FBI Arrests Eighth Person In Spy Case

LAREDO —(AP) Walter Sobell, 33, a civilian who worked for the Navy, was arrested here this morning on charges of giving defense secrets to Russia.

Shortly after his arrest he was taken to the Webb County jail, where several FBI agents began questioning him closely.

A hearing was scheduled for the U. S. Navy civilian engineer before U. S. Commissioner Frank W. Y. Hill.

Authorities would not immediately reveal details of how Sobell was deported from Mexico and of his arrest at this border city.

Sobell was the eighth person arrested in a roundup of Americans accused of passing atom bomb secrets to a Soviet spy ring.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said that Sobell fled from the United States in June to avoid arrest.

He was arrested at Laredo when deported from Mexico back to this country.

The Justice Department said plans are to arraign Sobell before a U. S. commissioner at Laredo and seek his removal to New York City.

Sobell was employed on restricted work for the U. S. Navy at the General Electric plant at Schenectady, N. Y., from 1942 to 1947.

He is accused of having collaborated with the other Americans previously arrested in obtaining defense secrets during that period.

Since he is charged with espionage conspiracy in wartime, Sobell—like the others similarly accused—faces a possible death penalty.

The FBI said Sobell fled the United States by plane and went to Mexico City a few days after the arrest of David Greenglass of New York on June 16.

Greenglass, a former Army man, was charged with getting A-bomb secrets for the Russians while working at the Los Alamos, N. M., atomic project.

Hoover said that Sobell, recently employed at the Reeves Instrument Company, New York City, failed to show up for work after Greenglass was picked up.

NEGRO TROOPS IN FAR EAST TERMED BEST

BY STAN SWINTON
WITH U. S. 24TH INFANTRY REGIMENT, Korea —(P) This oldest U. S. Negro infantry outfit is fighting probably the best and proudest battle in the history of the American Negro foot soldier.

Men in combat with the Negro 92nd division in Italy and with the 92nd division in the Pacific rate this regiment above both. That does not mean it is the best regiment in Korea. Experts rank it somewhere in the middle.

It covered the 92nd division in Italy as an Army combat correspondent in World War II.

A white colonel who was there said, "The 24th regiment fights better than any Negro outfit in history, including the 92nd."

A Pittsburgh correspondent, Frank Whisman, Detroit, who won a combat commission as a first lieutenant with the 92nd in Italy, said, "This Korean fighting is more bitter than in Italy. We can't count on our men."

The weary men of this regiment have carried with honor the colors that flew through the Indian wars and up San Juan Hill in Cuba.

They have been in line 35 consecutive days. They attacked three times and captured Yecheon in July when towns captured by U. S. Negroes.

Two North Korean Thrusts Repulsed by All-Out Drive

TOKYO, Saturday—(P)—Allied troops, tanks, artillery and air bombs turned two Red Korean thrusts—42,000 men—away from threatened Taegu city Friday.

South of Taegu a crack Red Korean division took what an American general called a "hell of a licking" at the hands of U. S. Marines and infantrymen.

The city itself was turned into a steel-mined fortress by an allied evacuation order sending more than a half million civilians trekking away as refugees.

The South Korean government also was away to establish its new refugee capital somewhere.

The war-swollen populace was removed mainly so it would not get underfoot in military operations and to reduce the possibility of uprisings by infiltrated Communists among the refugees.

A thrust by 30,000 North Koreans was stopped 12 miles north of Taegu by South Koreans.

Then American and South Korean troops lunged at the big Red force by Friday night with a blazing counterattack.

At Changyong, where 12,000 North Koreans had bulged eastward on the allied bank of the Naetong River 25 miles southwest of Taegu, American Marines and doughboys whipped the Communists in a bitter battle. Many Reds retreated back across the river, abandoning their weapons in panic.

Gen. John H. Church, commanding the joint Marine-infantry attack at Changyong, was jubilant over what his troops had done to the Reds.

Two South Korean divisions stalled the 30,000 Communists north of mountain-walled Taegu Friday morning. One of them, the South Korean 1st Infantry, pounced on the Reds in a counterattack immediately Friday afternoon and the U. S. 27th regiment piled into the battle.

The other South Korean division on the same front lost contact with the Reds after helping to stop them. Allied headquarters said the Red force may have turned back north to escape through steep hills under fire.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters, in its first early morning summary in four days, said the South Korean first division had regained half to all the ground it lost north of Taegu Thursday. (This would be one and one-half to three miles.)

The summary said the enemy in the Changyong bridgehead southwest of Taegu was being pushed back steadily by both the First Marine Brigade and the U. S. 24th Infantry division.

It explained the Marines, overcoming extremely stubborn resistance, turned the enemy's southern flank into the path of the 24th division.

The 24th in turn was now heavily engaged with those Reds.

General Church said the Marine-infantry attackers in his sector may have ended the North Korean fourth division's fighting days.

"I think everything has gone very well," said the general.

"He (the enemy) certainly has taken a hell of a licking. That's certain. I don't think that (Red) fourth division will do much fighting for a while.

"What would like to do is destroy that division entirely."

The flight of the escaping North Koreans was reported by Sgt. Benjamin Schofield of Des Moines.

S. forces, withdrawn from the Chinju sector area (solid line) to new positions (dashed line), are alerted for a possible North Korean push toward Pusan. Surplus Sales Halted by U.S.

WASHINGTON —(P)—The government today ordered a "freeze" on the sale of its surplus property.

The reason: all property will be looked at again to see if it is needed for defense.

The freeze order covers war plants and supplies, equipment and material, civilian and military alike, regardless of previous authority for disposal.

