Burn victims to sue Energas

Staff Writer

An attorney for the James Boleman family, who were burned in a gas fire at their trailer home August 27, said a lawsuit against Energas will be

Dale Friend, attorney with a Houston law firm, said Wednesday the firm has "not decided where we're going to file suit yet, or what contentions to

He said the suit should appear in a week to 10 days, and the dollar amount will not be specified in the original suit.

Energas officials had no comment on the planned suit, and said it is a matter of policy for company employees not to comment on matters that will be in court litigation.

Two - month - old Anne Boleman and her mother, Anne Marie Boleman, suffered second and third degree burns in a blaze that broke out when leaking gas was ignited in their trailer home at 624 Roberta

The two victims are still in critical but stable condition today in separate burn hospitals in

Galveston James Boleman, the father, was treated and peleased for burns on his hands and arms. He is staying at a Galveston hotel to be near his Boleman's child is "doing as well as possible for that injury," he said. "They were both burned pretty badly.

He said there is no evidence of infection in the child yet. She is at the Shrine Burn Center there.

Mrs. Boleman is "doing pretty good" with stable vital signs, according to a hospital spokesman. He said she "came through the skin graft surgery all right early this week," and "the issue is whether the grafts take or not."

There will be more surgery for the woman later,

An Energas employee performed a "shut in" operation at the Boleman home at 10:55 a.m. on the day of the fire, according to Jerry Norris, local manager for Energas.

That operation is a routine check for leaks in the gas lines when service is started.

In that test, the worker checks all appliances in the house to make sure there are none turned on, then uses a "test hand" on the meter itself to test

When the worker tested at the meter, Norris said, there "were no leaks indicated

Based on the investigation by fire investigator Floyd Steele, however, a copper tubing line used by the previous resident was apparently "open all the way to the meter" from the inside of the house.

When firemen first arrived at the scene that afternoon, Steele said, they shut the gas off at a main valve to the house in order to get the blaze under control.

"Sometimes the gas will build up and you won't notice it," Steele said.

Boleman said there was a smell of gas in the house, and that he asked the Energas employee about it.

The serviceman checked gas lines again, Boleman said, and concluded that there was a leak in the home's furnace, but said it was not dangerous because the furnace was then shut off for the

Friend said the worker told Boleman that Energas would work on that leak later, during a check to be made this fall

Steele said he is not sure how the gas was ignited, and that he was waiting to interview Boleman about that before reaching a conclusion

Initial fire department reports indicated it may have been sparked by an air conditioner pilot light, but Steele said he heard from Energas employees that there was no pilot light on that system.

The mobile home also had a gas stove and water heater, he said, but because the gas was turned off iremen immediately, he did not know if these might have ignited the fire.

Boleman said he did not know what sparked the blaze, because he was sleeping in the bedroom at

Steele and Norris said both Energas and the fire marshall's office will continue to investigate the MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas (AP) - Conestoga 1. America's first privately-controlled rocket, was launched flawlessly from this Texas coastal island today and flew a 101/2-minute sub-orbital mission exactly as planned before splashing down in the Gulf of Mexico.

The gleaming white, 37-foot rocket leaped into a clear blue sky about 15 minutes later than planned and climbed unhesitatingly to an altitude of 192 miles as 300 spectators standing in a pastureland applauded

The rocket arched out over the Gulf where a dummy payload separated and spewed 400 pounds of water into the vacuum of space. The payload and rocket splashed down 321 miles from the launch pad.

More than 100 members of the media and about 200 guests - many of them investors in the Space Services Inc. of America - witnessed the launch and burst into applause as it disappeared

In Poland, the state radio broadcast a news bulletin saying Swiss police had stormed the embassy and freed the five hostages unharmed. The radio said the terrorists had been arrested, but it did not elaborate.

The embassy siege began Monday when anti-communist commandos burst into the diplomatic mission, took 13 people hostage, and demanded that Poland's Communist government lift its martial law decree and free political detainees

On Wednesday the gunmen also demanded they be given safe passage out of the country. Swiss officials refused, insisting on unconditional surrender and the safe return of the hostages.

The anti-communist raiders had threatened to blow up the embassy on Friday with 55 pounds of dynamite if their demands were not met.

During the standoff, the gunmen, self-avowed members of a little-known Polish group "Insurgent Home Army," freed eight of 13 hostages, while another diplomat, who hid in the embassy, escaped with police help Wednesday night

Police sharp shooters trained rifles with telescopic sights a the embassy windows to allow the tapped diplomat to climb down a rope from the third floor, according to sources who requested anonymity.

A government communique identified the man as Jozef Matusiak, an attache whose wife was one of the eight captive released earlier. They had shared an apartment on the top floor of the three-story, white stucco embassy building.

Demos, governor's staff differ on fund letter

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - House Democrats trying to hang a "Employee-gate" sign around Gov. Bill "Clements' neck contend the governor has tried to cover up a 1981 letter that warned the Unemployment Insurance Fund might be in trouble

Clements, a Republican seeking re-election in November, called legislators into special session on Tuesday to keep the fund from going broke.

The Texas Democratic Caucus on Wednesday distributed a three-page chronology that they had labeled "The Developing Cover-up" of a Nov. 13, 1981. letter from the Texas Employment Commission.

The TEC letter said employme mmissioners wanted to "alert you (Clements to a potential problem" with the fund. It states that the "reserve" fund has become dangerously small compared to the volume of benefits we pay out."

Clements said Tuesday the letter "was vague in wording and did not address the current problem." In his statement. Clements also said his staff had been monitoring the fund since December.

"This is untrue." Rep. Bob Bush told a news conference Wednesday. "On the day he called the special session, Aug. 26. Clements said, 'If they have such a letter, let them produce it, because I don't have such a letter. I've had my staff search our files. I've asked these people, no one has any recollection of any such notice.

"By failing to act when he was first warned, by failing to plan for the current situation, this governor missed the opportunity to minimize the effect of this crisis on Texas taxpayers," said Bush, D-Sherman. "We are now in a box. No matter what we do, somebody's going to be hurt who wouldn't have been hurt had we taken more timely action."

