

Morris remains in mental hospital, DA won't pursue fire charge

By JEFF LANGLEY

A 74-year-old man suspected of igniting the fatal blaze which killed three Pampa nursing home patients Oct. 10 remains confined to a state mental hospital, and the local prosecutor has decided not to pursue arson charges against the suspect as long as he is committed to the facility, District Attorney Guy Hardin said.

The case against Robert Morris will not be presented at today's session of the 223rd District Court grand jury, because the suspect remains committed to the facility, Hardin said.

The district attorney previously said Morris was "certified for release" by the administration of the Vernon Center, and Hardin said he would present evidence against the suspect at today's grand jury session.

Hardin earlier said he had "pulled the file" on Morris in preparation to present the case to the grand jury.

"This is something we can't turn our heads on," Hardin said of his previous plans to seek an indictment on a charge of arson against Morris.

But after checking with the mental hospital's administration and with state social workers, the district attorney said information that Morris was going to be released from the facility was only a rumor. And he said as long as the suspect is committed, he will not pursue the case against him.

"They said they plan to keep him there until the end of the 90 days. They said at the end of that time, they will probably seek an indefinite commitment," Hardin said.

"That's the end of it as far as I'm concerned," the D.A. said.

Hardin said to indict Morris while he is confined for mental illness could jeopardize his case due to considerations of "speedy trial" laws.

The district attorney said he is generally forced to prosecute a case within 120 days from the day a felony indictment is returned. He added that Morris could not be taken to trial while he is confined to the state mental hospital.

An arson complaint issued by Hardin against former resident Morris just days after the fatal fire at the Pampa Nursing Center was later dismissed by the prosecutor, Hardin said he had to dismiss the criminal charge in order to commit Morris to the mental hospital.

But after dismissing the complaint Hardin said Morris will be "charged and tried, if he regains his competency."

The fire at the nursing home killed three residents and injured eight others.

Little Gene still shows some slight brain waves

AMARILLO — Donna McCain was waiting anxiously this morning in an intensive care ward at Northwest Texas Hospital for another test on her injured three-year-old son, Gene.

Monday, Mrs. McCain said, doctors conducted an electro-encephalogram test on the toddler who fell beneath the wheels of a moving car in Pampa Nov. 5; they found weak but evident brain waves.

"So if we pull the life-support, it will kill him," McCain, of 721 N. Naida St. in Pampa, said this morning from the ward. She said she has stayed at the hospital since the accident almost two weeks ago, sleeping in a family room at the hospital and "hoping and praying" for her only child's recovery.

Doctors performed surgery on little Gene the night of the accident and again on Sunday, McCain said, inserting a drainage tube to channel off fluid from broken blood vessels.

Gene has always been a very active child, she said. "So it's kind of hard to see him like this."

He has been in a coma since the accident, she said. The boy himself opened the passenger door of his babysitter's car the afternoon of the accident, McCain said. "In fact, he was almost hyperactive."

The babysitter, Dorienda Stevens of Pampa, carried full auto insurance on her car, but that "won't begin to touch" the hospital bill: "it's costing $1,300 a day just to keep Gene in intensive care."

McCain said that if Gene survives she will have to stop working and spend her full time with him, teaching him to walk and talk again. "You know, he's just like a newborn baby again." Her employer at Pete's Bar in Pampa has been "terrific," she said. She and the boy's father are separated.

McCain said the past 11 days have been an ordeal. "I'm wore out, but I'm not leaving the hospital because I can't leave my son."

Pampa's 'Death Crossing' has killed before, changes are due

By JEFF LANGLEY

The three people killed in a car-bus crash Sunday were not the first traffic fatalities at the intersection of U.S. 60 and Loop 171, and the latest traffic deaths may bring a flashing signal light to the intersection, according to engineers with the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

And each accident involving deaths or serious injuries at the intersection was caused by a driver who failed to stop at the stop signs on both the north and southbound lanes of Loop 171, according to Department of Public Safety records.

"Why can't they put a signal in here?" asked one witness as he viewed the death and destruction of Sunday's collision of a station wagon and Continental Trailways bus.

Sunday's wreck occurred about 4:20 p.m. when a southbound car ran the stop sign and struck a westbound Trailways bus, according to DPS trooper Johnny Carter.

Carter said the car never slowed or attempted to stop, but slammed full-speed into the side of the bus.

Both occupants of the car, Marvin Wilford Wainwright, 59, and Debra Sue Miller, 32, both of Canadian, and one passenger in the bus, Ignacia Cruz, 59, of the Bronx, N.Y., died instantly from injuries suffered in the wreck.

Nine others on the bus, including the driver, were injured.

Two Wheeler women were killed, and a Pampa man was critically injured in a wreck at the same intersection November 8, 1980.

Killed in that accident were Ora Wood Stiles, 72, and Elizabeth Mackey Stiles, 77, both of Wheeler. The driver of the second vehicle, Jay Kipling Craft, 19, was critically injured in the crash. Carter said a failure to stop at the sign sign was also to blame for those deaths.

And a car running the stop on the loop resulted in a wreck Aug. 23, 1981, which seriously injured Ronnie Simonds, of Amarillo, and Raymond Steele of Mid West City, Okla.

All three wrecks at the intersection happened between 4:20 and 6:20 p.m., according to Carter, but the time and angle of the sun were not factors in the accidents, the trooper said.

"It's a clearly marked intersection. And at that time of day, the north and southbound drivers should have no trouble seeing the stop sign," Carter said.

The stop signs on the loop are "oversized," according to highway department engineers. Amarillo District Maintenance Engineer Jim Moss said stop signs in the state can vary from 24 inches to 30, 36 or 48 inches wide.

Moss said the sign is a large 36-inch stop sign. In addition, a traffic sign warns of the stop and intersection ahead, he said.

But Sunday's deaths have resulted in plans to increase visibility of the warnings, Moss added.

The highway department spokesman said the state will now install a huge, 48-inch (four feet wide) stop sign on both directions of the loop. An additional traffic sign will also be placed in front of the existing traffic sign.

"In front of the sign that says, 'Stop Ahead,' we will put in a sign that also warns, 'Intersection Ahead,'" Moss said Monday afternoon.

Moss and Amarillo engineer Tom Armstrong said previous traffic studies at the intersection did not "warrant" a stop-and-go, or red and green, signal light at the intersection. They said guidelines in the state manual on traffic signals require a specific amount of traffic before installation of stop-and-go lights.

But a warning light, a flashing yellow and flashing red signal, does not require such strict traffic counts.

The Amarillo highway department engineers said they will soon visit Pampa to again take a traffic survey and determine if the intersection warrants a flashing caution light.

