The couple was eventually divorced, and all but one of their children now live in Milwaukee, near their mother.

One of his sons, George "Willy" West, began searching for his father as a teen-ager in 1958. He spent nearly a quarter-century running classified ads and following up leads. He finally located West through a Baldwin, Mich., woman who was Emma's aunt.

Mrs. West didn't know at first whether to tell her husband that his first family had found him, fearing the shock might weaken him. The news came last month when West's son George called their own 24-year-old son, also named George.

West was frightened at the news, his wife recalled, wondering if his first children might want to kill him for

School tax process starts all over

Staff Writer

The Pampa school board will start all over in adopting the school district tax rate, because the procedure the board used to officially adopt the rate the first time was illegal

Even though the proposed property tax revenues which fund the current school budget were thrown out by the board Tuesday night, the board will not reconsider its previously approved $10,173,366 spending plan.

· The board has restarted the procedure of adopting a school tax rate toward funding the budget, but the budget will stand as approved. according to Superintendent James opportunity to voice opinions on the school plan to raise and spend taxes during a public hearing at 5 p.m., Sept. 16 in the Carver Educational Center.

The school board held its first public hearing on the budget and tax rate on August 12th.

But since the State Property Tax Code was violated when the tax rate was adopted," the school's lawyer advised the board it must conduct the public hearing again.

Asked how the district can have a valid budget when a major portion of the revenues to fund it were declared invalid by the board Tuesday. Trusty said the budget and tax rate were previously approved as "separate items" as required by law

But when the school budget was first introduced at a board meeting August 3rd, the only item listed on the meeting agenda was the "published tax rate."

And again when the public hearing was held August 12th, when more than a dozen Pampans protested planned expenditures in the school budget, the only item on the meeting agenda was the "proposed tax rate.

The only time the budget and tax rate were considered as separate items by the board was when the panel gave final approval to both items August 17th.

Board President Ken Fields was also asked after Tuesday's meeting how the district can have an invalid tax rate, but a valid budget, and the leader said he would have ''no comment

Asked if he would discuss any of Tuesday's board action, the president said. "I think the action of the board during the public meeting speaks for

Trusty made a statement prior to Tuesday's board decision to start over in adopting the current fiscal year's school tax rate:

"When the effective tax rate and estimated unemcumbered fund balance was published in the public notice section of The Pampa News on July 19th, the actual calculations used to determine the effective rate were inadvertently omitted.

"Mr. Jimmy Thompson, school attorney, advised that the effective tax rate, with calculations, and the unencumbered fund balance be republished and that the complete procedure be redone to set the actual

"He also verified that the 1982 - 83 budget was approved as a separate item and does not have to be reapproved.

"The administration recommends that the board approve the republication of the notice to propose an increase in taxes of 7.9 percent over the effective rate and that the public hearing on the tax increase be held," Trusty told the board before it approved the recommendation

Under the procedure required by state law to adopt a tax rate, the school board must follow several strict legal steps, including the public hearings. and legal notices to citizens.

Rand has since republished the effective tax rate, including his calculations.

The effective tax rate is basically that rate which will create the same total tax levy as the previous year. The tax rate which was previously approved, but declared invalid Tuesday, is 63.9 cents per $100 valuation, an increase over the previous 62 cents per $100. The proposed tax rate hike will increase school taxes on a $30,000 home about $6 per year.

School surplus funds of about $1 million were not listed in the approved $10.1 million school budget.

In other action Tuesday the board awarded a $10,000 bid for overhead doors and hired Jema Allen as a middle school science teacher and high school swim coach.

Raining young cowboys and fun

It rained young men at the annual Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Rodeo last weekend, but it also was a good time for a record number of people...estimated at 10,000 for the two-day event. Justin Waldrip, 16, won the senior boys all-around championship (he's the son of the ranch superintendent), and the junior all-around title was superintendent), and the junior all-around title was taken by Terry Elliott, 14, for the second year in a row. Three hundred young ranchers tried out for the rodeo this year, but only 135 of them qualified for the giant annual event at the site of Old Tascosa. The rodeo serves a dual purpose, giving visitors a look at the unique facility that gives troubled boys a home, and raising some of the money needed for operation of the 10,000 acre spread. Staff Writer PANHANDLE — Two Carson County jail inmates who broke out Tuesday morning were picked up by Oklahoma deputies Tuesday afternoon after an

David Lynn Dull, 26, and Frankie E. Featherston. 18, escaped from their third - floor cell in Panhandle's county courthouse at about 2 a.m., using a lockpick, said Carson County Sheriff Connie Featherston and Dull were being held there pending transport to Huntsville state prison.

Featherston was held for violating probation on a burglary charge, Reed said, and Dull's parole had been revoked after his conviction on car theft

Reed said Featherstone had been in Carson County jail for "three weeks to a month" and Dull for "a couple of months" previous to their escape. "They got a little piece of brass from somewhere... but I don't know where," Reed said.

He said the metal may have come from electrical equipment, and the prisoners probably sharpened it by grinding it on the concrete floor of the cell.

'One of them appears to be a pretty good locksmith, but I didn't know that," Reed said. They used the tool to "tip the tumblers in the lock." he said, then tiptoed in their stocking feet down to the ground floor of the building. They took a walkie - talkie, valued at about "600 to 700 dollars," he said, then opened a bathroom window at the back of the building and climbed out. Once they got out of the cell, said Reed, "it

The two were not in the jail's maximum security cells. "They're not dangerous - type guys. They're just plain old thieves," Reed said.

"They were gone about two hours before we realized they were missing," he said. A janitor at the jail discovered the open window at about 4:30 a.m., after the two men had behind tall weeds in a wheat field near the Damon Lynn Cox. 19, of 1105 S. Dwight, was indicted on one count of aggravated robbery and one count of burglary.

Cox is charged with the Dec. 19 holdup of Norma Jean Rhoades and the June 12 break - in of the Pampa High School.

Rhoades was robbed during the last Christmas shopping season as she was leaving the J.C. Penney's department store at the Pampa Mall.

The indictment states that $10 in cash was taken at gunpoint from Rhoades when a man demanded her purse at gunpoint

Cox was arrested August 5 and charged with involvement in the Pampa High School burglary.

When Pampa police recovered laboratory scales from that break - in during a drug bust, they said, they gained information leading to Cox as a

Soliz was charged with the burglaries after a driving - while intoxicated arrest by sheriff's deputies

The discovery of a stolen gun in his car led to a search of his residence in which about $3,500 in stolen goods were found.

Soliz' bond is set at $10,000 for each of the three charges.

David Riley Thompson II was indicted for the August 30 burglary of the residence of Deborah Hendrick.

More unemployed overflow offices

By DAVID CHRISTENSON Staff Writer

Because the unemployed in Pampa are overcrowding the Texas Employment Commission offices at the Coronado Center, the location for taking unemployment benefit claims has been changed, employment office officials announced. Beginning Monday, Sept. 13, all initial or continuing claims will be taken at the Pampa branch of Clarendon College, 900 N. Frost St., according to employment office manager Charles Vance.

All such claims will continue to be handled on Mondays beginning at 9:30 a.m., and will be processed by workers from the commission's Amarillo office.

"The volume is such that we can't handle the crowd." Vance said. "It's just increased to the point where this office is too small for it.

Pampa's unemployment was officially listed at 6 percent just before the layoff of 147 workers at Ingersoll - Rand Oilfield Products' mobilrig division.

Since then, Vance has estimated that the rate here is probably over 8 percent, and may be approaching the national average of 9.8 percent, but no official figures for more recent periods are available yet.

National unemployment figures seemed to level off this summer, however, and a rise in stock market buying coupled with a lowering of interest rates has had national analysts talking about an economic Vance said "If we don't get any more mass layoffs, we may be having the same trend.

Employment in businesses that are not directly related to oilfield activity has held steady, he said.

Religious group asks unwed mothers for their babies

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - The Tony and Susan Alamo Foundation is distributing brochures urging unwed mothers to give their babies to the religious organization rather than have an abortion

The literature has been found in Chicago, Dallas and Pine Bluff.

The brochures have caused concern among several child welfare agencies, including the state Department of Social Services, because of laws forbidding parents from giving up their children to unlicensed agencies.

Adalene Patterson of Social Services' general services division said the foundation has not sought a license to operate a residential child care center. The license would guarantee that the foundation is meeting rules assuring the adequate care and supervision of the children

"I don't know what steps we'll take, but we'll do something," she said Tuesday. "We have to investigate

Several years ago, a social services employee interviewed the Alamos, she said, because of rumors that several children whose parents weren't at the compound were living there. The investigation ended after the government worker was told the children belonged to young adults who belonged to the foundation.