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said, "The fall guy in all of this, regardless of how you look at it, is the smal' "sinessman - small business person. He or she gets hurt either way, because of the box we are in.

The fund has been drained in recent months by record high payments to hundreds of thousands of unemployed Texans, and employers now face having to pay higher taxes per employee to replenish the fund.

"All of us as taxpayers are going to have to bite the bullet as consumers because those (employer) costs are going to be passed along." Washington. "Had I been governor," he added, "I would have done something besides sit on the letter."

Democrats laughed and called the incident 'Employee-gate' in a comparison to Watergate. Clements' staff responded to the Democrats' accusations at another news conference.

Dr. Jarvis Miller, the governor's budget director, said it is "very clear" from the TEC's proposed budget statements that the TEC never intended "to submit any recommendations to Gov. Clements for action prior to Jan. 1 (1983).

Jim Kaster, the governor's legislative liaison, said it has been asked why the governor did not allow a May special session to deal with the unemployment fund.

"The simple answer is there was absolutely no request from anyone to open the session to that matter. It appeared it could be addressed at the regular session," Kaster said. "The big drain on the fund took place in June, July and August and they admit it.'

Clements' executive assistant, Hilary Doran, said the November 1981 letter was referred routinely to then-budget director Paul Wrotenbery. "I don't think it is of any great significance."

Doran said. Miller noted that in the first five months of 1982, benefit payments were $9 million lower than in the same period last year.

"Until May or June, there was no evidence to substantitate what the TEC was telling us," he said. Bush was asked why employment commissioners did not talk to Clements, rather than merely writing

'My experience with him and many of my colleagues' experience with him has been that he avoids contact with the Legislature whenever possible, and the same can be said for many of the agencies. He's autocratic to deal with. It's not easy to communicate with this governor."

Border businesses begging for relief from peso constraints

LUBBOCK, TEXAS (AP) - A federal official says that during a tour of the Rio Grande Valley he heard the same anguished cry from American merchants along the United States-Mexican border: help.

U.S. businessmen have been urging Washington to coax Mexico into easing its grip on pesos, allowing Mexican citizens to once again trade on the U.S. side of the border.

"Mexicans don't have any dollars to come across the border to buy with." said Eddie Herrera, deputy administrator designate of the Small Business Administration, who traveled here Wednesday after meetings along the border.

They have pesos, but businesses can't accept them because they can't exchange them back for dollars later.'

"They're in a quandary, and a lot of them are very upset," he said. "They want the federal government to do something to release the constraints that have been put on the exchange.'

Mexico has imposed new constraints that make the peso the only legal tender in that financially strapped country Mexicans who need dollars to pay debts in the United States or to import goods made with dollars, but merchants are required to deposit them in the government-controlled banks within 24 hours. Americans who travel to the interior of Mexico must change their dollars into pesos.

"As expected, I found that the businesses that are most severely impacted are the retail businesses along the border," he said.

Poland's citizens badly need hope

The current wave of public protests and demonstrations in Polish cities shows that Solidarity's spirit lives on even if Lech Walesa and hundreds of trade union activists remain in detention.

Even so, the scarcest commodity in Poland today is not bread or coal. but hope. Poles have seen that the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski can impose martial law at Soviet behest, and make it stick.

Strikes can by prohibited. Solidarity can be disbanded, and thousands can be jailed without provoking Western banks and governments to call in their delinquent loans to the Polish government. Indeed, even the interest payments on these loans are being re-scheduled.

Athough the Reagan addministration too has cooperated in rolling over a portion of the Polish debt, it has at least moved to prevent the sale of U.S. technology for the Soviet natural gas pipeline.

Retaining the administration's ban on U.S. technology for the pipeline, and tying that ban explicitly to the Polish repression, must strike most Poles as the one tangible sign that anyone in the West cares about the cause of human rights in Eastern Nuturing hope in Poland, and with it resistance to the Jaruzelski dictatorship, should still be a priority item for all Western governments. Many in Washington agree. but is anyone listening in Bonn, Paris,

Bending recall rule aids air,consumer

Sometimes everyone is better off at the gas pumps when the rules are bent a little. But some environmental groups. legislators and others can't seem to realize that.

They seem so stubbornly sure that the Environmental Protection Agency is in business' pocket (if not on its payroll) that when they found out that the EPA had agreed to back off its efforts to force General Motors to recall 695.000 high - polluting cars. they cried. "sell - out

A closer look, we think, shows that the deal is a success that will benefit the environment and consumers

The problem with a recall, which EPA rules required, would have been that GM was unable to pinpoint the exact reason why the 1979 Pontiac. Oldsmobile and Buick cars were failing to meet the federal emission standards. The only way to reduce the pollution would have been to alter the cars' ignition timing. which would have reduced the gasoline mileage. Quite accurately. GM pointed out that very few customers would have brought their cars in to be fixed if they thought it was going to cost them more money

And even had all of them brought their cars in, only 5,700 tons of the pollutant nitrogen oxide would have been eliminated from the environment. Under the deal, in which GM has agreed to manufacture 2.3 million cars in the next two years under emission standards far stricter than required by the government, at least 12,000 tons of the pollutant will be removed.

Moreover, GM estimated the cost of the recall at $12 million, a sum that would have been passed on to consumers in higher auto price tags. The cost of complying with the more strigent standards under the deal will be far less Perhaps by bending the rules and striking a deal with GM, the EPA did a favor to the automaker. But, as an EPA spokesman said, "It may very well be that we are being easy on them — but at the same time, we will make air quality better." Not only that, but they are doing it at less cost and less trouble to the consumer. Inflexible rules must not be allowed to stand in the way of the ultimate goal: Clean air.

El Salvador makes progress

The Reagan administration's certification of progress on human rights in El Salvador congressionally mandated requirement for continued U.S. aid to that country - is bound to be contested by some in Congress.

Already, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D - Conn., has called the State ruling El Salvador and leader of the Department report "incredible" and a "sham." These characterizations suggest that the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador and a score of career foreign service officers in Washington have conspired to distort the evidence and hoodwink the Congress.