Moss said it is possible a light there can do more harm than good toward preventing accidents. He explained that the only way to "span" the intersection with a signal is to install a light pole into a concrete center median. The state engineer said a pole on the median presents another obstruction for drivers to hit, and he said it can cause more accidents than a flashing light can prevent.

"Nobody hates them (wrecks) worse than we do," Moss said.

The body of Ignacia Cruz has been returned to the Bronx, N.Y. and will be cremated under the direction of Botti Funeral Directors.

A spokesman for the funeral home said Cruz will be cremated at 1:45 p.m. Wednesday in the Woodlawn Crematory in the Bronx, with religious rites by the Rev. David Lothoph.

The New York funeral directors did not have a complete list of survivors today, and said the family has not requested a "death notice."

The spokesman said the Pampa accident victim is survived by her husband, Roberto Cruz, of the Bronx, and several children. The woman was reportedly enroute to visit a daughter in Riverside, Calif. when she was killed in the accident.

Graveside services for Miller will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Waynoka Municipal Cemetery, with the Rev. Chester Brown, pastor of the Congregational Church of Waynoka, Okla. officiating.

Arrangements are by Marshal Funeral Directors of Waynoka.

She was born in Oklahoma City and lived in Canadian for the past few years.

Survivors include one son, Aaron Miller; her mother, Almeda Lind; two brothers, Tommy Miller and Thad Miller Jr., all listed as being from "Colorado," and three sisters, Mrs. Jerene Cantrell of Colorado, Mrs. Pamela Cobb of Chicago, Ill., and Linda Miller of San Francisco, Calif.

Graveside services for Wainwright will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Canadian Cemetery, with the Rev. Albert Christian officiating.

Arrangements are by Stickley-Hill Funeral Directors in Canadian.

A list of Wainwright's survivors was not available at press time.

His father's arms

The parents of Brent Thomas, 10, were badly frightened early Monday evening when they received a report that their child was involved in an accident while riding his bike. "The first thing I thought of was the little McCain boy," the child's mother, June Thomas, right, said about a previous accident here which critically injured a three-year-old Pampa tot. The Thomas boy is carried from an ambulance by his father, Pampa fireman W.D. Thomas, after it was discovered the boy suffered only a mild concussion. His mother said the child was knocked unconscious after he swerved to avoid a car and struck a pickup parked in front of The Pampa News.

Columbia is back down safely after completing fifth mission

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia broke through desert cloudcover at dawn today and returned to Earth for the fifth time in just 19 months. The mission milestone: establishing the American ship as a commercial cargo carrier.

Four astronauts swooped through high clouds and calm winds, sun sparkling off their craft, to touch down on the Runway 22, a 15,000-foot concrete skirt that sits on California's Mojave Desert.

It was right on the centerline, and commander Vance Brand asked Mission Control, "Are we down now, are we on the ground?" The reply, from ground communicator Roy Bridges: "Absolutely. It was beautiful."

It was the ship's fifth perfect landing after five perfect launches.

The crew arrived home elated with the landing, elated with two successful satellite deployments, but disappointed by a canceled space walk.

Brand and pilot Robert Overmyer got the "go for deorbit burn" right on time and at 5:33 a.m. Pacific time they triggered the rockets high above the Indian Ocean. "On time, good burn," said Brand.

Landing was at 6:33 a.m., just seven minutes after sunrise. Autoland computers guided the craft to about 40,000 feet and then, well above cloudcover that quit at 15,000, Brand took over.

For re-entry, mission specialist Joseph Allen rode in the cockpit, while William Lenoir strapped himself into a seat on a lower deck.

"We Deliver," became the NASA motto, in orbit and on Earth. "Fast and Courteous Service," said a sign waved by the crew. Just after the ship came to a halt, and safing workers surrounded the craft, Bridges said: "You certainly lived up to the motto. Welcome home."

Columbia kicked up dust to end its postcard delivery home.

The braking rockets slowed the shuttle's 17,400-mile-an-hour orbital speed and started it from 184 miles high on a long, blazing descent back to Earth. Columbia plunged into the thickening atmosphere on a course that was to take it over the Pacific north of Hawaii and across the California coast.

Mission Control woke the astronauts before midnight, California time, to the music, "Take Me Home, Country Roads." Allen asked, "Is that Runway 22 in West Virginia?"

Before descent began, Bridges told Brand that conditions were "a little less than we'd like," with a high cloud deck and moderate winds. "Doesn't sound ideal, but doesn't sound too bad," Brand said. "We'll be alert to pull the nose up a little bit and bring boards in if required" to slow Columbia down. It wasn't necessary.

Near the desert air base, an estimated crowd of 50,000 braved chilly temperatures to view the landing.

With more than 10 million miles on Columbia's odometer, the safe return crowned five flights over 19 months for the world's first reusable spacecraft and its owner, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Columbia is now scheduled for an overhaul and the next three flights will be flown by Challenger, now completing final modifications.

Brand, Overmyer, Allen and Lenoir returned in triumph despite the cancellation of Monday's space walk, derailed by technical faults in NASA's new $2-million space suits.

Moustaches are ticklish problem at Lefors High

By JEAN TIERNEY

LEFORS — The Don Ameche moustache is making a comeback in Lefors High School.

One of the senior boys has asked permission to wear a modernized version of the trim moustache that became popular on the silver screen four decades ago. But the district's student handbook requires boys to be clean-shaven. Superintendent Jerrel Julian said today.

Thursday the district trustees appointed a committee of six to study the district's present dress code, written about seven years ago, and make recommendations for a new one incorporating current fashions when the board meets again on Dec. 9.

Moustaches may be the most, perhaps the only, controversial item in the code, Julian predicted: "Our kids are a whole lot cleaner now than they were 10 years ago, back in the late 60s."

In the late 1960 and 1970s, mini-skirts, long hair and the "hippie" look ventured into the school, and Julian suspects that those trends in fashion "kind of brought about the dress code."

The present code limits boys to hair styles short enough to show the shirt collar, ear lobes and eyes, and rules out heavy sideburns, he said. It permits girls to wear pants or jeans but not shorts except for sports, and never see-through blouses or tank tops.

With the present fashion in styled cuts for men, "we really haven't any problems with hair," Julian said.

And as for moustaches, only a few of the 13 senior boys are able to grow full moustaches yet, he added. "They like to wear a little Don Ameche moustache."

The committee held its first meeting Monday night and gathered student handbooks from other school districts in the Panhandle area, including one from the Pampa Independent School District, for comparison, Julian said. The several dress codes are very similar, he added.

On the committee are two students and two parents. "This way, the students are having input, and also the parents and school board," he said. The district has about 250 students, 62 of them in high school.