Tony Alamo, whose wife, Susan, died in April, said in an interview Tuesday that Alamo members were distributing the brochures in every town in the country and with the support of millions of volunteers. Those supporters, he said, included people in the medical profession and those active in anti-abortion groups.

The foundation is willing, Alamo said, to pay the medical expenses of the unwed mothers to have their children. The foundation, he said, also would care for a child if a mother didn't want the baby. The organization welcomes unwed mothers, but only if they agree to its doctrine. "Women are welcome if they want to serve the Lord," Alamo

Several pregnant women have come to Alamo, the organization's western Arkansas headquarters, but Alamo said no babies had arrived without their mothers. "We've been doing this only two or three months," he said. In an interview with a Chicago reporter. Alamo said at least 100 children had been surrendered to the foundation. The foundation has about 200 to 300 members. At least 75 children also live on the compound.

Huge suit settled for $45 million

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - In what a lawyer says is the largest civil suit settlement ever by a single U.S. company, Mead Corp. has agreed to pay $45 million to end an antitrust case brought by buyers of corrugated

The settlement announced Tuesday would, with court approval, end litigation that began more than five years ago in federal court in Houston The original class-action suit sought damages for 200,000 purchasers of corrugated containers, Stephen

Susman, an attorney for the plaintiffs, said in Houston on Tuesday The civil case eventually was narrowed to 8,500 plaintiffs, said Dudley P. Kircher, a Mead vice president for communications.

The civil suit in U.S. District Court in Houston was the outgrowth of grand-jury indictments sought by the federal Justice Department in 1978 against 14 companies, including Mead.

He said that of those 14 companies, 12 entered no contest. He said Mead and Container Corp. went to criminal trial and were found innocent.

Mead's chairman and chief executive officer, Burnell R. Roberts, said in announcing the civil settlement: "Our decision to settle the case out of court was especially difficult because we believe the company and its people have obeyed both the spirit and the letter of the law as was proven in the related criminal case in which Mead was found innocent.

"The decision to settle was based solely on the conclusion that it is in the best interests of our shareholders to settle the case rather than to pursue costly and protracted litigation," Roberts said

In 1979, Kircher said, Mead and 33 other companies were named in the civil class-action suit. The civil case included the same companies in the criminal case, plus others, Kircher It was alleged that the companies conspired to raise the prices of corrugated containers. Mead was the last remaining

Citizens Party will be on ballot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Citizens Party has won the right to have its candidates listed on the November

The group had collected enough signatures on a petition to win a spot on the slate, but Secretary of State David Dean rejected the petition because most of the names were not accompanied by voter registration

"But we're not dealing strictly with the convenience of the secretary of state," said State District Judge Harley Clark, who granted the party an injunction Tuesday. "It seems like what we're trying to serve are the people of Texas.

Bob Poteet, co-chairman of the party and its candidate for governor, wept outside the courtroom after Clark's decision. "We fought so hard and so long,"

Poteet said. "We just had to do it." The party's lawsuit against the state called the requirement for voter registration numbers an "onerous, burden" on small, minority political parties.

The party gathered 29,000 names on its petition. Only 23,000 are required. Gathering the signatures was a piece of cake compared to trying to find the voter registration numbers," Poteet said.

Poteet said that, in addition to his race, the Citizens Party has candidates running for U.S. Senate, Congress, the Legislature, railroad commissioner and Travis County commissioner.

Hearing set on county budget

CANADIAN — A public hearing on Hemphill County's proposed 48 percent tax rate increase will be held at 8:30 a.m. Thursday at the commissioners' courtroom in the courthouse.

Commissioners are asking the tax rate increase from 17 to 25 cents per $100 property county's proposed $4,873,041 1982 - 1983 budget, plus an anticipated 1982 deficit of Commissioners hope with the new rate to cover the new budget and the deficit, and leave a working balance in the bank for the county.

Technicians work Tuesday on the 37 - foot financed U.S. rocket. Space Services Inc.

Failure of a battery and of a space guidance instrument has forced the launch of the first privately financed U.S. space rocket to be postponed until Thursday, officials say, Space Services Inc. of America announced the postponement Tuesday night, just 12 hours before the planned 10 a.m. CDT launch of the Conestoga I rocket.

Mission director Donald K. Slavton, a former astronaut, said the launch team first found a failed battery and then discovered a faulty gyroscope - a guidance instrument aboard the 37-foot-tall rocket Tuesday

He said the battery was replaced and that the gyroscope could also be replaced by working through the night. But Slayton decided instead on the postponement to give his 31-man launch team time to rest.

"The same guys that do the checking also do the repairs and they are getting run down," said Slayton. "We decided to fall back and regroup so they could recharge their batteries.

The Conestoga I rocket is built around the second stage of a Minuteman missle. It is designed to make a 101/2-minute suborbital flight to an altitude of 192 miles, then splash into the Gulf of Mexico 321 miles from its island launch pad. Space Services founder and board chairman David Hannah said launch of the Conestoga is "pivotal" to success of the company. The Houston real estate investor said the launch must be successful for Space Services to go on with plans to assemble a launch system capable of putting satellites company's ability to assemble and launch a spacecraft, Slayton said. Such maneuvers must also be performed during the launch of an orbital satellite, he said.

Hannah, during an earlier news conference, said Space Services "was on trial" in the Conestoga project because of the failure last year of another rocket system. ' -

The Houston company paid for the assembly of a liquid-fueled rocket and was preparing to launch it from another Matagorda Island pad when the vehicle exploded during a pre-launch test. The rocket, called Percheon, disintegrated in a

He predicted that if the Conestoga launch is successful, his company could have a satellite launching system operating by 1984 with up to one launch a month thereafter. But he admitted no customer has yet to sign a contract with the company.

Hardin the moneysaver

I suppose we should be grateful when a public servant saves the taxpayer some bucks. It happens now and then, and usually with an accompanying sigh of wallet relief.

But there never was a corner-cutting bureaucrat to compare to the cost savings given all of us by District Attorney Guy of us Hardin

He is able to save us money by simply not bringing many criminal cases to trial

He almost slipped with the Leta Louise Jones case. Here was a woman who admitted poisoning some co-workers out at Cabot, and Hardin very nearly took her through the expense of an attempted murder trial. But at the last minute, Cop-A-Plea (just call him Cap) Hardin discovered he had nothing more substantial on the woman than a bunch of witnesses and a confession, and he recommended she be allowed to plead guilty to an assault charge. She did. She was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 and to stay out of trouble for a year. After all, she said she didn't intend

There was an even closer case recently, when Hardin's office did take Joseph Rowsey to court and charged him with murder Fortunately, Hardin's office failed to provide a motive for the murder, and the defendant was acquitted in record time. And we still don't know who did it.

In other cases since he took office, he recommended probation in exchange for a guilty plea to a charge of involuntary manslaughter while intoxicated, and offered probation in return for a guilty plea to a charge of burglary.

All these things saved the taxpayers some money, granted. But Hardin is a part-time prosecutor. We pay him only $36,000 each year to prosecute the cases in this area. This leaves him free to continue in private practice in Shamrock whenever he has time. To hire someone full time would cost $42,000. There are times when the extra six grand sounds like a bargain, we must admit.

And much of the blame for this shoddy workmanship falls on Hardin's shoulders, but there is more, too

Hardin was appointed district attorney by Governor Bill Clements because no one else would take the job. Period. No one.

Why is it so difficult to find a person able and eager to protect the community? We frankly don't know. But one area attorney said in confidence the reason was the people in the community themselves.

What good does it do to present a good case to a local jury and then have the jury put the guy back on the street." he said

Maybe a good portion of the blame falls in our own laps And now an important trial is upon

As hard as "Cap" Hardin tries, he might have to spend some of the $36,000 we pay him to be a part-time prosecutor this week.

They're selecting a jury down in Lubbock this week for the retrial of Paul Berry Bush on a murder charge. It now looks as though he'll be forced to go ahead and actually take the case before a jury. expensive as that may be.

Hardin offered Bush a life sentence, according to one witness, if he'd only cop a plea to murder and save all that expense.

Bush is charged with shooting a deputy sheriff to death at close range with a couple of loads from a shotgun while burglarizing a pharmacy in Canadian.

Bush's prior conviction on the same charge, and the fact he'd already been sentenced to death for the crime evidently bore no weight in the decision.

But Bush said no to a deal with Hardin. Bush would rather take a chance on getting the death penalty or going scott free as the result of Hardin's prosecution.

