

Perryton's antiques draw large weekend crowd

By SHERILL McLEAREN

PERRYTON (Sp.) — Approximately 1,000 people attended the fifth annual Golden Spread Antique Engine, Machinery and Tractor Show held Saturday and Sunday at the Donald Sell farm east of Perryton.

Coming to see the old farm and other machinery were persons from nine states — Arkansas, California, Illinois, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas and Washington — plus a representative of National Geographic Magazine doing a story on 50 years after the Depression and Dust Bowler.

More than 40 antique tractors from the 1920s — 40s, more than 20 antique autos, four old steam engines, several plows, threshing machines, header spreaders and manure spreaders were on display at the event.

Activities were highlighted by parades of the antique rolling stock at 1:30 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday, plus steam engine race, slow and fast tractor races and a demonstration of mule-drawn machinery.

Threshing demonstrations, herd dog demonstrations, a demonstration of the pulling power of a 1913 Case steam engine, and church services on Sunday morning were also featured.

Brock Taylor of Follett won the tractor races with a 1958 John Deere 40 owned by Bob Taylor of Logan, Okla. In the slow race event, drivers must move the tractor as slowly as possible without breaking forward motion or using the clutch.

Pampan George Battin, one of the few muleskinners in the area, demonstrated mule-drawn machinery, assisted by his wife, Mary. The team pulled a two-bottom plow, a reaper, a manure spreader and a header barge.

J.D. Wilbanks of Spearman demonstrated the old Case steam engine, including the whistle signals used with the machine. Wilbanks also won the steam engine race.

Charley Custer of Logan, Okla. gave a demonstration with his cowdogs rounding up cattle.

Among the antique vehicles and machinery shown were a 1938 Case model L tractor, a 1929 Hart Parr and a 1929 Rumley Do All 20 HP tractor (one of only 3,000 made), all shown by Donald Sell; a 1927 Wallis tractor, Marvis Plank, Hugoton, Kan.; a 1931 Model A Ford, Avis Anderson, Logan, Okla.; and a 1910 friction drive Avery tractor, owned by Fred Jones, Durango, Colo.

This 1913 60 horsepower Case steam engine, owned by J.D. Wilbanks of Spearman, featured 10" by 10" steam piston, and an engine speed of 250 rpm. The engine today is valued at more than 10 times its original $2,300 price. (Correspondent photo by Sherill McLearen)

Two teens saw their way out of the Pampa jail, but are caught later in Perryton

By SHERILL McLEAREN, DAVID CHRISTENSON, AND JEFF LANGLEY
Of The Pampa News

Two juveniles escaped from Pampa city jail, stole a pickup, and drove to Perryton early Monday morning, where they again were taken into custody by Perryton police, according to officers.

Pampa police did not release information to the public about the escape until questioned about the incident later.

"It wasn't really a jailbreak," Chief J.J. Ryzman said Monday afternoon, when he was asked about the incident later.

Though the chief says it was not a "jailbreak," two juveniles, who were once in custody inside a juvenile detention cell in city jail early Monday morning, forced their way through two metal enclosures and were soon on a flight toward about four hours' freedom, before their capture in Perryton.

Information about the escape from city jail here was received through Perryton police, who recaptured the youths in that Northern Panhandle town at about 10 a.m.

The boys, both 14, made their escape from the basement jail at city hall sometime between 3 and 5 a.m., Monday, according to police.

Ryzman said the youths were being held in city jail for juvenile authorities. According to police, one youth was awaiting transfer to juvenile hall, or the Texas Youth Council. That youth is also a suspect in connection with an auto theft. Ryzman said the second juvenile escapee had been previously held in custody as a runaway and was awaiting a hearing in juvenile court.

The first youth was a suspect in a late-night auto theft here September 9. Tommy Downs called police the next day to report his 1975 Chevrolet Blazer missing. Downs said his vehicle was stolen sometime during the night from Halliburton yards at 300 S. West.

The car was recovered in Abilene, and the Pampa boy was detained there in connection with the incident. Police said the vehicle had been slightly damaged.

That incident led to the first youth's return to Pampa prior to his escape Monday, and once again the Halliburton yard was the site the youths selected to steal their get-away vehicle, according to police reports.

Ryzman said the youths made their escape through a hole in the metal wire-mesh screen on the cell door. The chief said the youths "got a pipe loose from somewhere" and used it to pry on "welds" securing the wire mesh to the metal door.

"They pried on it until they popped the welds," Ryzman said.

However, Perryton police said the youths used a saw to cut through the metal enclosure and said the pair had worked on cutting the metal for about three days.

Ryzman denied the juvenile escapees had a saw and said this morning the pipe was pried loose from above the cell when the kids managed to get their hands through the wire mesh above them.

The chief said after creating a hole "just big enough to get a head through," the juveniles climbed out of the cell and into the hallway of the jail.

Officers and the dispatcher did not notice any banging noise the boys made when they were busting loose, Ryzman said, probably because they assumed it was made by other prisoners.

Drunk prisoners often bang on the walls of the cells, he said today, and "That night we had some rowdy prisoners in there."

The closed-circuit camera system that is used to monitor the jail does not reach into the juvenile section, he said.

Once into the passageway alongside the cell, the pair checked several windows before forcing open the window directly across from their cell.

The chief said the jail windows in the hallway are secured on the outside with wire mesh.

He said the boys "worked on" the window and apparently "kicked it out."

Ryzman said the wire mesh is set into a wooden frame on the outside of the window. He said the wood securing the wire mesh was "rotten," and that enabled the pair to push away the enclosure.

The youths then climbed through the window to the outside and made their escape, Ryzman said.

According to police, the escapees went to the Halliburton yards where they allegedly stole a pickup owned by Phillip Lang, and drove to Perryton.

Perryton police said youths stopped at Waterloo 83, a convenience store on the south side of Perryton. Perryton officers said the pair filled the pickup with $42 worth of gas and drove off without paying.

Perryton authorities were alerted to the theft, and minutes later, officer Bob Maness spotted the wanted pickup.

After stopping the pair, Maness discovered they were wanted in connection with the escape from Pampa and truck theft.

Perryton officials detained the escapees and placed them in the Ochiltree County Jail.

Perryton police said the youths had four watches which had been removed from the stolen pickup, and the authorities said the juveniles told them they had sold several other watches they found in the truck, before they were arrested.

The juveniles were returned Monday afternoon to the same cell from which they had escaped.

Monday morning on the "police blotter," or a public summary of police activities during the period of the escape, no information about the escape was listed.

Pampa will quiz potential police officers tomorrow

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

A written test, part of the employment procedure for the Pampa Police Department, will be given Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. at department headquarters.

The three-hour test is the first step for employment as a patrolman on the Pampa force.

Captain Roy Denman, who will administer the test, said it is a periodic test given to develop a file of potential employees.

Provided by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education, it includes a two-part testing on reading comprehension and a writing skills examination.

The potential officer must also pass an oral interview board composed of three to four senior officers, and undergo a thorough investigation of his background.

That investigation involves letters and phone interviews, and a check of the files of the Texas Department of Public Safety and the FBI.

"It takes about a month to do a good background investigation," Denman said.

If it is his first law enforcement job, the department must act to certify the officer within one year.

To be certified, an officer must undergo 320 hours of instruction at a state certification school, at a total cost to the department of about $20,000, according to Denman.

However, Denman said, an officer who is already certified is not necessarily at an advantage over an applicant who has no previous police experience, and all applicants are welcome.

Patrolmen on the force start at $11,760 salary per year, and with a raise every six months, top out at $13,610 a year after 18 months.

If employed, officers are furnished all equipment except weapons, footwear and handcuffs.

'If it makes any difference, I just shot a cop'

By EVIE DAVIS
Special Correspondent

LUBBOCK — Shooting sheriff's deputy M.L. "Corky" Guthrie of Canadian was no more bothersome than shooting a rabbit, capital murder defendant Paul Berry Bush was quoted as saying shortly after the lawman's death.

"I said, 'Doesn't it bother you?'" testified Larry King, who listed as his address the Texas Department of Corrections.

"He said, 'Hell, no, it's just like killing a rabbit.'"

King, called to the witness stand in 72nd District Court by prosecutor Guy Hardin this morning, told a jury he turned down offers by Bush, 29, to burglarize Lad's Pharmacy in Canadian for a supply of Preludin, an amphetamine.

But he loaned his automobile to Bush about 12:30 a.m. July 12, 1980, and when Bush returned it about 6 a.m. that same day, Bush was covered with "red stuff."

"He had his shirt off, and red stuff all over him," King said. "I went outside, and there was a dent in the car, and some red stuff on it. I went in and asked him what happened."

"He said, 'If it makes any difference, I just shot a cop.'"

