

County voters turning out in heavier numbers than anticipated

By JEAN TIERNEY

Whatever the reason, Reaganomics or unemployment, Gray County voters started turning out in good numbers this morning to cast their ballots, prompting some election judges to predict a higher vote than usual for a non-presidential election.

At Austin School, eight or nine voters were already waiting when the polling place opened at 7 a.m. Election Judge Bill Chafin said. At 9:30, with about 225 ballots already cast, there was a lineup of 10 voters.

The voting during the first two hours was "very steady, very regular, (with) no excessive rushes," Chafin said. But if the morning's pace continued all day, he predicted an "excellent" turnout of the precinct's 1,525 voters, heavier than usual for an off-year election.

The county's 14 polling stations will stay open until 7 p.m. At the county court house, about 60 people out of the precinct's 518 registered voters cast their ballots during the first two hours. "We're doing pretty good," Election Judge Pauline Beard said.

At McLean, where 953 voters are registered, poll officer Ann Brown said the turnout "seems heavier than usual." The polling station at Alanreed School also was fairly busy. The more experienced poll officers there "think the interest might be a little better than usual," officer Kay Hallum said. "We think it's pretty good."

Three voters were already waiting in line at 7 a.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium, where 1,890 voters are registered in the precinct. Voting this morning was comparable to that of two years ago, with 185 ballots cast in the first two hours.

Rapist: He's 19, white, and lives next door

Part three of a series

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

The typical rapist is 19, white, and lives next door.

He also has some problems. Sociologists and psychologists generally agree that rape is not a sexually motivated criminal act. Rape involves anger and a need for power expressed through aggression.

"Many rapes are committed by people who see themselves as failures," said Joyce Shimek of Pampa Family Services. "They use rape as a way to experience power and control."

The attackers rape as a form of displaced aggression, she said, although sexual excitement is involved. Rapists usually rape on impulse, she added.

Studies of the psychology of rapists admit that findings may be distorted for one major reason: the researchers are only able to study reported cases and convicted rapists when 90 percent of the total number of rapes are never reported. For this reason, 90 percent of rapes — a tremendous gap — are impossible to study.

'a weak and insecure person's inability to handle the stress...'

"What seems so markedly important is that the study of the convicted offenders indicated that the men rarely appeared to make any initial efforts to negotiate a sexual relationship with their victim," say Dr. A. Nicholas Groth and Ann W. Burgess in their book Rape: A Sexual Deviation.

"They did not exhibit any serious effort at engagement or seduction. Their approach was one of either intimidation and/or assault. In no case in the offender sample did the man have to rape for sexual gratification," the authors say.

"Rapists prey on victims regardless of age, race, religion, or socio-economic status. Sex is not the reason for rape. Anger, power and aggression are involved in all cases," said Travis Plumlee, director of social services at Coronado Community Hospital. "Sex is used as the method by which the rapist vents his frustrations."

Besides expressing anger and control, rape also helps the offender deny his fear of women and homosexual impulses, Groth and Burgess say.

By raping, the attacker feels he has proven his "manhood" and potency.

Dr. Groth divides rapists into three categories:

the power rapist (55 percent), the anger rapist (40 percent) and the sadistic rapist (5 percent).

According to Groth, the power rapist is seeking conquest, power and control over another. Sex is seen as a symbol of power. He wishes to control the victim by threats, but usually does not use extra force. He tends to plan his rapes in advance, acting out his fantasies during the assault. He has a traditional outlook, uncomfortable with sexuality; women are seen as either virgins or whores, men are either macho or queer. The rape is his means of gaining control of life's events, and of gaining self-esteem. He usually knows the victim's name, address and phone number, may even drive her home after the assault, acting as if everything is all right.

Anger rapists use forcible sex as a way to show his contempt for women. He rapes in order to degrade. Attacks are usually explosive and severe with more force and brutality. Beating, along with verbal abuse, is included. He humiliates the victim. Victims are usually chosen at random.

Extreme cruelty, brutality and sadism are marks of the sadistic rapist. He is gratified by intentionally mistreating the victim taking pleasure in her suffering. The attacks often involve bondage and torture. Rape may involve foreign objects such as sticks, bottles. Extreme cases involve murder and grotesque acts such as dismemberment, mutilation or intercourse with the corpse, although the murder in some cases may be an accidental result of the torture. Assaults are deliberate, pre-planned.

"The typical American rapist might be the boy next door," Plumlee said. "Especially if the boy next door happens to be about 19 years old and the neighborhood you live in happens to fit the socio-economic description of lower class or is called a ghetto."

FBI statistics show that 61 percent of reported rapists are under age 25, most in the 16 to 24 range. Of these, 51 percent are white and 47 percent are black, the rest are a variety of other races. He tends to live in the same neighborhood as the victim. He most often plans the rape which usually occurs between 8 p.m. and 2 a.m. The rape usually occurs in the victim's own home.

"The typical rapist is no weirdo, psycho schizophrenic beset by timidity, sexual deprivation or a domineering wife or mother," Plumlee said. "The typical American rapist is little more than an aggressive, hostile youth who chooses to do violence to women."

Most men with some wealth and prestige are able to be acceptably "masculine" within social boundaries. He has some degree of control, power and dominance over life and other people.

But others feel thwarted and angry because of their lack of wealth and power and are quick to turn to violence and physical aggression as a way to demonstrate their masculinity and toughness. Sexual aggression is part of a "macho" image

"To describe a rapist as oversexed is not only an oversimplification, it is totally inaccurate," Plumlee said. The majority of sexual offenders are actively involved in consenting sexual relationships with wives or other partners, he said.

"Rape is always a symptom of some sort of psychological disturbance, but not necessarily a psychological illness," he added.

The disturbance may be temporary or happen over and over. Usually it is an act resulting from an emotionally weak and insecure person's inability to handle the stresses and demands of life.

"The vast majority of offenders studied by Dr. Groth are not insane — nor are they simply aggressive young men 'sowing wild oats,'" Plumlee said.

A prominent characteristic of a rapist, he said, is the person's difficulty with personal relationships. Another characteristic is the absence of any close, emotionally intimate relationships with males or females. He has little capacity for warmth, trust, compassion or empathy (understanding), Plumlee added.

'To describe a rapist as oversexed is not only an oversimplification, it is totally inaccurate...'

This inability to feel affection for others plus being unable to deal appropriately with anger, he said, often results in a smoldering irritation toward everyday life. The rapist seriously doubts himself. To him, sex is a way to gain control, power, self-esteem and to ward off self-doubts of masculinity. Dr. Groth says that, in a large part, society sanctions this behavior as an appropriate outlet for emotions.

Rapists tend to have traditional, stereotyped views of male and female behavior, Plumlee said. Women are responsible for men's sexual feelings, the rapist feels. Sex is seen as dirty and homosexuality is the ultimate perversion.

Rapists feel little or no remorse for what they do, Plumlee said. They feel the victim deserved what she got, blame others and take no personal responsibility for their actions.

Also, these men turn ordinary events and behavior into something sexual, he said. "For example, ordinary friendliness is seen as a 'come-on,'" he said. "At the same time, an aloof woman is deemed a 'cold, frigid bitch,'" so that the average woman can hardly escape his hostility," he explained.

Trial run

Two new computerized ballot counters are expected to give Gray County the results of today's election within two to five hours after the polls close tonight Friday. County Clerk Wanda Carter put a sample ballot under the machine's scanner to show how it works.

Pampa is first city to use new vote-counting machine

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Radio, television, newspapers are full of "paid political advertisements," familiar faces of friends and neighbors smile down at us from bill boards scattered around the city. You've got it. Election time again.

This morning the polls opened at 7 a.m. and will remain open to 7 p.m. as registered voters exercise their constitutional right to decide who is to hold elected offices.

This year, however, things will be a little different. Pampans won't be casting their votes on the familiar paper ballots. Today they'll be filling out ballots designed to be popped into a computer for counting.

Election officials are pleased with the new set up of two Optec II machines. The counters were recently purchased by the county for $9,000.

Pampa is only the second city in the United States to use these computer vote counters and the only city to use them in a general election, election officials say.

New ballots are long, slender (six inches wide by 18 inches long) and slightly stiff unlike the old ones.

"Remember, they're printed on both the front and the back," warned Wanda Carter, Gray County Clerk. "Vote with a lead pencil by drawing a straight heavy mark across the indicated box or just fill it in."

Remember those tests you took in

Manhunt starts in Tylenol case

CHICAGO (AP) — Police in Illinois and Kentucky were looking today for a man with a history of mental illness after investigators searched his apartment and said it was "essential" to question him about the seven deaths from cyanide-tainted Tylenol.

An all-points bulletin for Kevin J. Masterson, 35, a former Chicago-area resident, was issued to police nationwide Monday, Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said.

Fahner declined to specify why Masterson was being sought, but said "an interview with Masterson is essential" to the investigation into the late September deaths of seven people who took Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules spiked with cyanide.

Masterson has not been charged with any crime or named in an arrest warrant. His father told the Chicago Tribune that his son was not involved in the deaths, but "has a big mouth" and might have made comments about the killings that were distorted.

Masterson was believed to have traveled to Murray, a town in southern Kentucky, said Fahner, head of a multi-agency task force investigating the deaths. Two investigators from the task force went to Murray on Monday.

One of the investigators, Jerry Lee of the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation, said he had interviewed a friend of Masterson near Murray but found no trace of Masterson. Lee declined to comment further.

The bulletin described Masterson as "having a history of mental disorders" and warned that he "may be violent." It said he was wanted for questioning in multiple homicides.

Authorities went to Masterson's rented room in the Chicago suburb of Lombard on Friday night, Fahner said in a statement. They recovered "various items" including "substances" that were being tested at state laboratories, the statement said. It did not elaborate.

Interviews conducted by investigators on Saturday and Sunday convinced them Masterson should be questioned, the statement said.

The FBI still was looking for James W. Lewis, who is charged in an alleged

Airport to get new lights

Gray County Commissioners discussed their proposed $3.5 million budget for 1983, awarded a bid for new wiring on the main runway lights at Perry Lefors Airport, and agreed to pay the county's share for the operation of the district's central appraisal office. Commissioners will hold two more public sessions on the budget at 2 p.m. Thursday and at 9:30 a.m. November 12.

$1 million extortion attempt from Johnson & Johnson, the parent company of McNeil Consumer Products Co., the maker of Tylenol.

Lewis is charged only with extortion, but Fahner has said authorities want to question him and his wife about the killings.

Murray Police Capt. Dale Spann confirmed his department had received the all-points bulletin issued by Cmdr. Edward Cisowski of the Illinois Department of Criminal Investigation.

Final approval of the proposed county spending plan is expected on the 12th.

The proposed budget is up about $300,000 over the current budget, but commissioners already gave approval to a much lower county tax rate.

Commissioners voted October 15 to drop the tax rate from the current 27.37 cents per $100 valuation, down to 10 cents per $100.

Commissioners were able to drop the rate due to a surplus of about $3 million achieved through the sale of the county hospital, according to County Judge Carl Kennedy.

The new tax rate and budget are effective January 1, as the county operates on a calendar year.

Commissioners Monday also approved payment of $19,927 for the county's 1982 share for the operation of the Gray County Tax Appraisal District office. All 10 county taxing units in Gray County share in the office's cost of operation.

Solo truck accident kills one

By JEFF LANGLEY
State Editor

A Buffalo, Okla. man is dead and another is critically injured following the crash of a two-ton grain truck late Monday night east of Pampa.

David A. Wilmot, 20, of Buffalo, was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

His partner, David A. Coburn, 18, also of Buffalo, is in critical condition today at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

The one-vehicle wreck occurred near the intersection of Texas 152 and U.S. 60, about seven miles east of Pampa.

According to Department of Public Safety troopers, the men were westbound on 152 in a 1977 Ford truck. Investigators said the pair was approaching the stop sign at the intersection of the two highways, where 152 curves sharply. Officers said when the truck hit the curve, it went out of control and crashed.

According to Pampa DPS trooper Robert Wilson, the truck left the roadway, overturned onto its side, and went into a skid. The truck skidded along on its side for about 100 feet, before it smacked into a concrete drainage pipe in the ditch beside the road, according to the DPS accident report. The force of striking the concrete culvert stopped the truck and flipped it over onto its top.

The force of the wreck resulted in both men being ejected from the cab of the truck, Wilson said.

Coburn was thrown clear of the wreckage. Wilmot was pinned under the cab, and was pronounced dead at the scene.

Pampa firefighters were called to the scene to free the victim with a "jaws of life" tool.

Officers said the men were both employed by the Buffalo Feed Lot and were hauling a load of metal rollers used in a cattle feeding operation.

Coburn was transported by Pampa Medical Services ambulance to Coronado Community Hospital, and he was later taken to the Amarillo facility.

A spokesman for Northwest Texas Hospital said Coburn is in critical condition today.

Local arrangements for Wilmot are by Carmichael-Whitely Funeral Directors.

The victim will be transported to Langford Funeral Home in Susquehanna, Penn. where services are pending.

