Tower Well Received

In a whirlwind tour of small towns in West Texas, Senator John G. Tower visited Gail on the morning of January 4.

Arriving at the Lamesa airport, Tower (R-Tex.) and his staff were met by Sally Anderson Geter of Borden County. The party drove to Gail, arriving at 11:30.

The "Town Meeting" was held in the Borden Co. High School Library with approximately 50 in attendance. Special guests were the senior Government class.

Superintendent of Schools, James McLeroy acting as Master of Ceremonies, welcomed the Senator, his staff and visiting Borden County citizens. He then introduced Sally Geter.

In introducting the Senator, Sally named him "a national leader who has provided more than sixteen years of outstanding representation of the people of Texas in the United States Sen-

Senator Tower spoke "off the cuff" of problems concerning West Texas. His short informal speech was followed by a spirited question and answer period during which the government class participated.
The bulk of the Senators remarks were centered around inflation and the farmers plight. He said he was sorry that the Congress had not been in session during the recent "farmers strike". "You've got to bring pressure on Congress," he reiterated.

"The more you speak with one voice, including voices from other states, the more apt you are to get something done," the Senator added.

A ranking Repulbican member of the Senate, Tower is also a leading authority on the nation's energy problems.

Senator Towers stop in Gail marked the first time a United States Senator or Congressman has visited in Borden County.

Baby's behavior

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Not all babies are cute and cuddly, warm and loving, say two University of Texas psychologists.

The range of temperaments and behaviors in babies is as vast as that of adults, says Douglas Sawin and Judith Langlois, who add that a baby's behavior is going to affect the way the parents behave toward it.

They have begun a ninemonth study of about 150 babies and parents to see how parent-infant relationships may affect infant development. They believe they may find that how parents and their baby interact during the first 48 hours after birth may set up patterns of attitudes and behaviors that are crucial for the later periods of infancy.

FINANCING A COLLEGE EDUCATION

At last there's good news for parents, even those in the higher tax brackets, who are pondering the skyrocketing costs of education.

The New York-based Bowery Savings Bank, through a unique, free booklet entitled, "You don't have to be rich to send your kids to college!", offers alternatives to help you prepare for your child's future.

One thing the bank offers is a service that can tell you how much college will cost when your child is ready to go, and how much you will have to save each year from now until then to be able to afford it.

The bank shows how you can save the money you'll need with the recommendation that you begin saving by the time your child is grade school age.

An inexpensive way for a parent to make a gift to a person under twenty-one is through the gift to minors option. You simply establish a bank account in the name of a custodian for the benefit of the minor. In this way, interest and dividends earned are taxed at your child's lower tax rate, which, in most cases is nonexistent, rather than at the donor's higher tax bracket.

If you have an Education Savings Account, you are eligible for The Bowery's preferred rate education loan. This allows you to save up to one percent of the annual percentage rate on an education loan.

If you've looked into grants and scholarships and found you don't qualify, a state student loan may also be used to help you fund your education.

You don't have to be rich to afford a college education, but you should start saving

4. To refrain from overdrawing at the Treasury and from borrowing more than can be paid back out of income, as that kind of thing is what got old Bert into trouble.

5. To refrain from giving away property that my forefathers, fellow citizens and allies have tising. Paid by above listed worked, paid, and sometimes died for, like the Panama Canal.

6. To be consistent in the matter of human rights, so that. when I deplore the violation of civil rights in South Africa I will at the same time be furiously outraged at the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of Cam-residents feedback as to what is taking place in the agriculture sector of our economy at this time and the fate of the family farm system," Voss said.

"Much has been said and written about the problems facing farmers today and this meeting will be held to educate all of those involved; which is every-one who eats or produces food or fiber."

For the past four years, farmers and ranchers have lost enormous sums of money and today sit at the Verge of bankruptcy, statistics show. If the present situation exists, officials say, more than 25 per cent of the nation's farmers and ranchers will be forced to liquidate or refinance their operations this

Because of the economic losses being felt by farmers and ranchers, many do not feel the future is bright enough to continue in the food and fiber business. If the trend continues, which leaders feel may if enough farmers and ranchers do not fight for parity, a severe food shortage looks certain.

Parity, the number one item asked by farmers and ranchers, represents the cost of produc- For my own safety I am retion plus a limited profit. The leaders say this is not a guaranteed income because the risks of droughts, floods, hail, pests and management still exist. It does provide a "minimum wage" for those farmers producing

The current action is not an appeal for price supports, creation of a false economy for agriculture, or for government subsidies. It is rather a rejection of the current farm program. Farmers and ranchers are asking that prices "shall be increased or decreased on a period basis to justify increases in production costs and living costs for producers," according to Section 101 of the USDA's National Economic Stability Act of Parity also means that if it costs a bushel of corn or a pound of beef to buy a particular product in 1967 (the last time parity was adjusted), it should still cost a bushel of corn or a pound of beef for that product today regardless of the dollar cost of that product.

This year's local cotton crop has kept many local farmers from involving themselves in the present movement, Voss and Houston said. But if this year's crop had not almost doubled previous records, local farmers would be in a financial disaster due to the present price

Cotton prices on today's market reflect about a 40 per cent decrease from last year from 69 per cent per pound level while the price of all other production and living items have increased.

Statistics indicate a $200 bale of cotton brings in over $14,000 worth of finished products. Farmers feel this discrepency should be reduced and are demanding a fair price for the items produced.

He did draw to my attention that it was the most rain that had fallen in 3 months. Also noted some rather profound stories about a bumper quail hunt northeast of Gail. Something was said about shooting fox out of a mesquite sapling. I saw the fox but missed the rest of the story. I never really got the story straight!

Japanese Import Policy

Fort Worth, Texas, Dec. 13, 1977---U.S. cattlemen will benefit from Japan's recent decision to increase beef imports, says J. A. Whittenburg III, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

The Amarillo rancher considers the announcement particularly significant to Texas, the Nation's leader in all areas of beef production. TSCRA, a Fort Worth-based producers group, represents 14,000 cattlemen in Texas and surrounding states.

"Twenty months ago, TSCRA helped create and finance the U. S. Meat Export Federation, Ind., an industry-wide organization for the promotion and expansion of overseas sales of U. S. meat and meat by-products.

"The Denver - based operation, headed by President Alan R. (Bud) Middaugh, has placed particular emphasis on developing the Japanese market. In January or early February 1978, USMEF will open an office in Tokyo with its Asian director Dr. L. B. (Bert) Tennison as fulltime representative.

"Japan's reversal of long-standing policy, which we considered too restrictive on beef imports, coincides perfectly with his arrival. Things now look good for a substantial increase in the U.S. share of the Japanese beef import market and that makes the USMEF office in Japan even more vital," Whittenburg says.
