FBI reports dramatic drop in the crime rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of crimes reported in the first half of this year was 5 percent lower than in the first half of 1981, the first such decrease since 1978, the FBI said

But law enforcement officials and crime experts warned about attaching too much significance to the latest figures. Attorney General William French Smith noted that reported crimes reached an all-time high in 1980 and remained at that level through last year.

'While this apparent reversal is encouraging, the fact that the all-time high was reached and maintained for a two-year period should be of major concern to the nation," Smith said. Crime experts who were interviewed offered a number of possible theories to explain the downturn. But they all

They suggested that the decrease could be related. ironically, to higher unemployment. They also said the 'aging" of the American population, increased numbers of offenders in prisons and more young people in the armed forces could be contributing to the trend.

"There are more people in the stir and fewer on the streets," said Albert D. Biderman of the private Bureau of Social Science Research. He also said that with more younger Americans in the armed forces the pool of "likely victims" of many crimes as well as likely offenders is

"It sounds like good news," he added.

FBI Director William H. Webster noted that in the first percent in the South, and 3 percent in the West reported crimes compared to the first six months of 1977.

That was the last time the FBI's Uniform Crime Report showed a decrease for a comparable six-month period. The latest figures listed a 3 percent decrease for violent crime and a 6 percent decline for the more numerous Murder was down 8 percent; robbery 7 percent and forcible rape 6 percent. Aggravated assault increased 1 percent, the only violent crime on the upswing.

Burglaries plunged 11 percent. Larceny-theft and auto theft each dipped 3 percent.

The FBI reported that there was a 9 percent drop in crime in the Northeast and North Central regions of the country; 2

Rurai areas recorded an 11 percent decline; the suburbs 8 percent; cities with more than 50,000 population 3 percent, and cities outside of metropolitan areas 6 percent.

Professor Charles Wellford of the Institute of Criminal Justice at the University of Maryland said the figures were more or less consistent with the more broadly based Justice Department statistics based on a survey of victims of crime.

He said one theory that could help explain the decrease is the high rate of unemployment, now at 10.1 percent nationally.

Wellford said the fact that more adults are out of work may mean that more are at home supervising their children and lending additional stability to family life. During the Great Depression in the 1930's there was a similar phenomenon, Wellford said.

Good Samaritan trucker is shot

TUCUMCARI, N.M. (AP) — A truck driver who stopped to help a woman standing by the side of the road with the hood up on her pickup was shot three times in the back and his truck hijacked, state police said.

State police dispatcher Roberta Parker said Larry Cone was listed in stable condition today at an Amarillo, Texas, hospital after surgery

Police in New Mexico and Texas have issued all-points bulletins for a man and woman in connection with the incident.

Ms. Parker said Cone, a driver for Shipley-Phillips Inc. in Tucumcari, was returning from a trip to Artesia about 10 p.m. Monday when he noticed the woman standing by her apparently disabled pickup by the side of New Mexico 18 some six miles from Ragland, N.M.

Police said Cone stopped to help, but when he looked under the hood, he was shot three times in the back by a man who came out from hiding

Officers believe the weapon was a .38-caliber pistol.

Ms. Parker said the man and woman fled, taking both the pickup, which had Texas license plates, and Cone's green-over-gold tractor-trailer rig. which was loaded with $8,000 in diesel Cone walked "quite a ways" to a farm house for help, Ms. Parker said.

He was later taken to Trigg Hospital in Tucumcari, then transferred to United Way campaign is now in full swing

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Pampa's United Way campaign officially kicked off Monday with more than 100 volunteers attending the initial residential division meeting at the Pampa Senior Citizens

A goal of $222,000 in United Way contributions is sought this year, said General Campaign Chairman Reed Echols. "All divisions have begun their campaign and are working hard," Echols said. "I feel confident that Pampa will reach the goal this year and perhaps even surpass it," she said.

Campaigning at businesses and door - to - door has begun and will continue until Nov. 18, Echols said. The campaign has been planned so that those who are contacted at work should not be approached at their homes, she explained.

Acknowledging the current state of the economy. Echols said, "Those of us who still have jobs and whose businesses are doing well need to dig deeper to help those who are not as

"From the way the campaign has gone so far, I feel that everyone feels their responsibility and are going out of their way to meet it," she said.

Fifteen health and social service agencies are funded through the Pampa United Way program. These agencies include Meals on Wheels, Genesis House, Pampa Day Care Center, Pampa Senior Citizen Centers, United Service Organization, American Red Cross, Salvation Army, Pampa Family Service Center, High Plains Epilepsy Association. Boy and Girls Scout, Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, Warm Springs Rehabilitation Hospital and Pampa Satellite

With Echols chairing the drive, more than 200 volunteers are contributing their time to the campaign.

Other United Way officers include Bob Curry, board president; Ray Hupp, board vice president; Warren Fatheree and Chuck White, oil and gas division chairmen; Phil Gentry, commercial division; Louise Fletcher and Ed Sweet, civic and professional division; Glyndene Shelton, individual division; Harold Taylor, farm and ranch division

Mental hearing for accused firebug set for Wednesday condition of a 74 - year - old man suspected of purposely starting the October 10 fire at the Pampa Nursing Center which killed two patients and injured nine others will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Gray County Court.

Robert Morris, the nursing home patient accused of starting the fatal fire, is scheduled for a mental competency hearing by County Judge Carl Kennedy.

It is unknown whether or not the suspect will be returned to Pampa for the hearing, which will be Morris and his appointed lawyer's decision to make, according to the judge.

Morris is temporarily confined to the Vernon Center, a state mental hospital, under an order signed by Kennedy Friday morning.

According to District Attorney Guy Hardin, two local doctors signed orders declaring the arson suspect mentally incompetent.

Morris is undergoing psychiatric evaluation at the state facility, and staff members of the Vernon Center are expected to testify about Morris' mental condition Wednesday.

Hardin dismissed a charge of first degree felony arson against Morris in connection with the fire on Friday.

The D.A. said it was necessary to dismiss the complaint against the suspect in order to commit him to the

But Hardin said Morris will be "charged and tried" at a later date, "if he regains his competency.

The hearing Wednesday determine whether or not Morris is mentally competent.

If Kennedy determines the suspect is mentally incompetent, Morris can be committed to the institution for 90 days, or the commitment can continue at request of the Vernon hospital's administration, officials said

Charges against Curtis reduced to misdemeanor

By JEFF LANGLEY State Editor

The charge against the president of Curtis Well Servicing Inc., who was accused by police of allegedly ramming a police officer at a roadblock near the burning Pampa Nursing Center, has been reduced to a misdemeanor offense at the request of Police Chief J.J. Ryzman, the chief said today.

Jack T. Curtis, 52, of 2557 Aspen, was charged with aggravated assault on a police officer the day after the fire, on

He was arraigned by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge and was free on a $20,000 bond

Police said a car attempting to go around a roadblock at the intersection of Sumner and Kentucky Streets struck officer Rod Bishop, after the driver ignored the officer's order to stop, police said.

Following the incident, police said Bishop was thrown over the hood of the car as the vehicle continued down the street enroute to the burning nursing home, and the officer drew his pistol to force the driver to stop, according to Police said the officer was treated for minor injuries at Coronado Community hospital and released

But Ryzman said today that after talking to witnesses to the incident, he decided to reduce the charge against Curtis to "disobedience to a lawful order of a police officer," which the chief says is a Class C misdemeanor.

The previous charge against Curtis is a felony offense.

The day after the prominent Pampa businessman's arrest, Ryzman said that Curtis believed he had a relative inside the burning nursing home, perhaps influencing the suspect's

"Emotions were flying pretty high (the night of the fire)," Ryzman said about his decision to reduce the charge.

The chief said the decision to reduce the charge was his and was made "sometime last week," with the consent of the district attorney's office.

Top Tylenol suspect caught on film in store

CHICAGO (AP) - Investigators in the Tylenol poisoning case say they may have an "extremely significant" clue in a surveillance photo that may show a prime suspect watching one of the victims buying the tainted drug.

The photograph, made public Monday, was taken by a surveillance camera in a Chicago drug store where one of the victims, 35-year-old Paula Prince, bought a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol containing cyanide-tainted capsules In the photo, Miss Prince is standing near a checkout counter in the store. In the background, looking toward her, is a bearded man resembling Theodore Elmer Wilson, who along with his wife, Leann, was described Monday as a 'prime suspect' in the case. Miss Prince later died. Sources close to the investigation, who declined to be identified, said such a photo could be the case's first real

He faces federal charges in a $1 million extortion plot connected to the killings. His wife has been charged with using a fraudulent Social Security number in applying for a

Wilson was indicted in a 1978 murder in Kansas City, but the charges were dropped, officials say

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, heading the Tylenol poisoning task force, said the picture would be an 'extremely significant" clue if the man in the picture is identified as Wilson. "If it turns out it is, it's dramatic as hell, if you put it together with the $1 million extortion letter, the connection to the murder in Kansas City and the fact that this guy used 17 aliases," Fahner said Monday night.

"It could be a tremendous stroke of irony that the person (in the picture)...turns out to be Paula Prince and behind her it turns out to be the man who salted those capsules," Fahner

Investigators have other photographs that provide a clearer image of the man in the published photo, Fahner said. Experts are using computer techniques to enhance and enlarge the images, he said.

"If the photo has Wilson in it, that's big, important stuff," Fahner said. "If it turns out not to be, we're right back where we started.'