Maybe Bush knows something we

Don't give up the fight

President Reagan created the Office of Information and Regulation Affairs, and gave OIRA the job of reviewing ne regulations in the proposal stage, with an eye to scaling back or elimating some of these rules before they got on the books. The time and money saved on paperwork and compliance would be spread throughout society, and curbing regulations would not show up immediately in the GNP of the deficit, but over the long run, few Reagan initiatives offered more promise for less investment.

Although OIRA's efforts in 1981 were modest (it challenged only a tenth of the proposed regulations and approved half of those after minor changes), it did help. Administration spokesmen have crowded that 27 spercent fewer regulations got onto the books in 1981 than in the last year of the Carter administration. The claim that this reduction in regulation saved consumers, businesses, and state and local governments more than $3 billion in annual recurring costs and at least $7 billion in one - capitol expenditures.

That's a good start, but the cost of complying with federal regulations was still put at about $120 billion last year, and that's money that might have gone to creating jobs. There's much still to be done. The bad news is that in recent months the drive to cut back unnecessary regulation has slowed down, according to the July 19 issue

Shortly after assuming office, of U.S. News and World Report That's always a danger in government. People approaching a new task with vigor often find their enthusiasm waning as the size and complexity of the job becomes more apparent, and as stubborn opposition mobilizes to fight even modest reforms. Futhermore, Reagan's regulatory monitors are themselves, like it or nor, federal bureaucrats. and subject to the all - too - human tendency to adapt to, even imitate their surroundings.

> Perhaps what the regulation fighters need is a wider mandate, a license to recommend existing regulations for repeal, or at least major surgery. They would have a happy hunting ground. The Code of Federal Regulations now runs to 90,000 pages of small type, almost four times the number of 30 years ago. Surely some of those regulations have outlived their usefulness. become irrelevant, proven to have unintended and unfortunate side effects or (just perhaps) should never have been enacted in the first

The federal paperwork burden already is unacceptably high. Americans will spend 1.338 billion hours filling our various federally mandated forms in 1982 (the biggest single item being 197 million hours in individual income tax returns). That's down from 1.534 billion hours in 1981, but still needs to be reduced.

The battle against the federal behemoth has barely begun.

Labor of the pipeline

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

NEW YORK (NEA) - There are a lot of things to be said about this country's current dispute with its European allies over thier use of American technology to build the Soviet gas pipeline, the first of which is that the United States doesn't come to the argument with entirely clean hands.

We are selling millions of bushels of grain to the Soviet Union every year, and making a very tidy profit on the deal. So it is perfectly understandable, in human terms, why the major nations of Western Europe should think there is something just a little hypocritical in our current outrage over their contract to build a gas pipeline for the Soviet Union and take payment in the form of future deliveries of natural gas.

Still, President Reagan is quite right to point out that we are demanding cash on the barrelhead for our grain, while France, Germany, et al. are giving Russia generous credits with which to buy its pipeline

Moreover, though even our grain undeniably strengthens the Soviet ecomony, selling the world's premier dictatorship food isn't in quite the same moral class as beefing up its industrial infrastructure the way the pipeline. with all its attendant nework of roads, settlements, airfields, etc. will do.

But there is yet another factor to be taken into consideration in connection with the pipeline, and it weighs most heavily of all against our European friends: Human hands are going to have to build this pipeline. Whose will

The Soviet Union's apologists are fond of pointing out that there is no unemployment in the Workers' Paradise, and indeed there isn't' Unemployment is a crime, called "parastitism," and anybody convicted of it is subject to a prison sentence. He thereupon becomes a member of the vast population of prison labor upon which the Soviet economy has depended from the very start.

Slave labor is an ancient technique, and America will never quite eradicate the stain of its own early involvement with this brutally simple means of keeping labor costs low. But the Soviet Union is the only important nation on earth (with the possible exception of Red China) that in the fourth quarter of the 20th century still depends upon the forced labor of prisoners, political and otherwise, to underpin a substantial part of its economy.

It took Alexander Solkzhenitsyn's "The Gulag Archipelago" to shake most Westerners into an awareness of the vast extent of the Soviet prison system. But the same author's "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" had earlier described in vivid detail from personal experience, how that system works. Listen to Solzhenitsyn's account of the start of a typical workday:

"The sun came up, red and hazy, over the empty compound ... Gang 104 went to the repair shops, where they'd put window panes in last autumn, and Gang 38 was making concrete blocks. Some of those blocks were lying around in their molds, others were standing upright, and there was steel meshwork for reinforcing the concrete. There was a high roof and an earthen floor, and it never really got warm here. But it was heated and they weren't stingy with the coal - not so people could get warm. but so the blocks would set better...

"Now then!" Tyurin looked around. 'Are you all here, 104?' And not checking or counting - because nobody could have gone anywhere - he started giving them their working orders in a hurry. He sent the two Estonians and Klevshim and Gopchik to get the big cement - mixer from nearby and take it

Sports drug tests needed

Ahtletes across the country, especially football players, have been admitting to drug use and are checking into drug treatment

San Diego Charger owner Gene Klein, for one, wants to know how widespread the problem is. He announced recently that the Chargers will begin periodic testing of players for drug use. There is no question in our minds that Klein and other owners ought to have this right. After all, they are the ones who are paying athletes exorbitant salaries and they are the ones who can rightfully expect them not to poison their bodies with drugs.

But the players' association, which has characterized drug testing as dehumanizing, opposes this necessary change it has filed charges of unfair labor practices against the Chargers, and will instruct players not to participate in the program. The issue must be dealt with by negotiators for the owners and players at the bargaining table. There the players must realize that, even if drug testing is a bit dehumanizing, it is in their interest,

Their reputations will only suffer if the public believes that professional sports are a haven for drug abusers.

clear the snow from around the plant, by the entrance to the generator room, and inside it, and from the ladders. He told another two to get the coal stove going there and to pinch some boards and chop them up. One man was to take cement there on a small sledge. Two were to carry water, two had to bring sand, and another had to clear the snow off the sand and break it up with

That is the way the Soviet pipeline is going to be laid, inch by painful inch.

I have great respect for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. but I cannot help feeling that the deal she is closing with the masters of the Kremlin, and which will be consummated with the forced labor of many thousands of gangs like 104, ill accords with her neatly - coiffed image let alone with the socialist compassion of Fransois Mitterand, or the finely honed Social Democratic sensibility of Helmut Schmidt

They have all lain down with dogs and they are getting up with fleas.

Defrosting the economy

By ART BUCHWALD

The thing I like the best about Ronald Reagan is that he is probably one of the greatest salesmen in the country. He owes this talent to his training when he was spokesman for General Electric products. Ronnie sells Reaganomics with the same sincerity he sold appliances, and every time I watch him on television I can't help thinking he wants me to buy a new refrigerator.

If he was still working for GE this is probably how his pitch would go. "My fellow citizens,

"I am speaking to you tonight to set the record straight concerning the pricing of our new 1982 refrigerators. There has been a lot of confusion about it in the media and you, the American people, deserve to know what is going

"I'm sure you've heard that we are proposing the largest price increase in history, and I've reversed my previous policy on refrigerator rebates to get the economy moving again. Well, don't you

"We are not raising our prices on refrigerators - - we are 'reforming' them. It is the greatest icebox reform package in history, and one that will benefit everyone in this country.

When I became spokesman for GE, inflation and interest rates made it impossible for the average American to buy a refrigerator

'The reason for this was I inherited 40 years of reckless spending and fraud by previous managements who didn't care what it cost to build one. Since took this job we cut out the fat and brought our costs under control. Last year we announced a 25 percent rebate for the next three years. This price cut was our way of stimulating the sale of refrigerators, creating new employment, and making the economy

By ART BUCHWALD

"We are not going back on these rebates. But in order to get our GE house in order, we are now making certin reforms which, contrary to reports, will not hurt the old, the sick and the poor. For example we are closing the loopholes to make the cost of a refrigerator much fairer to the working man and woman. There are many people who have been throwing them in free so favored customers will buy our product. From now on everyone will pay for an ice cube tray no matter what tax bracket he is in.

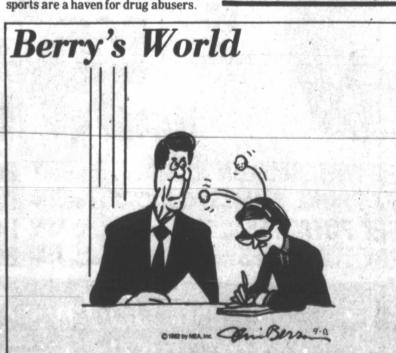

"We have added a surcharge to our vegetable compartments which will only cost the average family $2.50 a month. Our meat storage drawers will now be priced separately "There will be a slight price rise in freezer drawer shelves for people over 65 years of age, and we are asking five dollars more for those who want a place to store eggs. If you like handles on your refrigerator we will add them for a mere $20, which you will easily make up in energy costs in a month.