For the corpse on the go

So granddad passed on before you two could take that fishing trip you'd always planned? Well, now you can take him along! Yes, thanks to Airstream Inc., the casket fits in rather well in its special compartment along with the fishing poles. Of course, if that doesn't appeal to you, you can always use the "funeral coach" for what it was designed for, to take the casket, 14 passengers, and 20 baskets of flowers from the chapel to the cemetery. They claim it gets good mileage, too, but who's counting? (AP Laserphoto)

Despite economy, they began a steel mill and made it work

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — In an age when the U.S. steel industry is in full retreat, Bob Bunting and Carl Calloway are going in the opposite direction — running a "mini-mill" they say is about to show a profit after only 10 weeks of operation.
The men are the principal operating officers of Steel of West Virginia, Inc., a 235-employee mill that converts scrap into specialty items for a select but lucrative market.
Six months ago Calloway was a recently retired accountant who had no idea he would be trying to help run a steel mill.
"I had never been in the mill before," he said last week. "And I only had a slight acquaintance with Bob."
Back then, Bunting was the local plant manager for Connors Steel, a division of the Pittsburgh-based H.K. Porter Co. As the man who ran the day-to-day operations of the Huntington facility, he sensed H.K. Porter was about to close the mill.
"Bob called me one day last April and I thought he wanted to set up a golf game," Calloway said. "But it wasn't about golf; he wanted to have lunch. And when we got together he said, 'I want you to help me buy the Connors Steel plant.'"
After some thought, Calloway said yes.
"I'm sure that we'll show a profit for October," said Bunting, the president of the operation. Calloway, the vice president and the man who's good with figures, doesn't disagree.
Neither was willing to say how much money they would make. They did say, however, that the business is on schedule and they are confident Steel of West Virginia and its employees has a secure future.
How can a small mill in the southern West Virginia make money when much of the steel industry is in trouble?
"There are several reasons," said Bunting, who grew up in a Pennsylvania steel town. "For one thing, we're very competitive in tooling costs, and we also have an experienced work force that knows how to produce."
For another, he said, the company concentrates on specialty items — such as lightweight I-beams for the trucking and mobile home industries, and track rail for coal mines — that haven't particularly interested "the steel giants in the past."
"There are two kinds of mills," Bunting said. "There are integrated mills, which make steel from iron ore, and mini-mills that use scrap. Well, we're one of some 50 mini-mills operating in this country today. And, for the market we specialize in, we have relatively few competitors, either here or abroad."
That's a major reason why Bunting was willing to mortgage his home to help back the venture, and why

Calloway was willing to plow tens of thousand of his own dollars into the plant.
They, and 15 other local investors, with the help of eight Huntington bankers and the governor's office, put together the $3 million purchase package.
"There are 17 or 18 investors who own 15 shares," Calloway said. "Bob and I each own one of these 15 shares."
Both men play down the concept of ownership and don't like to talk about labor and management.
"We don't view it in those terms," Bunting said. "This is a cooperative effort that stresses teamwork."
He said the plant is being run much differently than when it shut down at the end of July, with more than 600 people on the payroll. When it reopened in mid-August, there were some 400 fewer workers, and many of those in Steelworkers Local 37 were making far less than they had a few weeks earlier.
However, as union officials pointed out, some of the men did have jobs, and the mill was still open.
"It's no secret that we wanted to reopen as a non-union operation," Bunting said. "That wasn't in the cards, however. But we have a tremendous cooperative spirit here now and, while I don't mean to say anything against unions, it's as if we don't have a union."
And, no bosses.
"Everybody is on salary here yet we have almost no absenteeism," he said. "It's rare if we have two people off at the same time. And if we do, those who are off the job know that their teammates are having to pick up the slack, because we don't call anybody in to replace them."
"The lines between labor and management were drawn too rigidly," when Connors ran the plant, he said. "Now, however, everybody's involved in the process. This is the way we operate."
The two men predict that this is the way other U.S. steel mills, those who want to survive, will be operating before too long.
"There are 17 or 18 investors who own 15 shares," Calloway said. "Bob and I each own one of these 15 shares."

Movie mogul King Vidor dead at 87

PASO ROBLES, Calif. (AP) — King Vidor, whose 34 years as a movie director spanned Hollywood's transition from silent films to talkies and brought realism to the screen's fantasy world, is dead at age 87.
Vidor's credits include the original 1931 version of "The Champ," with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, and "The Fountainhead" in 1948 starring Gary Cooper as Ayn Rand's rebel architect.
His cardiologist, Dr. Stanley Hoffman, pronounced Vidor dead at 7:30 a.m. Monday after he was called to Vidor's 88-acre Willow Creek ranch in the rolling seaside hills halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.
A five-time Oscar nominee, Vidor never received that coveted statuette as best director.
But in 1979, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences gave him a special award with an inscription citing "his lifetime achievements as a cinematic creator and innovator."
American critics tended to belittle his achievement until late in his career, but he was a favorite in Europe. His 1955 version of "War and Peace" played in Moscow for six months.

In 1979 the Moscow Film Festival awarded him the "Russian Oscar."
Born Feb. 8, 1895, in Galveston, Texas, Vidor abandoned his family's lumber and hardware business after working as a local movie projectionist. He and his first wife, Florence — later a noted silent screen actress — arrived in Hollywood in their Model T Ford with 20 cents and no job prospects.
He hung around studios and began working as a $1.50-a-day actor for the chance to watch D.W. Griffith direct. He became a script clerk, a cameraman and by overstating his directing experience, began turning out half-hour shorts.
Vidor's credits include "The Citadel" (1938); "Northwest Passage" (1940); "H.M. Pulham, Esq." (1941) and "Duel in the Sun" (1946). His last film was "Solomon and Sheba" (1959).
He is survived by three daughters, eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.
A private memorial service was planned Wednesday but there will be no funeral, a family spokesman said.

Farmer's light bill up 50%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers' electric bills are up more than 50 percent from what they averaged three years ago, according to a government survey.
According to the Agriculture Department's annual summer survey of electric bills, the average payment by farmers nationally was $83.90 per month, up 20 percent from the 1981 average of $69.80.
The average monthly bill in 1980 was $61.90, and the 1979 average was $55.10 per month.
Put another way, based on average October prices for each year, it took about 25 bushels of wheat to pay a farmer's monthly electric bill this year: 18.5 bushels in 1981; 14.8 bushels in 1980; and 13.8 bushels in 1979.
Wheat prices last were about $3.35 a bushel, on a preliminary basis. In the three previous Octobers, wheat averaged $3.77 in 1981; $4.19 in 1980; and $3.98 in 1979.
Part of the reason for the larger bills this year is that farmers used more electricity — an average of 1,356 kilowatt hours per month, up 4 percent from 1,307 in 1981.
In 1979, the average was 1,299 kwh per month, and in 1980 the average rose to 1,313 before falling to 1,307 last year.
The cost per unit of electricity, however, has increased steadily to an average of 6.31 cents per kwh this year, a gain of 18 percent from 5.34 cents per kwh in 1981. Power costs paid by farmers averaged 4.72 cents per kwh in 1980 and 4.24 cents in 1979.

Some of the biggest farm users of electricity are in the West, with Arizona and California tied at 3,000 kwh per month, followed by Washington at 2,880.
Rates in Arizona averaged 7.4 cents per kwh, down from 7.6 in 1981. California's, however, jumped to 7.2 cents per kwh from 5.4 cents last year, the survey showed.
The average bill in Arizona was $222 per month, compared to $216 in California.
In Washington, which traditionally has lower electricity costs, the rate average was 2.6 cents per kwh, up from 2.3 cents last year. The average bill was $74.90 for 2,880 kwh.
Some of the highest costs of electric power are in the Northeast. In New Jersey, for example, the average user was 1,300 kwh at a cost of 9.1 cents per kwh — a monthly bill of $118.50.
Comparatively, Iowa farmers used an average of 1,500 kwh per month this summer at a rate of 6.6 cents per kwh, making a bill of $99.
Kansas farmers averaged 1,000 kwh per month, paying 6.9 cents per kwh. Their bills averaged $69 per month.
Tennessee farmers, who used 1,050 kwh, paid 4.8 cents per kwh or an average of $50.40 per month.
In Georgia, farmers used an average of 1,300 kwh per month at a rate of 6 cents per kwh — a charge of $78 per month.

Five plead guilty to crime spree

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Five men arrested after a May crime spree in a private home and two suburban diners, where many of the terrorized victims were forced to strip, surrender their valuables and engage in sexual acts, have pleaded guilty to 819 charges.
"This closes the door on some of the most infamous crimes ever committed in Nassau County," said Judge Raymond Harrington. The crimes involved more than 100 victims, and Harrington said the Monday pleas would spare the female victims from the "humiliation, degradation and denigration" of a trial.

The defendants, all from the Brooklyn in New York City, were charged with traveling to Plainview, a suburb on Long Island 20 miles to the east, and forcing their way into a family party on May 29 during the Memorial Day weekend.
They ordered everyone to undress and lie on the floor, then raped two women, beat another guest with a blackjack and robbed other guests of thousands of dollars in cash and jewelry police said.
About 45 minutes later, according to police, the five armed men robbed, raped and humiliated 75 patrons at the Sea Crest Diner in Old Westbury. The defendants forced the customers to strip and lie on the floor, police said. At gunpoint, they ordered some of the victims to have sex with one another while they looked on and laughed.
A similar attack was made on a second diner.
The men entered the pleas after Harrington ruled that statements they made to arresting officers would be admissible as evidence if the case went to trial.
"I'm going to give you the maximum on every count if you plead guilty," the judge said at the pretrial hearing in Nassau County Court. Each man faces up to 30 years in prison at sentencing Dec. 7. They could be eligible for parole in 15 years.
No plea bargaining was involved, said Assistant District Attorney Daniel Cotter. He said his office had received petitions with more than 30,000 signatures asking that no plea bargain be arranged.

SPS's earnings up $55 million

AMARILLO — Southwestern Public Service Company has reported a 5.8-percent increase in common share earnings and a 10.3-percent increase in gross revenues for 1982 over 1981.
The electric utility attributes the revenue gains primarily to a program which increased its recovery of fuel costs, the company's board chairman, Berl M. Springer said in the board's October report.
Gross revenues for the year ending Aug. 31, 1982, were $588.9 million, up $55 million over the previous 12 months, Springer said. Earnings per common share rose from $1.91 to $2.02 over the same period.
Southwestern's first Tolk Station coal-fired generating unit went into operation and on line this fall, raising the company's generating capacity from coal to approximately 45 percent of its total capacity. A second coal-fired unit at the Tolk Station, also designed to produce 561,000 kilowatts of power, is to be completed in the summer of 1985, Springer said. The company, which provides electricity for more than a million people from the Panhandle to southwestern Kansas, has budgeted $131 million for construction projects in 1983.

Gray Co. in top 20% of oil producing Texas counties

Gray County's oil and gas wells last year pumped $197 million worth in 1981, ranking 56th among the state's 254 counties, the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Assoc. of Dallas reported this month.
County wells produced 3.9 million barrels of crude oil valued at $133 million and 35.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas valued at $64 million, the association said. The wells also produced $24.6 million in royalties.
Approximately 2,140 people worked in the petroleum industry in Gray County last year, according to the Texas Employment Commission, receiving a total of $47.3 million in wages.
Oil and gas operators drilled 139 new wells, two of them wildcat wells, for a reported expenditure of $42.1 million. Eleven gas wells and 116 oil wells were completed, bringing the county's total of producing wells to 4,274 by April 1, 1982, the association said. Last year, 12 of the 139 new wells were dry holes, costing a loss of $5.8 million. Of the April total, 3,368 wells were producing oil and 906 gas.
Producers in the county paid an estimated $10.9 million to the state in production taxes, the association reported. Crude oil taxes amounted to $6.1 million and natural gas levies totalled $4.8 million in 1981.
At the processing end, the association reported six natural gas processing plants with a total daily capacity of 226.6 million cubic feet in Gray County, one petrochemical plant and carbon black plant.
The Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association prepares periodic reports on production and marketing of petroleum products throughout the state.

Chagra implicates his older brother, hit man in judge killing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson bragged about shooting a federal judge in the back with "a clean shot" from a high-powered rifle three years ago, a key government witness testified.

El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra, 36, also told jurors Monday that his older brother — 39-year-old Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra — admitted hiring Harrelson to assassinate U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Joseph Chagra, who has pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy, told jurors he advised his brother to have Wood killed after the judge refused to disqualify himself from presiding at Jimmy Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial.

Jurors today were expected to begin listening to secret FBI tapes and reading transcripts of Jimmy Chagra's conversations with his brother and his wife, Elizabeth, from October 1980 to January 1981 at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Jimmy Chagra, serving 30 years without parole for criminal enterprise, is accused of paying Harrelson $250,000 to kill the judge. He will be tried for murder separately later.

Harrelson is charged with shooting Wood here on May 29, 1979. Also on trial are Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, 41, charged with obstruction of justice and perjury, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28, charged with conspiracy to kill Wood and obstruction of justice.

Joseph Chagra told a packed courtroom Monday that the plot to kill Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his stiff sentences in narcotics cases, was hatched in a Midland, Texas, courtroom on April 2, 1979.

Wood had refused to disqualify himself from Chagra's drug trial and granted only one of about 30 motions Joseph Chagra filed in his brother's behalf.

Chagra said both brothers were angry and upset as they sat at the counsel table after the hearing.

"Jimmy told me he was never going to get a fair trial and if I thought he should try to get Judge Wood killed," the younger brother testified.

"I told him he should," he said.

