3 die, 9 injured in station wagon-bus wreck

By JEFF LANGLEY
State Editor

Three people were killed and nine others were injured when a station wagon ran a stop sign and slammed into the side of a Continental Trailways bus carrying 10 people Sunday afternoon at the intersection of U.S. 60 and Loop 171, just east of Pampa, according to investigating officers.

The two occupants of the station wagon, Marvin Wilford Wainwright, 59, and Debra Sue Miller, 32, both of Canadian, died instantly when they were crushed by the bus which rolled over the front end of car. Pampa DPS trooper Johnny Carter said today.

One passenger in the bus, Ignacia Cruz, 58, of the Bronx, in New York City, also died when she was partially ejected through a window, and the bus rolled on top of her head. She was pinned under the vehicle. Carter said.

Cruz was one of nine passengers plus a driver who were riding the bus westbound on U.S. 60 when it was struck at the baggage compartment, just in front of the rear, dual wheels.

The trooper said the bus was approaching Pampa about one half mile east of town. He said the high-level vehicle was traveling near the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit when it struck the intersection with Loop 171.

Carter said the 1973 Chevrolet station wagon, driven by Miller and traveling southbound on the loop, never slowed for the stop sign and slammed full-speed into the passenger side of the bus.

"There's no way we can tell how fast it (the station wagon) was going. There were no skid marks. The brakes were never hit," Carter said today.

But he said the speed limit on the loop is also 55 mph, and the trooper said the driver of a vehicle following the car said the Miller vehicle was traveling near the speed limit. Carter said the witness reported the station wagon never slowed for the stop sign before colliding with the bus.

The force of the impact rolled the bus up and over the front end of the car. The bus did one complete roll over the car, and the Trailways carrier then skidded along on its passenger side for another 210 feet, before coming to a stop in the ditch on the south side of U.S. 60, according to Carter.

The bus traveled a total of 318 feet from the point of impact, the trooper said.

The car was turned from its southbound direction and was pushed about 150 feet in a westerly direction along 60. The car came to a stop, eastbound in one of the two westbound lanes of 60, its victims killed instantly and trapped inside.

Cruz, the victim in the bus, was pinned under the wreckage until the vehicle was righted by wrecker trucks.

All three victims were pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

Eight of the survivors in the bus were transported by Pampa Medical Services Ambulance to Coronado Community Hospital. The ninth survivor was transported to the hospital by an ambulance unit of the Pampa Fire Department.

Those treated and released at the hospital for cuts and bruises include Carl Bentley, 18, of Rt. 1, Wheeler; Elva Wright, 71, of Amarillo; Terry Lee Ashby, 22, of Gaston, Ind.; John C. Shipley, 38, of Lake Forest, Ill.; Francis Chen, 49, of Pine Bluff, Ark.; Richard Perry, 28, of Pittsburg, Calif.; and the driver, A. J. Peters, 47, of Canyon.

The other two people injured in the crash, Rita Williams, 61, of Mount Grove, Mo., and Robert Millard, 25, of Ada, Okla., were admitted to the hospital.

Williams suffered cuts and was admitted for observation in fair condition.

Millard suffered numerous broken bones, and he underwent surgery late Sunday night. He was admitted to the hospital in serious condition.

But following the surgery, Millard has improved to good condition today, according to hospital spokesman Walter Johnson.

Authorities were unable to identify Cruz until late Sunday night. Carter said today that the woman was a missionary. He said she boarded the bus at its point of origin in New York City and was enroute to visit a daughter in Riverside, Calif.

"Looks like they tried to run under the bus," said one witness at the scene.

The Trailways vehicle is a 1982 model, with a 46-passenger capacity, according to John M. Heket, general manager of Continental Panhandle Trailways Inc.

The bus, carrying a banner on the back, "Go Big Red," was heavily damaged in the crash. Most windows on both sides of the bus were smashed out. Blood spattered the intact windows on the folding passenger doors at the front of the bus.

After being hit full-force by the car, the metal plates covering the luggage compartment near the center of the bus were sheared off on both sides.

Baggage, metal and glass littered the highway for hundreds of yards.

The wreck happened about 4:20 p.m., Carter said, and traffic on 60 from both directions was halted and rerouted for more than two hours.

Even after traffic was allowed through the area again, it took wrecking vehicles additional time to remove the bus from the scene.

After the bus was righted, one attempt to pull the vehicle from the ditch saw a wrecking truck standing up on its back wheels, the weight of the bus pulling the truck's front wheels straight up off of the ground.

After being treated at the Pampa hospital, the injured passengers were boarded on a special bus and transported to Amarillo.

Heket said the company provided motel accommodations for the passengers in Amarillo.

The Trailways general manager said the driver did everything possible to avoid the crash, and he said Peters has an excellent driving record.

An investigator at the scene said when Peters saw that the southbound car was not going to stop, the bus driver hit the accelerator and tried to swerve into the far westbound lane.

The bus was enroute from New York to Los Angeles and had planned a stop in Pampa.

Passenger crushed

The sheared-off metal of the baggage compartment on this Continental Trailways bus is evidence of where the vehicle was struck by a station wagon late Sunday afternoon at the intersection of U.S. 60 and Loop 171. The southbound station wagon never slowed for a stop sign at the intersection of the highways before it slammed full-force into the westbound bus. After it was hit by the car, the bus did one complete roll and then skidded another 210 feet on the highway on the passenger side of the vehicle. Both occupants of the car and one passenger in the bus were pronounced dead at the scene. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Didn't stop at intersection

Both passengers in the station wagon which ran a stop sign and struck a Continental Trailways bus near Pampa Sunday afternoon were trapped inside the wreckage and were pronounced dead at the scene. The car displayed Oklahoma tags, with the logo, "Oklahoma is O.K.," but both victims in the 1973 Chevrolet station wagon were from Canadian

Passengers awakened as they flew through the bus windows

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

"Suddenly I cannot touch anything... I was through the window... fall down on the ground. I was awake... try to find my coat. It was cold. The coat was also outside... was on the ground beside me!" explained Francis Chen, a passenger on the Continental Trailways bus which was hit on the right side by a speeding station wagon east of Pampa Sunday afternoon.

The bus passengers were taken to Coronado Community Hospital.

Francis Chen, 49, from Pine Bluff, Ark. enroute to Clovis, N.M. was sitting on the aisle about half way back, on the driver's side of the bus. Chen said he was asleep and "suddenly I was going through the (side) window." He thinks his body popped the window open. He fell to the ground.

He said he was fully awake at that point and realized it was cold, so he looked for his coat. "This coat, it was also on the ground," it had been on the seat beside him. Chen was treated for head and shoulder injuries and released.

John Shipley, 38, of Lake Forrest, Ill., also on the bus, was traveling from Chicago. "I was trying to go to Phoenix," Shipley grimaced. He plans to work in golf course maintenance at Fountain Hills, a resort area outside of Phoenix. Shipley said he was asleep in the front seat, right hand side of the bus when the accident occurred. "I heard this crash, bam, slam... the next thing I knew, I was flying through the front window of the bus." He commended the bus driver for hanging on to the bus as best he could. He was also impressed at the swiftness with which the Pampa firemen and paramedics responded to the accident. Shipley was treated for cuts on the face and released.

The bus driver, A. J. Peters, 47, of Canyon, was treated for shoulder injuries and released. Peters, a ten year veteran with Continental Trailways, has an excellent driving record, according to Panhandle Trailways manager John Heket.

Carl Bentley, 18, of Rt. 1, Wheeler, presented a unique problem for hospital personnel. He is deaf. They communicated with him through sign language and written messages until he was satisfied they understood the extent of his injuries. He was treated for multiple facial cuts and released.

Begin to bury wife in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Wracked with grief, Prime Minister Menachem Begin has returned from the United States to bury his wife of 43 years today at the biblical burial site on the Mount of Olives.

The private funeral ceremony added to the sombre mood of a country commemorating a day of mourning for the 75 Israeli troops killed Thursday when an Israeli military headquarters building collapsed in Tyre, southern Lebanon.

Begin's wife, Aliza, died Sunday from a heart attack after being hospitalized early last month for treatment of chronic asthma and acute respiratory problems. She was 62.

The 69-year-old prime minister received the news in Los Angeles at the start of a 10-day visit to the United States that was to have included a meeting with President Reagan.

Israel Radio said his first reaction was: "I shouldn't have left her."

Begin immediately flew back to Israel.

Business seminars, defensive driving course set

Several seminars and classes for the public will be offered by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce during the next few weeks, according to Chamber President Ed Sweet.

The first of the "Small Business Seminars," which will continue for the next several months will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the Chamber Conference Room in the Hughes Building.

This first session, "How to Deal With Your Banker," will be taught by Luther Robinson, executive vice president of the First National Bank.

Robinson has taught several similar courses that proved to be highly popular and interesting on the college level. The banker-businessman relationship will be explored in light of the banking needs of the small businessman, Sweet said.

Cost to the seminar is $10 for Chamber members and $15 for non-members with registration to be made at the Chamber office before 5 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited to attend the course, Sweet said.

The second of the seminars on small business will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 7, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Pampa Computer Systems, 309 W. Foster, and will be taught by Pete Evans, owner. The course will be "Computers for the Small Business" and will provide participants knowledge on the capabilities of mini-computers, micro-computers and small business systems.

