saw Massacre" and created some of the corpses that arise in the closing scenes of "Poltergeist," which was directed by his friend, fellow Austinite, "Chain Saw" director Tobe Hooper.

But that old "what I really want to do is direct" syndrome took hold of Burns, 34, who had come up with script idea a few years ago as he was driving between Austin and Los Angeles.

Instead of battling for attention from the Hollywood studios, he decided to leave L.A. and come home to Austin where he could make the movie himself.

Austin publisher and neophyte movie mogul John Jenkins says he raised the $500,000 budget for Burns' picture from less than ten backers in just five days. Jenkins sees himself as the vanguard of a commercial feature-filmmaking industry right here in river city.

"It is our intention to make Austin a center for motion-picture production," Jenkins said, looking out of place in short hair and suit pants among the T-shirts and cut-offs of the movie crew. "It costs a third and more like a tenth to make in Austin a film comparable in quality to Hollywood."

Jenkins said local money for films has only resurfaced recently, after lying underground for 10 years because of the investment disaster of "Texas Chain Saw Massacre," a locally filmed and produced picture that went on to become a cult classic.

"Texas Chain Saw Massacre" made over $50 million, but none of the money got back to the investors," said Jenkins, one of the investors. "That closed this town down like a lid for ten years."

The financial failings of "Chain Saw" have been chalked up to inexperience and a distributor who went bankrupt, taking the profits down the drain with it.

Meanwhile, Burns, who says he and money "have a rather loose relationship," leaves such things to Jenkins, who leaves the art of filmmaking to him.

"He has had more artistic freedom on this film than any director since D.W. Griffith," said Jenkins.

"And that's the truth," nodded Burns. The film, "Mongrel," is about a group of people who share a huge, old house, '60s style, with a dog who proves to be something less than man's best friend.

"One of the people has a great, big dog that's terrorizing everybody," explains Burns. "At one point, the dog is killed, but the terrorization continues."

Unlike "Chain Saw," his aim on "Mongrel" is "implicit rather than explicit horror," Burns said. "It's more of a psychological thriller than blood and guts, or anything like that. I've always found that type of movie more believably scary — things like 'Psycho.'"

The cast is composed completely of local actors — except for the "name," Aldo Ray.

He worked with Ray on "some terrible little film" about four years ago, Burns said. The movie "never got released and never will be, thank God," he said. But he befriended the 58-year-old actor and convinced him to come to Austin for a couple of days to play the part of the irascible landlord who saves the day.

Burns sees "Mongrel" as the beginning of something big for places like Austin, given the state of big-budget Hollywood filmmaking.

"I really feel that film is moving much more regionally, and it's fractionalizing more, and the big studios are really moving toward the possibility of breaking up," he said. "Over the past year, the budgets have gone higher and higher on special effects, but it's been getting emptier and emptier of content."

"Our idea is to try to show that you can make a movie with things that people forgot go into movies, like story-telling and characterization and acting as opposed to big special effects."

Burns said he is not necessarily wed to doing creature-features for the rest of his life. But his reputation lay in the genre and, he said, "for low-budget films, it's one of the easier markets to break into."

Burns says "Mongrel" will be released next spring, a good time for independents to distribute their wares, since major studios generally flood the market in the summer and at Christmas.

Despite its low budget — "about the lowest you can get by with," the "dailies" look just like the genuine celluloid article movie-goers pay $4 to see.

"Mongrel" is cheap as can be because it's being shot on one location, Burns said — "The only way to make it cheaper is to have only two people."

New TV series 'Gold Monkey' set in South Seas

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's 1938 and as you sit in the Monkey Bar nursing a drink and watching the sun sink into the South Pacific you half expect to see Sadie Thompson strolling along the island beach.

Jake Cutter has just landed his Grumman Goose in the lagoon after flying a contraband load to another island. Louie is behind the bar decorated with dozens of carved monkeys, and Sarah, the sexy chanteuse, is struggling through another song of unrequited love.

This is the setting of "The Gold Monkey," a new ABC series of adventure and intrigue set on the kind of overlush South Pacific island where author Somerset Maugham placed Sadie Thompson in "Rain."