Chagra said the two brothers discussed Wood's death again as they walked across the front lawn of Jimmy Chagra's $1 million mansion in Las Vegas, Nev.

"Do you still think I should do it?" Jimmy Chagra allegedly asked.

"Do you know anybody who would do that?" Joseph Chagra said he replied. "He said, yes, he did. I said, 'Yes.'"

Chagra reportedly will receive a prison term of no more than 10 years in exchange for his cooperation.

"He (Jimmy) told me he didn't want to tell me any more about it because he didn't want me involved," he said.

Wood was shot in the back outside his San Antonio townhome on the same day Jimmy Chagra originally had been scheduled for trial.

After the killing, his brother "told me he had nothing to do with it," Chagra testified.

But in July 1979, when casino records of several people — including

Harrelson — were subpoenaed in Las Vegas, Chagra said his older brother then "pointed to Mr. Harrelson's name and said he was the person he'd hired to kill Judge Wood."

In March 1980, Joseph Chagra testified, Harrelson appeared at the El Paso apartment of a mutual friend, where the two met privately and Harrelson boasted about the assassination.

Harrelson told Chagra "that he'd shot Wood with a high-powered rifle. Judge Wood was standing by his car."

"When he reached in the car with a briefcase, that's when I shot him in the back," Chagra quoted Harrelson as saying. "He said it was a clean shot."

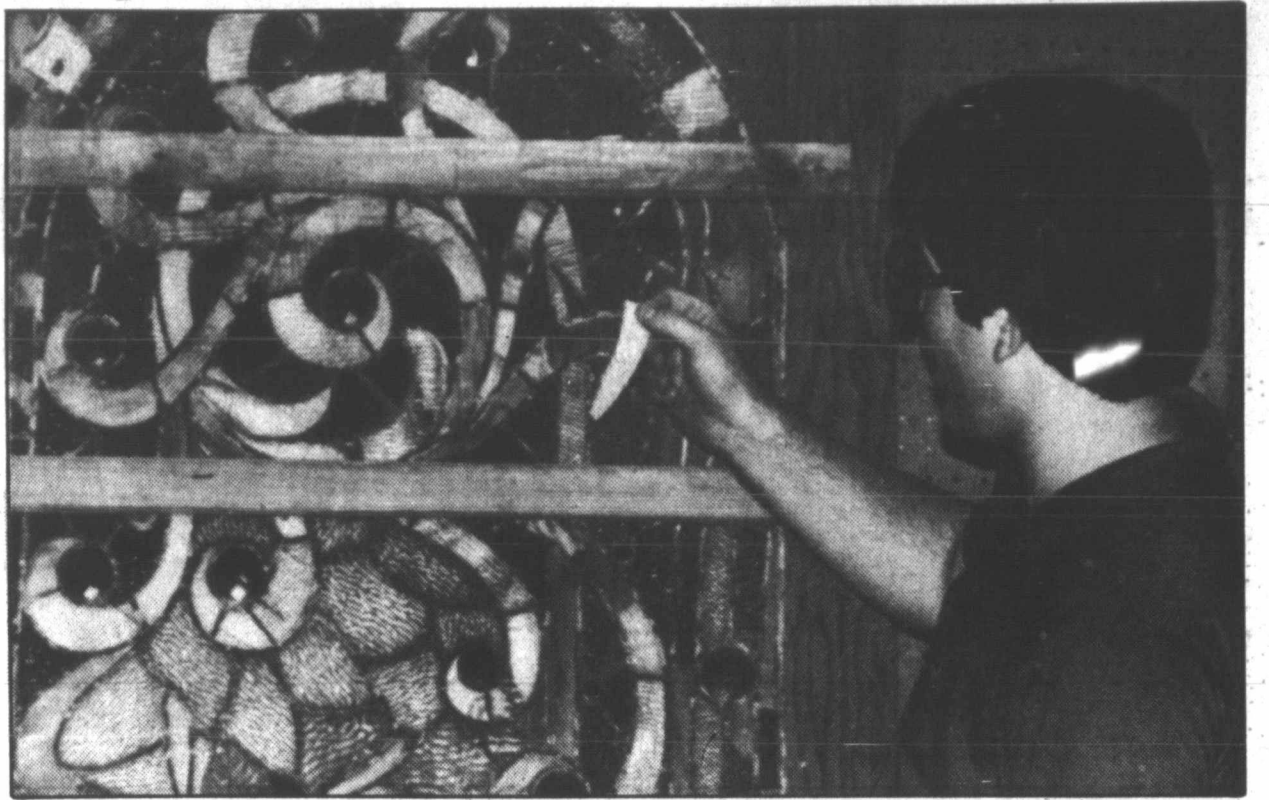

Harrelson told the attorney no one saw the shooting and "it really wouldn't have mattered because he was disguised. Earlier that morning he had actually walked past Judge Wood," Chagra said.

Chagra said Harrelson bragged he already had been "cleared, exonerated" by the federal grand jury investigating Wood's slaying, the first murder of a federal judge in this century.

Chagra, at one point Monday testifying without the jury present, said Harrelson asked him in December 1980 to smuggle a gun into the Harris County Jail so Harrelson could escape and "eliminate" his wife and stepdaughter as witnesses.

Harrelson's stepdaughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, 24, has testified she flew to Las Vegas and picked up the alleged $250,000 "payoff."

Sentence date set for man in Gulf extortion plot plea bargain

HOUSTON (AP) — One of five people indicted for trying to extort $15 million from the Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. pleaded guilty and agreed to testify against co-defendants to "be out of prison before his children get too old," his attorney said.

Timothy K. Justice, 30, of Durango, Colo., pleaded guilty Monday to using a long distance phone call to promote a felony and to interstate transportation of illegal explosives.

A federal judge says she will wait until Dec. 14 to sentence Justice, who pleaded guilty to two charges in the attempted extortion that included planting explosives inside a refinery.

Prosecutors said the remaining 10 counts would be dismissed in a plea bargain arrangement under which Justice has agreed to testify against four co-defendants.

If U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald accepts the agreement, Justice could be sentenced to as much as 15 years in prison and fined $20,000. He had faced up to 105 years in prison and a $105,000 fine.

"He just wanted to tell the truth and take his punishment so he can be out of prison before his children get too old," attorney David Duncan said. "He said he deeply regrets getting involved in the whole thing."

Duncan said Justice's children are aged 1 and 2.

Ms. McDonald ordered a presentencing investigative report on Justice. Duncan asked that sentencing be delayed still further because one of the defendants, Jill Renee Bird, is scheduled to go to trial that day.

Justice is being held on $1 million bond in the Harris County Jail.

During the hearing, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods said Justice had admitted planting five bombs under various tanks and buildings on at Gulf's Cedar Bayou plant, about 30 miles east of Houston.

Asked if he hid the devices "intentionally, willfully and knowingly," Justice responded, "Yes, your honor."

Ms. McDonald said, "Therefore, I find you guilty as charged."

Justice's wife, DeDe, fidgeted on the front row of the courtroom through the proceeding.

Duncan said Justice had talked three times with the FBI and testified before a federal grand jury here investigating the $15 million extortion attempt.

Justice and four others are accused of threatening to blow up the Gulf refinery unless they were paid $15 million.

Justice, a reserve police officer in Durango in 1980 from February to July, was arrested Oct. 6 and afterward admitted that he cut the security fence at the Gulf plant and hid five explosive devices inside, the FBI said.

Gulf shut down its billion-dollar plant for about five days after receiving the bomb threat Sept. 28. One bomb found inside the plant exploded harmlessly while being deactivated and four others were defused safely.

Justice was indicted on federal extortion charges along with Ms. Bird, 34; her common-law husband, John Marvin McBride, 46; Michael Allen Worth, 34; and Theodore Duane McKinney, 45. All are from Durango.

Ms. Bird is scheduled to go on trial Dec. 14. She pleaded innocent last week and was freed on $200,000 bail.

Her lawyer said the Justice Department reneged on an agreement to give her immunity in exchange for information from McBride on the location of five more bombs in Colorado. But federal prosecutors said McBride wasn't completely truthful with them and that the agreement was not binding because it was made under duress.

McBride, accused of masterminding the bomb-extortion plot, is waiting to be transferred from Colorado to Texas. McKinney and Worth are expected to be moved to Texas from Phoenix later this week.

The three men are being held in lieu of $1 million bail each.

About 2.5 million voters expected to journey to polls today in Texas

Secretary of State David Dea predicted about 2.5 million Texans would vote today in elections for governor, U.S. Senate, nine other statewide executive and judicial spots, 27 congressional seats and 181 legislative seats.

Dea said Monday he expected about a 42 percent turnout of voters, based upon a spot check of absentee voting in 38 counties, where 59 percent of the registered voters live.

At the top of the ticket were races for governor and the Senate.

Gov. Bill Clements, the state's first Republican chief executive since Reconstruction, faced a challenge from Democratic Attorney General Mark White, who won the nomination without a majority last May.

White led a field of four Democratic candidates and received the nomination when Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple dropped out of a runoff battle.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat seeking his third term, was challenged for re-election by U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas.

Collins, in a campaign that reminded some observers of Bentsen's successful fight against then-U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough in 1970, has criticized Bentsen for his "liberal" and "un-Texan" voting stances.

Bentsen has labeled Collins an "extremist" who has not passed any of his own legislation during 14 years in Congress.

Clements and White continued their head-knocking campaigns Monday with quick visits to the largest groups of voters in the state.

"We'll knock off the door of the governor's mansion and open it to the people of Texas," White promised a noon rally in downtown Houston.

Clements told a noon rally in Dallas that he was confident voters would favor him in Tuesday's election "and retire White, a career politician."

Clements was supported by Vice President George Bush, former Gov. John Connally, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

"The opposition is shrill," said Bush, who called Clements a "great governor for Texas."

Bush said the Republican's leadership in his first term prevented a teachers' strike, brought about $1 billion in tax relief and added 800,000 jobs during the four years.

Appearing with White were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby; Ann Richards, Democratic nominee for treasurer; Garry Mauro, Democratic candidate for land commissioner; and Jim Hightower, Democratic candidate for agriculture commissioner.

White said Clements had "turned the Public Utility Commission into lap dogs. I'm going to turn the commission into a servant of the people," he said.

Hobby squared off for re-election today against George Strake, a Houston oilman and former secretary of state under Clements.

Ms. Richards, a former Travis County commissioner who upset incumbent Warren Harding in the Democratic primary, faced Republican Allen Clark, a former Clements aide, in the treasurer's race.

Republican Woody Glasscock challenged Mauro in the land commissioner's race. Incumbent Bob Armstrong staged an unsuccessful run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination earlier this year.

Hightower, a writer and consumer activist who beat incumbent Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary, battled Republican Fred Thornberry, a Texas A&M poultry specialist, in the agriculture commissioner's race.

In the attorney general's race, Republican Bill Meier, a retiring state senator from Euless, faced U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox, a Dallas Democrat.

Incumbent Comptroller Bob Bullock was challenged by Republican Mike Richards, a former state senator.

Democratic Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent was seeking his first full term. Nugent, a former state representative from Kerrville, faced Republican John Thomas Henderson, a retired Austin businessman who accepts no campaign contributions.

In a Supreme Court race, Democrat Ted Robertson of Dallas, a judge for 17 years, faced Republican John L. Bates of Waco, a lawyer for the 36 years.

Use of drug-sniffing dogs restricted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Houston-area school district cannot use dogs to sniff out students for drugs and alcohol, but can continue to use the canines to search student lockers and automobiles, a federal appeals court panel has ruled.

A three-judge panel of 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Monday that the dog search program used by the Goose Creek Consolidated Independent School District was a response to a growing alcohol and drug abuse problem in the schools.

The dogs — usually German shepherds or Dobermans — are trained to alert their handlers to any one of approximately 60 different substances. The teams visit the schools on an unannounced, random basis. They sniff student lockers and automobiles and go into classrooms on leash to sniff the students themselves.

"When a dog alerts the handler to the odor of an illicit substance on a student's person, after the sweep of the classroom is completed and the dog and handler have departed, a school official discreetly asks the student to leave the class and go to the administrators' office, where he is subjected to a search of pockets, purse, and outer garments," the court noted.

If a student is caught with contraband, he or she may agree to seek outside counseling. Otherwise, the administrator may recommend the student be suspended.

A class action was brought by two students, Robby Horton and Sandra Sanchez, after they were singled out for searching but were not found in possession of contraband.

They contended the sniffing searches violated the Fourth Amendment prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures, and the 14th Amendment ban on deprivation of liberty and property without due process.

A lower court refused to certify the suit as a class action and ruled the car, locker, and body sniffing are "reasonable" searches under the Fourth Amendment.

The 5th Circuit disagreed, saying that a "reasonable suspicion" is required in order for the sniffing to be constitutional, and that the court record did not reflect the reliability of the dogs' drug sniffing abilities.

The court cited related case law which held that "the intensive smelling of people, even if done by dogs (is) indecent and demeaning."

"Most persons in our society deliberately attempt not to expose the odors emanating from their bodies to the public smell," the panel wrote in its 21-page opinion.

Police find kidnapping was imagined

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — A woman who told police her baby was abducted and then received $3,000 from an East Texas bank for a purported ransom was "hallucinating" and should receive psychiatric care, police say.