Sweet said the instruction will provide facts needed to use these devices to expand the capabilities and improve the performance of every small businessman. The public is also invited to attend this seminar with the course fee the same as the "How to Deal With Your Banker" seminar. Other "Small Business Seminars" will be scheduled in the future.

The Defensive Driving Classes sponsored by the Chamber for November will be held in the Energas Flame Room, 220 N. Ballard, from 6 to 10 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 17-18.

These courses are approved by the National Safety Council and the Texas Safety Association and, as a result, can help reduce a person's automobile insurance by as much as 10 percent each year as well as remove a traffic ticket from the individual's driving record if approved by a judge.

The course is taught by Jack Peoples, Ingersoll-Rand safety officer and a certified Defensive Driving instructor. Cost of the course is $20 per person.

"The Pampa Chamber of Commerce is attempting to provide a service to the entire spectrum of the citizens of the community in offering these seminars and classes," Sweet said. "Through these courses and others, we are attempting to do our part in making Pampa a better place in which to live and work," he said.

Weather

Fair and warmer today, turning partly cloudy Tuesday afternoon. High today upper 50s. Low tonight lower 30s. High Tuesday mid 60s. Winds today southwest 15 to 20 mph. Winds Tuesday south 10 to 15 mph.

Brezhnev funeral

Dignitaries, Soviet citizens pay last respects to Brezhnev

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev, "glorious son of our homeland," was laid to rest today in Red Square, given a huge, mournful farewell by the nation he led to a pinnacle of world power.

The man who succeeds to his mantle of Kremlin power, Yuri V. Andropov, pledged in the main eulogy to follow "the strategic line in domestic and foreign policy" that was shaped by Brezhnev in his 18 years as Communist Party chief.

After the late Soviet president's coffin was lowered into a grave in the grassy plot behind Lenin's mausoleum, factory whistles wailed and church bells tolled across this vast land, which has known only four paramount leaders in its six decades as the world's greatest communist country.

In the massive square, under a sea of fur hats and Brezhnev portraits, tens of thousands of ordinary Soviet citizens stood silently in the late autumn chill.

Brezhnev was the 10th person to be accorded the honor of a Red Square burial. Besides Vladimir I. Lenin, whose embalmed remains are on display inside the red granite mausoleum, longtime Soviet dictator Josef Stalin is among those buried in the plot.

Nikita Khrushchev, who ruled from 1953 to 1964, was removed from power and when he died in 1971 was buried in Moscow's Novodevichy Cemetery, about three miles from the Kremlin.

Dignitaries from more than 100 nations, including Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz of the United States, also joined in the ceremony, the biggest state funeral here since the death of longtime Soviet dictator Josef Stalin in 1953.

In forceful tones, the 68-year-old Andropov praised his predecessor — "a glorious son of our homeland ... an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and the Soviet state" — for the accomplishments of his regime.

He said the Soviet Union was ready for "honest, equal and mutually beneficial cooperation" with any nation.

Brezhnev died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack at age 75. Within two days, the Communist Party Central Committee chose Andropov, a former chief of the KGB secret police, to succeed Brezhnev as party general secretary.

Gray-clad soldiers, flanked by members of the ruling Politburo, had carried Brezhnev's open coffin on their shoulders from the pastel-green House of Unions and placed it on the red- and black-draped caisson. To the doleful tones of Chopin's "Funeral March," an armored personnel carrier slowly towed the caisson to Red Square.

Brezhnev's wife, Viktoria, and other family members walked solemnly behind, followed by Soviet officials. Leading the caisson were generals and admirals who carried Brezhnev's state medals and awards on small red satin pillows, along with a portrait of the late president.

After Andropov's 10-minute eulogy, other Soviet leaders, lined up across the top of the mausoleum, followed with brief tributes. A factory worker and a farmer delivered eulogies on behalf of the people.

The coffin was then borne to the plot behind the mausoleum. Weeping family members bid a final farewell, kissing Brezhnev on the cheek, and the coffin was then closed and lowered into the grave. The military band played the Soviet national anthem.

Catholic bishops link nuclear war, abortions

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the nation's Roman Catholic bishops refine a challenge to America's nuclear weapons policy, their conference leader is linking nuclear military growth with anti-life trends, including abortion.

"The linkages go far beyond the surface and deeply influence the whole cast of our moral lives," said Archbishop John R. Roach, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

He told the opening of their annual meeting today that "the race to nuclear extinction, the massive killing of the unborn" and "the disintegration of many life-giving elements of existence" form an interlocking deadly pattern.

Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis said that marriage, reproduction and various other "expressions of human belief in survival and continuity" have been undermined by the nuclear threat.

"It involves not only the terror of being extinguished but also the hardening of heart required by a commitment to extinguish the lives of other, innocent beings," he said.

About 300 bishops from across the country were present for the week-long, pivotal meeting at which they were to discuss the draft of a pastoral letter condemning parts of the U.S. nuclear strategy.

Two years in preparation, the 105-page draft has aroused considerable tension in the church, and critics from U.S. administration leaders. But the bishops have moved ahead with it.

It calls for a nuclear freeze, says "even the threat to use such weapons" is immoral, and questions possession of them. The draft, first released last February, says having the weapons can be tolerated only if coupled with moves toward disarmament.

The proposed paper also condemns any first use of nuclear weapons and also their use in any circumstances on targets near population centers.

The bishops now "are on the brink of challenging the moral acceptability of certain essential features of the nation's military policy," writes the Rev. Francis X. Winters of Georgetown University.

Their indicated position "is bound to open a vigorous debate in the public arena," and risks schism within the church, says Winters, a professor of moral theology and international relations.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other administration figures have criticized the bishops' proposed position, saying it would mark a "dangerous departure" from U.S. deterrence policy.

Students sing to show love for music teacher

DENVER (AP) — Dorothy Bronson blew kisses and snapped her fingers as her music students sang their hearts out for the 81-year-old woman, who suffered a heart attack and stroke after being raped at her Nebraska home.

She's shown her love to all of us — she's like a grandmother to us, so we want to show our love to her," said Shannon Strey, 17, one of 18 teen-agers in the Dorothy Bronson Singers who drove from the Nebraska panhandle for the tribute Sunday afternoon to their music teacher.

Mrs. Bronson is recovering from the September attack at her Mitchell, Neb., home at the Spalding Rehabilitation Center here. She glided into the center's cafeteria in her wheelchair, wearing a long white gown studded with gold, her hair done up in soft waves.

Friends and well-wishers in the audience were misty-eyed, and so were the singers, but Mrs. Bronson, who has taught music for half a century and has led the singers who bear her name for 15 years, kept cheering them on.

As the boys in tuxedos and girls in white chiffon sang and danced, Mrs. Bronson, blew kisses with her "bum hand" — her left side is mostly paralyzed from the stroke — beamed with delight and soon began singing too.

Before long, she was their teacher again, calling out such directions as "Susie, sing."

She even snapped the fingers on her left hand, which she can move but cannot control, to the song "Grease."

Mrs. Bronson's heart and home were always open to friends and neighbors. So she thought nothing of it when she heard someone come in the door — she even called out a "hello" to her attacker.

The attack, which doctors believe set off the heart attack and stroke, sent a shock wave through the town of about 1,900 residents.

The rapist is still at large, but a newspaper has offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to an arrest, and more than $4,000 has been raised to help with medical bills.

The "Bronsons" belted out songs like "You Are My Sunshine" and "Everything's Coming Up Roses." Mrs. Bronson herself got a bouquet of pink roses.

The guest of honor, who in her youth sang on Broadway and with the Los Angeles Opera Company, bubbled with thanks. She presented the singers to the audience as "my children. I'm so proud of them, I'm just bursting out of my skin."

Mrs. Bronson is undergoing physical, occupational and speech therapy. She is learning to use a walker, and hopes that by her 82nd birthday in February she'll be able to walk without it.

Mrs. Bronson also plans a trip to Europe next summer with her singing group and wants to continue her job, "because I taught for 50 years and it is such a part of my life."

The Bronson Singers hope their mentor is back home by Dec. 5 for a fund-raising concert featuring singers past and present. The theme will be "You've Got a Friend."

Area certified public accountants to meet

Current trends affecting the accounting profession in Texas will be analyzed by area certified public accountants this week.

I Lee Wilson, president-elect of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants (TSCPA), will address members of the organization's Panhandle Chapter. The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Amarillo Country Club.

Wilson, a Dallas CPA, will comment on the impact of future mandatory continuing professional education for Texas CPAs. He will also stress the need for members of the profession to be informed on and active in the legislative process. Long-range and immediate TSCPA goals will also be reviewed. Wilson has distinguished himself through his professional involvement at the local, state and national levels. The individual practitioner of public accounting has served as president of TSCPA's Dallas Chapter. Previous TSCPA positions include treasurer and membership on both the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors.

Wilson is a member of the Council, the governing body of the American Institute of CPAs. The voluntary professional organization represents 180,000 CPAs working throughout the United States.

TSCPA is dedicated to the maintenance and strengthening of high professional and ethical standards in order that CPAs might better serve in the public interest. The voluntary professional organization, with almost 19,000 members, is the third largest statewide CPA group in the United States.

More than 500 certified public accountants are active in the Panhandle Chapter. TSCPA Chapter President Bart Templeton notes that the local organization encompasses a 25 county region including: Armstrong, Briscoe, Carson, Castro, Collingsworth, Dallam, Deaf Smith, Donley, Gray, Hall, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Moore, Ochiltree, Oldham, Parmer, Potter, Randall, Roberts, Sherman, Swisher and Wheeler.

