Chinese Reds Fire On Marine Planes

BULLETIN
TOKYO (AP)—Informed sources said today most American troops may be out of Korea by Christmas. They said General MacArthur expects the first elements of the Eighth Army to begin moving back to Japan by Thanksgiving. All four divisions of the Eighth Army and perhaps other American units should be out of the Korean Peninsula by Christmas, the informants added.

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—Two U. S. Marine fliers said today Red China guns blazed across the Manchurian border at their planes flying five miles inside Korea. They said neither plane was hit.

A reliable source at allied 10th Corps Headquarters said South Korean troops would drive all the way to the Manchuria border despite the internationally explosive situation.

World Celebrates Anniversary of U.N.

(By The Associated Press)
 From Communist-encircled West Berlin to war-torn Korea, the United Nations celebrated its fifth anniversary today.

President Truman came to New York to make a major foreign policy speech before the General Assembly. Church bells were ringing in many U. S. communities. Schools throughout the land planned special ceremonies. In Berlin, thousands gathered to hear the dedication of the "Freedom Bell," bought by public subscription in the United States. The flag of the United Nations waved from the building tower in which the bronze freedom symbol had been installed.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U. S. chairman of the "Crusade for Freedom," which sponsors the bell and U. S. commander in Germany at the time of the Berlin blockade, was on hand to dedicate the bell.

His first notes were to be broadcast in Europe and the United States.

United Nations Day loomed especially large in Korea. Special services were held in Seoul, with the speakers including President Syngman Rhee, U. S. Ambassador John H. Muccio, and Dr. Chong Il Hyung, executive director of the Korean Association for the United Nations.

Disarmament Plan Pushed by Truman

Bradley Stresses Mutual Defenses

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Omar Bradley told military leaders of the 12 North Atlantic treaty powers today that mutual forces for common defense must be created now "or we may be forced to improvise them in the face of enemy attack" later.

The chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff sounded this note of urgency in welcoming members of the military committee of the North Atlantic treaty organization. The sessions of the committee, composed of the chiefs of staff of each of the 12 nations, will lay the groundwork for a three-day session of defense ministers of the nations, starting Saturday.

Bradley noted that this was the third session of the military committee. In Paris last December, he said, "we forged the strategic concept." At the Hague in April "we vitalized an overall strategic plan and adopted the principle of balanced forces."

While Bradley made no further mention of this point, the subject of "balanced forces" may produce differing views when the military and defense ministers sessions begin trying to translate it into divisions, navies and air forces.

What the military committee will do is to prepare recommendations for the defense ministers. Some of the debated points will arise only before the defense ministers and, in turn, some of those may have to be referred to the top-level North Atlantic council.

A potentially knotty problem for the defense committee is the matter of utilizing German manpower in the integrated defenses of western Europe. The council of its New York meeting last September, agreed that western Germany "should be enabled to contribute."

But the foreign ministers of the council didn't say how. They left that for the defense committee session. Talk of creating some German divisions, under allied control, has raised disturbing questions for France.

The council has agreed on the broad idea of a supreme commander for the integrated forces, together with a chief of staff. That was passed along to the current sessions here for incorporation into the broad pattern of the mutual defense machine.

Speech Before U.N. Stresses World 'War Against Want'

FLUSHING MEADOW (AP)—President Truman challenged Russia today to agree to a "fool-proof" disarmament plan so that the United Nations will be free to wage a worldwide "war-against want."

The United States and other free nations, Mr. Truman said, will continue to build up their military forces as insurance against aggression until there is unanimous agreement on "international control of atomic energy and the reduction of armaments and armed forces."

The United States, now committed to that course, will follow it as long as necessary, the President said in an address for the United Nations General Assembly on the fifth anniversary of the day on which the UN charter came into force.

He left the door open for East-West peace talks both "in the United Nations and elsewhere" where "a reference he did not expand" but said the free nations have learned the hard way that negotiation alone will not preserve peace. There must be armed strength as well, he said, to resist aggression.

With delegates from Russia and her iron curtain satellites in his audience, Mr. Truman avoided mentioning Russia by name, but his indictment of Communist aggression followed the lines of his San Francisco speech a week ago.

At that time, he said "the Soviet Union and its colonial satellites" in both Europe and Asia — are maintaining vast armies which pose "a constant threat to world peace."

Much of today's talk was devoted to the hope of world disarmament.

In that connection, he said the UN might well consider whether its work in that field "might be revitalized" through merger of two groups it has had working on the problem, one on general disarmament and the other on control of atomic energy.

Mr. Truman offered these three "basic principles" for disarmament:

1. First, the plan must include all kinds of weapons. Outlawing any particular kind of weapon is not enough. The conflict in Korea bears tragic witness to the fact that aggression, whatever the weapons used, brings frightful destruction.
2. Second, the plan must be based on unanimous agreement. A majority of its nations is not enough. No plan of disarmament can work unless it includes every nation having substantial armed forces. One-sided disarmament is a sure invitation to aggression.
3. Third, the plan must be fool-proof. Paper promises are not enough. Disarmament must be based on safeguards which will insure the compliance of all.

Air Support Gets Review

WASHINGTON (AP)—American generals and GI's who fought in Korea are going to get a chance to tell Congress what they think about tactical air support of ground troops.

Plans for a congressional hearing on the subject were disclosed today by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee.

"Korea showed us that we weren't quite as hot as the air force had been talking about, as far as tactical support was concerned," Vinson said in an interview.

This view is somewhat at variance with that expressed Oct. 14 by Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, who said the Korean campaign clinched the case for a tactical jet air force. Vandenberg said jets proved their ability to take punishment in ground support work. The Air Force has recently re-established as a separate entity the Tactical Air Command.

"Tactical air support is that given more or less directly in support of ground operations, in contrast to strategic operations, directed generally against targets (See AIR SUPPORT, Page 2)

U.N. Affiliate Thanks Pampa

Lake Success, home of the United Nations, was several spiral miles closer to Pampa today through a telegram sent to Rev. Russell G. West, pastor of the Church of the Brethren.