For good measure, Dodd must also be assuming that the White House and the National Security Council are co - conspirators in this alleged

But, in fact, each of the major assertions set forth in the administration's report in El Salvador is amply supported by the available evidence. The discipline of Salvadoran troops and security forces is markedly improved. The numbers of civilians falling victim to renegade police, national guardsmen, or free - lance death squads are less than half of the comparable figures for a year ago.

Most important of all, the elections last March 28 gave El Salvador its first freely elected civilian government in 50 years, and plans are proceeding apace for presidential elections by 1984. What else could all this be called other than progress on human rights? That this transformation has been achieved in the midst of a vicious war against Marxist guerrillas receiving aid from Cuba and Nicaragua makes it all the more remarkable, and worthy of continuing American support. The key word is progress, and by any measure much progress has been made.

El Salvador's real sin in the eyes of many congressional critics seems to be that it voted the wrong way in the March 28 elections. The U.S. - backed candidate was Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the junta then country's center - left Christian Democrats.

But a majority of Salvadorans cast ballots for the five more conservative parties opposing the Christian Democrats. The new government, headed by moderate conservative Alvaro Magana, is and would probably like to amend those aspects of the "land reform" program that have contributed to a drastic drop in agricultural production.

That doesn't suit Dodd and other congressional liberals who want the Salvadoran government to negotiate unconditionally with the Marxist insurgents and to redistribute landholdings of as little as 250 acres.

For the record, the guerrilla leadership insists that any negotiations address only the question of how much power should be handed over to the Marxists. The guerrillas remain contemptuous of elections, the democratic process, or their massive rejection by 80 percent of the Salvadoran electorate on March 28

Efforts in Congress to discredit the administration's human rights certification and to cut economic and military aid to El Salvador will only make it more likely that the democratic institutions now being forged in that country may someday be replaced by a Marxist dictatorship. Even Dodd should be able to recognize that that would be the ultimate human rights disaster for El Salvador.

The S&Ls' real problems

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The savings and loan industry traditionally has presented itself as the best friend of the country's home builders and buyers, supplying the funds necessary for both residential construction and home purchases.

The U.S. League of Savings Associations, the industry's leading trade organization, regularly promotes S&Ls as "the nation's chief source of home mortgage finance" or "the key source for home mortgaes.

But a recent report issued by Richard T. Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the government agency that regulates the industry, suggests that the widely accepted assumption about the close relationship between S&Ls and residential financing may no longer be as valid as it once was billion, the largest outflow of funds in the industry's history.

In addition, the industry suffered a net loss of $4.6 billion last year and approximately 80 percent to 90 percent f all S&Ls currently are experiencing earnings losses.

Those problems can by ascribed, in great measure, to ther fact that the S&Ls earn much of their income from loan portfolios dominated by low interest, long - term mortgages while they must pay far higher interest rates for new funds

In the second half of last year, for example, the industry's average return on assets was about 10.5 percent, while its average cost of securing new funds was about 11.5 percent.

Many of the S&Ls' problems are attributable, however, to the industry's penchant for hiding-behind the presumed protection of Pratt and other federal regulators rather than competing in the open market with other financial institutions seeeking to attract funds from investor

Those competitors, notably money. market funds, offer three important inducements to potential customers interest payments keyed to current market rates, low minimum deposit requirements and liquidity in the form of withdrawals on demand.

Instead of market - level interest, the S&Ls pay as little as 5.5 percent on passbook accounts. In place of low minimum deposits, the S&Ls provide investment opportunities variously requiring at least $5,000 $7,500 or $10,000. Instead of liquidity, the S&Ls offer the ubiquitous "penaalty for early withdrawal.

When federal regulators authorized S&Ls to issue two - and - a - half - year Small Saver Certificates beginning in January 1980, the SSCs had a federally

Last August, however, that cap was removed and interest was keyed to comparable Treasury securities. As a result. S&L deposits in SSC accounts soared more than 50 percent in late 1982, from $60 billion to $96 billion.

What did the S&Ls do after discovering they finally were offering an instrument that depositors liked? They went back to the federal regulators with a plea for reimposition of the 12 percent interest - rate ceiling because they simply didn't want to pay the market rate for the funds. Earlier this year, the industry came up with another concotion - a three month certificate of deposit with interest keyed to the rate of comparable Treasury bills.

But that scheme requires a $5,000 minimum deposit, carries a "penalty for early withdrawal" and has in interest rate linked to none of the lowest rates paid on Treasury securities.

To nobody's surprise, the new certificates aren't attracting many new deposits to the S&Ls - but the industry persists in its futile quest for new funds that won't require it ot offer market rates or competitive benefits.

miles of sewage pipe were laid." The New Republic proposed a new public works program on a huge scale Certainly, it is better than unemployed persons engaged in some form of work than simply receive welfare payments. But there are fatal flaws in the argument for resurrecting this New Deal program. Older Americans will remember the WPA as a man leaning on a shovel or rake. They will also remember that the WPA and similar measures didn't help end the Depression, Makework is not substitute for real work engendered by private business The liberals will come back and say that private business can't provide all the employment that is needed. Right now, that's true, but the reason that private business is in the doldrums is because of too much government spending. Increasing public spending for WPA - type programs will hurt rather than help the economy and the employment situation. Moreover, conditions have changed since the 1930s. In that time, roads were built by a large number of manual workers. Today, road building makes heavy use of machinery. Creating an army of manual workers would be an exercise in turning back the clock. The New Republic apparently favors construction of new public buildings. The country hasn't any need for such structures. Capital would be required to construct them - capital that would have to be taken away from private projects. In addition, the new public buildings would not generate any tax revenues for the cities and towns in which they were located.

It's true that the infrastusture of the United States is run down — highways, bridges and sewers, but more public spending isn't feasible at a time when the federal government is running the biggest deficit in our country's history.