Draft registration law thrown out by federal judge in L.A.

By DEBORAH BELGUM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge, citing a legal technicality, tossed out regulations that require millions of young men to register for the draft and also said the government cannot selectively prosecute registration resisters.

In knocking out the government's case against 21-year-old David Wayne, U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter Jr. ruled Monday that the Selective Service System should have waited 30 days for public comment before enforcing a draft registration proclamation issued by President Carter in 1980.

"The court cannot close its eyes to the fact that the proclamation became effective a mere 21 days after it was published (in the Federal Register)," Hatter said in his ruling.

Hatter also ruled that the government had violated Wayne's free speech rights under the U.S. Constitution by prosecuting only vocal opponents of the draft. He also cited the government's refusal to turn over evidence, and its refusal under the doctrine of executive privilege to allow White House counselor Edwin Meese III to testify.

It was unclear how Hatter's ruling would affect the registration process or the four men convicted of resisting registration. The government says 8.9 million men have complied with the act, while 585,000 men have failed to sign up.

U.S. Attorney Stephen Trott said the judge's order would be appealed immediately to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

If the appeals court reverses Hatter's decision, the indictment against Wayne will be reinstated and proceedings will resume, Trott said. He had no further comment.

Mark Rosenbaum, one of Wayne's attorneys, said he was "pleasantly stunned" by the ruling, and believes if it is upheld on appeal, the nation's entire draft registration system may be invalid.

"It means the whole draft is out," he said.

Rosenbaum said that if Hatter's decision is upheld, the convictions of four other draft resisters could be overturned. Wayne, a former philosophy student at Yale University, said, "I am very happy right now because the judge has dismissed the case. I think this is a big victory for us and a big setback for the Selective Service system."

In his decision, Hatter said he recognized "the widespread effect that a decision granting defendant's motion to dismiss due to the illegal promulgation of the proclamation will have on this nation's Selective Service registration program."

But he said the government failed to prove Wayne had not been the subject of selective discrimination in the prosecution of draft registration resisters.

"Persons prosecuted for failing to register have consisted solely, not largely, of vocal non-registrants," Hatter noted.

"The inference is manifest that the defendant has been singled out for prosecution because he exercised his First Amendment right to free speech..." the judge wrote.

Before Hatter's decision was released, the government announced it has shifted tactics in its crackdown on men who haven't registered. The government said Monday it would scrutinize Social Security rolls and tax records in an effort to catch more non-registrants.

Hatter ruled that Carter's presidential proclamation on July 18, 1980, ordering all young men to register for the draft within 30 days of their 18th birthday was invalid because the initial registration period began nine days too soon.

The Selective Service Act passed by Congress says the public has to be given 30 days notice before any presidential proclamation based on the act can take effect, Hatter said.

He said Carter did not waive the 30-day requirement in his proclamation, and that government arguments that the error was made in "good faith" and should be ignored were "meritless."

The former president, who arrived in Los Angeles on Monday night to tape a television program today, could not be reached for comment. A spokesman said Carter had gone to bed and declined to wake him.

In Washington, Thomas K. Turnage, director of the Selective Service System, could not be reached for comment because he has an unlisted telephone number. Kim Hoggard, a spokesman at the White House, said there would be no immediate comment on the ruling.

In order to prove the theory that Wayne was singled out for prosecution because he spoke out against the draft, the defense had sought White House and Selective Service documents and wanted Meese to testify.

Wayne was indicted July 22 on charges of failing to register for the draft, two years after writing Carter and the Selective Service that he would not register.

Wayne's attorneys had claimed his constitutional right of freedom of speech was violated by the government's selective prosecution.

Government attorneys on Nov. 5 refused to obey Hatter's order that Meese testify, even if it meant charges against Wayne would be dismissed.

Wayne, a tall, bearded man who wears his long hair neatly tied back in a ponytail, said he plans to enroll at the University of California-Berkeley this winter and continue to be active against draft registration.

Bartering could solve some agricultural surplus problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barter agreements, which are based on the trading of commodities without an exchange of money, could be an important way to dispose of a growing stockpile of U.S. grain and dairy products, says a new Agriculture Department report.

"As much as 25-30 percent of the overall value of world trade involves barter, based on recent estimates," the report said. "Although comparable figures aren't available for agricultural trade, barter is very popular with many nations."

The report was included Monday in a new issue of Farmline, published by USDA's Economic Research Service. Developing countries plus the Soviet Union, China and Eastern Europe appear to hold the greatest potential for future expansion of U.S. farm exports, it said.

"They are also the most frequent users of barter-type trade arrangements that avoid or reduce the use of convertible hard currencies — those currencies that are used in international trade, such as the U.S. dollar."

The USDA's barter program was suspended in 1973. It had began in 1950 as a means of disposing of some of the government-owned surpluses held by the Commodity Credit Corp. Also, part of the objective was to acquire strategic materials in exchange for the commodities.

Although the official program was canceled, an exception occurred recently when the United States agreed to trade dairy products to Jamaica in return for bauxite used to produce aluminum.

If the United States decided to resume full-scale trading of agricultural commodities for strategic materials, a number of countries would qualify as potential partners, the report said.

Those include Brazil, Thailand, Peru, the Philippines, Morocco, Turkey, India, Nigeria, China and the Soviet Union.

"These nations could offer a variety of strategic minerals for the National Defense Stockpile Inventory," the report said.

Potential minerals include columbium concentrates, bauxite, copper, cobalt, lead, manganese, rubber, zinc, platinum, tantalum and antimony.

The minerals are used in high-grade steel, aluminum, bronze and brass alloys, and other materials necessary for jet engines, cartridges, castings, electrical wiring, magnets, fuses, oil drilling bits, fireproofing systems and many other critical products.

Sweetheart omitted

The first runner-up for band queen was Senior Wendy Orina, 17, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Adolf Orina.

Just when you thought daytime TV was safe...

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's from a more tranquil era, when a joint was the corner malt shop, kids saved their passions for the homecoming game, and a video game meant "The Price Is Right."

But "Leave It to Beaver," the popular situation comedy which left network television in 1963 after a six-year run, has become a cult show of the 1980s.

It's seen in 35 of the 50 largest U.S. cities, and Ted Turner's superstation WTBS in Atlanta beams it to virtually every cable system in the country. A new generation has discovered Beaver Cleaver, his older brother, Wally, their

There are more than 100 fan clubs, called "The Loyal Order of the Beaver." Mathers gets $4,000 for a lecture, and the resurgence of the show has given new life to his acting career.

