

Interest rates drop, but recovery of the economy still lags

By The Associated Press

Interest rates have fallen to their lowest level since September 1980 with some bankers saying they'll go still lower, but a presidential adviser cautioned there are no signs the economy will improve immediately.

President Reagan, meantime, scheduled a "non-partisan" speech on the economy tonight at 7:30 EDT, to be broadcast by two television networks. Democrats charged the networks were giving Reagan free time for a political speech only two weeks before the November elections.

Four major banks cut their prime lending rate to 12 percent on Tuesday, and the government said it was lowering the interest-rate ceiling on certain federally-backed home loans to 12.5 percent.

Meanwhile, the average rate paid on new six-month Treasury bills auctioned to the public plunged nearly 1½ percentage points, to 7.734 percent.

That means people buying six-month savings certificates sold by banks and savings institutions in minimum denominations of $10,000 will earn 9.15 percent interest starting today, down from last week's 9.643 percent.

The falling rates also could signal easier credit for retail sales.

But Alan Greenspan, a member of the President's Economic Policy Advisory Board, told real estate developers in Boston that despite the drop in rates, there is no indication of improvement in the overall economy.

"The economy itself shows no signs of change," he said.

A growing number of investors apparently think such a turnaround will come sooner rather than later. Activity in the stock and bond markets has been extremely heavy in recent days, although stock prices turned mixed Tuesday after several days of spectacular increases. Bond prices were moderately higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, measuring the performance of major corporations, fell 9.11 points to 1,003.68. On the New York Stock Exchange, 932 stocks advanced, 318 stocks were unchanged and 776 stocks declined.

After the four major banks cut their prime lending rates Tuesday, the government announced that home buyers also would be getting a break.

The interest-rate ceiling on Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loans for single-family homes was cut 1 percent from 13.5 percent, the lowest rate since August 1980.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said retail sales rose 1 percent in September from August, led by a 4 percent gain in automobile sales.

In other economic developments:

—International Harvester Co. lost a $28.5 million patent suit in federal court in Rock Island, Ill. In a lawsuit filed in 1976, Deere & Co. had charged Harvester infringed on its patent for a device that cuts cornstalks and feeds them into combines.

—Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers announced they will return to bargaining Friday in the face of overwhelming rejection by the rank-and-file to a tentative contract settlement.

Searching for a cause

State arson investigators are called in to probe the cause of nursing home fire

By JEFF LANGLEY
State Editor

Pampa police have asked arson investigators from the state fire marshal's office to determine the cause of Sunday's fire at the Pampa Nursing Center which killed two elderly residents.

Pampa detective Ken Neal requested the state probe into the fire, even though local fire officials previously ruled out arson as a cause of the blaze.

A nursing home employee who asked not to be identified told The Pampa News that most of the employees believe a patient at the home deliberately set the fire.

Neal said he brought in the state fire investigators because the fire involved deaths in a nursing home, resulting in extensive media coverage of the incident.

The police detective said the experience of the state officials is needed to properly investigate the fire.

Investigators from the state fire marshal's office in Lubbock, Clifford A. Rowell and Ricky Womack, arrived in Pampa Tuesday afternoon, and sifted through the rubble from the fire for the rest of the day.

Local fire officials concluded their probe of the fire, and they were unaware the state had been called in, until the investigators arrived.

City Fire Marshal L.V. Bruce and Pampa Fire Chief Paul Jones ruled out arson as a cause for the fire. Bruce and Jones concluded Monday that the fire started in a television set in a private room in the far northwest corner of the facility. They said the fire spread from the television to a wall behind and to two beds in the room, before flames leaped into the hallway of the nursing home's north wing. Heavy smoke which spread along the entire wing resulted in the two deaths and nine injuries.

"We didn't see any need for them coming in, as far as arson is concerned. I don't know why they called them in," Bruce said Tuesday.

"We did not suspect arson. As far as I'm concerned, it's an open - and - shut case," Jones said.

Though local fire officials ended their investigation of the fire, police continued to secure the fire scene pending the arrival of the state investigators.

Jones said the only nursing home employee he questioned in connection with his investigation of the fire was Administrator Melba Marcum.

Rowell said, "You can't call us arson investigators, because it won't fit on a (business) card."

"We are here to determine the cause of the fire," Rowell said.

"All fires like this need to be investigated — we don't know what they are investigating," Marcum said.

The home is owned and operated by a mammoth nursing home company, National Living Centers, based in Houston.

Houston Senior Vice President Velda Wasson arrived in Pampa Tuesday to supervise the cleanup after the fire and the relocation of patients.

Wasson said all of the patients moved to another nursing home and those staying with families will be able to return to the undamaged portion of the facility today.

"We want a thorough investigation of everything," Wasson said of the state probe.

Wasson and Marcum both said Tuesday afternoon that no employees have given them any information about suspected arson.

"We are trying to get information from everyone on duty (at the time of the fire) that might point to the cause of the fire," Wasson said.

Rowell said the state will become involved in the investigation of a fire only through a request from either the property owner, an insurance company, fire officials, police or the local mayor.

The Lubbock fire official said all information about his probe of the nursing home fire must be released through his Austin supervisor.

On the poison scene:

Firearms suspect grilled about Tylenol poisoning

CHICAGO (AP) — Police questioned a "closet chemist" who says he worked for a grocery chain linked to four of the seven Extra-Strength Tylenol cyanide deaths, but authorities said he wasn't a strong suspect in the case.

Roger Arnold, 48, was arrested late Monday night after police received a tip that Arnold was "known to have cyanide in his house," said Police Detective James C. Gildea.

Arnold, who is charged with five counts of failure to register guns and one count of aggravated assault and being held in lieu of $1,000 bond, is not a "strong Tylenol suspect," Gildea said.

The assault charge stemmed from "a completely separate incident," he said.

A search of Arnold's South Side apartment turned up five unregistered guns, ammunition, a plastic bag containing an unidentified white powder and literature on poisons and explosives, police said Tuesday.

"He is one of a myriad of leads we had to check out concerning the Tylenol case, and when we searched his apartment, the guns and other substances came to light," said Gildea.

A task force of more than 100 local, state and federal investigators has been working to crack the mystery of who placed deadly cyanide in capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol, killing seven people in the Chicago area between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1, officials said.

Contacted at home late Tuesday night, Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, the head of the task force, refused to comment on Arnold's arrest.

"It's another one of those things that is best handled at a briefing," Fahner said, adding he would say more today.

The powder found in Arnold's apartment was turned over to the Chicago Health Department laboratory Tuesday and test results were expected sometime today, Gildea said.

Andy jets away, leaving Koo in stark misery

LONDON (AP) — Dashing Prince Andrew jetted home today, alone and reportedly angry about shortening his holiday with erotic movie star Koo Stark because of nosy cameramen and reporters who invaded their Caribbean hideaway.

British press reports said Queen Elizabeth II's 22-year-old son "hijacked" a light plane chartered by photographers and was flown off the island of Mustique on Tuesday to Barbados, leaving newshounds behind on the first leg on his journey back to London. He had not planned to leave until Thursday.

The Sun tabloid said Miss Stark was smuggled off Mustique "in tears" earlier Tuesday, flying from a private airstrip to the island of St. Lucia where she boarded an Eastern Airlines flight to Miami with two women friends.

The British tabloid quoted people who saw the 25-year-old actress as she waited for the plane to St. Lucia as saying she looked "distraught."

The Sun said Andrew and his Scotland Yard bodyguard leaped aboard the photographers' plane at Mustique as it taxied along a runway. It said one photographer had to dive for cover as the plane took off and that another photographer was punched by local police.

It said at least one of the photographers had loaded his luggage on the Mustique Airways plane before the "hijack."

The prince, dubbed "Randy Andy" by the British press because of his many sweethearts, boarded a scheduled British Airways Boeing 747 flight at Barbados, bound for London via Antigua. It was scheduled to arrive by early afternoon.

Other British tabloids carried similar reports about Andrew "hijacking" the photographers' chartered plane. The Daily Mirror said security men wrestled with photographers as the newsmen realized they had been tricked.

Arson investigators from the state fire marshal's office, Ricky Womack, left, and Regional Manager, Clifford A. Rowell, dig through the charred remains of the room where fire erupted in the Pampa Nursing Center. The state probe into the cause of the fire which killed two residents and injured nine others began at the request of Pampa police detective Ken Neal. Local fire officials previously ended their investigation of the fire, and they ruled out arson as a cause for the blaze. Rowell declined Tuesday to say when his investigation will be completed, and he said all information will be released through his supervisor in Austin.

Strychnine victim takes a lie-detector test

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The man who reported becoming ill after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with strychnine has taken a lie detector test, and officials are examining the results.

Gregory Blagg, 27, voluntarily took the test at police headquarters Tuesday, answering questions put to him by an FBI employee. Blagg's lawyer said.

Attorney Joseph VanDervoort did not attend the session. But he said the questions included, "Did you tamper with the capsules?" "Do you know who did it?" and "Are you covering up for someone?"

VanDervoort said if he wasn't satisfied with the conclusions reached by federal officials, he would conduct his own polygraph test.

"My client is fed up with all the implications and innuendos which have been circulated and wants to clear himself. I expect the test to clear him of any suspicion," the lawyer said.

Police detectives would not say whether they consider Blagg a suspect in the tampering. They have said they believe the poisoner is someone local.

Blagg reported becoming ill after taking Tylenol on Sept. 30, the same day that deaths from cyanide-packed Extra-Strength Tylenol were reported in the Chicago area.

Tests showed strychnine in Tylenol capsules from three bottles in Oroville.

Blagg and his wife said they bought two of the bottles over a two-week period. The third bottle was found by investigators at the same Longs Drug Store in Oroville where the Blaggs reported buying their bottle.

Seeking office

The Republican candidate for the state treasurer's office stopped in Pampa Tuesday for a reception at the new party headquarters in the Capri Theater. Allen Clark and his wife, Jackie, covered a large part of the Panhandle Tuesday during their campaign swing. Clark said his experience as a money manager makes him better qualified for the job than his Democratic opponent, Ann Richards. As the state's money handler, Clark said he will continue the policy of spreading the deposits of state money to banks across the entire state. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

How to clip out a fortune in coupons from the newspaper

By PHILIP BRASHER

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Max Bryan liked making money too much to put up with cleaning toilets and washing diapers full-time when she quit her job at Braniff Airways four years ago to start a family.

So she started clipping grocery coupons and redeeming refund offers.

Hardly a grand entrepreneurial scheme, to be sure. But it saves $2,800 a year on the family's $400-a-month food budget. And now that exercise in thrift has blossomed into a nationwide bi-monthly newsletter that is finally in the black and a computer service on which she will clear $20,000 this year — pretty good pay for a part-time job at home.

Mrs. Bryan, a flight attendant supervisor at Braniff, stumbled into the new-found occupation through a fellow worker, Jeanni Lawson, who had figured out how much money could be saved on manufacturers' refunds.

By last November the two women were saving so much money that they published advertisements for a newsletter on refund and coupon redeeming before they had ever published a single issue.

By this summer the subscription list built to 4,000 and tripled after Mrs. Bryan's July appearance on the Phil Donahue Show in Chicago.

"We just wanted to have an outlet," Mrs. Bryan said of the newsletter as she fed her eight-month-old daughter lunch. One of two full-time secretaries filed through a subscription list at the kitchen table.

"We were tired of floors and windows and we didn't want to go to work for anyone else."

Mrs. Lawson was making $80 to $90 a month, turning in proof-of-purchase labels from empty packages when Mrs. Bryan became interested.

"Finally, I started getting a little curious," Mrs. Bryan said. "I finally said, 'You can't have my labels. I'm going to do it myself.'"

"Everybody we told about it said that it was too much hassle. But most consumers will do anything they can to save a buck."

So it wasn't long before requests for the Salvage and Save Gazette — a 24-page magazine that every two months lists several dozen refund offers and publishes advertisements from readers wanting to trade coupons and refund slips — began coming into the Garland home, Mrs. Bryan said.

But relatively few shoppers began subscribing until Mrs. Bryan began telling her inflation-fighting story on television talk shows like ABC's Good Morning America, NBC's Real People and Donahue.

The idea of making money — or at least paying relatively little — on the family grocery shopping trip obviously is attractive.