King implicated Bush as the man who told him he squatted down inside the burglarized pharmacy to shoot — three times — the 52-year-old deputy who answered a silent alarm at the business about 3:45 a.m.

But King's testimony, today and according to prior testimony at an October, 1980 trial and in a written statement made to police, contradicted itself in several areas.

King, who has been convicted on charges of theft, burglary, aggravated assault and parole violation, testified at Bush's first trial that the "red stuff" was hot sauce. He explained today he believed that because of the pepper seeds in the substance.

He told authorities shortly after Guthrie was killed that Bush told him he was in a prone position when he shot the deputy. And he testified previously that he never saw Bush fire his 12-gauge shotgun before July 12, 1980 and that the shotgun was not assembled. He testified Monday he saw Bush fire the gun once prior to that day.

But he denied he was with Bush the night Guthrie was killed.

"You told police that Paul said, 'No, no, don't shoot,' leading you to believe the deputy's gun was drawn," defense attorney Floyd Holder asked. "That's what he told me."

"Isn't it true you remember those words so well because you were there that night, and when you shot that deputy for the third time, Bush told you not to shoot?" Holder asked, alluding to prior testimony that Guthrie's service revolver was snapped into his holster when he was found wounded in his patrol car.

But King denied it. He told the court that Bush returned, and he drove the man to Dumas because "I wanted to get rid of him."

"He said he was going to kill every S.O.B. that knew about it (the planned pharmacy burglary)," King said.

Preston Worley, formerly a driver for the Amarillo Globe News, testified Monday that he was parked behind the post office in Canadian when he heard a succession of sounds at first attributed to a car backfiring.

"When I got out of the van, I heard a shot," Worley said. "The first thing I saw was a man with a rifle. (He had) light-colored hair, six foot, maybe six-one. I kept my eyes on that rifle. I called the sheriff's department then."

A Canadian resident, who that night was a transient sleeping in a homemade camper on the back of his pickup truck, testified that he heard a sound like a lightbulb exploding.

"I believe I heard someone say, 'Oh my god,'" said Lee Arnold. "I wasn't dressed, so I stayed in the camper. Then I heard footsteps that sounded like they came around my pickup."

"Then I heard the sound of shells being ejected from a gun," Arnold said.

Monday afternoon, Bush listened to several of his former Panhandle friends testify concerning his confessions and bragging about shooting Guthrie. He sighed in apparent frustration, repeatedly shaking his head as if to refute their testimony.

But Holder is expected to call Bush to the witness stand this afternoon to testify in his own defense. He did not testify at his October 1980 trial.

"He said he shot a policeman in Canadian," Craig Pendleton testified Monday. "He wanted me to know it and to hide him out. He said he had made a mistake, and he needed some help."

"I guess he needed a place to hide out or something — that's what my wife said," Larry Austin told the court.

Shawn attends party to raise money for his own funeral

By HELEN L. MITTERNIGHT
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Shawn Kenyon's adult friends and neighbors blocked off part of Lakeview Avenue and threw him a big party. They were raising money to cover a funeral for the 3-year-old boy, who doesn't know that his cancer is killing him.
"I don't think he understands he's going to die," Shawn's father, Mark Kenyon, said Monday. "We don't want him to know, he's so happy now. He's not sick or anything, he's just lost his hair."

It was just 10 weeks ago that doctors discovered a malignant astrocytoma on Shawn's brain. The tumor is considered inoperable.
Medical authorities say treatment of that kind of cancer has generally been unsuccessful with just a fraction of its victims living more than 10 years.

Doctors told Gail and Mark Kenyon that Shawn will be lucky to live one year.
Treatments have made the boy bald, his father said, but he otherwise doesn't know about his condition.
"He knows he has an 'owie' on his head," Kenyon said.

Sunday's party, which had been advertised in local newspapers, drew 1,500 people and featured food and drink, contests of skill and pony rides. Kenyon said Shawn knew the party was in his honor and "he was just so happy, he kept running around."

Mrs. Kenyon said the neighbors in the suburb of South Milwaukee threw the party because the family's money is running short. Her husband is laid off as a grinder at Appleton Electronics

Inc., she said, and the family has no insurance and gets only unemployment compensation, food stamps and some federal aid.

Kenyon said about $1,000 would cover the cost of laying their son to rest, but the party raised $2,800 and more donations were coming in Monday, so the money left over will go for cancer research.

A maker of brewery equipment, H&K Inc. of Brookfield, Wis., heard that Kenyon wanted to take his son to Disney World before he died and donated four round-trip plane tickets to Orlando, Fla., for Shawn, his mother and father, and the couple's other, 2-year-old son.

"I called my wife, who was at the hospital with Shawn, and told her about the tickets," Kenyon said. "She just busted out in tears. We wanted to do something really fantastic for him before he went."

The Kenyons plan to put the proceeds from the party in a bank trust to cover the funeral with the leftover money to go to three groups — the Childhood Cancer Assistance Program, Live One Day at a Time and Midwest Athletes Against Childhood Cancer.

Correction

The Pampa News last Tuesday reported that three Skellytown women who had made tentative plans for a day care center there had abandoned the project. This was in error.

Actually, the News has been informed, the four women who are investigating the feasibility of opening a child care center in Skellytown have made no decision yet as to whether they will open the center.

They are evaluating response to newspaper ads and questionnaires, and may, if response is sufficient, open a center to care for 50 or more children.

The women planning the center are Cathy Reyes, Teresa Hicks, Gwen Reid and Charlotte Lytle.

The Pampa News regrets any inconvenience the error may have caused.

Theft of Girl Scout cookies is becoming a crummy problem

By SCOTT KRAFT

NEW YORK (AP) — More and more people are dipping into the Girl Scouts' cookie jar, and local scout councils are losing patience — and taking legal action.

Several councils have gone to court recently to recover cookie sales proceeds from troop leaders and parents who failed to turn in cash collected by the girls.

A former scout leader in Montgomery, Ala., was sentenced to five days in jail earlier this month for stealing her troop's cookie money. Last week scout officials in Cleveland said they planned to go to small claims court to prosecute 25 people for losses of about $8,000 from this year's cookie sale.

In Detroit, one of the nation's more economically depressed areas, the problem is worse this year than ever, says Jean Wayman, executive director of the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council.

"It is a growing problem, and the amount of money grows greater all the time," Miss Wayman said. The Detroit council has lost "many thousands of dollars just on this last cookie sale," she said.

Miss Wayman says the council "has a couple cases awaiting court dates," but she declined to discuss them. The combined sale of cookies and Girl Scout calendars brought the council $1.3 million in 1981, 56 percent of its annual budget.

"Times are harder, and I think the economy is behind this in large measure. But we feel the kids are owed their money. Our priority is for girl scouting and we'll prosecute when people are taking money from the Girl Scout program," Miss Wayman added.

The Girl Scouts of America, marking its 70th year, expects to collect more than $200 million this year from cookie sales by its 2.3 million scouts, said Richard Knox, spokesman for the national organization in New York City.

Court cases to recover cookie proceeds are "highly unusual," he said, but because all are handled by local councils, they might not be reported to the national office.

"We have more money, more boxes of cookies and more people involved in the cookie sales than ever before," Knox says. "When you consider the amount generated and turned over, it's a remarkably honest operation."

Chicago's Girl Scout council began getting tough five years ago. Although officials there decline to cite specific figures, they say the loss amounts to less than 5 percent, or about $50,000, of total sales.

The problem has grown in the past two years "simply because it's tempting," said Shirley L. Miller, director of development for the Girl Scouts of Chicago.

But "we get tough about it," she added. "This is a million-dollar-a-year business. There's no fooling around."
Chicago's 30,000 Girl Scouts sold about 1 million boxes of cookies this spring and plan to hold another sale this fall.

Girl Scout cookies are sold for $1.50 to $2 a box, depending on the area, with about 65 cents going to the bakery and the rest going to support local troops and councils. Cookies are the largest source of income for Girl Scout councils, providing 40 percent of the operating budgets, the national office said. The United Way, in comparison, contributes 28 percent of the budgets.

Bubble boy celebrates 11th birthday

HOUSTON (AP) — David celebrates his 11th birthday today in a protective plastic bubble. He has been in that germ-free environment since he was born and has never been touched by someone else's bare hand.

David is the oldest known survivor of untreated severe combined immune deficiency, a rare inherited disorder that left him with no natural immunities to fight disease.

"He's just like any other 11-year-old boy except he's never been sick a day in his life," said Suzannah Griffin, a public information officer at the Baylor College of Medicine.

He lives in a three-compartment bubble occupying the dining room and living room of his family's home. His family can hug and kiss him through the bubble, which has gloves that can be used to reach into the unit or let David reach out.