The liberals simply miss the point in arguing for WPA - type relief measures. What's needed is modernization of investor - owned industries. This modernization ineviably will involve a new measure of automation, which in turn should create new types of jobs for displaces industrial workers. If government spends more on makework jobs, the economy won't be able to produce more jobs in the private sector

The New Republic and other liberal organizations persist in believing that the federal government can spend available money more intelligently and efficiently than private industry. There's no evidence to support that view. The new WPA proposals represent a dead end for American

Reagan to lobby for anti-abortion measure

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, making good on a 1980 campaign promise, is to lobby personally for an anti-abortion amendment that opponents are trying to block in

"It is vitally important for the Congress to affirm, as this amendment does, the fundamental principle that all human life has intrinsic value," Reagan said Wednesday in letters to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and other senators

It was the first time since his inauguration that Reagan has said he will make abortion legislation a priority of his administration.

The amendment, sponsored by conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would permanently prohibit direct or indirect funding for abortions and abortion research. It would also include a congressional finding that human life begins at conception.

A vote was scheduled in the Senate later today on efforts to curtail a filibuster run by liberals opposed to any change in the current national policy permitting most abortions. The filibuster ran for a week in August.

Conservatives conceded they probably would fail to get the necessary 60 votes needed to achieve cloture, the parliamentary term for limiting the remaining abortion debate to 100 hours. Helms said many of his anti-abortion supporters have yet to return from a congressional Labor Day recess.

But another similar vote was tentatively scheduled for Monday, and it was likely to be closer. Some Republican sources said, however, that it appeared unlikely Helms would be able to break the liberal filibuster.

Reagan, in his letters to senators holding key votes in the abortion fight, said he would lobby to cut off the filibuster and would support Helms' "It is time to stand and be counted on this issue,"

Reagan said "This is the first clear-cut vote in this Congress on the humanity of the unborn, and it is crucial that a filibuster not prevent the representatives of our citizens from expressing their judgment on so vital a matter," he said. Conservative critics said until now Reagan had given only lip service to abortion and other New

Right social issues like busing for desegregation. Within the past two weeks, congressional sources said, Reagan's top advisers decided to answer right-wing critics and make at least a cursory effort at helping push anti-abortion legislation through

What he is doing is getting involved in an issue he campaigned on," said a source who asked to remain anonymous.

Americans accused of greed in buying goods at Mexican stores

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) - A Mexican of "greed buying," depriving Mexicans of their own groceries at a time of economic crisis in Mexico.

Vi Murphy, spokeswoman for the Baja California Tourism Information Bureau, said U.S. citizens have been taking carloads of inexpensive Mexican groceries across the border and hoarding or reselling them at great profit

"It's greed buying," she said Wednesday. There isn't any other word for it. They are uying more than any family could ever Although the Mexican federal government has ordered confiscation of many basic foods heading out of the country, customs officers say they may not be able to act before next The confiscation order followed devaluation of the peso, an inflation-fighting move that has greatly increased the dollar's buying power here. But Francisco de la Madrid, customs chief here, said it would be next week before customs officials in Baja California, a Mexican province, enforce the porder restrictions Baja California Gov. Roberto de la Madrid, no relation, said he would fly to Mexico City today to work out details.

Meanwhile, in Lubbock, Texas, an official ourism official is accusing some Americans of the U.S. Small Business Administration said American merchants on the U.S.-Mexican border have been urging Washington to coax Mexico into easing its grip on pesos and allow Mexicans to trade north of the border again.

"Mexicans don't have any dollars to come across the border to buy with." Eddie Herrera, SBA deputy administrator-designate, said after meeting with border merchants Wednesday. "They have pesos, but (U.S.) businesses can't accept them because they can't exchange them back for dollars later.

The Mexican government has made the peso the only legal tender. Mexicans who need dollars to pay debts in the United States or to import goods can get dollars in Mexico only with permission of government-owned

Ms. Murphy said some stores in Tijuana's business district had been stripped bare of foodstuffs needed by Mexicans.

Events set for 80th celebration

Pioneers and Pampa High School class leaders from 1909 to 1982 have been contacted to be honored at the 80th Birthday Celebration of Pampa and Gray County Oct. 15 - 17.

For more than two years the Gray County Historical Commisssion, headed by Clotille Thompson, and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Civic Improvement Committee, headed by Thelma Bray, have been working on activities for the three - day event

Pampa High Senior Class and Student Council presidents, as well as representatives of the earliest classes, will be recognized at the Pampa High Homecoming football game against Dumas on Friday, Oct. 15, at 7 p.m., kicking off the celebration. band also will march and play in the parade. An old fiddler's contest will be held at M. K. Brown

At Wit's End Sunday sports zombies

The U.S. Supreme Court recently handed down a decision refusing to limit the number of professional football games cable television can broadcast each Sunday

To me that means only one thing. That Statue of Justice who pretends to be a blindfolded woman is really and umpire in drag

Who else would sanction Jock Sunday featuring 85 televised sports events from sign - on to sign - off in one day? I don't know who presented the proposition, but someone certainly ramrodded it through behind women's backs.

O.K., so I respect the law and I'll abide by it, but in the name of mercy, I ask the courts to consider a couple of amendments

If a man sleeps during two consecutive innings or quarters, he should be declared legally dead and his estate probated.

Legalized Sunday dating for women married to sports nuts will not only be allowed, but enforced.

Admittance to his chair in front of the TV set will occur only after relinquishing his car keys, checkbook and credit cards to Live with the possibility that any given Monday. Curt Gowdy could be named in an alienation of affection suit and you would have to offer proof that you had not spent 15 hours on Sunday

Wives of the watchees will not be responsible for catheters or I.V.s that become dislodged during the day.

If sports are appearing on more than two TV sets in the home, a woman has the right to smash one of them with a tire

There's a lot more at stake here than women vs. televised sports. It is now a moral issue. When men are hooked up to these electronic support systems all day Sunday, do women have the right to let them go on living in their catatonic state, with no hope of functioning as a person? Or is it merciful to pull the plugs and watch them writhe in agony as they view their own children in the real world?