Earlier Monday, Fahner said investigators had no direct evidence to link the couple to the seven deaths, but, "They are prime suspects at this point in time by anyone's definition of what a suspect is.'

Fahner said the couple was in the continental United States and "more than one credible sighting" of them was reported over the weekend.

... causing no Halloween in Fudley

FUDLEY, Mass. (AP) - Village officials, citing the Chicago-area Tylenol poisonings, have canceled trick or treating for youngsters this Halloween. Selectman Anthony DiDonato called for the ban and his colleagues passed the measure Monday night.

"It hurts me, it really does, to go to that extreme," said Selectman Donald Cristina, who seconded DiDonato's motion to call off the event the town puts on every year. Cristina said he did not know whether the move was legal but it would at least serve as an advisory for the public.

'There's nothing to say people can't take their children in their cars to the home of relatives and things like that," he said. The selectmen said a Halloween party for village children will be held at one of the school halls.

At the meeting, the selectmen cited the recent deaths of seven people who took poisoned Extra-Strength Tylenol and the tampering of other retail products around the nation that came in the wake of those poisonings.

In Spencer, Mass., over the weekend, a man had himself taken to the hospital when he got a burning sensation after eating chocolate chip cookies. But the baker attributed that to too much vanilla flavoring in the cookies and the hospital said the man was not poisoned

Bernard J. Wielock, the Dudley village chairman, agreed with the selectmen's decision, saying trick or treating was a lot of fun when he was a kid but "there's a kind of a sick situation right now. It is the atmosphere around the world. It Should D.C. be made a state?

WASHINGTON (AP) — If District of Columbia residents approve a proposal on Election Day aimed at creating the nation's 51st state, they would get more than a new address they'd be endorsing a plan to guarantee every citizen a

When a convention of 45 elected delegates last spring drew up a proposed constitution that would be the basis for statehood, approval by the voters on Nov. 2 was expected to

But the proposal's fate is now in doubt because of controversy over key provisions, which would cost residents $77.6 million a year, according to an estimate by the Greater Washington Board of Trade, the largest business group in the nation's capital.

The most expensive provision in 18,000-word document to create the state of "New Columbia" would be the guarantee of a job or adequate income to all residents, at a cost of $54 million, the board said

The 18-article constitution would not resemble many other state constitutions; it would give police the right to strike, prohibit grand juries from engaging "in fishing expeditions" and create a state bank to help failing businesses. Other provisions would greatly expand rights of criminal suspects, ban any restriction on a woman's right to have an abortion and outlaw capital punishment. Sexual freedom between consenting adults is specifically granted. If the constitution is approved, the mayor would submit it would be required for passage.

New Columbia would be the eighth-smallest state by population in the union, with 700,000 people beating out Alaska, Delaware, Wyoming, Vermont, Nevada, North Dakota and South Dakota.

If the constitution is rejected, the convention would reconvene to try again. If the second constitution were rejected, it would take a voter initiative or City Council ordinance to bring about a new convention.

Charles I. Cassell, president of the convention that drafted the constitution last spring, said he was not worried about passage on Election Day. "We know that it'll pass," he said. He said the high cost of the transition to statehood was natural: "It's just like the elimination of slavery. That cost a

But the city's largest newspaper, The Washington Post, urged in an editorial that the proposal by withdrawn from the ballot. "To insist on a vote now is to kill it," the Post said. "The only good thing it would do is stop the erosion of our population," said the Rev. John Whalen, chairman of a task force that analyzed the document. "Overnight, we might have 9 or 10 million people moving into the city - anybody who can't find a job elsewhere.'

Residents have long called the nation's capital "The Last Colony" because it has no voting representation in Congress. A constitutional amendment passed by Congress to give representation without statehood has been approved by only 10 of the required 38 state legislatures to Congress, where approval by a majority in both houses Former Amarillo cop out on bail while he faces charges of murder

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - After an angry confrontation with news reporters and photographers, a former released on $50,000 cash bond on a charge he fatally shot a retired gas company executive during busy downtown traffic.

L.R. Wynne was arrested early Saturday in Houston on a warrant issued in connection with the slaying of Erle Winston Mathis, 63.

Mathis, a former vice president of Pioneer Production Corp., an oil and gas exploration firm, was shot five times Friday afternoon as he waited at a a traffic light in downtown Amarillo.

Wynne was returned to Amarillo Monday afternoon and taken before Justice of the Peace L.B. Bartlett, who had issued the murder warrant.

Wynne was chief of detectives of the Amarillo Police Department, but

This old house has spirits...

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) - The old souse had spirits, but not the haunting

Matthew Gleason, 17, tore open a basement wall during remodeling of a Victorian house last week and found 50 bottles of scotch, bourbon, brandy, wine and ale

Newspapers packed around some bottles dated back to 1921, two years after the start of Prohibition. One bottle of brandy was dated 1912.

Matthew's parents, Lee and Chloe Gleason, bought the mansion two years ago and said they weren't surprised it contained the booze.

The previous owner was Mamie McLeod, an artist who inherited the house from her mother, Clara Williams, whose California Wine House in Tacoma established the family fortune. The basement of the house contained a lot of vintage wine that was removed before the house was sold, Mrs. Gleason said. The Gleasons say they have no intention of toasting their good fortune with the vintage stuff.

The corks will stay in place, said Mrs. Gleason, at least until they find out what 60-year-old imported scotch resigned in 1971 after his superiors decided his private detective agency and security firm constituted a conflict of interest

Bartlett offered Wynne the choice between $50,000 cash bond and $100,000 surety bond. Wynne chose the cash bond and handed over the money minutes later

As the proceeding was ending. Wynne's attorney lashed out at the crowd of newsmen, photographers and cameramen who filled the courtroom calling them "vultures" and "panderers of violence." The attorney, Walter Wolfram of Amarillo, criticized the circus atmosphere of the bail hearing.

Before the bond hearing, Wynne and his lawyer met for about 30 minutes with Lt. Jimmy Boydston, coordinator of the special crimes unit. Boydston said later Monday no clear motive had been established, but that investigators are checking Wynne's recent financial background to see if he had any business dealings with Mathis.

"We're working on a couple of leads, but we don't have anything solid yet," he said

An autopsy report released Monday showed Mathis was struck by five bullets, which appeared to have been fired from a .38-caliber pistol or a .357

Witnesses to the shooting said Mathis' assailant pulled alongside him in a 1982 Oldsmobile Cutlass whose license plate had been covered with a Frito bag. The gunman got out, walked over to the window of the pickup and fired several shots, before getting back into the Oldsmobile and driving off, police were told

When police telephoned car rental companies, one firm said such a car. rented by Wynne, had just been turned in and that the man had left in a 1982 Cadillac with New Mexico plates.

Coast Guard halts search

NEW YORK (AP) - The Coast Guard, saying there was little chance of survival for four men who may have been trapped inside a Colombian military airplane that ditched in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey, has called off its search. A fifth crewman also was presumed drowned.

Eight of 13 men aboard the four-engine C-130 were rescued when the aircraft went into the water near a freighter on Saturday. Os of the men was presumed drowned after he was washed away while trying to cling to a wing. Rescue efforts had focused on four others who may have been inside the partially submerged plane that finally sank Monday afternoon, said Gregory Creedon, a Coast Guard spokesman. But a possible search by Coast Guard divers was called off because officials deemed the attempt too treacherous and were convinced no "live bodies" remained inside the transport, Creedon The airplane, kept afloat by air in its empty fuel tanks, finally slid from sight Divers, hampered by winds and high waves, got a close look at the craft Monday morning and reported "jagged metal at the point they would have entered," making any attempted rescue too hazardous, said Johnny Ludlow, another Coast Guard spokesman.

No bodies were sighted, he said. "The plane has a lot of ragged metal edges, the wing flaps are flapping around. We feel there would be a lot of danger in trying to put anybody near the plane," said Creedon

The plane was en route from the Azores to Bermuda when its navigation systems failed. It ran out of fuel and was forced down about 180 miles east of Cape May, N.J.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, Colombian Brig. Gen. Alfredo Ortega and five other survivors of the crashed transport praised the Canadian merchant ship that rescued them. The other two survivors were being treated at the U.S. Navy hospital in Portsmouth, Va.

Bush ends Texas trip

DALLAS (AP) - Vice President George Bush ended three days of politicking and backpatting in Texas with a rousing rally here featuring about 1,700 supporters of Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

The vice president, who has been on the road since Labor Day trying to shore up support nationally for GOP incumbents and hopefuls, repeatedly chastised Democrats for trying to handcuff Reagan and return to "the failed answers of the past."

"The president's achievements just must not be cut and that's what's at stake in a lot of these congressional elections,' Bush said.

"I think the national Democratic leaders are totally devoid of any new answers as to how to solve the problems facing our country," the vice president said. "All they want to do is tear down a decent, honorable, strong president of the United States, and that is not going to work.

"These personal attacks on (Reagan's) lacking compassion really are the ones that get to me the most," Bush said. "They are unconscionable. They are untrue. They are unfair, and I pray that the people that say them know it.

Bush traveled to the West Texas town of Pecos Saturday to campaign for Pat Haggerty, a Republican candidate for Congress.

Sunday, Bush appeared in Grapevine at a $150-per-plate fund-raising dinner on behalf of Republican congressional candidate Jim Bradshaw.