When I became spokesman for General Electric I promised you the best refrigerator that money can buy. With your help I can achieve this goal. Write to your dealers today and tell them that you support my efforts to move their products out of their

"The refrigerator recession is bottoming out, thanks to the firm actions my administration has taken. But without the new reform I am proposing, we will never see the light at the end of the defroster behind closed doors." (c) 1982, Los Angeles Times

Wallace in Alabama runoff, incumbents renominated in Arizona and Florida

By The Associated Press

Alabama Democrats forced former Gov. George C. Wallace into a runoff with the lieutenant governor in his bid for a record fourth term, but the one-time segregationist said he was ready for a tough fight and pledged to serve "the average citizen of both races.

In other primary elections Tuesday, Florida Republicans picked five-term congressman L.A. "Skip" Bafalis, who drew campaign support from Vice President George Bush, to face Democratic Gov. Bob Graham in November.

In the Republican contest to oppose Florida's Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles - targeted as vulnerable by the Republican National Committee - state Sen. Van Poole was forced into an Oct. 5 runoff against Palm Beach County Prosecutor David Bludworth Arizona Republicans nominated state Rep. Pete Dunn to oppose Democratic Sen. Dennis DeConcini, and state Senate President Leo Corbet to take on Gov. Bruce Babbitt. DeConcini had token opposition, and Babbitt's only rival was a dead man whose name stayed on the ballot - and who still managed to poll 14 percent of the vote.

Connecticut's only statewide primary was an unprecedented Democratic battle for the secretary of state nomination. Patricia Hendel, who claimed she was denied party backing because she is Jewish. lost to Julie Tashjian.

In Alabama, with 74 percent of 4,114 precincts counted, Wallace had 316,138 votes or 41.2 percent; Lt. Gov. George McMillan had 232,716 votes or 30.3 percent; House Speaker Joe McCorquodale had 197,299 votes or 25.7 percent, and former Gov. James E. "Big Jim" Folsom and retired attorney

Reuben McKinley divided the remainder. Although the 63-year-old Wallace failed to get the majority that would have avoided a runoff, he drew surprising support among blacks, who make up 25 percent of Alabama's population. Wallace led McMillan, a 38-year-old moderate who had key black endorsements, in Macon and Lowndes counties, both of which have predominantly black

"I've never on an easy campaign in my life because I have stood against special moneyed interests of this state," Wallace told 300 cheering campaign workers as he and his wife, Lisa, made a midnight appearance at a Montgomery motel.

Wallace, first elected in 1962 as a violent foe of integration, told his supporters that "When I was governor, I was governor of the average citizen of both races," and said he would play the same role

'We're going to have to fight to win the runoff and we're going to have to fight to win in November," said Wallace, who is paralyzed below the waist from a 1972 assassination attempt and who has seemed to most observers to lack the fire he brought to previous campaigns.

The winner of the runoff will compete in November against Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar, a hard-line conservative who seeks to be Alabama's first Republican governor this century. The incumbent governor, Democrat Fob James, did not run for a second term.

In Florida, Graham easily overcame two rivals in the Democratic primary. Wih 96 percent of the vote in, the incumbent had 765,681 votes or 84 percent; Fred Kuhn, a Homestead businessman, had 86,626 votes or 10 percent, and Bob Kunst, self-styled spokesman for Florida homosexuals, had 57,138 votes or 6 percent.

Bafalis drew 296,710 votes or 86 percent, to 46,395 votes or 14 percent for lawyer Vernon Davids.

In the Republican Senate race. Poole had 142.035 votes or 42 percent; Bludworth had 106,482 votes or 31 percent, and George Snyder, a Sarasota businessman and former Maryland state senate president had 90,778 votes or 27 percent.

In Arizona, with 73 percent of 1,350 precincts reporting, DeConcini had 104,175 votes or 83 percent to 19,956 votes or 16 percent for Caroline Killeen, a conservationist whose nickname is the "bicycling and recyling lady."

Dunn, a moderate backed by most party regulars, had 65,770 votes or 56 percent of the total,

In Pennsylvania, teachers in five districts walked off the job, joining their striking counterparts in the state are on strike, affecting about 58,000

About 2.900 teachers remained off the job in Illinois, idling about 49,000 students in six districts. In the northeastern Ohio district of North Olmstead, 270 teachers were to vote today on a contract offer to end a strike which began Sept. 1. Schools for 5,600 students have been kept open with substitutes, non-striking teachers and administrators

Most of the strikes involve salaries, with many teachers threatened by pay cuts because of high unemployment and federal cutbacks which have squeezed school budgets.

Detroit teachers rejected a strike proposal and agreed Tuesday to a three-day grace period after Detroit Federation of Teachers president John Elliot said talks were progressing. But Superintendent Arthur Jefferson said he wasn't optimistic a settlement could be reached by Friday.

Detroit's 11,000 teachers currently earn from $15,000 to $30,000. The school board is asking for an 8 percent pay cut

Yung has high hopes for Miners

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - University of Texas at El Paso football coach Bill Yung has no misconceptions about his team's chances against nationally ranked Washington, but he likes to think about the possibilities.

"If God gives us a miracle equal to the parting of the Red Sea and we win, then it will be like the shot heard around the world." he said with a chuckle.

Some folks in El Paso probably already think Yung is a miracle worker. The Miners defeated New Mexico State University, 20-17, last weekend in its season opener. It was the first time they had beaten their archrival in four years.

The victory was a needed positive note to Yung's first season at UTEP. When he came to the school last December from West Texas State University, he was given the chore of reviving the football program, ailing from two coaching changes and a history of losing.

Last year's disappointing 1-10 season was typical of the pattern at the school, which had its last winning season in 1970. Since the 1975 season, UTEP had a 8-72 record.

The victory over NMSU in the final seconds of the game have the Miners flying high this year. "But when you look at films of Washington, it brings you right back to the ground," Yung said. Saturday's game will be the season opener for the Huskies, who are returning 17 starters from their 1981 Rose Bowl champion team. "We're trying to point out the positive things that we can do." Yung said. "If we just talked about stopping Washington, we would have to issue them all .44 Magnums and tell them to blow their heads off. "Seriously, our people will get better by playing the No. 2 team in the nation," he said. "If we play them tough, then we know we're pretty competitive. If we can stay with them, we can stay with anybody. While Yung doesn't predict a victory on Saturday, he thinks the Miners will be more prepared for the Sept. 18 game against nationally ranked Southern Methodist University and the subsequent Western Athletic Conference schedule "The thing that we need is confidence," he said. "Once that confidence starts soaring, look out, anything could happen." If that sounds optimistic in view of history, it probably is. But then, so is Yung.

"I know it sounds phony, but my philosophy is I'm a Christian and then I'm a coach," he said, "I felt like this is where I'm supposed to be. I knew He wasn't going to just leave me here after He brought me out here." That belief, together with a conviction about the basics of football and a healthy respect of conditioning, may swing the

"You've just got to get that belief over to the players," he said. "They've got to believe they can play good football."

McNeil, who stands 5-foot-10 and weighs 140 pounds, plays hard on the junior varsity team at Alvarado High School, said his coach in this town 30 miles southwest of Dallas.

"I don't make any allowances for him. If he makes a mistake on the field, he gets chewed out and if he makes a good play, he gets a pat on the tail, just like anybody else," said Coach Jim Bennett. "To see a kid like Rod, and the effort he gives, makes coaching all worth while.

"He gets knocked around on the line a little, but he's a worker. He's better than adequate."

McNeil wears a homemade protective device on his arms while playing football. His grandfather designed the rubber tubing wrapped in adhesive tape that is attached to a harness around McNeil's neck

AP Sports Writer Port Arthur Jefferson Coach Mike Owens was admittedly nervous as he strode to the sidelines for his first game as a head coach

But he was quickly tranquilized by pass-happy quarterback Craig Stump and catch-happy receiver Paddy Doyle. 'As soon as the game started, I forgot all about my jitters," said Owens, who watched the pair lead the Jackets to a 33-21 victory over La Porte Stump completed 21 of 35 passes for 326 yards, a school record, and had touchdown passes of 6 and 8 yards. Dovle snagged five passes for 110 yards

"He had a few passes dropped or he would have completed over 400 yards in passing." Owens said of Stump. "He is so relaxed in the pocket and picks up his secondary receivers so well. It's a trademark of a high school quarterback to look at the receiver he's going to throw to. Craig doesn't do that.