As I said to my neighbor last Sunday, "What kind of life does he have in there watching replays Feruns, and overdosing on statistics? I'm going in and turn off the set and see what

As I leaned over to turn off a speedboat race in the South Pacific a voice threatened to alter the length of my arms. I'm beaten. He's also covered by the temporary insanity

Cynthia West is chairman of the Homecoming and School Liaison Committee. A display on the history of Pampa will feature the work of elementary and middle school students in the Pampa Mall all weekend. Bill Potts, Pampa High Student Council sponsor, is in charge of the Homecoming activities, while Iris Ragsdale is in charge of registration of "old-timers" at M. K. Brown Auditorium.

The research and mailing committee includes Elizabeth Hurley, Eloise Lane, Alta Lane, Nova Mayo, Lillian Mullinax, Mary Reeve, Kathryn Steele, Norma McBee and Fred Blackwell of Lefors, Ruth Magee of McLean and Kay Hallum

Other committee chairmen are Bill and Geneva Tidwell, parade; Jack Selby, fiddler's contest; Peggy Palmitier. western art show; Gladys Stone, quilt show; and Fran Morrison, tour of homes

Planning the banquet are Mary Beth Fatheree and Susan Dunigan, decorations; Max Presnell, entertainment; Betty Bates and Jane McDaniel, style show.

Aviation activities, including early - day planes and balloons, are being planned by Henry Veach, Mike McComas, Chuck Ekleberry, Earl McDowell, Brad Mink, Dick Hagaman,

Dear Abby Husband finds friend too interesting

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband has this infatuation (maybe love) for a good friend of ours. She is a very dear, sweet person. When she comes around, old Herb lights up like a Christmas tree when only minutes before he was an old grouch. The minute she leaves, Herb goes back to being an old grouch again.

This has been going on for a long time, but lately it's been getting worse. I have a hard time handling my feelings around this woman. Poor dear, I'm sure she's not aware of my feelings, and I can't blame her for the way my husband acts. She does nothing to encourage him.

Incidentally, Herb and I have a very platonic sex life.

What is your advice?

JEALOUS AND HURT

DEAR JEALOUS: Your central problem seems to be lack of communication between you and "old Herb." Instead of silently resenting his brightening up when your friend comes around, find out why he's grouchy in your presence. Get a dialogue going without becoming angry or judgmental. His grouchiness may be related to your "platonic" sex life. It's easier to effect a cure when you know the cause.

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother (divorced and living alone) who wants me to call her each time before I drop in. Sometimes I just happen to be in the neighborhood and feel like stopping by to say hello.

Yesterday she became very angry when I popped in on her. She said, "Why didn't you call me? I was planning on going out for the day!"

Do you think a daughter (I am 25) should have to call her own mother and make an appointment to see her? Thank

DEAR UPSET: In most cases, no. But since your mother asked specifically that you call her, you should respect her wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I feel like a heel writing this, but I must. A woman comes to my home three days a week to do the laundry and housekeeping. She is an excellent worker and I pay her top salary. The problem? She has started to bring her 4-year-old child to work with her every day. At first the little girl sat quietly alone in the kitchen, but lately she feels more at home, so she's been following me around asking questions. When her mother sees her doing this, she reprimands her, the child cries, and it upsets me

Please don't think I'm criticizing the child. She's behaving like a normal child. When she gets bored she looks for company. (I've bought her coloring books and she watches television, but she can't do that six hours a day.) I don't have the heart to tell the woman not to bring her .

daughter here anymore, but I dislike feeling uncomfortable in my own home. I am not a mean person and I like children, but I feel sorry for the child. What should I do? NO CITY, PLEASE you feel sorry for the child. It's true.

DEAR ABBY: I am employed as a secretary at a fairly large company. For some time now, we have been receiving obscene telephone calls. These calls are frequent in number but have no established pattern. I am the one who answers the telephone most of the time, and I hear this guy gushing forth with a lot of filthy talk before I can hang up on him. It upsets me just to hear his voice, and needless to say it is most unnerving. The phone company recommends that we hang up on this caller as soon as we recognize his voice. We do, but it has not discouraged this sicko from calling again. Have you any other suggestions as to how to handle this problem?

SICK OF SICKOS

DEAR SICK: The telephone company's suggestion is probably the most effective. To react to the caller's harassment would only play into his hands and encourage him further.

Just be sure that your local telephone company is aware of these calls, and the frequency with which you are being harassed.

NEW YORK (AP) — During the summer it is common for a child in his early teen years to go to a sports camp. For a deaf child this is uncommon, especially if he wants to find a camp that can give him the extra attention he needs, says Mike Glenn, an athlete who has been successful at trying to change

Glenn, a former member of the New York Knicks who was recently traded to the Atlanta Hawks, has for the third straight summer conducted the Mike Glenn Camp for the Hearing Impaired, one week at Atlanta and one week at Mill Neck on

This year Glenn invited more than 45 basketball players, with hearing problems, age 14-18, from all over the East Coast to spend time with him, his staff and fellow National Basketball Association players.

The camp is run entirely in sign language, a skill that Glenn, 26, picked up "earlier than I can remember." His interest in sign language and working with deaf children came from staying close by his father, a mathematics teacher and the basketball coach at the Georgia School for the Deaf. Glenn played with his father's teams and went to practices, quickly recognizing the need to work with deaf children.

The players at Glenn's camp need three things, he points out: to sharpen their athletic skills, improve their communication abilities and develop self-confidence. All three areas are given equal attention, he adds.

Sharpening athletic skills is important to Glenn, who doesn't work with younger kids because they are still developing their learning skills. Rather, he prefers to work with the top three or four players from state schools for the deaf and make them good enough to receive a college scholarship.

Says Glenn, who deplores some people's attitude toward the deaf, "I want the public to look at them and say, 'Hey, they really aren't retarded."

Deaf children also need to improve their communication abilities, he notes. They want to do this, and they are given an extra-special opportunity at Glenn's camp. There, in the universal language of sports, they can "communicate" with such pro basketball players as Ray Williams, Mike O'Koren, Mitch Kupchak, Butch Beard and Toby Knight. "The campers try their hardest to communicate with these players and to ask them questions about things they were always excluded from." Glenn said in an interview in New York. No longer excluded, the kids have the opportunity at camp to build their self-confidence.