Monday, the vice president addressed a meeting of the National Alliance of Business, a geophyicists group and then met with three representatives of the Hispanic group SER-Jobs For Progress before attending the Clements' $7-per-plate luncheon at a Dallas hotel. Clements noted the importance of White House support as his tight gubernatorial race with his Democratic challenger. Attorney General Mark White, enters its final two weeks. 'This gubernatorial election will set an all-time historic record for Texas ticket-splitting, Democratic crossovers and independent voting," Clements said. Flanked by 20 supporters including business and civic leaders, Dallas Cowboys tight end Billy Joe Dupree and an Eagle Scout, Clements said he had improved public education, cut taxes, cutdown on crime and trimmed state government

"We are nationally renowned for our great job climate and as long as I'm governor, that's a reputation that Texas is going to keep," Clements said.

Bush likened Texas' top administrator to Reagan, and said both have boosted the pocketbooks of their constituents.

'Today we have a president, just like the governor of Texas, who offers hope, who talks about growth and opportunity and incentive and excellence," Bush said.

Bush, who has headed the administration's South Florida anti-narcotics task force, said Clements' War On Drugs legislation was a model for the nation.

"Bill Clements has signed the hardest-hitting crime package since World War II," Bush said. "It's a hallmark, it's a landmark for a country crying out for liberty."

Bush, who Clements said is a personal friend of 30 years. said Reagan's recent signing of the Job Partnership Act is a step toward easing yment by providing incentives for business, rather than government, to create jobs.

At the Monday morning business alliance meeting in Dallas, Bush said the record-high unemployment was 'a terrible disappointment.

Joint venture announced

Braniff joint venture gets a cool reception

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) - Braniff International's announcement that it has finally found a partner for a joint venture to start flying again got a cool reception from industry analysts.

The tentative agreement with Pacific Southwest Airlines was announced Monday, five months after Braniff filed for protection in bankruptcy court, and two months after a similar deal with another carrier fell

The agreement calls for rehiring about 1,500 former Braniff employees to fly 25 to 30 Braniff planes — repainted with PSA's smile-on-the-nose logo but using Braniff's landing slots and other ground facilities.

Flights probably would begin next spring, PSA chairman William Shimp said. Both PSA and Braniff would contribute capital and other assets to the 8-year-long venture, officials said, but the operation would be carried out under PSA's name. As far as travelers are concerned, there would be no difference between the California-based airline and the joint venture, although they actually would be two separate airlines, officials said. The agreement must be approved by federal regulators, Braniff's creditors - who are owed $1 billion - and U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers, who has supervised Braniff's operations since the company filed for protection in his court May 13. In addition, the plan is subject to getting substantial concessions on wages and working conditions from the four unions representing Braniff's 9,000 former workers.

While officials acknowledged there were "a lot of hurdles ahead," Braniff chairman Howard Putnam said "all of us at Braniff are extremely pleased and enthusiastic" about Charles H. Hanneman, an airline industry analyst with Thomson McKinnon Se7urities Inc. of New York, was less optimistic.

"This thing is something less than a lead-pipe cinch to get off the ground," he Hanneman said the success of the project would depend on the health of the ailing airline industry when the joint venture begins, and on the state of the general economy. But he added that at present "the world does not need any part of Braniff's

"And the market did not take the news well. American (Airlines), for example, fell capacity in the air, because there's already % today," he said Monday. "The world remembers that lesson of a year ago: Braniff and its last ditch survival efforts. The possibility that something like that might be revived obviously did not sit well with American shareholders.

"For the rest of the industry, this is not a positive development," said Hanneman. Eliot Fried, executive vice president of Shearson-American Express in New York, also was cool to the announcement. "There's going to be some money attached to the front end of this thing," he said. "The outlook for the industry generally is poor, and I assume that they will be trying to fly the high density routes, and these certainly will be highly competitive by the time they get started.

"Basically, this is very tentative. I would have to adopt a wait-and-see attitude until they give us some better information on the financial operations, the routes, and the traffic they expect," said Fried.

Hanneman suggested that the agreement could be torpedoed by either airline's unions.

"PSA had a lengthy and costly pilots' strike in 1980, and this thing calls for wages and working conditions well below union scale." he said. "The Braniff people might agree to some pretty cost efficient contracts because it's better than the unemployment line, but there might be repercussions at PSA. Braniff's financial officer, Philip Guthrie said that while Braniff had not talked to all of its unions, it had discussed the joint venture with "some" - he would not say which - and they reacted positively. A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, however, said he was not pleased by the announcement. 'There very well could be problems," L.T. Faircloth told KRLD radio in Dallas. "He (Putnam) is making some very harsh statements about wages and working conditions, and he's never ta ked to us at all.

"The (employees) at Braniff have been abused, they've been misled, they've been misguided. It's my opinion that when Mr. Putnam first came to Braniff, the people were behind him 100 percent, but I think they've lost all faith and confidence in his leadership at this time.

Guthrie said Braniff had talked to eight other airlines about a similar agreement and had "come very close" to a joint operating agreement with one in August.

Book describes purported long love affair of LBJ

BOSTON (AP) - As a young congressman, Lyndon B. Johnson entered into a long, secret love affair with Alice Glass, a striking and cultivated woman who was also the mistress of a Texas newspaper baron who was one of LBJ's allies, according to a new book.

In a forthcoming Johnson biography, author Robert A. Caro wrote that the romance bound Johnson and Miss Glass for years, enduring as friendship even after their passion subsided. Because of their elaborate discretion, the affair was kept from all but a few people.

The relationship finally broke off in the 1960s, the book said, when the woman became horrified by the Vietnam War policies he set

The relationship "juts out of the landscape of Johnson's life," the book says, "as one of the few episodes - perhaps the only one that threatened his personal ambition.'

'She later told friends that she had burned love letters that Johnson had written to her." Caro wrote, "because she didn't want her granddaughter to know she had ever been associated with the man she considered responsible for Vietnam."

The liaison between a raw, hill-country congressman and a striking woman of wealth is described in an excerpt from Caro's book published in the November issue of The Atlantic magazine The article said Johnson, who died in 1973, was a newly elected House member when he met Miss Glass in 1937 at "Longlea," a thousand-acre Virginia estate outside

She lived there, according to the book, as companion to Charles E. Marsh, a wealthy Texan who owned the Austin American-Statesman newspaper along with oil and real estate interests.

Harry Middleton of the LBJ Library in Austin, Texas, who handles all press inquiries for Lady Bird Johnson, the former president's widow, was out of town Monday and unavailable for comment, his office said. Mrs. Johnson's home telephone number is not

William Whitworth, editor of The Atlantic, said the publishers of Caro's book, Alfred A. Knopf Inc. of New York, reported that Alice Glass is no longer living.

It could not be determined if Marsh, who was born in 1888, is still living. Efforts to trace him through the Austin newspaper were unsuccessful, and there was no answer Monday night at Caro's New York residence.

Johnson cultivated Marsh, flattering the older man by seeking his advice and even letting Marsh write speeches for him; but he also became Alice's lover.

At first, she was a patroness, coaching Johnson on social niceties such as having his shirts custom-tailored and wearing French cuffs. She even read poetry to LBJ and tried, with varying success, to improve his table

In 1938 or 1939, the biographer wrote, Alice told close friends that she and Johnson were

Give us gas

The cause of immediate deregulation of the price of natural gas has won an unlikely convert. Charles M. Butler III, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, used to be a respectable moderate on the issue, favoring a faster phase - in of decontrol. Now he's ready to shoot for the works.

Under present law the price of socalled "new" gas (most of that discovered after February 1977) is being gradually freed between now and 1985, when all controls will be difted. "Old" gas will always have price limits unless the law is changed.

Butler claims that the present schedule and rules distort the marketplace in such a way that pipeline companies with large quantites of old gas are able to bid up the price of deep - well gas (about 10 percent of U.S. supplies) that is already free of all price controls. These pipeline firms can meld the high - priced stuff with their vastly larger complement of controlled gas and profit nicely from the mix. Pipeline operators heavily reliant on the decontrolled gas get taken along for a price ride, however. It is because of this quirky, supply demand factor, and because of further complications involving gas' child competitor in industrial markets, residual fuel oil, that Butler thinks consumer gas costs would actually fall if all price controls were removed.

The fuel oil connection matters thus: After decontrol in that area, prices did in fact fall, much to the surprise of natural - gas interests that expected them to rise and planned their marketing strategies accordingly. Thus industrial users are being driven away from gas — or

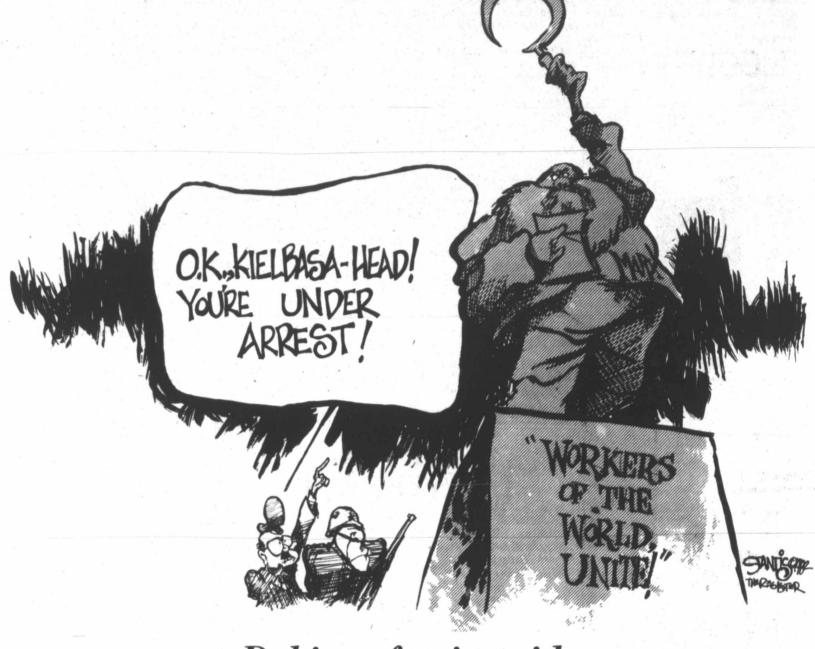

The cause of immediate are deciding not to convert — and residential consumers may pay more as utilities scramble to pay fixed costs with fewer customers.