The young woman phoned the Security State Bank shortly after 1:30 p.m. Monday and asked for the money, saying her baby had been kidnapped, said Commerce Police Lt. John Sands.

Federal, state and local authorities investigated the reported kidnapping for five hours before determining — through checks into the woman's background — that her two children did not live with her, he said.

"We checked with (her parents) and learned that one of her children had been adopted and her other child is with her husband who is in the service," Sands said.

"The young lady was hallucinating. We have her and we do have some psychologists talking with her," he said.

Authorities first dropped the cash in the laundry room of the woman's apartment complex. She later was found with the money, but convinced police she had been told to take the money to nearby East Texas State University to meet two kidnappers, Sands said.

The woman was given the cash and followed to the ETSU campus, but Sands said the bank's money was recovered.

The woman was given the cash and followed to the ETSU campus, but Sands said they probably would not file charges against the woman, and would recommend psychiatric care.

The FBI and Texas Rangers had been called into the case.

Dallas (AP) — An appeal of a federal judge's historic ruling in favor of the Texas homosexual community drew an unlikely "hurrah" from the gay leader who challenged the state's sodomy law.

Dallas Gay Alliance President Don Baker said Monday he welcomed the appeal of U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's ruling that a Texas law making sodomy between members of the same sex illegal was unconstitutional.

"Potter County District Attorney Dan Hill challenged Buchmeyer's ruling and filed an appeal Thursday with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans."

"Number one, the appeal keeps the issue before the public and he's (Hill) doing us a favor with that," Baker said. "Number two, Buchmeyer's ruling will have more power than it has in its present state if it's upheld on appeal."

"I'm optimistic," he said. "My feeling is that I'm not disturbed at all."

"We're confident it will be sustained," said Baker, a Dallas elementary school teacher when he filed his lawsuit.

Baker filed suit against Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade, but Buchmeyer ruled his opinion was binding on all attorneys general in the state.

Hill could not be reached at his Amarillo home for comment Monday night. The Panhandle official has been aiding Attorney General Mark White's campaign for governor.

Hill filed his appeal two days before the final deadline for all court challenges to the ruling.

Buchmeyer handed down a lengthy decision in the suit in August, ruling a 1974 state law making acts of sodomy between members of the same sex illegal was unconstitutional because it discriminated against homosexuals.

Baker claimed the state's law, even if not enforced, made homosexuals criminals in the public's perception and fostered discrimination against gays in employment, housing and other areas.

Baker and other gay leaders hailed the ruling as a victory for the homosexual community throughout the state.

"I had no idea an appeal was coming," Baker said. "We thought we had gone all the way through it. We were pleased either way. If there was no appeal, it would still be a great victory."

Reagan speaks his mind

President Reagan has the world's toughest job, and when he makes public appearances he does his best to explain what's going on, bring the American people up to date on problems and solutions. He doesn't deserve any back row brashness.

Almost always Reagan's personal demeanor is above reproach. He demonstrates warmth and control in his appearances as only a person with professional stage presence can. He comes across with honesty and forthrightness.

But everybody has a breaking point. Reagan reached his recently in Washington, when he told a heckler, "Shut up!" The audience, made up of Republican candidates for office, approved and later gave the president a standing ovation.

It wasn't the first time Reagan has blown his safety valve. While campaigning in San Diego for the presidency in 1980, he offered the same instruction to a harasser during a speech.

It may be a shock for some to find national leaders letting their hair down. But it happens from time to time.

No, we can't blame Reagan for his outburst. The heckler was rude and out of line.

Behind the disability audit

Many of the Social Security Administration's cutbacks in disability benefits are causing great controversy, but one place they are clearly justified is in the prisons.

In the last 24 months, a total of 5,109 convicts have been dropped from Social Security disability rolls, thus saving the taxpayers $25 million each year. Another 800 convicts are in the process of being dropped and still another 1,000 cases are under review. The prisoners involved had been receiving an average monthly benefit of $322.

Checks to prisoners are superfluous. All their needs — food, clothing, health care — are taken care of by the prison systems. Those receiving Social Security payments represented 2 percent of the nation's prison population.

The bizarre business of paying benefits to prisoners was revealed to the public in the "Son of Sam" case. David Berkowitz is serving a sentence of 315 years for killing six persons in New York in 1977.

Disability benefits for prisoners came under fire in 1980 when it was learned that Berkowitz was getting a monthly Social Security check for more than $300 (the Social Security Administration refused to give an exact figure) mailed to him in prison. The check compensated him for the inability to hold a job because of mental impairment.

The administration currently is conducting an investigation of all disability payments, checking about 50,000 cases a month. It feels about 30 percent of those on disability rolls don't belong there. Thousands who have had their benefits cut off are finding it most difficult to enter the job market with so many millions unemployed.

In the case of benefits of prisoners, however, the administration must move ahead swiftly. There can be no argument about these cases, we would hope.

Learning power politics

By RUSTY BROWN

On a street called Wildwood, the cars pulled up near 1630. The women passengers talked among themselves as they banged shut their car doors and walked towards the open front door.

"Help yourself to coffee and ice tea," said the hostess, and soon 17 women rimmed the family room.

In another time, this could have been a Tupperware party, where the latest in covered bowls and lettuce - crispers would be passed around. Or, it could have been a bridal shower with the opening of presents and the winding of the colored ribbons.

Living longer is expensive

Life expectancy for the average American is now 73.7 years. So many early Americans died being born that life expectancy for those "Little House on the Prairie" people was 27 years.

Today, 73.7. So the median age of Americans is now 30-plus; precisely 30.3 years.

Our population includes a lesser percentage under 15 and more over 65. Politicians and advertisers, taking note of this graying of America, are already courting the prime-timers.

You are seeing more grandmother-age models in magazines and on TV. You are seeing more legislation responsive to the needs and wants of the mature majority.

But... When most Americans are retirement age, will there be enough taxpayers to support them?

Historically, life insurance companies promised if you would pay premiums for the first years of your life, the insurance company would support you through the last years of your life.

But you are now living so much longer that insurers are anxiously re-shuffling their rates.

Seven - of - ten Americans now between the ages of 40 and 44 will be getting pensions by the time they retire. More than half of all retirement income will be from Social Security.

No matter how many times you re-question the computer and re-project the future — to support our nation's retirees 20 years from now when one - of These women were getting together to talk politics. They had been brought together by leader of the area's National Women's Caucus.

Two caucus organizers asked each participant to tell why she came.

Said an office worker: "When the ERA went down to defeat, I knew I had to get involved."

"I'm here out of anger," said a homemaker. "I want to vote out those who want to fence me in."

"I'm a single parent," said one woman, "and I've just spent nine months going through the courts to get an increase in child support. I want more judges sympathetic to my problems."

A woman who was active in the peace movement at Berkeley in the '60s said: "Back then, I made coffee while the guys made strategy. Now, I want control over more than the coffee pot."

A law student presented a report card for current candidates. Office-seekers had been polled on how they stood on issues affecting women: funds for day care, battered women's shelters and abortions for low-income women. Candidates were also asked how they'd vote if the federal ERA was resubmitted; if the existing state ERA should come up for repeal.

The women listened to how each candidate was graded and marked their score cards accordingly. There was no doubt they were going to vote as a women's bloc.

Before the evening was over, most had volunteered to help a candidate. The women were hard-nosed about it, however. They would make it clear to the politicians that they were helping on behalf of the caucus and not on a personal basis.

Nearly everyone pledged money to support women candidates... not men. "It's women who don't have money to run," said a caucus leader and everyone agreed.

The meeting I sat in on is one of many at home gatherings taking place around Albuquerque.

"It's a return to grass roots politics," says Susan Loubet, New Mexico chairwoman for the National Women's Political Caucus. She activated the living-room movement here and hopes it catches on among caucus groups around the country.

"We hope to consolidate our strength as women voters at the local level. We want a power base that begins in the hustings," she says.

The trend-watchers tell us that women are becoming a growing force in American political life. Furthermore, women's views are shifting away from men's. And for good reason: women are the ones most affected by cutbacks in social welfare, the defeat of the ERA and the lack of women power in government.

Sever national polls have indicated that women are turned off by Regonomics.

As illustration of this occurred at a meeting I attended where 35 women quizzed a Republican gubernatorial candidate on women's issues. He said he was against a federal ERA.

"because I am violently opposed to anything that would draft women and throw them in the front lines."

Without meaning to be humorous, he said he was personally opposed to abortion, "because it goes against the way I'm built."

The women all laughed at that. At the close, a longtime Republican expressed her disappointment to him and said, "I'm sending my money to Planned Parenthood instead of the Republican Party."

She speaks for the new attitude among women being asked for their money and their votes.

They are finally learning that in politics, as in love, it pays to say no until the right candidate comes along.

Americans going to polls today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bombarded for months by appeals to their hopes and fears, Americans went to the polls today to shape a new Congress and signal whether they are willing to stay the course with President Reagan's economic program.

Polls opened at dawn in many Eastern states and there were varying estimates of whether the turnout for this election would reverse the downward trend of the past two decades.

Conflicting economic signs — rising unemployment, declining interest rates and soaring stock prices — prompted Richard Wirthlin, the White House pollster, to call the election a referendum on "whether people are going to vote their present fears ... or whether they are going to vote their hopes as to how the (Reagan) program will work."

The campaign closed with Democrats contending the Republican administration has a secret plan to try to cut Social Security benefits and the president replying that "there's no truth in what they're saying."

The economy — particularly, the 10.1 percent unemployment rate — and Social Security were the national issues. But many contests could be decided by local concerns and voter reaction to the personalities of the candidates.

At stake were 425 House seats and 33 in the Senate. Louisiana's eight House seats have already been decided and selection of two of Georgia's seats has been delayed by court challenges. Voters in 36 states will choose governors and in 46 will select legislators.

In addition, nine states are holding statewide referendums on the nuclear freeze. Other ballot issues include handgun control, gambling and a hotly contested proposal to move the state capital of Alaska 580 miles from Juneau to Willow, about 70 miles from Anchorage.

The outcome of the House and Senate contests could determine whether President Reagan can forge ahead with his economic program or will be forced to cut back his goal of trimming the size and impact of the federal government. In a pre-election interview, a White House official, who requested anonymity, talked about "the pool of patience" and speculated voters were willing to give the president's program more time, a decision that would gain support for Republican candidates.

Most estimates were that the Democrats would gain between 12 and 24 House seats. Since World War II, the norm for the president's party in the first midterm contests after his election is a loss of 19 House seats.

During his first 18 months in the White House, Reagan regularly got his way on Capitol Hill. Republicans control the Senate with 54 seats to 45 for the Democrats and one independent. And while the Democrats held a 49-seat majority in the House, the president prevailed on key votes by forging a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats.

Rep. Tony Coelho of California, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said in an interview Monday that if his party picks up 15 House seats it would "destroy the president's coalition."

Coelho's Republican counterpart, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, agreed in a separate interview that such a GOP loss would make it "very difficult to forge a coalition. It would be a loss for us of more than 15 seats. It would be a loss of momentum."

But many Republican leaders, including the president, were prepared to claim a victory of sorts if the GOP holds its House losses below 20 seats.

President and Mrs. Reagan voted in California by absentee ballot and planned to spend Election Night at the White House following the returns with top administration aides and political advisers.

Vice President George Bush campaigned Monday for Republican candidates in Texas.

Reagan wound up his personal campaigning last Friday when he completed a five-state Western trip which an aide said "gave us positive results in practically every state we went into."

The debate on the economy centered on the Democratic claim that the Reagan program was helping "a privileged few" and was the cause of the highest unemployment rate in more than 40 years.

Democratic candidates in every section of the nation tried to tie their Republican opponents to the Reagan policies, often while carefully avoiding criticism of the president himself.

Of the 33 Senate seats being decided this year, 19 are held by Democrats, 13 by Republicans and one independent.

Democratic challengers were threatening several Republican senators, including Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico and John Danforth of Missouri, and businessman Frank Lautenberg was in a tossup race against Republican Rep. Millicent Fenwick for a GOP seat in New Jersey.

The most threatened Democratic senators were Howard Cannon of Nevada and John Melcher of Montana. The race in Virginia for the seat now held by Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., an independent who sides with the Democrats for determining party alignment, was a tossup between Republican Rep. Paul Trible and Lt. Gov. Richard Davis.

The Democrats must pick up five Senate seats to regain the majority they lost in 1980, a prospect party chairman Charles T. Manatt concedes is "remote."

One of the possibilities was California, where Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was running a neck-and-neck race with Pete Wilson, the Republican mayor of San Diego.

Contests for governor appeared to offer the Democrats better prospects for substantial gains.

Even Republican Party Chairman Richard Richards said he expects the Democrats to net five governorships. The 50-state breakdown now is 27 Democrats and 23 Republicans. Of the governorships being contested this year, 20 are held by Democrats and 16 by Republicans.

Handgun control, nuclear plants highlight initiative voting today

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
Residents from Massachusetts to Alaska voted today on 52 statewide initiatives, the largest array in 50 years, ranging from nuclear weapons and atomic power plants to nickel deposits on bottles and cans.

Some of the decade's hottest crime-related issues — handgun control and the death penalty — also were before voters.

This year's initiatives covered the ideological spectrum, from California's strict handgun control proposal to constitutional amendments in Nevada and New Hampshire affirming the right to bear arms.