For the Donahue segment Mrs. Bryan bought $191 in groceries for 52 cents. And she likes to tell about the time she bought 24 rolls of paper towels for a net profit of $1.26.

The Bryans don't often save that much money on shopping trips, but it isn't impossible to do when you consider that the family saves empty packages religiously and only shops on double-value coupon days at grocery stores that offer refund slips.

Mrs. Bryan claims save to up to $150 on refunding and another $80 with coupons.

"It's almost a racket, but it's a way for the consumer to save some money and do it at home," she said. "People are fools if they don't."

"If you saw a dollar lying on the sidewalk, would you pick it up?"

She demonstrates little patience for other women who don't show some of her zeal.

A Fort Worth woman wrote the newsletter, complaining that her husband had thrown away the packages she was saving for refunds because Mrs. Bryan had not replied to an earlier letter with ideas for filing the empty boxes.

"What a wimpy broad that couldn't figure out how to file away labels?" Mrs. Bryan said.

Mrs. Bryan used the money she saved from refunding to buy a $5,400 Apple home computer that turns out 75,000 to 80,000 mailing labels a month for Dallas-area business.

"I didn't even know how to turn on a computer when I got it," she said.

But now she has trained a half-dozen other women to operate terminals of their own and the business has expanded.

So the money the refunding is saving the family now is "a drop in the bucket," she acknowledged.

She and Mrs. Lawson still keep up with the coupon clipping and label saving, however, she said. "We have to know what we're doing for the newsletter."

"It really does work and for people who don't have a lot I can't imagine their excuses for not doing it," she said.

Of course, she couldn't return to Braniff even if she wanted to now that the airline has suspended operations. But Mrs. Bryan said she has had offers to take jobs outside the home. And some people have suggested she open an office for her mailing service.

She won't have anything to do with it.

"That would cancel out everything I started it for," she said. "I didn't have kids to say 'Call me when they say their first word or cut their first tooth.' That's not what kids are about."

"And why would I go and start a business outside the house when I'd miss the important calls after five?"

Two killed as Polish police begin to clamp down on striking workers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Riot police ringed the newly militarized Gdansk shipyard today after two days of strikes and bloody protests, and officials warned workers they face five-year prison terms if they stage more demonstrations over the outlawing of Solidarity.

Workers claimed some of their colleagues planned to ignore the warnings, but it was not immediately known if the yard was struck again. Unconfirmed reports said two people were killed and many injured battling riot police in Gdansk during the night.

Reporters in Gdansk said that workers leaving the yard said they had been "technically" drafted into the army and made subject to military discipline after the yard was declared "militarized" by the government Tuesday in an effort to break the spirit of some 10,000 workers who staged eight-hour strikes in Gdansk and nearby Gdynia Monday and Tuesday.

Police firing tear gas, water cannon and smoke and stun bombs routed protesters at the shipyard monuments Tuesday evening, chasing them through city streets. Witnesses said many rioters were beaten, and the streets were littered with rocks and debris. Authorities reported 148 arrests.

Martial-law spokesman Jerzy Urban told reporters in Warsaw the uprising will not affect plans to release 308 more interned unionists, but he declared that Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and about 780 others will not be freed.

Militants who organized strikes Monday and Tuesday demanded Walesa's release and the reinstatement of Solidarity, banned Friday by Parliament under a tough new labor law that erases reforms won by the independent union before martial law was decreed 10 months ago.

The militarization of the shipyards where Solidarity was born in August 1980 came after riot squads battled with an estimated 10,000 shipyard workers and supporters in two cities.

Police fired tear gas, sprayed water cannon and lobbed smoke bombs at an angry mob of about 1,000 protesters who surged toward Communist Party headquarters after authorities dispersed their mass rally Tuesday outside the Gdansk plant, witnesses said.

An "underground committee" called for a general strike throughout the Baltic coast region, said some workers leaving Lenin Shipyards. The report could not be independently confirmed.

Eight-thousand Lenin workers struck for the second day Tuesday, joined by 2,000 in the nearby port of Gdynia. Few details on the Gdynia strike were available from reports reaching Warsaw.

Authorities reported 148 arrests in Poland's worst violence since worker revolts swept the country on Solidarity's second anniversary Aug. 31.

"The government believes that such demonstrations are organized by the Solidarity underground," Urban told foreign reporters in Warsaw. "We are of the opinion that such behavior is detrimental to normalizing the situation in the country."

Some departing workers in Gdansk told reporters they had been fired for striking. Others were told to report to army enlistment boards, they said.

"There is a fighting spirit," one worker said.

About 2,000 onlookers screamed "Long live Walesa!" and "Bravo workers!" as the laborers departed. Riot squads who ringed the shipyard with water cannon left before the Tuesday shift change at 2 p.m.

Farmers headed for another record year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are headed for another record year for total crop production, including new highs for corn and wheat.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that the corn harvest will yield more than 8.31 billion bushels this fall, 1.4 percent more than in 1982 and virtually the same as forecast a month ago.

Based on the most recent available figures, only about 7.6 billion bushels of this year's corn crop will be needed for domestic and export use.

With production now estimated at more than 8.31 billion bushels, that means the excess of about 715 million bushels will be added to the already bulging U.S. grain inventory.

The latest report, based on Oct. 1 field surveys also included revised production estimates for a number of other key 1982 crops:

—Soybeans, a record 2.3 billion bushels, up 15 percent from revised 1981 output but down fractionally from the September forecast.

—Cotton, 11.4 million bales, down 27 percent from 1981 but 3 percent more than indicated last month.

—Total wheat, a record 2.81 billion bushels, up 1 percent from last year's high but down fractionally from the September forecast.

—Fall potatoes, 307 million hundredweight, up 4 percent from the fall harvest in 1981. It was the department's first forecast of this fall's potato crop.

The department's Crop Reporting board said that 1982 crop harvests, overall, were rated at a record of 118 percent of the base year 1977, which is used for comparison. That was up one point from the previous high of 117 percent set in 1981 and matched in the September forecast.

Corn is the largest and most valuable farm crop grown in the United States. As livestock feed, it is an essential element in the production of meat, poultry and milk for Americans.

Moreover, along with wheat, cotton, soybeans and a number of other crop, corn is a top item on the U.S. export list for scores of foreign markets, including Japan, the Soviet Union and European countries.

Grain prices at the farm have been generally depressed since last year's record harvests. Corn, for example, averaged $2.17 per bushel in mid-September, compared to $2.55 a year earlier.

Wheat was $3.38 per bushel last month, down from $3.65 a year earlier, and soybeans, at $5.28 per bushel, were down from $6.21.

The report said that 1982 corn yields are expected to average 114.2 bushels per acre, compared to 113.9 indicated in September. The 1981 average was 109.9 bushels per acre.

Wheat yields, including all types, were estimated at 35.6 bushels per harvested acre, compared to the September forecast of 35.7 bushels and the average of 34.5 last year.

Soybean yields were put at 32.4 bushels per acre, compared to 32.6 indicated in September and the average of 30.4 in 1981.

Cotton yields were estimated at 587 pounds per acre against 569 reported last month and the 1981 average of 543.

Other Oct. 1 production estimates and comparisons with 1981 included:

—Rice, 156.4 million hundredweight and 4,760 pounds per acre, compared to 185.4 million and 4,873 last year.

—Flaxseed, 11.7 million bushels and 14.1 bushels per acre, compared to 7.8 million and 12.6 last year.

—Peanuts, 3.42 billion pounds and 2,668 pounds per acre, compared to 3.99 billion and 2,670 last year.

—Dry beans, 25.6 million hundredweight and 1,394 pounds per acre, compared to 31.8 million and 1,445 last year.

—Tobacco, 1.93 billion pounds and 2,144 pounds per acre, compared to 2.06 billion and 2,114 last year.

—Sugarbeets, 21.4 million tons and 29.5 tons per acre, compared to 27.4 million and 22.3 per acre last year.

—Sugarcane, 28.9 million tons and 39.5 tons per acre, compared to 27.4 million and 36.3 last year.

Two women saw man near death scene

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two women testified they saw a man lurking nearby shortly before U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was assassinated, but only one said she could positively identify the "suspicious man" as convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson.

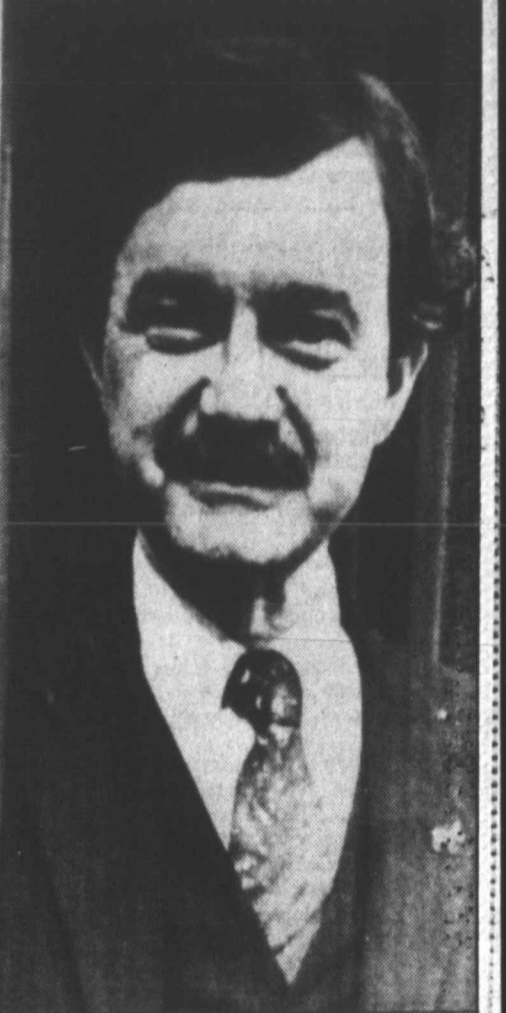

Both witnesses were residents of the Chateaux DiJon Townhomes, where the 63-year-old Wood was shot in the back in what prosecutors charge was a $250,000 contract killing. Harrelson is accused of firing the shot from the high-powered rifle that killed Wood.

Attorney Chrys Lambros earlier picked Harrelson, 44, out of a lineup as the man she literally bumped into about 40 minutes before Wood was slain on May 29, 1979.

"I will never forget Mr. Harrelson's eyes," she said shortly before leaving the witness stand Tuesday. "The face of the man I saw the morning of the shooting made such an impact on me, I will never forget it."

But the other witness, Mary Wilkinson, chose a Houston policeman from the same lineup as the man most closely resembling the man she spotted skulking in the parking lot the day of the murder.

Stage barnyard campaign

Two Texas candidates are waging 'barnyard' campaign

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Republican Fred Thornberry calls his opponent, Jim Hightower, a "charlatan" backed by "liberal agitator groups." Hightower responds that Thornberry is "seriously dumb."

Just before the primary, Brown stumbled before TV cameras when he referred to renowned educator Booker T. Washington as "that great black nigger."

Harsh words in a campaign for agriculture commissioner, by all accounts one of the most boring jobs in the Texas state government.

In the primary campaign, Brown traveled the state charging that Hightower's support came from "socialistic punks up East." But Hightower soundly defeated Brown by promising to save family farms and reduce supermarket prices.

But the race to determine who gets to calibrate gasoline pumps and inspect sweet potatoes has produced the best campaign rhetoric, faux pas and one-liners of an otherwise routine political season in the Lone Star State.

"There's a lot more to being agriculture commissioner than putting a straw in your mouth and humming 'Thank God I'm a Country Boy,'" Hightower says. It's a line he used against Brown, and he likes it so much he has revived it for the campaign against Thornberry.

Democrat Hightower, 39, former editor of the liberal weekly Texas Observer, has emerged as a kind of born-again redneck and standup comic. He says things like, "If you were to lay all the experts end to end, it would be a good thing."

Hightower says he wants to use the job to influence farm legislation in Washington, but Thornberry — as Brown did in the primary — warns that Hightower is a "political opportunist" who is seeking a steppingstone to higher office and who would turn the state agriculture department into "a training ground for political radicals."

Thornberry, 45, is a Texas A&M alumnus and chicken expert who quotes German philosopher Nietzsche in his campaign press releases. He entered the race after Hightower defeated state Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary on May 1.