If natural - gas prices were decontrolled immediately. Butler claims, they would probably fall as utilities fought to retain industrial customers. As new discoveries were exploited and supplies increased, gas prices could fall still further.

Such a scenario would not surprise us. And we must admit that, from a purely political standpoint, gas price decontrol is much more likely to gain support if there's a pretty good chance that the result would be lower gas prices in the short run.

It's a little dismaying that Butler had to wait until he figured that would be the result befoe he took his position. Gas prices should be decontrolled immediatley, even if they rise in the short run, because in the long run the consumer gets more protection from the market - place than from a board of bureaucrats trying to tinker with it. Government controls and intervention have already exacted a fearful price in the energy market, bearing most of the responsibility for the inception and duration of the late and unlamented "energy crisis" of the mid - '70s. Elimination of all price regulations abolition of the commission Butler chairs and of the Department of Energy would be constructive steps down the path toward energy abundance

Since the controls have now distorted the natural - gas market so extensively that prices are seen likely to fall after decontrol, even in the short run, there is no excuse not to act accordingly (even on "old" gas) now. Not even those whose vision is incapable of extending past the next election have any excuses left

Dubious foreign aid

By ROBERT WALTERS

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) — Providing moral suport, financial aid and even military assistance to prop up assorted dictatorships throughout the world has become a dubious yet integral component of this country's foreign policy.

Allowing the United States law enforcement and criminal justice system to become an extension of a tyrannical government's attempts to suppress internal dissent and harass its political opponents is a far more serious matter, however, because such action is virtually without historic precedent.

Yet that is precisely what is now occuring here in the case of a federal grand jury empaneled to investigate the activities of Philippine exiles in this country opposed to the dictatorial government of President's Ferdinand E. Marcos.

E. Marcos.
Although consideralbe publicity and controversy has been generated in Washington by President Reagan's willingness to legitimize the repressive Philippnes regime by acting as host to an elaborate state visit by Marcos, virtually no attention has been paid to Attorney General William French Smith's parallel efforts in U.S. District Court berg

For almost two years, the federal grand jury has been hearing testimony and receiving evidence relating to alleged plots to violently overthrow the Marcos government conceived by Philippine citizens forced to flee their native country for political reasons and now living throughout the United States.

An appeal for intensified efforts to pursue those Marcos critics reportedly was a priority item on the agenda of the Philippines president when he met recently with Reagan.

The investigation here is extraordinary because the federal government has seldom if ever before been willing to mobilize its law enforcement apparatus and judicial system on behalf of another nation's political leaders.

Universal application of that policy would require investigation of thousands of exiles, living here after being granted political asylum, who regularly (but seldom successfully) plot the overthrow of scores of governments during whispered conversations held in coffeehouses and bars, attics and basements stretching from San Francisco to New York.

A serious effort to investigate all of the schemes concocted by Cuban refugees living in Florida to topple Fidel Castro's government would require convening dozens of grand juries in Miami alone.

In a sworn statement required by federal law and filed with the court here last month, the attorney general acknowledged that government investigators had tapped the telephone of at least one target of the grand jury probe.

Smith notified the court that Arturo Taca, a Philippine native and Marcos critic now living in Chesterfield, Mo., "has been overheard on electronic surveilance" conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The wiretap was authorized by the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, a little known but powerful judicial panel which meets in Washington for the specific purpose of considering government requests for electronic surveillance.

But the intent of the law is to allow such surveillance of individuals who pose a threat to this country's domestic security — notably intelligence operatives working for hostile nations and those engaged in international terrorist activities — rather than critics of other governments.

Pan

The legal standards of subpoenaing telephone company records of long distnace calls are far less stringent than those imposed on actual taps, as San Francisco design student Lisa Benton discovered earlier this year.

She was belatedly notified by the telephone company that the records of her toll calls in late 1980 and early 1981 had been subpoenaed in connection with the investigation of the Philippines dissidents.

Her tenuous connection with the case illustrates the depth of the Reagan administration's commitment to tracking down opponents of Marcos' tyrannical government.

Although Ms. Benton aparently has no direct relationship with any Philippines intrigue, she shares an apartment with another young woman whose sister is engaged to a man who is a target of the investigation.

A new script for Ronnie

By ART BUCHWALD

It is no secret that Ronald Reagan works best from a script. Therefore, the other day, just before he went out on the road to campaign for republican candidates, his writers handed him a bunch of new pages to read.

"Okay, Ronnis, now here's the story line. You've been President of the United States for tow years, and no matter what you've tried to solve the country's economic problems, nothing has worked. So you're ticked off because people are starting to blame you for their troubles. You're no longer going to be Mr. Nice Guy."

Ronnie studied the script. "Gosh, you really want me to say that the Democrats are responsible for the rotten mess we've been in for the last 40 years?"

"Right. But you must do it with feeling. The people have to believe that you inherited the biggest financial disaster of anybody who ever sat in the Oval Office. You've tried to do something about it but that fat Democratic spenders in Congress have stood in your way. Can you do it with feeling?"

"Gee whilikers. It's so out of character for me. What's' my motivation for becoming a demagogue?"

"You're on the hot seat because the 1982 Senate and House elections are coming up, and the Democrats are laying the blame on you for a stagnant economy, high interest rates and two-digit unemployment. If you don't come out fighting you'll lose a Republican Senate and 40 or 50 seats in the House."

"I get it. By attacking Congress, I'm stil a good guy because I'm trying to save the country."

"That's the way we wrote it. Now in this scene you are talking to the people who stil believe in you, but occasionally you whether the facts are true or not.

there is a heckler in the audience who starts yelling for a job while you're talking. You never get flustered buy him. You say, 'Look in the want ads.''' "I like that line."

"It never fails to get the audience on their feet."

Ronnie went over the pages. "How about this one where I say, 'The fall elections offer a clear choice about the kind of nation we will be -- whether we will continue our sure and steady course to put America back on track, or whether we will slide backward into another economic binge like the one which left us with today's pounding national hangever.' That's a bit mouthful for me to say."

"We'll leave it in for Richmond, Virginia If it doesn't get a laugh we can always drop it out on your next campaign stop."

Ronnie kept turing the pages.
"Jumping bullfrogs, I see you have me blaming Washington for all our problems. Suppose they say I'm part of the problem now."

"Ignore what they say we figure your best bet is to attack Jimmy Cater for the mess you inherited. The way we've written it whatever you can't blame on Carter you blame on Tip O'Neill. This is the part of the picture where you really go for the jugular. Can you do it, Ronnie?."

"I'm going to try my darnedest, if you're sure the people will still root for

"They'll root for you, Ronnie, because the way we've written it you're the white hat, and the Democrats are the bad guys. Ther more you say it, the more they'll beleive it."

'Are all these facts in the script correct?" "Don't worry about facts. If you read

New rebel attacks expected in Morazan

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - Military authorities say they expect new rebel attacks in the northeast province of Morazan, where leftist guerrillas are holding at least three towns gained in a major offensives launched last week.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos said Monday night that rebel bands stopped an advance on the towns by an estimated 4,000 government troops. But military sources denied there had been any major fighting in the remote province Monday.

Col. Lisandro Cepeda, Morazan military commander, said the army expected the guerrillas, who have been fighting the U.S.-backed government for three years, to make new assaults on other towns in the near future.

Cepeda said government troops had pushed back a rebel attempt Sunday to seize Jocoatique, a town of 7,800 people 20 miles north of San Francisco Gotera, capital of the remote province.

Reporters were not allowed north of San Francisco Gotera, and other reports of the fighting were not available.

A military spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the guerrilla-occupied towns of Perquin, San Fernando and Torola - all near the Honduran border - lacked strategic importance and the army would not try to retake them. The spokesman said he was sure the guerrillas would leave on their own.

"I can assure you that by Friday of this week they will have left," he said. "It's the classic pattern: they arrive, they take over a town, they destroy, and when the food is gone they leave.'

The spokesman claimed the recent guerrilla offensive in Morazan was only "a propaganda move to remind the people that they are still there" following a long period in which the guerrillas had not attempted a major push. Officials have called the new rebel offensive the biggest and best-coordinated in six months.

The guerrillas took Perquin, San Fernando and Torola on Oct. 12, two days after they overran a military garrison and siezed the towns of Las Vueltas and El Jicaro in the northwestern Chalatenango province.