Colorado, Arizona, Washington state and California residents considered requiring a nickel deposit on bottles and cans while Massachusetts voters decided whether to repeal a bottle bill the Legislature already has passed.

Washington state considered putting a ceiling of 12 percent on the interest rate that banks, credit companies and retail stores can legally charge customers. In Ohio, voters decided whether to hike the state sales tax from 5 percent to 6 percent to pay for 150-mph "bullet trains" between the state's major cities.

Nine states considered resolutions calling for a nuclear weapons freeze, similar to a proposal approved by Wisconsin voters in September.

Maine voters were deciding whether the 10-year-old Maine Yankee nuclear power plant should close in 1987. Last year voters rejected a referendum to close the plant immediately. A referendum in Massachusetts was aimed at restricting the disposal of nuclear waste and curbing construction of nuclear power plants.

Americans were considering 52 initiatives as well as 185 propositions. State ballots in 1932 carried 61 initiatives, most spawned by drives to curb big business. The record is 89 initiatives in 1914, when some states allowed initiatives for the first time.

The upsurge this year reflects the popularity of initiatives since tax-cutting Proposition 13 was passed in California four years ago, said Patrick McGuigan, a spokesman for the Free Congress Foundation in Washington, a non-profit research group. Initiatives are proposals put on the ballot by citizen action, and are allowed in 23 states.

The country's most expensive ballot measures have been waged in California on two propositions — a stiff handgun control law and a bottle-deposit bill.

Opponents of the handgun proposal have spent more than $5 million, proponents about $2.3 million. The latest California Poll indicated more than half those who planned to vote today opposed the measure.

The bottle bill, Proposition 11, was a closer race, with polls showing opponents held a narrow lead. Opponents have spent more than $5 million on the campaign — six times the proponents' spending.

Other measures across the nation included a proposed return to the death penalty in Massachusetts, a crackdown on parole in Nevada, restrictions on bail in Arizona, Florida and Illinois, and a $170 million prison bond issue in New Jersey.

A long-running battle to make the District of Columbia the 51st state has district voters considering a constitution that would move a step closer to "New Columbia" and provide a guaranteed job or income to all residents. Alaskans faced a proposal to spend nearly $3 billion to move the state capital 580 miles — and two time zones — from Juneau to the tiny settlement of Willow, north of Anchorage. An anti-abortion measure also was on the ballot.

The Nebraska ballot carried a constitutional amendment to "save the family farm" by restricting non-family corporations from purchasing and operating farms or ranches.

Gambling is the big referendum in four states. A Minnesota measure would permit pari-mutuel horse race betting; Montana and South Dakota measures would clear the way for card betting and other games of chance. North Dakotans were deciding whether to repeal a year-old law allowing blackjack and pull-tab gambling, in which bettors pull tabs on cards they have purchased and compare the revealed numbers to a list of numbers published by the state.

Oregon, which pioneered land-use planning in the 1970s, faced a proposal to sharply curtail the state role in planning. Proponents say they hope to bolster the state's economy by relaxing planning rules.

Police, youths battle in London district

LONDON (AP) — Five-hundred police officers battled 400 youths hurling gasoline bombs and bricks as a protest against a demolition project flared into violence in the racially-tense Brixton district, according to police and newspaper accounts.

In a separate incident Monday in the Tottenham area of north London, 20 black youths angered by the arrest of a black man on a traffic charge smashed in the police station door and the window of a patrol car, police said. Four people were arrested, police said.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said eight people — two police officers, a firefighter, a local official and four news photographers were injured in Brixton, the south London area torn by rioting last summer. He said four people were arrested, but did not report any casualties among the rioters.

Both Brixton and Tottenham — a rundown, low-income area of high unemployment — is mostly black and community-police relations have long been strained. The police deny charges of racially motivated harassment and assaults, saying the area has an above-average incidence of crime and firm policing is required.

Scotland Yard said crowds of youths hurled gasoline bombs, bricks and bottles at police, set a derelict house and a builder's hut on a construction site ablaze and attacked press photographers.

The spokesman said police officers of the "instant response unit" — equipped with staves, shields, helmets, visors, fire-proof coveralls and other riot gear — restored order after about three hours.

The violence, the first since last summer, began after 50 people marched to town hall and then the local police station to protest the demolition of three municipally owned houses and the repossession of another six.

About 400 police officers stood by Monday as groups of squatters were evicted from the buildings. The protesters said the unoccupied houses had become informal social centers and were being pulled down or taken over before alternative sites promised by the council were available.

Murder trial begins

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Jury selection is expected to last two weeks in the trial of an oilfield worker accused of slaying a Kermit woman and her daughter and of kidnapping another daughter. Michael Eugene Sharp, 28, of Odessa, is charged with two counts of capital murder and one count of aggravated kidnapping.

The trial was moved to State District Judge Robert C. Wright's court here because of pretrial publicity. Selection of the panel began Monday.

Since a conviction on either capital murder charge carries a possible death sentence, jurors will be asked whether they could sentence a man to death. District Attorney Mike Fostel of Lubbock said. Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, and her 8-year-old daughter, Christie Michelle Elms, were stabbed to death after they were abducted from a Kermit car wash shortly after midnight June 11. Fourteen-year-old Selena Kay Elms also was abducted, but escaped and ran naked, her hands bound, five miles through rough pastureland to seek help at an oil rig. Officers later found the two bodies in shallow graves in a remote part of Winkler County.

Sharp was arrested June 16 at a Sweetwater bus station after a manhunt that involved law officers from two counties.

Britain gets first new TV channel in four years

LONDON (AP) — Britain's first new television channel in 18 years debuts today, despite a storm of controversy over a bill of fare that ranges from American football and "I Love Lucy" reruns to punk rock shows and shocking movies.

Chief Executive Jeremy Isaacs predicts Channel 4 will win a 10 percent share of the viewing audience in this nation of 56 million by the end of its second year.

But, the veteran 49-year-old TV producer adds: "I know there are banana skins on every square inch of the pavement ahead, and the television adage says 'If at first you don't succeed, you're fired.'"

Channel 4 goes on the air with a noncontroversial word game called "Countdown."

However, for those who tune in during prime-time tonight, the independent channel will feature

Warehouse owners indicted

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Williamson County grand jurors have indicted Victor and Modene Marek on charges the husband and wife owners of Central Texas grain warehouses sold $86,256 worth of grain they didn't own.

The 12 indictments returned Monday accuse the Mareks of stealing grain from a public warehouse and unlawful delivery of grain. The second-degree felony charges carry penalties of up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

State inspectors in September discovered a 16 million pound shortage at Grain Producers Inc. in Granger and Marek Brothers Gin and Grain in Bartlett. Victor Marek owns the Granger facility and is co-owner of the Bartlett warehouse with his brother Alvin.

Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh said Alvin Marek testified in front of the grand jurors and was not indicted. The Mareks also testified during the grand jury investigation that began two weeks ago, he said.

"They did have grain in the warehouses of their own," said Walsh. "In August they had depleted the amount of grain they had and they began selling grain that wasn't theirs."

The indictments charge the couple with selling grain from the warehouses on Aug. 19 and 23, and Sept. 3 and 10.

The grain was sold to Interstate Grain Co. of Houston, according to the indictments.

Walsh said grand jurors have completed their work on the case, but the district attorney said local investigators still are looking into the matter.

Farmers who had grain stored in the warehouses will divide the proceeds from the sale of the remaining grain. They also will share an $88,000 bond posted by the Mareks.

The remaining grain was sold last week by the Texas Department of Agriculture for $249,000.

Walter," a movie with Ian McKellen in the title role of a mentally handicapped man who is seen sleeping with his mother's corpse and being sexually attacked by a crippled male midget.

A critic called it "one of the most shocking films ever seen on TV."

Launched with $177 million put up by Britain's 14 commercial TV production companies, Channel 4 has been charged by Parliament with the job of providing "a distinctive service."

But one marketing executive, criticizing the programming as being limited, claimed it was only "geared to punks, Rastafarians and the Irish."

Channel 4 is Britain's second commercial station. The other is Independent Television or ITV. There are two non-commercial channels, BBC1 and BBC2, run by the publicly funded British Broadcasting Corp.

The station already has gotten a double dose of labor trouble.

Actors are pressing for more money to make commercials, forcing Channel 4 to start out with fewer station breaks and an estimated revenue loss of $850,000 daily. Local technicians working on Channel 4 programs around the country are still negotiating for pay and work conditions.

Safety counts when buying toys

Danger: Child Playing

No, this is not a street sign. It is a reminder that some toys can be dangerous to children, a timely thought as Christmas approaches.

Parents should remember when selecting toys for their little ones that children are imitators and experimenters. Not only do they imitate their parents, they are continually experimenting with their toys — pulling, prying and pinching.

Some stuffed animals, for instance, have cute button eyes that pull off easily, exposing sharp points which they were fastened on. These points sometimes do not lock like staples, but are pushed in like a double-point thumb tack. This type of stuffed animal is apt to be found in souvenir shops or sold at carnivals. They are attractive to children and are frequently a casual or spur-of-the-moment gift. Avoid them — or inspect them carefully.

Children are rough on toys. They experiment by dragging them, banging them and sitting on them. Avoid anything with sharp or rough edges that will cut or scratch.

Also avoid toys or objects with small removable parts that can be swallowed or pushed into an ear or nose. No one knows why a child will push a small object up his nose — perhaps just because it's there, the object is handy and it happens to fit.

If a toy is painted or has painted decorations, be sure the paint is non-toxic. Imported toys, especially those from Mexico, may use lead-based paints, and eating paint chips has resulted in lead poisoning. Decorative beads, beans or seeds may also be poisonous. Some plastic toys may be flammable if exposed to heat.

So what are desirable toys?
For infants: Bright, colorful toys in many shapes, sizes, textures and weights. Noisy rattles to shake; unbreakable mirrors to look into; soft balls, blocks and puppets to hold; hard rubber or unbreakable plastic objects to teeth on.

For preschoolers: Books! A sandbox with bucket, shovel and spoon. (For indoors, a "rice box" using whole grain unprocessed rice is easier to clean up.) Large pegboard and pegs and puzzles for coordination skills. Wooden animals, cars and vehicles. A sturdy wagon. A "walk-around" kiddie car. Large crayons, paint and lots of paper. A rocking horse.

For school age children: Books, books, books! Hardwood blocks, a small chair and table. Board games. Musical instruments, microscopes, kaliedoscopes, telescopes. Arts and crafts supplies.

"Growing Child," a monthly child development newsletter, has a catalog of more than 600 educational toys, books and records for children from infants to six-year-olds, with a few items for older children up to 12 years old. For a copy, send $1 to Catalog, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Ind. 47902.

Dr. Lamb

By Bonnie Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a very good cook. My husband likes what I cook. But my mother-in-law is driving me up the wall. She thinks I am not feeding her son right. The truth is that he has gained weight since we got married so I am beginning to wonder if she is right.

My family always liked foods with lots of cream sauce. When mom made mashed potatoes she didn't stint on the butter and always added some cream. We liked meat and potatoes with some old-fashioned cream gravy. And I learned that eggs added to lots of dishes really improves their flavor.

Now, my mother-in-law is disgustingly thin. I mean she looks good for a woman of her age and she says it is in how you cook. She is after me to cut out all the fat I can in preparing food. She says my husband will have a better chance to stay lean and young without heart disease if I listen to her. Is she right? How can I give him the foods he likes and still not give him some lip-smacking fats?

DEAR READER — Better listen to that slim mother-in-law of yours. You might be that slim at her age too if you follow her advice.

The secret in many instances to staying lean is in the kitchen. You can start by cutting off all the visible fat from any meat you prepare. Strip the chicken of its skin and bake it. Baked chicken breast is an excellent food, low in fat and high in protein. I recommend it highly as a meat dish for people wanting to avoid too many calories. And you can use it as a base for many dishes.

Use fortified skim milk rather than whole milk or cream. You can make it taste richer for use in cooking by adding some extra nonfat dry milk powder. That provides more calcium and protein without the fat calories.

Of course, you need to limit your sweets, too. Many common foods are low-calorie foods because they contain a lot of water. Fresh raw fish is 80 percent water.

Surprise your mother-in-law by what you learn from reading The Health Letter 9-12, Kitchen Power for Weight Control, which I am sending you.

Preserve the past Save parts of condemned homes

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Albany, New York. A wrecking crew pulls up to a condemned Victorian house. The foreman signals, demolition ball swings, wall falls down and there, to their astonishment, stands Will Pelgrin, 26, squares of parquet flooring under one arm, a newel post under the other, not quite. The wreckers always know when Pelgrin is coming. They have for three and a half years, ever since he began his salvaging sprits.

"I was a freshman in law school at the State University of Albany and I volunteered to work part time for the Historic Albany Foundation because I love old buildings and Albany has a great abundance of them." And the Historic Albany Foundation, a non-profit, private group, is dedicated to the preservation of those houses, among other things. In short, it was a happy meeting of "past" priorities and the Foundation appointed Pelgrin administrator of its Parts Warehouse, repository of salvaged architectural artifacts the Foundation sells at bargain prices. Pelgrin administered with zeal.

"I'd get up in the morning, put on my shorts and run out to a building slated for demolition which I'd gotten permission to enter." Joyously, he'd dismantle elegant old staircases, exquisite antique doors. Exuberantly, he'd pull up molding, pull out window sashes and pull off marble mantles. Then he'd haul his prizes back to the warehouse on a borrowed truck. "It was a one-man operation making zero money, but after the first year, we had a profit of $4,000," he proclaims.