But neither Mathers, now 34, nor any original cast member is receiving any money from the current reruns — their residuals ran out years ago.

All 234 syndicated episodes were in black and white, but a new updated, grown-up version of the Beaver, Wally, Eddie, and the others is due to go into production Dec. 6 at Universal Studios.

Set for broadcast next spring, the two-hour CBS movie, called "Still the Beaver," will reunite the entire "Beaver" family except for Hugh Beaumont, who played Ward Cleaver. Beaumont died May 13 of a heart attack at the age of 72. Barbara Billingsley, as mother June Cleaver, will be back to intone, this time at graveside, "Ward, I'm worried about the Beaver."

Mathers has successfully revived his acting career after working in banking and real estate. He has recently appeared in dinner theaters with Tony Dow, 38, who played Wally.

Ken Osmond, who was Eddie (to the Cleavers, Eddie Haskell was "the little gentleman" but outside their hearing he was the "twerp"), is a Los Angeles motorcycle police officer. Osmond made news two years ago when a bulletproof vest saved his life in a shootout with a car-theft suspect.

Mathers doesn't discount nostalgia for the show's current popularity but believes the writing also helped. "It came from real life," he said. "Joe Connelly and Bob Mosher, who wrote most of the shows, used incidents that happened to their kids. Because it was real it becomes timeless."

Dale Eunson, who wrote a number of shows, said he based one of the scripts on a boyhood memory in Montana: "I wanted a sweater very much and finally got my parents to buy it for me. It was a heavy yellow sweater with a green collar, and when I went to school all the other kids laughed at it. So this became a show."

Bud Austin, executive producer of "Still the Beaver," thinks the old shows are so popular because "it was a less complicated time for parents and children. Solutions were simple and warm. Everybody identifies with Wally and Beaver and seems to know someone like Eddie."

Jeffrey C. Alexander, a psychology professor at UCLA, believes the resurgence of "Beaver" is deeper than mere nostalgia.

"The 1960s was the decade of political transcendence and revolt against the family and constraints of the family," he said. "The 1970s was the 'Me Decade' when people withdrew from political life for the pursuit of career or erotic satisfaction."

"What we're seeing now in the 1980s is a movement back to the family," Alexander said. "Leave It to Beaver" is the ideal portrayal of the family. You have the strong father, the warm mother, and idyllic relationships within the family."

Mathers, who is now married and the father of three children, will play the divorced father of two in "Still the Beaver." The Beaver's been living in the big city but he takes the children back to Mayfield after his wife leaves. Wally's now a lawyer, and Eddie, who runs a construction company, is still corrupt.

If the movie is successful, as Mathers feels it will be, it could mean another Beaver series.

Geewhiz, Beaver.

Open textbook hearings proposed by senator

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state senator says members of the public, as well as publishers, should be allowed to defend proposed public school textbooks against critics.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, proposed legislation Monday that would open up state textbook hearings to public comment from both sides.

“Currently, the rules of the Texas Education Agency allow any Texas citizen to protest the adoption of a textbook, but only allow the publisher to respond to the criticism,” said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. “This hardly seems like a fair system, and Texas school children may be suffering as a result.”

Texas is second only to California as the nation's biggest buyer of textbooks, so its shopping list can affect the textbook market nationwide.

People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship group founded by television producer Norman Lear, had fought this year's textbook selection process.

The group attempted to testify at the summer hearings before the state Textbook Committee, but was allowed only to submit written comments.

Michael Hudson, Texas coordinator for the group, said the organization had moved into Texas specifically to fight Norma and Mel Gabler, a retired Longview couple who have made a career out of lodging conservative protests against schoolbooks.

At Saturday's board meeting, Hudson said several legislators had expressed an interest in changing the selection process.

“The answer is not to criticize others for expressing themselves, but rather to allow everyone who is sincerely interested to present their ideas to the Textbook Committee,” Farabee said.

The Texas School Board met Saturday and approved some of the state's $60.5 million textbook shopping list for 1983-1984.

Harrelson's time to testify nears

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson could take the stand as early as this afternoon to defend himself against a charge he assassinated U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., his attorney says.

Attorney Tom Sharpe Jr. presented three alibi witnesses Monday to testify Harrelson was in Dallas, 272 miles north of here, the day Wood was assassinated on May 29, 1979, in San Antonio.

One witness said he saw Harrelson as early as one hour after the slaying.

“I'm going to do a soft shoe,” the smiling Harrelson said as he left the courtroom Monday, shuffling his feet in a dancing motion. He had promised last week before his defense began, “We're going to dazzle them with our footwork.”

Also are trial are Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann Starr, 41, charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28, charged with conspiracy to murder and to obstruct justice.

Mrs. Chagra's husband, Jimmy, 39, is charged with paying Harrelson to shoot Wood, and will be tried for murder later.

Harrelson, 44, was heartened Monday by a former bank teller, a doorman and a hairstylist who testified they saw Harrelson in Dallas the day of the shooting, anytime from one to three hours after Wood was gunned down. A fourth witness said he may or may not have sold Harrelson a security alarm system that same morning.

The prosecution, before it rested last week, called 83 witnesses and introduced 281 exhibits in a bid to show Harrelson stalked Wood and then shot him in the back for a $250,000 fee. A possible hole in its case, however, could be how Harrelson got back to Dallas after he allegedly killed the judge.

The only testimony the government presented about Harrelson's alleged getaway was from key witness Joseph Chagra, an El Paso attorney.

Chagra testified Harrelson told him he shot Wood in the back with “a clean shot,” then drove out of San Antonio before roadblocks were in place.

Sharpe today was expected to introduce airline records in an effort to show the jury that Harrelson did not take a commercial flight from San Antonio the day of the murder.

He said in his opening statement he would prove the Harrelsons were watching television at their Dallas apartment when they saw a news bulletin about Wood's assassination.

But the key defense witness, Rockwall nightclub owner and gambler Billy T. Dyer, made a surprise appearance for the government three weeks ago and said a sworn statement he had signed was fabricated.

Dyer said he had promised to testify he was with the Harrelsons because he was confident Harrelson was innocent of Wood's killing. He said he still felt Harrelson is not guilty.

Support Polish people

Polish workers are braving water cannon, tear gas, truncheons and the threat of prison or worse to protest the outlawing of Solidarity by Poland's martial law government.

The least that Western governments should do in these circumstances is to ensure that this latest repression in Poland provokes appropriate sanctions against Solidarity's jailers.

President Reagan, to his credit, recently reacted promptly by promising to revise Poland's most-favored-nation trade status — a move that could cripple Polish exports to the United States. Doubling tariffs on Polish goods, which is what the loss of most-favored-nation trade status would entail, will cost Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government one of its few remaining sources of hard foreign currency.