Stump is inevitably compared to former Jefferson quarterback Todd Dodge, who passed for a school record 3,135 yards in 1980.

Doyle, a senior, averaged 25 yards per catch last season and he's near his average so far this season, Owens said. "He's got outstanding speed," the

Connors advances, Navratilova loses in U.S. Open Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) - Martina Navratilova's hopes for a Grand Slam were shattered Tuesday by her doubles partner, Pam Shriver, 1-6, 7-6, 6-2, in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships, the missing link in Navratilova's quest for greatness.

"It was the most disappointing loss, but not the most bitter," said Navratilova, who walked off center court in tears for the second straight year. "I'm glad it was Pam and not anybody else. If I have to lose, I prefer it to be to Pam.

In a night match, second-seeded Jimmy Connors eliminated Ilie Nastase of Romania 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, and advanced to the quarterfinals where he will meet Rodney Harmon, who shocked eighth-seeded Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 3-6,7-6 in an upset that ranked second only to Shriver's victory over

It was only the second loss in regular tournament play this year for Navratilova and stopped a 41-match winning streak. The loss also ended her chances of winning the $1 million Playtex Challenge, which was to go to the winner of four selected tournaments on four different surfaces

She had won the first three tournaments - the U.S. Women's Indoors on carpet in Minneapolis; the Family Circle Cup on clay at Hilton Head Island, S. C., and Wimbledon on grass - which entitleh her to half of the bonus money, or $500,000.

Navratilova blamed her loss on a virus which she said she contracted from a friend's cat during the Federation Cup in late July.

The disease, similar to mononucleosis, is called toxoplasmosis, an infection that apparently attacks the nervous system and results in muscle fatigue.

The Connors-Nastase match erupted briefly in the second game after a rain delay of 11/2 hours. Umpire Don Wiley of Redondo Beach, Calif., issued a code warning to Nastase for an "audible obscenity." With Connors at advantage on Nastase's serve, Nastase shouted as Wiley and the umpire said: "Code warning, Mr. Nastase, point penalty. Game Mr. Connors.

Nastase continued his screaming at Wiley and Connors walked around to Nastase's side of the net and calmed

After the third game, during the changeover, Nastase threw his towel and it wrapped around Wiley's neck. It began to drizzle a little, and the umpire announced there would be another

Kaff-kaff!

Panthers stalk a Tar Heel feast

By Major Amos B. Hoople Fearless Forecaster

Egad, friends, the festivities start early this week. Yas, indeed, dear readers, Pittsburgh and North Carolina get it going - kaff-kaff in a special Thursday night performance on the magic lantern. Um-kumph!

In what may well be one of the outstanding games of the entire year, the Panthers and the Tar Heels -Nos. 3 and 4, respectively, in the Hoople pre-season roundup - will square off before a capacity crowd in venerable Pitt Štadium. And a zillion or so football filberts via TV. Har-rumph! Both clubs boast exceptional offensive teams and stout defensive forces.

Leading the Pittsburgh charge is QB Dan Marino, a strong candidate for All America honors and the Heisman Trophy. He lofted 37 TD passes last year while leading the Panthers to an 11-1-0 record.

On the receiving end of the Marino missiles - hehare glue-fingered Julius Dawkins and Dwight Collins, two of the best in the land Countering for the Tar Heels are two superstars: QB Rod Elkins and TB Kelvin Bryant. Elkins, a 50 percent-plus passer, has lead North Carolina to a 21-3 record in his two seasons as a starter.

The Kelvin Bryant story remains to be told, and this week may be the start of a new and glorious chapter: Last year Bryant racked up 520 yards and 15 TDs in only nine quarters of the first three games - before disaster struck. Bryant injured a knee. He played sparingly albeit well, for the rest of the year. Hale and hearty once more. Bryant is a sure bet to put on a spectacular performance against the Panthers. Um-kumph! Less stout-hearted prognosticators than your Fearless Forecaster may be inclined to call this contest a draw. However, never one ahem - to duck a tough assignment, we are calling it for Pitt, 35-31, in a wild and wooly affair. Harrumph! Dominating the Saturday schedule are a host of top inter-sectional clashes some old inter-conference rivalries, and several match-ups of independent powers.

Here is how the Hoople System has 'em figured: In a down-to-the-wire hattle we see the homefield advantage working for the Florida Gators as they yas, dear readers upset the Southern Cal Trojans, 22-21. It will be a nip-and-tuck fray.

Ohio State, our pre-season No. 1 team, has too much for Baylor. The Buckeyes will win, 35-17.

Georgia, still feeling the loss of Herschel Walker, will fall before the aerial bombardment of Brigham Young, 35-20. Stanford's aerial-wizard John Elway will get the Cardinals off to good start as they subdue the Purdue Boliermakers, 28-21. Oklahoma's ground attack will account for a 29-13 edge over West Virginia. And Johnny Major's Tennessee Vols will slip past Iowa

Iowa surprised Nebraska last year, 10-7. But this season the Cornhuskers will even the score with a 27-17 triumph. Elsewhere, Alabama will give Bear Bryant his 316th victory as he begins his 38th year as a head coach. It's Barna, 27-12, over Georgia

Penn State, with Curt Warner rambling at will, should have little trouble taking Maryland, 36-21. Southern Mississippi, with Reggie Collier having a good day, will knock off Ole Miss, 22-20, in a heart-stopper.

SMU will give Bobby Collins his first win as boss of the Mustangs by topping Tulane, 35-20. Miami (Fla.), with Jim Kelly having a super day, will double the score on Houston, 28-14.

A trio of games in the Big

10 will see Michigan beating Wisconsin, 24-21; Illinois outscoring Michigan State, 37-21; and Indiana squeezing past Northwestern, 25-21.

In the WAC, Wyoming will roll over Colorado State, 49-17. And in the Mid-American, Toledo will spoil the season opener for Ball State, as the Rockets win, 30-14

> In a twist, George Welsh, who led Nevy to a 7-4-1 record and the Liberty Bowl in 1981, makes his first start as coach of the Virginia Cavaliers - against his old Middie charges. In what will surely be a hard-fought battle, we see Virginia winning, 17-10. Har-rumph!

Cowboys open against Steelers

DALLAS (AP) - For 17 consecutive years, the Dallas Cowboys have opened their National Football League season with a victory.

That record is on the line Monday night when the Cowboys play the Pittsburgh Steelers, who have beaten them the last four times the two teams have met.

'We have a lot of tradition with the Steelers," Landry said. "It's something special when we play them.'

When asked how he always gets his team off to such a fast start, he said. "Well, I don't think about it that much .. It's good to win that first game, but one of these days we are going to break.

I hope it isn't against the Steelers.

"I don't know," he said. "Maybe, we've just had a good schedule. If that's so, we sure fouled up this time.

Another record is on the line. The Cowboys haven't lost a playoff or regular season game in Texas Stadium since 1979, or since Danny White has been the starting quarterback.

The Steelers will have 12 rookies on the squad when they play the Cowboys, who kept six first-year men.

"Pittsburgh has made an excellent transition," said Landry. "They've got some youth in there who will pep up the oldtimers.' The Steelers have been tough in the

Fred Cianciolo beams as he stands in front of his downtown Cincinnati store. Fred's store is one of the few where shoppers can get a sneak preview of new products from the Proctor & Gamble manufacturing company.

The selling of Procter & Gamble at Freds place

By TERRY KINNEY Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Itnsits in the shadow of the Procter & Gamble building, a tiny, downtown grocery store that stocks every new product made by the giant manufacturing company that was built on a bar of Fred's Place is where consumers and P&G competitors alike go to sample the unfamiliar products that P&G hopes will take their place beside Ivory, Jif, Pampers and Charmin on the shelves of the nation's supermarkets.

The proprietor of the 20- by 60-foot store is Fred Cianciolo, who began selling fruit and vegetables at a sidewalk produce stand when he was 6 years old.

"When I first moved over here 14 years ago, they (P&G) approached me and wanted to know if I would handle their new items," said Cianciolo, 52, who followed his father and grandfather into the produce business.

'The same week I was moving into this bigger store, another one was going out of business. They were the originators, but they would only handle the (P&G) food items; I'll take anything that comes out - drugs, medicine ... soaps, shampoo.

spokeswoman Kathy Gilbert. "He (Cianciolo) is not at all a test market. There just wouldn't be enough sales, market or people for a test Our people don't get any free samples; with 40,000 (employees) in the U.S., our shareholders would go crazy.