Hightower, once an aide to liberal former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, ran a losing campaign for state railroad commissioner four years ago as a "populist." He has written two books on agricultural policy, "Eat Your Heart Out" and "Hard Tomatoes, Hard Times."

Brown was no slouch at making headlines, either. He once accidentally cut off a finger with a chain saw while building a "Safety on the Farm" exhibition booth. He battled the fire ant with such religious fervor that stuck his hand in an ant hole so television cameramen could get footage of him being stung.

This year, Hightower is believed to be the beneficiary of voter discontent over record farm bankruptcies, idled grain elevators and low farm prices, and is regarded as a shoo-in to succeed Brown.

More warrants forthcoming in alien smuggling scheme

MCCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities plan to issue additional arrest warrants naming "co-conspirators" in an alien smuggling operation that caused the deaths of five Salvadorans, a U.S. Border Patrol official says.

discovered Saturday partially submerged in a drainage ditch near an orange grove where 10 Salvadorans had been left by smugglers.

"We'll issue warrants and get them (the suspects) when we can," Border Patrol assistant chief E.J. Vickery said Tuesday, after a third man named in warrants issued earlier surrendered.

An autopsy revealed he died of a combination of dehydration, exposure and heat stroke, with possible drowning also a factor, according to Dr. Ruben Santos, Hidalgo County medical examiner.

Larry D. McCoy, 39, surrendered about 2 p.m. Tuesday at the McAllen Border Patrol office and appeared before U.S. Magistrate Susan Williams on a charge of conspiring to transport illegal aliens. Bond was set at $500,000, court clerk Olga Saucedo said.

Two other men named in federal arrest warrants — Robert James Manners, 51, and Edward Gene Hunter, 38 — surrendered to the Border Patrol Thursday and are being held in lieu of $500,000 bond each on charges of transporting illegal aliens and conspiracy to transport illegal aliens within the United States.

Vickery said his office will "take a closer look" at the case and then issue more arrest warrants in the failed smuggling scheme. He said he could not estimate how many additional warrants will be issued.

Patrol investigator Ray Diaz said McCoy may be the person who abandoned the truck with the Salvadorans locked inside. Manners and Hunter may have "assisted in supplying the aliens and loading the aliens into the trucks," he said.

Plant bombs had disaster potential

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — There would have been immense damage and probable loss of life if the four bombs planted at Gulf Oil's Cedar Bayou refinery near Houston had exploded, an FBI agent said.

The 26 people trapped in the 18-wheeler began to suffer, and four died, when the truck's air conditioner failed.

Special Agent Douglas Hopkins, testifying Tuesday at a preliminary hearing for two Durango, Colo., men charged in an alleged $15 million extortion plot, said whoever rigged the bombs "knew exactly what he was doing."

Two other aliens abandoned at the grove have not been located.

U.S. Magistrate Morton Silver ordered Michael Allen Worth, 34, and Theodore Duane McKinney, 45, bound over under $1 million bond each at the conclusion of the hearing.

Hopkins testified that five bombs, including a sample used to verify the validity of the threat, were placed at various locations at the Cedar Bayou petroleum plant.

Both are charged with interfering with interstate commerce under the federal Hobbs Act.

"They were not simple, but elaborate devices and whoever built them knew exactly what he was doing," Hopkins said. "At least one had a collapsible switch so that if the power diminished, it would go off."

U.S. Assistant Attorney Phil MacDonnell said the government now has 30 days to seek a federal grand jury indictment.

He said that each of the five was different and that company officials were warned the bombs could not be disarmed in the same manner.

Hopkins said the bombs would "very definitely" have damaged the plant severely with the possibility of injuring or killing employees if they had exploded.

End sought to plant hearings

DALLAS (AP) — Federal officials have been asked by Texas Utilities Co. to end licensing hearings for the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant — an action that would stop further testimony regarding pipe supports.

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission also has asked that the hearings end before the commission completes its review of the plant's pipe support designs.

The hearings were postponed in September and scheduled to resume with a review of allegations by two former plant engineers that many key pipe supports are unsafe.

Both requests were filed this week with the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board and have drawn protests from a Dallas group opposing the plant, under construction at Glen Rose.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

One law too many

It may be that if respect for the law and for duly constituted authority ever dies a lingering death, the coroner may have to conclude that the patient succumbed to self-inflicted wounds.

The state of Washington, casting about for a way to delay the impact of fiscal crises, has commenced a state lottery. An old law in neighboring Oregon provides for criminal penalties for possessing or selling lottery tickets. Oregon prosecutors, fully aware that the state's residents are buying Washington lottery tickets, have announced that they don't plan to make a big point of enforcing this law.

It's encouraging to note that some district attorneys have a measure of common sense. It is less encouraging that so few want to stuck their necks out a little farther and try to get some of those unenforceable laws off the books.

To be sure, it is not a simple matter to repeal a law. Some lobbying may be required, which takes time, money and dedication. Yet state legislatures seem to find themselves able to pass laws every year (some enforceable and some not), a process that doesn't require any more effort than repealing them.

The presence of unenforceable laws on the books is in large measure the result of bad philosophy. Too many people have accepted the idea that government can go beyond the rather modest goal of providing a modicum of stability, and have tried to use the power of law to provide for some vision of the good life.

People can't talk no more

By PAUL HARVEY

People can't talk no more.

Our newsroom interviews journalism graduates whose grammar is so atrocious we'd be embarrassed to have them answer telephones.

It does not on the air radio and TV people consistently misquote themselves.

They insert a nonexistent "g" in the middle of the word "luxury."

They say "ax" when they mean "ask."

And "nucular" when they mean "nuclear."

Ron Gorski who left teaching for news writing is appalled to hear civic and political leaders promise to represent you and I.

We hear high-salaried city officials sound as though they just stumbled out of a ghetto alley, and youngsters are bound to conclude that proper grammar can't be all that important.

They along came Clinton Chase.

Clinton Chase is professor of Education at Indiana University. He has stopped giving essay tests because, he protests, frequently penmanship and grammar are judged as important as the answer.

Professor, why not? Are not penmanship and grammar integral to the learning process? Will not your graduate be forever after judged, penalized or rewarded in response to his or her written words and verbal skills?

If you contend that an unreadable answer may be a correct one, you are mistaken, sir.

Whatever the content, if it cannot be read correctly or said correctly it is not correct.

Recent surveys confirm that an appalling 25 percent of Americans are functionally illiterate, unable even to comprehend the schedule in a TV Guide—or a help-wanted ad.

Responding to those studies, 34 percent of high school sophomores have been required to take remedial English.

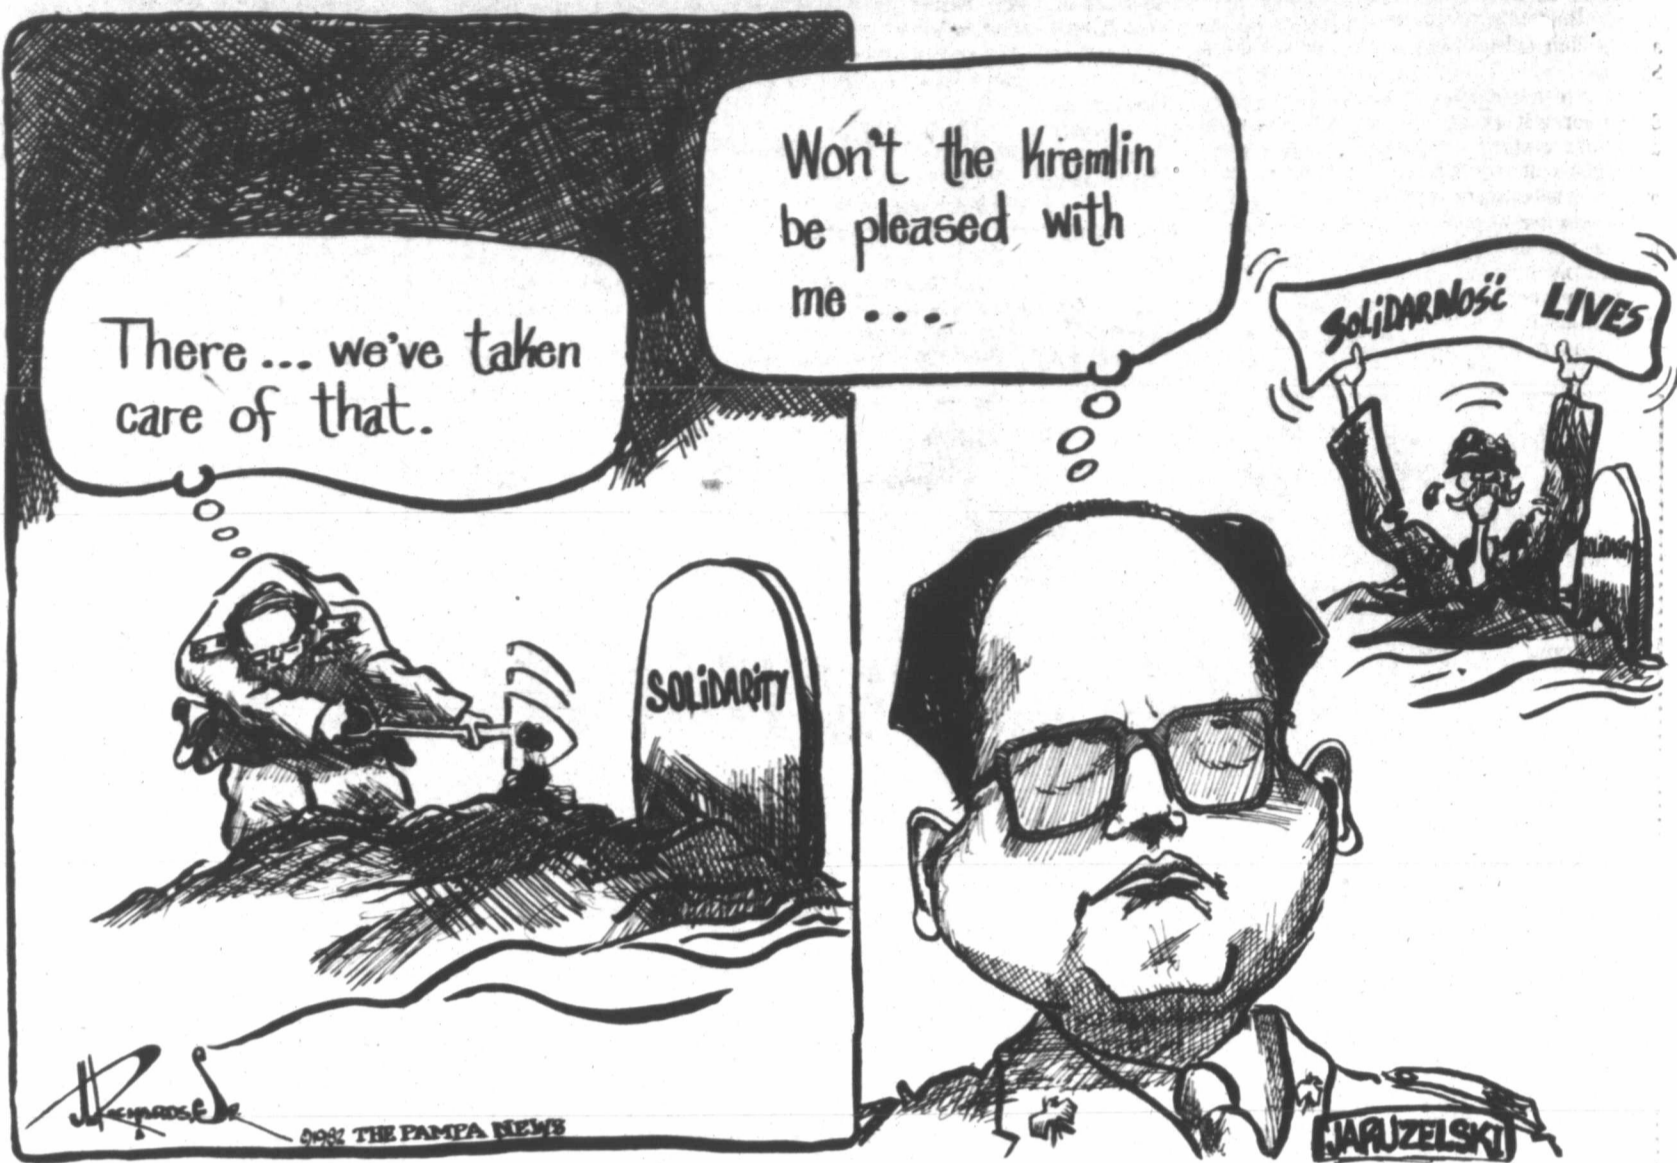

Seventeen states have enacted laws requiring functional literacy as a condition for high school graduation.