Rev. West, some time ago, sent a letter concerning the work of the United Nations to a close friend of his, Dr. A. W. Corder, American secretary to Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations. In reply to Rev. West's letter telling Dr. Corder that people in Texas felt a new pride in the accomplishments of the United Nations, Dr. Corder wrote:

"Thanks your letter. On fifth anniversary of founding of United Nations all friends of the UN may derive deep satisfaction from the great gains already made by the organization in stopping wars, in conciliating disputes and in advancing the economic and social progress of mankind. The future success of the United Nations depends upon the sustained support of the peoples and of the governments of the world. The foundations of the organization must always be strongly charged with moral and spiritual strength so that its decisions and influence may always be on the side of right and justice." School Programs Emphasizing UN

Assembly programs in junior and senior high schools here are featuring United Nations this week.

In the junior high school, the program was to be today with 24 students taking parts. The students were to explain various mechanisms of the United Nations. To be featured were duties of the secretary, the secretary general, purposes of the Assembly, the Security Council and the United Nations' flag.

Social studies teachers are in charge of the junior high assembly.

The high school assembly will be held during the regular assembly period Wednesday at 10 a. m. with Eustace Frizzell, history instructor, making a short speech explaining the purposes and ideals of the United Nations.

Displays on the bulletin boards of the high school are featuring various aspects of the commemoration of United Nations Week.

Control Committee Frames Resolution

A resolution, calling for a comprehensive study of credit controls by trade industries and government officials to ease the stringent controls laid down by the Federal Reserve Board Oct. 15, was framed last night by a subcommittee of retail dealers meeting in the Chamber of Commerce offices.

The resolution also calls for rescinding the stringent order, replacing it with one that would be easier for both dealer and customer.

Working on the resolution last night were: Paul Brown, Tom Rose, Paul Crossman, Bob Thompson, chairman; Charles Carlock, Albert Doucette, C. P. Pursey and Charles Cook.

The group will present their draft for approval of the dealers at 7:30 p. m. when the auto, appliance and furniture dealers and finance men met again in the Tom Rose showrooms, E. Kingsmill and N. Ballard.

Reds Ignore Security Act

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Communist Party and all its affiliated groups continued today to ignore the new internal security act as a move was made to overthrow the act in the courts.

The time allowed for voluntary registration by "Communist action" and "Communist front" organizations expired when the Justice Department closed its business day Monday. The law requires these organizations to register, disclose their sources of funds and in some cases furnish complete membership lists.

In the view of government officials, this disregard of the registration provisions constituted open defiance to the law. Forced registration procedure it was indicated first steps will soon be forthcoming.

Meanwhile there were these developments:

1. The Justice Department continues to prepare a nationwide roundup of alleged top alien Communists in the United States, designed to develop leads.

2. The Interior Department says Texas need have no fear of the Big Bend National Park being stocked with black bears.

3. Paul Evans, acting director of the National Park Service, told the office of Rep. Clark Fisher of San Angelo, that he had looked into reports that it was planned to import bears into the park.

4. Franks said he found there was no such intention.

5. Complaints have been made to the congressman that there already was a predatory animal problem in the Big Bend area.

Ike Favors German Arms

CHICAGO (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower says he is in favor of re-arming western Germany, "but with restrictions so they wouldn't be a serious threat to France."

"Traditionally Japan and Germany have been the balancing powers," Eisenhower told a press conference Monday. "So if we could get West Germany into our camp it would be a tremendous thing in our favor."

Discussing Asia, he said: "We can't do this job alone. We can't have forces stationed all around the world."

He told the newsmen the nation needs an armed force of 3,000,000 men, and added that "we cannot compete for them with industry; we must face the problem of universal military training beginning at age 18. He estimated such a program would supply two-thirds of the armed force required, the additional third to be made up of professional soldiers.

The general, who is president of Columbia University, said he has not been offered the command of the Atlantic Pact armies.

"So far as I know," he said, "there are no such armies, no army of any size to command. However, if anyone ever suggests that I have a duty to perform, I will not duck it, no matter where it takes me or how far."

Reserves Get Longer Notice

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Marshall has laid down a uniform policy for all the armed forces to follow in recalling reservists to active duty.

It was intended, Marshall said in a directive Monday "to obviate the uncertainty with which both the employer and the reservist employe presently are confronted, and to eliminate or reduce to a minimum the inequities in the recall of reservists."

The directive, sent to the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air-Force, orders that each service:

1. Decide its manpower requirements for six months in advance of calling reservists to active duty. (This time now varies considerably with the services, running between 15 and 30 days.)
2. Give those called up at least 30 days for settling their personal affairs before time to report for duty. (This time now varies considerably with the services, running between 15 and 30 days.)
3. Remove from its active reserve list all reservists who, for physical or other valid reasons determined by the service, are not available for extended active duty.
4. Keep reservists on active duty until (A) manpower requirements can be met by the draft or volunteers, and (B) the involuntary reservists and units have reached a "maximum state of training." This replaces the present policy of calling reservists for an indefinite period.

A department spokesman said the same policy would hold for National Guard units.

Black Bears Not Slated for Texas

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Interior Department says Texas need have no fear of the Big Bend National Park being stocked with black bears.

Death Closes Long Career Of Mammy Singer, Al Jolson

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Al Jolson, the veteran jazz singer who was the first U. S. star to entertain troops overseas in both the second world and Korea wars, died unexpectedly last night with a quip on his lips: "Hell, Truman had only one hour with MacArthur. I had two!"

"I'm going, boys," the famous mammy singer told two longtime friends with whom he was playing gin rummy in the St. Francis Hotel.

He died quietly, quickly, of a coronary occlusion . . . and without pain, said the house physician.

Jolson, 64, had returned only two weeks ago from Korea, where he sang to allied troops. He had a two-hour luncheon chat with General MacArthur in Tokyo enroute.

President Truman and J. Edgar Hoover talked privately just an hour on Wake Island a week ago Sunday in their historic get-acquainted meeting.

With Jolson were two old friends, song writer Harry Akst and Martin Fried. Akst, a pianist and arranger. They had come with him from Southern California for a scheduled guest star spot on a Bing Crosby radio show, to have been recorded here tonight.