Jess Larson who has charge of the disposal of surplus property, said:

"Property declared excess to the needs of any agency must first be screened with all other federal agencies before it can be declared surplus to all needs of the government."

"All property up for disposal at this time has been ordered screened at once. The Department of Defense and other federal agencies were given an opportunity to acquire whatever they needed at the time.

"This order will let them take another look and make another check against their needs in view of the war emergency."

U.S. Tells Europe To 'Work Harder'

WASHINGTON —(P)—Western Europe must work harder for its own military salvation before the United States agrees to send more troops to bolster spirits and security across the Atlantic.

That is the Department of Defense response to insistent French pressure for an American promise to supply a supreme commander and at least five additional divisions for Western Europe defense.

This reply has been given informally, top military officials here said, because France so far has relied upon the press and unofficial conversations to press her request for specific U. S. military commitments.

"We will talk about naming an American commander in chief for Western Europe when he has force to command, not high American officer commented.

He recalled that military leaders of the Atlantic Pact nations are generally agreed about how many divisions, combat ships and planes are needed to stop a Russian onslaught. Offers of ground forces for the common defense have been made, but this official said the total so far falls far short of overall requirements.

American officials believe that Western Europe has little cause to doubt United States sincerity and determination to oppose Communist aggression. They say the whole world can witness the build-up of U. S. military manpower and armaments at a cost of billions of dollars.

"We will fight in Europe if necessary just as we are fighting in Korea," one informed official said, "but we have the right to expect that the Europeans will do their share of the fighting."

American officials in France are known to have been pressing Washington in recent days to give a solid promise to aid Europe with more troops and a supreme commander. These officials are relaying the pressure that is being exerted upon them primarily from French quarters.

Defense officials here fear that a specific American pledge at this time might defeat the whole purpose of the Atlantic Pact.

City's Tax Deadline Leaves 6 Percent Still Uncollected

Called in for the city's 1949 tax year, the city collected $2,205,250. The city collected $2,205,250, or 93.4 percent, leaving $154,150 to be collected. This created a delinquency of 6.56 percent.

In the meantime, the tax office collected the additional $1,756,627. This figure, Jones said, represents only the tax levied amounts, but does not include penalties and interest. The amount of penalties and interest collected on delinquent taxes has not yet been completed. Total collected will be in time for the annual audit that will be presented to the city commission next month, Jones added.

Cab Firm Reported In Full Compliance

City Tax Assessor - Collector Aubrey Jones reported late this morning that all Yellow Cabs have been inspected and passed by his department as complying fully with city ordinance governing operations of taxi companies.

Full identification signs, motor numbers and license numbers were in place on the cabs. Shortly after 10:30 a. m. today the last two Yellow Cabs rolled off the police ramp with an O. K. from them by Jones.

The cab firm's request for renewal of its operating permit had been tabled Tuesday by the city commission on the strength of a report from Jones' office that the cabs did not come up to full compliance with the ordinance that states they must be fully identified as to name of company, car number and permit number painted in four inch letters on each side of the cab. By this morning all missing parts of identification on the cabs were in place and were passed by Jones. However, the city commission still has to O. K. renewal of the company's permit, which it is expected to do at its next meeting.

Hospital Operating On 'Even' Finances

Bruce Parker, county judge, reported to the tax equalization board today at the board's opening session, that although Pampa's Highland General Hospital operated in the red for the first four months, it is now running "even" financially, and has been for two months.

Parker stated before the regular meeting of the board, that the first costs which put the hospital in debt were those which were built up through the purchase of initial equipment and supplies.

The judge explained that a readjustment election has been called for Sept. 9 and the proposals to be voted on will put the general fund in good condition. The county has been drawing upon this fund for the additional money needed in running the hospital.

Parker concluded that Gray County is not asking for higher taxes, but requested some slight changes in the evaluation.

The board will continue to meet this afternoon and tomorrow, and expects to complete all business by Monday.

Record Oil Output Is Authorized by State Commission

AUSTIN —(P)—The largest Texas oil field in history is authorized by the Railroad Commission for September.

The commission's production order issued yesterday will permit an increase of 202,836 barrels daily over current allowable to boost total production to a record-smashing 2,823,729 barrels daily.

The commission estimated 8 percent underproduction and new discovery wells would bring an actual crude oil flow of about 2,500,000 barrels a day next month. That would be a about 100,000 barrels more than the previous all-time set in December, 1948.

An estimated production of 205,644 barrels daily of natural gas, glycol and distillate next month would boost the state's total flow of all petroleum liquids to 3,129,364 barrels a day, the commission said. That is about 150,000 barrels above the previous record.

The increase came by increasing the state generally from 21 producing days to 22 days and raising East Texas from 19 days to 21 days. The five reef fields of the Senary County area (area also returned to the same production formula as the rest of the state. Last month they had been held back because of limited pipeline capacity. A new line was being completed in the area this month.

This record rate of production may possibly exceed pipe line capacity in West Texas and may have to run into storage, but an increase in storage is considered desirable if no serious local problems develop," a commission statement said.

Turkey's Troop Offer Accepted

WASHINGTON —(P)—The United States today accepted Turkey's offer to send a combat force of 4,500 men to Korea.

The State Department in announcing the acceptance said the United States is "deeply grateful" at Turkey's offer.

The Turkish offer is the third to be formally accepted by the United States. Thailand's offer to send 4,000 officers and men was formally accepted earlier. This week as was a Philippine offer to send a regimental combat team of about 5,000 men.