Yet, a federal report card issued by the National Assessment of Education Progress reveals that today's best students can't read and write and spell as well as their counterparts of ten years ago.

The language of the street, now as in the writings of Shakespeare, can be both colorful and permissible—as long as one knows better.

But whether "who" or "whom" represents organized communication, organized thought, significantly, a generation which ignores the laws of communication is likely to disregard the other rules which are designed to amke order of disorder.

The Beirut massacres

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER
NEW YORK — It is greatly to the credit of the people of Israel that so many of them are refusing to join Prime Minister Menachem Begin in his attempt to stonewall the issue of Israeli responsibility for the recent massacres of Palestinians in Beirut.
Begin is in many respects an admirable man, but he has — spectacularly — the defects of his virtues. For one thing, he began his own long service to Israel as the leader of terrorist gang in the 1940s, and it seems possible that this background simply gives him a different perspective on the ghastly events that have long characterized the fratricidal politics of the Middle East.

For another, he appears to think that the sufferings of the Jewish people have undergone throughout history confer on them, and through them on his government, some sort of immunity from the normal moral obligations of mankind. When Begin instructed a spokesman to assert that no one will speak to the Jewish people about ethics or the sanctity of human life, his implication was, unmistakably, that the record of the Jewish people in these respects is impressive (which is true) and that it precludes any possible criticism of his government's behavior (which is most certainly not true).

From the very start, Israel's invasion of Lebanon has been characterized by an element of excess and indifference to objections that seems, in retrospect, almost fated to end in the tragedies at the Sabra and Shatila refugee camps. The PLO's indiscriminate bombardment of towns on Israel's northern border, from secure bases within Lebanon, certainly justified what was originally proclaimed as Israel's intention: the occupation of a 25-mile strip of Lebanese territory. Instead, however, Defense Minister Sharon persuaded Begin to allow him to occupy all of Lebanon up to the outskirts of Beirut, and to besiege Beirut itself until the PLO agreed to leave Lebanon altogether.

Perhaps the military and propaganda advantages of such a course justified it — though it is noteworthy that the PLO managed to turn its departure from Lebanon into something very like a victory celebration, with its soldiers being greeted like heroes in half a dozen Arab states and Yasir Arafat sailing off to Greece to be welcomed with open arms by the leftist Greek premies, Andreas Papandrouou.

But Lebanon, at any rate, was free of PLO domination at last, and quickly elected a new president the leader of the Phalange, the Christian bloc that has always been Israel's staunch ally against the Arabs. Alas, he was assassinated even before he could take office — and Israeli forces promptly invaded and occupied Beirut.

Did Begin and Sharon fully understand the significance of that step? They appear to have thought of it largely as one more demonstration of the awesome muscle of the Israeli armed forces, offering assurance that the assassination would not benefit the cause of its perpetrators. But the assertion of total authority over an area necessarily entails responsibility for what thereafter goes on in that area. It simply won't do for Begin and Sharon to argue that their officers on the spot "didn't know" what was happening in the Sabra and Shatila camps.

In the first place, the rage of the Phalange against the assassins of their leader was, at that point, the single most obvious emotion in the whole mosaic of Lebanese politics, and such tragedies as the massacres ought to have been anticipated and guarded against (just as the New York police increased the protection of the Arab U.N. embassies after the slaying of the Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics). In the second place, it simply beggars belief that the Phalange could have moved into the refugee camps and stayed there for many hours without the approval of the Israeli commanders and their knowledge of what was happening. Last but not least, it was, quite simply, those commanders' responsibility to know what was going on.

Certainly Mr. Begin cannot hide behind the historic record of the Jewish people who have been subjected to atrocities far worse, even, than those of Sabra and Shatila. The uprising of popular sentiment in Israel itself is the best evidence of that. Perhaps the time has come for Messrs. Begin and Shraon to step aside, and make way for leaders who understand that brute force is not, in fact, the only or the best solution to human problems.

The Hong Kong principle

By DON GRAFF

Goodness knows there are more pressing issues at the moment than the fate of Hong Kong.

But for the very reason that it is one problem not yet at the crisis stage, it offers some relief from too many others that are.

Hong Kong is an issue today because in 1841 the British acquired the island of that name plus a strip of mainland as spoils of the first Opium War with imperial China. A half century later, they added to their holdings with a lease on adjacent areas, constituting the whole as a crown colony which, from its origins as an outpost of empire, has grown into one of the world's great economic centers.

The lease on the so-called New Territories will be up in 1997, and the Communists who now rule from Peking have made it clear that it will not be renewed. Furthermore, they do not acknowledge British sovereignty over the original territories because it was acquired by force from a then-helpless China — the old "unequal treaty" game.

For Peking, sovereignty is not a matter for discussion but of principle. Not that it much matters at this point. If the Chinese repossess the leased lands, 90 percent of the colony's entire land area, Hong Kong will not be out of business whether or not the British crown retains sovereignty over the remainder.

And it is some business. Hong Kong is one of the world's fastest growing industrial economies, key financial centers and busiest ports.

And it is Communist China's window on the world, generating some 40 percent of total foreign earnings. If Hong Kong went out of business, Peking could be the biggest loser.

Which explains why the Chinese, while adamant on the principle of reasserting sovereignty, are making a show of reasonableness on arrangements to that end. Talks on the subject are under way with the British.

The question is not so much one of British rule as non-rule. There is a governor appointed by London and a council, but they exercise minimal control over Hong Kong's main interest: Business. The colony has been called the "last truly capitalist place on earth." Maximum corporate and personal income tax rates are 16.5 and 15 percent respectively.

Certain that they can't carry on business as usual if returned to the bosom of a Marxist China. Hong Kong's capitalists already are nervously checking the exits. When Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher returned from Peking recently with nothing more substantial than Chinese agreement to continue talking, the Hong Kong stock market promptly plunged and there was a rush on Commonwealth consulates for visas.

None of this escapes Peking. While no promises are being made, there are suggestions of possible interim arrangements such as a transition period of up to 50 years following expiration of the leases during which the British would retain administrative control with continuation of existing economic and social systems guaranteed, and after which Hong Kong would be self-governing special administrative zone of China.

At the moment, however, that is only an unofficial opener in a bargaining process that could go on for 15 years.

What isn't being mentioned is what all this says about the political and economic system that prevails in China — a European ideology as alien to Chinese nature as Hong Kong's preoccupation with making money is instinctive.

In recognizing the legitimacy of capitalist Hong Kong's concern, and in indicating willingness to make special arrangements to preserve the city's viability, the pragmatists in Peking are implicitly acknowledging the inadequacy of their own system. So much for Marxist principle.

Ambassador to Indonesia State Department official

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, ending a year-long diplomatic impasse, says he will name a senior State Department official to serve as the next U.S. ambassador to Indonesia.

Reagan, in a surprise move, announced the nomination of John H. Holdridge to the ambassadorial post in a toast during a state dinner Tuesday night honoring Indonesian President Suharto.

"It's a terrific choice," said Holdridge's boss, Secretary of State George P. Shultz. The 54-year-old Holdridge is currently assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs.

Reagan's announcement in the White House East Room brought cries of surprise, and a round of applause.

"As you are aware, Assistant Secretary Holdridge is our most senior diplomat experienced in East Asian affairs," Reagan told Suharto.

"In commending him to the Senate...I shall do so assured that no one is better qualified to continue on my behalf the frank and mutually beneficial dialogue which has marked your visit here, and which is so essential to the advancement of mutual understanding between our two countries," Reagan said.

Several U.S. officials who commented after Reagan's action said Holdridge should encounter little or no difficulty in winning Senate confirmation to the Jakarta post.

"Reagan has cut the Gordian knot," said one official, who asked not to be identified by name.

Bandits wielded pitchforks

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Two men veiled with red bandanas used a knife and a pitchfork to rob a convenience store of $33, police said.

The two men entered the Jiffy Food Store early Tuesday, thrust a farming tool at the clerk and demanded all the money in the cash register, said a police spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified.

There have been no arrests, police said Tuesday night.

Reagan's decision, which was made known to Holdridge on Saturday, leaves open the question of who will succeed him in his State Department post.

At State, Holdridge has been criticized by some U.S. supporters of Taiwan because of his advocacy of a closer relationship with the People's Republic of China.

And one official at the White House state dinner for Suharto said, "There are some people who are glad (he) will be leaving town."

The failure of the administration to appoint an ambassador to Indonesia, a strategically located major oil producer and the world's fifth most populous nation, has been an irritant in U.S.-Indonesian relations since the resignation of Ambassador Edward Masters last year.

Several potential nominees have surfaced since that time. One of them, Morton Abramowitz, a senior career diplomat, found himself charged in an anonymous document circulated here as a liberal Democrat who advocated allegedly unsound policies.

Cassettes put flames or fish on television

By SCOTT RECKARD
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Turned off by the same old television shows? Tired of losing at video games? A California entrepreneur suggests relaxing in front of a crackling fire or gently swimming fish — on your TV screen.

Steve Siporin believes he has an answer for television viewers burned out by the video explosion of the past few years. He thinks people tired of staring at Pac-Man, adult movies and all-news networks will be natural customers for his Video Fireplace and Video Aquarium, recorded on home video cassettes.

"Hopefully, it will be a fun thing for Christmas," Siporin said. Anyone lacking a fireplace can have a Yule fire anyway — without hauling logs, sweeping ashes, or dumping hot embers on the carpet.

The cassettes, priced at less than $40, also are much cheaper than real exotic fish. About 25 of the colorful creatures cruise calmly through Siporin's video waters. And, he notes, the fish never die.

Are televised flames anything like the real thing? "It's wonderful," Siporin, 49, claimed. "It's crazy. You put it on and the first thing you do is stare, just like with a real fire. Then you realize you're staring at a fire on TV."

The flaming logs — California pine, eucalyptus, oak and walnut — come complete with the sounds of crackles and pops. The gurgle of water complements the gliding fish.

Siporin said he got the idea for the cassettes two years ago as he sipped cocktails with friends in New York City one cool night.

Gestureing to the television, he jokingly suggested his friend should have a videotape of a fire to take the chill off the evening. To his surprise, the friend produced a cassette of a burning Yule log, taped one Christmas Eve from a television station that broadcast the fire for its viewers while accompanying it with Christmas carols.

Siporin, an assistant director who says his movie and television credits include work on "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "Guyana Tragedy," says most people are overwhelmed by "directed" images that bombard them.

Movie and television scenes have been so zoomed, tilted, panned and edited that they overwhelm the viewer, demanding constant attention, he said.

His hour-long fire and fish tapes, produced by an unmoving camera, make no such demands.

Livingston cleanup

Cleanup crews work to remove a damaged tanker car from its derailment site at Livingston, La., Tuesday as residents were allowed to return home for the first time in two weeks. The derailment and fire of 43 tanker cars carrying chemicals along US 190 forced residents to leave their homes. (AP Laserphoto)

Time when president thinks of TV

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the autumn of even-numbered years, a president's fancy often turns to thoughts of national television. President Reagan is going on the air tonight, with what the White House calls a non-partisan progress report on the economic situation.

The Democrats, predictably, protest that there is no such thing as a non-partisan, nationally-televized address by a Republican president three weeks before congressional elections.

That is exactly what Republicans said when Democrats held the White House and roles were reversed.

The opposition party always demands, and usually get, broadcast time to respond to the president. But it is not equal time, no matter what the hour or the duration. No rebuttal commands the attention or the audience a president can muster.

Reagan's economic progress report was scheduled after the unemployment rate hit 10.1 percent, highest since the last days of the Great Depression. Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary, said the purpose was to report to the nation on where things stand, not to announce any new administration action.