But there's just so much one young soul can preserve on his own. "I needed help desperately," he says. "So when a professor of history at the university asked if I wanted interns for the summer, I jumped at the chance. The first summer I had two, the next six, then 12. They were required to put in five or six hours a week learning about preservation."

But they didn't do that; they put in as many as 40. Heartened by their enthusiasm, Pelgrin says, "I decided to encourage the community at large to become involved. In May '81, I advertised in the Foundation's newsletter for "Salvage Commandos" to help us. More than 45 people volunteered."

Housewives, students, construction workers, 17 to 55, they signed up for various duties: to photograph, say, parquet flooring being uplifted or to number the pieces for easy reassembly; to take inventories or pry up sections of flooring themselves, once they'd learned how.

Burly or frail, each was embraced by Pelgrin who now serves as legal adviser to the Historic Albany Foundation as well as administrator to its Parts Warehouse.

"I can get all the help I need lifting things. I needed people who are painstaking and sensitive and who understand that if you transport a marble mantle face down in a truck, it will crack. You must lean it on its side instead."

Once attuned to all that, the commandos change into their blue and white "Salvage Commando" T-shirts and take off for doomed hallways all day Tuesday, after work and on weekends. "We also pick up items people donate," says Pelgrin. "Sometimes we have as many as 14 pickups a week."

Mission completed, each commando submits his membership card for stamping, entitling him or her to a 30 percent discount at the Parts Warehouse.

But what to buy? An old, clawfoot bathtub with porcelain knobs and drains ($30 to $140 for a large one with original brass fixtures), sections of stained glass ($200 to $1,000 by the foot), wooden molding (30 cents to $1.50 per foot)?

Never mind. That's their problem. Theirs and hordes of other architectural artifact admirers, business at the warehouse, knock on old wood, is terrific, says Pelgrin, and word is spreading like dust from a shattered brick.

"People have called us from Pittsfield, Mass., and even Montreal to come and dismantle houses," he says. One even called from California to find out how the operation works, with an eye to duplication. "He wanted to know how we remove items (very carefully) and price them. We check how much they would cost new, their value as antiques, etc., and all things considered, we make a determination and try to cut the price even more." Profit is not the main point, after all. "My whole objective is to educate people about preservation," he says, "and I pray for the day

I go out of business because there are no longer needless demolitions." Until then, he'll keep proselytizing and passing his ammunition because, he says, if we lose what's behind us, what will we have to fall back on? For more information: Historic Albany Foundation, 300 Hudson Ave., Albany, NY, (518) 463-0622. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Dear Abby Affair with married man is nothing to remember

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a letter about what a woman should expect if she has an affair with a married man. I thought it was funny at the time, but now that I've started to see a married man, the few things I remember from it have turned out to be the God's honest truth.

Please hunt it up and run it again. I need it to get my head straight.

INVOLVED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR INVOLVED: My secretary had no trouble finding it. Readers have been requesting reprints of that column ever since it first appeared:

"Dear Abby: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is 'in love' with a married man:

"Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays.

"Never call him at home.

"Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

"Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

"Don't believe him when he tells you his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and she hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

"Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him — even if she catches him. She knows you are not his first and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you.

"However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another married man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years. Sign me... His Wife"

DEAR ABBY: I'm not a bad-looking guy, but I have the worst luck with women. I can't seem to connect with any of them.

In the last year, I've been given I don't know how many phony telephone numbers. I've made countless dates and have been stood up every time. I would a hundred times rather be turned down with a flat-out NO than be given a non-existent phone number or stood up.

How can I avoid these terrible disappointments in the future?

DISGUSTED WITH WOMEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Don't ask a woman for her phone number, give her yours. And if it's any consolation, you haven't missed anything worthwhile. A woman who would stand up a date isn't worth dating.

DEAR ABBY: My son-in-law is "John Q. Blue Jr." His wife (my daughter) is having a baby soon. It will be our first grandchild. She says if it is a boy, they will name him "John Q. Blue III."

Since the baby's father is "John Q. Blue Jr.," won't the baby be "John Q. Blue II"?

We have a big bet on this.

What I want to know is this: If they go from "John Q. Blue Jr." to "John Q. Blue III," what in the world happened to "John Q. Blue II"? My daughter and son-in-law say, "Junior is the second."

I say that Junior is the first, since he is the first child to take the name of an ancestor. Please straighten this out.

BIG BET IN OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR BET: When a boy is named for his father, who is a "Junior," he is called "the 3rd."

A man with "II" after his name is not named for his father, but for someone else in the family — perhaps an uncle or grandfather with the same name.

So if your grandchild is a boy, he will be "John Q. Blue III."

DEAR ABBY: May I comment regarding "Heartbroken Father," who gave his spoiled 19-year-old daughter everything and received nothing in return?

As an attorney, I've seen a lot of people in a lot of situations, and I am convinced that parents should give their children what they need but make them earn what they want.

I recently drafted a will for a woman whose son told her, "You can't take that trip. Don't spend my money!"

He may not realize it, but it's not his money until his mother dies. And when she does, he will learn that "his" money has been left to a children's hospital where it will do far more good than it ever would in his hands.

Pope meets Spanish officials

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Pope John Paul II departed from his pastoral mission today to meet with political and military leaders in what he said was a show of support for the newly elected Socialist government of this heavily Roman Catholic nation.

But he also made what seemed an oblique reference to the Socialists' avowed support for liberalized abortion laws and cuts in aid to parochial schools, indicating the church would continue to oppose those policies.

John Paul, who celebrated Mass Monday for 200,000 people in the central city of Avila, started the third day of his 10-day visit to Spain with a Mass for the dead at the cemetery of Almudena in Madrid.

"In this way, I would like to remove any doubts — if ever there were any — about my respect for the country's freely elected leaders."

Gonzalez's party, which will form the first left-wing government since the late dictator Francisco Franco seized power after the 1936-39 civil war, is on record as favoring legalized abortion when a mother's life is in danger, and closer control of state subsidies to parochial schools.

Roman Catholic leaders refrained from active campaigning for the election last week, but made their opposition clear on these issues. At the start of his visit Sunday, John Paul addressed a group of Spanish bishops, urging them to continue their efforts against legalized abortion and divorce.

He then went to the Zarzuela Palace, where he embraced King Juan Carlos; Felipe Gonzalez, the Socialist Party leader who will become premier when the new government takes office next month; and Manuel Fraga Iribarne, leader of the rightist Popular Alliance that placed second in the elections.

"Even though my trip to Spain is of an eminently religious nature, through this courtesy visit, I would like to pay my respects to the legitimate representatives of the Spanish people," the pontiff said.

He also praised the transition to democracy initiated by Juan Carlos following Franco's death in 1975, saying: "You are involved in a new direction in your public framework which respects the diversity of opinions in the country."

On Monday, the pope paid homage to St. Teresa of Avila in the walled city of Avila on the Plains of Castile, where the renowned Carmelite nun was born and founded the first of the 17 convents she established in Spain.

Later in the day, the pope was taken by helicopter to Alba de Tormes, 45 miles northwest of Avila, where St. Teresa died in 1582 and her remains are kept. John Paul closed the year-long celebration of the 400th anniversary of St. Teresa's death, which brought more than 2 million pilgrims to Avila and Alba over the year.

In Alba, he heard a strong speech by Bishop Mauro Repulles of Salamanca, who attacked what he called the "de-Christianization" of Spanish life, including declining attendance at Mass, fewer christenings and church weddings and an increasing number of unmarried couples.

The pope also celebrated the 36th anniversary of his ordination as a priest in Poland. Two of his countrymen, the primate of Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp of Warsaw, and the pontiff's successor as Archbishop of Krakow, Cardinal Franciszek Macharski, were sitting at the pope's side as he addressed the vast throng at Avila.

Pope travels for first time without American bodyguard

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Ninety-thousand police officers, soldiers and volunteers are protecting Pope John Paul II in Spain, but the American bishop who was at his side on every other foreign trip is conspicuously absent.

Bishop Paul Marcinkus, the pontiff's burly bodyguard and key advance man, stayed behind in Italy, where he is under investigation in the collapse of the nation's largest private bank, Banco Ambrosiano.

Marcinkus, of Cicero, Ill., is president of the Vatican's own bank and prefect of the Roman Catholic Church's small city-state within Rome.

The Vatican owned at least 1.58 percent of the failed Banco Ambrosiano, whose president, Roberto Calvi, was found hanging under a London bridge last June in what later was ruled a suicide. Marcinkus is said to have written a letter of patronage allegedly used by Calvi to cover loans that have not been repaid.

The Vatican said it was John Paul's decision to leave Marcinkus behind during the Spanish trip, although the bishop reportedly helped go through some 30 drafts of the 10-day, 16-city itinerary.

Asked why Marcinkus did not go on the pope's 16th foreign trip, the Vatican explained the bishop "was very busy for reasons of his job and cannot be away from his post, as he used to be, for so long."

A Vatican spokesman added: "This does not mean that he has been relieved of duties he previously had."

Countdown for shuttle flight begins Sunday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown begins Sunday for the Veterans Day launch of the space shuttle Columbia, scheduled to embark on its first operational mission after four test flights.

"Everything looks real good and we haven't had any problems," Kennedy Space Center spokesman Jim Ball said Monday.

As part of its mission, Columbia's cargo bay will carry the Canadian Anik and Satellite Business Systems satellites, which are to be unloaded in orbit and later moved up to a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

Two spacesuits, which crew members Joseph Allen and William Lenoir will use to enter the cargo bay while Columbia is in orbit, have been placed aboard and flight programs were fed into the shuttle's five computers Monday.

Vance Brand and Robert Overmyer are the pilots for the five-day flight.

The countdown is to begin at 3 a.m. Sunday. Launch is set for 7:19 a.m. on Nov. 11.

Halloween vigilance paid off

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

Extra vigilance this Halloween helped keep down injuries from treats sabotaged with pins, razors and wire, despite hundreds of such incidents reported across the nation, authorities said.

But the reputation of the festive evening itself seemed to have suffered the most harm as the numbers of trick-or-treaters were sharply down.

"I think that what this shows is that the public was terribly concerned over the safety of the little monsters and did not let them go trick-or-treating as much," said Lt. Dan Cooke of the Los Angeles Police department.

"We saw a trend toward neighborhood parties and parties in elementary schools, and we'd like to see the trend continue," said Maj. George Currey, head of the Youth Guidance Division of the police department in Nashville, Tenn.

Many communities, fearful of "copicats" inspired by the fatal cyanide-Tylenol poisonings of seven people in the Chicago area, canceled trick-or-treating. Elsewhere, some parents refused to allow their children to don costumes and ring doorbells.

"I feel heartsick about it," said Betty Donnelly, a South Pasadena grandmother. "It was so much fun when I was a kid."

But many authorities seemed relieved. "Based on the fact we haven't had any injuries shows the people out there are paying attention," said Ralph Timperi, director of the Massachusetts food and drug laboratory.

And even some children didn't seem to regret the trick-or-treatless holiday. At a party at her elementary school in Dallas, Erica Celedon, an 8-year-old dressed as a cheerleader, was asked if she minded not being allowed to go trick-or-treating.

"I like it because I won't be dead," Erica replied.

Merchants complained of lagging candy sales, and police said the major violence involved adults hiding behind holiday masks.

About 20 police units were called to block off the Coconut Grove area of Miami where about 3,000 revelers were partying in the streets. The windshield of a patrol car was smashed and another was damaged by rocks. Three people were arrested.

Scattered reports of booby-trapped candy continued Monday. In Redding, Calif., a family picking through leftover candy purchased Sunday found a sewing needle in one piece.

A Weathersfield, Vt., parent turned in a miniature Milky Way bar that had been boobytrapped with a pin, and authorities said they were investigating whether the incident was related to similar occurrences previously in the same area.

And in Wilmington, Del., an 11-year-old boy admitted that he was the one who put a utility knife blade into his oatmeal cream pie — an incident that had been reported to police.

The single largest reported case of contamination over the weekend came in Somerdale, N.J., where 16 people were taken to hospitals Saturday after eating candy apparently laced with drugs at a kindergarten party.

Supreme Court accepts 'reverse discrimination' case for review

WASHINGTON (AP) — When economic hard times hit, can employers be forced to cast aside seniority systems and protect racial minorities from layoffs?

The Supreme Court agreed Monday to answer that question when it accepted a dispute from Boston for review. The justices will decide whether such steps, taken to make up for past racial bias, are forms of "reverse discrimination" against whites.

Lower courts said Boston's traditional "last-hired, first-fired," seniority system could be set aside to preserve jobs for blacks and Hispanics in the city's fire and police departments.

Under usual layoff procedures, a cutback in departmental employees last year would have dropped the percentage of minorities among Boston police from 11.7 to 6.2 percent. Minority representation among firefighters would have dipped from 14.7 to 9.1 percent.

Both departments have been under court orders to increase the number of blacks and Hispanics who work for them.

A federal trial judge last year ruled that despite the layoffs, the percentage of blacks and minorities could not decrease.

The 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that order last May, saying it was needed to carry out established affirmative action goals.

"Racial discrimination had led to the virtual exclusion of blacks and Hispanics from Boston's police and fire departments," the appeals court noted.