Organized Criminals Entering More Fields Of Legitimate Business, Congress Is Told

By GORDON BROWN
WASHINGTON —(P)—The Senate crime committee told Congress today that organized criminals not only have a strong grip on gambling and related illegal activities but also are fast moving into legitimate business fields.

The committee organized last spring to investigate organized crime, reported on its work thus far—work devoted chiefly to an inquiry into gambling in Florida.

Organized criminals, the committee reported, "are able to compete unfairly with legitimate businessmen because of their accumulations of cash and their vicious methods" which include violence, bribery, corruption and intimidation.

The gangsters have been attracted particularly to enterprises where large amounts of cash are handled or which have black-market potentialities, the committee said. These enterprises include hotels, restaurants, night clubs, meat and provision companies, liquor stores, beer and wine distributors, automobile dealerships and even small steel companies.

Recently transportation companies and public utilities, which have large purchasing programs, have been added to the list, the report said. "They control some banks and are in a position to provide large sums of cash for a number of purposes."

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) heads the investigating committee. Other members are Sen. O'Connor (D-Md.), Hunt (D-Wyo.), Tobey (R-NH) and Wiley (R-Wis.).

In its 10,000-word report, the committee concluded there is convincing evidence that organized groups of criminals have engaged in illegal activities in many parts of the country, are strong and have monopolized certain channels of interstate communication.

But its investigation, it said, "has not yet proceeded far enough to warrant a conclusion as to whether or not the various criminal organizations are knit into one or more nationwide syndicates."

However, it said the methods of operation are "strikingly similar and either by coincidence or design follow a common pattern."

It is clear that there is sufficient cooperation and interrelationship for them "at least occasionally to combine their activities."

The committee recommended that the public be made aware of the basic menace involved in gambling on a widely organized basis because it brings corruption into government.

Committee recommendations also included these:

"The public should be enlightened, stiffer prison sentences should be imposed on racketeers and other criminal cases, income tax laws which now permit racketeers to report high income or disbursement (See CRIMINALS, Page 2)

Canadian Highway Wreck Injures Four

Four Canadian young people were injured, at least one critically, in a head-on collision on a highway from the city last night.

In Hemphill Memorial Hospital, unconscious and suffering from severe head injuries, a broken leg and concussion is Miss Nan Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Matthews.

The car driven by Hodges was in collision with one driven by Gene Cockrell, Canadian, who suffered possible internal injuries.

The injured were brought to hospitals by Stuckey's Funeral Home ambulances and the two youths were later taken by ambulance to Oklahoma City.

Chairman Chavez (D-NM) announced that the group had trimmed the measure from $620,000,000 to $500,000,000.

"The reductions," Chavez told reporters, "were made in view of the changed international situation brought about by the Korean situation and in view of increased military expenditures."

Floridans Told Hurricane Is Heading Away

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Floridans breathed easier today as a severe hurricane changed its course and lumbered northward in the Atlantic.

No part of Florida was on the alert for any portion of the U. S. mainland lessened hourly.

Today the big whirling mass was located by radar plane about 200 miles east of Melbourne, Fla., moving north-northwesterly at about 10 to 12 miles per hour.

A high pressure area was being set up and weather conditions were favorable for the storm to continue in the open sea. Shipping was advised to avoid the area.

The hurricane first of the season and packing winds up to 100 miles per hour toward the center, headed westward toward the Bahamas and Florida yesterday, then turned and moved north-northwestward up the Atlantic.

Highest winds are estimated at 100 miles per hour near the center and extend outward 100 miles, covering an area about 350 miles in diameter.

After standing still for several hours, the storm began moving westward yesterday. Florida was placed on the alert and Nassau, capital of the British Bahamas, was being down in anticipation of the worst blow since 1929.

Ships found safe anchorage and planes were flown to safety. Military planes and air lines planned to evacuate. The Red Cross alerted its disaster workers and stocked storm shelters.

Then the hurricane, born about 100 miles northeast of Puerto Rico last Sunday, veered northward. Danger to any land area apparently had passed.

Marine Corsairs strafed and bombed the Reds as they tried to escape to the west bank of the river. Earlier in the day the Marine pilots had reported attacking Reds in about battalion strength trying to cross.

Advancing Marine infantrymen flushed many North Koreans from hiding places in the bushes and paddy fields.

A spokesman for the U. S. 24th infantry division said the Americans had moved up three miles in 36 hours of fighting and now commanded all the strategic ground in the Nakdong bend six miles below Changnyong.

In a counterattack led by tanks American and South Korea troops lashed out at three Red divisions that were stopped on their move toward Taegu from the north.

Flash of Heat First Effect of U.S. New Hydrogen Bomb

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
NEW YORK (AP) — The hydrogen bomb, if 1000 times more powerful than an A-bomb, is like a July Fourth fireworks piece that shoots more than once.

The first shot is a flash of heat at the speed of light. This shot covers a circle 40 miles in diameter with heat that can be fatal to anyone without shade. In Japan the similar area of fatal flash burns from the A-bomb was less than two miles in diameter, but it accounted for 20 to 30 percent of the deaths.

The 40 mile circle is not the limit of H-bomb flash heat. In Japan the A-bomb flash caused serious skin burns up to 10,000 feet. This means that a thousand-fold greater H-bomb would burn the flash naturally within a circle of 100 miles.

The second shot is blast or concussion. This is a wall of compressed air about 1000 feet thick for the A-bomb, much thicker for the H-bomb. The wall is followed by big winds, blowing out the flash.

This blast starts with the heat flash but travels much slower. The blast will flatten nearly every kind of man-made structure inside a circle 20 miles in diameter.