This particular mythical island is Boragora, where there's a spy behind every coconut palm and adventure is lurking inside Louie's Monkey Bar. A motley collection of expatriates has washed upon its shores, each with his own baggage of dreams and a secret in his past.

"It's about a guy who flies a beat-up old airplane in a remote part of the world and during our last age of innocence," says Stephen Collins, who stars as American pilot Jake Cutter.

"It's a very removed place. I think people yearn for that. Two minutes after an event you've got it on the news and reshaped and replayed. It was a slow world in the 1930s. I think people miss that."

Cutter's world is also a make-believe world. The plane, the lagoon, the bar, the jungle have all been constructed on the backlot of Universal Studios under the guidance of Don Bellisario, the creator and executive producer. Not only that, but Universal has made Boragora a stop on its studio tour. Less than a coconut's throw from the dock in front of the Monkey Bar, the Red Sea parts every few minutes as another tramload of tourists go by.

Collins says, "If we do it right it'll look like a show of the '30s. If we shot this on location it would look too contemporary."

A movie he is using as a model is "Only Angels Have Wings," a 1939 release in which Cary Grant played an air mail pilot in South America. He says, "If someone described that pilot you'd never think of Cary Grant. If you described Jake you'd never think of me. Grant played a two-fisted, old-fashioned hero, but it was one of his best parts. There was nothing urbane about him. When I was sent the script for 'The Gold Monkey,' that movie was the first thing I thought of."

"Ours is an action-adventure show," he says "but it's also about how people relate to each other and react in a foreign environment far from home."

Actors love to be loved

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When an actor plays a character who is stuffy and pompous you can bet he's going to wage a campaign to change him to warm and lovable.

Loretta Swit made such a transformation on "M-A-S-H." She's no longer Hot Lips Houlihan, but is Maj. Margaret Houlihan. You can bet if Larry Linville had stayed we'd be finding Frank Burns adorable.

Actors want to be loved. It's no less true on CBS' "Trapper John, M.D." a sort of delayed spinoff of "M-A-S-H," in which Charles Siebert plays an updated (and more civilized) doctor.

In the first few years of "Trapper John," Siebert played Dr. Stanley Riverside as a likable but officious chief of emergency services at San Francisco Memorial Hospital. His purpose in the show was to be a thorn in the side of Trapper John, played by Pernel Roberts, and Gonzo Gates, played by Gregory Harrison.

But Dr. Riverside has also been undergoing change. Some of the stuffing has been coming out of his shirt.

"He's more human now, but it's hard to say how he's changed," Siebert says. "I've lived with it so much and am so much a part of it that the lines get blurry."

"There has been a deliberate effort on my part to make him a more acceptable human being without losing the comic edge. I also think the public accepts more. They like to predict the outcome."

In terms of success, "Trapper John" has just about, but not quite, equalled the success of "M-A-S-H."

"I was going to say it was because it's a medical show, but not all medical shows make it," Siebert said. "It's a compelling environment that people can latch on to. They've either been in a hospital, or they've never been and never want to."

"The light blend of serious subjects has caught on. And Dr. Riverside is the lightest one on the show. We've gotten into serious melp pulling back — with a soupcon of giggles. It seems to be right for the times."

Siebert was a regular on the series, "Husbands, Wives and Lovers," and had recurring roles on "The Blue Knight" and "One Day at a Time."

He said he moved to Los Angeles after exhausting all the work possibilities in New York.

"It was time to come out, time to look for something different," said Siebert, a native of Kenosha, Wis., and a graduate of Marquette University. He studied at the London Academy of Music and Art and remained an additional two years as a teacher and director.

The first job he landed was on "The Rockford Files."

Chuck Norris gets R-E-S-P-E-C-T

By BOB NORRIS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For the past five years, Chuck Norris has suffered from the Rodney Dangerfield syndrome, but it's likely he'll receive some respect with this month's release of "Forced Vengeance."

The movie is being released by MGM-UA, marking the first time a major distributor has recognized the appeal of the martial arts star. Theater owners throughout the world have understood Norris' draw, even though Norris would probably evoke comments of "Who's he?" at a Hollywood premiere.