That loss, in turn, would drive yet another nail into the coffin of the Polish economy. It would also further damage the Polish government's already devastated credit standing, making it that much harder for those now dancing on Solidarity's grave to qualify for new loans from the West.

Unfortunately, Jaruzelski's latest betrayal of Polish government promises made to Solidarity two years ago hasn't yet provoked a peep from other members of the Western alliance. President Reagan out to be nearly as upset about that as he was about the formal abolition of Solidarity.

Economic and political sanctions might still be effective in discouraging neo-Stalinist policies in Eastern Europe, if not in the Soviet Union itself. But for those sanctions to have any hope of moderating communist rule within the Soviet empire, they must be actively supported by at least the major Western powers.

It won't do for the United States to punish Jaruzelski's bully boys while Western Europeans line up to advance Poland additional credits, or lend themselves to a conspiracy of silence on Solidarity's fate.

That will only solidify the judgments apparently prevailing in Moscow and Warsaw; that the West will never jeopardize its short-term interest — loans and trade — to promote a better life for the people of Eastern Europe. That is an admittedly cynical presumption, but one the Western Europeans are bringing on themselves.

Ironically, the West's failure to mount a vigorous defense of Solidarity may end up wrecking any chance that Poland may have had to repay its enormous debts. A decent compromise with Poland's workers, and the preservation of Solidarity in some form, was probably essential to Jaruzelski's hopes of reviving what is now a nearly moribund economy. The Polish government is proving that it can impose martial law and make it stick, but bayonets are no substitute for a willing labor force.

And unless Poland's workers begin producing at something approaching maximum efficiency, the Polish economy seems doomed to years of virtual stagnation. In that event, Jaruzelski and those in the West who did too little to oppose him will have only themselves to blame.

An end to stagnation

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The U.S. public has had an intensive course in economics over the past year. One hears discussions of interest rates and other economic factors at filling stations and barber shops.

Interest rates remain the priority concern. Small businessmen know that their survival will depend on the interest rate at the bank. A store owner will buy only 10 sweaters for the winter sales season, instead of 15, if interest rates are prohibitive. Curtailed sales in the small stores have an impact on manufacturers and affect employment.

The heart of the free enterprise system is a process whereby one invests today in order to get more money back tomorrow. Free enterprise cannot work in an environment of high interest rates. They produce stagnation at the levels of both manufacturing and retail sales.

In a stagnant economy, those who have money don't invest in new plant, equipment or retail facilities. Cautious investors simply put their money in the money market funds and get a better return than they could from investing in industrial and business facilities.

How to lower short-term interest rates is a subject of intense debate among professional economists. In recent weeks, the rates have declined, and that is a happy development. They need to decline more in order for the economy to revive. Certainly, there is no more important task for the Federal Reserve than to prevent economic stagnation. If the economy is stagnant over a long period, it will be very hard to find the way out. Confidence in recovery will disappear.

The confidence factor is intangible but real nonetheless. A half century ago, Franklin Roosevelt said "All we have to fear is fear itself." The American economy was strong in many respects at the end of the 1920s. Nevertheless, fear came to grip the nation, and it plunged it into a depression that lasted until World War II.

The United States is in a far stronger position today than it was in the 1920s. Today, we have behind us a generation of productive growth. Private groups, states, and the federal government have made enormous investments in education. The level of technological expertise is very high. True, we have special problems such as the high level of debt, national, state, local, corporate and personal. Nevertheless, the U.S. is better off than any other major country.

What we need is an overall leadership with the vision to harness and develop the colossal human and natural resources of the American republic. Unfortunately, we are still pulling in several different ways. This lack of vision, unity and leadership contributes to the stagnation. Many political elements have no goal save that of returning to the failed spending and welfare policies of a decade ago. To use a rather dreadful, corny phrase from the 1960s, we need to get our act together.

Business attitudes

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

There's a growing divergence of opinion within the business community. This divergence was evidenced in comments made at the recent meeting of the Business Council, which is made up of the heads of many of the country's largest companies.

Walter B. Wriston, chairman of both the Council and of Citicorp, one of the nation's largest banking institutions, asserted that too much attention is being paid to "the smokestack industries."

This comment is likely to infuriate the heads of companies that produce steel, automobiles, raw materials, and all types of machinery. These companies face the worst conditions in 40 years. Edmund W. Littlefield, chairman of Utah International, Inc., warned at the Business Council meeting that "all the markets we serve are soft at the same time."

Mr. Wriston thinks we need not worry because the service sector of the economy is "thriving." That's the questionable statement. Service industries in economically blighted areas aren't doing well at all. If their customers are out of work because plants have shut down, how can service industries do well? Indeed how can the nation as a whole do well if its basic industries are in steep decline? The basic industries are just that, the foundation on which other enterprises depend.

The service sector of the economy is important and somewhat more resistant to recession, at least in the initial stages. Many of the service industries aren't spectacular producers of wealth, however.

Fast food restaurants serve an important need in a fast-moving society. But their young workers need to graduate into more permanent, higher skilled jobs. These jobs which have the potential for long-term, substantial earnings, are to be found in manufacturing. And it is precisely this type of work that is being eliminated in the current recession.

The immediate need is for more attention to the "smokestack" industries and to lighter forms of manufacturing. If the condition of these industries can be improved, the entire economy will feel the improvement.

Mr. Wriston's own industry has contributed to the precarious state of the U.S. economy. The giant international banks have made loans to foreign countries in a highly irresponsible manner. Now, they face the possibility of defaults by foreign borrowers. How long will it be before these banks run to Washington, crying for bailouts?

The so-called "smokestack" industries have been the foundation of America's prosperity. If they continue to decline, the nation will only get poorer.

End economic slavery — starting in high school...

By PAUL HARVEY

Historically, anybody who did not pay his bills was put in debtor's prison. Debtor's prisons were phased out a hundred years ago.

Never — despite some ancient Oriental customs — have children been legally responsible for the debts of their parents.

Until now, American children are now obligated by law, and under potential penalty of imprisonment, for $11,000 in inherited debt.

America's elderly are demanding their "rights."

America's workers are demanding their "rights."

Even the freeloaders — even illegal immigrants — are demanding their "rights."

It's time high school age citizens do. Butch Oxendine, a student in Lake City, Fla., who is "too young to vote" resents a trillion dollar and growing national debt which he did not assume but which he must pay.

For 49 of the past 55 years — and consistently every year for the last 21 — politicians have been buying re-election with money borrowed from the next generation.

A baby born today is born into "economic slavery"; he inherits and will be required to pay this monstrous debt.