His parents and his 14-year-old sister, Kathleen, planned a party and Mass for today in honor of David's birthday. His presents — as he requested — will include a new computer game and Star Trek toys.

David's older brother died of severe combined immune deficiency and doctors at Baylor College of Medicine predicted David would be born with the same disorder. He was the second baby in the United States to be born in a germ-free environment.

The fifth-grader, whose last name never has been made public, participates in school classes via a telephone hookup and last year he took part in a puppet show and poetry recital attended at his home by his classmates. His favorite subject last year was spelling and he also is very interested in science — especially space exploration.

"David continues to excel in school and scored in the upper 17 percent of his class in a recent achievement test," said a report prepared by Baylor.

"He's a very high achiever. He's really a pretty sharp kid," Ms. Griffin said.

Doctors say the only chance he might have of leaving his sterile environment is a new bone marrow transplant.

"Many treatments have been considered for David," said his physician, Dr. William T. Shearer. "But the only one that appears to have any promise is to transplant bone marrow."

Doctors thought several years ago that a similar treatment might provide David with bone marrow to manufacture two types of blood cells needed to combat infection. The idea was abandoned when they could not locate a donor with matching tissue and blood type.

Researchers have kept experimenting with methods to overcome the rejection problems associated with non-matching bone marrow transplants. This month, a University of Wisconsin team was the first to use factory-produced cells to curb tissue rejection, and researchers at the University of Minnesota now are testing powerful drugs to reduce the difficulty.

"David's parents have elected not to choose these treatments because they are still experimental and the risks are too great," Shearer said.

David spends most of his time in the bubble in his home. Twice a year he goes to the Texas Children's Hospital for a week for tests while his bubble is cleaned. Two rooms at the hospital are reserved for him at all times.

He travels to the hospital in a portable bubble. The portable unit is on wheels so it can be rolled around in his home or outside, or put in a van.

The report by the Baylor College of Medicine said economic support for David has come from grants from many individual donors in addition to the Division of Resources of the National Institutes of Health, Texas Children's Hospital and the TCH Children's Auxiliary. His parents provide clothes, toys and school supplies, the report said.

Fake force

Gary Gleason stands beside the fake police car he created in Hedville, a community 40 miles west of Salina in central Kansas. About a week ago the local sign builder placed the "Hedville Police car" at the edge of town near some bushes. He says it works well and he plans another on the other side of town in an effort to slow speeders who don't know the town has no police force. One motorist even stopped to ask directions, Gleason claims. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas making mistake pushing for lignite coal, environmentalists say

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas is making a mistake encouraging public utility companies to go all out for lignite fuel instead of paying attention to other alternative sources of energy, a group of environmentalists say.

More attention also should be paid to possible environmental and health dangers of the use of lignite, the Texas Environmental Coalition said Monday.

"The rosy picture for lignite in Texas that has been presented most recently before the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council assumes that the public will continue to bear the health risks and economic risks of that development," said Bill Carter, speaking for the Central Texas Lignite Watch.

"Any way you look at it, or smell it or breathe it, the answer to Texas' energy needs does not lie under the ground in lignite," said Rebecca Lightsey of the Texas Consumer Association.

Spokesmen for seven different organizations said they were concerned by a recent report to TENRAC that about six lignite plants generated up to 40 percent of Texas' electrical power last year and that an additional 10 plants should be completed by 1990.

"It is our mutual concern that all Texas utilities apparently have made a commitment to lignite power," said Ken Kramer, president of the Texas Environmental Coalition.

Ms. Lightsey said Texas "has an abundance of energy sources that are currently ignored: co-generation, wind, retrofitting, and solar. Some of these sources can be put 'on line' in two days, others take three years. But lignite plants take at least six years before they are operational."

Clements says solving the border problems not easy

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements says the economic and currency problems plaguing U.S. merchants along the Mexico border can't be solved overnight with a "Band-Aid approach."

"We're not talking about an immediate solution," Clements told reporters Monday at the end of a two-day border governors conference. "You put a Band-Aid on a problem and you have similar problems next month or next year."

"We're not going to solve the border problems overnight," he said. "This will be done in steps and the result of that will be a long-term solution."

Clements said a decision Monday by four U.S. governors and six of their Mexican counterparts to create a 20-member bi-national commission is the best thing that can be done now.

Asked about the plight of people who depend on Mexican customers and Mexican money for up to 80 percent of their business, Clements said, "They are already getting some help."

"Washington has been very responsive," he said, referring to an emergency loan package put together by the Small Business Administration. But few merchants have taken advantage of the loans because the interest rates are at 14.5 percent.

He said the Mexican government also "is taking certain steps in bringing about a better plan along the border."

This year's governors conference, held in Tijuana, is the third such gathering. Clements was chairman of last year's conference in El Paso.

Judge delays ruling on Braniff pensions

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge says he will hear trial testimony, beginning Friday, before deciding when two of Braniff Airways Corp.'s employee pension plans will be shut down.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers on Monday rejected a motion, filed by former Braniff employees, seeking to force the company to maintain its four pension plans at current payment levels. Flowers said he did not have jurisdiction.

However, he postponed a ruling on the dispute between Braniff and the federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp.

concerning the effective date for dissolving the plans.

Braniff wants Flowers to terminate the pension plans as of May 12, the day the airline suspended operations. Braniff officials filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code the next day.

However, the PBGC — which has agreed to assume management of the underfunded pension programs — recommends Aug. 30 instead.

Braniff owes the retirement plans approximately $25 million, but wants Flowers to assign that debt a low priority among the company's long list of creditors.

The pension plans covering machinists and Teamsters Union members face the most severe fund shortages. Flowers ordered full pension checks paid to retired workers covered by those programs, while the termination issue is resolved. The PBGC recommendation would mean reduced payments to those employees, effective Oct. 1.

Retirees covered by the other two plans — management personnel and pilots — received reduced payments for September.

Private space firm will not sell stock

HOUSTON (AP) — The founder of the company that successfully launched a privately financed rocket earlier this month has decided not to sell stock to the public.

David Hannah, founder of Space Services Inc. of America, said selling stock would require having detailed plans that would have to be closely followed.

"We have good, clear directions we want to go, but that doesn't mean that in the next 60 or 90 days something may shift on us," Hannah said over the weekend.

The longer the company avoids going public, the more options it has, Hannah said. Since the solid fuel rocket, Conestoga 1, was launched from Matagorda Island on Sept. 9, several investors have made inquiries, Hannah said.

Fifty-seven investors — all approached by Hannah — already have pumped $6 million into research and development and have provided money to run the company.

Hannah said the firm now has two markets available — launching low Earth-orbit payloads and communications satellites.

The company is trying to lease space at Cape Canaveral, Fla., to launch a reliable liquid fuel rocket that would be used to send up communications satellites.

It also is negotiating for the Bishop Estate in Hawaii for a 50-acre launch site for low-orbit missions.

Texas man's appeal denied

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Just because a Texas man has been tried three times on one murder charge does not mean he cannot be tried again, a federal appeals court says.

Howie Ray Robinson has been tried, convicted and sentenced to death three times in the September 1973 shooting death of a grocery store clerk, and three times has won an appeal for a new trial.

After the first conviction, in 1974, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial, saying a prosecution witness should not have been allowed to testify he passed a lie detector test.

Retried in 1977, Robinson won a reversal from the trial judge.

On May 13, 1978, a state court jury once again found Robinson guilty of murder and sentenced him to death. But, two years later, the trial judge overturned the conviction because the court reporter lost some notes and could not provide a complete transcript for Robinson's appeal.

Robinson contended the prosecutors' and judges' errors which resulted in retrials showed malicious intent to deprive him of a fair trial. He asked for an injunction and damages.

He lost in state and U.S. district courts, then appealed to the 5th Circuit Court.

"On the record before us we cannot say the district court clearly erred," the appeals court said.

'DON'T YOU THINK YOUR TAKING THIS A BIT TOO SERIOUS'

The endless road

By DON GRAFF

Call it a Polish standoff. Poles by the hundreds of thousands made their statement in the streets of Warsaw, Lubin, Wroclaw and Gdansk. Riot police kept control, at the cost of several deaths and more than 4,000 arrested. So Solidarity's anniversary that had been widely foreseen as a showdown between people and government ended in a draw. The government held firm and still governs — without open intervention of the Soviet enforcer. But the people left the government, the Soviets and the world in no doubt that they have not been and will not be reconciled to the brutal status quo. And the Polish problem is no nearer solution. The disturbances weren't the only news to come out of Poland in the first days of September. Wladyslaw Gomułka died of cancer at the age of 77.