"Every once in a while, I accidentally find out about something I'm really not supposed to know," says Cianciolo.

I know the next thing they're going to come out with is toothpaste in a dispenser, which sounds like a pretty neat idea," he says, showing off some of the products

"This stuff (Rejoice, a hand lotion), this is going out in about 10 months because it's not making enough money for them.

'But this one here is going to be a good one - butter (flavored) Crisco.'

Cianciolo began working with his grandfather when he was 6, and ran a fruit stand by himself when he was 9. His father, who is 80, still has a produce stand in Cincinnati's historic Findlay Market, and a cousin runs a wholesale produce business.

Fred's Place does about one-third of its business around noon at its delicatessen counter, and Cianciolo his store because it is a P&G outlet. Two current big sellers — not yet generally available in other parts of the country - are a bathroom tissue called Certain, and Brigade, a toilet bowl cleanser that Cianciolo predicts "is going to be a tremendous item.' "I try most of the products myself." he said. "But there are very few free samples.

After P&G decides to mass market an item, Cianciolo has to buy it like anyone else - at a supermarket.

"I usually do all right until it goes on the open market," he said. "Then it changes; they (supermarkets) sell the stuff cheaper than I can buy it, because they buy truckloads."

One of the newest products at Fred's is Ariel, a laundry detergent. Another is a cake mix designed to be cooked in a microwave oven. It can produce a cake in 10 minutes, start to finish. "I put in everything they (P&G) have got," said Cianciolo. "I usually can get all I want. The only thing they rationed me on was Pringle's," a reconstituted potato chip which sold well at Fred's Place but has not been successful "I guess you could say that Pringle's was the baby that really started this thing. Everybody came over to get Pringle's, and then they stocked all these other items in.'

Cianciolo recalls only one P&G bomb, a dessert - "Cold Snap, I think; that was the dog of dogs.

"It took so long to make it, something like over three hours; people were buying boxes just for souvenirs. But I ng rid of all of it.

Cianciolo doesn't have any pretentions about his role in the success or failure of P&G products he previews. Company executives sometimes ask him how things are going, but his opinion won't kill or save a product.

"I doubt it; I'm just a little, small plug in their operation," Cianciolo said.

Interestingly, this gender gap is also afflicting GOP politicians at the state level, a problem that could be critical in this fall's voting.

While the degree of Reagan's woman problem is negative attitude that started well-defined by numerous polls, the reasons for it are rather ill-defined.

McNichol, who led detectives on a chase that reached speeds of 100 mph and careened the wrong way down one-way streets, was charged with grand larceny of Appledorf's car, illegal possession of his credit cards and reckless endangerment because of his driving, according to police. There were no injuries in the chase.

Gainesville investigators arrived Tuesday to question McNichol. State Attorney Eugene Whitworth had said McNichol would be arraigned today and could be returned to Florida today or Friday if he waived an extradition hearing; otherwise, it could be 30 to 60 days.

The disposition of the other two cases was not known early today. Gainesville police said earlier Tuesday the case was wrapped up. "I can tell you the case is solved. We know who committed the homicide act," Gainesville police Capt. Richard B. Ward said after McNichol's arrest.

All three suspects were "well known" in New York City's gay community, police said. Authorities said they used descriptions of two people seen with McNichol at an East Side bar frequented by homosexuals to recognize and arrest Paul Everson, 19, of Roslindale, Mass., and a juvenile who was not identified because of his age. The two were taken into custody late Tuesday and early today in an area containing several gay Police spokesman John Clifford cited the "tremendous cooperation of New York's gay community" in the arrests. "The gay community was outraged" by the killing, said Lt. Joseph Pirello, in charge of Manhattan South detectives.

The killers "broke the unwritten rule in the gay community," Pirello said. "To kill a lover in a lover's quarrel is one thing, but to kill a guy after you've ripped him off....'

Appledorf, a 41-year-old bachelor, was known for his defense of fast-food chains while arguing there was no such thing as 'junk food." His head had been stuffed in an ice-filled canvas bag, and a cigarette was ground out on his stomach. In a semicircle nearby were plates and wine glasses from a ritualistic meal, police said.

The word "murder" spelled backward and forward was smeared in peanut butter on the walls of his home.

On Monday, Gainesville police said they were seeking three men involved in a recent attempt to cash a $900 check belonging to the victim. They had been released from jail Thursday after the case was settled out of court at Appledorf's request.

least a little understanding of this situation. Women's negative reaction to Reagan popped up in the polls, just after the Republican National Convention had met in July 1980 to give Reagan the nomination. It wasn't so much what Reagan did at the convention as the party platform that angered women. In a series of well-publicized decisions, the convention backed off from the party's longtime support for the ERA and strongly condemned abortion. The Associated Press-NBC polls and other surveys found women knew of these party positions and that many of those women were unhappy with them. Reagan's pollster, Richard Wirthlin, picked up this shift against Reagan as well. By early September, Reagan tried to remedy the problem by promising to nominate the first woman to the U.S.

Dentist take a bite at Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "On to Him in St. Louis," who accused the dental profession of fraud due to the advent of dental insurance. Perhaps this uninformed reader, as well as a large segment of the population, will be enlightened by the following:

No dentist in the course of an examination can willfully rack, break or dislodge a good filling unless he uses tools designed for archeological expeditions!

It is necessary for the dentist to check all fillings carefully to be sure there is no unsealed or cracked surface through which bacteria could enter and cause decay under the fillings, leading to toothaches, lost fillings and the need for root canal work or extraction of the tooth. Unfortunately, even the best of fillings may eventually require replacement due to the stresses of chewing, poor oral hygiene, improper diet, a bad bite or grinding one's teeth.

About dental insurance: It benefits the patient - not the dentist. I cannot keep track of the number of patients who have suggested that I "pad" the bill and falsify dates of services in order for them to obtain greater financial benefits than deserved. People who have neglected their teeth for years suddenly want "everything" done if their dental insurance covers it.

Also, I have never known a dentist who would participate in a "kickback" arrangement with a root canal (or any other kind of) dental specialist.

The overwhelming majority of dentists are hard-working, ethical, conscientious individuals who are interested in providing the best possible treatment for their patients and only that treatment which is necessary, regardless of insurance coverage or not!

DEAR ETHICAL: I heard from hundreds of irate dentists chewing me out for printing a letter from an obviously uninformed reader. They said that by giving that "nut" space in my column, I validated her paranoid accusations. Not so! Be assured that dentists are the last group of professionals I would intentionally alienate. I need them often to remove my foot from my mouth.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a very good Catholic. I'm a Catholic, too, but Theresa knows more about Catholicism than I do. Theresa says that if a Catholic gets divorced has automatically excommunicated from the church. Is that true?

DEAR KATHY: No. Theresa needs to update her information. At one time the divorced Catholic who remarried was automatically excommunicated. (That applied only in the U.S.) However, that ruling was changed in 1977, and it no longer applies.

DEAR ABBY: Somebody wanted to know the difference between "having sex" and "making love." Your explanation was very good. Here's mine:

"Having sex" is stopping in the middle of a passionate moment to change the TV channel. "Making love" is turning the TV off. Thank you very

JUST HAD SEX IN WINTERVILLE, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: I belong to a social club for single men and women over 60 years old. Being a man, I notice that most men look the women over and book the prettiest ones for dances right away.

Me? I look the women over, then I pick the women I think will be the least likely to be asked to dance - the plain ones. the overweight, the very tall, the skinny, or the ones who look bashful and hang back. They are my first choice.

Why? Because I find them to be the best company. Most good-looking women are inclined to be conceited, spoiled and selfish. The plain ones tend to be more thoughtful and generous. Plain women are usually smarter, too. Most pretty women never worked too hard cultivating their brains because they were able to get by on their looks.

So my advice to gentlemen is: If you want a real jewel, you will find her wrapped in a plain package.

DEAR MEL: Generalizations are generally unfair,

but your observations are worth noting.

Sports Editor's wife tells all

BY CINDA ROBINSON Lifestyles Editor

My daughter celebrated her 7th birtday last Thursday. I can remember when I was a little girl and my mom would always ask me before my birthday just exactly what I wanted for a birthday dinner and what my preference was in a cake. As far as the dinners go, I can't remember what I chose, but I do remember the cake - German Chocolate, in at least three layers with lots of goopy, coconut and pecan icing I'm sure it didn't take her over 12 hours to make, but I was never too concerned about time when I was seven years old.