State report chronicles mental patient release

BOSTON (AP) — It has all the elements of a terrifying novel. An "extremely psychotic" mental patient. A 9-year-old boy murdered while vacationing in Florida with his family. Inaction by state bureaucrats. A crusade by the boy's parents for justice.

But the death of young Arnold Zeleznik, whose throat was slit while he waited for his father in a motel hallway, was fact, not fiction.

It is part of an 88-page state report, released Friday by a special legislative commission.

The report supplies details about the psychological state of mental patient Vernal Walford, the initial response by state officials to his problems, the death of Arnold Zeleznik and the fight by Carter and Betty Zeleznik of Ambler, Pa., for an investigation into their son's slaying.

Here are some highlights: The Jamaican-born Walford was hired in September 1974 as a factory worker at the Milton Bradley Co. in Springfield. While working on Nov. 21, 1974, he was accidentally struck on the head by a doll tossed by a co-worker. "Walford became enraged, states his belief in God, and threatens to kill a fellow employee," the report said. "Walford is ... sent home to rest."

Four days later, on Nov. 25, Walford talked to company doctor Lawrence Selden about his injury, and the doctor said he "seems manic, somewhat hostile and appears to be hallucinating," according to the legislative report. Selden sent Walford to the emergency room at Springfield Hospital, where he was treated by Dr. William Linson.

"According to Dr. Linson, Walford was 'in a rage ... was terrifying ... His voice was raising and lowering ... He was in his own world, out of touch with reality ... extremely psychotic ... extremely dangerous,'" the legislative report said.

That same day, Linson committed Walford to Northampton State Hospital.

"Upon admission to Northampton, Walford ... was in a psychotic state," the legislative report said. "He complained of hearing loud voices which made him lose control. He would suddenly scream, he acknowledged that people thought he was 'crazy' and were afraid of him, and he exhibited the behavior of a religious fanatic."

On Nov. 26, Walford attempted to assault head nurse Carol Bombard and was subdued by two attendants after a violent 15-minute struggle. The nursing staff, which had witnessed the incident, tried to persuade hospital officials to transfer Walford to a maximum-security state hospital. The recommendation was denied.

Later in the day, Walford was interviewed by Dr. Robert Sharron, a psychologist. Sharron followed no defined procedure in conducting the interview, took no written notes, and made no entry into the patient's file, the legislative report said.

The next day, Nov. 27 — approximately 40 hours after he had been involuntarily committed — Walford was released.

Hospital administrators later testified before the committee that state mental health officials were more concerned with "keeping the census

Iceless hockey played in middle of night

HOUSTON (AP) — At midnight, amid streets that died hours before when half a million office workers fled homeward, a wild-haired man rockets effortlessly past a cadaverous drunk lying stiff on the sidewalk.

The whirl of ball bearings changes pitch as he leaps off a three-foot drop, hits the asphalt and gathers himself, then bounds over the next curb and rolls away.

Feet without wheels constitute a deformity where he's heading — to the Albert Thomas Convention Center on the west edge of Houston's downtown, the "ice" for a roller skating hockey game two nights a week.

"Where's your skates?" a player asks an outsider, solicitous as though he's inquiring about a missing hand. Other men are strapping on pads and swinging sticks in imitation of wrist shots and slap shots.

The hazards of playing hockey outside the Houston convention center are manifold. Though the front plaza offers a hard, crack-free surface that runs level for about 50 yards, it is marred by such obstacles as a row of concrete pillars, a large antler and one sideline made up of glass doors. And as with anyplace outdoors in Houston, players sweat a good bit more than they do in most places where hockey is played.

But the lure that makes the problems trivial are the words on two metal signs posted on blocks at each end of the playing area — "No Skating or Skateboarding Allowed."

The unwelcome mats are just the right size, just the right height, just the right material.

"When the sign rings, it's a goal," Kenny Parker, the game's red-haired star, says with a grin. Each standard bears black rubber scars from the battering it takes in this game without goalies.

The signs take the most punishment from Parker. The son of a roller rink owner says he has been skating since he was 10 months old and played on a Houston roller hockey team that finished second in a national championship game in St. Louis this year.

He left his lifetime home in Houston to play a season of junior varsity ice hockey at the University of Wisconsin in 1981, when the Badgers were national champions, but was driven away by winter temperatures of 30 degrees below zero.

Besides, he confesses, up north "I went from being one of the top three or four players in the state to being average real fast. You've got guys there who're used to practicing three hours a day when you've been working out that much a week."

But Parker is the class of this field. When a solid smack knocks his stick out of his hand and sends the puck skittering away, Parker charges his opponent, dodges around the pillar, feints right and steals the puck with his left skate.

Whoops from his teammates echo off the convention center glass. No slam dunk could be gaudier.

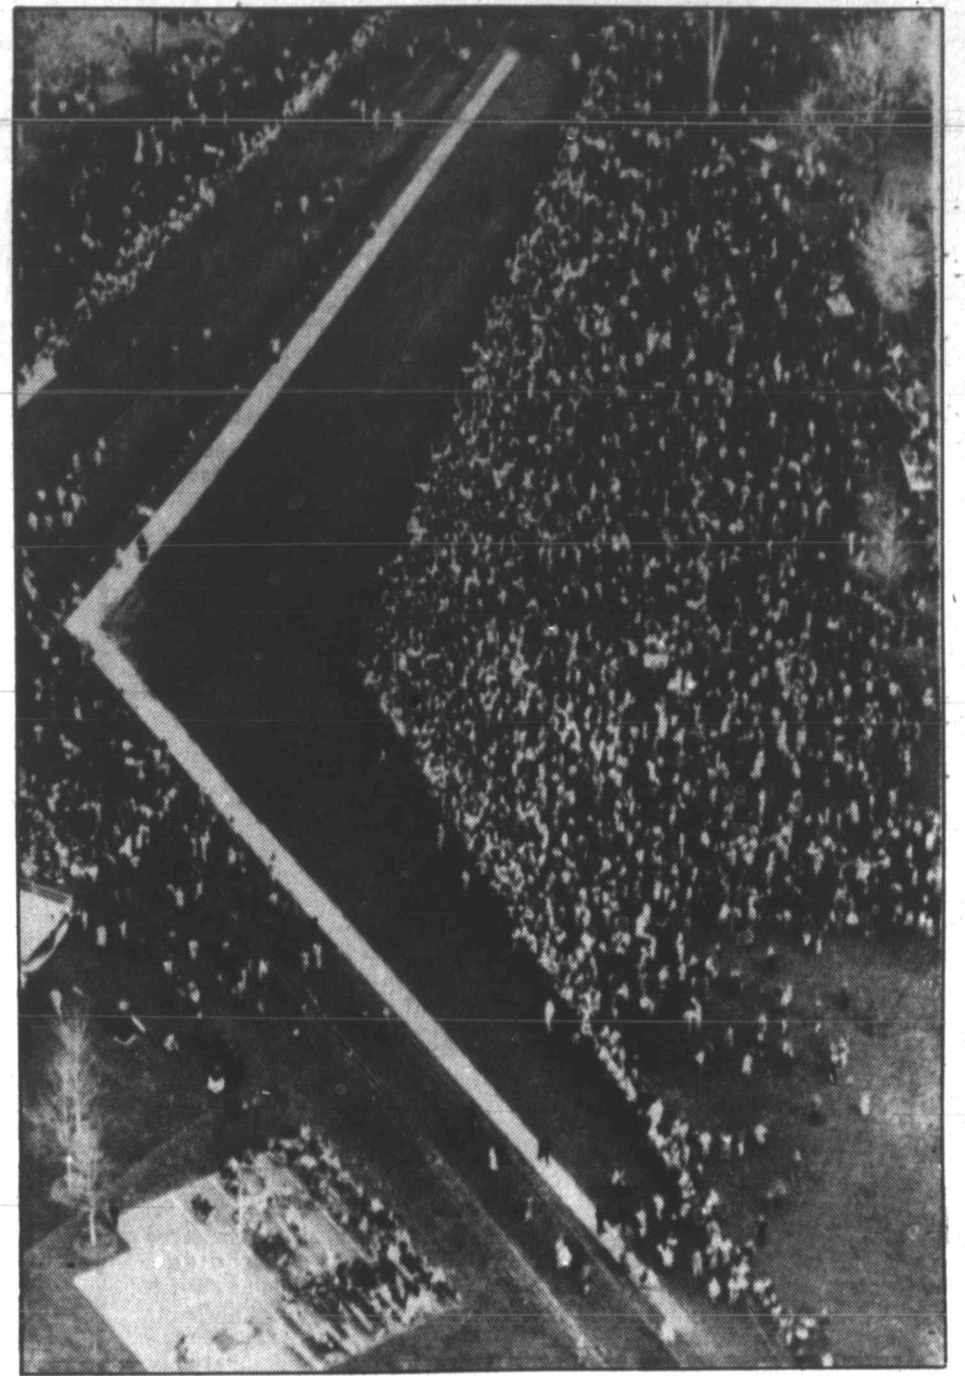

Seconds later, one-on-one in front of the goal, Parker mesmerizes a defender with a head fake and flicks a wrist shot, clank, against the sign.

The game has no official historian, but player Sam Decker estimates it began two years ago.

He says it grew out of games played in rinks and sponsored by the Southern Puck Roller Hockey League, chaired by Parker's dad, Dick Parker.