"Even though most of the campers won't play in college," he says, "camp is important because the kids are given the chance to build their morale." Then, he feels, they will be able to use this to their advantage when dealing with things outside of camp.

Currently, Glenn is working with the Deafness Research Foundation to help deaf children in other areas besides sports. Already his efforts on behalf of the deaf have earned him numerous awards, including the NBA's Walter B. Kennedy Citizenship Award voted to him by the Professional Basketball Writers of America

Glenn's main interest, though, is still in basketball. He strongly believes that basketball, as compared to other sports, is one of the best games for deaf children, simply because it is an extremely visual game.

Visual things are a way for the deaf to express themselves," he says. "For that reason, visual games are a big hit with them, too.

Although Glenn has coached hearing children in basketball for years, he finds working with deaf children easier because they are more attentive.

'In a way," he said, "they have an advantage being deaf because they are more perceptive. They know that they can't hear things, so they see the court better because they have to do things from sight. They have no choice but to be more aware because they don't have the advantage of hearing another player yell 'watch out' when an opponent sneaks up from behind.

Not hearing other players may be a disadvantage but not hearing the crowds is an advantage, according to Glenn.

"The noises of the crowd would only make the players tense," he says. "The players get their satisfaction by feeling the intensity and thickness of the crowd. They get their adrenaline flowing from seeing the crowd."

Glenn's players recently had the opportunity to be surrounded by a crowd. The all-stars from his camp took on a Police Athletic League basketball team here — beating them

KANSAS CITY (NEA) —
Let's be frank about it. If the United States and the Soviet Union were to begin shooting their weapons at one another today, things would not look good for Kansas City. It is too close to too many places that would become thermonuolear targets in a time of

There is a Titan Interconlinental Missile base to the hear southwest. And the headquarters for the Strategic Air Command is located in Omaha, fewer than 200 miles to the north. There are also 150 Minuteman missile silos at Whiteman Air Force Base; some of them are barely 30 miles away.

So the city's 1 million people could be stymied. They could not remain in their homes, because short-falling bombs and spreading radiation would kill them. And they could not run either, because, under the city's current evacuation plan, they would be directed through the Whiteman missile field.

What to do then?
Well, they might go underground.

That is they might if it that is they arranged. Kansas City is sitting on top of nearly 80 million square feet of limestone caverns, and some residents here would like to develop them for civil defense. The residents say the caverns would make the biggest and perhaps best fallout shelter in the world.

Certainly there's no disputing the part about size. The Bethany Falls firmestone deposit has been mined for rock for nearly 75 years, and the caves that have been cut are prodigious. They run from the southern edge of town to as far north as Leavenworth, Kan., 20 miles up the Missouri River.

Some of the caverns are so enormous they are connected by roads with center lines. Others are several stories high. The 80 million square feet is randomly divided into 12 major caves, but CD specialists say that if it were laid in a 100-foot wide lane, it would stretch for 150 miles.

That's plenty of space for the Kansas City population, apparently. In fact, the specialists say there would be room to spare. The opinion is that if the caverns were properly planned, and used, the caverns would not only accommodate Kansas City, but, theoretically, cross-state St. Louis, too.

And besides footage, there would be other amenities. The limestone deposit is covered with shale, which protects the place from water seepage. And the caves are deep enough that the temperature is a constant 60 degrees, cool in the summer and comfortable in the winter.

... Actually, the natural comforts are such that some of the cavern space is already taken up for shelter. Some mining firms have located their offices in the caves, for example, and several hundred other, non-mining, corporations are also renting areas of the caverns for industrial purposes.

The non-mining enterprises use the caves primarily for record keeping. But some of them are storing more precious commodities, like food. The Pillsbury Co. is storing pancake batter, for one thing, and General Mills is warehousing breakfast cereals. Likewise, vodaka and wines are lining the Vodka and wine? Real estate agents who broker the underground say the Kansas City caves are subterranean supermarkets. There are shelves of everything from soup to nuts, and civil defense advocates believe that in time of crisis the commodities could be passed out as emergency grocieries.

The advocates are led by a retired Air Force general named Bill Dietrich. He is the director of a private corporation called the Kansas City Emergency Prepardness Group. The group is presently trying to persuade the federal government to Thance the conversion of The Caverns to shelters.

Bietrich says Washington has moved away from the ni notion of saving people by and is instead promoting area evacuations. Accordingly, the govern-ment wants Kansas City to evacuate to southern Missouri, right through that field of Minuteman missile silos. Besides this, the Dietrich group has encountered local to resistance. The underground mishelter plan has been ridic> culed in the newspapers and on the streets. Dietrich says a lot of people have decided that there can be no hope in a nuclear battle, "and they reject any proposal for

Fiery farewell for the beehive coke oven

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
SCOTTDALE, Pa. (AP) The beehive coke oven, once so numerous that old-timers say you could read a newspaper at night from the orange glow, is making a fiery farewell after being doomed to oblivion.

The last known beehive ovens operating in the United States were extinguished June 14, the victim of air pollution controls and more efficient ways of converting coal into coke.

But with the permission of state environmental officials, the Alverton Coke Co. will fire up a beehive oven one more time as part of the Scottdale Coal & Coke Heritage Festival Sept. 17-19.

"It's the end of an era. As far as we know, it's the last beehive oven operating in the U.S.," said Edith Painter, owner of the coke works.

'Just another dinosaur bound for extinction," mused her son. Jim Everard, who is president of the southwestern Pennsylvania company.

The beehive, named because its dome-like portal looks like an insect hive, was invented in 1849 as a way of cooking off sulphur, gases and other impurities from

The resulting coke was almost pure carbon, and it became vital to the steel-making process that forged the development of the

In 1910, the heyday of the beehives, there were 548 coke plants and 100,362 individual ovens in the country. according to the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

Coal barons like Henry Clay Frick, born in nearby West Overton, built tens of thousands of red-bricked ovens right outside the mouths of coal mines. They were hellish pillars of fire that burned 24 hours a day, seven days a week to fuel the booming steel mills.