The circle is not the limit. The H concussion goes ten times farther than the A concussion, and at Nagasaki the barracks collapsed at five miles. Buildings near the barracks were unharmed. This means that in a circle of 100 miles some buildings will topple.

Steel skyscrapers probably would not fall. Their walls would be blown out. Their upper story steel ribs would stand bare and twisted. Other buildings of similar sturdy reinforcement would not collapse, but their interiors would be both blown out and burned.

In canyon streets lower floors would escape direct blast, but reflected blast waves here and there could cause amazing wreckage.

The blast will not push down the surface of the earth. It will not likely break down the roofs of underground shelters. Bridges because of streamlining may stand. The flash would have started tens of thousands of fires.

After the flash and blast comes the fire ball. This is incandescent air. From the bomb the fire ball diameter is nearly a thousand feet, the initial temperature 300,000 degrees, and for ten seconds this ball is mostly hotter than the surface of the sun.

No predictions have been made about the size of the H fireball. It will be bigger, and hotter and last longer.

If—and this is a big if—the fireball size increases at the same rate as the heat flash, then this flaming piece of artificial sun would be 30 times greater.

The H fireball will add to the deaths from burns, and to the fires in the blasted area.

The radioactive dangers are not on the same scale as those of the terrific rates of blast and heat.

Stamford Cops Feed Meters, Let Customers Repay Them

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
Associated Press Staff

Park overtime at Stamford in West Texas, and a policeman comes along and puts a nickel in your meter.

Then he leaves an envelope on your windshield. It asks that you please send the police department a nickel.

And the fine? There isn't any fine!

"What kind of a deal is this?" we asked Police Sergeant J. L. Johnson at Stamford. "What's the catch?"

"No catch," said Johnson. "We're after nickels—not dollars."

He went on to explain: "Last September, parking meters were installed in Stamford. We have 425 of them. We operated them in the usual manner—with parking tickets and fines for overparking. They were not popular with the people. Petitions were circulated for a special vote to have the meters taken out."

"So in February, G. G. Flournoy, who has been police chief here half a century, put his new plan into effect. It was very popular immediately. All we asked was parking meter rent. And when citizens voted on the meters, they voted to keep them."

"We have lots of nice comment on our system. Some people are so pleased that they send a quarter or a dollar instead of a nickel—telling us to just keep the change."

Policeman Jack Tidwell said: "Folks out here—particularly the folks from out over the county—resented parking meter fines. Most had never paid a fine for anything and they figured a parking meter fine branded them as a sort of criminal with their names on record at a police station. They're real pleased with the new system. I hear a lot of good comment."

"So do I," said Policeman C. W. Clement. "Women don't have to stop their shopping to run out to

Survivor of Mass Murder by Korean Reds Tells of Escape

By HAL BOYLE
WITH THE U.S. FIRST CAVALRY, Korea. (AP) — Bodies of 36 American soldier victims of Red battlefield torture killings were recovered today from bloody Hill 303. Their hands and feet were bound with rope, wire and shoestrings.

Three American soldiers who survived the mass execution identified two Red Korean prisoners as having been among the group that bound and executed 32 American mortar men. They tentatively identified a third Red captive as having been in on the slaughter.

Army officials said the accused slayers would be tried as war criminals.

Seven tankmen and the 32 mortar men — 39 in all — were executed by the Korean Reds on the hill before U.S. cavalrymen recaptured it.

Bodies of the seven tankmen were found on the road near their two wrecked machines.

"Their faces were blackened as if gasoline had been thrown on them and set afire," said Pfc. Robert S. Mauro of Revere, Mass., a stretcher Jeep driver.

I talked with one of the two known survivors of the tank crews — Pfc. Ellis R. Barner, a red-haired soldier from Paris, Texas.

For him it was his first combat and only "my second day at the front."

But before the disastrous action, he said, "we got two tanks" hiding in a tunnel at the edge of Waegwan.

Barner told this story of the action in which the two American tanks were knocked out:

"I was in the lead tank. We were shooting for snipers and machine gun nests all the way after leaving Waegwan that afternoon.

"We went up a curve in the mountains at about 8:30 p.m. They had a gun set up on a cart or kind of bicycle wheels. They fired three rounds into us."

"Our platoon leader said 'run over him. He's too close for us to use our 76 millimeter gun on.'"

"We were firing our 30 calibers but they had a shield on the gun."

"They fired a fourth round and knocked our hatch open. I couldn't see anything. We went over the edge of the cliff and the tank fell on its side."

"They pinned us down with sniper fire. Then the other tanks came up to hold the enemy off until we could get out."

"The Reds fired a round with that gismo gun on the cart. It knocked out the engine of our second tank. It rolled over the cliff and hit the rear of our tank."

"We had opened our escape hatch. I got out. As far as I saw I was the only one. Our gunner had a broken arm as we went over the cliff."

"The driver of the other tank was shot trying to get out. He was lying over the lateral.

"Three men got out of the escape hatch underneath the other tank and they dragged up a wounded doughboy who had been firing a 50 caliber on the back of the second tank."

"We crawled them under a culvert in front of them about 100 yards away. We stayed there two hours and then separated. One guy made a run for it and they shot him. Another guy they found in the culvert with their flashlights. He begged them not to kill him. They took off his clothes all except his shorts. Then they kicked him a couple times and hit him with the butt end of his rifle and then they shot him with a burp gun while he was moaning and begging for his life."

"I was lying in a rice paddy outside the culvert next to the gunner of the second tank. It was midnight and our artillery started dropping them in. We decided to get out while the goods were busy digging in."

"We slipped around the mountain and eased our way back through rice paddies to the road. We got to a small town six hours later."