Like pickup games in many sports, the abilities and occupations of the players vary widely. Decker, who skates gamely and fairly effectively, leaves early so he won't be exhausted at his high school football practice the next day. A novice named Bob is a repairman for Xerox. Kenny Parker manages his dad's rink.

Testimony to begin in capital murder trial

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A 14-year-old girl who fled nude from a death scene where her mother and younger sister were sexually assaulted and killed will be a key witness against an Odessa oilfield worker accused of the brutal slayings, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors say Michael Eugene Sharp, 28, will first be tried in on a capital murder charge in the slaying of 8-year-old Christi Elms last June 11.

Sharp also is accused of the slaying of Brenda Broadway, 31, the child's mother and the abduction of Mrs. Broadway's other daughter, Selena Kay Elms, who escaped by fleeing naked over five miles of rugged rangeland.

The teen-ager's descriptions given to authorities while she was under hypnosis led to Sharp's arrest in Sweetwater five days later as he stepped from a bus bound for Louisiana.

Authorities said Miss Elms told them that she, her mother and sister were abducted about 12:30 a.m. from a Kermit car wash and taken to a remote area of West Texas.

The girl escaped about 2:30 a.m. while her mother was being killed near a cattle-watering tank, authorities said.

Miss Elms suffered minor cuts and abrasions during her escape, but reached help at an oil drilling site about 8 a.m. after running five miles nude and with her hands bound.

The nude bodies of her mother and sister were found in a shallow grave 16 miles southeast of Kermit.

Autopsy shows man died from stab wounds

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's officers were comparing dental records in an effort to positively identify a body believed to be that of a missing Dallas businessman.

The dead man tentatively has been identified as former Braniff International executive Edson Emerson Beckwith, according to Hopkins County Sheriff J.E. Tittle.

An autopsy showed that the man died of multiple stab wounds, authorities said.

Tittle said the death has been classified a homicide and an investigation is being conducted by the Texas Rangers and sheriff's officers.

"We are 90 percent sure that the body is Beckwith's and are going on with our investigation based on that assumption," a sheriff's official said.

The decomposed body was found by a ranch foreman near a creek in a heavily wooded area about four miles northwest of here, Tittle said.

The location was about four miles northeast of where Beckwith's abandoned car was found Oct. 14.

Beckwith's wristwatch and a wallet with his driver's license and several credit cards were found on the body, sheriff's officials said. The wallet contained no money.

The 51-year-old financial consultant was returning from a business meeting in Omaha, Texas, authorities said.

Beckwith's wife, Jane, said

Saturday she had suspected foul play ever since her husband failed to arrive home for a birthday celebration.

"I'm sure it was robbery, because they found no money on him," she said. "I think they held him up, and he tried to fight them."

"He was probably fighting for his life," she added. "But he was always a fighter. He probably was just reacting to somebody holding him up."

Mrs. Beckwith said her husband was always punctual and had planned to take her to dinner and a movie for her 46th birthday.

Beckwith's 1979 Oldsmobile was found Oct. 15 along a rural road in Brashear, about 75 miles east of Dallas. The keys were in the ignition and Beckwith's suit coat was hanging on a hook in the back seat.

Officers found a pair of driving gloves nearby with a spot of blood identified as being Beckwith's type.

A native of Frankfort, N.Y., Beckwith formerly was an executive vice president with Braniff International in Dallas. He also had worked for Chase Manhattan Bank and PepsiCo, Inc., in New York, and was a former vice president of finance at King Resources in Denver.

Alibi witnesses called to Wood trial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A parade of defense witnesses lined up today to testify that accused triggerman Charles V. Harrelson was in Dallas the day a federal judge was assassinated here in 1979.

Harrelson, a convicted contract killer, is expected to take the stand in his own defense during the sixth week of testimony in his trial in the slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., defense attorney Tom Sharpe Jr. said.

The 44-year-old Harrelson is accused of shooting Wood in the back for a $250,000 fee from convicted narcotics smuggler Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 39.

The groundwork for the alibi witnesses was laid by Sharpe when he called Dallas private investigator Kenneth Presley to the stand Friday.

Presley said he took statements from seven people who Harrelson said saw him in Dallas May 29, 1979, the day Wood was slain outside his San Antonio townhouse.

Prosecutors, before resting their case Friday, called Harrelson's chief alibi witness, Rockwall nightclub owner Billy T. Dyer, to the stand. Dyer told the jury he had lied to the FBI when he said he saw Harrelson on the day in question.

Dyer, appearing as a government witness, testified two weeks ago that he fabricated a story about being at Harrelson's apartment to pick up a golf putter the morning Wood was gunned down in San Antonio.

Dyer said he signed a false statement at the Dallas office of Harrelson's former attorney, Charles Tessler, claiming he was with Charles and Jo Ann Harrelson at their Dallas apartment at the same time Wood was killed.

Dyer said Harrelson told him to say that Dyer, Harrelson and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, were watching Diana Shore on television when the program was interrupted by a news bulletin about Wood's death.

Mrs. Harrelson, 41, is being tried for conspiracy to obstruct justice and Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, 28, is charged with murder conspiracy and conspiring to obstruct justice.

Opryland looking for new talent

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Opryland is going on the road in a coast-to-coast search for singers, dancers and other performers for next year's shows at the Nashville entertainment park.

The first auditions are scheduled Wednesday in Provo, Utah. From there, Opryland officials will go to San Francisco and then around the country, winding up back in Nashville in late December and January.

Two auditions have been scheduled in Texas — Arlington and Denton, both on Jan. 27.

"Performers whom we hire are some of the best in the nation, and versatility is a key factor," said Bob Whittaker, Opryland entertainment director. "In many cases, we need singers who can dance and dancers who can sing. And we certainly are looking for both country and non-country performers."

The auditions will be for singers, dancers, dance captains, conductor-pianists, musicians, stage managers and technicians, Opryland officials say.

The auditions are not for Grand Ole Opry, the 57-year-old country music radio show presented at the park.

Park officials estimate 7,000 performers, musicians and technicians will audition in 31 cities for between 375 and 400 Opryland positions needed for spring, summer and fall performances in 1983. The shows at the park

Weekly pay is $235 for singers-dancers, $296 for instrumentalists, $443 for conductor-pianists, $283 for stage managers and $199 for technicians.

1,000 seek 13 jobs

HOUSTON (AP) — Transit officials will be able to pick 13 bus drivers from about 1,000 applicants.

Job seekers — many unemployed oilfield workers — started lining up outside the Metropolitan Transit Authority's office at 5 a.m. Saturday, four hours before the office opened.

The MTA was accepting applications for 13 jobs with starting monthly salaries of $842. About 140 of the 1,000 applicants will be given written tests before the vacancies were filled.

"I've been working laying brick but now that the cold weather is here there isn't any work available," said Stan Pozwio, 29. "I was hopping from job to job. I've come here looking for something steady."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The welfare dilemma

The war on poverty has been both a success and a failure. While generous income subsidies and in-kind transfers such as health care and housing have improved living standards, governmental assistance has been far less successful in intergrating the poor into the mainstream American economy. There are an estimated 10 million people or more who are called the "hard-core" underclass because of their seeming inability to get an education, keep a job and stay out of trouble with the law. The welfare system may be contributing to this problem.

The welfare state has become a kind of hole in the polity through which millions have dropped out of active involvement in American life," says Lawrence M. Mead, a professor of politics at New York University. In an insightful article in the Public Interest, he notes that "the main goal of the welfare state has always been to integrate the disadvantaged into the mainstream of society. The crisis of the welfare state is the integration has not been achieved; the goal may even be receding."

Efforts to open doors and raise income haven't generally been successful in getting poor people to fend for themselves as everyone else does. "The underclass seems to be dropping out of society, not joining it," Mr. Mead says. "In particular, disadvantaged workers seem to be withdrawing from the mainstream economy."

The welfare programs themselves are part of the problem. Governmental largess can cause a dependency on welfare that saps individual initiative and self-motivation. Many people apparently become quite content doing nothing. Moreover, welfare comes to be seen as a right, rather than a privilege, and any talk of changing the system is speedily labeled as racist and discriminatory. Thus, the welfare system tends to perpetuate social divisions instead of fostering better social integration.

Mr. Mead suggests that the welfare system should be altered to place more reliance on self-motivation and responsibility. "Programs should try to assure recipients the same balance of rights and obligations that non-dependent people face in their daily lives. The needy should be supported, but they should also be expected to work if employable, to stay in school if young, to obey the law, and so on... this seems the only way that programs can support and justify, rather than tacitly undercut, the civic sense their clients need to progress in American society."

Certainly, requiring welfare recipients to meet their social obligations to work or go to school wouldn't do them any harm. And there is a chance that such discipline might eventually help them to get off the dole.

Artist finds her home

By RUSTY BROWN

Melody LightFeather is an artist who came close to losing her identity and her heritage.

She lived in two worlds: the Indian, as a child; the Anglo, as a young woman. Now, at 32, she is painting at a furious pace to reclaim her Indian roots.

She knows nothing of her father. Her mother was a Pima Indian of the tribe living in the Gila and Salt River valleys of Arizona. She died when Melody was eight and then her grandmother became parent, family and teacher.

"Grandmother was afraid the school on the reservation was not good enough. She had heard about the great public schools in New York City and decided we should go there. I was 10 by then and I remember it as a very long journey."

One can imagine the stares that greeted the twosome on the streets of New York: The old Indian woman in sandals and long dress, leading a beautiful child with black braids and excited brown eyes.