But the beehives became obsolete with the advent of the by-product oven, which captures the residue to make things like asphalt and fertilizer, and the non-recovery oven, which recycle the wastes and burn them up.

Their decline, which began early in the century, was slowed only by the huge demands for steel in World War II and the Korean conflict.

Today, the American Iron and Steel Institute says there re no more beehive c ovens left.

Besides, the demand for coke is dropping because steel companies, which built their own giant coke works, are switching from blast furnaces to electric furnaces and the demand for steel has

But beehive coke ovens will be remembered for their role in the growth and development of southwestern Pennsylvania.

'Everybody's livelihood was tied to coal coke. It meant prosperity. It was the lifeblood of the area," said Richard Campbell, president of the Scottdale Coke and Coal Heritage Committee, which sponsors the festival.

"Most of the people who came from Europe to settle in this area came to work in the coal mines or coke ovens. It's what developed the area,' said Campbell, who organized the festival in 1974 for Scottdale's centennial.

Prosperity had its price. Coke ovens affected everyday life before government agencies cracked down on filthy air and gritty

"There used to be streetcars running from Brownsville to Latrobe, and there were so many coke ovens burning you could read your newspaper at night from their light," said Campbell.

"You didn't dare wash your clothes the day they were going to draw coke, because your sheets would get black. People set their wash day in conjunction with the coking cycle," he added.
"And families lived in abandoned coke ovens during the Depression. They didn' have any place to stay, and they were able to survive in the coldest weather.' In later years, coke ovens caused traffic problems. The fog-like smoke from the ovens restricted vision so much that some areas built wooden fences along highways so motorists could see the road. It was the foul smoke and harmful particles that finally

You have to hand it to the New York Yankees by beating the Baltimore Orioles, they killed two birds with one stone.

Hitting four home runs, the Yankees whipped the Orioles 10-5 Wednesday night and stopped a pair of streaks: the Orioles' 10-game winning streak and Jim Palmer's personal 11-game streak.

'They throttled us the first two games,' said Dave Winfield, who hit one of the Yankee homers. 'You don't want to be swept and embarrassed." The Yankees apparently caught Palmer on his worst night of the season. In other American League action, it was Kansas City 6. Seattle 2; Chicago 5, California 3; Toronto 6, Oakland 5: Texas 2, Minnesota 0; Cleveland 2, Boston 0 and Milwaukee 9, Detroit 7, Palmer, 13-4, had not only won 11 straight games before Wednesday night, he had not lost in his 18 previous starts, dating back to May 30.

The streak which propelled the Orioles into second place in the AL East softened the loss for manager Earl Weaver: "It ain't too bad to win 17 of 18 and 10 in a row.

Along with Winfield's homer, a solo shot, Ken Griffey hit a three-run homer and Jerry Mumphrey and Roy Smalley walloped bases-empty homers for the Yankees. With his homer, Winfield became only the ninth player to hit 30 or more homers in each league and only the fifth right-handed-hitting Yankee to get 30 in a season. Jay Howell, 1-1, who allowed four hits in eight innings, was the winner.

Royals 6, Mariners 2

Vida Blue scattered five hits and Hal McRae drove in two runs with a triple and a single. boosting his major league leading total to 118, as Kansas City beat Seattle. Blue, 12-9, struck out six and walked one in his fifth complete game of the

The Royals got all the runs they needed in the first inning when they scored three off Jim Beattie, 8-11, with the help of a throwing error by Julio Cruz, one of two errors by the Mariner second baseman that helped the Royals to runs.

White Sox 5, Angels 3

Mike Squires' eighth-inning infield single, his third hit of the game, drove in the winning run as Chicago beat California, dropping the Angels two games behind the front-running Royals in the AL

Greg Luzinski doubled with one out off reliever John Curtis, 0-1, and Carlton Fisk drew an intentional walk with two outs before Squires bounced a single behind first base to score pinch-runner Jay Loviglio from second.

Vance Law then greeted Ricky Steirer with a single to score Fisk for a 5-3 lead.

Rich Dotson, 11-11, allowed seven hits in 72-3 innings as he posted his eighth consecutive win. He walked two and struck out seven before getting help from Salome Barojas, who gained his 17th save. Blue Javs 6. A's 5

Barry Bonnell and Jesse Barfield drove in two runs each as Toronto beat Oakland and completed a three-game sweep of the A's. Bonnell tripled and singled twice, and Barfield doubled and hit his 13th homer in the seventh as Toronto won in Oakland for the sixth straight time.

Roy Lee Jackson, 5-8, pitched 32-3 innings of two-hit relief

Rangers 2, Twins 0 Left-hander Jon Matlack fired a one-hitter for seven innings and George Wright hit a two-run homer in the third to lead Texas over Minnesota. Matlack, 7-6, making his first start since a demotion to the bullpen July 10, pitched his best game of the season, as he walked two, struck out four and gave only a bad-hop single to Lenny Faedo inthe fifth before giving way to reliever Danny Darwin to start the eighth inning. Paul Mirabella finished up to complete a four-hitter, gaining his third save.

Indians 2. Red Sox 0

Ed Whitson tossed a seven-hitter and Andre Thornton's first-inning double drove home the only run he needed, lifting Cleveland past Boston. Whitson, 3-2, struck out two and walked two to record his first complete game of the season.

Loser John Tudor, 10-10, held Cleveland to five hits. Along with Thornton's double. Tudor also gave up an eighth-inning homer to Kevin Rhomberg, the first of his major league career.

Brewers 8, Tigers 7

Cecil Cooper hit a three-run homer and Charlie Moore drove in three runs with a double and a bunt single, leading Milwaukee over Detroit.