"We're not trying to prove anything," Prunko said. "We're trying to learn something about how people see. Apparently it's something we have to learn. In some ways I've already learned to see as well as, or better than, he did with 'normal' vision."

But it wasn't easy.

First Fred put on his strange, projecting glasses. A light metal headgear supports them and sponge rubber prevents chafing. They make him look like a man who is going blind. People—especially New Yorkers—often murmur sympathetically when they see him.

He couldn't do anything right at first. The food on his dinner plate seemed to be suspended in air, ready to fall in his lap—except that his lap was up where his shoulders should have been. He fell over things. They were on his right when he "saw" them on his left.

"But I learned," Fred said. "I can sort playing cards and get through other laboratory tests just about as fast as I ever could, sometimes faster."

"I've even driven a car for a few miles on a country road in time I suppose I'd forget all about how things used to look."

By now Fred is over the butterflies in the stomach that bothered him for the first few days. Back in Wichita, his wife (they have a four-month-old daughter) is humorously reconciled to his weird appearance and topsy-turvy way of life.

"For the sake of the project," he said, "I'd like to keep on for several months more. But it also will be nice to start living a normal life again back in Wichita."

Assistant Defense Secretary Heaps Praise on Leader

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — (AP) — Paul H. Griffith, assistant secretary of defense, said yesterday that the dollar costs of the Korean fighting would be greater than they are "if we had not, in months past, learned to get the greatest amount of defense for every dollar spent."

Griffith described Secretary of Defense Johnson, who has been criticized by some for his previous economies, as "the most sincere, honest and capable executive that can be found any place in the world."

A strong example of the criticism of Johnson was supplied

Wednesday night by Clyde A. Lewis, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Lewis told a Detroit audience that Johnson "gambled with the security of the United States in the name of vote-getting 'economy' and lost."

However, Griffith said in a speech before the annual convention of the Virginia Department of the American Legion:

"It is safe to say that few Americans, if any, doubt the necessity of military expansion at an accelerated rate, regardless of cost. However, it should be a source of pleasure to the taxpayer that the cost in dollars will not be so great as would be the case if we had not, in months past, learned to get the greatest amount of defense for every dollar spent."

"Indeed if this emergency had arisen not too long ago, many of the dollars which now can be spent for planes and tanks and guns and ships would have gone into useless overhead."

"This situation is not accidental. It was brought about by the earnest work of Secretary of Defense Johnson."

Griffith said he was proud to be associated with Johnson and added:

"His plan from the very beginning of his administration has been to assure peace through strength within the capability of the American economy. He still believes that even in this time of crisis we should not tolerate waste and extravagance."

Griffith said the Korean developments had demonstrated the wisdom of armed forces unification.

He urged that calm judgment not be overcome by hysteria, saying:

"Disunity, ill-considered action, lack of confidence in our government, panic are among the conditions and states of mind Communist propagandists have fruitlessly attempted to establish in this country for the past quarter of a century."

HADACOL Helps Louisiana Child
Suffered Deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin And Iron

Two-year-old Mark Wendell Shuff, Route 1, Box 42, Ville Platte, Louisiana, is on the go from morning till night. His mother thinks it would take a full division staff to keep up with him. He is mighty fond of the family cow, "Jersey," because "Jersey" gives such fine, rich milk. Mark's mother thanks her lucky stars that Mark's little system is able to take the rich milk—it wasn't too long ago that it couldn't—but now, thanks to HADACOL, which gave his system those precious Vitamins B-1, B-2, Iron, and Niacin which it needed. Mark is now able to eat those foods that every growing boy needs.

Here is Mrs. Shuff's statement on how HADACOL helped her son: "Mark Wendell had not been feeling good for some time. A lot of the time he could hold nothing on his stomach. He was very weak and was very pale. Then I started giving him HADACOL. He started improving in just a short time. He has gained weight—and I know he has more energy than a dozen wild indians. It is a full time just watching him now that HADACOL has made him feel better. You can well understand why our family is sold on HADACOL."

Yes, there are thousands and thousands of folks all over the country who are getting blessed relief from wonderful HADACOL when they needed Vitamins B1, B2, Iron, and Niacin.

Suit Charges 14 Film Distributors, 9 Theater Owners

PECOS, Texas. — Fourteen film distributors and nine theater owners have been named in a $62,500 suit filed here by H. Ford Taylor, Ballinger theater owner.

The petition claims that since 1935 the defendants at one time or another have prevented Taylor from obtaining films on a competitive market, forcing him to sell a theater at Brady.

Since coming to Ballinger in 1936, Taylor charged that the defendants, through distribution channels and a theater chain, have deprived him of open market booking and that they conspired to prevent his opening a drive-in theater this year at McGamey.

Corporations listed as defendants are: MGM, Paramount, Warner, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Radio, Columbia, United Artists, United Artists of Texas, Republic, Monogram, Universal, Theater Enterprises, Eagle-Lion and Film Classics.

Agents of the above are listed as D. W. Wahl, James Pritchard, R. A. Higdon and Arthur Bagby, all of Dallas. Individual exhibitors named are L. C. Griffith, Dallas; W. D. Negro, White Groups Unite

LAKE FOREST, ILL. — (AP) — A Negro and a white church council united yesterday in a new Protestant group, the International Council of Community Churches.

The Rev. Dr. J. B. Howe, pastor of the First Community Church of Joplin, Mo., was elected first president.

The merging councils were the Biennial (Negro) Council of Community Churches, headed by the Rev. Joseph M. Evans, of the Metropolitan Community Church, Chicago, and the National (white) Council of Community Churches, headed by Dr. Roy A. Burkhardt, Columbus, O.