Some may find the coincidence symbolic. Gomułka was the leading figure in an earlier posing of the problem with which the present situation displays some marked similarities as well as grim differences. That was back in 1956 and Pozana, not Gdansk, was the focus of Poland's rejection of the rulers of Poland. Riots born of economic mismanagement and political repression threatened the collapses of the Communist regime and Soviet intervention.

Whether the Solidarity movement went too far in trying to extend, or change the direction, of the Polish road is probably an academic question. What it represented — represents, as the anniversary demonstrations vividly demonstrate — is basically incompatible with the authoritarian Communist state. Even a tempered move toward internal autonomy is a challenge to their hegemony that the Soviets in the long run will not tolerate, as the Gomułka experience suggests — although post-revolution Hungary is to date proving an exception.

But the Gomułka story, the Solidarity tragedy and the anniversary explosion also suggest something else: that the Poles will go their own way can never be completely crushed.

Good loans and bad loans

By ART BUCHWALD

Bankers have been receiving a tarnished image lately, mainly because they have been making a lot of bad loans. I think they're getting a bad rap. I was in the bank the other day where my nephew was applying for a loan to buy a car. The bank demanded a co-signer for the note and I was happy to oblige.

The flinty eyed vice-president took out a form consisting of 20 legal-sized pages and said to me, "You have to fill this all out. We want to know everything about both of you: where you were born, the names of your relatives, your education, how many times you have been arrested, and a complete list of all your assets and liabilities."

"You're very thorough for a $5,000 loan." "We have to," Flinty Eyes said. "This bank's reputation is on the line every time someone borrows money from it."

My nephew and I stared filling out the blanks when a well-dressed man came up to the desk.

"I'm from Dryup Securities," the man said, as he shook Flinty Eyes' hand vigorously. "I'd like to borrow $500 million in government securities for three months at 16 percent."

Flinty Eyes brightened up and he pulled open his top drawer and started piling bonds on his desk. "Help yourself," he said.

The man stuffed them in a suitcase. "So you want me to sign for them?" "Your word is good enough for me," Flinty Eyes said. "Just see they don't get lost."

The man walked away and I said, "You didn't even ask his name."

"Dryup Securities is a solid institution. I'm not going to embarrass a man with questions when he deals in government securities. You forgot to fill out your wife's church affiliation."

I went back to the application and a diplomat with a walrus mustache came up. "Senior, I am from the government of Mexico, and I wish to borrow a billion dollars, because the peso has just gone to hell."

"Of course, sir," Flinty Eyes rang a buzzer for a guard and said to him, "Take this Mexican official down to the safe and give him a billion dollars."

"Thank you, senior. You are a good neighbor."

I was impressed. "You really make quick decisions." "If I had said no he would have gone to Chase Manhattan for the loan, and my bosses would have been furious."

"Do you really want six references for a lousy $5,000 loan?" I asked. "Those are the rules," Flinty Eyes said. "We have to have ironclad safeguards when someone wants to buy a car."

The Finance Minister of Poland came up and gave the vice president a $10 bill. "That should take care of the August interest on our $2 billion loan."

Flinty Eyes smiled. "Thanks a lot. We didn't expect this until September." "Poland always pays its debts."

My nephew and I finally finished filling out the forms. Flinty Eyes took them. "It will take 10 days to check you out," he said. "That long," I laughed.

"Consumer credit is not something we treat lightly. If you don't hear from us, you'll know we decided you're a rotten risk."

We got up to leave. Flinty Eyes' secretary came over. "Branch Airlines wants to renew their loan."

"Than renew it. Why are you always bothering me with details?"

Public service is private

The American Institute for Public Service recently handed out its 10th annual Jefferson Awards. A gaggle of public figures was honored — Howard Baker, Bob Hope, Claude Pepper and Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio — but much more impressive were the achievements of the private citizens honored for local community service.

Dallas Doyle of Butte, Mont., operates Outreach Mission in an old building that also happens to be his house. Since 1977 he has helped more than 6,000 people, including young hitchhikers caught in the snow, old people in need of warmth and travelers. Doyle, an alcoholic who has quit drinking, "saw the need for a place that offered more than just a meal. He offers the missing ingredients of care, love and understanding."

Marvin Garrett of Easley, S.C., flies emergency patients, particularly burned children, from upper South Carolina to specialized hospitals across the country. He has made himself available 24 hours a day, leaving his office or farm whenever the phone summons him. There is never a charge to the patient or family.

Carolina Putnam of Springfield, Mass., along with her husband, endowed a full scholarship for black students at Regis College in 1945. They soon decided that this wasn't enough, and Mrs. Putnam established Catholic Scholarships for Negroes, seeking money from Roman Catholics for deserving students of all faiths. She now makes a four-year commitment to about 100 students a year, providing enough money to make schooling possible. Mrs. Putnam herself never graduated from college.

Helena Kyle of Chapel Hill is a 72-year-old retired private-duty nurse. In 1978 she began a Home Assister program wherein she and other nurses teach unskilled workers the rudiments of home nursing, then match them with people who need help. The only charge to patients is for the unskilled workers: the professionals donate their time.

Ruth Heinz and Loraine Schreck of Brookfield, Wis., began Citizen's Outreach Service in their homes, but got office space from the city in 1981. They help elderly people, mostly in nursing homes, with everything from insurance and tax problems to Medicare Forms. They have been appointed guardians for 12 persons who have no one else to turn to, and are on call 24 hours a day.

The DoYLES, GARRETTs, KYLES, PUTNAMs, HENZEs and SCHRECKs of the world often do their work with little recognition and little desire for it. They (and thousands across the country who go out of their way to help those in need) would probably be the first to tell you that they get far more in personal satisfaction from their voluntary activities than they put into them.

There are plenty of opportunities for those who want to help others on a voluntary basis and, fortunately, there are still private citizens willing to step forward. The American Institute for Public Service deserves a vote of thanks for bringing the efforts of a few of these people to our attention.

The human comedy

The lady came into see Senator Jesse Beenbag the other day. She was carrying a baby in her arms.

"It's mighty kind of you to stop by," the senator said, trying to usher her out of his office after the picture taking.

"I didn't come to have my picture taken," the woman said.

"Then why are you here?" "You're leading the fight against abortion, and I thought you could help me with this unwanted baby."

"You mean you don't want this baby?" "No, sir. I have five more at home and I can't afford to feed them. I figured since you are so interested in human life, you could tell me where I could get some help to raise this one."

"My interest in human life starts at conception and ends with the fetus. Once the baby is born, you're on your own."

"That's what I was afraid of. How come if the Reagan government is so concerned about preventing people from having abortions, they keep cutting back on all the services for unwanted children?"

"The government cannot afford to take care of children after they're born. We can't fund every screwball social program for unwanted children, or we'll never have a balanced budget."

"So what do I do with the kid?" "Madame, I have no idea what you should do with your child. But if you think the anti-abortion forces are going to support it from the cradle to the grave, you're sadly mistaken. The federal government has to get out of the child-rearing business."

"Since you're so concerned about the value of human life, why don't you take the kid?" "What would I do with a child?" "That's the question I keep asking myself."

"Have you gone to the local child services office?" "They're closed too, because the government cut off all their funds. The local charities have no money, and all the food programs are going out of business."

"Then get a job," Beenbag said impatiently.

"I'm trying to. But even if I found one I couldn't afford the day-care center. I decided to come to you as a last resort because of your interest in a baby's right to life."

"You came to the wrong person," Beenbag said angrily. "My bill makes it a federal crime NOT to have a baby. But it doesn't provide continuing services for people who have one. Why is your kid crying?"

"I guess he's hungry," the lady said. "Unwanted children cry a lot."

"You're not going to change my stand on abortions just because your baby is crying," Beenbag warned. "Were you sent by the Planned Parenthood people?"

"No, it was my idea. I saw you on television a while back saying it was a mortal sin for a pregnant woman to abort, so I had my baby. Since you were so adamant on the subject I thought you or President Reagan might have some ideas as to what I do now."

"Madame, I'm a very busy person. I'm trying to get prayers back in school, protect the tobacco industry, and fight the hand-gun control lobby. I don't have time to worry about your child's welfare."

The lady put the baby on Beenbag's desk. "What are you doing?" Beenbag screamed.

"I'm changing his diapers. You don't have a large handkerchief to spare, do you?" "Get out of my office and take that bawling kid with you," Beenbag said.

"If you support right to life," the lady said, "you have to support right-to-life functions." "But he just did it all over the President's letter of support for my bill," Beenbag cried. The lady smiled, and said, "Naughty boy." (C) 1982, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Opponents plan Schmidt's ouster

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Almost since Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's re-election in 1980, political observers have predicted he would not complete his four-year term. His opponents now claim he will be out by Oct. 1.