Las Vueltas, about 54 miles north of the capital, has about 5,000 residents, and nearby El Jicaro is a small village that does not appear in government population charts.

Radio Venceremos claimed Monday that guerrillas had stopped an army advance on Perquin, San Fernando and Torola, which have a combined population of about 13,000 and are in an area that has long been a guerrilla stronghold. It gave few details of the fighting.

The radio claimed Sunday that 189 soldiers were killed or wounded in last week's fighting, but gave no figures on guerrilla losses.

Economic and financial risks face free world

NEW YORK (AP) - Wall while avoiding the high cost Street economist Henry Kaufman warned today that the risk of worldwide depression remains as non-communist countries attempt to change course from years of inflation to a period of sustainable

Obstacles to be overcome, down the path of disinflation he said, include huge international debt, instability in international financial institutions and interest rates that remain at historically high levels when adjusted for inflation. Among his proposals was the creation of an emergency pool of funds, "exceeding perhaps $50 billion." to encourage confidence in the international financial system and indicate it will be defended.

At the same time, he called for curbs in "liberal credit practices" by lenders.

And he complained of "problems in global political leaders. "These problems are wrought by the current process of change in leadership, by a narrow focus of attention on insular domestic issues, and by economic attitudes." Kaufman said. "Our world political leadership today should recognize the urgency of focusing upon, and resolving, a precarious international financial

Financial markets shrug off bad news

By ROBERT BURNS AP Business Writer

The nation's financial markets, bouyed by the recent big dropoff in interest rates, shrugged off news that the nation's factories were working at their lowest level in 7½ years.

Interest rates in the open market continued to fall Monday as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks vaulted above the 1,000 mark after having slumped late last week. The widely watched index of blue-chip stocks climbed 26.12 points, to 1,019.22 — the highest level since April 27, 1981.

Bond prices added as much as $10 for every $1,000 in face

The Federal Reserve Board said manufacturers used just 69.1 percent of capacity in September, down 0.5 percentage point from the month before and the lowest since the 69.1 percent in March 1975. September's drop was the 12th in the last 14 months.

The figures paralleled the government's report last week that total output by factories and mines fell 0.6 percent in Six-month savings certificates will pay less than 9 percent interest starting today, a reflection of the recent big dropoff in interest rates that has sent stock and bond markets soaring.

Under the government's formula for setting the rate on savings certificates, based on the latest auction of U.S. treasury bills, commercial banks will be limited to paying 8.73 percent while savings institutions can pay up to 8.98 percent. Both were paying 9.15 percent last week.

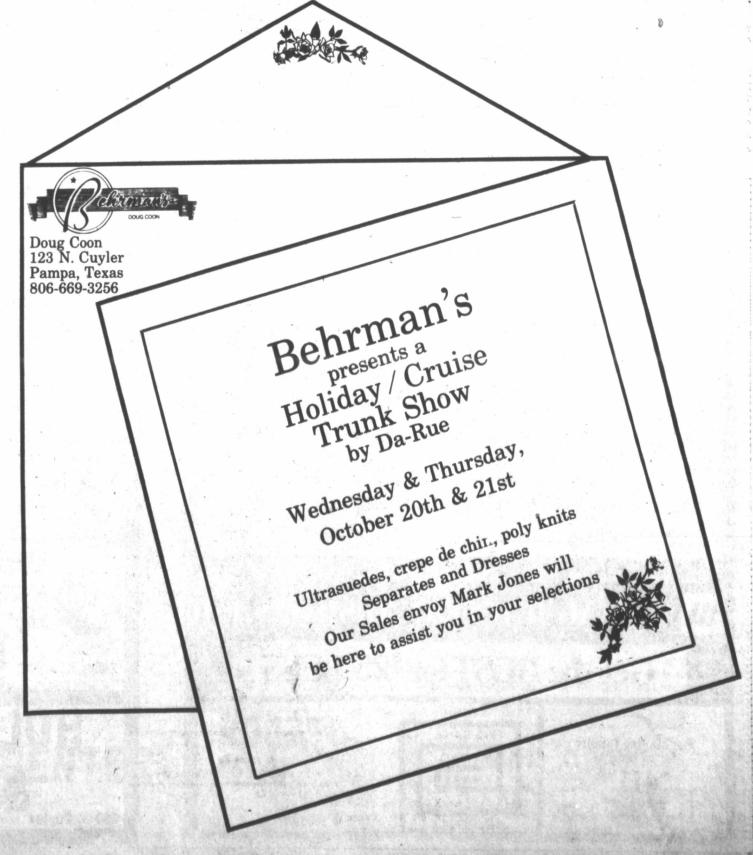

Savings institutions are given a quarter-point advantage whenever the government's base number for figuring the certificate rate falls below 8.5 percent.

Several manufacturing concerns reported lower earnings, or net losses, for the third business quarter.

Armco Inc., the nation's seventh-largest steel producer. reported a net loss from operations of $52 million in the quarter ended Sept. 30. It also said it expected a difficult fourth quarter because of depressed demand for steel products.

In San Francisco, Crown Zellerbach Corp., maker of paper ucts, reported a slight improvement in profits but sa earnings remained "severely depressed" by the recession.

Reagan, Gemayel meet in withdrawal search

President Reagan hoped to find a formula for a speedy withdrawal of Israeli and other foreign troops from Lebanon in meetings today with Lebanon's new president, Amin Gemayel.

Reagan has put out the word to his Mideast negotiators to press for withdrawal of all foreign troops by the end of the year. That includes not just Israelis, but also Syrians and Palestinians.

'The president has told us to get them all out as soon as possible,'' a senior administration official said

But the official, asking not to be intentified, said, "We are going to be guided primarily by what the Lebanese think is possible.

He said a withdrawal this year "will be complicated and it will be difficult. Nevertheless, I think that it can be done quickly if the will is there on all sides.

Gemayel, 40, was holding two meetings with Reagan, one a working breakfast, followed by a meeting with State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger before leaving Washington tonight for Paris. Gemayel addressed the force to secure the Israeli border, while Israel wants a refurbished Lebanese army to do the job.

While it isn't enthusiastic, Washington also hasn't flatly ruled out the possibility of a multinational force, including U.S. troops, in the area.

The sessions with Gemayel are partly a follow-up to meetings last week between Shultz and Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. who discussed an Israeli withdrawal plan that includes a Lebanese-Israeli security agreement for their border.

Washington had some objections, and Gemayel is expected to also oppose some aspects, particularly Israel's proposal to integrate the Israeli-supported right-wing militia of Major Saad Haddad into the Lebanese army to help protect the border.

Israel's demand for a prior withdrawal of the remaining Palestinian troops in Lebanon - ahead of Israeli and Syrian forces - also is complicating the outlook for a speedy withdrawal.

Depending on what emerges in the talks with Gemayel, Shultz may see Shamir in New York this weekend for another round of talks with the Israelis.

But the senior official, who didn't want to be identified, said even if the Israelis and Lebanese agree, a final accord must also be accepted by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, and they would need to be

He said Reagan's special Mideast envoy, Morris Draper, would return to the region soon. An Arab League delegation is due in Washington on Friday.

The visit to Washington is the first trip outside Lebanon for Gemayel since he was elected president on Sept. 21 following the assassination of his brother, Bashir, who was elected earlier.

The focus of the meeting will be two-fold: to help arrange the withdrawal of foreign forces and to set the stage for future relations between Washington and

McCarthyism continues to haunt politicians

WASHINGTON (AP) - Joseph R. McCarthy, a senator who made it into the dictionary, has been dead for a quarter of a century, but the word his name gave rise to keeps cropping up in the 1982 political wars.

When Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., took to the Senate floor to denounce an organization called Peace Links, senator after senator invoked the spectre of McCarthy or "McCarthyism.

When President Reagan said the nuclear freeze movement is inspired by people "who want the weakening of America," freeze advocates said his words smacked of McCarthy-style tactics.

The liberal organization People for the American Way, in a television program attacking the Moral Majority, accused the right-wing fundamentalist group of "witch hunts . . . (and) McCarthyism. The man whose name is being invoked was a Wisconsin Republican who was elected to the Senate in 1946 and served until his death on May 2, 1957.

At the height of the Cold War, McCarthy attracted attention by conducting Department and other institutions harboring Communists.

His supporters said he was a patrio performing a public service. His critics said he blackened the reputations of innocen people with groundless charges.

In 1954, the Senate condemned McCarth for "contemptuous" conduct toward subcommittee that had investigated hi finances in 1952 and for abuse of a committe that recommended he be censured.

The controversy over McCarthy's tactic gave birth to the word, "McCarthyism, defined in Webster's New World Dictionar as "the use of indiscriminate, ofter unfounded, accusations, sensationalism inquisatorial investigative methods, etc. ostensibly in the suppression o communism.

The Denton outburst that brought the McCarthyism charges on the Senate floo was prompted by Senate passage of resolution calling upon President Reagan to designate Oct. 10 as National Peace Day Peace Links, headed by Betty Bumpers, wife of Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark. was promoting

Dear Abby

Set ground rules for errant husband

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A physical therapist started coming to my home after I was released from the hospital where I had an operation. This therapist is employed by a private nursing company under contract to Medicare.

As I was in bed during his earlier visits, my "therapy" onsisted of conversation only, including a discussion of the painkilling pills prescribed by my physician. (They were in a bottle on my bedside table. The therapist examined them carefully.)