In every address, at every news conference, and in off-the-cuff comments in between, the president points to declining interest rates and to an inflation rate that has dropped to 5.1 percent, while acknowledging that unemployment remains an agonizing problem.

"The toughest, most urgent priority we have is to create more jobs," he said after the double-digit unemployment rate was announced last Friday.

Those themes certainly will be part of his progress report, just as they are part of his set campaign speech, and of his Republican campaign commercials.

Court reviews delayed illegal search claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is considering whether criminals who plead guilty in state court can later file a federal suit claiming police illegally searched them.

The court said Tuesday it will decide if such suits are banned in cases where the criminal defendant fails while he is being prosecuted to claim the search was illegal.

In the case, John F. Prosize pleaded guilty to manufacturing the illegal drug phencyclidine — commonly known as "PCP" or "angel dust" — after his 1977 arrest at his apartment in Arlington, Va.

Prosize, who was sentenced to 12 years in prison, never challenged in state court the validity of the search in which police discovered the drug.

The Supreme Court will decide whether Prosize can sue Arlington County Police Department officials under federal civil rights laws and collect monetary damages for what he now alleges was an unconstitutional search.

In other action Tuesday, the nation's highest court:

—Said it will decide whether employers can give women smaller retirement checks each month because they are likely to live longer than men.

—Listened to arguments over the Internal Revenue Service's 12-year-old ban on federal tax exemptions for racially biased private schools. The Reagan administration claims the ban has not been approved by Congress, forcing the Supreme Court to appoint a special advocate to defend the prohibition.

—Heard arguments on the power of law enforcement officials to stop, question and even search air travelers whose behavior fits a "drug courier profile." The court's final decision in the case from Florida will figure heavily into the nation's effort to ban illegal drug smuggling.

Navajo Sam reported arrested

Leo Lyyjoki, 51, also known as "Navajo Sam," was arrested Tuesday in the San Juan National Forest near Telluride, Colo., authorities said. The self-professed anti-government mountain man is accused of robbing backcountry hikers of their food this past summer. Photo was made by college student Sean Dee who encountered Lyyjoki while hiking in the San Juan National Forest on Labor Day weekend. (AP Laserphoto)

Charity Horse Show in Amarillo

Alpha Beta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha will host its Fourth Annual Open Charity Horse Show Oct. 16, at the Bill Cody Arena, Tri State Fair Grounds Amarillo.

Proceeds from the Horse Show will benefit the Regional Infant Intensive Care Unit at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

The competition offers 35 performance classes to include English Jump, Western Pleasure, Halter, Timed events and games. Entry fees will be $7 for each pre-registered class and $8 the day of the show. Ribbons will be given for the first through sixth place. There will be three age group classes for high point awards. Coolers will be given for these awards.

Entry forms may be obtained by contacting Teri Haley at 806-372-3874 or 806-359-6200. Entry fees may also be mailed to Mrs. Haley, 5103 Westway, Amarillo, 79109.

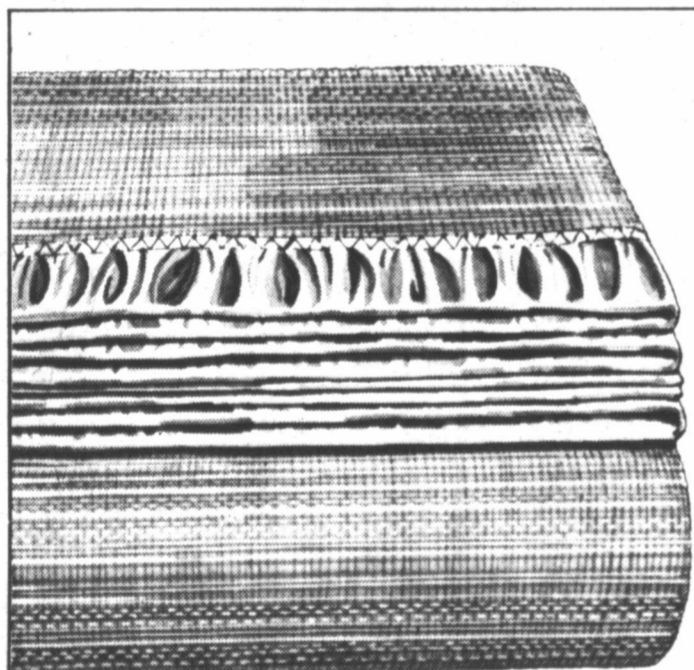

Epsilon Sigma Alpha is an international service sorority. Alpha Beta is one of five chapters in the Amarillo area.

This chapter has selected the infant Intensive Care Unit at Northwest Texas Hospital as its major philanthropic charity for the past four years. The group first sponsored a charity horse show in 1976. Proceeds from that show helped purchase a transport incubator to be used in ambulances and air transports and is still being used at the hospital. Since that time the proceeds from the last four shows have been used to purchase Transcutaneous Co2 Monitoring Systems and a Corometric (Heart Rate, Blood Pressure Monitor). This year the proceeds have been earmarked to purchase a TCPO2 Monitor, which continuously monitors the vital signs of the infant.

The new hospital now has a 12 bed unit in the Neonatal ICU. The average daily occupancy is 10 infants. Dr. Mubariz Naqvi is the director of the ICU.

Show chairman is Mrs. Haley. Mrs. Ruth Simpson is serving as Show Secretary. Judge will be Mr. Delbert Latham from Albuquerque, New Mexico. There will be no admission fee for spectators. The show will begin at 8 a.m. and will run until 10 p.m.

Conditions which affect your finances and security will take a turn for the better this coming year. Luck will be a major factor in what unfolds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your instincts in commercial matters could be of considerable aid to you today. Don't ignore inclinations which direct you to act in a specific manner. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your very presence today tends to buoy up the spirits of others. You project a positive optimism which could be instrumental in bringing you luck in several areas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have an ace in the hole today not of your own making. Just when you find you need assistance, the cavalry should arrive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may have to deal with a situation today similar to one which confronted you in the past. Methods which were lucky for you then will work once again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your ability to expand upon situations in joint ventures which others have begun will prove to be a big asset today. Make a contribution.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can win over a valuable new ally today because you can bring out the best in others. You become important when they're made to feel so.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) What you have to offer by way of expertise or service could earn you larger dividends than usual today. Do a good job and ask for what you're worth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're very competent when dealing with others today, whether it be on a one-to-one basis or with a small group. Your skills will gain you benefits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of taking on new projects, it's to your advantage today to finish that which you have already started. This is where your luck lies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't waste time dealing with trifles or the mundane today. You are likely to be more fortunate with large, important issues.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Give priority today to matters important to you materially. If you are prepared to go all the way, there's opportunity at the end of the road.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you feel you haven't been getting along as well as you should with neighbors or relatives lately, this is a good day to make amends.

Collector puts life work on display

By DEBORAH KELLY
Wilmington Morning Star

Dinosaur footprints, cannibal war clubs, Chinese hand puppets and giant spiders are just a few of the thousands of items on display at the most unusual new museum in New Hanover County in North Carolina.

George Tregembo's life's collection, a storehouse of ancient and contemporary artifacts collected from throughout the world, has opened in a small building on U.S. 421 between WILMINGTON and Carolina Beach.

A collector of oddities for nearly a half-century, Tregembo, 61, describes himself as a "collectorholic."

"I've been collecting most all my life. I've waited pretty near 30 years to set this up," he said.

"Many of the things I am showing are now unobtainable, because the countries this stuff came from have changed," he said, surveying his collection with pride. "When I was in Guinea in the '40s there were very few roads and headhunters were still around."

"See that picture there?" he said, pointing to a photo of a fierce-looking man holding a 6-foot spear. "He was a headhunter, and that knobby wooden club in the case is like what he used... Of course that's completely outlawed now."

Primitive cultures are well represented at Tregembo's museum, with memorabilia such as ancient Indian swords, African lip plugs and wooden Eskimo snow glasses displayed in sealed glass cases.

Another case filled with 2,000-year-old Roman artifacts contains a large coin with the value to purchase "one slave and a horse of good quality." In the same room, examples of the world's largest shells, eggs from the world's largest birds and specimens of the world's largest insects are displayed.

"You get a lot of people who walk through the museum and don't see a thing," Tregembo said. "But one in 10 is a real buff. Maybe it's someone who likes to see the shoes of the world, or knife collections from different cultures, or original Australian artifacts. There's a little something here for everybody."

Admission to the museum is included in the admission price to the adjacent Tote-Em-In Zoo.

Highways in multibillion dollar crisis

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Like needy on a breadline, state agencies will be queuing up in January to plead their appropriations cases before the state Legislature.

One outreached palm sure to draw attention is the Texas highway department's $4 billion request for highway construction in 1984 and 1985 — double its current road-building budget.

Highway officials have been warning that major portions of the state's 72,000-mile highway system are reaching retirement age, a situation aggravated by the state's rapid growth.

Highway Commissioner Robert Dedman said he has been traveling the state "playing like Paul Revere."

"There are potholes all over the state," he said. "We have potholes in interstate highways. We have 17,000 bridges that desperately need repairing. It is a crisis."

But when the legislative session rolls around, highways will likely butt heads with another Texas sacred cow — education. Both draw funding from the state gasoline tax, three quarters going for roads.

Highway funds have been on a long slide, due to gasoline conservation and a state gasoline tax that has not been raised since it was set at five cents a gallon in 1955.

Vehicle registration fees, another source of highway funding, have dropped, too, since they are based on vehicle weight. Gas mileage-conscious consumers are buying smaller, lighter cars.

"In 1965, highways got 25 percent of the total state budget," Dedman said. "This year, we expect to get about 9 percent. We have a system that would cost $100 billion to reconstruct, yet we get only a little less than a billion a year to maintain it."

Highway Department Assistant Engineer-Director Henry Pearson says East Texas is an example of aging roads unable to meet the present-day load — in this case, an oil boom.

"Those roads were designed to carry cotton trailers and tractors and small trucks," he said. "You take some of those big oil rigs and some of the equipment associated with oil well activity, and the road deteriorates very rapidly."

The department simply stripped some roads of their surfaces in the oil boom area of Bryan-College Station, since it became so costly to keep repairing them, Pearson said.

But urban areas are feeling the worst of the crunch, said Dedman.

Houston drivers spend three times as much time going from place to place as they should, Dedman said, so they use three times the gas and have three times the wrecks — not to mention wear and tear on vehicles.

Bad roads cost more than building new ones, Dedman argues.

"It makes sense to spend half as much money to solve a problem as it's costing you to put up with it."

Unless the department gets its full budget request, additional roads in Houston will be less likely, department officials contend. Instead, the department will concentrate on maintaining existing roads, its first priority.

"We feel we have a very valuable investment here, and we must maintain and rehabilitate what we have to start with," Pearson said. "I won't say new construction will come to a halt, but there will be a lot less."

In 1977, the Legislature enacted a funding formula that was supposed to guarantee sufficient money when the gasoline tax and vehicle registration fees did not meet road costs. The formula does not work, said Pearson, because it is tied to inflation instead of the state's growth rate.

The department projects that the gas tax and registration fees will produce only $1.5 billion in 1984-1985, compared with the $1.8 billion they provided in 1982-1983.

The statutory formula would automatically give the department an additional $696 million out of general revenues. But the department says that gift still leaves them $2.6 billion short.

Dear Abby
Donors legacy keeps on giving

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While driving north from Florida, I stopped in Virginia for gas, only to discover that somewhere after the last fill-up I'd lost my wallet containing all my identification, license, etc.

A week later, I received a well-wrapped package in the mail. It contained my wallet! And with it was this letter:

"Dear June: My husband is a truck driver from Kansas. While he and his co-driver were driving through Virginia yesterday, they found your wallet and its contents scattered on the highway. They picked up all they could find; I hope nothing is missing. There was money. In the wallet was a card indicating that you are an organ donor. There was also a very touching clipping from the Dear Abby column urging people to become donors. It was beautiful!

"You must be a wonderful person. My sister had a heart transplant, which added a few more months to her life. We can never thank the relatives of the donor because we don't know who the donor was.