An opposition conference Monday produced a plan for ousting Schmidt next week through a parliamentary vote of no confidence and a call for national elections for the first Sunday in March, spokesman Eduard Ackermann said.

If the chancellor is unseated, Christian Democrat leader Helmut Kohl would assume the post Schmidt has held for more than eight years.

A 13-year coalition between Schmidt's left-of-center Social Democrats and the centrist Free Democrats collapsed Friday, when four Free Democrat ministers quit the Cabinet. The split followed months of feuding over issues including government spending, unemployment and deployment of U.S.-built nuclear missiles in West Germany.

But Schmidt has said he intends to continue governing with his minority Cabinet of Social Democrats. West German law does not make it easy to get rid of a chancellor.

Schmidt has been chancellor longer than anyone except the first West German chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, who came to office in 1949 and retired in 1963.

Although Schmidt's party has been losing support to the right and left, the constitution says he cannot be unseated until the Bundestag, or lower house of Parliament, has agreed on an immediate replacement.

That is what opposition leaders planned during four hours of discussion Monday, said Ackermann, spokesman for the Christian Democrat and Christian Social Union parliamentary deputies.

He said those involved in the talks were Kohl, Franz-Josef Strauss of the Christian Social Union — the Christian Democrats' Bavaria-based sister party — and Hans-Dietrich Genscher of the Free Democrats.

After his coalition crumbled, Schmidt called for an all-party agreement on new elections immediately. Kohl and Genscher refused.

The Free Democrat walkout left the 63-year-old Schmidt heading a government holding only a minority of the 497 Bundestag seats.

When Americans dream, they dream well

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Undeterred by the pessimism of many so-called experts, Americans are dreaming again.

They are dreaming of soaring stocks, of homes, of cars and boats, of at least a couple of years of single-digit inflation and maybe single-digit loan rates too, and maybe even of $50,000 personal incomes.

All this and more, as they say. When Americans dream they dream well, notwithstanding some vicious nightmares in the past few years.

The stock market going to 1,000 points on the Dow Jones industrial average? Who says so? Many big-name forecasters. Some say it might go much higher.

"You can buy stocks to double in value by 1986," says Arnold Bernhard. "I think there are few opportunities as in the stock market," he says. And with a degree of credibility. During the depths of the Great Depression of the 1930s he founded Value Line, the country's biggest stock advisory service.

Real estate agents will tell you of the renewed interest in homes. Sure, the lookers consider it great entertainment to have an agent drive them around for an afternoon. But they're dreaming.

They're getting some encouragement too. Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, says the housing market — sales and construction — appears poised for a recovery.

Cars? We have authority on the subject the chairman of General Motors, Roger Smith, who foresees domestic and imported automobile sales approaching an annual rate of 14 million units by late 1983.

Of course, with sales running at an annual rate of 5.3 million units early in September, and with GM sales down the most of the Big Three domestic carmakers in the same period, you might think that forecast only a dream.

Why, people are even daring to dream of big boats again. At least you would judge that from the crowds attending a boat show in nearby Connecticut.

Research equipment destroyed at college

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The building can be repaired, but Texas A&M University researchers lost about $1 million worth of equipment when fire broke out in one of the school's research stations, university officials said.

The fire was first reported about 6 p.m. Monday. A College Station fireman was hospitalized overnight for treatment of smoke inhalation, according to A&M spokesman Lane Stephenson.

The university's agricultural engineering department and Agricultural Experiment Station were doing research in the building, including tests on alternate fuels.

Dr. Edward A. Hiler, head of the agricultural engineering department, said replacing the equipment would cost "several hundred thousand dollars, perhaps even $1 million or more."

Firemen kept the blaze from spreading beyond one end of

Dear Abby

New mother worried over husband's lack of interest

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Since the birth of our child three months ago, my husband seems to have lost interest in sex. It started when I was about five months pregnant. At the time we discussed it, and he admitted that although he knew there was no basis for it, he felt it was "improper" to make love to a pregnant woman. Even after my doctor assured him that it wouldn't hurt either me or the baby, my husband couldn't seem to shake the feeling, so I accepted it, thinking that after the baby came everything would return to normal.

Unfortunately, the baby is now 3 months old and my husband is still turned off. He says he still loves me, but doesn't know why he doesn't want to make love to me anymore. He was with me during the birth of our child, so maybe seeing me give birth has put me in a different light, and he no longer sees me as a lover, but a mother.

I've tried everything I can think of to turn him on again, but nothing works. Before my pregnancy he couldn't get enough of me. Please ask your readers how common this problem is, and what they did to cope with the situation.

WAITING IN BED

DEAR WAITING: What's been turned off can usually be turned on again. I recommend professional counseling for both of you. Your husband may require some psychotherapy in order to restore his former interest in sex. Honest dialogue is of the utmost importance now, and if he loves you as he says he does, he will do whatever is necessary to overcome this problem. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: One of my professors jokingly said, "I wish you'd wear a skirt instead of jeans once in a while so I could see your legs, because if they're anything like the rest of you, they're nothing to be ashamed of."

I took it as a compliment. But when I told my friend about it, she said, "No way, that's sexual harassment!"

Abby, I thought sexual harassment was when a male boss threatened to fire his female employee if she didn't go to bed with him.

So how should I take it? As a compliment or sexual harassment?

OK LEGS

DEARS LEGS: If you consider your professor's remark a "compliment," no harm done. Had you felt that he was out of line or offensive, it would have been sexual harassment.

DEAR ABBY: I don't often write letters, but I have to write this one. I am a 29-year-old single male parent. I've been divorced for seven years and have full custody of my 8-year-old daughter. I'm a marketing consultant for an international concern, so I am by no means stupid.

I'm not Robert Redford, but neither am I a Frankenstein. I am honest, open, loving and have always been completely truthful with the women in my life. I want very much to get married, but where is the woman who wants a man with a daughter?

Are all women turned off by men who have custody of a child? Maybe I've been looking in the wrong places, but I'm too young to give up. Any ideas?

PACKAGE DEAL

DEAR DEAL: I don't know where you've looked, but don't give up until you've looked into Parents Without Partners. Also, don't forget your church and PTA.

And if your neighbors, co-workers and relatives don't know that you're in the market for a wife, get the message to them. My mail tells me that there are more women looking to marry decent men than there are decent men to marry. Hang in there!

Restoring a plaster ceiling

Q — We have plaster ceilings in our home. The ceilings are structurally sound, but the chipped paint on them cannot be removed or repainted. I have been told this condition has come about because the ceiling originally was calcimine, then painted. Is this true and what can I do about it? I am willing to hire a professional painter if he can handle this kind of work. A. — Yes, painting over calcimine can cause this kind of problem, but I cannot understand the advice you got about it being impossible to restore the ceiling.

Saying Good Bye

Defensive tackle Randy White of the Dallas Cowboys waves from his truck after leaving the Cowboys' practice field in Dallas on Monday afternoon. The National Football League Players Association announced Monday that the players would be on strike when the Packers-Giants game ended that night. White says he plans to go fishing.

NFL players go on strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking players and team owners both say they are willing to lose the rest of the National Football League season if it means winning at the bargaining table.

Fans, dismayed by the first regular-season strike in the sport's history, are about to be barraged with Canadian and college football, along with movies, as television networks scramble to fill the air time.

Gene Upshaw, president of the 1,500-member NFL Players Association, announced the strike Monday after the union's executive committee voted unanimously in favor of a walkout. The strike began about eight hours later, after the Green Bay Packers beat the New York Giants 27-19 to complete the season's second week.

"At the conclusion of tonight's game, the league will be struck," Upshaw, a Los Angeles Raiders guard, said Monday. "No practices, no workouts, no games will be played until management engages in good-faith bargaining."

He later added the players were ready to hold out "one day longer than management."

But Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, countered that team owners were prepared to "go as long as necessary, including the entire season, to prove their point."

He made his remarks after a Monday night meeting of the owners' executive committee, held in New York.

The first game to be affected by the strike will be Thursday night, when the Atlanta Falcons were scheduled to play in Kansas City against the Chiefs. ABC, which was to televise the game, announced it will instead show Peter Falk in "The Cheap Detective."

It's the second time in just over a year that a strike has interrupted American professional sports. Baseball players struck last summer for 50 days in a dispute over free agency. NFL players staged two training-camp strikes, in 1970 and 1974.

The football strike centers on money and how the NFL's billion-dollar income should be distributed.

Players, who originally sought 55 percent of the gross revenues of the NFL's 28 teams — estimated at $3.6 billion over five years — changed their stand last Friday and asked for 50 percent of the clubs' $2.1 billion television contract, plus a wage scale based on length of service.