Akst telephoned Jolson's fourth wife, Erle Galbraith, whom he married in 1945. She was at Encino, Calif. She was reported to have collapsed with grief.

Jolson was riding the crest of a popularity wave for the second time in an entertainment career that began in 1899. His popularity with the troops was unprecedented.

She claimed that she collapsed while trying to get to a phone to call for aid.

Newly Developed Lignite Gas Would Run U.S. for 400 Years

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE GRAND FORKS, N. D. — (AP) — A new source of power, big enough to operate American industry 400 years was described at the University of North Dakota. The power source is a new gas from lignite, perfected by the U.S. Bureau of Mines in cooperation with the University of North Dakota. Lignite is a black, low-order coal, which is about 35 percent carbon. The United States has 9,000,000,000 tons. That's one-quarter of all our coal still unmined. The Bureau of Mines is putting the finishing work on a new $750,000 laboratory, the only exclusively lignite laboratory in the country, to give industry answers to technical questions. The cost already is low enough to compete with coal shipped long distances. Heading the work are Drs. A. C. Burr, John C. Holt and W. H.

Oppelt, for the bureau, and Dr. L. C. Harrington, for the university. The secret of gas-making is a red-hot steel bottle, about 18 feet high and nearly ten in diameter. The bottle has an inner lining, forming a corridor close to the red-hot outer wall. This corridor is filled with high-pressure steam. Lignite, fed in at the bottle top, slides down the corridor. There, heat and steam convert most of the coal into gas, known to industry as water gas. This single bottle makes enough gas daily to furnish power for electricity to a town of 10,000. All but 15 percent of the lignite turns into gas. The remainder is low enough to compete with coal shipped long distances. The new gas has many uses besides burning. It can be converted into gasoline. It will run a diesel engine. It can make alcohol, ammonia, wax, dyes and fats—even fats that human beings can eat. Raw lignite already is burned by North Dakota power plants. One problem is reducing the water in the lignite. The Bureau of Mines here does this with steam. The steam pressure squeezes the coal until water can be seen running out.

He first starred on the stage—in blackface—in 1909 with Lew Dockstader's Minstrels. Two years later he was discovered by the Shuberts and hired for their Winter Garden in New York.
The most famous of his Broadway performances was his bended-knee rendition of "Mammy," for which he became known as the mammy singer. Then Hollywood beckoned.
His greatest movie, "The Jazz Singer," was made in 1927, at the first peak of his career. It is generally credited with being the first real talking picture.

upon allied planes operating south of the border.
In their drive toward the Manchurian border, the South Koreans have outrun their communications. Frontline reports have been sketchy for 20 hours.
The South Korean forward elements were believed to be within 35 miles or less of Manchuria. A new allied warplane bomb line has been drawn in an arc 12 miles south of the border. The bomb line usually is placed 20 miles ahead of leading ground troops.
A buildup was reported in progress for the final drive to wipe out Red Korean army remnants.
Communist troops were surrendering by the hundreds. An estimated 325,000 have laid down their arms or have been killed or wounded.
But bypassed troops waged guerrilla warfare all the way into deep South Korea. They struck in swift thrusts, usually for food, then fled back into the hills. Korean civilians felt the vengeance. The Communists killed, unsparringly, wherever they found United Nations sympathizers.

nations. The safeguards must be adequate to give immediate warning of any threatened violation. Disarmament must be policed continuously and thoroughly. It must be founded upon free and open interchange of information across national borders.
Mr. Truman conceded that the possibility of attaining that goal appears distant today, but he declared, "we must never stop trying."
"For its attainment would release immense resources for the good of all mankind," he continued. "It would free the nations to devote more of their energies to wiping out poverty, hunger and injustice.
"If real disarmament were achieved, the nations of the world, acting through the United Nations, could join in a greatly enlarged program of mutual aid. As the cost of maintaining armaments decreased, every nation could greatly increase its contributions to advancing human welfare. All of us could then pool even greater resources to support the United Nations in its war against want.
"In this way, our armaments would be transformed into foods, medicine, tools for use in underdeveloped areas, and into other aids for human advancement. . . . thus, we could give real meaning to the old promise that swords shall be beaten into plowshares, and that nations shall not learn war any more."
The President told his international audience, in words beamed throughout the world by the State Department's "Voice of America," that "the fear of another great international war overshadows all the hopes of mankind."

Gull Cites Reason For His Campaign

In a radio talk, dealing mostly with the Supreme Court, Monday night, Rep. Ben Gull told Pampa voters why he is running as a Republican for the 18th District's seat in Washington.
He termed the Texas tidelands case "as good a reason as any I can think of since it typifies the cynicism, the disregard for rights, the brutal disregard for law which has been characteristic of the 'raw deal' administration."
Enlarging, Gull raked the Court for its oral decision last week when it refused to consider the possibility that it made a mistake when "it legalized the theft by the 'raw deal' administration of the precious Texas tidelands which rightfully belong to the school children of Texas."
Gull also pointed to the appointments made to the Court by the administration, declaring, "It no longer is necessary for a man to be a great lawyer with judicial experience to be considered for appointment to the Supreme Court through its policy of appointing 'none but left-wing politicians, turning it into a political tribunal."
On party politics the congressman said, "There have been those who have said it would be better to reform the Democratic Party from within. It simply can't be done. If it could have been done it would have been done long ago. Good, solid conservative Jeffersonian Democrats have been going to Washington for years. They have had no influence. They were not members of the Republican Party and they were ignored by the so-called Democratic Party. The administration moved solidly to the left—down the primrose path to socialism. The conservative Democrats in Congress today are a lonely crew. They are fine men, but men without a party."
Gull concluded, adding, "The only way to win the war being waged against the South by the administration is to throw out the leaders of that war. It can't be done from the inside and has to be done from the outside."

farther removed from actual combat.
Vinson said the hearing he contemplates probably won't be held until early next year, and as a result of it "I think we'll work out a fairly good tactical air support program."
While the Air Force "did a good overall job" in Korea, he said, "you can rest assured that we are going to do our best to see that the ground forces have adequate tactical support, and that the Air Force is capable of providing it."
Vinson detailed plans for the hearing following publication of an interview he gave the magazine "U.S. News and World Report," in which he said that until the prospect for world peace is better than it is now, the United States should have armed forces of 3,000,000 men. He estimated that will mean an annual military budget of from 35 to 50 billion dollars.