"I also have a young daughter who is on a kidney machine three hours twice a week. It breaks my heart that I can't give her one of my kidneys (our blood and tissue types don't match) and, unfortunately, her father's kidneys aren't healthy enough. But thanks to caring people like you, someday someone may be a donor for her. May God bless you with a long and healthy life." — Driver's Wife

Abby, I hope that you will think this is worth sharing. People need to know that there are still a lot of generous, decent people out there who will go out of their way to do a kindness for a stranger.

JUNE P., MAINE

DEAR JUNE: It is indeed worth sharing. And the "clipping" that touched that truck driver's wife also deserves another run, and here it is. It originally appeared Dec. 28, 1977:

"At a certain moment a doctor will determine that my brain has ceased to function and that, for all intents and purposes, my life has stopped.

"When that happens, do not attempt to install artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my 'deathbed.' Call it my 'bed of life,' and let my body be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

"Give my sight to a man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman.

"Give my heart to a person whose own heart has caused nothing but endless days of pain.

"Give my blood to the teen-ager who has been pulled from the wreckage of his car, so that he might live to see his grandchildren play.

"Give my kidneys to one who depends on a machine to exist from week to week.

"Take my bones, every muscle, every fiber and nerve in my body and find a way to make a crippled child walk.

"Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that someday a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her window.

"Burn what is left of me and scatter the ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

"If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses, and all prejudice against my fellow man.

"Give my soul to God.

"If by chance you wish to remember me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever."

DEAR READERS: Those who wish to become organ donors may write to: The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77005. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope, as it is a non-profit organization.

"Indicate your desire to will your organs after death. You will be sent a card that should be carried at all times. I carry such a card and feel that there is nothing I could leave after my death that will be of greater value."

Did you know?

Meteorologists have called it "the only area in the United States with perfect weather." Others have called it the "Harbor of the Sun." It's the second most populous city in California—San Diego. Here are some other facts you may not know about this unique American city.

The spectacular San Diego Zoo has the largest collection of wild animals in the world. The zoo maintains an extensive program for breeding rare and endangered species. Don't be surprised if you encounter baby twin orangutans, a giant Galapagos tortoise, or an Australian koala bear.

Balboa Park is one of the most diversified parks in the United States. Amidst the lush, green surroundings of the park you can jog, bicycle or picnic; you can discover fine museums, visit an exciting Space Theater and Science Center, or see an entertaining musical in the outdoor Starlight Theater.

San Diego is famous for its beaches, which cover over 70 miles, plus two large bays within the San Diego city limits. Some of the best surf this side of Hawaii is enjoyed at La Jolla's Wind 'n Sea Beach.

If you should tire of the sea and sand, you'll find plenty of entertainment just wandering through the many shops and boutiques that are scattered throughout the county. There are endless antique shops, pottery barns and exclusive boutiques in the older city areas. You can learn more about sightseeing in San Diego with FODOR'S new guide book, San Diego and Nearby Attractions. It can help you plan your trip, give you hints on what to see and tell you the history of this fascinating city.

Brighten Breakfast campaign begins

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Lifestyles Editor

My first column. Wow! What am I going to say?

I think I'll talk about breakfast. Any one who knows me very well has heard me talk about breakfast. It's a pet peeve of mine.

Have you ever noticed that breakfasts, no matter what they include, are all basically the same colors? Blah, neutral colors, like beige oatmeal and toast, brown sausage, white eggs. Think about it.

Of course, you could set down to a multi-color bowl of Froot Loops; but the thought of all that sugar and artificial coloring and flavoring makes me have a diabetes attack.

There must be an answer to the breakfast bowl blahs! Something fast, simple, nutritious and appetizing to look at. I rebel against traditional breakfast by not eating it, which is probably not the best for my health.

My husband and children get by on cereal, oatmeal and a big, bacon and eggs breakfast on the weekend. They don't seem to be as turned off by boring breakfasts as much as I do.

I favor fresh flowers on the table, just tossed into a pretty vase. I'd rather eat lots of fruit in addition to the normal breakfast fare. Anything would live up to this meal.

My appeal to you is to send me ideas, thoughts and recipes to brighten breakfast. This is my Brighten Breakfast campaign. Somewhere out there is someone who has beaten breakfast boredom. (Ho - Hum).

To start this Brighten Breakfast campaign, I searched (I mean SEARCHED!) through my files and files of recipes for some breakfast recipe that would approximate a breakfast that would suit me.

I found two. That's all, just two that even came close.

The first recipe is a vegetarian omelet. The recipe is versatile enough, though, to include ham or chicken or turkey if you would like.

Helpful hints

Never slice bread when it's still hot from the oven. You'll get neat, even slices if you wait until the loaf is cool. The loaf will slice better on its side.

To make your chicken cutlets, debone frozen chicken breasts when only partially thawed. Use a thin, sharp knife. The meat will hold its shape and leave the bone easily.

VEGETABLES and plums make a wholesome omelet with little work.

VEGETARIAN OMELET

- 1/2 cup thin carrot strips
- 1/4 cup thin green pepper strips
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced onion
- 1/2 cup alfalfa sprouts
- 3 to 4 fresh California plums
- 1 chicken bouillon cube
- 1 tablespoon water
- 4 French omelets
- 2 teaspoons oil
- 1/4 teaspoon savory, crumbled
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

Measure and prepare all ingredients before starting to cook. Cut carrot and green pepper into thin strips about 1 1/2-inches long. Cover with boiling water; boil 3 minutes, drain and set aside. Slice onion and rinse sprouts, slice plums to measure 1 1/2 cups. Crumble bouillon cube into 1 tablespoon water.

Make French omelets and set on flat baking pan in warm oven (about 200 degrees) while preparing vegetarian filling. Turn oil into 9-inch skillet, add onion, carrot and green pepper strips. Stir-fry over high heat 2 minutes, until vegetables are tender-crisp. Add sliced plums, dissolved bouillon cube, savory, salt and pepper. Stir over moderate heat about 1 minute. Remove from heat, add sprouts and mix lightly. Divide mixture among the omelets and fold omelet over filling. Serve at once. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 servings.

To make French omelets: Beat 8 large eggs with 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 cup cold water. For each omelet, heat 1 tablespoon butter in an 8-inch skillet and pour in 1/2 cup egg mixture. Cook over moderately low heat just until set, shaking pan, and lifting edges to allow uncooked portion to run under as edges set. Turn out onto flat baking sheet and keep warm while cooking remaining omelets. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 omelets.

Drink a breakfast that is appealing to the eye and nutrition rich as a second choice. Here are two recipes that sound appetizing. These recipes are also good for after-school snacks.

- Orange-Honey Nog
- 2 tablespoons orange flavor instant breakfast drink
- 1 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon honey

Combine all ingredients in blender container. Blend well. Garnish with strawberry, if desired. Makes about 1 1/2 cups or 1 or 2 servings.

(Note: Use only clean egg, with no crack in shell.)

Peachy-Orange Drink

- 1/3 cup orange flavor instant breakfast drink
- 1 1/2 cups chilled skim milk or reconstituted nonfat dry milk
- 1 cup loose-frozen peach slices*
- 1/8 teaspoon almond extract*
- 1/2 cup crushed ice

(* Or use 1 cup sliced peeled fresh peaches; omit almond extract.)

Combine all ingredients in blender container. Blend well and serve immediately or blend again just before serving. Garnish with additional peach slices, if desired. Makes 2 1/2 cups or 5 servings.

O.K. This is a start, the ball is in your court now. Send me more neat breakfast ideas like these. I want lots to print in next week's column.

Send your recipes and ideas to Dee-Dee Laramore, Lifestyles Editor, The Pampa News, P.O. Drawer 2198, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Pampa alumnus recalls past

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are excerpts from Bill Bain's welcome address to Pampa High School's 1947 graduating class at a recent class reunion. We thought it appropriate during this week of celebration to reprint parts of this speech, which evidently came from the heart of the boy who grew up on Pampa streets and reflects the feelings of many who look upon their past here. Bain, formerly of Pampa, now lives in Houston.

"You know, 35 years is a major part of anybody's lifetime. Especially when the intervening years span the years 18 through 53. That is the heart of an adult lifetime. Careers are made and are nearing completion within those years. Families are born and raised within those years.

"Just as we were beginning an adult phase of life at graduation 35 years ago, today we are nearing a transition into a mature stage of life. Most of the things we aspired to be 35 years ago have manifested themselves. We are now the product of our aspirations.

"I have been asked 'Where are you from?' many times in my life. The answer is always the same — Pampa, Texas. The next question usually is 'Where is that?' Then I identify its geographical location as best I can.

"To me Pampa is home. I was born here — July 1, 1929 at 410 N. Wynne Street. The house still stands. You know the doctors in those days delivered the babies at home. I am sure that my mother and I raised a 'ruckus' in the neighborhood on that morning.

"Nevertheless, everyone has to begin somewhere and at sometime. Pampa was part of my beginning just as it was many of yours.

"We were fortunate as a group of kids to be raised in a unique Texas Panhandle town. Some of us have known each other all of our lives. Some of us have known each other since the beginning of our school years.

"My family returned to Pampa in the spring of my fifth grade year. We, my sister Joyce and I, enrolled in Baker Elementary School. I attended the sixth grade at Woodrow Wilson Elementary.

"The junior high school period was that magical time when our young bodies and minds were in transition from childhood to adulthood. We boys lost our high pitched voices. You girls became young ladies. Whether we realized it or not, we

"With warmth, sincerity and affection I thank each of you for being a part of my life."

—(Bill Bain)

needed each other to make those transitions. We, as young men and women, began to play the boy-girl roles of adolescence.

"We boys played on Pee Wee football teams and awkwardly began to express interest in the young ladies in the class.

"By that time we knew every kid in town. The inner relationship between each other was strengthened. We were a homogenous cross section of kids from all social and economic circumstances. We learned to judge each other by what we observed in the other person. I can't believe that any of us felt any serious social restrictions. We learned to support each other and not to falsely judge each other by any prejudice standards. Children today do not have those advantages.

"Look at the location of our junior high school. We were in the heart of the city. Now seeing that location vacant tears my heart. In our time, our place in the community was integrated within the life of the whole city. The merchants knew us. We were on the streets at morning, noon and afternoons. We did not feel unaccepted by any of them. This acceptance contributed to our self confidence as we were growing up. Children today in isolated school locations cannot experience that.

"Even in high school we had the full support of this fine community.

"I can recall going into the office of the county judge at the age of 14 to obtain special permission to get a driver's license. I had just finished delivering my newspaper route and walked into the judge's office with the paper bag over my shoulder.

"With courtesy I was given an audience with the county judge and I awkwardly made my request. He granted it with one qualification — that I finish high school. My name was entered into an official-looking book and I was given a signed note granting permission to take the driving test.

"After that I was committed to finishing high school. No question about it.

"Remember when we had an important high school football game, how the community gave us full support? If the game was on Friday or Saturday afternoon, we would parade through town. Merchants closed their doors and went to the game.

"Football games were held in a football stadium that would hold over half the city's population. What community could offer more support to their youth?

"We lost more than we won. Still the support was genuine and a major contribution to self confidence of high school students. We were made to feel important because we were a part of Pampa High School.

"The community supported those of us who had to, or wanted to work. Jobs through summer vacation prepared ourselves for the professions we have today.

"In those wonderful high school years we increased the class bond among ourselves with school activities. We participated on athletic and scholastic teams. The bands and choirs united those students with that type of talent. Boy-girl relationships, that were so essential to later life, were expressed through holding hands in the halls, dating for dances and other social activities.

"Blindly and unknowingly, we prepared ourselves for our roles as adults.

"With warmth, sincerity and affection I thank each of you for being a part of my life. I am grateful for Pampa, Texas, Pampa High School and for the opportunity to be a member of the Class of '47.

"Bless you!" — Bill Bain

Some foods reduce possibility of cancer

Although we have heard plenty about foods that appear to increase the chances of getting cancer, a recent study also cites foods that seem to reduce the odds, says the Texas Medical Association.

A scientific committee of the National Academy of Sciences says in a report that diets rich in fruits, vegetables and whole-grain cereals seem to reduce the chances of getting certain kinds of cancer. The panel specifically urged daily consumption of produce high in vitamin C and carotene, which the body changes to vitamin A.

The committee noted that vitamin C in foods can inhibit the formation of cancer-causing substances. It said foods rich in vitamin C, such as citrus fruits, tomatoes and peppers, appear to lower the risk of stomach and esophagus cancer.