On his last visit, I was seated in the living room, and we started on exercises. At one point he asked if he could sheck the firmness of my bed, so I gave him permission to go into my bedroom.

After he went home, I discovered that the bottle of painkilling pills was missing! I called my sister, and we searched every inch of my room thoroughly. The bottle was nowhere to be found.

I use both hands to propel my wheelchair, so there is no way I could have picked up the bottle and absentmindedly set it down somewhere else. No one else has access to my bedroom, and I know for sure that those pills were on my bedside table before the therapist arrived.

I am sorry for the therapist, but I am also concerned about the other patients he treats. I wonder what standards Medicare uses in hiring therapists and in contracting with private businesses to provide home care. Do patients have any choices? Any rights? What should

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Immediately contact the private nursing company that sent the physical therapist, and tell the director what you have told me. Also make Medicare aware of your complaint.

I'm sure you know that a person is innocent until proven guilty, but you have a right to request another therapist in the meantime. Patients do have choices and rights.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the angry young wife whose husband always stopped for "a few beers" after work got my attention. Especially when I read your advice: "Set up some ground rules."

We had "ground rules" for my hotelman husband when he would come home late for dinner because he had to have a few drinks with patrons every night.

The "rules" were set by our two preteen children who wanted to see their daddy before bedtime.

"Daddy has to give Mama $5 every time he comes home after 7 p.m." You should have heard his car heading into our driveway at two minutes before 7 p.m. with the children screaming for 7:01 so Mama could collect her $5! The "kids" are now in their 40s, so if we were to do that today, the loot would have to be $10 to make up for

DEAR FRAN: Better make that at least $20.

DEAR ABBY: My friend's house burned to the ground, and everything was lost. She has a 3-year-old child. Would it be proper to give her another baby shower? Her friends gave her one before her baby was born, but she lost all the baby's things in the fire.

CARING FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Not only is it "proper," I think it's a lovely and generous idea.

Volunteers bring concern

By DARLENE BIRKES Of the United Way

For persons older than 85 and many handicapped Pampans who receive Meals on Wheels, their daily weekday visit with the volunteer is often the only contact they have with others.

During the four years the program has been in effect here, Meals on Wheels volunteers have discovered someone on their route who has fallen, become ill or died.

"These visits also tell the recipients that someone cares about them, and this is vital to their well - being," said Shirley Kucifer, executive director.

Pampa's Meals on Wheels is a community supported, non - profit organization serving the homebound elderly and handicapped persons unable to cook a hot, balance meal for themselves. Recipients pay what they can. The remainder is funded from private contributions, churches, clubs and patrons, in addition to the United Way. The program receives no funding from the federal government. Meals are prepared in the kitchen of the First United Methodist Church at Ballard and Foster streets.

To qualify for the program, a person must be older than 55 years, homebound and have health problems or a handicap. Cost of the meals is determined by the patron's ability to pay. No qualified person is denied meals if he is unable to pay. Referrals come from family members, friends, doctors, the hospital and other agencies.

Meals on Wheels has a need of its own in addition to financial support - volunteers. More than 188 people must help deliver and package the food each month. Eight routes in the city need eight drivers to cover them daily. Two to three volunters work in the kitchen packaging the food. Deliveries take a little less than an hour each day and kitchen work requires about one and one - half hours

Volunteers include retired people. businessmen who deliver during their lunch hour, church groups, civic clubs and mothers with pre - school children.

Birthdays are special times. On patrons' birthdays Meals on Wheels volunteers take a flower donated by a local florist, a small cake and gift donated by clubs and volunteers.

Persoss interested in volunteering should call 665 - 1461.

Meals on Wheels board members include President Reed Echols, David Holt, Pauline Beard, Joe Dickey, Pat Turner, Carol Mackey, Bob Phillips, Johnnie Thompson, Paul Simmons, Walter Colwell, Donna Brauchi and Lawson Holmes

"Great Skate" sponsored to help combat diabetes

American Diabetes Association is hosting a local "Great Skate of Texas" Oct. 23 at Skate Town, 1051 Price

American Diabetes Association is waging war against diabetes, a serious disease because it affects the way a person's body uses food resulting in excessive sugar levels in the body

Hundreds of thousands of adults and children in Texas have the disease, many without knowing it.

Insulin has been used to help control the disease, but it does not cure. Money raised from the "Great Skate" will be used to help find the cure.

The first step in the "Great Skate" is getting pledges of 10 cents, 25 cents, or even $1 from as many sponsors as possible for each mile skated by the entrant.

The four easy steps to enter the "Great Skate" are to:

(1) Pick up sponsor sheets. Sheets are available at Skate Town, local school offices, or by calling 669 - 9463. Minors should have their parents sign the sponsor sheet in the appropriate place.

(2) Get sponsors. Ask friends, relatives, people you meet to sponsor your skate.

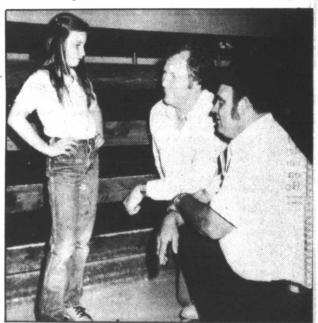

(3) Skate as long as you can. Remember, seven miles can be skated in one hour (4) After the "Great Skate pledges from sponsors:

On Nov. 6, an awards party is planned from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Skate Town with free skating for "Great Skate" participants. Everyone who attends the awards party will receive free gifts — frizbees, depending on the amount of pledges brought in.

Anyone collecting $1,000 will receive all prizes listed on the "Great Skate of Texas" poster plus a portable television

"Tom, the Terrible" Richardson, center, has challenged Ron "Fat Boy" Smitherman, right, to see who can skate the longest at the American Diabetes Association's "Great Skate of Texas" scheduled Saturday, Oct. 23. Lori Crippen, 10, at left, however, seems to have the advantage over both men. Sponsor sheets for the "Great Skate" are available at Skate Town and local school offices. Proceeds will go towards research for the cure of diabetes. (Staff photo by Bruce

Sutton, who won four games for Milwaukee including the American League East title clincher in the final month of the season after being acquired from Houston, was asked if he could think of anyone else he'd rather have pitching for his team in this situation.

Well, maybe a 29-year-old Sandy Koufax or a 26-year-old Tom Seaver," he said. Since those models are unavailable, the Brewers will take their shot with Sutton, who has 17 years of pitching know-how and uses all of it. Stuper isn't quite as cute in his style. "I only know one way to pitch and that's to challenge the hitters," Stuper said. "Maybe later I'll learn to Sutton and Stuper were the Game 2 starters. Neither was involved in the decision as St. Louis won 5-4. Stuper lasted just four innings that night.

"I hope to pitch a little better and a little longer," he said. "The key is to get ahead of them instead of letting them sit on 2-0 or 3-1 counts. I didn't get ahead and I didn't feel in a good groove that night. I was all over the

The pitching pairing is intriguing because it matches a grizzled veteran against a fresh-faced rookie. Does Sutton feel sorry for the kid in this tough circumstance?

"I have no empathy whatsoever," he said. Stuper didn't expect any.

"I'd be lying if I said there was no pressure," he said. I'm thinking about it right now and I'll think about it before and after the game. But during the game, it would interfere. It exists, obviously, but I can't let it affect me.'

Stuper's major problem, of course, will be to shut down sizzling Robin Yount, who is batting .524 with 11-for-21 in the first five games. Yount has had two four-hit games the first man in history to do that twice — and is one hit short of the six-game Series record set by Billy Martin of

So far, Yount has avoided that fate. His .524 batting average has him on target for a record. The Series mark for both six and seven games is .500. Dave Robertson did it for the New York Giants in six games in 1917, and Pepper Martin did it in seven games for St. Louis in 1931. The overall Series record is .625 (10-for-16) set by Babe Ruth in the New York Vankees four-game sweep of the

"Either we win Tuesday or our season is over. I don't think it could be clearer. But we have the type of club that has been up against adversity all year. This club has come a long way together. It all boils down to two wins.

The irony is that the Cardinals seemed in charge of the Series after winning two of the first three games and leading 5-1 in the seventh inning of Game 4. But the Brewers took advantage of a crucial error by pitcher Dave LaPoint to score six unearned runs and win that game, tying the Series

Then Milwaukee captured Game 5 behind Yount's hitting and a gritty pitching job by Mike Caldwell. Just like that, the Cards were in big trouble.

You ha even-tempered to handle this game," said St. Louis catcher Darrell Porter. "This game will humble you in a hurry. We are in a situation where we can't afford to lose. But we can go to our place and win two in a row easy. To say that we are (going to) — I don't know. We could do it in a flash. I'm not conceding anything.

If Stuper, who was 9-7 after being called up in late May, can keep the series going, the Cards would turn to third-game winner Joaquin Andujar for Game 7. Andujar, struck belowithe right knee by a shot off the bat of Ted Simmons, was

Sutton becomes anchor Brewers' Fan of Brewers' mound staff

ST. LOUIS (AP) - When Don Sutton was traded from Houston to Milwaukee on Aug. 30, it was called pennant insurance. It was really Brewer life insurance.

Sutton quickly became an anchor on a suspect pitching staff, winning five games (including the playoffs) and losing only one.

One victory clinched the division title. Another started the Brewers on a three-game comeback in the Championship Series, culminating in their winning the American League

Now it's the World Series. Sutton will be on the mound in Game 6 tonight and the Brewers can win the championship with a victory. It would be the perfect way to cap the year - a miracle year, he calls it - for the veteran right-hander.