"We took a room in somebody's apartment. New York seemed to be all hard floors and hard walls and buildings up to the sky. I couldn't even see the sun come up. At school, I didn't feel I belonged. There were black kids and Puerto Rican kids and tough white kids."

"My grandmother took me to ballets and museums and I had art lessons and played cello in a youth orchestra. I don't know how she afforded this. She was always making baskets, and I think now she must have sold them."

Some time after her beloved grandmother's death, there was college in West Virginia for a certificate as an art teacher, marriage, children, then a divorce.

"It was during my divorce that I knew I wanted to return to my people. I was confused and wanted to search out my soul," she explains. She had seen enough of the "white man's" world.

Now, artist LightFeather lives on the outskirts of Isleta pueblo, one of New Mexico's numerous Indian communities along the Rio Grande River.

She paints Indian adobes the color of burnished gold beneath the setting sun and snow-covered mountains with coyote tracks leading into the woods.

"Coyote tracks are a good omen," she says. "Indian hunters follow them to the game."

Her watercolors often depict tribal rites of Indian women, Indian legends or history. Many paintings are still lifes of pueblo pottery and jewelry. Her trademark is an Indian symbol in one corner: a broken arrow to ward off evil spirits; the zia, or sun sign, for warmth and growth; rain clouds to symbolize a good harvest; or, the cactus flower to signify young love.

She hammers silver into bracelets and carves Indian faces in fossilized walrus tusks from Alaska. She weaves blankets of yucca fiber and turkey feathers, and Indian art more than 500 years old. She wears only Indian clothes now - buckskin boots, a string of turquoise around her neck, a cotton skirt and blouse sewn by herself. She has married a man from Jemez pueblo whose Indian name translates to Eagle Tail.

Galleries in Santa Fe carry her work and a few pieces have been bought by museums. A painting of a bird in flight is owned by Robert Redford, the actor and activist for Indian rights and wildlife.

Recently she was asked to do 600 watercolors, two for each of the 300 rooms of the Regent Hotel in Albuquerque. The project, she says, will take more than two years. Every painting will depict some aspect of pueblo life and include, of course, an ancient Indian sign.

"You may write," she said, speaking softly in a voice as melodious as her name. "that I am just an Indian woman in the modern world - trying to hold onto something that had meaning to my grandmother and my people."

Labor unions are monopolies

By OSCAR COOLEY
It is time people recognize the labor unions are monopolies.

A monopoly is an organization of producers of a given product or service who act together as one. Their method is to withhold their product from the market until it is forced to do their will, which usually means pay their price. It is sometimes called a trust.

John D. Rockefeller banded oil producers together and withheld enough oil from consumers to force them to pay his price. As a result he became one of the world's richest men.

Anti-trust laws have been enacted by Congress, they condemn trusts or monopolies as illegal. A labor union operates on the same principle John D.'s Standard Oil Company did, but inconsistent as Americans are, Standard Oil was dissolved, but laws have been passed by Congress declaring that collective bargaining (that is, bargaining for labor with a union instead of with individual workers) is approved, is the law of the land. This means that is workers organize a union and demand that their employer bargain with them through the union, he must do so.

When a union strikes - stops working and closes the plant - and the employer and union fail to agree, the union may accuse the employer of breaking the law. If the employer hires individual workers to replace the strikers, he is accused of an unfair labor practice.

This is what happened recently in the strike of hospital employees at Warren, Trumbull county, Ohio. A hospital is a kind of enterprise that cannot be closed down at will. Hence, when the Trumbull Memorial Hospital workers went on strike in August, the hospital management hired others to take their places and kept right on caring for its patients. This did not set well with the unionists. The main issue in the dispute came to be the hiring of the replacement workers. Monopolies are not highly considerate of their victims.

Two especially depressed American industries are steel and automobiles. Our steel mills are operating at only 40 percent of capacity.

Workers in both steel and automobiles are organized in union. Both the United Steel Workers and the United Auto Workers have forced wages of over $20 an hour on their employers. These wages have been a main factor in raising the cost of production and the prices to meet that cost so high that foreign steel and autos, produced at lower cost, could be imported and sold more cheaply. Result: we are importing large quantities of steel and autos.

Are the steel and auto unions offering to accept lower wages so that their employers can compete with and out sell the foreign product? Not so you would notice it. On the contrary, they are urging the government to keep out the foreign goods by means of import restrictions.

We do not need legislation forbidding workers to form union. There is nothing evil or unsound in workers offering to sell as a group rather than as individuals. Farmers do it through their marketing co-ops, what we need is action by Congress to repeal the laws which favor collective sale of labor and which in effect force employer to bargain with unions.

Averting nuclear peril

A group of Colorado College alumni, students, parents and faculty gathered to discuss the prospects for averting nuclear war. One proposed solution was to move away from "sovereign nation-states."

Presumably a one-world government would take their place and control all national, ethnic and political rivalries which might lead to war.

Most of the participants saw this view as "unrealistic," and indeed it is. But it is an idea we'll probably hear again, stemming from the powerful sentiment that the solution to any problem - from unemployment to nuclear war - it bigger government.

Assuming that a world government were in place, one could be certain that it would have to be all pervasive and powerful to hold all the world's contending forces together.

One should ask himself if this pressure cooker always threatening to explode, with nuclear arms presumably still in existence, would be more conducive to peace than the present arrangement.

For national ties it can be said that they gave men a stability, identity and rootedness - and consequently a stake in preserving the Earth. Instead, of world government, some thinkers have recommended the breakdown of existing states into smaller components.

Counselor's Corner

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv.

Whenever a person has a serious problem, he often believes life is unfair. Even though all precautions have been taken, failure can still result. He had followed previously proven steps to attain the goal hundreds had used prior to his attempt, yet the seemingly impossible happened. Living under these circumstances isn't worth his time and effort, he feels. He sometimes chooses suicide as his only alternative.

A problem takes on severity whenever you're unable to solve it. As long as you handle problems as they arise, they are ordinary, normal, "no big deal." They are accepted as something everyone goes through from time to time. In this frame of mind, suicide is seldom considered.

One approach to handling a problem is to keep it simple. Look at it as a problem, not as a failure. It may be the result of a mistake or an error, certainly not a catastrophe or a final judgment on one's life. When a problem becomes a resource for guilt, giving up, stop trying, suicide presents its means of escape again. Keep problems simple.

Believe that problems do not have power. Some people do not believe that they have the ability to solve problems because of their weakness. It's untrue! A problem seems powerful as we give in to it. In trying to learn to cope with our problems, we own the power and can remain in control.

Give the controls to a monster and it will destroy. Keep the controls in your possession and you have the power to control your life. Problems are a result of losing the controls. Stay in control and you're powerful and suicide is unnecessary, unthinkable, impossible.

Continue to know that you are of greater worth than your problem. Problems are "a dime a dozen." Everyone has them frequently. They can be replaced as easy as dishwater.

You, however, are irreplaceable. One rich, full life comes your way. Another one is fantasy. Living makes you important, and your problems end with your choosing, you are of greater worth than a problem which is solved and then terminated. You continue in worthwhile living.

Even though we have the choices to keep problems simple, maintain control over them and have seen our importance as human beings, there are still those who reject themselves.

How does suicide continue as a release from failure?

First, there may be a family history of suicides. People learn to fail as easily as they learn to succeed. If a parent or other family member committed suicide, it may cause us to believe it's a choice. A close relative destroying his life may become too stressful to handle and other family members take the same way out of life.

Second, psychiatric treatment and - or hospitalization may be symptomatic because suicide may have been attempted at that time. A history of suicidal attempts runs out eventually and suicide happens. Some attempt suicide for attention, acceptance, to get their way, to scare a person, to control a person, to prove something. Suicide proves one thing: that person wanted to die more than he wanted to live.

Third, grief can lead to suicide. Whenever we are saddened by a loss, living loses meaning and purpose momentarily. Those who are able to work through grief are often stronger because they accept the reality of death and recognize hope is present. The best way out of grief is to see the good that remains to be enjoyed: family, friends, laughter, pleasure, accomplishments, satisfaction. Suicide limits us from everything.

Stress has led people to suicide. When the great depression fell on America, thousands destroyed their lives because of stress. They didn't know how to handle their financial losses. Depression meant starting over, building a comfortable life style again. Those who did not want to start over and face their situation as solveable, committed suicide.

It is essential that each of us recognize our predicaments as normal: problems, grief, stress, lack of self-confidence, loneliness. Use the mental resources available and conquer the feeling of giving up and wanting out. Keep the mind alert and answer life's questions. You are more important than suicide. Stay alive with hope. Look forward to the experiences today offers.

Thanksgiving is for being thankful. Think of something or someone special to you and be thankful. Should you not be able to be thankful, embrace a loved one or friend. They will have you on their list for thanksgiving. This contribution to them will bring you hope for another day.

Please don't destroy you. Life is better than death.

Improvements are likely this coming year where your material needs are concerned. Sudden shifts in conditions could spring you into the profit column.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conditions with an influence on your security or material well-being could take some unusual twists in your favor today. Be alert for strange signals. Order now: the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic combinations, compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities and more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be quite successful today if you involve yourself in projects giving you the opportunity to express your originality or inventiveness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Get an early start today. The types of results you're looking for could come quickly. Stalling tends to lessen your possibilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, try to mingle with persons who are progressive and forward-looking. There's a chance they might be putting something together in which you'll really fit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let challenging developments disturb you today. When under the gun you can be extremely resourceful and ingenious at surmounting obstacles.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Just because bright ideas may come easily to you today, don't discount their merit. Your flashes of brilliance could be worthwhile.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be prepared for unusual conditions or sudden shifts in your commercial dealings today. There's a chance something beneficial might unexpectedly develop.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Make an effort today to get to know better someone you met recently. You may have more in common than you realize. A good relationship could result.