Norris has learned to live without respect. "When I did my first picture, 'Good Guys Wear Black,' the critics crucified me," he recalls. "They really hurt my feelings, and I called Steve McQueen, who had encouraged me to go into film in the first place. I know I'm no Robert DeNiro. I told him, 'but I can't believe that I'm really that bad.'"

"Steve told me, 'I saw the movie, and you weren't bad, no matter what the critics say. You're going to get better. The main thing about movies is whether you have a certain charisma that makes people want to watch you. If you don't have charisma, you won't make it. But I think you have it.'"

Thus bolstered, Chuck Norris continued with "A Force of One." "The Octagon," "An Eye for an Eye" and "Silent Rage," modestly-budgeted films filled with lightning action. Reviewers sneered, but the Norris movies have grossed an estimated $200 million, primarily from overseas.

"Forced Vengeance" is his most ambitious movie so far, a $5 million adventure filmed mostly in Hong Kong by James Fargo, who directed "The Enforcer" and "Every Which Way But Loose" for Clint Eastwood. Norris plays a Vietnam veteran who battles a crime syndicate with karate chops and his swift-moving feet.

Norris has been in El Paso making "Lone Wolf McQuade," the first production by Orion Pictures since its merger with Filmways. He talked by telephone about his slow but steady rise to respectability in the film world.

While not a 90-pound weakling, he was no super athlete while growing up in Torrance, a few miles south of Los Angeles.

The introduction to martial arts while in the service in Korea changed his life, physically and mentally. Equipped with a brand new set of muscles and a winning attitude, he returned to the United States to become world middle-weight champion in karate before retiring at age 34. He opened a string of karate academies, and among his famous students was the late McQueen.

Encouraged by McQueen, Norris spent three years trying to peddle "Good Guys Wear Black" with himself as star. He finally succeeded, and other films followed. At 42 he remains in top condition, thanks to three-hour daily workouts.

West Texas transients: Some leave crime and blood behind

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — They came from the North and East — people wandering the country in search of work, drawn to the Permian Basin by tales of big-money jobs in the West Texas oil fields.

Many brought their families and dreams of a new life. But some brought — and found — only desperation and the specter of crime.

Crime is increasing throughout the Midland-Odessa area and residents who have watched their neighborhoods swell now fear their streets are no longer safe.

"We'd have a normal increase in crime anyway, but this exploded increase is due to the transients," said Lt. Rusty Baker of the Odessa Police Department. "A lot of them have got no money when they get here and they're sure not going to let their families starve."

The reasons for the increases in crime are varied, but most stem from the oil boom that reached its fevered crescendo last year. More oil wells were drilled in the area last year than ever before and drilling companies were hiring inexperienced people to help man the growing number of rigs.

Word of the boom spread through the recession-ridden industrial cities of the country, and tens of thousands of the unemployed trekked to the Permian Basin to collect the high wages and enjoy the high living.

But toward the end of 1981, the number of operating rigs began to drop and the jobs began to dry up.

"Before this slowdown, anybody who had any sense could find a job in Odessa," Baker said. "Right now, the boom's over. The companies here are laying off tremendous amounts of people. People are still coming in and there's no work for them."

The boom also attracted criminal elements — fugitives and small-time hoods looking to prey on those who profited from the good times.

"Whenever a small-time crook finds out there's an influx of people into a town, they say, 'That's the place to go,'" Baker said.

"They'll stop here long enough to rob something and then they'll head on down the road or they'll break into somebody's house and take a bunch of goodies and go on over to the next town and sell them."

While Baker and other law enforcement officials say the majority of the newcomers have created no problems, they are certain that some of them are responsible for the rising crime rate.

"We know these people are responsible for it," said Ector County Sheriff O.A. "Bob" Brookshire. "Two-thirds of the people in our jail on any given day are going to be from out of state."

"One week, we caught 12 burglars in the process of burglarizing houses," said Midland Police Capt. Billy Ray. "Eleven of them were from out of state. Even I was surprised by that."

Statistically, Baker said, the best proof is the number of people who are processed — fingerprinted and the like — after they are arrested. People previously arrested by the police department already have those records on file.

During the past nine months, the number processed rose 53 percent over the same period last year.