 A miracle because he ended up in Milwaukee after signing with Houston as a free

Her brother, Cal McLish, is the Brewers' pitching coach and a former Major League pitcher.

'Naturally, I'm rooting for the Brewers," says Mrs. Underwood, who moved here from Oklahoma City three years ago. "I know they were probably the underdogs going into the series, but I'm just proud they made it.'

The Brewers are leading the St. Louis Cardinals, three games to two, going into tonight's sixth game in St. Louis.

Milwaukee held off a St. Louis rally to win the fifth game, 6-4, Sunday night. was scared to death the Cardinals were going to come back and win it," Mrs. Underwood said. "I've been very impressed with Mike Caldwell (Brewers' pitcher who has won two World Series games). He's really looked good. Mrs. Underwood is in the minority rooting for the Brewers. Pampa has been primarily "Cardinal Country" dating back to when the National League had only eight teams and St. Louis was the nearest Major League city.

McLish was a widely-traveled pitcher during his Major League stint, playing for as many as seven teams. He started with the Brooklyn Dodgers and finished with the Montreal Expos, according to Mrs. Underwood.

During team introductions in the opening game of the World Series, Mrs. Underwood saw her brother for the first time since last Thanksgiving when they met at their father's funeral in Houston.

'He started playing right out of high school (McLish attended Oklahoma City Classen) and I can remember he was back and forth from home so much, you never knew when he was going to turn up," Mrs. Underwood said.

Mrs. Underwood regrets that she never saw her brother pitch in the Major Leagues, except on television.

"I was never fortunate enough to be where he was pitching," Mrs. Underwood said. "I think this is the first time he's ever been in a World Series. I'm very happy for him

Cooling-off period in strike talks may be called COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) - Sources close to both sides in the 29-day-old National Football League players' strike say a cooling-off period in the talks may be called as early as tonight by mediator Sam Kagel to keep the stalled negotiations alive.

Two members of the owners' executive committee and a union source close to the talks said the recess could last for several days.

would expect the talks to break off Tuesday or Wednesday, with Kagel calling them back to the table within a couple of days," the union source told The Associated Press.

The two members of the owners' executive committee, who requested anonymity, agreed that a cooling-off period was in order. "I wouldn't call it breaking off; it is more like a recess," said one.

The union and Management Council have been meeting under Kagel's direction since last Tuesday. Since then, some progress has reportedly been achieved in non-economic issues. But the union's demands for a wage scale, central salary fund and percentage of the league's television revenues have barely been touched upon.

A news blackout was placed in effect by Kagel when he arrived last Tuesday and was pierced last Saturday when both sides argued over which one was stalling. On Monday night it was all but shattered when they were reduced to public name-calling in the lobby of the hotel where the talks are being conducted.

The day began with union chief Ed Garvey, union president Gene Upshaw, owners' top negotiator Jack Donlan and his aide Sargent Karch meeting without Kagel to discuss the union's proposed wage

The negotiations then recessed, Garvey taking advantage of the break to return to Washington, D.C., for a conference at union headquarters with everal player representatives.

The talks were supposed to resume at 7:30 p.m. But at that time the union, according to one of its spokesmen, requested a one-hour delay. At 8:30, the union asked for another one-hour

At 9:30, Kagel took matters into his own hands and put off further talks until today.

Within minutes, Donlan strolled through the

The Washington Huskies held onto first place in The Associated Press college football poll for the sixth week in a row Monday, while Alabama dropped from second to seventh and Pitt climbed back into second place.

Washington, a 34-17 winner over Oregon State, received 38 of 56 first-place votes and 1,113 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

While Alabama vacated the runner-up spot by losing to Tennessee 35-28, Pitt, which has been alternating between second and third place for the last six weeks after starting the season No.1, moved back to No.2. The Panthers defeated Temple 38-17 and received 17 first-place votes and 1,050 points.

The remaining first-place ballot went to Georgia, which rose from fourth to third with 974 points for defeating Vanderbilt 27-13.

Southern Methdist, Nebraska and Arkansas also passed Alabama. SMU went from fifth to fourth with 925 points after downing Houston 20-14, Nebraska jumped from sixth to fifth with 840 points by trouncing Kansas State 42-13 and unbeaten Arkansas, idle last weekend, climbed from seventh to sixth with 791 points.

Alabama was seventh with 753 points, followed by Arizona State, Penn State and North Carolina. Arizona State vaulted from 10th to eighth by trimming Texas-El Paso 37-6, HPenn State slipped from eighth to ninth despite a 28-7 triumph over Syracuse and North Carolina roce from 11th to 10th by routing North Carolina State 41-9.

UAW President Douglas Fraser - who had negotiated an agreement with Chrysler that was rejected by the rank-and-file - planned to huddle with key leaders today and Wednesday to develop a proposal for the special meeting of the UAW's Chrysler bargaining council on Thursday.

The breakdown in talks with the No. 3 carmaker Monday "greatly enhances" chances for a costly walkout, he said. The UAW would have to give 24 hours' notice of any strike, he said.

Chrysler, which has been plagued by financial problems for years, says a strike could be crippling

'We're not going to try to intimidate the Chrysler workers," Fraser said at a news conference. "I think the workers are intelligent enough to know what's at stake."

In the past, Fraser has called the prospect of a strike "horrifying" because of the damage it might do to Chrysler, which has struggled back from the brink of bankruptcy in the last three years.

The impasse follows rank-and-file rejection of a union-negotiated contract that promised workers future pay increases contingent on company profits, plus modest cost-of-living increases.

The tentative pact, reached Sept. 16, was rejected by a 7-3 margin earlier this month, sending the UAW back to the bargaining table Friday to demand an immediate pay increase.

Delivering Chrysler's answer Monday, Thomas Miner, Chrysler vice president of industrial relations, said "there simply is no more money

"We told the union that a strike of any duration at all would severely cripple us, could ruin us in a number of weeks," Miner told a news conference. 'I hope they take that into consideration.

But Fraser insisted, "the only realistic alternative is to redesign the package with upfront Possibilities open to the union council Thursday are calling an immediate strike; setting a strike deadline and resuming negotiations; resubmitting to the rank-and-file the contract previously rejected; or agreeing to trim benefits to finance an immediate pay boost.

But Fraser ruled out resubmitting the rejected pact, saying the UAW leadership is obliged "to abide by the will of the majority."

He also said the union opposes giving up its health, welfare and pension benefits to underwrite immediate wage increases. Despite the stalemate, Fraser said he considered wildcat strikes by restless workers unlikely.

Man who stabbed himself committed after Reagan threat

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - A man who stabbed himself in the lobby of the Omaha World-Herald building was committed for psychiatric evaluation after saying he'd like to shoot President Reagan. the newspaper reported today.

Charles Kiss, 52, of Omaha, was committed by police Monday night to the psychiatric unit at Douglas County Hospital for 48 hours.

Earlier in the day, Kiss had entered the newspaper lobby and complained he couldn't find a job or pay his bills, showing two stacks of them to a World-Herald reporter, David Thompson. Kiss then thrust a six-inch boning knife an inch into the left part of his chest, the reporter said.

Kiss slumped to the ground in front of the reporter, a security guard and the newspaper's metropolitan editor.

He was taken to Lutheran Medical Center, treated for the wound, and transferred to the county hospital for psychiatric evaluation.

But he declined psychiatric care and apparently did not need to be committed involuntarily at that

Kiss walks on crutches because of arthritis and a lower back problem that left him unable to stand with him.

Missing executive

Healey said Kiss "has received substantial assistance from us in the previous months. We have been meeting his rent and utilities and he's probably received in excess of between $700 and $800 for food stamps over that period. We've also upset that Reagan favored the rich at the expense given him bus money and gas money to try to find

Before the stabbing, Kiss said he had taken his problems to welfare officials, legal aid lawyers and Social Security officials.

He held the knife to his chest and said, "I can't go on this way.

'I was trying for three or four minutes to talk him Kiss will need a psychiatric and physical into putting it down," Thompson said. "He was somewhat distraught ... but I thought it was just for International executive Edson Beckwith, who has not been heard from since Thursday. While Texas Rangers are treating Beckwith's disappearance as a missing person case, his car was found abandoned off a farm - to market road in remote Northeast Texas Friday night.

Scant clues are found in executive's disappearance

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — East Texas authorities continued searching for a former Braniff airline executive missing since Thursday, but said they have found scant evidence to explain his mysterious disappearance.

Law officers have found only a pair of gloves that might have belonged to Edson Emerson Beckwith, 51, of Dallas. Texas Ranger Lloyd Johnston of Sulphur Springs found the gloves along Interstate 30, the major east-west thoroughfare through the area. The gloves, he said, "looked like they had blood or mud on them. Authorities said Monday they planned to perform laboratory tests on the gloves, but say they have no evidence of a crime and are treating the disappearance as a missing person case. But Jane Beckwith says her husband is not the type to disappear of his own accord. "He's always been most prompt. He is a most precise man, a meticulous man," she said.

She said Beckwith, a financial consultant, was traveling west to Dallas after a Thursday business meeting in Omaha,

"He was coming home for my birthday to take me out to dinner. The people at his meeting said he wanted to leave early to pick up a birthday present for his wife," she said. "I haven't heard of any ransom. Nothing. It's just incredible," she said. On Sunday, Mrs. Beckwith formed a volunteer search party of neighbors to assist authorities in the East Texas hunt.