The proposed contract would run for four years, as opposed to the five-year pact offered by the owners.

Donlan says owners are "unalterably opposed" to guaranteed percentages and wage scales for the players. They have offered a package containing $10,000-a-year bonuses for veterans, plus base salary hikes.

Both sides have reached basic agreement on how much a new contract should cost — $1.6 billion. The length of the contract, where the money comes from and how it will be divided are the sticking points.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFLPA, said he hoped the strike "will force the owners to start bargaining in good faith."

Mark Murphy, a member of the union's executive committee and a Washington Redskins defensive back, said it was "vital" for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to step into the talks. Rozelle so far has not participated in the bargaining, and Donlan said Monday night that the commissioner should remain on the sidelines.

Negotiations between the management council and the players union broke off Friday and no further talks were scheduled.

"I knew it was coming," said George S. Halas Sr., the Chicago Bears' 87-year-old owner and the last surviving founder of the NFL.

"I'm sorry to see it, of course," he said Monday as he signed the team's last prestrike paychecks. "And so are the players — or so they will be."

Packers rally in second half to down Giants

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Green Bay Packers quarterback Lynn Dickey likes a winning season — even if it's only two games.

"If there's going to be a strike, I'd rather be 2-0 than 1-1," Dickey said after the Packers pulled another second-half comeback and thrashed the New York Giants 27-19 Monday night.

When the clock ran out, the National Football League players strike had begun.

James Lofton, whose 83-yard end-round touchdown run late in the third quarter swung the momentum to the Packers, said the players were distracted by the announcement of a strike hours earlier.

Lofton said he was sorry the strike had been announced before the game. "It kind of took some of the air out of us," he said.

Coaches of each team warned their players to forget the strike as they prepared for the game — the only NFL contest played after the strike was announced.

But players on both sides met at midfield and exchanged union solidarity handshakes just before the game began as the crowd jeered loudly.

Dickey would not blame the strike for the Packers' slow start.

"There was some mild talk about the possibility of a strike, but it had nothing to do with our performance. Once we got on the field all the talk and joking stopped. We were ready," said Dickey, who completed 13 of 20 passes for 203 yards.

The Packers scored only once in the first half, on Dickey's 7-yard touchdown pass to fullback Jim Jensen.

Before Lofton's late third-quarter touchdown, the Giants had built a 19-7 lead.

The Giants scored on 3- and 2-yard touchdown runs by rookie Joe Morris and first-year Cliff Chatman, respectively, as well as a 37-yard Joe Danelo field goal and a Packers' team safety.

Lofton raced elegantly to the end zone, holding the football high in the air as the Giants scrambled at his heels with 1:37 left in the third quarter.

Eddie Lee Ivery's 11-yard touchdown run pushed the Packers ahead of the Giants, 21-19, and Jan Stenerud completed the score with 37- and 22-yard field goals.

Twice during the game, the power went out at Giants Stadium. Thirty seconds into the second quarter, virtually all the lights went out, bringing a loud and lengthy cheer from the fans.

Giants Coach Ray Perkins' team is now 0-2 after losing 16-14 last week to the Atlanta Falcons.

Pearson feels strike will end by Friday

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson says he has a "gut feeling" the National Football League players' strike will be settled by Friday.

But, Pearson admits, "I'm already 0-for-1 on gut feelings. I didn't think there would be a strike to start with."

"Now that the insults and everything are over I hope we can get things to the bargaining table," he said. "It's such a big waste. We're not asking for the world ... just a fair deal."

The Cowboys took their shoes out of their lockers Monday so they could work out on their own during the NFL labor strike.

"We'll get together somewhere as a team beginning Wednesday," said tailback Tony Dorsett, one of the team captains. "Of course, it won't be the same without Coach (Tom) Landry around, but we'll at least try to stay in condition."

The Cowboys players will be locked out of their Forest Lane practice facility.

"Most of the guys are together in this strike," Dorsett said. "The owners are testing us and we must test them. I hope it comes to an end quick."

Dorsett stands to lose more than any other Cowboy, earning some $375,000 a year.

"I've got some money stashed away so I can go awhile without any serious problems," he said.

He said he would not be in favor of a settlement where the structure would cost him money.

"I'll expect a raise," he said. "I wouldn't go for any settlement if I had to take a cut."

"This is going to be very disruptive," Landry said. "This is such a team sport, conditioning will suffer. It's hard to play professional football without supervision."

"There's one thing about it ... if the players came back on Friday or so they wouldn't be overcoached going against the Vikings."

Astros' rally edges Braves, 4-3

HOUSTON (AP) — No matter the outcome of the tight pennant race in the National League West, Atlanta Braves outfielder Dale Murphy is going to have a good time.

Murphy has been on the losing end of the stick with the Braves, and the chance to be a contender is all he needs to keep him happy.

The Braves were not pleased with Monday's outcome, a 4-3 loss to the Houston Astros that dropped them three games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers with 12 games to play.

"This is fun," Murphy said. "We've been 30 games out and that's pressure. This is exciting. In three games we could be tied for first, and in four games we could be a game ahead. This is the kind of pressure you play for."

Atlanta had a 3-0 lead after five innings, but succumbed to a three-run Astros' comeback in the sixth and Dickie Thon's game-winning double in the ninth.

"This was the toughest loss of the season for us," said third baseman Jerry Royster. "It's so late in the season and we had a chance to pick up half game. We go out and get three runs off (Nolan) Ryan and still lose. It's real tough to take."

Terry Puhl singled off the glove of losing pitcher Gene Garber, 7-9, with one out in the ninth and scored from first on Thon's hit-and-run double to center.

Ryan and winning pitcher Dave Smith, 4-4, collaborated on a five-hitter. Smith gave only one single in his three innings of relief.

The Braves got an unearned run in the first inning on a Ryan wild pitch. Rafael Ramirez' solo home run in the fifth, his seventh of the year, and a run-scoring double by Chris Chambliss umped Atlanta's lead to 3-0.

Houston struck for three runs in the sixth. Thon walked, Ray Knight and Phil Garner singled for the first run, and Alan Ashby's sacrifice fly made it 3-2.

Bill Doran hit an infield single and Royster's throwing error on the play let Garner score from second and tie the game.

"I'd much rather be in our position than the Astros," Atlanta manager Joe Torre said. "They are relaxed and have nothing to lose. We've been picking ourselves up off the floor all season. Any time you lose in the last 12 or 13 games, it's tough. Every loss is monumental and very critical to our pennant hopes."

AL roundup

Brewers maintain two-game advantage with 11th inning victory over Red Sox

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

With two outs and two strikes on their last hitter in the ninth inning, the Milwaukee Brewers looked just about dead.

Then Ben Oglivie brought them to life.

"This has to be one of the greatest moments of my career because it meant so much to this team," said Oglivie after his dramatic home run on an 0-2 pitch from Dennis Eckersley tied the game 3-3 in the ninth against the Boston Red Sox Monday night.

After Oglivie rescued the Brewers, they won it 4-3 in the 11th on Gorman Thomas' sacrifice fly.

"We could've been only one up, but we're still two up, and that's very nice," said Oglivie, whose Brewers maintained a two-game lead in the American League East over the Baltimore Orioles, 3-1 winners over the Detroit Tigers.

Meanwhile, the California Angels beat the Kansas City Royals 3-2 to take over sole possession of the lead in the AL West. The two teams had been tied for first going into Monday night's opener of their big, three-game series.

In other AL action, Minnesota defeated Toronto 4-1, Texas belted Oakland 10-3 and Seattle trimmed Chicago 5-2. Rain postponed the Cleveland-New York game.

Robin Yount beat out a single to open the Milwaukee 11th off reliever Bob Stanley, 11-7. Cecil Cooper followed with a single and Ted Simmons' sacrifice moved both runners up. After Oglivie was intentionally walked to load the bases, Thomas, who earlier hit his 38th homer, delivered his game-winning sacrifice fly.

Oglivie's game-tying homer, his 31st, was one of only seven hits off Eckersley.

"With the count 0-2, I had to be ready for anything in that situation," said Oglivie. "I knew he might want to waste a pitch, but I couldn't let anything go by."

Pete Vuckovich, 18-4, went the distance for his eighth straight victory, tying a club record. He scattered 11 hits, walked four and struck out two.

"There's no one I'd rather have out there in a big game than Vuke," said Thomas. "He's just awesome." Orioles 3, Tigers 1

John Lowenstein's two-run homer in the ninth inning lifted Baltimore over Detroit. It was the 27th victory in 32 games for the red-hot Orioles.

Lowenstein's blow, only the sixth hit off Jack Morris, 16-16, followed a leadoff single by Eddie Murray.

Sammy Stewart, 9-7, pitched the ninth inning in relief of Jim Palmer to earn the victory.