Spanish Commies Take the Desert

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The "Voice of America" reported without comment today that most Spanish Communists recently ordered to go to the North African desert rather than to an Iron Curtain country.

The State Department radio told overseas listeners that the courts offered 177 Spaniards sentenced for underground activity the choice of being sent to an eastern European country or being interned in the desert region South of Oran, Algeria.

All but 30 of the 177, the voice said, responded: "Your honor, I choose the desert."

"THE SKIPPER SURPRISED HIS WIFE"

Special Delivery by Lee Pinson

The news that Mrs. Muchmore had died and that I might have prevented it, except that my shoe lace had broken and I had fallen down a flight of stairs and landed in a hospital, brought back the bees in my head for a moment.

When I straightened up again, Betsy Sharpe was talking:

"Aunt Myra's at the Muchmore house," she said. "She thought she could help."

"Let's go," I told Roger. "I was expecting Sally and a flock of orderlies and internes to come boiling out of the hospital in search of me, the runaway patient."

Roger stepped on the starter and in a couple of minutes we were safely away. Then I thought of something else. "Did the vet save her Pekinese-Ching?" I asked.

Roger shook his head. "Ching was dead before Mrs. Muchmore went to Dr. Doan's place. She went straight from his place to her lawyers and it was all over town that I was going to be arrested. But she got sick—"

Roger sighed from his shoe-strings.

"Heaven knows if I'll ever be in the clear," he finished miserably.

I saw Betsy's hand tighten over his. "Doc can do something about it," she told him confidently. "Now that he's out of the hospital, he can find the person that's been poisoning those dogs."

I straightened my shoulders and set back with my chest out. I may not look like Sir Launcelot, but a fair lady had every faith that I could kill her personal dragon just as well as any boiler-plated knight in full flower. It was something to know that Betsy relied on me—if she couldn't love me—I'd probably get over it in time, and Sally really did have nice blue eyes.

THE late Mrs. Muchmore's maid looked at us from a tear-swollen face as she answered our ring. Grace Muchmore had been a good old girl when your servants love you that's a mighty good sign.

Catching a glimpse in the hall mirror of the white beehive I wore on my head and remembering that I was barefooted, I wasn't surprised that the maid stared. But she showed us into the little parlor her dead mistress had called the morning room.

Miss Myra Sharpe turned quickly away from the desk as we came in. She gasped in astonishment when she saw me.

"Doc! Why, I thought you were in the hospital!"

"I'm all right. They let me out for an emergency." I gave Betsy and Roger a straight look that told them to keep their little traps shut, even if they believed that I had gone off my rocker, too.

"But your head—"

"That?" I tapped the beehive with a casual finger. "That's the new look in bandages." Then I got serious. "I was certainly sorry to hear about Mrs. Muchmore's death. It must have been a terrible shock to you, losing a friend so suddenly. I hate to come barging in at a time like this, but I had to see you."

Miss Myra looked surprised and so did Roger and Betsy. I went on earnestly:

"Do you remember those tablets I put up for your father last summer? Dr. James has a patient with a similar heart ailment now and when I went to give him some of those tablets—they're standard medication—I found 'em temporarily out of them. Of course, I wired for more and they will come in on the afternoon train, but if you could let me have the rest of the tablets from the last prescription I filled for your father, it would be a real help. When I looked up the prescription I saw that I'd filled it for 50 tablets the day before the old gentleman died."

Miss Myra shook her head, but she tried to remember. "I can't recall that there were any tablets left after Father passed on—" She fiddled with the catch of her bag, then shook her head some more.

"Surely there were," I insisted. "The dose was only two a day."

"I suppose there must have been," Miss Myra agreed reluctantly, "but I don't remember. But I do remember that I threw away all the medicines when I cleaned up Father's room—afterward."

"Well, that's that," I shrugged my shoulders. "If you don't have them, you don't have them. I guess Doc James' patient will get along until the train comes in. But I thought it was worth trying to see if you had the tablets still."

I wandered aimlessly around the little morning room as I talked, fingering a pile of magazines, straightening the lid on the empty candy jar on the desk, peering into the waste basket.

"Why don't you want Betsy to get married?" I asked Miss Myra.

MISS MYRA stared at me with her mouth open so long, I noticed that she was overly long in the tooth. I repeated the question.

"You certainly are acting queer," she said then, her voice tart. "I don't think you should be out of the hospital. I have no objection whatever to Betsy marrying. If it's any of your business!"

"Your choice of words is as unfortunate as your nosiness," Miss Myra said in a huff. "I'm not trying to 'break up' Betsy and Roger."

"Then her voice became self-righteous. "But I would be doing less than my duty if I didn't point out to Betsy that she's making a mistake to marry a man of such violent temper and unpredictable actions—a man who could easily slip over the borderline into—"

While Betsy and Roger stared at me, I told Miss Myra, "It is my business. Because I'm fond of Betsy... because I really want her to be happy. Why are you trying to break up Betsy and Roger?"

"I would be a real help. When I looked up the prescription I saw that I'd filled it for 50 tablets the several melds of five or six. It was particularly unfortunate that two of these melds were naturals in nines and sixes.

This left Ted in a real tough spot. He could freeze the pack, in which case he could not possibly go out for at least two rounds. However, in that case both he and Mrs. Robinson would be able to discard sagely from then on and the opponents would be able to make canastas only with their few cards. Or he could give away a natural canasta and keep his out position.

Ted's decision was to freeze the pack. His theory was that in all probability Mrs. Robinson also held cards that would be particularly valuable to the opposition. Therefore, he reasoned that even though the hand went right to the end the opponents could not make any natural canastas and would have to be content with completing canastas with wild cards.

I was inclined to approve his decision, particularly due to the fact that the opposition was down

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Dallas Player Saves His Lead

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

All in a net of roses for even the best canasta players. For instance, I was watching a game in Dallas the other evening. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Robinson, two of our best and most enthusiastic players, had built up a nice lead in the game. They needed 120 and their opponents were still in the 50 bracket when one of those equalizing hands came up.