Its constitution defines the new council as a fellowship of ecumenically minded Christians working to have a united church now and striving for an eventual united world church.

Dr. Burkhardt said the new council will encourage the founding of community churches in thousands of places that can support only one church.

The national council, established in 1946, embraces 200 churches with white communicants. The 27-year-old biennial council was composed of more than 100 Negro churches.

Tulsa Drains Drama From TL By Thumping Roughnecks 5-3

Sports Round-Up

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton Jr.)

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees are starting to run off and home from the rest of the National League, what club are they going to meet in the World Series?

The hunch here is Cleveland, as it was "way back last spring" when Lou Holtz, relieving in the clubhouse at Tuson, said his athletes had their feet back on the ground and the swelling removed from their heads and were ready to play baseball again.

He pointed out that his Indians still were the "solid" club in the American League, and that was before he knew that Luke Easter was going to be his first baseman and that Flip Rosen was going to get for rookie-of-the-year laurels at third.

So there is no reason to weaken on the Tribe now, even if they are finding it difficult to give those two games off Detroit's lead. Mostly they are veteran stars, especially their pitchers, while the Tigers' lineup is thickly sprinkled with youngsters who have not gone through the crucible of a hot, heart-pounding pennant drive.

That could well prove the payoff when the two clubs meet in the final two games Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at Detroit. With what has been happening the past few years, it is only sensible to assume that the flag still will be up for grabs at that stage.

Most of the Indians went through such a daylight two seasons ago when they were forced to lick the Boston Red Sox in a play-off game at Fenway Park. Such experience can be helpful in the clutch, other talents being approximately equal.

Of the current Tigers, only the veteran pitchers Hal Newhouse and Dizzy Trout were around when the club won the '45 series from the Chicago Cubs. Another hunter, Virgil Trucks, was in the '45 playoffs, but he has been out practically all year with an all-year arm.

There is no intent or desire here to belittle the Tigers and the great race they are making. Red Holke, the old Yankee, grows in stature day by day as he inspects his youngsters to become facts and gets championship pitching from an oldtimer such as Trout.

But if the customers are to be given the winner at this point so they can order their series ticket ahead of the rush, it is necessary to explain just how and why the choice is made. In short, the feeling is that the Indians have more of what it takes to win out in a close one.

Say for the sake of argument that they come down to the final day at Briggs Stadium and it is the Tigers' brilliant young Al Houlihan against the seasoned ace of the Cleveland staff, Bob Lemon. Well, have to take Lemon, with perhaps a couple of home runs thrown in by Rosen and Catcher Jim Hegan.

Prior to the big pair at Detroit, the two clubs will play three at Cleveland Sept. 22-24, 1950.

Tulsa took some of the drama out of the Texas League pennant race last night.

Big Wayne McLean notched his 19th victory as Dallas beat Houston, 3-1, while Oklahoma City beat Shreveport, 5-4, on Buck Frierson's ninth inning home run.

Russ Burns' home run sparked the big outburst by Tulsa in the ninth. Pitcher Jim Avrea singled home two runs.

Fort Worth had a 2-1 lead by the third inning and stretched it the rest of the way.

McLean set Houston down with four hits. Two home runs by Grant Dunlap helped him win.

Tonight the same teams wind up three game series at Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio and Shreveport.

Ladies Clash in Golf Semi-Finals In East Tourney

CHICAGO — A couple of ladies who were unsuccessful finalists in the past two years clashed in one semi-final and two surprising dark horses met in the other today in the 50th women's western amateur golf tournament.

Peggy Kirk, Findlay, Ohio, 1949 runner-up, collided with the current medalist, Polly Riley of Fort Worth, who was the 1948 runner-up.

The other semi-final play at Exton's Country Club matched Mar Murray of Rutland, Vt., and Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Lyle Bowman, Portland, was liquidated by Miss Riley, 2 and 1, in yesterday's storm-soaked quarterfinal.

Miss Murray yesterday eliminated Betty Mac Kistner of Mt. Pleasant, 2 and 1, in the best of the quarter final round.

Of the current Tigers, only the veteran pitchers Hal Newhouse and Dizzy Trout were around when the club won the '45 series from the Chicago Cubs. Another hunter, Virgil Trucks, was in the '45 playoffs, but he has been out practically all year with an all-year arm.

Parker Notches 23rd Win, Oilers Hit Road Tonight

If the Lubbock purchase of Ray Faust and Metz LaFollette isn't going to help them more than it did last night, then the Pampa Oilers should have prompted the deal. The Hubbers bought the two hurlers from Amarillo in preparation for the drive down the pennant stretch, but had both abused last night when the Oilers captured the series finale, 5-2, annexing the series, two games to one.

Faust, righthanded speedballer, was plastered for ten hits in elbowing all the way for the third-place Hubbers, while LaFollette, appearing in the role of a ninth inning pinchhitter, was struck out by the Pampa ace southpaw, Roy Parker.

Parker received credit for last night's victory, his 23rd of the campaign, after being temporarily stuck on win Number 22. It was the fifth attempt for the stocky Pampa chunker after racking up his last victory on August 3.

Faust, then an Amarillo Gold Soxer, was also Parker's mound opponent on that date.

Both twirlers were erratic last night, leaving men stranded on base in every inning except two. The side was retired six times with two potential scorers abandoned on the sacks, and once with the hassocks crumpled.

The Oilers opened with a two run outburst when Jack Wilcox blundered on Dick Dawson's slow grounder. Deck Woldt walked and both runners advanced when Johnny Jeandron laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt. Joe Fortin struck out before Faust intentionally passed Virgil Richardson to load the bases. The strategy backfired, however, when Don Ricketson punched a single over second to score Dawson and Woldt with the first two Oiler runs.