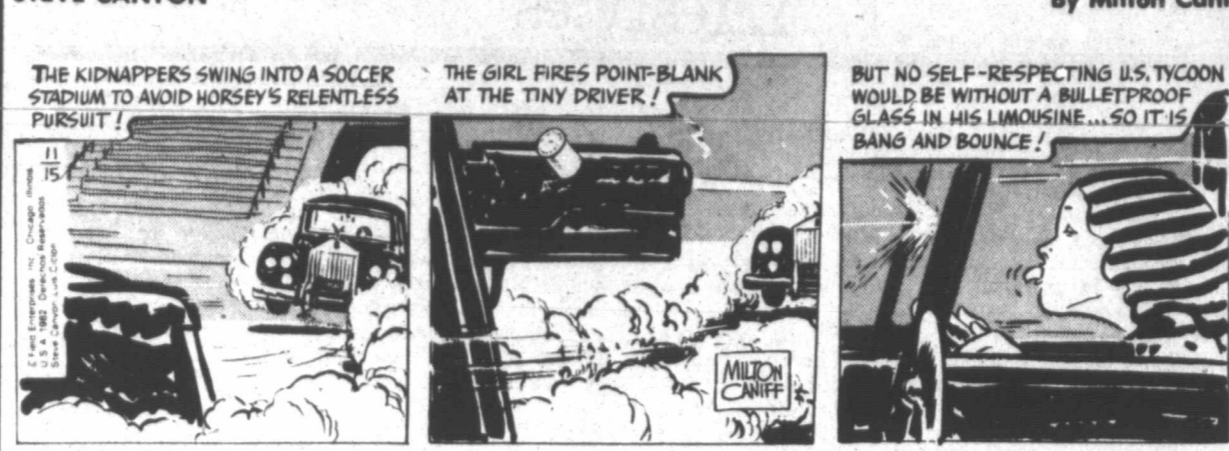

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't be bogged down with unworkable procedures. Use your ingenuity today to come up with better ways for doing things. Your concepts will be good.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to be bored and restless today unless you involve yourself in activities which are fun and challenging. Make a game out of all that you do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Where family matters are concerned today, try to keep your schedule flexible. Something "fun" may unexpectedly pop up. You'll want to be free to participate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't waste your time today. By the same token, don't be so structured that you lack freedom of mobility. Fun developments may present themselves.

"Throwback play" kept SMU unbeaten

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — In practices, Southern Methodist referred to it as "The Throwback Play."

At least once a week, the Mustangs would work on the schoolground play's intricate timing.

Blane Smith would catch a kickoff down the middle, run a few steps, then fire laterally across the field to Bobby Leach.

"It never worked in practice," Leach said. "I bet we practiced it 60 times and there weren't very many of them when Blane would hit me with the ball."

All the work paid incalculable dividends Saturday in a wild ending to No. 2-ranked SMU's 34-27 victory over Texas Tech that may rank as the most stunning finish in Southwest Conference history.

With dreams of an unblemished season draining away after Ricky Gann's chip shot field goal with 17 seconds left tied the score 24-all, SMU coach Bobby Collins called for his "Throwback Team."

"I was hoping we were going to try it," said Smith. "We had nothing to lose."

Collins had used the play when he coached at Southern Mississippi.

"Once we returned a kickoff about 80 yards against Bowling Green," Collins said. "Another time we tried it against Mississippi and they intercepted the ball."

"Obviously, you can't expect to use it in every game and this is the first time it ever scored for me."

As SMU's good luck would have it, Smith had trouble fielding the ball. He kept fumbling it until just about every Red Raider on the return team was on top of him.

Then he grabbed it off the ground and fired to the waiting Leach, who had a picket line of blockers in escort. He dashed 91 yards for the touchdown to set off one of the wildest celebrations you've ever seen.

The play took 13 seconds, but the Mustangs will remember it a lifetime.

"I was a little worried when I bobbed it," said Smith, who had subbed for regular returner Reggie Dupard. "It's a miracle."

Leach agreed. "It is a miracle. I can't believe it. I was stunned," he said.

"We worked on that play every Thursday ... I thought Blane was in trouble when he was bobbling the ball but we already had the (blocking) wall set," said SMU quarterback Lance McLhenny.

Leach said he thought the ball bounced before it got to him. Television replays show it did not.

Some SMU players didn't even know the play was on.

"I looked up and saw Leach running down the sidelines and I yelled 'How did he get the ball?'" said defensive back Russell Carter.

Leach said he was afraid someone was going to come off the Tech bench and tackle him.

"We set up the play right in front of their bench and some of them actually edged out onto the field," said Leach. "I was running for my life."

It was—Leach's second "miracle" touchdown of the year. He went 79 yards for a touchdown against Texas on a game-breaking "immaculate reception" that bounced off a defender's hands and shoulder pads.

Tailback Craig James said he already was pouting about the Mustangs' perfect season being blemished.

"It was hitting me pretty hard, then the miracle happened," James said. "I hope we never have to even think about using that play again."

Eric Dickerson said the play could pay some big dividends to SMU.

"It's got to mean the national championship," said Dickerson.

Pampa to host playoff game

Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Independent School District Athletic Department have secured the Area playoff football game between Booker and Vega.

The Class 1A contest will be played at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Harvester Stadium. Admission will be $3 for adults and $1 for students.

"We are very pleased that we have such a fine facility to offer these visiting teams and are glad those chose Pampa for the playoff," Pampa Athletic Director Bill Balcom said.

"The Chamber is more than happy to provide workers for these playoff games at no cost to the visitors as it helps Pampa to be known as a 'friendly city' as well as bringing more people to our community who will also spend money with our merchants," Chamber of Commerce President Ed Sweet said. "We are always working to secure events such as this for our community in an effort to promote Pampa."

Both Booker and Vega closed the regular season with a 9-1 record.

Crimson Tide loses first home game in 19 seasons

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

For the first time in 19 years, Bear Bryant has been outwrestled in Tuscaloosa.

While dozens of teams are battling for conference championships and bowl bids, the man who gained one of sport's most famous nicknames by wrestling a bear in Fordyce, Ark., more than a half century ago may find himself out of the Top Twenty just one year after becoming the winningest coach in the history of college football.

"People will just have to realize that nobody is going to dominate college football, not even Alabama," Southern Mississippi quarterback Reggie Collier said after scoring on runs of 22, 8 and 5 yards and leading the unranked Golden Eagles to a 38-29 victory over No. 17 Alabama. That was a rare, second-straight loss and ended the Crimson Tide's 57-game winning streak in Tuscaloosa's Bryant-Denny Stadium. They hadn't lost there since Florida turned the trick 10-6 in 1963.

Despite Collier's comment, top-rated Georgia seems to be doing a pretty job in the domination department. The Bulldogs, bidding for their second national championship in three years, clinched their third consecutive Southeastern Conference title and another trip to the Sugar Bowl by defeating Auburn 19-14 as Herschel Walker rushed for 177 yards and two touchdowns.

Included were a 47-yarder in the second period — his longest touchdown run in two years — and a decisive 3-yard plunge with 8:42 left after Auburn had gone in front 14-13 on an 87-yard scamper by Lionel James.

Runner-up Southern Methodist pulled a play that even the 69-year-old Bryant may never have seen, an unintentional bobble of a bouncing kickoff, followed by an across-the-field lateral, followed by a 91-yard dash down the sideline with just four seconds remaining for a miraculous 34-27 triumph over Texas Tech.

Georgia and SMU became the only unbeaten-untied teams in major college football when third-ranked Arizona State committed four turnovers and lost to No. 7 Washington 17-13.

There is no shortage of claimants — either directly or indirectly — to the top 1 ranking.

The indirect version came from Penn State's Joe Paterno after the fifth-ranked Nittany Lions defeated No. 13 Notre Dame 24-14.

"I think we're playing the best football of any team Penn State has ever had," Paterno said.

Pitt likely Cotton Bowl candidate

DALLAS (AP) — Pittsburgh in the Cotton Bowl as the visiting team New Year's Day?

Events over the weekend and what happens in the polling place early this week could position the Panthers for the official invitation Saturday.

The scenario could go like this:

Unbeaten and No. 1-ranked Georgia would likely retain its edge in The Associated Press poll over No. 2-rated and unblemished Southern Methodist, which plays Arkansas Saturday in Texas Stadium. If SMU wins or ties Arkansas, the Mustangs will be the host team.

Georgia already has clinched a berth in the Sugar Bowl. As the No. 1-ranked team in the country, the Bulldogs probably would draw the highest ranked challenger possible.

A spot opened up over the weekend after Arizona State, previously unbeaten and untied, lost to Washington 17-13.

Nebraska, ranked No. 4 last week, would likely move into the third spot because of Arizona State's loss.

Nebraska will battle it out with Oklahoma for the Orange Bowl.

Next in the rankings is Penn State, which should slide into the No. 4 spot by virtue of its victory over Notre Dame.

Here comes the rub for the Cotton Bowl.

It's no secret that Penn State coach Joe Paterno is hankering for his first national title. The best way to get it is to play the team on top.