More fish at Lake Meredith

(Editor's Note: This article on Lake Meredith was written by Joe Kraai, a fisheries biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department)

During 1981 and 1982, Lake Meredith has experienced more than a 30-foot rise in its water level. Literally thousands of acres of brush has been covered which has provided excellent cover for the lake's fish population. As this situation occurred, the fish responded with a dramatic increase in numbers-very similar to that which occurs as a new lake fills. Spawning success is greatly improved and survival of the small fingerling fish is greatly increased due to the abundance of innundated cover. Recent fish population samples collected from Lake Meredith show that the sunfish, crappie, largemouth bass, smallmouth bass, channel catfish, walleye and white bass have all experienced very successful spawning in 1982. The crappie, sunfish and bass have had their most successful spawn since the early 1970's: These young fish are present in numbers far in excess of that which the lake can support as adult fish. Fishing success has varied the past two years. During 1981, large numbers of small walleye and white bass were caught. These fish were spawned in 1979 and 1980 and were concentrated by the lowering lake levies and thus more susceptable to fishing. Fishing for other species was generally poor in 1981. In 1982 fishing has been generally poor with the exception of individual catches of white bass. channel catfish and small white crappie. Fishermen are discouraged and are wondering what has happened to the larger fish which were in the lake. We conducted extensive netting during the spring in conjunction with a Texas Tech University study and found that there are still very good numbers of large fish throughout the lake: The reasons that more and bigger fish are not being caught are probably that the fish are scattered over a much larger area and have a great abundance of natural food available. Since the lake first began rising in 1981, it has increased in volume by over 200,000 acre feet of water. Fishermen are seeking essentially the same number of catchable fish available in 1981 over almost double the amount of water in 1982. The forage fish population has increased dramatically. Gizzard shad and silverside minnow are present in numbers beyond estimation. With this situation the gamefish can be very selective in their feeding and essentially ignore fishermen's offerings.

Even though fishing is not good at this time, conditions for the lake's fish population could not be better. As early as spring of 1983 we expect to see a major increase in the numbers of fish caught, although the average size will be small. By 1984 we expect to see even more fish caught and of a larger size. Fishing success should continue to improve up to the point that the new habitat is lost. This could extend over several years if rainfall remains adequate. On the other hand, fishing success can deteriorate rapidly with falling lake levels. As the water level falls, young fish are consumed as soon as they are spawned and the lake is dominated by fewer and larger fish.

In West Texas, fishing is closely tied in with water level fluctuation. At Lake Meredith we are approaching optimum conditions and we hope that our fishermen will take advantate of this situation.

Astros win amid controversy

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston rookie Bill Doran was thrilled and Kevin Bass was relieved. San Francisco Manager Frank Robinson was just mad.

All those emotions flowed out Wednesday night after the Astros' 8-1 victory that included a controversial six-run sixth inning the Giants felt never should have happened.

Doran, just called up from the minors, clubbed in two runs and Bass, just obtained in a trade from Milwaukee, was hitless in eight major league at bats until his single drove in one run in the sixth.

Houston pitcher Joe Niekro also got into the act by throwing an eight-hitter and knocking in three runs.

The fireworks came in the sixth when Giants leftfielder Jeff Leonard short-hopped a fly hit by Houston shortstop Dickie Thon. Second base umpire Lee Weyer first called Thon out, but his call was overruled

All three favorites reached into their reserves after dropping the opening sets of their matches Wednesday and recovered to pull out victories and advance to the tournament's semifinal round after Austin was eliminated.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Pampa News that Joe Davis of Pampa and Gary Thomas lost in the 35 and over doubles finals of the Tri-State Tennis Open held last weekend in Amarillo.

Davis and Thomas actually won the 35 and over doubles championship with a 7-6, 0-6, 6-4 victory over Leo LaBorde and Red Meyers of Amarillo.

The Pampa News regrets the error.

Report due today on town's water supply

ALICE, Texas (AP) - City officials waited for the results of laboratory tests today to determine whether Alice residents could turn on their taps and drink their water, which had been laced with a black, oily

Health officials warned about 30,000 residents in this city and the nearby community of Rancho Allegra not to drink the public water after the substance was discovered Tuesday.

The South Texas regional manager for Milchem Inc., a drilling mud supplier for the oil industry, said Wednesday that Milchem's Alice facility crossed lines accidently and pumped five barrels of the black chemical contaminant into the water.

Chuck Atteberry of Houston said he discussed the water contamination with Alice city officials, and said Milchem would pay the cost of cleaning up the pollution.

"We are as anxious as they are to get drinking water back to the people of Alice," Atteberry said.

Residents watered lawns and bathed with water from their taps but had to rely on tanker trucks for their drinking water again Wednesday as state officials tested the composition of the drilling mud.

City workers tried to flush out the lines Tuesday in an attempt to allow full resumption of the water services in Alice and Rancho Allegra.

Atteberry said Milchem supplied a list of chemicals in the drilling mud, a substance pumped into drilling holes to control pressure, to the state health officials in Austin analyzing samples of the water from the Southwest Texas

The firm also hired a private laboratory in Houston to conduct an independent study, he said.

"We're holding until we find out the results of the samples that were flown to Austin," assistant utilities director Richard Garza said Wednesday. "We should know the results tomorrow afternoon. They're going to call us and tell us whether we can release the "People can water their lawns and so forth. As far as we know, the water doesn't pose any danger to animals,"

At least one illness was reported in Alice after residents began noticing a strong odor emanating from the water. One person was treated for diarrhea that was attributed to the water contamination, said a spokesman at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

Water samples were sent to Corpus Christi for analysis Tuesday, and more samples were sent Wednesday to state health officials in Austin, Garza said.

"Displeasure wit the alimony and property settlement award is not 'sufficient cause' for dismissal," the justices said Wednesday in the unsigned, unanimous opinion that was a win and a loss for both principals in a divorce granted March 21, 1980.

The couple married in 1963 and separated in 1974, and the former Beverly Rentz Bentley filed for divorce in 1976 on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

The court said Mrs. Mailer could not cancel the complaint after the verdict in order to re-file in New York in hopes of a more generous settlement.

Cartoonist Garry Trudeau says they are "confused and out of sorts," and he himself needs "a breather."

"For almost 15 years, the main characters have been trapped in a time warp, and so find themselves carrying the colors and the scars of two separate generations," Trudeau said in a statement issued Wednesday by Universal Press, which

The strip, which now runs in nearly 700 papers, began with 28 subscribers in 1970 as an outgrowth off a strip Trudeau drew for Yale's college newspaper while a student there.