Jimmy Martin fled out to deep rightfield to end the inning.

Parker led off the Oiler fourth inning with a double to right centerfield. Dawson grounded out but Woldt and Jeandron slapped consecutive singles with Parker scoring the third Oiler run on the former's blow.

Jack Sullivan, Lubbock manager, was the only Hubber who managed a hit off Parker for the first five innings, and his was a short single over shortstop. But on the sixth, Don Moore and Mike Dooley cracked successive doubles for the first Hubber run.

Then, in the top of the eighth, after Dooley had grounded out from short to first, Al Carr walked, and Sullivan advanced him to second with a single.

Raymond Mills, replacing Buddy Morrow in the dugout, drove a single into rightfield, a 0-0 tie. Carr, for the last Lubbock tally.

The Oilers scored in the last two runs on singles by Jim Martin, John Jeandron, and Joe Fortin, plus a wild pitch and an error, in the bottom of the eighth.

Leading the Oilers at the plate were Joe Fortin and Jim Martin, each with two hits in four trips. Jackie Sullivan collected two singles in three official tries for the Hubbers.

Tonight, the Oilers open a three day stand against the Clovis Pioneers in Clovis, Mel Kramer is expected to be the starting Pampa hurler, opposing Tom Gallagher for the tall-ent Pioneers.

Leesville Gains in Battle for 3rd Spot

(By The Associated Press)

Leesville pulled to within half game of third place in the Class C Gulf Coast League last night on a ten inning, 4-3, victory over Jacksonville.

The Angels banged out eight hits, while Valle Eaves held the Jax to five.

Port Arthur star a five run fifth inning uprising, to come from behind and nip Galveston, 7-6, for its third straight win. A scheduled doubleheader between Lake Charles and league leading Crowley was postponed because of rain.

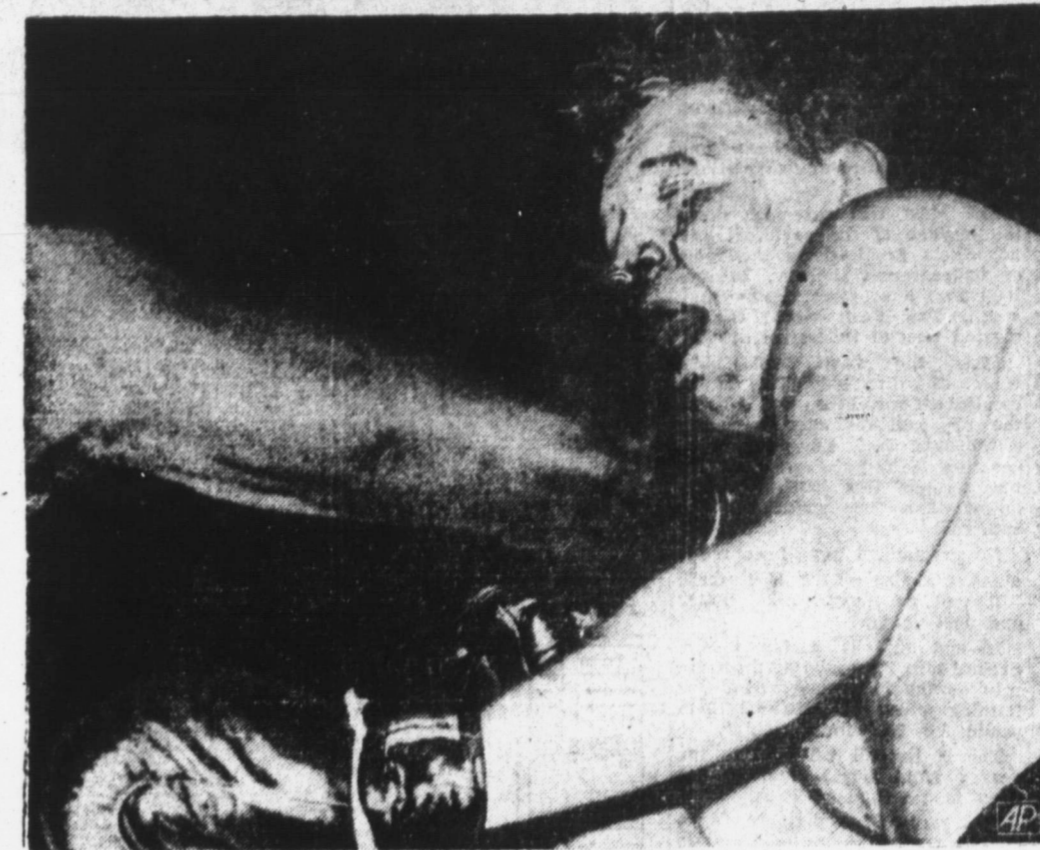

In 1931, Chick Hafey of the Cardinals won the National League batting title with an average of .349, over Bill Terry's .346 and Jim Bottomley's .342.

Vernon Polo Team Is In National Finals

WESTBURY, N. Y. — (AP) — The El Rancho team of Vernon, Texas, will play defending champion Milwaukee Sunday in a semi-final of the national 20-goal polo championships here. The winner will meet Bostwick Field in the finals.

Yesterday the Texans defeated the Hurricanes 9-5.

Folkman Steals Run In Ninth Inning for Albuquerque Win

ALBUQUERQUE — (AP) — Jerry Folkman's daring steal home in the ninth inning broke up an 8-8 ball game last night and gave Albuquerque a 9-8 victory over the last-place Clovis Pioneers.