The Robinsons could not get the count and the opponents were having a field day. They had not melded much because they were each holding so many cards that the Robinsons could not afford to freeze the discard pile and had merely to build up their hands so that they could go out eventually.

Finally Ted acquired the count and melded 2-A-A, 2-Q-Q, and 10-10. He discarded and retained another deuce and an odd six spot in his hand.

The next player knew that his party might be over and therefore melded all the natural cards he could and left himself with five cards only. Mrs. Robinson came through. She added two deuces and two queens to Ted's queen meld, thereby completing a canasta for him and also melded three fives. The next player took Mrs. Robinson's discard, melded down to four cards and discarded a black three.

Now Ted drew a nine. Upon looking over the situation on the table he saw that his opponents had completed canastas and had

WE, THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILLET
NEA Staff Writer

"Why don't neighbors mind their own business?" asks a woman reader. She goes on to explain: "I was away from home visiting my parents for two weeks and when I returned three women in our neighborhood said to me: 'We hardly saw Joe while you were gone. We thought he might be lonely, but I guess he found plenty to do.'"

"The phrasing was so much the same in all three cases that I knew the women had talked the matter over and agreed to let me know Joe wasn't moping around home while I was gone."

"Of course, I was supposed to start wondering just what he WAS doing. Only it so happened I did know. Friends had invited him out every evening to keep him from being lonely."

"But my neighbors didn't know that. They were just curious and suspicious — and they thought they could cause a little trouble."

JUST STEER CLEAR. Nobby neighbors are a curse, of course, to any family. But if you've got 'em, you've got 'em, and the only thing you can do is steer as clear of them as possible.

The only real way to squelch a nosy neighbor is to act disinterested when she starts to gossip about another family in the neighborhood. Don't accept anything she tells you as a startling or deplorable fact. Just shrug it off and let the story fall flat on its face.

Also tell her as little as possible about your own business. And if she starts to nuzzle you about something don't let her know the needle has hit its mark — even if it has.

Of course, you can't stop her from making you the target of her remarks, but you can undermine her influence by being skeptical every time you hear something that the nosy neighbor told you. Else and it is passed on to you.

Jr. High 4-H Club Elects Officers

Miss Joy Williams, assistant home demonstration agent, gave a demonstration on "Best Buys in Lingerie" to the Pampa Junior High 4-H Club, which met at the junior high school, Wednesday.

The demonstration will be chosen at the next meeting. Members present were Leta Laverty, Sandra Jean Hollis, Dale Hoover, Donna Marie Leland, Norma Jean Balch, Jessie Noel, Marie Forterfield, Janice Frazier, Allegra Wheeler, Marilyn Anne Haines, Iola Turner, Nancy Harrison, and Gwendolyn Burnett.

The honoree was presented with a corsage of a pink rose in a garland of blue cornflowers.

Button Box Yields Clever Jewelry

To save strain on her budget, this clever young woman creates her own costume jewelry from buttons (left). She attaches pinbacks to fleur-de-lis buttons to make matching scarf pins (upper right), and adorns a velvet choker with a jeweled button (center right). A necklace pendant of graduated glitter buttons and matching earrings (lower right) add sparkle to a glamorous evening.

The urge to own a wide selection of costume jewelry is often thwarted by a cramped budget and the inability to find exactly what you want.

One solution to both these problems is to make your own jewelry. With buttons, it's easy. Glistening buttons from the notions counter rival a jeweler's display, offering a wide variety of styles and sizes from which to choose.

There are glitter buttons, following the current fashion trend toward sparkle. Adaptable to almost any form of jewelry you desire, they are particularly effective as necklace pendants, which are made by stringing together three buttons of graduated sizes.

These pendants, suspended from narrow black velvet ribbons, combine with matching earrings to make glamorous evening ensembles.

Also for wear with dance frocks are easy-to-make chokers, dressed up with a handsome button which is set with fake jewels. Simply sew it in place.

Complementary earrings may be made from smaller buttons of the same design, or from sparkling buttons set with similar stones.

To make these attractive earrings, purchase earring backs at a notions counter, or buy inexpensive earrings and remove the setting. Attach the buttons of your choice to the backs with a good household cement.

The same method may be used for making tailored earrings, which are attractive when matched, in smaller size, with buttons on your dress or blouse.

A similar procedure should be followed in making pins. If pinbacks are unavailable in your town, break the original decorations from inexpensive pins and cement buttons in their place.

In case you have difficulty making metal buttons adhere to metal pin or earring backs, shred a piece of string and mix the fuzz with the cement before gluing the pieces together. Another method is to rough up one of the surfaces with a file.

The making of button jewelry is often simplified by removing the shank — the loop through which the thread would pass for ordinary button use.

This can usually be broken off with a little pressure, or removed with a small file from the tool-box. In some cases, it's easier to take off the entire back of the button by prying with nail file.

In addition to earrings, necklaces and pins you can make cuff links by joining two buttons with a short length of twisted wire.

Circle Two of the Women's Society of the First Methodist Church is sponsoring a review of "The Gauntlet" in the chapel at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Mrs. Paul Bowers will be the reviewer.

The meeting is open to the public. Pie and coffee will be served in the parlor.

Shamrock Station Agent Feels Vacation Due After 50 Years

By GEORGE BURRIS
News Correspondent
SHAMROCK — (Special) — F. E. Stevens retired as station agent for the Rock Island railway last week, after 33 years at Shamrock and over a half century as a railroad man. This weekend he piloted his private plane to Tempe, Ariz., where he and Mrs. Stevens will spend the winter.

SAME SIZE — Young Tony Ellett finds this 31-pound dolphin mighty tough to lift. The big one was taken in the Gulf Stream off Nags Head, N.C.