"That'll give you an idea of what's happening," Baker said. "The number processed shows the majority of it is coming from outside of town."

The rise in crime began last year when the boom was at its peak. In 1981, crime in Odessa rose 64 percent. So far this year, the number of reported crimes is up 17.5 percent over last year's record numbers.

Baker said the department's crime statistics, which are figured from October to October, show aggravated assault showed the largest increase, from 123 in 1981 to 348 in 1982, a jump of 182 percent.

Theft, robbery and burglary — the crimes law enforcement officials say are most attributable to transients — all have climbed 20 percent or more. Robberies have increased from 96 in 1981 to 156 this year, a 62.5 percent increase. Burglary has risen 29.2 percent and theft is up 20.3 percent.

Reported crimes in Midland also have increased, although the rate has been lower because that city attracted fewer newcomers than Odessa, Ray said.

There were 27.3 percent more crimes reported in Midland in June than in June of last year. May's increase was 50 percent and April's was 34 percent.

Harder to explain is the increase in murder, Baker said. Since October, there have been 20 murders in Odessa, compared with nine in the same period last year.

Several of those murders remain unsolved and it is those crimes and the rising number of assaults that have caused the most concern in the community, Baker said.

"The majority of the murders happened in one short span," he said. "This caused an outcry from the public, who said the police were ineffective. But you can't just go out there and start throwing people in jail."

Some citizens have taken matters into their own hands by purchasing handguns to protect themselves and their property.

"You definitely run into concern about the crime," said John Shoemaker, a clerk at Jack's Pawn Shop in Odessa. "You see more people buying guns for their personal safety."

Sue Knott, a clerk at Big State Pawn Shop No. 2 in Odessa, said sales of handguns at her store have doubled.

"Guns are our biggest sellers," she said. "Mostly, they'll come in and buy them for their wives. People are scared. They say it's not safe to live here anymore."

The rising crime rate also is taxing local police officials, who find themselves with too few officers to handle all the cases and too few cells to hold those arrested.

"Nobody was ready for this," Sheriff Brookshire said. "Law enforcement was badly understaffed to cope with the great influx of people into the county."

Brookshire's jail, the only one in Ector County, was designed to hold 100 prisoners, but the sheriff said the jail population has been averaging between 160 and 170.

A new jail is under construction, but won't be completed until December, he said.

"We're trying to beef up the force by 14 jailers and 20 deputies," Brookshire said on his way to ask the County Commission for more money. "I've already got the biggest budget that we've ever had. But we've got more crime than we've ever had."

Baker said the Odessa City Council is expected to grant more funds to the police department during coming budget hearings, but he said that may not solve the problem.

"We're having a problem now even filling all the (officer) vacancies that we have," he said. "The boom has pushed the cost of living here so high that it's hard to get by on a patrolman's salary."

from a car wash where they had gone around midnight June 10 after Mrs. Broadway had gotten off from her job as a bartender.

They were taken to a wind-swept prairie southwest of Odessa, where the kidnapper forced Mrs. Broadway and the 14-year-old to strip and then tied their hands.

Sage said the 14-year-old escaped and made her way through the thorny brush to an oil rig, where workers called authorities.

After interviewing the teen-ager and searching the area, Sage and his deputies discovered a 32-inch-deep grave holding the victims' bodies.

"The little girl had been stabbed right in the heart," the sheriff said. "The woman had been stabbed twice in the chest."

"If we hadn't been lucky enough to find that grave, the wind would have blown that dirt around and it would have looked just like any of the other ground. We might never have solved it."

Using a composite sketch, officers arrested Sharp five days after the slayings. The 14-year-old girl, who is now living with relatives, picked him from a line-up, Sage said.

The slayings created a sensation in Kermit, which had not experienced a murder in nearly two years, the sheriff said.

He said the stir over the case is a culmination of concern over crime that has been on the rise since last year's oil boom.

Sage said smaller communities in the Permian Basin have been catching the overflow of crime from cities like Midland and Odessa. Officials attribute rising crime to transients who have been lured to the area by the promise of high oilfield wages.

"The transient people who have moved in here have increased our thefts and forgeries," Sage said. "They