My goodness, have times ever changed. This is how I handled my daughter's birthday

First, I called several of my favorite people with children and asked them over for cake and ice cream.

Second, I called the bakery and asked them to bake me a chocolate cake decorated with Smurfette. (If you have children then you've probably seen the Smurfs on Saturday morning TV. They are little blue creatures no larger than a mushroom and they speak their own Smurf language. They also decorate T - shirts, toys and trash cans - big business, Third, I went shopping on my lunch hour, picked up one Barbie pony and one stuffed Smurf, complete with baby Smurf. Included in this shopping spree was paper plates, party favors, wrapping paper, candles and hair spray. (The hair spray was for me. Fourth, I stopped at the grocery store and purchased cheese, crackers, ice, beer, soda and plastic cups. (By the way, the beer was not for the children)

Fifth, I rushed home, wrapped packages, sliced cheese, and had an instant party at 6:30 p.m.

There were no planned games for the children, although some of them tried to play pin the tail on the donkey. The only problem was that it wasn't a donkey, but a real horse. The horse was tolerant, but annoyed. We did hang halters on the walker and let them ride on it. It created a sort of merry - go round. The only problem that created was that all the little tots now want a full - size horse walker in their back yard.

The party definitely wasn't like mom used to do it, but mom didn't work when I was seven.

Enough of parties and donkeys that aren't really donkeys. Let's get into food.

The letter of the week comes from Lois Strate. Lois just happens to be the wife of L.D. Strate the sports editor for you guessed it - The Pampa News.

I bet that you're all thinking that I'm really hard up for letters and recipes and that I am soliciting letters from all the people I work with.

I am hard up for letters, but I have not been bothering my co workers or their wives. Lois sent this letter on her own and I'm sure she would testify to that in court. (Gosh, I hope it doesn't come to that).

By the way, just a little bit of gossip to make this more interesting, Lois is nine months pregnant and expecting their first child any day now.

I noticed the absence of any recipes from L.D. so I presume that he is waiting for me to furnish you with a recipe since I serve as Chief Cook and Bottle Washer at our house.

First, let me say that I don't hate to cook - actually I rate it somewhere between stepping on the doctor's scales and picking ticks off our dog! Actually. I do have an excuse, I learned it from my mother so I can blame heredity!

Now, L.D. is not void of skills in the kitchen. As a matter of fact, the last time I was sick he made me some vegetable beef soup - with MILK! Now, had I been on my death bed that surely would have pushed me over the edge! He also has mastered the art of boiling weiners (if instructions are on the package) and he knows how to heat Ravioli in a METAL pan in the microwave. Other than the ability to raid the refrigerator, I would say that his talents lie in other areas.

The recipe I am sharing with you is L.D.'s favorite dessert and was used as a secret recipe in a restaurant in Woodward when he was growing up. This recipe can be made as simple or as hard as one sees fit. Personally, I take the easy route and still reap the rewards!

BLARNEY STONES

4 eggs 2 cups flour ½ teaspoon salt

3 teaspoons baking powder

2 cups sugar

1 cup boiling water 1 teaspoon vanilla

Since it is impossible to mess up the basic cake part of this recipe. I just dump all the ingredients into a large bowl and stir until well mixed. Pour into a 13"x9"x2" greased pan and bake at 325 degrees for 40 minutes, until golden brown.

Now comes the part that can be easy or hard

ICING Mix all ingredients together. To make it easy, I make a Blarney Boulder rather than Stones. What I mean, is that I let the cake cool and then frost the cake and sprinkle with the nuts that have been chopped very fine. The hard, and preferable method is to cut the cake into 2" squares and frost on all sides (including top and bottom). This is most easily done by making a large bowl of icing and a separate bowl of chopped nuts. However, if you use this method, I usually need 2 sticks of butter, 3 packages of powdered sugar and 2 cans of mixed nuts. It is very messy and you have to stop and wipe (or lick) your hands after rolling each Blarney Stone. Place on foil and let sit. These improve in taste if you place them in the freezer for several days and then defrost. They make an attractive dessert and they go a long way as you can only eat one or two at a time as they are very rich tasting. LOIS STRATE

How many of you wives have husbands like L.D. whose 'talents lie in other areas''? Now is the time to rat on him in public. It could be fun and you may never have this kind of opportunity again. Send your true confessions to Cinda Robinson, Lifestyles Editor, The Pampa News, P.O. Drawer 2198, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Violent racial incidents shock Sweden

By PER ISAKSSON Associated Press Writer STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Burning crosses, firebombs and other anti-immigrant activity have shattered Sweden's usual summer tranquility, jolting a nation that prides itself on good relations between natives and immigrants. Worried authorities have ordered special police patrols onto streets in downtown Stockholm and have set up special programs to educate Swedes and non-Swedes about immigration.

Incidents that began in late July have carried the mark of the Ku Klux Klan and the Skinheads, groups of head-shaven young toughs who participated in race riots in Great Britain during the summer of 1981.

-In Segeltorp, a Stockholm suburb, a Chilean family who fled their country after the 1973 military takeover found a burning cross, symbol of the white supremacist Klan, on their front yard.

Since that incident, three more Klan-inspired crosses have been discovered in or near residential areas where many immigrants live.

While authorities say there is a KKK presence in Sweden, there is no evidence that it is linked with any U.S. Klan group. Its membership is believed to be tiny.

-In early August in Trollbecken, a group of men yelling racial slurs attacked a kiosk owned by Turkish immigrants, who hid inside as the youths smashed windows and doors with steel bars.

"We were terrified. We feared for our lives," owner Ozcan Sen told reporters.

-Later in the month in Kumla, 100 miles west of Stockholm, an immigrant fired a gun after repeated harassment, seriously wounding a 14-year-old boy.

-Other attacks have included stabbings, property damage and firebombs thrown into bars frequented by young immigrants. Police say many of the assaults were carried out by Swedish Skinheads, youngsters who shave their heads, wear heavy boots and say they "simply don't like immigrants.

Immigrants and their children, many of them Swedish citizens, make up about 1.1 million of Sweden's 8.3 million inhabitants. Most come from Finland, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey, but a large number of Latin Americans arrived in the 1970s.

In a newspaper article, former Immigration Board Director Kjell Oberg accused the authorities of not taking seriously immigrant complaints of harassment.

Sen, the Turkish kiosk owner, complained that it took police two hours to arrive, but police denied it. They said two officers were dispatched to the scene within 30 minutes.

"Obviously, racist violence is overshadowed in the election campaign by other issues," said Immigration Ministry spokesman Tommy Westerteg, referring to the Sept. 19 parliamentary elections, which have centered on economic issues.

Prompted by the violence, Immigration Minister Karin Andersson has met with representatives of the immigrant community to discuss how to stop it.

"We will cooperate closely with school boards and youth organizations to inform youngsters about immigration," Westerteg said in an interview.

Persuasion is not all that's being tried, however. On recent weekends, more police officers than usual patrolled downtown Stockholm to prevent fights between Skinheads and youth gangs of foreign descent.

Some people, like Polish immigrant Jerzy Szarnecki, an official of the Crime Prevention Council, maintain the racist attacks are temporary, isolated incidents. Szarnecki said he has seen no evidence of increasing anti-immigrant sentiment in Sweden.

Social workers have blamed the problems on lack of jobs for large numbers of youth and few leisure activities during the summer.

But Lajos Szecsi, aHungarian and director of the immigrants' Culture Center argud neither unemployment nor boredom is a new phenomenon.

"Actually, subtle racist tendencies exist among large segments of the population, but they very seldom lead to violence," he said.

Customs Service dogs after 'stash'

FRONT ROYAL, Va. (AP) - Corky program. One in five-and-a-half sniffs cocaine for a living.
The cops know all about it. Indeed, when he snorts a stash, they say "Good

Corky is a male Labrador retriever. He is about to graduate from the training center here of the U.S. Customs Service to join the war on narcotics as a member of the Reading, Pa., police department.

One of his classrooms was a mockup of a post office package conveyor belt. While an assistant piled packages on the belt, Corky ran to and fro sniffing, scarcely less animated than his handler at the other end of the leash. One of the boxes contained Quaaludes in a plastic packet.

"Good boy! Good boy!" cried the Corky raced back and forth on the treadmill, sniffing. Suddenly he pounced on a passing package and began chewing like he was in Sirloin City. He had found the needle in the haystack.

"Good boy!" exclaimed the handler, surreptitiously slipping a wrapped towel scented with narcotics into the remains of the package so Corky would think he got a reward.