President Reagan proposes a constitutional amendment requiring government to live within its income.

Such an amendment hasn't a prayer without a concerted citizen campaign — starting in high school.

If students are to lead us out of economic slavery they must be prepared to lead.

That means no more student loans; no more unemployment benefits misused as summertime vacation pay, no more "free lunch."

Butch Oxendine believes school-agers are ready thus to lead by example.

It was student involvement which brought an end to the absurdity of old men drafting young men to fight no-win wars.

Again, it's they who have the most to lose.

Now, with a President's committee to help, perhaps a chorus of young voices supporting a balanced budget amendment can stop this continuing hemorrhage, can wean the parasites and can re-insure their own fiscal future.

Georgia holds onto top spot in AP poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Georgia and Southern Methodist remained 1-2 today in The Associated Press college football poll, while Arizona State dropped from third to eighth after suffering its first loss of the season, Penn State inched ahead of Nebraska into third place and Alabama fell out of the Top Twenty for the first time in six years.

Georgia, seeking its second national championship in three years, is No. 1 for the second week in a row following a 19-14 victory over Auburn. The Bulldogs received 47 of 59 first-place votes and 1,167 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. SMU pulled out an amazing 34-27 triumph over Texas Tech on a 91-yard run with four seconds left following a bobbled kickoff and a lateral pass. The Mustangs, the only unbeaten-untied major college team other than Georgia, received eight first-place votes and 1,110 points.

However, they lost ground to the Bulldogs. Last week, Georgia led SMU 33-19 in first-place votes and 1,150-1,126 in points, with 59 voters participating.

Penn State jumped from fifth to third with two first-place ballots and 1,007 points by defeating Notre Dame 24-14. The Nittany Lions took over third place from Arizona State, which lost to Washington 17-13.

The other two first-place votes went to Nebraska, which held onto fourth place by trouncing Iowa State 48-10. The Cornhuskers received 998 points.

Washington's victory over Arizona State lifted the Huskies from seventh place to fifth with 923 points. Pitt rebounded from its only setback with a 24-6 decision over Army and climbed from eighth to sixth with 860 points.

Florida State vaulted from ninth to seventh with 771 points by clobbering Louisville 49-14. Arizona State was next with 713 points, followed by Arkansas, up from 10th to ninth with 682 points after a 35-0 whipping of Texas A&M. Defending national champion Clemson, 11th a week ago, rounded out the Top Ten with 627 points after a 24-22 triumph over Maryland.

The Second Ten consists of UCLA, LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma, Southern California, West Virginia, Texas, Notre Dame, Maryland and Tulsa. LSU, sixth last week, lost to Mississippi State 27-24.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Clemson, UCLA, Notre Dame, Michigan, Oklahoma, Southern Cal, Alabama, Maryland, West Virginia and Texas.

Alabama dropped out in the wake of its second consecutive loss and third of the season, a 38-29 setback at the hands of Southern Mississippi. The only other time the Crimson Tide did not appear in the rankings during the past 12 years was one week in 1976.

That made room for Tulsa to crack the Top Twenty for the first time in 30 years since a 12th-place finish in 1952. The Golden Hurricane boosted its record to 9-1 by routing Indiana State 48-14.

Dry loses head job at Texas Christian University

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Texas Christian was looking for its 28th head football coach today while the 27th coach, F.A. Dry, prepared for his final game at the helm of the Horned Frogs.

Dry was fired Monday, effective Nov. 21, by Chancellor William Tucker with two years left on his contract at some $50,000 a season.

The Horned Frogs play Texas A&M in College Station on Saturday, looking for their fourth victory. TCU has lost seven games.

Athletic Director Frank Windegger estimated the Horned Frogs would have a new coach in about three weeks — with speculation running from Leon Fuller at Colorado State all the way to the small college ranks with Jim Wacker at Southwest Texas State.

TCU is 12-50-3 under Dry, who came to TCU from Tulsa. "I'm not bitter. I feel like I've got too much class to be bitter," Dry said. "But TCU didn't give us a chance this year. They (the critics) started in on us the second week of the season."

Noting the termination was effective Nov. 21, Dry said wryly, "That's Sunday, so I guess they wanted to be sure I brought the team back from College Station."

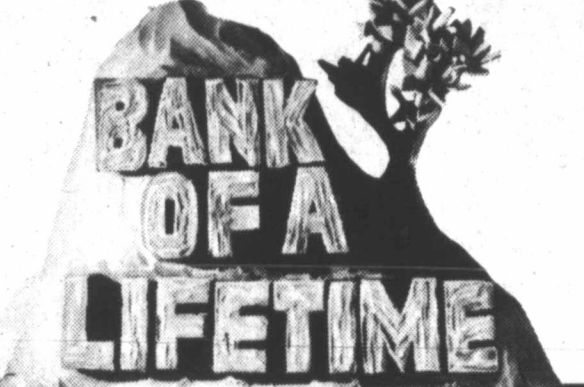

Windegger said TCU was demanding a winning program. "It was the wins and losses. F.A. is a good man and he brought more talent here, but this is a harsh business and F.A. knows it," Windegger said.

TCU beat Utah State, Rice and Baylor, but lost three SWC games by a total of nine points. The Horned Frogs led Texas at halftime Saturday, but eventually fell 38-21 thanks to a rash of second-half turnovers and a dropped touchdown pass.

Tucker admitted Dry found little talent when he replaced Jim Sofner and said "he has done much to rebuild the program. He is a man of integrity and I appreciate what he has done for the institution."

"TCU is not a win-at-any-cost institution," the chancellor said. "We do, however, want to enjoy winning seasons and become a consistently tough competitor."

Dry said he would attend the weekly Horned Frog Club meeting today.

Swimmers fall to Lubbock teams

Pampa had a pair of triple winners in a high school triangular swim meet last weekend in Lubbock.

In the boys' division, Clay Douglass won three events, including a personal best of 1:02.59 in the 100 backstroke.

Douglass, Raymond Hill, Scott Pope and Shawn White won the 200-medley relay. Douglass, a senior, has now won five first-place medals in three meets this season.

Brinna Marsh won the 200 freestyle, 100 freestyle and teamed with Christina Turner, Pauletta Morrow and Julie Turner for the 400 free relay.

Raymond Hill was a double-winner for Pampa in the boys' division as won the 200 IM and was a member of the winning 200-medley relay team.

Pampa lost to Monterey, 71-53, in the boys' division and 54-40 in the girls' division. Pampa also lost to Coronado in the boys' division, 70-51, and the girls' division, 47-40.

Making a significant improvement in their times for the Harvesters were Pauletta Morrow, Bob Stafford, Don Hayden and Robert Sailor.