The Supreme Court's eventual decision is not likely to signal a retreat from its previous rulings upholding the validity of some forms of affirmative action. The court first so ruled in its famous "Bakke" decision of 1978.

Assistant Massachusetts Attorney General Thomas Barnico said the state, in appealing the lower court rulings, "isn't bringing the Bakke case back to the court."

In other matters Monday, the justices took these actions:

—Agreed to decide whether soldiers and sailors can sue their military superiors for alleged civil rights violations.

No end in sight to Mexican strikes

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More than 30,000 strikers have shut down Mexico's largest airline and university, seeking pay hikes to offset soaring inflation, and a national labor leader vowed not to extend a Nov. 11 deadline for a general walkout.

There was no end in sight today to the strikes at Mexicana airlines and the National University, which marked the first major job action since labor leader Fidel Velazquez called for the nationwide strike if businessmen refused to grant emergency pay increases.

Spokesmen for the union representing 7,323 ground workers at Mexicana said talks broke off late Sunday and workers walked out Monday after management contended it could not offer more than a 25 percent across-the-board salary increase. The workers earn the equivalent of $170 to $645 a month.

Meanwhile, more than 23,000 non-academic personnel at the government-subsidized National University remained firm in their demand for a minimum 60 percent wage hike. The strike affects about 350,000 students and 45,000 teachers.

Wages for non-academic university employees average $214 to $442 a month. Like the airline, the university offered a 25 percent increase to halt the strike.

But workers say bigger emergency increases are needed to compensate for the recent flurry of sharp price hikes for basic foods and services.

Velazquez has said previously that 50 percent wage hikes should be the base for discussions, although he and other labor leaders have indicated that wage demands would be lowered if businesses are willing to accept price freezes.

Spiraling inflation, expected to reach 100 percent by the end of the year, was set off by two major devaluations of the peso. The currency currently is worth 70 to the dollar at the government's official exchange rate — less than half its value 11 months ago.

Velazquez, who heads 4 million members of the government-controlled Mexican Federation of Labor, announced over the weekend that a nationwide strike deadline had been pushed back to Nov. 11, but warned that independent unions might walk out earlier to press their demands.

He declared Monday that there would be no further extensions of the deadline. The planned walkout threatens to bring 38,000 businesses and industries across the country grinding to a halt.

The airline and university strikers do not belong to the labor federation but their demands are in line with its nationwide guidelines.

He Finally Got Him

"It took me seven years, but I finally got him," said Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner Monday. Turner was one of five National League owners who banded together to oust Bowie Kuhn as Major League Baseball

Major League owners oust Kuhn

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who helped guide the sport to a peak of popularity and oversaw unprecedented changes, fell victim to the minority that opposed him.

"It took me seven years but I finally got him," said Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner, one of five National League owners who banded together Monday to vote Kuhn out of office.

Kuhn had fined Turner $10,000 in 1976 for tampering and then suspended him from baseball for a year the following January.

Kuhn, whose term will expire Aug. 13, 1983, after 14½ years as commissioner, got the support of 18 of baseball's owners 26 owners during their half-hour meeting Monday. But under the sport's rules, Kuhn needed three-quarters approval in both leagues, and he didn't get it after owners failed to reach a compromise that would have kept him in office.

The AL voted 11-3 in favor of Kuhn while the NL voted 7-5 in favor. But Kuhn needed nine favorable votes from the NL in order to gain a third seven-year term.

Voting against Kuhn in the NL in addition to Turner were Nelson Doubleday of the New York Mets; John McMullen of the Houston Astros; August A. Busch Jr. of the St. Louis Cardinals and William Williams of the Cincinnati Reds.

Opposing Kuhn in the AL were George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees; Eddie Chiles of the Texas Rangers, and George Argyros of the Seattle Mariners.

Kuhn, who will remain at his $250,000-a-year post until his term runs out, said: "I'm disappointed. I firmly believe there will be another commissioner. But it will be difficult to get the necessary votes to appoint another person."

"I don't object to the three-quarters vote necessary for an incoming commissioner but after that it should be a simple majority. In any other election, 70 percent would be a landslide," mused the 56-year-old Kuhn.

At the end of his term, Kuhn will have served as commissioner of baseball longer than anyone except Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who reigned for 24 years.

Ironically, one of those being mentioned as next the commissioner is Kuhn himself.

Hospital volleyball league finishes in three-way tie

Business Office was brought to its knees in a down to the wire finish as the Coronado Community Hospital Volleyball League wrapped up regular-season play with a three-way tie for first place. Physical Therapy gave previously-unbeaten Business Office its first loss of the season, forcing another slate of playoff games.

In the evening's first match, Respiratory Therapy faced tough competition from Housekeeping before chalking up a win for a 5-1 season record and a one-third share of first place honors.

Respiratory Therapy captured both frames, but not without earning every point against a much improved Housekeeping team, 15-11 and 15-10, as the Housekeepers played well above their 1-5 season standing. Last week, Housekeeping gave top-ranked Physical Therapy a run for their money, forcing Physical Therapy to play heads-up ball.

In the second bout of the evening, Medical Records continues its winning ways, posting another victory over Nursing Service, 15-13 and 15-10. The Records Wreckers last week kept pace with unseeded Business Office, allowing only the slimmest margin for a BO win.

The hottest game of the evening Monday night came after the challengers from Physical Therapy won over Business Office in the first frame. In the second frame, it was a point by point struggle as Physical Therapy kept a slim lead before posting a final 16-14 tally in overtime play.

The final standings show Business Office, Physical Therapy and Respiratory Therapy each sharing first place honors with 5-1 standings. They are trailed by X-Ray with a 3-3 record, Medical Records- 2-4, Housekeeping 1-5 and Nursing Service 0-6.

Playoff action begins at 6 p.m. next Monday with Respiratory Therapy facing Physical Therapy, followed by Business Office facing Respiratory Therapy in the second match. Physical Therapy and Business Office square off in the last bout at the First Assembly of God Church gym on the corner of Cuyler and Brown Streets.

Owners urged to join NFL negotiations

NEW YORK (AP) — Union chief Ed Garvey thinks it's about time some of the National Football League's owners join the negotiations — and at least one of them reportedly feels the same way.

Russell Erxleben, the New Orleans player representative, told The Associated Press that John Mecom, the Saints' owner, told him he planned to come to the bargaining site today to become actively involved in the talks and that he would urge fellow owners to do the same.

"He wants to play football," Erxleben said of Mecom. "He said he is coming up and would contact as many owners as possible."

Erxleben said he felt Mecom was "uninformed" as to the status of the negotiations. Asked to elaborate, Erxleben said Mecom had "no knowledge of what had happened today."

On Monday, the calm of this latest round of talks in the 43-day-old strike was ruffled when the player representatives were briefed by Garvey and his fellow union negotiators on part of management's latest offer.

They were told Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, was attempting to take a step backward in the wage-scale aspect of the talks by insisting that signing and incentive bonuses be part of any minimum wage rather than added to it.

Garvey also recommended that other player reps contact their team owners and urge their attendance and mentioned that Max Winter, the Minnesota Vikings' owner, and Art Modell, boss of the Cleveland Browns, were in town and that he hoped they, too, would join the negotiations.

"I can't believe Jack Donlan is trying to settle this strike," Erxleben said. "I can't believe he represents the majority of the owners."

The union insists that the minimum-wage proposal is a change in league policy. A member of the management negotiating team denied that incentive bonuses were part of the proposal.

Garvey, asked if he thought the owners had "pulled a fast one" with their controversial minimum wage proposal, replied: "No — but they tried."

After being told of management's proposal, a number of the player reps expressed their bitterness in impromptu interviews with newsmen in the lobby of the midtown Manhattan hotel where the bargaining is being conducted.

Lillis expected to be next Astros' boss

HOUSTON (AP) — Soft-spoken Bob Lillis, who has been with the Houston Astros organization since the franchise was formed in 1961, was expected to be named manager for the struggling National League team at a news conference today.

Lillis has been with the Astros as player, scout, instructor and coach since the National League expanded here in 1961. He was chosen in the expansion draft and played for the Astros, then called the Colt 45s, until he retired as a player in 1967 with a lifetime batting average of .236.

Lillis then served five seasons in the minor leagues as a scout and then as a special instructor before being named to the Astros staff in 1973.

The 51-year-old Lillis has survived the managerial regimes of Leo Durocher, Preston Gomez and Bill Virdon, whom he replaced as interim manager Aug. 10 and led the Astros to a 28-23 record over the rest of the season.

"I'd like to think I've stayed around because I've done a good job," Lillis said. "I work very hard and try to do my best. Things have just worked out here."

When Lillis took over for Virdon, he was unsure if he would pursue the permanent job. Those doubts ended with the season.

"I wasn't sure how I'd wear it," Lillis said. "I didn't know how the players would respond. But they have given a very positive response."

Lillis also was not sure how his personality would fit into the managerial role.

"I am not a public speaker or an entertainer," Lillis said. "I guess I'm kind of bland. I don't waste words and I didn't know how that was going to go over with the fans and media."

"I'm kind of a private person. I like my own time and that was one of the things I considered. I knew as manager, it would be different and my time wouldn't always be my own."

Recognizing the precarious position of a manager also caused Lillis to hesitate. Lillis does not like to move around a lot, and likes Houston.

(Astros Board Chairman John) McMullen eased Lillis' mind by signing him to a two-year coaching contract when he assumed the interim job.

Lillis has seen the highs and lows of the Astros over 21 years. He was a player in 1962 when the original Colt 45s finished 36 1-2 games out of first place and he was a coach in 1975 when the Astros ended the season 43 1-2 games off the pace.

He also was a part of the Astros' dramatic drive to the 1980 National League Western Division title.

Packers win tourney title

The Packers, unbeaten regular-season champions defeated The Colts, 26-12, Saturday to win the Tiger League Football Tournament.

The Packers, who finished the second with a 7-0 record, downed the Rams, 14-0, while the Colts beat the Redskins, 20-0, in Friday's first-round action. The Colts defeated the Raiders, 20-6, Saturday to reach the finals against the Packers.

The Tiger League Invitational Tournament opens Saturday with teams from Dumas, Borger, Amarillo, Canyon, Perryton and Pampa entered in the all-day event.

The Dumas Hawks have won the tournament title the last two years.

The Pampa Raiders meet Borger at 9 a.m. to open the tournament. The Pampa Packers will play the Dumas Longhorns at 12 noon. The final game is set for 7:30 p.m.

Goodwin wins JV title at district c-c meet

Tracy Goodwin of Pampa was clocked at 18:41 to win the junior varsity division in the District 1-4A cross country meet held last weekend at Lubbock.

Other Pampa runners and their times were Ben Rice 18:55, Joe Rodriguez 20:44 and Brad Love 20:18.

David Whitson of Pampa ran an 18:29 in the varsity division. Brownfield won the varsity team championship.

"We closed out the season with an incomplete team," Pampa coach Wendall Palmer said. "I'll be beating the bushes between now and next season to see what I can come up with."

"We'll be moving right into weight training with the kids I've got out now and see if we can't get stronger."

'Volunteerism' replaces government aid

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — When Orlando Police Chief William Koleszar wanted to outfit his new six-member horse patrol, he raised $40,000 from local businessmen and neighborhood groups.

And when officials of Altamonte Springs, an Orlando suburb, decided to finance an $8,000 lift for the handicapped at a recreation center swimming pool, they persuaded the local owner of several fast-food franchises to pick up the tab.

An aggressive volunteer spirit is growing in many areas. The reasons are varied — a response to President Reagan's call for such private efforts, the administration's cuts in social programs, the economic hard times — but the effort in fast-growing central Florida has been particularly strong.

Gifts of time and money from individuals, corporations and private organizations to city and county governments in the area are providing police horse patrols, police vehicles, public swimming pools, free labor at city parks and thousands of school aides.

Elsewhere in the state, local charities and church groups are stepping up efforts to provide groceries, clothing, housing, nursery services, money and even dental care to those unable to manage under Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps and other assistance programs.

"Personally, I would love to see churches more involved with this kind of work," said the Rev. Ron Greiser of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in West Palm Beach. "For years, we allowed the federal government to take over work that we once did."

The Charter Co. in Jacksonville has "adopted" a senior citizen housing complex.

Many of the corporation's employees volunteer workdays to clean yards, wash windows, paint and do other chores to help out the residents of Hogan's Creek Towers. The company donates the materials, the workers their labor.

"We've become a model for Southern Bell and (others), which are also adopting senior-citizen developments," says Ann Knight, a Charter Co. records analyst who helped get the project started.

In Fort Lauderdale, Allstate Insurance Co. provided financing to rehabilitate a housing project for the handicapped and elderly in a slum section of the city.

Business donations to local governments of parks, fountains, statues and land for new fire stations or roadways is part of an American tradition.

Lighter moments among partisan charges

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As candidates for House and Senate wound up their campaigns for today's elections, there were some lighter moments among the partisan charges and countercharges.

Some examples: Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., crisscrossing the nation to help GOP candidates raise money, found great sport in ribbing silver-haired House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Dole told audiences: "I understand Tip's so worried about the elections that his hair is turning brown."

Dole also said he gave candidates on whose behalf he appeared two options: "I'll either speak for them or against them. They usually say, 'let me think about it.'"