Foli's blast broke up a pitchers' duel between left-handed aces Zahn and Larry Gura, 17-11, giving the Angels a 2-1 lead.

Pampa spikers split with Portales

Pampa split a volleyball doubleheader with Portales, N.M. Saturday in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa won the opener, 15-9, 15-13 and 15-5, but lost the second match, 15-10, 4-15 and 11-15.

Pampa's Keva Richardson was a perfect 32 of 32 from the service line while scoring 20 points in the two matches.

"Sweet Simmons had 15 good spikes that either results in a point or a sideout and Leslie Albus and Shaun Simmons had three good saves for us," Pampa coach Roxie Johnson said. "Overall, we played sluggish. We just never really got into the matches until the final game."

Pampa, now 7-12 for the season, opens District 1-4A play Thursday at Dumas.

Pampa JVs won their match with Portales, 15-11 and 15-6.

Leslie Cash served 11 of 11 and scored nine points while Carrie Carter served seven and scored six points.

Pampa JVs are now 3-6 for the season.

Horseshoe pitching record for Kristina

Pampa teams broke the world horseshoe-pitching world record over the weekend, and while they were at it raised $1,500 to help a Pampa child in her battle with cancer. The 28-hour event was organized by Danny Degner, left, shown throwing the shoes for the Celanese team. Fred O'Hara, center, adds his toss for Charlie's Furniture. Accepting trophies for Kristina Ennis, the 4-year-old Pampa child currently battling leukemia in Houston's M.D. Anderson Hospital following a bone marrow transplant, are the child's father, Derek

Ennis, far right, Ruby Flemming, the child's great-grandmother, and Amber Dawn, the stricken child's 5-year-old sister who donated the tissue for the transplant operation. In addition to the $1,500, the big trophy and photographs of all five teams competing in the event will be present to Kristina. The child is recovering from the transplant and "doing about as well as can be expected," her great-grandmother said today. (Staff Photos by Bruce Lee Smith)

Margaret Medders remarries

HORSESHOE LAKE, Ark. (AP) — Margaret Medders, who with her late husband, Ernest, hobnobbed with the upper crust of Texas society while posing as heirs to an oil fortune in the 1960s, has remarried.

The former Mrs. Medders said she met her new husband, J.N. Orr, while she was serving a sentence at the women's prison in Huntsville, Texas, and he was in the men's prison at Angola, La.

"A relative told me, 'Margaret, you're the only woman I know who could go into prison and come out with a husband,'" she said in an interview published today in The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' morning newspaper. "I never got used to being a widow."

Ernest Medders died in 1975, ending a rags to riches story that took him from poverty in Memphis to a 1,400-acre Texas homestead with a 28-room house.

Medders, who never went beyond the third grade, was retired from a Memphis oil company by poor health when he learned he might stand a chance of inheriting the oil fortune of Ruben Medders. In 1961, Ernest and Margaret Medders were among 3,000 plaintiffs who sued for the title to 4,400 acres in Jefferson County, Texas, where the Spindletop oil field had been developed at the turn of the century.

Nothing ever came of the couple's suit, but various sources were confident enough that the couple were the real heirs to advance them $3 million in loans and merchandise.

By 1965, the Medders were deeply entrenched in Texas society. A black-tie barn-warming bash for a new $150,000 "party barn" they built at Colonial Acres Farm at Muenster, Texas, drew 800 guests. Life magazine covered the event.

The good times ended in 1967 when a relative of Medders filed suit for a share of the Spindletop "inheritance." When the bubble burst, Ernest and Margaret Medders filed for bankruptcy, leaving 200 creditors holding the bag.

The couple avoided jail, but Mrs. Medders was sent to the Huntsville prison for seven months in 1980 on a fraud charge — accused of running up a $14,000 bill at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas.

"While there, I was asked to write a skit for an Alcoholics Anonymous program, and that's how I started corresponding with Mr. Orr," she told The Commercial Appeal. "He was working with the AA in Louisiana. Our prison paper goes to both places. We started writing and exchanging pictures and then I got out in October of 1980. I went to see him."

Orr, 49, a former Baptist minister, was serving a sentence for manslaughter in the death of his wife.

"I'd been drinking and this developed into a family quarrel," he said.

Orr and the former Mrs. Medders were married last October in a prison chapel in Louisiana. Orr was paroled Sept. 1 and he and his wife moved to Little Rock, Ark.

The Commercial Appeal found the couple at Horseshoe Lake, Ark., about 40 miles southwest of Memphis. They are honeymooning in a cabin owned by relatives.

The former Mrs. Medders said there are frequent reminders of her days as a prospective heir to the Spindletop fortune.

"I still get calls from people who think it's still going on...that the money's going to come in...that we're all going to be rich yet," she said. "The Medders clan still holds meetings and talks about it."

For tourists

Mexico relaxes exchange controls

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Mexico is relaxing some controls on exchanging currency so that American shoppers and foreign-owned assembly plants will continue to bring dollars south of the border.

Gov. Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California announced the adjustments to reporters Monday after talks between U.S. and Mexican governors whose border states are most affected by Mexico's worst financial crisis in half a century.

The six Mexican and four U.S. governors agreed to set up a bi-national commission to study the impact of currency restrictions, which still apply to Mexicans and are hurting U.S. border merchants who rely on their business.

Concluding their meeting, the governors also adopted a Mexican initiative urging both federal governments to contribute toward improved medical services for Mexican migrant workers regardless of their legal status in the United States.

De la Madrid said President Jose Lopez Portillo had authorized the reversal of measures requiring visitors to Mexico to declare their money and convert it to pesos and measures forcing foreign manufacturers to bank in the Mexican currency.

Both exemptions apply only in Mexico's 12-mile zone along the U.S. border and in the entire state of Baja California.

The exchange controls were announced after Lopez Portillo's Sept. 1 nationalization of Mexican banks. They were aimed at halting black market currency trading in Mexico and the flight of capital needed to pay Mexico's $80 billion foreign debt.

But officials considered that applying the controls to tourists at the U.S. border was counter-productive, difficult to enforce and potentially damaging to U.S.-Mexican relations. Mexican officials say about 60 million Americans entered Mexico across the 1,700-mile frontier in 1981.

"All tourists can come to the border zone with their dollars," de la Madrid said. "They do not have to change them for pesos. They do not have to declare how many dollars they are bringing in or how many dollars they are taking out. And they may pay for whatever purchases they make in dollars."

In another step to ease the flow of American shoppers, de la Madrid said a 2-week-old Mexican rule barring excess purchases of scarce food items — which had become bargains for foreigners since the peso's sharp decline last month — would be enforced in Baja California by merchants rather than customs inspectors at the border.

He said the foreign, mostly U.S.-owned, assembly plants that employ about 120,000 Mexican workers in Mexico's duty-free trade zone "can now operate in Mexico as they did before. They can bring in dollars. They can take out dollars. They can draw checks here in Mexico in dollars or they can send these checks to foreign countries in dollars."

The governors announced no immediate steps to ease the effects of Mexico's financial crisis on the other side of the border, crossed last year by about 104 million Mexicans whose devalued pesos now buy less and who are subject to restrictions on holding dollars.

Officials to end war on Mediterranean fruit fly

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Agricultural officials say they are ending their two-year, $100 million war against the crop-destroying Mediterranean fruit fly.

The officials said on Monday that they would lift the state's last quarantine today.

"It will, in effect, end the battle against the medfly in California," said medfly project spokeswoman Annie Zeller.

The quarantine being lifted covers 92 1/2 square miles in San Joaquin County, where a wild male fly was found June 24 in a locust tree, she added.

At the height of the battle, nearly 4,000 square miles covering seven counties were under quarantine. Produce from those areas had to be certified medfly-free through fumigation or cold treatment.

The fight against the pest, which feeds on more than 200 kinds of fruits and vegetables, began on June 5, 1980, when two male flies were discovered in San Jose.

Aerial spraying of a sticky bait laced with the pesticide malathion began July 14, 1981, after an intensive effort to strip trees and spray crops from the ground.

Will 'lame duck' make another appearance?

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Democrats in Congress forced a post-election "lame-duck" session in 1980, Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., began showing up in public places with a toy duck.

The scrawny, limp and bandaged duck was Shuster's way of needling Democratic congressional leaders for holding the session after that November's GOP landslide.

He brought the duck to several news conferences and even posed with it on the steps of the Capitol.

The prank brought chuckles from Shuster's colleagues, although several GOP leaders complained privately that the joke was wearing thin when they had to keep sharing the billing at Republican news conferences with the duck.

Will Shuster bring out the duck again now that President Reagan and Republicans in Congress have called for a rump session this fall?