Born at Eagle Mills, Vinton County, O., Stevens was the only son in his family, but he had two sisters. He walked two miles to a country school as a boy, later finishing high school at Hamden, O. He went immediately into railroading. Stevens served as an employee of the Union Pacific at Fort Morgan and Sterling, both in Colorado, then joined the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern at Guion, Ark. He was an agent for the Rock Island at Texola and Erick before coming to Shamrock in 1917. When he arrived in Shamrock, water was hauled in in tankcars from McLean, and he used to get a fire hose and fill his cistern from the tank cars and thus avoid hauling water, a laborious job. Stevens says he will do nothing but fly and fish in his Arizona retreat this winter. He thinks a vacation is due after 52 years.

Lefors Students Present Play for Parent-Teachers

LEFORS — (Special) — Students of the first, second and third grades of Lefors Independent Schools presented a Halloween play at the Oct. 19 meeting of the Parent-Teacher Assn. in the high school auditorium. The play was directed by Mrs. L. W. Natho, Mrs. L. H. Berryman and Miss Ardelle Briggs. About 90 children took part on the program.

Principal characters of the play, "Halloween Night," were Margie Nichols, Big Pumpkin; Patsy O'Neal, Medium Pumpkin; Sharon Hines, Little Pumpkin; Jerry Carpenter, Scarecrow and John Klyce, Owl. Featured in the play were the "trick or treat" children, the pumpkin dance, scarecrow chorus and witches chorus. The first grade students sang introductory songs to the play, accompanied by Mrs. Harold Turbo at the piano. Mrs. R. H. Barron, president, conducted a business session, during which a report was made on the current membership drive.

Uncle Joe Accompanies GIs On Drive to KoRed Capital

By DON WHITEHEAD
ON THE ROAD TO PYONGYANG — (P) — Joe Stalin rode by proxy with the American column driving on Pyongyang but the pipe-smoking dictator of Red Russia drew only jeers along the way. Stalin's likeness moved along the dusty road northward as a life-sized poster nailed to a truck. "We want Uncle Joe to be with us when we go into Pyongyang," a grimy doughboy yelled jubilantly.

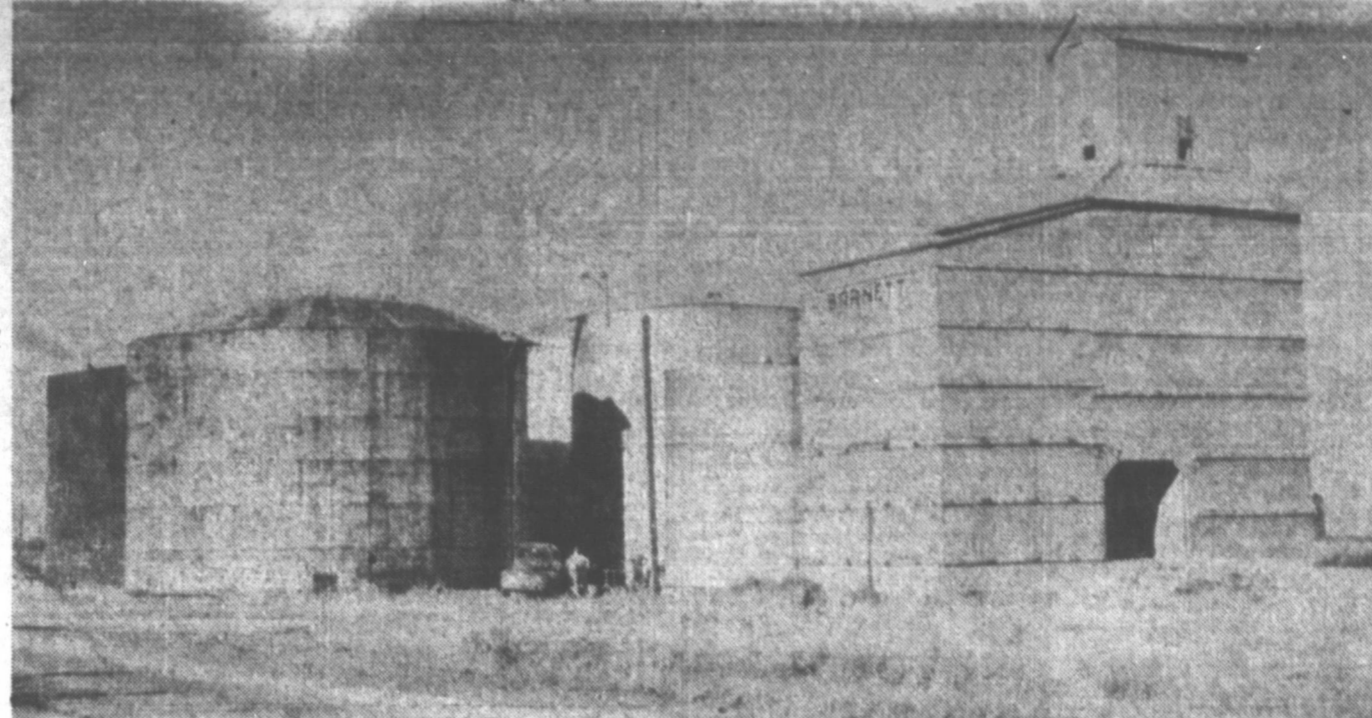

view of this enthusiasm by the enemy. "They act like politicians," he snarled. "If you can't whip 'em — join 'em." Two Sherman tanks wheeled from the road and turned their guns on a village across the valley. The guns thundered and explosions splashed in the village. And then more white clad figures began streaming out in surrender. There were some women and children among them. But most of them were North Korean troops racing to give themselves up to the Americans.

Out of the hills and across the valley near Hukkyo the white clad figures came in droves. A few hours or a few days before they had been manning guns against the United Nations troops. But now they had had enough. They came waving white and crudely made flags of the South Korean Republic. And they shouted "Banzai." But no longer was it a battle cry — it was the cry of the defeated. And as these North Korean soldiers ran to surrender they clapped their hands above their heads to applaud the American army. But Brig. Gen. Frank A. Allen of Cleveland, Ohio, took a cynical

This was apple day for the United Nations troops. The army has entered the apple country of North Korea. And the trees are heavy with fruit — juicy apples with crisp meat. Whenever a convoy stopped, soldiers raced into orchards and came back carrying helmets piled with apples. And they were bombarded with apples by civilians trying to show their good will to Americans and British and Australians. "Every time a Korean throws something in my jeep I'm not sure whether it's a hand grenade or apple," one GI said. "But so far it's always been an apple."