While campaigning for a new term, Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., spoke at an assembly of students and teachers at a Catholic school in Reno, Nev.

He began his address by asking the students: "Who knows where I work?" Hands shot up. That was easy: Washington, D.C. "And who else works there?" Cannon asked. More hands. The president. "That's right," he said. "You know almost as much about my job as I do."

After this sort of thing went on for a while, Cannon told his youthful audience he was ready to entertain their questions.

One child asked: "Did you like school?" Cannon, 70, thought a minute, then said smiled and said, yes, he guessed he did.

In neighboring Utah, Sen. Orrin Hatch, a Republican, indicated to a shopping center audience that he was capable of giving an arresting performance.

Hatch, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, said that his panel's investigation of the influence of organized crime on big labor had "gotten me the enmity of both the Cosa Nostra and big labor."

Reaching into his breast pocket, Hatch pulled out a shiny silver badge and waved it in front of his face. "That's why they have deputized me as a special deputy U.S. marshal."

Old faces, new look to appear on television's election coverage

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While television looks younger, David Brinkley and Walter Cronkite are older and wiser. But once again, they're spending election night with America.

Brinkley has a new network, bolting NBC for ABC last year. Tonight he joins Frank Reynolds and Ted Koppel in anchoring ABC's coverage.

Cronkite also has a new role after yielding the anchor desk on both the "CBS Evening News" and election night to Dan Rather. Cronkite will be in Washington tonight to handle political interviews for CBS.

"We wanted Walter to have a more active role than simply doing commentary," said Joan Richman, executive producer of CBS' coverage.

In 1952, Brinkley and Cronkite were involved in their first TV elections. In those days, TV relied on veteran broadcasters to tell the political stories. But, more and more, television with its visual graphics and computer breakdowns is the star of the show.

"We're entering the graphics era in a big way," said Arthur Bloom, director of CBS' coverage.

Before the polls close in most places, NBC's computer will spit out what it thinks the big picture will be. "Around 9 o'clock (EDT), we'll try to predict the whole composition of the House," said Joseph Angotti, NBC's executive producer of special broadcasts.

All the networks will make winner projections, after the polls close unless the states have varied closing times. In those cases, the networks will wait until the great majority of polls close. The exception is ABC, which will wait until all the polls close in Indiana, Texas and Florida because late-closing precincts are essential to its closings.

NBC is promoting its 140-square-foot electronic scoreboard, another glitz in the network's spirited competition with ABC and CBS for the prestige and financial value of ratings superiority. CBS, under Cronkite's stewardship, won 1978 and 1980. NBC's second-place lead over ABC shrank two years ago.

The major differences on the networks will be the faces.

On CBS, Rather will be joined by Bob Schieffer, reporting on the Senate races, Bruce Morton, on the House, and Lesley Stahl, on governorships. Bill Moyers will provide analysis and commentary.

On ABC, Reynolds and Brinkley reports on the races for governor and Senate, while Koppel concentrates on the House. Commentary and analysis will be provided by Barbara Walters.

Housing prices: up, down or sideways?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — With housing markets likely to revive by spring, assuming no additional problems from interest rates, potential buyers are asking: Have housing prices really fallen into the bargain basement area?

That contention has been spread widely by authors, some stock analysts, and certain members of the housing industry. Is it true?

Over the past year nominal prices of existing homes rose about 1.5 percent, according to the National Association of Realtors. But, says Realtor economist Kenneth Kerin, that means prices actually declined, probably by 6 percent to 8 percent, because of inflation and the costs of below-market seller financing.

By some estimates, the need for sellers to include financing in the sale package reduced actual prices by as much as 25 percent. The amount financing varied greatly, but many sellers in effect lent $10,000 to buyers at rates several points below existing inter-a.c.s.

Apartment house owners who converted to cooperatives and condominiums often "bought down" rates, frequently by three to five percentage points for three years, the assumption being that economic conditions would improve by then. On a $40,000, 30-year mortgage such a buy down amounts to at least $3,468.

In the past year the median price of new, single-family homes remained almost stationary at $72,000, according to the National Association of Home Builders. But, says Robert Sheehan, director of economic research, as the economy recovers prices should slightly exceed the inflation rate.

The lack of price appreciation in the past, however, doesn't by itself mean that current prices are relatively low. The product itself has changed; as with so many other items, the size if not the quality has shrunk.

A Realtor survey of prices showed the average for existing homes sold this fall was $147,000 in San Francisco and only $54,800 in Detroit. Washington, D.C. averaged $104,200, but 130 miles away in Philadelphia the average was $65,100.

If anything, the evidence suggests once again that real estate is not just a local rather than a national market, but that it is a market of houses separately and independently priced. Averages are a guide. But they do not set the price of houses.

Releasing terminally ill inmates bad risk

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Many terminally ill inmates with records of violent crimes or serving lengthy prison sentences cannot be automatically sent home to die, a parole board official says.

Ruben Torres, chairman of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, said Monday that an inmate who shows a tendency toward violence is considered a poor risk for early release.

"Some people think it's very inhumane that we don't let people go home to die. But we can't act on our emotions and we must consider the cold facts in each case," he said.

Parole officials are now reviewing records of 50 terminally ill prison inmates.

Officials said the inmates being considered for medical reprieves suffer from cancer, emphysema and chronic heart disease.

Torres said the parole board would prefer to release the inmates on parole rather than grant medical reprieves.

Paroled inmates are eligible for financial assistance programs, such as Medicare, that would not be available under a medical reprieve, Torres said.

Records show that in the last year, 19 inmates died in prison while awaiting reprieves. Six won medical reprieves and 29 other received paroles or discharges. The remainder of the 132 inmates classified as terminally ill were denied release or were awaiting their first review.

The 46-year-old medical reprieve program was originally designed to provide medical care for inmates who were too sick to be treated by the Texas Department of Corrections.

Signs ban elephants in east Alabama

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — There aren't many elephants around this east Alabama city, so residents won't have a hard time complying with the road signs that prohibit them.

No one has claimed responsibility or given an explanation for the signs, which appeared two weeks ago on the outskirts of town.

City and Auburn University officials speculate the signs may refer to the symbol of the University of Alabama football team — archrival of the Auburn Tigers — or the Republican Party.

The gray elephant symbols, marked by a red diagonal slash, are on 7-foot-tall, dark green signposts along Alabama 29 and Alabama 147.

"We don't know how they got there," said a spokesman for the state Highway Department, who asked to remain anonymous.

"Someone should have gone through our department before putting them up, but we won't come down on them for not doing it. Things like this happen all the time during football season."

A Lee County campaign worker for Republican gubernatorial candidate Emory Folmar discounted the political theory, although election day is Tuesday.

"That's definitely not a Republican elephant. There's a difference in the way you draw a Republican elephant and an Alabama elephant," said the worker, who asked not to be identified. The worker could not describe the difference.

A spokesman at the State Democratic headquarters, who also asked not to be identified, said he didn't know anything about the signs.

"But I'll bet it's darn cute," he added.

It's not the first time animal symbols have appeared around the university town. Several years ago, tiger paw prints colored orange and blue — Auburn University's colors — were painted on an Interstate 85 exit ramp.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court agreed that a Houston man who never left home without his American Express card ran up a $50,000 debt should serve an 18-year jail sentence for mail fraud.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Monday rejected Troy Gary Saxton's argument that the evidence against him was insufficient.

In upholding Saxton's sentence, the appeals court noted that he used his credit cards to fly from Houston to Dallas for dinner, and then return to Houston.

"We conclude that a reasonable person could draw reasonable inferences that Saxton devised a fraudulent scheme," the court concluded.

The court said Saxton was hired as an executive for a Houston long-distance telephone and answering service in November 1977 and applied for an American Express card in the name of David T. Getty.

His application listed his employer as "Commonwealth Corporation" for the previous ten years, cited an incorrect Social Security number, and sought cards for his secretary and her daughter, Fay Shy, as family members.

Between June and September of 1978, "Getty" applied for and received credit cards from Texaco, Exxon, Diners Club, and Carte Blanche.

In each instance, he gave his secretary's telephone number for credit verifications, and provided her with a copy of each application for corroboration, the court said.

"Claims made on the applications, such as length of residence, salary, and the 'adoption' of Fay Shy were simply untrue. And the method of assuring the concealment of the misrepresentations was laid at the keel," said the 5th Circuit.

His Houston-Dallas supper flight was "whimsical," the court said.

News briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sierra Club says it opposes the expected nomination of Donald Hodel, a protégé of Interior Secretary James Watt, for the post of energy secretary.

In a letter to President Reagan, Sierra Club president Denny Shaffer said Monday that Hodel would be a poor choice because of his record from 1972 to 1977 as head of the Bonneville Power Administration in Portland, Ore.

Since 1981, Hodel has been Interior Secretary James Watt's No. 1 deputy at the interior department.

The environmental group said Hodel has demonstrated a lack of foresight and judgment and hostility to energy conservation.

Administration sources say Hodel is the front-runner to become energy secretary when James Edwards leaves the Cabinet later this month to become president of the Medical University of South Carolina.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says reports that Midwestern power plants are principal contributors to acid rain in the East are incorrect and irresponsible.

The administration attacked a report in Science Trends, a trade newsletter, on a draft study by 50 outside scientists that suggest that pollution from coal-burning utilities, primarily in the Midwest, is killing fish, destroying lakes, and damaging structures in the United States and Canada.

Kathleen Bennett, assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said that nowhere in the 1,200-page document were there any conclusions linking acid rain with Midwestern power plants.

MOSCOW (AP) — Anna Akhsharumova, former Soviet women's chess champion, has joined her husband, chess grandmaster Boris Gulko, in a hunger strike to dramatize the couple's efforts to leave the Soviet Union.

A third chess player, Anatoly Volovich, 46, who won the Moscow city chess championship in 1967, said he is also has been fasting since Oct. 23 in an effort to press authorities to grant him an exit visa.

Gulko, 35, stopped eating Oct. 20, demanding that authorities approve his application to emigrate to Israel, first made in 1979. His 25-year-old wife, who won the Soviet women's chess title in 1979, said she began her hunger strike Monday and would not end it until authorities gave the couple permission to leave.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The transportation and energy departments have agreed to formally comply with a law requiring U.S.-registered ships to carry at least half the oil going into the country's strategic petroleum reserve.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Monday that the agreement is retroactive to last Jan. 1 and contains provision for the government to make up for a failure to use a sufficient number of U.S. vessels in 1981.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian George Burns has been selected to receive the annual Jack Benny Award for Excellence in Entertaining, presented by UCLA's Campus Events Commission.

Linda Evans, star of television's "Dynasty," will make the award Thursday in Royce Hall on the UCLA campus. The presentation traditionally draws more than 2,000 students.

Highlights of the 86-year-old Burns' long career in radio, television and motion pictures will be shown, including several performances with his late wife, Gracie Allen, and Jack Benny, said Bill Feeder of the public relations firm of Rogers & Cowan.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of Operation PUSH, has been released from a hospital where he was treated for a strained back and exhaustion.

Jackson, 41, was discharged Monday from St. Joseph Hospital after a week-long stay. A spokeswoman said he was in excellent condition and that his doctor urged the civil rights leader to limit his travel schedule.

PUSH — which stands for People United to Serve Humanity — has been recently urging boycotts of some large companies to pressure them to deal more with minority businesses and put more blacks in executive positions.

LIDICE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — American evangelist Billy Graham said there is "no excuse" for repression as he laid a wreath at the memorial to the victims of a Nazi massacre during World War II.

Graham knelt Monday before the 50-foot wooden cross draped with barbed wire in this village 12 miles from Prague.

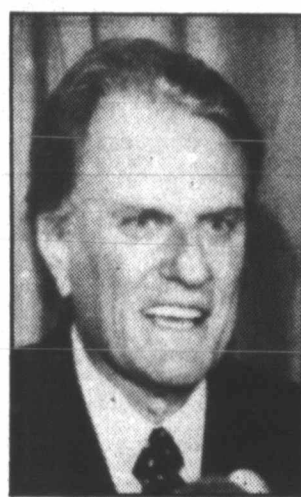

Lidice was wiped out by the German occupiers of Czechoslovakia in retaliation for the assassination of the Nazi military ruler, Reinhard Heydrich. Only 159 of the 500 villagers survived.

The Baptist minister, in his third trip to a communist country this year, declared, "Lidice should stand as a sober warning of what might happen to our world if we do not find a way to reduce the terrible threat of weapons of mass destruction ... I pray that our world will never become another Lidice."

Graham visited Moscow in May and East Germany in October.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Eileen Brennan is being deluged with telephone calls, flowers and cards as she recovers from broken legs and facial fractures suffered when a car hit her on a dark street.

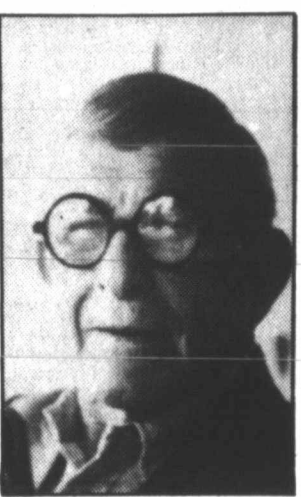

Miss Brennan takes the cards and accepts some calls, but doesn't see the flowers because they aren't permitted in the intensive care unit, said Christine Plank, spokeswoman at Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital in Marina del Rey.