"I felt like if we would have had this meet later on in the year, we could have won it," Pampa Coach Jema Allen said. "We had some kids who were sick and a bit rundown. We've been working on the weights pretty heavy and going five mornings a week."

Two starters, Amy Raymond and Cody Moore, did not swim because of illness.

Pampa enters the San Angelo Invitational Thursday and then takes on Tascosa in a duel meet Dec. 3 in Amarillo.

"We're gearing up for Tascosa," Coach Allen said.

"We probably won't cut down on our yardage, but we're going to try to get more mentally prepared."

Dear Abby

Man's grudge should die with him

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: No, no, ten-thousand times NO! Your advice to "Seeing Red," who wrote that a relative had extracted a deathbed promise that if "H" showed up at his funeral, he'd throw her out, was desperately off the mark. "Seeing" asked for suggestions on how to keep his promise, and you actually helped him!

Abby, except for public figures, church funerals are not private invitation-only affairs. They are opportunities for individuals to lay aside the divisions that may have separated them in life in order that they can pray for the repose of the soul of the dead. If a reconciliation was impossible while one of the aggrieved parties was living, at least at the funeral the survivor can make some sort of peace.

The church does not bar its doors to people merely because they quarrel. In my opinion, the person who should be bounced from this funeral is not the one the dying man finds so odious, it is the corpse who, even facing judgment, cannot relax his embrace on a grudge.

PRIEST IN CHICAGO SUBURBS

DEAR PRIEST: Sorry, Father, I cannot go along with "bouncing" a corpse from his own funeral. If "H," who was specifically asked to stay away, wants to "make some sort of peace and pray for the repose of the soul of the dead," let her do so privately, at another time, instead of crashing the funeral.

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior citizen in fairly good health. I lost my wife many years ago and have some living relatives, but when I die I do not want to leave anything to my relatives. Some I haven't spoken to in 30 years. I want to leave everything I have to a couple who befriended me. (I have a nice savings and some time certificates, furniture, etc.)

I talked to a man at my bank and he told me that whatever I leave will automatically go to my nearest of kin. Is this correct?

SACRAMENTO, CALIF., READER

DEAR READER: No. Only if you leave no will does everything automatically go to the nearest of kin. Now, talk to a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something and want you to settle it.

He appreciates fine wine and most of our friends are aware of it, so occasionally when we invite guests for dinner they bring a bottle of wine.

My husband thanks them for it, puts it away, and then he serves a wine of his own choice with our dinner.

We were recently criticized for not serving the wine a guest had brought that evening.

My husband insists that when someone brings wine, it is a gift for us, and we are under no obligation to serve it. I say that if a guest brings a bottle of wine, no matter what wine we had intended to serve we should serve the wine the guest brought. Maybe I'm wrong, but I am not having another dinner party until I find out.

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Get off the fence — on your husband's side. He's right. (P.S. If it is understood in advance that a dinner guest is providing the wine, then that wine should be served.)

Wise use of energy still needed

Long before it was popular to promote the efficient and wise use of energy, the American Gas Association was urging consumers to become more energy conscious.

Because natural gas is the cleanest burning fossil fuel and is priced below competing energy forms, demand for gas energy is high and conservation continues to be important, according to A.G.A.

The Association recommends these energy conservation tips: (1) Add insulation in attics, crawl space areas and walls if needed; (2) caulk and use weather stripping around window and door frames; (3) In winter, turn thermostats down to at least 68 degrees in the daytime and lower at night.

Many gas utilities offer house energy audits which can provide consumers with information on energy saving steps which can be taken.

Another important element in future energy cost control is the selection of new appliances.

A.G.A. urges consumers to compare the cost of running each appliance based on how much energy it uses and the cost of natural gas versus the alternative of electricity or oil.

Agent says

Pair in extortion try had suicide pact

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities destroyed a cactus tree with grenades two men intended to use in a suicide pact if their alleged scheme to extort $15 million from Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. went awry, an FBI agent says.

Agent Terry Donohue, testifying Monday at a bond reduction hearing, said Theodore McKinney and Michael Worth "had entered into a suicide pact to blow themselves up with grenades" if all did not go well.

Four grenades were found on the men when they were arrested in Apache Junction, Ariz., Donohue testified.

Both are accused of planting bombs at a Gulf chemical plant near here.

U.S. Magistrate Frank Waltermire cited the serious nature of the offense Monday in refusing to reduce the $1 million bond set for McKinney.

McKinney, 45, and Worth, 34, both of Durango, Colo., were arrested Oct. 1 while giving a Gulf security employee instructions on how to deliver the money, Donohue said.

The billion-dollar plant was closed for about five days in late September and early October after a threatening letter was received.

Five bombs were found and defused harmlessly at the plant, 30 miles east of Houston and eight miles north of Baytown. One exploded while being disarmed.

McKinney's attorney, John Ackerman, presented to the judge a 15-page open letter from alleged ringleader John McBride. In the letter, McBride denies the guilt of anyone but himself, Ackerman said.

"Basically, the letter exonerates everyone, especially McKinney," Ackerman said after the hearing. "It says McKinney didn't know what was going on until he was in Arizona and at that point he (McBride) threatened to kill his (McKinney's) wife if he didn't go through with it."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods objected to the introduction of the letter, which he said he had not seen.

McKinney's wife, Carla Cooper, also testified that she has little money for bail. The two were married while McKinney was a professor at the University of Texas at San Antonio, a post he quit in 1976.

McKinney, Worth and McBride are being held in the Harris County jail on $1 million bond.

Attorneys for Worth and McBride have said they may also seek bond reductions.

Timothy Justice, 30, has pleaded guilty to two counts and is scheduled for sentencing Dec. 14. The trial of the fifth person charged, Jill Renee Bird, 36, is scheduled to start Dec. 28.

Body identified as that of missing businessman

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Medical examiners have positively identified a decomposed body found last week as that of a former Braniff International executive, who disappeared during a business trip to East Texas last month.

The body was that of Edson Emerson Beckwith, who died of multiple stab wounds, according to Deborah Sanders, a field agent with the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

The death has been ruled a homicide, authorities said Monday.

Hopkins County Sheriff J.E. Tittle said Texas Rangers, an investigative branch of the Department of Public Safety, have joined the sheriff's department in the murder investigation.

A ranch foreman discovered Beckwith's body Friday in woods about four miles northwest of Sulphur Springs and four miles northeast of where Beckwith's abandoned car was found Oct. 15.

The 51-year-old financial consultant was returning to Dallas from a business meeting in Omaha, Texas, when he disappeared.

His wristwatch and a wallet, containing no money, were found on his body, authorities said.