Foods high in carotene are associated with a reduced risk of many cancers, including lung, breast, bladder and skin. These foods include dark-green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow fruits and vegetables such as carrots, spinach and broccoli.

The study also cited vegetables in the cabbage family — cauliflower, kale and brussels sprouts — for their natural cancer-inhibiting substances.

But the committee advised against taking large doses of vitamin and nutrient supplements. It cited a lack of proof that this is healthful and noted possible toxic hazards.

The study also urged people to cut back on foods that may increase the risk of getting cancer. They include: —Salt-cured and smoked foods such as bacon, bologna, smoked fish and ham, sausage and hot dogs.

—Foods high in fat such as fatty cuts of meat, cooking oils and whole-milk dairy products.

Finally, the report urged moderation in drinking alcoholic beverages. It noted that heavy drinking has been associated with an increased risk of cancer of the upper gastrointestinal and respiratory tracts, particularly when combined with smoking.

At Wits End Doggy bag days are here

By ERMA BOMBECK

I'll bet you old-timers out there can remember when a doggy bag was a bag containing a bone that people took home from the restaurant to their dog.

Boy, those were the days, weren't they? I remember when we used to walk in the door and the minute our dog would see that little bag with a picture of himself on the front, he'd jump higher than the door frame.

He's finally smartened up. That bag's not for him. In fact, they're not even bags anymore. They're cartons of leftover chop suey, beef stroganoff, lima beans and chicken and dumplings.

They're chicken wings, a limp taco, a half cup of soup, cole slaw, and cold strings of French fried potatoes.

I can be honest about it now. Our dog never saw a piece of cold chicken in his entire life. As for the occasional steak bone, there were rules. First, everyone would pick at the meat left on it for a couple of days. Then, I'd surround it with three quarts of water, a few carrots, onions and celery and make vegetable soup. On the fourth day, I'd place the naked, white bone on a plate in the middle of the kitchen floor and announce, "If you bury it before I do, it's yours."

He never had a chance. Diners used to be embarrassed about doggy bags. I can recall ordering my children to be sure and ask for a bag and when they did I'd blush and say, "My goodness. You're not going to carry home that half plate of spaghetti and meatballs, are you? Mommy will make you some next week if you're that hungry. Oh, well, if you think the dog will eat it!"

That's when one of them would say, "Does that mean we're going to get a dog?"

Today, doggy bags are passed out as mechanically as the bill.

Somehow, the doggy bag has opened the door for gutsy diners who feel that every restaurant is a giant takeout. We saw an elderly couple at a nearby restaurant the other night sack up all the crackers on the table, the bread, pats of butter, sugar, cardboard creamers and lettuce from the relish tray. As they prepared to go, she picked up the ashtray.

The waitress said, "Don't tell me your dog smokes."

Undaunted, the elderly woman tossed it in her bag and said, "We're trying to get him to quit!"

Pampa bumps Dumas in volleyball play

Pampa's 15-9, 6-15 and 15-11 1-4A volleyball win over Dumas Tuesday night in Harvester Fieldhouse wasn't a quality performance, but it kept the Lady Harvesters tied for first in the District 1-4A standings.

"We just didn't play well overall," said Pampa coach Roxie Johnson. "I don't know if we're in a slump or what it is, but after that first game we just seemed to ease off. We did play well enough to win though."

Pampa's Keva Richardson scored 12 points, mainly on serves. Sweet Simmons had seven spikes while Teresa Perkins and Richardson had five and four respectively.

Pampa evened its overall record at 13-13 and remained tied with Borger for first place in 1-4A with a 6-1 record.

Pampa hosts Lubbock Dunbar at 1 p.m. Saturday in a district doubleheader. The Lady Harvesters have only only three matches remaining on the regular-season schedule.

Pampa dropped the junior varsity game to Dumas, 15-7, 4-15 and 5-13, to make their district record 3-2.

Leslie Cash and Laura Horne were 10 of 10 from the service line for Pampa JVs.

"We just weren't moving our feet," coach Johnson said. "We had 27 bad passes and that just killed us."

Brewers win World Series opener

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Surprise, surprise. The Milwaukee Brewers can play Whitey Ball, too.

The American League champion Brewers charged into the World Series with an image of sluggers who thrive on the long ball, as evidenced by 216 home runs in the regular season.

St. Louis, on the other hand, got here on speed and defense, a bunch of singles hitters assembled by Manager Whitey Herzog and conditioned to zip around the bases at breakneck speed.

So in Tuesday night's opener, the Brewers put together 13 singles, three short of the World Series record, in a 17-hit attack and rode the three-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell to a lopsided 10-0 victory.

Herzog called it an old-fashioned, back of the shack, rump-kicking. "I'm glad it only counted as one game," he said. "I'm glad we didn't have a doubleheader."

The jackrabbits at the top of the Brewer batting order drove the Cardinals to distraction.

Leadoff man Paul Molitor set a World Series record with five hits, all singles. Three were infield hits and one, driving in a key run, came when he shattered his bat and looped the ball beyond the infield.

"It's the first time I've had three infield hits," Molitor said. "They weren't very pretty."

No. 2 man Robin Yount had four hits, three of them singles. Molitor and Yount drove in two runs apiece as Milwaukee punished four St. Louis pitchers.

"I just hit the ball where the fielders weren't," explained Yount.

How's that for Whitey Ball? Just to make sure their long-ball image wasn't forgotten, the Brewers also had a towering home run by ex-Cardinal Ted Simmons and a two-run triple by Jim Gantner.

"It's nice to score 10 runs," said Molitor, "but we still didn't swing the bat as well as we're capable of. The Cardinals know we can hit the long ball."

What St. Louis might not have known, though, was the kind of performance Caldwell had in his 33-year-old left arm. Shelled in his last two starts, he was passed over by Manager Harvey Kuenn in the decisive fifth game of the American League playoffs. But he came back with an airtight, workmanlike game against the Cardinals.

"I was getting ahead of the hitters, throwing mostly sinkers and a back-door slider," Caldwell said. "I felt strong and when I got three ground balls in the first inning, I got a lot of personal confidence."

Simmons, the Brewers' catcher, knew early that the veteran left-hander was on his game.

"I could tell right away," he said. "There was no question in the first inning. He was throwing the sinker at three-quarter speed and we were getting the ground balls. I said to myself, 'This could be nice for a while.'"

Two For The Track

Scott Wheeler of Canadian and his "Streaker" racing machine won the AA points title in Micro Midget racing this summer at Amarillo Speedway. Wheeler compiled 1,050 points to win by a margin of 121 points. It was the second points championship for Wheeler, who last won in 1973. He was ranked third nationally that year.

Consistency pays off for Wheeler

Consistency. It's the mark of a champion in any sport, whether it be golf, bowling, track or micro midget racing. Consistency is now Canadian's Scott Wheeler ran away with the Class AA championship at the Amarillo Micro Midget Speedway this summer.

Wheeler compiled 1,050 points while second-place finisher Doug Hutchens finished far away with 829 points.

How did Wheeler win by 121 points?

"I probably never won more than five or six main events all year, but I was finishing third, fourth or fifth every time out," Wheeler said. "I was consistent and I was running every night."

Wheeler's points title broke a nine-year victory drought for the Amarillo native. His last win came in 1973 when he was also ranked third nationally.

It also must be taken into consideration that Wheeler missed the 1978 and '79 seasons when he took an extended vacation from the track.

"I just felt like I had to get away from it for awhile," he said. Wheeler has no thoughts now about taking another "vacation." He plans to completely overhaul his "Streaker" racer before entering several outlaw races this winter.

One of the top races Wheeler will be competing in is at Phoenix, Ariz. next month where the top prize is $3,000.

"I'll repaint my car, replace bolts and just give it a good general going over," Wheeler said. "This is something that every driver does during the winter."

There wasn't any long drawn out thinking process to go through before Wheeler decided to take up racing. He used to follow his dad, William H. Wheeler, around when he drove modified coupes on a dirt track in Amarillo.

Wheeler's brother, Kent, finished fourth this year in the points race, while a nephew, Troy Douglass, was third. Douglass was the defending points champion.

It was only a matter of time before Wheeler got behind the racing wheel, but serious injuries while playing football for the Palo Duro Dons helped him make up his mind a little sooner than expected.

"I hurt my neck and back pretty bad," Wheeler said. "When I was forced to quit, I got into racing. It seemed like the thing to do since dad had been racing most of his life."

After this year's runaway points championship, Wheeler couldn't have made a better choice.

Moore wins

V.C. Moore's blue check hen traveled 200 miles in 926.239 yards per minute last weekend to win the Top of Texas Racing Pigeon Club race.

Others placing were Jim Cantrell, second, red check cock, 922.222 ypm; Nadine Waldrop, third, blue check hen, 919.993; Jim Cantrell, fourth, blue check w-f hen, 913.939 ypm; Marion Waldrop, fifth, red check cock, 900.387 ypm; Margaret McPhillips, sixth, 896.837 ypm; R.W. McPhillips, seventh, blue bar cock, 676.405 ypm.

Thorp restored to amateur status

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The International Olympic Committee today restored Jim Thorpe's amateur status and will return to the family of the late American athlete the medals he won at the 1912 Olympic Games.

IOC's President Juan Antonio Samaranch will present the medals to Thorpe's daughter in January. "The name of James Thorpe will be added to the list of athletes who were crowned Olympic champions at the 1912 games," the IOC said.

Thorpe, who was regarded one of the finest all-round athletes of his era, won the decathlon and pentathlon at the 1912 Games at Stockholm.

It was later found that Thorpe, a strapping 6-footer, had played semi-professional baseball in 1911. His medals were taken away and the Olympic records he established were stricken.

Thorpe, who was born in 1888 in Oklahoma, played six seasons of professional baseball after the Olympic Games, ending his career in 1919 with the old Boston Braves.

Thorpe's exploits in American football are legendary. A powerful runner and excellent passer,

McIlhenny, Benson honored as SWC players of the week

DALLAS (AP) — With savvy Southwest Conference teams starting to gang up on "The Pony Express," unbeaten and No. 5-ranked Southern Methodist is having to resort to "Air McIlhenny" to get the job done.

Junior quarterback Lance McIlhenny, known more for his ability to pitch the ball to tailbacks Eric Dickerson and Craig James, is being forced to pass.

He had his biggest game Saturday night, completing seven of 16 passes for 134 yards, three touchdowns, and a two-point conversion in SMU's hard-earned 22-19 victory over the Baylor Bears.

The performance earned McIlhenny The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award.

The AP SWC Defensive Player of the Week laurels went to Baylor end Charles Benson, whose tremendous play stopped the SMU ground game cold.

"They (Baylor) were forcing us to throw with an eight-man line," McIlhenny said. "We proved that we are a team of character. We did what we had to do to win."

SMU now is 19-2 in games that McIlhenny has started at quarterback.

"Lance came along at SMU when Mike Ford was the quarterback and he got compared to Ford as a passer," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "This wasn't exactly fair. Lance just didn't fit into that category."

"He (McIlhenny) has a strong arm and is a very good college passer," Collins said.

McIlhenny is listed as six-foot tall and Collins admits that being shorter than defensive linemen hurts the quarterback at times.

"Being short is something of a problem so we have to use a lot of play action fakes and sprint-out passes," Collins said.

He said McIlhenny has a strong arm.

"He has completed as many long passes as short passes," Collins said.

One of McIlhenny's passes against Baylor traveled some 50 yards on the fly to flanker Jackie Wilson, who turned it into a 75-yard touchdown play, the fifth-longest in SMU history.

School officials anguish over miniskirt return

HOUSTON (AP) — The opening skirmish in what may be Miniskirt War II has been fought quietly this fall at a school district here. The battleline has been drawn at the top of the kneecap and, so far, the score is School Administrators 13, Miniskirts 0.

Administrators at the Pasadena Independent School District first fought the miniskirt war in the 1960s when styles sent the hemline over the knee and up the thigh.

"This business of measuring skirts is something we don't want to get into," said assistant superintendent Elmer Bondy. "But we did it once and we can do it again."

School leaders won the first war, with the treaty line drawn at five inches above the knee. They remained vigilant until, eventually, styles changed, hemlines dropped to a less startling level, and the war was forgotten.