A possible Georgia-LSU matchup went out the window Saturday when Mississippi State upset the Tigers.

The Cotton Bowl also was looking hard at LSU.

So, where does the Cotton Bowl turn with Penn State thinking Sugar?

How about the defending national champion Panthers? They only have one loss, and could move from eighth place to sixth place in the rankings this week. Also, Pitt still has a game against Penn State and could make the Cotton Bowl look good with a victory over the Nittany Lions.

The Cotton Bowl gets down to a hard-core decision Tuesday.

That decision is expected to be to invite quarterback Dan Marino and the Panthers and hope the dice come up seven.

NBA roundup

Super Sonics close in on record

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Seattle SuperSonics, still going at top speed, left the winless Houston Rockets on the launching pad again.

The Sonics, 10-0 this season, held off a late rally to defeat the 0-8 Rockets 102-99 Sunday night. Seattle is now five victories away from equalling the best start ever by a National Basketball Association club, 15-0 by the 1948-49 Washington Capitals.

"We've played well, and if we keep going like this, we'll be real good," Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We haven't had many tests, like being behind 15 or 20 points. We need a couple more tests."

In other NBA games Sunday, Philadelphia tripped Washington 102-93, Boston edged Milwaukee 100-98, Los Angeles beat Cleveland 111-98 and Phoenix tripped Portland 102-94.

The Sonics, who have won all seven of their road games, built a 90-75 lead by hitting seven of their first eight shots in the fourth quarter. But Houston rallied, cutting the Seattle lead to 99-96 with nine straight points, capped by James Bailey's free throws with 1:10 to play.

Gus Williams' foul shot with 58 seconds left and two more free throws by David Thompson with 33 seconds remaining gave Seattle a 102-96 edge.

Rookie Terry Teagle tossed in a three-point shot with 21 seconds to go to trim the deficit to 102-99. The Rockets got one more chance to tie the game in the waning seconds, but Allen Leavell's three-point attempt missed.

"I thought we were more aggressive than we have been," said Houston Coach Del Harris, who saw his team lose by 33 points at Seattle in the season opener for both. "We were more serious about defense and rebounding. When you're shooting as bad as we are, the only way to keep in the game is by rebounding and defense."

Williams led Seattle with 20 points, while Greg Kelsner and James Donaldson each came off the bench to score 18. Jack Sikma added 17 points and 14 rebounds.

Teagle, making his first NBA start, led Houston with 22.

76ers 102, Bullets 93

Philadelphia won its eighth game in nine outings as Julius Erving scored 25 points and Moses Malone added 20 points and 19 rebounds against Washington.

The 76ers blew an early 13-point lead, but still had a 43-41 advantage at halftime. Then with Erving and Malone scoring nine points apiece, Philadelphia outscored the Bullets 19-10 at the start of the second half and Washington never got closer than seven points in the fourth quarter.

Greg Ballard led the Bullets with 22 points.

Celtics 100, Bucks 93

Larry Bird had 20 points and 14 rebounds and Boston held Milwaukee scoreless for 5:41 down the stretch.

The Bucks overcame a 16-point deficit lead in the second quarter to take a 94-90 edge with 7:18 to play. But Milwaukee's scoring drought enabled Boston to come back. Free throws by Cedric Maxwell and Robert Parish broke a 98-98 tie in the final seconds.

Sidney Moncrief had 22 points to lead the Bucks.

Suns 102, Blazers 94

Alvan Adams scored 22 points and Maurice Lucas added 21 as Phoenix beat Portland for its fourth victory in a row.

The Suns, 8-2, never trailed, although the Trail Blazers got within two points on several occasions in the third quarter after Phoenix led by as many as 13 in the first half. A 10-0 spurt by the Suns to start the fourth quarter kept them in control.

Darnell Valentine and Calvin Natt scored 20 points apiece for Portland.

Lakers 111, Cavaliers 96

Jamaal Wilkes scored 30 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 25 more to lead Los Angeles over Cleveland.

NFL strike talks hit bottom

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no sign that talks aimed at ending the 56-day National Football League players strike will resume soon, as management sticks to its position that it has made a "bottom-line" offer.

In fact, there were several indications Sunday that negotiations would not take place again without movement on the players' side.

"I don't think they will meet soon, not unless the ballplayers move further from the position they've already taken," said Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, after separate talks over the weekend with management negotiator Jack Donlan and union chief Ed Garvey.

MacMurray said he expected both sides "are going to have to let the pressures build up" before there is movement.

Meanwhile, Donlan said Sunday he has told mediator Sam Kagel that he saw no reason to have another meeting with Garvey. Kagel recessed the latest round of bargaining Nov. 6 after little progress was made.

At that time, Donlan made what he called a "bottom-line offer," a package the owners valued at $1.313 billion over four years, starting in 1983, and $60 million in bonus money in 1982. The union has asked for $1.1 billion over three years, starting in 1982.

Donlan conferred Sunday with Chuck Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots and chairman of the owners' executive committee.

Sullivan, asked if he felt the Republicans facing bigger problems in next two years

BY EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans didn't particularly enjoy this year's House elections with their loss of 26 seats, but the pattern of votes suggests the GOP faces even bigger problems in the next two years.

Many of the Republican incumbents won by only small margins over Democratic challengers. Such weak showings often portend major trouble for incumbents in the next election down the pike.

Incumbents whose victory margins are small can expect stronger, better-financed challengers in the next election as well the unwelcome attention of political action groups who look for races where they can help knock off unfriendly incumbents.

And one can be certain that potential Democratic candidates around the country are looking carefully at the returns to spot potentially weak Republican incumbents.

In the 1982 voting, as usual, incumbents of both parties did well, although more lost on Nov. 2 than in recent years. A total of 391 incumbents sought re-election to the House. Thirty-nine — or 10 percent — lost. Ten lost in primaries and 29 in the general election.

That's slightly above the 9.3 percent who lost in 1980. And it's the poorest showing since the 1974 Watergate debacle, when only 87.7 percent of the incumbents won.

For the GOP, the news was truly dismal, for 26 of the losers were Republican incumbents and only 3 were Democratic officeholders.

But the election returns — even for the GOP winners — conveyed dark omens for Ronald Reagan's party.

Of those GOP incumbents who did win, nearly two out of five won with less than 60 percent of the vote.

Unofficial election returns broke down this way: 32 GOP incumbents won with less than 55 percent of the vote, while 22 won with between 55 percent and 60 percent. The rest, 88, won with more than 60 percent.

In percentage terms, 22.2 percent of the Republican incumbents just scraped through; 15.3 percent had larger, but not comfortable margins; and 61.1 percent won substantial victories.

Incumbents who win with less than 55 percent of the vote are often targeted for major opposition in the next election. In addition, when the planning for 1984 House races begins, each party will take a second look as well at any opposing incumbent who won with less than 60 percent of the vote.

The vote totals did not reveal a broad anti-incumbent surge. The Democrats had both a far more incumbent winners than the Republicans and a far smaller percentage of incumbents with narrow victory margins.

Among Democratic incumbents, only 15 — 7.1 percent — won with less than 55 percent of the vote: Eighteen — 8.6 percent — won with between 55 percent and 60 percent of the vote; and 177, or 84.3 percent, won with more than 60 percent of the ballots.

Republicans carried some heavy burdens in this year's elections without a boost from a presidential candidate at the head of the ticket.

The nation's economy is stumbling along, and some blame Ronald Reagan and his GOP allies in Congress. Those GOP freshman who won in 1980 partly on the basis of presidential coattails lacked such help this year, and a substantial number lost.

Taken together, all these numbers do not necessarily mean the Democrats will make big gains in 1984.

After all, there will be a presidential contest on the ballot two years hence, perhaps with Reagan seeking re-election. The dynamics of such elections are far different from the off-year voting.

adult female condor to mate with Topa-Topa, a male at the Los Angeles Zoo. A previous potential mate captured for that purpose turned out to be a male.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The "Dixie Playboys," a youth gang that gained notoriety during an eight-month crime spree in south Florida last winter, has been broken up by long prison terms for its leaders.

Police say the rash of robberies attributed to the gang members, known for their sophisticated weapons and Playboy bunny symbols on their fashionable clothes, has dwindled, apparently because the remaining members are not as skilled as their jailed leaders.

One gang leader, 14-year-old Anthony Quinn "Swamp Willie" Davis, who twice broke out of jail, drew three life sentences last March. Others got sentences of 30 and 50 years.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Seventeen children aged 5 months to 7 years were killed in an outbreak of measles on a small island 80 miles west of here, the Philippine News Agency said today.

The outbreak took place between September and the first week of November on Calcutot island off the coast of Lucena province, the agency said. An estimated 500 people live on the island, it added.

News briefs

SEATTLE (AP) — New Boeing 737s will have an improved anti-icing system that works before takeoff as well as in flight, and the company says existing models can also be fitted with the system.

Boeing Co spokesman Tom Cole said Sunday the change was being studied before the January crash of an Air Florida 737 in Washington, D.C. that killed 78 people. However, he said the accident, in which the plane took off with ice on its wings, "lent some push" to introducing the new system.

Cole said planes made in January 1982 will be the first to have the new system, which he said ideally should not be used on the ground. Both Boeing and the Federal Aviation Administration insist that planes have clean wings on takeoff, he said.

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Researchers hoping to learn more about California condors, an endangered species, have outfitted one of two captured birds with solar-powered radio transmitters.