In general, the U.S. needs to import only special purpose oils such as coconut, palm, castor and olive oils.

Woman Complains of Watchful Husband

CHICAGO — (P) — Mrs. Evelyn Roberts, 25, has complained in circuit court that her husband spent much of his time spying on her — with the aid of a telescope and binoculars. She told Judge Daniel Roberts in her suit for divorce that her husband, Howard, 29, a railroad clerk, was jealous. She said she frequently caught him spying when she went shopping or calling on neighbors. Worst of all, she told the court, he made erroneous deductions from his spying and disputes resulted. Judge Roberts granted her a divorce on grounds of cruelty. Fort Peck Dam, Montana, is the world's largest earth-fill dam.

U.S. Tank Gets Wanderlust, And Bobs Right Out to Sea

By HAL BOYLE
WITH U. S. FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION, Korea — (P) — Hear now the tale of an American tank that floated out to sea — and floated back again! The truant tank went away for a day while it was being ferried across the Yesong River near Kaesong during the Seventh Cavalry regiment's march on the North Korean capital of Pyongyang. Engineers quickly improvised a ferry by putting planking across six large rubber pontoon boats. "The first tank they rolled on it was a 37-ton Sherman," said Capt. Art Westburg of Washington, D. C., assistant regimental operations officer. "No sooner was it on the ferry than the mooring cables snapped. There is an 18-foot tide differential in the river that creates an 8-to-10-knot current. It took hold of the ferry and off it floated down stream. Besides the crew of five surprised tankmen there were several chagrined engineers and about 15 frightened South Korean laborers aboard. The waterborne tank rode majestically down to the mouth of the river into the estuary and out to sea. Along the way it passed a shoreline and several small islands still held by the enemy. The startled Reds joyously began banging away at it with mortars and machine guns. "Our men weren't much afraid of being hit themselves," said Westburg, "because they could hide in the tank or under it. But they did worry that the rubber boats might be punctured."

Nothing Funny About Money, Unless You Try to Save It

By JACK COATS
There is nothing funny about money, or is there? There is nothing funny about anything so hard to get or so easy to get rid of. There are countless Americans, however, who let themselves drift into money habits that are ludicrous. They will work forty hours a week, fifty weeks a year for a whole lifetime to make money and yet they resent taking a couple hours now and then to work seriously at the problem of using their money wisely. But the funny part about money is the fact that the average working man can invest his savings to do work for him. Several years ago, it was the general opinion of the public to think that only the rich man could afford to invest. But, with the outgoing of the Stutz Bearcat, people's ideas have changed about money. Any average man can learn to make his money do more for him than he ever dreamed of, and the hobby is becoming just as popular as Canasta. A man has to work mighty hard — you have to work mighty hard — to earn money. It is your money. What are you going to do with it? You would like a new car, the house ought to be repainted, something must be put aside for the bill collector, the children must be educated, and then there are bills, bills, and more bills. "You haven't told me anything I don't know," you might say. Well, everyone wants to save what he can to prepare for the future. Investment implies doing something today for some future benefit or profit, and that is what we all want to do. "Where am I today? Where was I five years ago? Where will I be ten years from now?" Aren't these questions we all ask at one time or another? The man who does something about these questions is the man that gets ahead in "Ye olde Atomic Age of ours." Planned investments are the best ways to get ahead. No, you don't have to be a millionaire. You don't even have to be rich, as some people put it. All you need is the urge to get ahead. When a man thinks of investments, he thinks of securities, and they are judged by growth, income and safety. Growth is a necessary item to consider in investing, as you want a permanent place in the company or corporation you invest in. You don't want the organization to go broke before you get started. Income is a necessary component, but quality of investments are not judged by high or low income. It is too hard to set an exact scale of profit or income. All you want is a fair return on your money. Safety can be chattered by past performances. There are three kinds of securities: Common stock, preferred stock and bonds. These three kinds of securities are designed to make money work for you. Anyone can make detailed plans for his future, and any man can make his income large or small, do more for him. A man who has a small saving of $500 can invest it in bonds, and make it pay those bills and paint that house in a process of a few years. Good investing can make that money for your future in a surprisingly short time. After alternate investment in stocks and bonds over a period of five years, the original $500 should grow toward the $2,000 bracket. It is not hard to do, and it is not another new idea, to be considered and forgotten about. It is systematic, and one of the few ways left to us in this modern age to get ahead. Is money funny, or isn't it? You answer the question.

Blackie Crow Can Browbeat Alpine People

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
Associated Press Staff

An outstanding personality and town leader at Alpine, Texas, is a beer-guzzling crow named Blackie.

Blackie was just a fledgling last June when a couple of local jokers gave him to Frank Hofues, Jr., manager of an Alpine hotel, telling Hofues that the bird was a Mexican eagle.

The hotel man soon learned the truth, but now wouldn't swap his crow for all the eagles in Mexico.

Bill Potter, rambling reporter for the San Angelo Standard-Times, trailed Blackie around for a day and reports that the bird flies all over town and begs at least 10 free meals daily, besides the three he gets at his hotel home.

At 6 a.m. Blackie flies to the Williams Grocery for his first breakfast. He gets the second a little later from Mrs. Bertha Lentz of the hotel staff. At 8:30 a.m. he always lights on the shoulder of the hotel bellhop, Chon Sotelo and the two go to the post office for mail.

Daily, Blackie browbeats Justice of the Peace Raymond Garnett for crackers. Garnett keeps a supply handy on his desk for the feathered friend.

Blackie is quite a thief and readily steals pencils, pens, trinkets and most anything else he can fly away with. He takes his loot to the roof of the Williams grocery.

The crow has a sense of humor and playfully dive-bombs citizens on the street. Most everyone recognizes him easily now—ever since the recent day when Blackie fell into a paint bucket.

He is spotted with white paint and Hofues plans to repaint him as soon as the old paint wears off. It's good protection, since folks readily distinguish him from other crows.