His wife, Jane, said she suspected foul play when her husband, who was always punctual, failed to return home as scheduled.

"I'm sure it was robbery, because they found no money on him," she said. "I think they held him up, and he tried to fight them."

"He was probably fighting for his life," she added. "But he was always a fighter. He probably was just reacting to somebody holding him up."

Beckwith's 1979 Oldsmobile was found along a rural road 75 miles east of Dallas. The keys were in the ignition and Beckwith's suit coat was hanging on a hook in the back seat.

Officers found a pair of driving gloves nearby with a spot of blood identified as being Beckwith's, type.

Girl dazed after watching mother, sister die

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A young girl who saw her mother and sister killed was naked and seemed dazed and terrified when she finally got help, saying a man named "Mike" murdered them, the man who found her says.

Frank Crawford Jr. testified Monday in the capital murder trial of Michael Eugene Sharp.

Sharp is accused of abducting Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, and her daughters, ages 8 and 14, from a Kermit carwash June 10, taking them to a remote corner of Winkler County, and killing the woman and younger child.

The 14-year-old, Selena Kay Elms, naked and her arms bound, escaped by running five miles over the scrubby plain to an oil rig.

"I saw a naked woman on the northeast corner of the area (rig), and she was yelling did we have any clothes she could have," said Crawford, who was working on the oil rig. "I got a blanket to take out to her and I noticed her arms were tied behind her back."

"She was kind of in a daze," he said. "She'd look at you and look right through you. She said that her mother and sister were killed and I said, 'Who did this?' She said a guy named Mike. She kept looking around like she was looking for something real bad."

Crawford testified Miss Elms had what appeared to be rope burns on her biceps and cuts, scratches, bruises and abrasions on her entire body.

Winkler County Deputy Mike Eggleston discovered the bodies of Ms. Broadway and her daughter Christi Mechelle buried in a shallow grave near a windmill, he said.

Eggleston testified he talked to Miss Elms at the hospital in Kermit, and she described the man she said killed her mother and sister.

Sharp was arrested in Sweetwater. Eggleston said, after investigators got a tip that he was on his way to Louisiana.

Testimony in his capital murder trial, which was moved from Kermit on a change of venue, started Monday.

Early in the day, two Kermit women testified Sharp unsuccessfully tried to pick them up the night of the murders.

Lee Mary Armeno said Sharp tried to get her to leave a Kermit night club with him about 9:30 p.m. three hours before Mrs. Broadway and her daughters were abducted, according to investigators.

"We drank two beers, and he tried to get me to go to Odessa," Mrs. Armeno said. "He asked me to go skinny dipping with him."

At first "very charming and considerate," Sharp became abusive, Mrs. Armeno said, and she asked him to leave, which he did.

Shifting income tax deductions to save

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A little planning in the next few weeks can save you a lot of money on the federal tax return that's due in April.

The key to success lies in making the most of your deductions — itemizing them if you can get more than the standard amount and timing your spending to take those deductions when they're worth the most.

Speeding up your spending for deductible items could be a particular help this year. Tax rates are going down as a result of the 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act and that means 1982 deductions are worth more than 1983 ones.

The first thing to do is figure out whether it's worthwhile to itemize. The standard deduction — officially called the zero bracket amount — is $2,300 for a single person and $3,400 for a married couple filing jointly. If your deductions add up to more than that amount, you should itemize.

Suppose you are married and expect deductions of $3,300 this year and again next year — $6,600 over two years. At first glance, you'd be better off with the standard deduction each year — $6,800.

Assume, however, you can move some of those deductible items into 1982, boosting your total for this year to $3,800 and dropping next year's to $2,800. You itemize this year and use the standard $3,400 deduction next year. You've trimmed your taxable income over two years by $7,200.

If you expect a big boost in your income next year, you might want to defer your deductions, since the higher your income, the higher your tax bracket and the more the extra deductions are worth. A married couple with an income of $25,000, for example, is in the 29 percent tax bracket; an extra $400 of deductions cuts their tax bill by $116. A couple with an income of $40,000 is in the 39 percent bracket; an additional $400 in deductions is worth $156.

Thomas W. Crawford, a partner in the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., said, however, that "if you don't anticipate any drastic change ... what you want to probably do is accelerate your deductions into the earliest year possible." And Crawford said there are lots of things middle-income taxpayers can do to speed up those deductions.

The interest on a mortgage, for example, is usually included in the payment due early in the month following the period in which the interest is actually accrued. Your December interest is included in the mortgage payment due in the first days of January. Make that payment Dec. 31 instead of Jan. 1 and you can deduct the interest on your 1982 return. (Note: You cannot prepay 1983 interest in order to get a deduction; you can deduct only that interest which accrued in 1982.)

Among other things you can do: Consider early payment of your 1983 real estate taxes. You ARE allowed to prepay those taxes. Suppose you normally get a real estate tax bill in February. Pay it before the end of this year and you have another 1982 deduction.

Do you expect your 1982 withholding to be too small to cover state or local taxes, meaning you will owe money on April 15? Estimate the payment and send it in before Dec. 31. It's a 1982 deduction.

Are you planning a major purchase like an automobile? Make it this year instead of next so you can deduct the sales tax on your 1982 return.

Charitable contributions are generally deductible in the year when they are made. If you're considering a gift to a charity, make it — and deduct it — this year instead of next. If you make regular gifts every year, consider doubling this year's contribution and skipping next year's.

Medical bills also may offer an opportunity for flexibility. And Sidney Keas, director of tax planning and policy for the accounting firm of Main Hurdman, said that there is a dual reason for speeding up medical deductions. Not only are this year's deductions worth more because of the decline in tax rates, but it will be harder to deduct medical expenses in future years because of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

Under current law, you can deduct any out-of-pocket medical expenses which exceed 3 percent of your adjusted gross income. You also can deduct half of your premiums for health insurance, up to a maximum of $150.

Starting in 1983, you will be able to deduct only those expenses which exceed 5 percent of your adjusted gross income. There will be no separate deduction for health insurance premiums; they will be lumped with other medical expenses.

If you can schedule a visit to the doctor or dentist in December instead of January — and you pay the bill before the end of the year — you can include the out-of-pocket cost in calculating your 1982 deductions.

Suppose you earn $25,000. You pay $500 for health insurance. Your unreimbursed medical bills — the ones the insurance doesn't cover — are $600. To figure your deduction under existing law, take 3 percent of $25,000. That's $750. Subtract $150 worth of health insurance premiums; that's one deduction. Add the remaining premiums — $350 — to your medical bills for a total of $950 or a deduction of $200. Total deduction: $350.