The birds were caught Saturday and released about two hours later after blood samples were taken, said Inez Connor of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, who added that the transmitters were working perfectly.

The condor populations has dwindled to about 30 birds. Biologists plan to capture an adult female condor to mate with Topa-Topa, a male at the Los Angeles Zoo. A previous potential mate captured for that purpose turned out to be a male.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The "Dixie Playboys," a youth gang that gained notoriety during an eight-month crime spree in south Florida last winter, has been broken up by long prison terms for its leaders.

Police say the rash of robberies attributed to the gang members, known for their sophisticated weapons and Playboy bunny symbols on their fashionable clothes, has dwindled, apparently because the remaining members are not as skilled as their jailed leaders.

One gang leader, 14-year-old Anthony Quinn "Swamp Willie" Davis, who twice broke out of jail, drew three life sentences last March. Others got sentences of 30 and 50 years.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Seventeen children aged 5 months to 7 years were killed in an outbreak of measles on a small island 80 miles west of here, the Philippine News Agency said today.

The outbreak took place between September and the first week of November on Calcutot island off the coast of Lucena province, the agency said. An estimated 500 people live on the island, it added.

Reunited at last

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa is reunited with members of his family at his apartment in Gdansk, Poland Sunday night following 11 months in detention. Lech Walesa returns to home after 11 months of detention

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Free after 11 months in detention, Solidarity chief Lech Walesa says his outlawed union must reach agreement with martial law authorities, "but not on our knees."

Walesa returned to a joyful homecoming Sunday after mysteriously disappearing for more than a day following his release. He did not utter the name of Solidarity in a brief speech to the cheering mob outside his Gdansk apartment.

"I will be faithful and there is no force that can divide us. I want everything to go the way we established it," Walesa said. "I will not abandon the road and the ideals which we set forth in August."

He referred to August 1980, when Solidarity was founded as the Soviet bloc's first independent labor federation during violent strikes at the huge Lenin Shipyards where Walesa was an electrician in the Baltic port city.

"In my future conduct, I will be courageous but also prudent and there is no discussion on it. We must win!" Walesa declared.

Parliament banned Solidarity on Oct. 8. The union had been suspended and thousands of activists interned when martial law was decreed Dec. 13 to crush 16 months of Solidarity-inspired strikes and challenges to communist authority.

Hundreds of detainees have been released but many remain in custody.

"I held several days of talks since being released and so my voice is hoarse," Walesa said through a loudspeaker from a window in his apartment.

Walesa did not say whether those talks were the reason for his delay in coming home to the drab first-floor flat where his wife, seven children and hundreds of people had maintained a long, anxious vigil.

The Communist government announced Saturday that it had freed Walesa. Authorities had announced his impending release Thursday, saying he no longer posed a political threat and had promised to come to terms with the government.

When Walesa failed to come home immediately, speculation arose that he had met with his advisers, government officials or Roman Catholic Church leaders.

Four government security agents helped Walesa forge a path through the roaring crowd when the 39-year-old union chief arrived in a four-car caravan just before 10:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. EST). Walesa did not stop to shake hands.

His admirers had festooned the neighborhood with Polish flags, red Solidarity banners, flowers and pictures of Walesa. Their incessant chants of "There is no freedom without Solidarity!" and "Long live Walesa!" drew him to the window five minutes later.

A look at effect of income tax changes

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans are about to reap the benefits and pay the penalties of the 1981 and 1982 tax bills passed by Congress.

Many of the major provisions of last year's tax cut did not take effect until this year. You will see the first dollars-and-cents tax impact of things like All Savers Certificates, Individual Retirement Accounts and the reduction in the marriage penalty when you file the return due April 15, 1983.

Congressional action this year was much more limited, but the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 also could affect the amount of money you owe or the size of the refund you will get.

The most sweeping change is the four-stage reduction in rates that began in October 1981. The impact on last year's tax bills was relatively small — a 5 percent cut was implemented on Oct. 1; spread over the entire year, it meant a reduction of only 1.25 percent.

The 1982 cut, however, is a full 10 percent and so is the 1983 reduction. (The 1984 cut will be 5 percent.)

Here's an example of what it means:

Assume you're married with a taxable income of $30,000 and are filing a joint return. Your federal income tax bill for 1981 was $6,160. Your marginal tax rate — the maximum rate you paid — was 37 percent.

Your 1982 tax bill will be $5,607 — a cut of $553. Your marginal tax rate is 33 percent.

Your 1983 tax bill at the same income level will be only $5,064 — a cut of $543. Your marginal rate will be reduced to 30 percent.

The rate changes mean that income you earn next year will be worth more money in your pocket than income you earn this year. And, on the opposite side of the coin, this year's deductions will be worth more than next year's.

Suppose you earn an extra $500 this year. You get a Christmas bonus or make an extra sale. The Internal Revenue Service will take 33 percent or $165. If you earn that extra $500 next year, the IRS will take only 30 percent or $150.

Conversely, suppose you reduce your taxable income by $500 this year — not by earning less, but by cutting the amount that is subject to federal income tax through a deduction, exclusion or exemption. You'll cut your tax bill by $165. Next year, the same reduction in income would be worth only $150.

"The year-end planning strategy is to try to defer your income until 1983 ... and to accelerate deductions into '82," said Sidney Kess, a partner with the accounting firm of Main Hurdman and the company's director of tax planning and policy.

Kess said taxpayers should start looking for savings in the category of exclusions and adjustments to income — money that doesn't have to be counted as income for tax purposes. You don't have to itemize your deductions to take advantage of these exclusions.

The interest earned on an All Savers Certificate, for example, is excluded from your income up to a maximum of $1,000 for a single person and $2,000 for a married couple filing jointly. The certificates went on sale Oct. 1, 1981; they will be available until Dec. 31, 1982. If you haven't earned the maximum, you might want to buy one of the certificates; interest earned in 1982 can be excluded from 1982 income.

Contributions to an Individual Retirement Account or a Keogh plan also can be subtracted from your income; there is no tax due on the contributions or on the interest they earn until you begin withdrawals. Starting this year, any wage earner can set aside up to $2,000 in an IRA; the limit on contributions to a Keogh plan — a similar tax-sheltered pension for the self-employed — was raised to $15,000. You have until April 15, 1983 to open an IRA for 1982; you can deduct contributions from your 1982 income even if you don't open the account until 1983. The rules for a Keogh account are different — you can contribute to an existing plan until April 15 and still take the exclusion on your 1982 return, but you must open the account itself by Jan. 1.

Two-income couples will get a break this year. They can adjust their income to subtract 5 percent of the lesser of the two incomes or $1,500 — whichever is less. (The maximum deduction rises to $3,000 in 1983.) A married couple with incomes of $15,000 and $10,000, for example, can deduct $500 — 5 percent of the smaller of the two incomes.

While many people will pay less tax than they expected, the unemployed may pay more, Kess said.

That's because the 1982 tax act changed the way you calculate the amount of unemployment compensation benefits which are taxable.

Under the old law, the amount of unemployment compensation included as part of a taxpayer's gross income was the lesser of two figures: The amount of the compensation itself or half of the sum over $20,000 for a single person or $25,000 for a married person filing jointly.

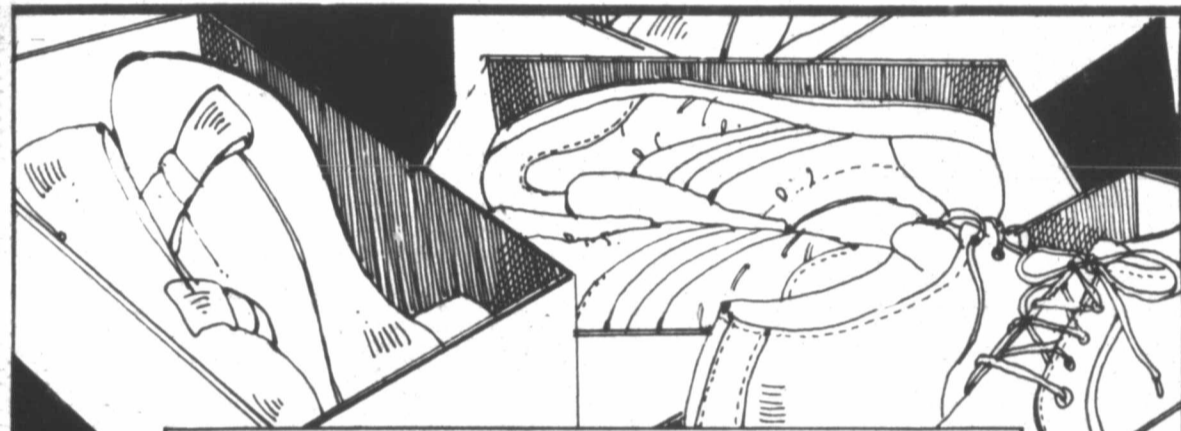

Under the new law, which is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982, the threshold goes down to $12,000 for a single person or $18,000 for a married person filing jointly.

Here's an example of what the change means:

You're married, filing a joint return. You earned $17,000 from January through August, then you lost your job. During the rest of 1982, you received $4,000 in unemployment compensation benefits.

Under the old law, none of your unemployment compensation benefits would have counted in your gross income for tax purposes since benefits and income combined did not exceed $25,000.

Under the new law, you will have to include $1,500 of the benefits — half of the excess income over $18,000 — in your gross income. Depending on your taxable income — after deductions — that can mean several hundred dollars added to your tax bill.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.