A Texas Ranger found Beckwith's car shortly before midnight Friday in Brashear, Texas, about 40 miles east of a Caddo Mills service station where a receipt showed he had purchased gasoline. "Somebody else had to have driven (the car) back east." Mrs. Beckwith said. "There was no evidence of anything in the car. All the keys, his suitcase and coat were still there. They say there is no evidence of foul play, but obviously something

"It's all very frustrating," she said. "I can't imagine. We are all just absolutely boggled." Johnston said he found a "reliable witness" Monday morning who saw Beckwith's car Thursday evening at the spot where it was found Friday night. 'We haven't been able to trace it back farther than that yet," said Johnston, who led a search of both sides of Interstate 30 Sunday.

Johnston said another witness claimed to have seen Beckwith being forced into another car. "But I don't put much credibility in that statement," Johnston said. "He could have just seen some kids stopping to" look at the car." he said. Mrs. Beckwith said she would not let their three children join the search.

By The Associated Press Republican lieutenant governor candidate George Strake has picked up the support of Bill Moore, a longtime Democratic power in the Texas Senate, who says Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby had held office "too long for one man in such a powerful position.'

Strake and Moore held a news conference in the Senate chamber Monday to announce Moore's decision to back the Republican.

"I've worked with (Hobby) for years. He's been here 10 years and has accomplished so little. He should have retired by himself, but since he hasn't, let's let George do it for him," he said.

Moore, who lost his Senate seat in 1980 after 32 years in the post, is featured in a $190,000 a week television ad campaign for Strake.

"Our present lieutenant governor, if re-elected, will have served for 14 years. Too long for any one man in such a powerful position. Particularly one who has accomplished so little," Moore says on the ad.

Jim Mattox, the Democratic candidate for attorney general, claimed Monday that his Republican opponent, Bill Meier, is using a political action committee to "launder" campaign contributions

"This is a typical Mattox distortion and untruth," said Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, head of Texans for a Competent Attorney General. Davis said his committee is "perfectly legal, and will make all campaign reports that are required.

"I challenge Jim Mattox to match our final reports due after the campaign because I am sure they will reflect that his special interest contributions will greatly overshadow my receipts. Meier said in a statement.

At his news conference, Mattox said Meier was "so afraid of telling the voters the truth about his campaign conributions that he's trying to launder money through another committee.

Davis said later that his group is a special political action committee and will have to make campaign reports at the same time Meier does. He said the committee was formed to support Meier.

Mattox said Meier campaign reports show that 43 percent of his contributions come from special interest political action committees. compared with about 12 percent for Mattox's campaign

Mattox said, if elected, he would recommend the Legislature pass a law limiting contribution from political action committees to $5,000 and $1,000 from

The Houston ordinance requires charitable groups to register and file statements to get a permit from the city tax assessor's office. A $5 fee must be paid and a statement is required explaining how the money will be used.

The appeals court's decision lifted U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton's injunction against the ordinance, but ordered him to conduct hearings on one final objection - that it creates too big a burden in time and money for Krishna followers.

The three-judge panel of the appeals court said there was not enough evidence on that point.

saying he was alive and well

Associated Press Writer BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -In the three months since the kidnapping of David S. Dodge II, the acting president of the American University of Beirut, there's been a letter and a tape recording from him saying he's alive, then six agonizing weeks of

The U.S. Embassy will say nothing more than it is operating on the assumption that Dodge is alive. But sources say investigators are working frantically behind the scenes, trying to get in touch with the kidnappers to press for his release.

"The sad fact is there is no one to negotiate with." said a well-placed source who asked not to be identified further. "It's strange. You kidnap someone because you want something, but we haven't been able to get in touch with identified only as "sources." The 58-year-old Dodge, who was born in Beirut, was abducted by two gunmen as he strolled home from his office on campus at sunset July 19. At the time, he was the most prominent American living in mostly Moslem West Beirut.

Sources said Dodge sent a handwritten letter and a tape recording to American officials in late August,

The U.S. Embassy had closed June 23 and its diplomats moved to the Christian east side of the city as Israel bombed the west in its war with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Some sources said they believe if the embassy had remained open, an American diplomat - not Dodge - would have been kidnapped There has been speculation that the gunmen were former and stating his kidnappers' demands. There has been students at the university, which could explain how they got past the guards at the gate to the 70-acre wooded campus overlooking the Mediterranean.

At first, Lebanese security sources said they suspected Dodge was kidnapped by Amal, a group of pro-Iranian Lebanese Shiite Moslems. But Nabih Berri, the Amal leader, condemned the abduction and said his people had nothing to do with it.

However, Lebanese police believe a splinter group of former Amal members may have carried out the kidnapping, one sources said.

The other mystery is who abducted the Iranian diplomats.

Mohsen Musavi, charges d'affaires at the Iranian embassy here, and three of his aides disappeared after entering east Beirut, which is controlled by rightist Christian militanmen from the Phalange Party to which President Amin Gemayel belongs. The Phalange, also known as the Kataeb, denied leftists accusations that its militiamen kidnapped the Iranians. It said the Iranians were turned back at a Phalange checkpoint and were last seen driving north toward Tripoli.

'The Kataeb claims they didn't have the guys," said one source. "Nobody knows who has them."

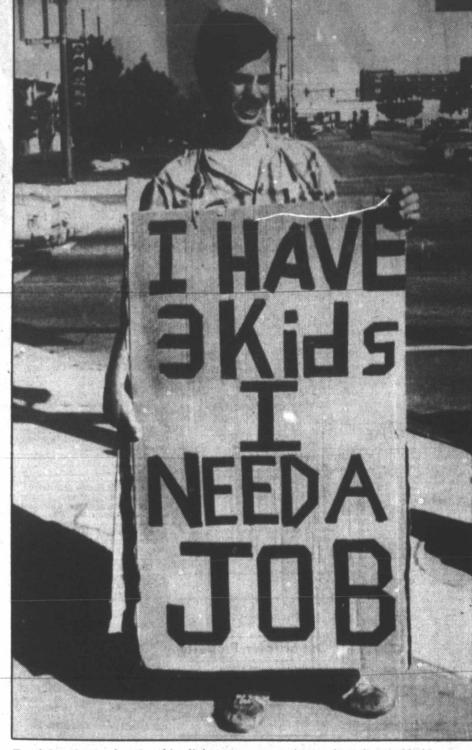

Apparently the men who abducted Dodge thought the United States could put pressure on the Phalange. whose militiamen cooperated with Israel during the war, to release the Iranian diplomats, sources said

Shortly after Dodge was abducted, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat ordered a house-to-house search for Dodge and offered to mediate to secure his release. The PLO said July 22 that it had identified the kidnappers but refused to say who they were.

But the sources said the kidnappers rebuffed the PLO and refused to negotiate. Since then, investigators have contacted "every militia group in Lebanon" but have turned up no new clues, a source said.

Investigators say the abduction is mysterious because the kidnappers haven't shown any desire to talk or even make their demands known, beyond the letter which Dodge sent in August. There has been no request for ransom

A First Texas 80's Report: On Professional Management.

Meet one of First Texas' newest ways to beat the 80's.

First Texas is committed to helping the citizens of Pampa and the Panhandle. One way we're meeting this commitment is giving our customers the best people, like our new branch manager, Dean Pullen.

We chose Dean for her 18 years of management experience and her extensive background in business and accounting. But Dean's most important ability is working with people. She understands that meeting your needs is the main goal of First Texas.

And meeting those needs is no problem when you're backed by $2.3 billion in assets and a statewide network of offices. First Texas currently serves over 11,000 families in the Panhandle and is a major financial force in the Pampa area. History buffs hope to raise sunken steamboat

JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) - It took the technology of underwater magnetic surveys to find a lake-bottom site that may hold the remains of a 312-ton steamer that burned and sank 113 years ago. But it's going to take money to find out for sure.

Some East Texas history buffs are trying to raise $15,000 to hire divers to explore a targeted area of the 3.500-acre Caddo Lake, where magnetic show the Mittie R may have come to rest. The vessel burned and sank in 1869, killing 64 of her 104 passengers in the worst lake disaster ever in Texas. Its bell and safe full of gold were recovered, but the remainder of the wreck disappeared under a blanket of

The surveys show that something metal is lying on the bottom of the south side of Caddo Lake, but it might only be beer cans.

Members of the Marion and Harrison county historical commissions are trying to collect $15,000 for the divers, and then another $50,000 to excavate the

Richard Collins of Dallas, a Texas Historical Commission member, said he hopes enough money gathered from foundations and individuals to schedule a dive early next summer "It appears we have discovered the remains of the Mittie B. Stephens, but there is no way of verifying that without divers," Collins said. "It may be beer cans or it may be the remains.

The burning boat came to rest only 20 feet from the shore, but darkness, fear of water and panic kept many of the victims from reaching safety, historians say.

Searchers believe the boat is in only five to 12 feet of water, but hidden under a deep layer of silt. The mud has made the identification effort more difficult. but may mean the boat is well-preserved.

"We want to exc for a lot of reasons, primarily to give us an insight into what life was like on a steamboat," said Duke DeWare, a Jefferson attorney who is leading the recovery effort.

Steamboats were a chief form of travel and shipping in the 1800s and of particular importance to Jefferson,