Henry Hunts Excuses... Jean Is Coming Home Tomorrow

By HENRY McLEMORE

Thumbing through an encyclopedia today I discovered that I am the holder of a world record.

In 1911—so the encyclopedia says—a Mr. John Anderson Myjo, of Troon, Scotland, when his wife was away for five days, established a new all-time mark for dirty dishes piled on the sink.

Mr. Myjo's stack of chinaware contained 238 plates, cups, saucers, etc., and was five feet six inches high and three feet two inches long.

Upon reading this I got a tape measure and measured the pile of dirty dishes that have accumulated on my sink since Jean left for New York to superintend the painting of the apartment we will occupy this fall, to select the drapes for the shoe closet, and to see to it that the shelf paper matches the doorman's cap.

I hadn't measured and counted for more than a few seconds before I knew that the record which has been so long in Scotland has now been brought to America.

The unwashed leaning tower of Pisa on my sink contains 301 dishes of assorted shapes and sizes and is almost half again as high and as long as that which brought fame to Mr. Myjo.

It took the Scottish husband five days to accumulate his pile. He's a piker. I have used only three days and, if there were any more dishes left in the house, I would whip his record to a frazzle in two more days. As it is, there is only one clean dish in the house, and that is a giant soup tureen that, given a springboard, would look at home in the backyard of any Hollywood star's home.

Jean will be back tomorrow and I know her well enough to know that, as proud as she'll be to have me a holder of a world record, I'd better have those dishes washed and put away.

Frankly, I don't how to go about the task. The dishes are so delicately balanced that I fear to bring in the garden hose and turn it on them. The chances are very great that such a measure would result in a clatter which would make the noise of Santa's reindeer on the roof sound like the explosion of a soap bubble in the Grand Canyon.

What I think I'll do is throw them away and tell Jean that a vicious gang of burglars, specializing in china, and china alone, has been terrorizing the neighborhood and made off with nearly all the dishes in town.

Yes, that's what I'll do. I'll tell her that I was sitting on the couch about midnight, reading an unexpurgated copy of Little Lord Fauntleroy, when I felt a hand at my throat, a sack over my head, and a menacing demand to open the wall safe and hand over the china.

Then, locked in the refrigerator, and helpless to lift anything heavier than an ice cube, I had to listen to the gang make away with every blessed plate we own.

A convincing story, even if I do say so myself. One that should bring tears to her eyes and a bump on my head.

But I have no idea how to explain the gas stove being half burned up. There isn't a chance of her falling for a story about a gang which has been terrorizing the neighborhood by going about turning on the burners and letting them burn. That's what I did, but I didn't mean to. It seems that right in the middle of cooking myself a sumptuous one-course dinner of a boiled hot dog, an emergency call came through to me asking if I could play a little poker, and rather than let down my friends I rushed right out.

When I finally returned the stove was better done than the hot dog.

Well, they say women are understanding. Heaven help me if they're not. (Distributed by McNaught Syndicate).

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Hard Luck Joe Sits In The Wrong Chair

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service "That was a sad little hand," said Hard Luck Joe. "I certainly expected to make it. Do you realize that the odds must have been better than 2 to 1 in my favor?"

"The world," said Joe's partner, "lost a great mathematician when you took up bridge. But that's nothing to what bridge lost. Don't you realize that the hand was an absolute certainty — if you only played it right?"

West added his own moderate strength to the strength shown by his partner's vulnerable overcall and came to the conclusion that North's strong bidding was based partly on ruffing powder. He therefore opened the ace of hearts and continued with a second round of trumps.

Hard Luck Joe, playing the South hand, won the second trick in his own hand. He next cashed the ace of clubs, ruffed a club in dummy, and returned to his hand with the ace of diamonds to ruff his last club in dummy.

Then he cashed dummy's king of diamonds and led the low diamond from dummy.

Joe hoped that the diamonds would split 3-3, in which case his last diamond would be good; or that the East would win the trick, in which case there might still be a chance to ruff the last diamond with dummy's last remaining trump.

As it happened, however, West was able to win the third round of diamonds, and West speedily led his last trump. This left Joe with a losing diamond and a losing spade in addition to the two tricks he had already lost.

Joe was sure that he had been untucky, but North was even surer that Joe had played the hand badly. Do you see how he should have played it?

After winning the second trick would be unable to prevent declarer from ruffing dummy's two low spades with the jack and king of hearts.

In all, dummy would make four trump tricks in addition to the two ruffs in the South hand. These six trump tricks would be enough, added to the four top cards in the side suits.

Curiously enough, even Joe might have made the hand if he had been sitting in the North seat instead of in his actual position. He failed when he tried to ruff the South losers in the North hand, but he would have succeeded if he had tried to ruff out the North losers in the South hand.

Actors Differ on Question Of 'Beefcake' for Publicity

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — To bare or not to bare. That is the question debated by two rising young film actors.

In one corner is Anthony Curtis, who told me recently that he jumped to stardom after he stripped at the beach for some "beefcake" photos. His gal fans went wild over his exposed frame.

Now comes Keefe Brasselle, who declares "leg art should be left to the glamor girls."

Both of these young men are public-conscious and both agree that exploitation is needed to further a film career. But Brasselle took sharp issue with Curtis' claim that showing the torso is a shortcut to success.

"I've done picture layouts at the beach myself," he said, "so I have nothing to hide. But lately I've turned down five requests for swimsuit picture spreads. I feel very strongly about it."

"I don't think there is anything exciting about beefcake. The mail I get from fans proves that.

They mention my eyes, my face, but not my chest.

"The sale of movie magazines proves that cheesecake should be left to the girls. Why do you never see men on the covers? Because pictures of women are what sell magazines."

Brasselle, a persistent fellow, cited actors who he feels display sex appeal.

"George Raft can put across sex better than any man in the movies," he claimed. "Not because he displays his chest, but because he is perfectly groomed at all times."

"The same goes for Clark Gable. I think you can go back to his early publicity and find that he never posed for bathing suit art. You may have seen pictures of him hunting and fishing, but never at the beach."

U.S. Government tests show that best quality cotton yarns are made from fibers of unusual strength rather than length and fineness.