"I don't know if I'm going to get the duck out of retirement," Shuster said. "I still think lame duck-sessions, except in a national emergency, are grossly unnecessary."

Lame ducks are members of Congress who have had their political wings clipped — either through retirement or by defeat at the polls — but who must return to Congress for the remainder of their terms to take care of uncompleted business.

The term was originally used in the 18th century to refer to bankrupt businessmen and slowly crept into the language as a slang reference to officeholders on their way out of power.

There have only been four such sessions in the past 30 years — that 1980 session, which dealt largely with the budget; 1974, when Nelson Rockefeller was confirmed as vice president; 1970, when Congress approved the Equal Rights Amendment; and 1954 when the Senate censured Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Few in Congress have anything good to say about lame-duck sessions. But few are ready to go to Shuster's lengths to dramatize their skepticism.

"The truth of the matter is I don't know where the duck is anymore," Shuster said. "It really doesn't belong to me, but to the freshman Republicans. I think (Rep.) Jerry Lewis (R-Calif.) is the keeper of the quack."

Senate Robert Dole, R-Kan., influential chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was reminiscing the other day about his failed 1980 campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

"You might remember, I went around the country a couple of years ago saying, 'if you're looking for a younger Ronald Reagan with experience, here I am,'" he told the National Black Republican Council. "Well, my wife made it to the White House," Dole said. "I drive by every day and wave."

Elizabeth Dole is a top White House aide, serving as Reagan's liaison with special interest groups.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it'll keep monitoring federal beef grading standards with an eye toward changing them even though it's abandoning a proposed revision that critics said would exploit consumers.

"USDA is willing to work with committees or research groups representing all segments of the industry — producer to consumer — to further study the effectiveness of USDA beef grades," says Deputy Assistant Secretary John Ford.

After nine months of review, Ford announced Monday that the proposed beef grading changes that would have meant higher ratings for leaner beef were being withdrawn.

He said the decision was based on an overwhelmingly perception that they "would reduce quality in beef leading to consumer confusion and possibly even a lessened demand for beef."

Sam Washburn, president of the National Cattlemen's Association which had backed the proposed changes, said he believed the revisions were not fully understood by those opposing them. Washburn said the NCA would work to develop a more acceptable plan.

"But time is of the essence," he said. "We need to resolve this issue so we can get about the business of producing and marketing beef that will best meet market demands and improve profit opportunities for cattlemen."

Both Ford and Washburn agreed that the proposed changes did not have "sufficient support among either the industry or the consuming public to maintain that confidence" essential to successful marketing.

The changes, first proposed last Dec. 30, would have affected the quality grades of beef while leaving essentially intact the yield grades, which reflect the amount of usable meat on a carcass.

The changes would have allowed beef containing less marbling — the small flecks and streaks of fat that have traditionally denoted flavor and tenderness — to qualify under a higher grading standard than now permitted for USDA Prime, Choice and Good beef. The change could have saved money for farmers and feedlot operators by reducing the time cattle are "finished" or fed before being sent to slaughter.

Critics of the proposal amounted to a lowering of the quality of beef "for the convenience of the producers" while consumers end up paying top-grade prices for second-grade meat.

"Ultimately," said Walter Conti of the National Restaurant Association, "the consumer is being ripped off."

The National Cattlemen's Association disputed those contentions, saying technical innovations permit them to produce the same quality beef under leaner standards but at less cost. That means savings for consumers, whom Washburn said want leaner meat.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Soviet officials are getting together again late next month in Vienna for the regular, semi-annual consultations under the extended, long-term grain agreement, Agriculture Secretary John Block says.

Block said the talks, scheduled for Oct. 28-29, will cover the prospect of U.S. grain sales to the Soviets above the 8 million metric tons called for in the trade pact. As usual, he said, the delegations will also discuss world, U.S. and Soviet crop outlooks.

But Block's announcement Monday included no indication that the consultations would include any discussion of a new long-term grain sales agreement between the two superpowers.

Under Secretary of Agriculture Seeley Lodwick will head the U.S. delegation and Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade Boris Gordeev will lead the Soviet group.

On Aug. 20, officials announced another one-year extension of the long-term agreement through September 1983 under which the Kremlin must buy at least 6 million metric tons of American corn and wheat and can buy as much as 8 million without prior U.S. approval. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The original five-year agreement, which was to expire on Sept. 30, 1981, was extended until the end of this month a year ago after President Reagan lifted the 16-month-long Soviet grain embargo.

The administration, however, has been criticized for only extending the current agreement rather than negotiating a new long-term pact with higher minimum sales requirements. Many farm-state lawmakers say Soviet grain sales will only be spurred by a new agreement, claiming the extension still leaves the Soviet Union facing the possibility of another embargo.

But Block has said he hopes to substantially increase grain sales to the Soviets during the next year as record U.S. harvests have created price-depressing stockpiles. He has told them the U.S. granary door is open for the next 12 months although no specific amounts have been set.

The Soviets, facing their fourth straight bad harvest, were offered 23 million metric tons of U.S. grain over the past year but have bought only about 14 million.

USDA analysts reported earlier this month that the Kremlin, for any number of reasons, may actually be cutting back on imports after buying a record 46 million metric tons in the past year.

Another USDA analysis issued Monday said the volume of U.S. farm exports next year should set another record, exceeding 170 million metric tons.

But it provided little optimism about any increase in commodity prices because of continued record harvests in the U.S. and bumper grain crops in other major producing countries.

U.S. farm exports this year totaled a record 165 million metric tons.

La Grange senator dies, but name still on ballot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. John Wilson's name apparently will be on the November general election ballot, along with that of his Republican opponent, even though Wilson died during the weekend.

Secretary of State David Dean said Monday if Wilson should get more votes than Dr. J. Everett Ware of Victoria, a special election would be called and other candidates could file for the Senate seat.

Wilson, 43, died Sunday in Houston of lung cancer. He first disclosed he had inoperable cancer in June 1980, but said the type of cancer he had usually leaves victims 10 to 15 years to live.

"John Wilson strongly supported me in all of the experience that I have had in state government," Gov. Bill Clements. "He was a close collaborator as well as a close friend. His loss will be deeply felt in the Texas state Senate and all of state government."

Dean, the state's chief elections officer, said local committees have until Thursday to name candidates only for vacancies that occurred before midnight Saturday, and Wilson died Sunday.

Wilson, D-La Grange, was elected assistant presiding officer of the Senate during the recent special legislative session and was re-elected for the interim until the 1983 Legislature begins in January. He never got a chance to serve as governor-for-a-day, a mostly ceremonial celebration that accompanies the honor.

Death penalty will be sought

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors say a teen-ager deserves the death penalty for the "cold-blooded executions" of two High Point, N.C., furniture salesmen.

Assistant District Attorney Michael Olson said Monday he will ask that Donald A. Miller, 19, of Houston, be convicted and sentenced to death by injection. Miller is charged with capital murder in the Feb. 3 slayings of Michael Mozingo, 29, and Kenneth Whitt, 19.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys have been questioning prospective jurors for five weeks.

Edward Segura, 20, and Danny Ray Woods, 19, also of Houston, were charged in the deaths but later agreed to plead guilty.

Mozingo, 29, and Whitt, 19, were selling a truckload of furniture from a parking lot here when the three men offered to buy half the goods, detectives said.

The five men went to a nearby house to complete the deal, detectives said. But the two salesmen were robbed of $7,000 in cash and driven to a remote area 20 miles away where they were fatally shot, detectives said.

Marcello perjury trial is delayed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — At the request of the defense, a federal judge has delayed the perjury trial of Joseph Marcello, younger brother of reputed Mafia don Carlos Marcello of New Orleans.

Marcello originally had been set to go on trial today in U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia's court. A court spokesman confirmed Monday that Garcia postponed the case and would announce a new date soon.

New Orleans attorney Russell Schonekas said he asked for the delay because his co-counsel, Roy Cohn, is out of the country this week.

Marcello was indicted here April 20 on two counts of perjury in connection with his June 30, 1980, appearance before a federal grand jury investigating the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Although Schonekas contends Marcello never was a suspect in the Wood grand jury investigation, the indictment charges his client lied when he denied knowing anything about a conversation between the Marcello brothers in which the Wood killing allegedly was mentioned.

Austin fire chief quits, denies charge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fire Chief Ed Kirkham resigned Monday, five days after several female fire department employees claimed he sexually harassed them and was intoxicated at work.

Kirkham, who had been chief 14 years, told a news conference that City Manager Nicholas Meiszer did not ask him to resign.

He categorically denied the complaints made by the women employees.

In a three-page statement, Kirkham said he has "good reason to believe that the attacks ... are the result of a concerted effort by certain individuals."