But this fall, Paris designers — or whoever decides such things — sent the hemlines creeping upward again. And when school started, the Pasadena school leaders found themselves once more in the battle of the hemline.

Two or three female students at each of the district's 13 secondary schools have shown up in miniskirts this year, Bondy said.

School administrators once more manned the barricades and cracked down on the district's dress code. Some of the offenders were sent home and others had different skirts brought to them. It was a decisive loss for high fashion.

Bondy admitted the hemline issue is not as extreme as it was in the 1960s. Hemlines then had only a distant acquaintance with the wearers' knees. School leaders battled back with rulers used to measure hemlines, and with letters and public comment.

In neighboring school districts, female students in questionable skirts were required to kneel and hemlines could be no more than five inches from the floor.

At Pasadena, Bondy said, women administrators would talk with girls whose fashion was too high. Sometimes, he said, the girls were instructed to reach over their head or to bend over and pick up something from the floor. If the exercise showed too much student, she was sent home to change.

"It was a question of modesty," recalled Bondy. Now, he said, it's a question of interpretation. The school district's dress code does not spell out the precise proper height of the hemline, but states only that dresses cannot be "revealing or excessively tight."

This year, he said, anything generally an inch above the knee fails the dress code test.

"If a staff member notices a skirt above the knee," explained Bondy, "then it's a miniskirt."

"They shouldn't be that strict," said Sara Gammage, 13, an eighth-grader who wore a miniskirt two inches above her knees on the first day of school.

Arsonist has bullied neighborhood, officials say

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Police say an arsonist who is terrorizing a northside neighborhood here with a string of fires dating to March 1981 has bullied residents into keeping quiet about his identity.

Fire Capt. W.E. Dunkin said authorities have canvassed the Diamond Hill area asking witnesses who have seen the man for help.

"We just keep working and hoping that somebody will either get mad enough or brave enough to come forward and give us some information," he said.

Residents have told investigators a man who lives in the area has bragged of setting the fires, but Dunkin said no one will identify him out of fear he will see them talking with officers and torch their houses.

"Once you determine a fire's cause, you work it just like any other police matter," Dunkin said. "But if people in the neighborhood don't help, it's very difficult."

One neighbor who asked not to be identified said her neighbors are beginning to get "desperate."

"We have watched house after house burn," she said.

Five of the fires, which date back to March 5, 1981, were "definitely arson," Dunkin said. Several other house fires in a 10- to 15-block area also may have been set, though investigators have not determined the exact causes of the blazes, he said.

All the fires but one were in inhabited houses, but so far, no one has been hurt in any of the blazes.

The latest fire caused about $20,000 in damage to a house Sunday night.

"We've got a suspect... but at this point that's all he is a suspect," Dunkin said. "All we've got is some hearsay."

The fire investigator said burglary apparently was the motive for at least one of the fires, but investigators so far have been unable to establish a definite pattern or discover solid links.

The word around the neighborhood, residents say, is that the man, whom they describe as "strange" although they have never spoken to him, has threatened to "wipe out" the block of 3100 Hutchison.

Several of the fires, including the latest one, were set on that block.

Dunkin said no one who actually has heard the threats has come forward, and a police canvass of the area unearthed no solid information.

If neighbors are afraid to have investigators come to their homes, "we'll be glad to meet with them anywhere, anytime," he said.

Names in the News

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby, who dropped out of Temple University in his junior year but started his career joking about its football team, has been elected to the school's Board of Trustees.

Cosby wasn't present for the election Tuesday, but he is expected to attend the inauguration of Temple's new president before the end of the month, said William Seyler, secretary of the board.

Cosby left Temple in 1962 to go into show business. He soon included jokes about the pain and suffering of playing college football — especially against a tough team from Hofstra.

"He was an outstanding track man," said his former track coach, Gavin White, who was appointed Temple athletic director over the weekend. "He called me today and we congratulated each other."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has refused to throw out a studio lawsuit seeking $45 million from two former stars of the "Dukes of Hazzard" television show, Thomas Wopat and John R. Schneider.

The action by Warner Bros. Inc., a counterclaim to a suit filed by the actors, contends they failed to turn up in June to begin work for the 1982-1983 television season in June. The court, in an order processed Tuesday, denied without comment the actors' request to dismiss the action.

The two stars filed suit in May, claiming they were being "defrauded out of substantial merchandising royalties" stemming from the TV series. They claimed Warner Bros. had breached their contract, thus excusing them from having to appear for the season's start.

The following month, Warner Bros. filed a counterclaim, alleging the actors had breached their contract. The suit asked for $45 million in damages and threatened to seek an injunction barring the pair from working for anyone else.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hu Na, the teen-age Chinese women's tennis star who is seeking political asylum in the United States, has been granted a work permit.

David Ilchert, regional director of the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Tuesday he approved the 19-year-old's application for a permit because she "demonstrated economic need."

Ilchert will make the final decision on Miss Hu's asylum request after weighing an upcoming State Department advisory opinion on the application. He could not say whether the opinion would be issued.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition to campaign for nuclear disarmament has been drawn from 26 national organizations with a combined membership estimated at 18 million.

Terry Herndon, executive director of the National Education Association, announced at a news conference Tuesday the formation of Citizens Against Nuclear War. It brings together 26 union, religious, environmental, academic, ethnic and women's organizations.

At the same time, the governing board of Common Cause told its 220,000 members in a letter of its decision to commit the "citizens lobby" to "a hard-hitting, long-term campaign to press for negotiations and ratification of international agreements to end the nuclear arms race."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Midwest fast-food hamburger chain that promises to deliver burgers anywhere has supplied 3,000 of them to the U.S. Marines on peacekeeping duty in Lebanon.

The shipment of burgers, at no cost to the Pentagon, was the brainchild of Steve Allen, of WDJX in Dayton, Ohio, who said the idea came to him after he read recent reports that the 1,200 Marines were eating cold meals while French troops on duty in the area were dining on gourmet food.

Allen said he called officials at the White Castle restaurant chain to ask them to donate burgers and the officials enthusiastically agreed. The burgers left Dayton last Saturday and were flown to Beirut International Airport free of charge by Emory Air Freight.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The movie industry says that an Opinion Research Corp. poll found that 66 percent of parents with children under age 12 think the rating system for movies is useful.

The system ranks the suitability of films by four degrees: G for general audiences; PG for parental guidance; R for restricted to children accompanied by adults; and X for no admission for children.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Refugees who apparently don't want police in their neighborhood sacrificed several animals to put a voodoo curse on a proposed police department headquarters, authorities say.

"This is symbolic of the Santeria religion," said assistant Dade County medical examiner Dr. Charles Wetli after the remains of a goat, chicken and black-and-white bird were removed Monday night.

81-year-old ice skater glides through bumpy life

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Lunchtime shoppers and hungry office workers who crowd the eateries and stores surrounding the Plaza of the Americas' indoor ice-skating rink often marvel at the frail gentleman in the weathered straw hat gliding across the ice.

Those who get close enough to the ice can hear some younger women shout "Jimmy's here!" or "There's our teacher!"

Jimmy wraps an experienced hand around the waist of a pretty, 33-year-old blonde and dances her around the ice.

"She feels like 19," quips the savvy 81-year-old.

Jimmy comes to the ice most days around noon for pleasure and exercise, offering skating tips — and his views on life — to anyone who asks.

"To be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind," is his motto.

A former war prisoner with a riches-to-rags past, "Shanghai Jimmy James" has encountered plenty to disturb him.

Yet, he says, "I have no such a thing as animosity."

The man who brought "chili rice" to Dallas, Shanghai Jimmy was once the wealthy owner of the exotic Mandarin Club restaurant in Shanghai, China. He acquired his nickname from an American journalist after his 28-year residency in the Orient.

Jimmy was in his hometown of Jackson, Minn., celebrating his parents' golden wedding anniversary, when his fortune, worth perhaps half a million dollars, suddenly was swept away.

"I left Shanghai in October 1948 with just one suitcase," says Jimmy. "When I got ready to go back in January, the communists had taken over China and everything I owned."

Had it not been for the communists, Dallas may never have been introduced to Jimmy's chili rice, his own concoction of Texas chili over rice.

Jimmy arrived in China in 1920 with the 15th U.S. Infantry. While stationed at Tientsin, North China, Jimmy used his boyhood-acquired ice-skating expertise to win a skating contest for his battalion.

After his Army discharge in 1922, Jimmy planned to finish his global tour by working his way home on a ship.

"I intended to go to Shanghai and get a job on an American boat and go west some more to complete the trip around the world," he says.

When he discovered the American steamship companies hired only Chinese crews, Jimmy drifted awhile — working as a jailer in Shanghai and with an engineering firm assigned the task of rechanneling the Yellow River.

Although as a boy he had worked mopping floors in a restaurant, Jimmy says, "I had no inkling I would even be in the food business some day."

But the opportunity arose and Jimmy snatched it. Over the next 28 years he would marry a Canadian woman and raise two daughters while his restaurant interests would grow from a sandwich stand in Chefoo, North China, to diners known as "Jimmy's Kitchen" to the posh Shanghai Mandarin Club, which he decorated with Oriental rugs weaved with real gold threads, fine wood furniture and ornate ivory and jade carvings typical of an upper-crust Chinese home.

During those years, he also tried his luck at operating an amusement park, dancing school and radio station. Those later folded, as did his marriage.

By 1930, Jimmy had made enough money to take a nine-month cruise around the world. But instead of sailing home to the United States, Jimmy returned to Shanghai.

"The living was so good," he says. "You get used to that. Why would you want to live anywhere else?"

In 1943, Jimmy was taken prisoner by the Japanese and interned for 2 1/2 years five miles west of Shanghai. He was released in 1945 only to lose everything four years later when Mao Tse-tung's communists took power.

After that devastating blow, Jimmy moved to Tyler, Texas. He was so broke at one time he couldn't afford to eat, Jimmy recalls.

But, he says, "I never lost hope. Around the corner there's always going to be something."

So, at age 48, Jimmy started over with a hot dog stand in Tyler and barely $7 to make change.

Although he never was able to repeat the financial success attained in China, Jimmy earned a respectable following of chili rice lovers when he opened "Shanghai Jimmy's Chili Rice" on Dallas' Greenville Avenue in 1953. He later moved the business to other locations before finally closing it in the late 1970s.

A record album produced by Jimmy titled "How to Make Good Texas Chili" features music to make chili by on one side and chili recipes on the flip side.

Truck and rail help fulfill writer's dream of lifetime

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — One of my dreams of a lifetime came true the other day, via rail and truck freight from the heartland of America: a handsome golden oak rollout desk.

Every newspaper scribbler worth his weight in bent paperclips dreams of pouring out his soul at a rollout desk, perhaps in fanciful homage to Benjamin Franklin or Mark Twain or the feisty weekly newspaper editor he means to become when the rat race has run its course.

Norman Rockwell always portrayed editors in green eyeshades tipping back in their swivel chairs at cluttered rollout desks.

Ben Hecht's and Charles MacArthur's stage directions for "The Front Page," the best play ever written about this overly romanticized biz, specifically call for "one elegant item" in the disorderly press room of the Chicago Criminal Courts Building: "a huge ornate black walnut rollout desk."

Where else could star reporter Hildy Johnson hide the escaped prisoner Earl Williams?

The desk of my heart's desire isn't black walnut and doesn't have room enough beneath its rolling top to sequester a jockey on the lam from pulling up his nag in the fifth at Belmont, but it's a thing of beauty fulfilling dreams within dreams.

Harry and Helen Obitz, who have been fanatically involved in restoring Red Cloud, Neb., to the way it was when Willa Cather lived there from 1884 to 1890, found the desk at an auction in Kearney, Neb. Now, Willa Cather happens to be my favorite American novelist. It was while visiting her restored home in Red Cloud that I told Harry and Helen about my lifetime ambition to someday peek away at a rollout desk, just as I'm doing right now.

The desk they happened on not only dates to Willa Cather's time but may even have played a part in her real life and the fiction she wove from it. Made in London, it originally belonged to Silas Garber, the third governor of Nebraska who erected the Farmers and Merchants' Bank Building on Webster Avenue, the main stem in Red Cloud.