In essence that's what the Customs dog training is all about, 12 weeks of playing fetch the stick, the stick in this case being the towel.

"The dogs who graduate are the ones who look on it as a game and never tire of it," says Tom Chowning, the Customs officer in charge of training. "Pedigree means nothing. The dog has to want to do it "

It's not dog's play. Only one in 43 candidates is accepted into the graduates. They earn their keep.

Dogs with a nose for narcotics made 4,522 seizures last year of drugs with a street value of $190 million. An average of 91 teams were at work across the country during that period for Customs and other law enforcement agencies for which this school trains.

A dog in San Ysidro, Calif., set up a hue and cry at water dripping from an ice truck. Officers followed the trail of melting ice inside to find 1,000 kilograms of marijuana. A dog sniffed a cache through a one-inch steel plate on a ship. Another sniffed through the aroma from a sealed coffee can which contained 50 grams of cocaine wrapped in a prophylactic. Good dogs, indeed.

Dogs can even trace drug scents in the seats of recently vacated airplanes. It then remains only to check the passenger seating assignments.

Customs also trains dogs to search for weapons and ammunition.

Saudi Arabia, whose strict Moslem faith enforces prohibition, wanted dogs to smell out booze. This didn't work too well. However, the Saudis are contracting for 60 dog teams to patrol for imported weapons. Asians will be the handlers, as Moslems regard dogs as unclean Chowning's biggest problem is finding recruits. Competition for trainable dogs is keen. Periodically Customs sends out talent scouts to animal shelters in big cities like Los Angeles, Chicago or New York. They have streetwise dogs whose aggressive nature has spelled survival.

The recruiters look for this as well as good condition and strong hips, a possessive nature and an instinct for retrieving.

"We've had dogs with one ear down and their tails bitten off, like in 'The Little Rascals," says Chowning. Breeding is secondary to personality.

"Dogs of the same breed are just like people. One will do better because of Ideally, the recruits are about a year-and-a-half old. "We don't like them older than three. If we can get five or six years out of a dog, that's pretty

Males are preferred because they are more aggressive although Customs is a fair employment hirer. A recent class of 62 recruits on campus, a wooded retreat in the Blue Ridge mountains, included Sam, Cookie, Spunky, Humphrey, Stretch from Port Washington, N.Y. and Fritz from Oxnard, Calif

The first days in class are spent fetching the towel which has been impregnated with the acid odor of marijuana and hashish. The dogs train with the same person throughout who feeds them and will become their handler on graduation.

Later indoctrination is done under real conditions - ships in Baltimore or airplanes and luggage at Dulles International Airport.

Customs also has its own parking lot here staffed with discarded military ambulances and assorted other junkers. The towel is tied to the undercarriages. Then the dogs are trotted up to shouts of their handlers' encouragement.

When the dog starts getting warmer the handler crawls underneath right with his animal urging it on all the while. The dog emerges with his towel, the handler without his breath.

College management is seriously flawed

By LEE MITGANG

AP Education Writer

For much of the past two years, university officials have been bemoaning higher education worsening money woes, usually blaming the federal budget cuts, a weak economy, and the dwindling supply of college-age students.

At the same time, their troubles are forcing a harder look at their institution's internal management seriously flawed - some higher education officials say, in perhaps half of the nation's 3,200 colleges. Even some college presidents concede that the biggest problems often lie within their ivy-clad walls.

Bureaucracies so needlessly bloated that teachers quit i disgust, college administrations at odds, or out of touch with, faculty and students, and above all, lack of planning, remain at the heart of higher education's difficulties.

"It is sobering to observe that the management of colleges and universities is the Number One concern of higher education," Patricia Cross, an instructor at the Harvard education school, recently wrote. And an official of a national organization whose mission is to improve college management says that 'about 50 percent of colleges, probably even higher," have serious management flaws.

A period of economic hardship has undeniably led to cost consciousness on many campuses.

Cornell University has a program,

"War on Waste," which saves the school about $225,000 a year through such measures as curbing photocopying expenses and telephone

The University of New Hampshire has begun using retired staff to fill temporary jobs, saving about $72,000. Keystone Junior College in La Plume, Pa., cut its gasoline bill from $1,500 to $350 a month by replacing trucks in its service fleet with all-terrain motorcycles.

At Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., where pennies count as at other small liberal arts colleges, the default rate on federally-funded, university-administered direct student loans has been lowered from 16.4 percent in 1977-78 to a current 3 percent. But such efforts to trim budget fat often leave untouched the roots of college mismanagement which go beyond dollars-and-cents measures. The long-term test of management, say some higher education experts, is prestige.

"It takes years in an institution's life to make its mark. The question of prestige relates to attracting research, service to the nation, selective admissions. Over the long haul, prestige determines whether students apply, and are willing to pay market rates of tuition, and whether a university is a successful fund raiser, says Jerry Miller, director of the division of academic affairs at the American Council of Education, a Washington-based higher education

"The test of good management has to do with the status and prestige of an institution. The test is not whether they're totally efficient or not," says Harland Bloland, associate professor of higher education at the University of Miami "The important question is how universities are led. The leadership of American Universities is very weak indeed," says Irving Spitzberg, general secretary of the American Association of University Professors, a union representing 74,097 professors at about 1,300 campuses.

Universities are finding out, often to their sorrow, that lax management is no longer a trivial matter - as it was frequently regarded a decade ago when inflation was mild, and dollars and students plentiful.

Some schools, especially big state university systems, today find themselves losing professors because of the perception that management has become overly bureaucratized and Until July, Lawrence Dalton was a chemistry professor at the State University of New York at Stony Brok. He says that he grew disgusted dealing with the huge bureaucracy that runs the state university system, "with rules and regulations for everything." He resigned to take a post at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

The last straw for Dalton apparently was when it took him "something like six months" to arrange for an outside fellowship for one of his students - something that U.S.C. and other well-managed universities could process in a matter of dass.

"I taught freshmen chemistry, and was literally forced to buy Magic Markers for my students. It hits you in the classroom, it hits you in getting grants and fellowships," Dalton says.

Probably the most common failing in higher education, experts agree, is lack of planning — a widespread failure by college administrators to realistically consider their schools, overall mission, and where the resources to accomplish it will come from.

Many schools draw up plans, but too few are "effective, honest and thorough," wrote Ohio University president Charles J. Ping in a recent edition of the Harvard Business Review.

Colleges may be signalling a lack of such planning, for instance, when they announce abrupt annual tuition increases, making it more difficult than necessary for students to plan the financing of their education.

Good planning, by contrast, can pay dividends to students as well as the school. Carnegie-Mellon University's sophisticated long-range planning allows the school to give students 18 months advance warning of tuition increases.

Hand-in-hand with serious planning at Carnegie-Mellon, says president Richard Cyert, is "having a budget that is really lived up to.

Some of the most richly-endowed and prestigious schools, on the other hand, have run deficits. Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been dipping into endowment funds for the last five years to balance its budget and expects to be $2 million in the red next

Columbia University, hit by years of overspending and inflation, ran 13 straight deficits from 1966 through 1979, totaling about $80 million in internal debt. They've been in the black since.

Education experts point out that deficits mean different things to different colleges. Richly-endowed schools like Columbia and M.I.T. have the luxury of time in confronting deficits. Endowment money keeps rolling in, and such schools can trim their operations gently and gradually.

But to a small, relatively young liberal arts school like Eisenho College in Seneca Falls, N.Y., a few years of deficits can be fatal. The college folded this summer.

Good management at universities can't always be rendered strictly in profit-and-loss terms. A decision that makes good financial sense may clash with traditions and values the make higher education what it is.

Few would argue, for example, that universities should scuttle their liberal arts programs to make way for beefed up computer science programs, even though from a strictly dollars-and-cents viewpoint philosophy and Greek literature don't always pay their way.

BALTIMORE (AP) Pianist Leon Fleisher, his crippled 'ig t hand restored after 17 years by an operation and physical therapy, plans to give a comeback concert at the opening of the city's new symphony hall.

Fleisher, 54, who made his Carnegie Hall debut at age 16, will use both hands in public for the first time since 1965 at the Sept. 16 opening of the $22 million Joseph Meyerhoff Symphony Hall.

"I'm looking forward to it with great pleasure," said Fleisher, 54.

The pianist's right hand began campng andicurling as he played long pieces in 1964, forcing him to pause and rest. The condition gradually worsened until he was no longer able to play with both hands, and some composers wrote one-handed pieces for

But after an operation in January 1981, Fleisher again was able to use his fingers to clench objects. And since then, physical therapy has given him back the ability to perform.