With the bases loaded, two outs and the score deadlocked, Folkman broke for the plate on a Pat Randall pitch to Don Stanford to tally the winning run.

Duke righthander Don Cantrell gave up only eight hits in racking up his 16th victory of the year and his 10th straight, but Clovis tallied heavily on the meager doling. They scored three times in the third on the same number of hits, three times in the sixth on two bingles and twice in the ninth on a single safety.

Albuquerque, on the other hand, pounded three Pioneer hurles for 16 hits but had 11 men stranded to Clovis' one.

But Nobody Knows

It is natural for Americans to contrast the ferocity with which North Koreans advance to the attack with the rapidity with which the South Koreans abandon their position and retreat to a safer spot. Americans also are puzzled by stories of the immense numbers of the North Korean reserves. Where did all these reserves come from?

Nobody knows where they came from. They are supposed to have come from the hills and valleys of North Korea, but did they? Nobody seems to know. The last fighting men in North Korea must have been called to the colors if that little country supplied all the troops that are now battering at the American line.

But let it not be forgotten that the North Korean army was organized and trained behind an iron curtain. Nobody knows where that army was recruited. It is supposed to have been recruited in North Korea, but it is nobody knows. Who knows that it was not recruited in the heart of China or even in the heart of Russia?

For that matter who knows that those heavy regiments are not veteran regiments from the Russian army who saw protracted service in the war against Hitler? Admittedly that would be a wild supposition. But Russia is a vast country with a vast population. It is a country of many races and tribes and tongues. It might be possible to recruit an army of Asiatics in the heart of Siberia, train it to the point of perfection, convey it to the southern boundary of North Korea and hurl it like a thunderbolt at the raw levies of the south.

Who knows that that is not exactly what has been done? There always is a book that goes on behind that iron curtain. No Westerner knows if Russia has a million veterans of the war with Germany hidden within an easy march of the South Korean frontier.

Of course all of this is wild surmise. But there is that iron curtain. So They Say

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Government reorganization in line with ex-President Herbert Hoover's commission recommendations is about over for this year. President Truman has no more reorganization plans up his sleeve to send to Congress for consideration within 60 days, or so, he says. Some 20 odd reorganization bills are before the Senate and House, and half-a-dozen minor ones have slight chance of passage this session.

There is a general feeling that federal government ought to be reorganized reduced in size, made more efficient. Few people who are not experts on government have any real idea of what's involved, or how little has really been done in spite of all the belly-boo for reform.

Adding up all the reorganization moves achieved in the past year and a half, since the Hoover reports came out, it's still impossible for the naked eye to observe what difference has been made. As for the natural questions of how much money has been saved, nobody can give any accurate answer. But it's said more efficiently, "he said."

A score card shows that President Truman submitted 34 reorganization plans to Congress. One of them — on Treasury — went up twice because the first version wasn't acceptable to Congress. In all, eight plans were vetoed by Congress and 26 were approved. The eight plans Congress killed covered Department of Agriculture, Interstate Commerce Commission, National Labor Relations Board, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Security Agency, creation of a Department of Social Security, transfer of Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Commerce Department and reorganization of the Office of Comptroller of the Currency.

The 26 plans approved cover most of the other Departments of Government. State, Defense, Justice, Commerce, Interior and Labor. Also reorganized were a number of independent regulatory agencies like Maritime, Federal Trade, Securities and Exchange Commission. One thing to which it is impossible to get any accurate answer is just how many of the Hoover recommendations have now been adopted.

When President Truman sent up his biggest batch of reorganization plans last March he said, "When these 21 plans are effective, we shall have acted on almost half of the Hoover proposals."

When the voluminous Hoover report was issued, one to the listed 331 recommendations for reorganization in government. It was said that 127 of them would require legislation, 122 could be achieved by administrative action, 82 by reorganization plans.

Fair Enough - Pegler

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

MANCHESTER, Vt. — I have read the first installment of the strictly objective, impartial "survey" of communism in the Green Mountains published in the Rutland Herald, which, in common with the rest of Vermont journalism, was caught flatfooted by the exposure that followed the Lattimore case in the Senate.

The Rutland Herald and the White River Valley Herald, which circulate in the area of the principal Communist infestation, immediately took a defensive attitude. They defended the fair renown of Vermont against the fact that had engaged their professional notice. And by implication they defended themselves for having underestimated the Communist activity in their state.

The Rutland Herald's survey is written by William Gilman, deputy editor of the paper for 20 years. The experience including service with the U. P. and the New York Times in China. This would indicate nothing politically.

It is further stated that Mr. Gilman wrote a book about Alaska, which was commended by Dr. Ernest Gruening, the governor. Doctor Gruening was an appointee of Harold Ickes, whose attitude toward Communists has been broadminded. Doctor Gruening's approval is not necessarily a guarantee. A reporter might be a little hard up for honors in citing this indorsement, but inasmuch as Mr. Gilman has laid that one on the line these further facts are pertinent:

The White River Valley Herald reported that Mrs. Viljalmina Steffanson, the wife of the Arctic explorer, said that about one year ago Ordway Southard, whom Senator Joe McCarthy labeled a Communist, was granted permission to study in the Rutland Herald's private books about the Arctic region. Mrs. Steffanson said Southard was an anthropologist who had studied at the University of Alaska. The White River Herald reported that Mr. McCarthy charged that Southard was a Communist candidate for office and that he attended Harvard and graduated from the University of Alaska, "where he majored in anthropology and archeology."

Alaska is an extremely vulnerable area. Communist propagandists have dined awfully long proposition that Alaska is actually still Russian territory because the czar who sold it to the United States had no authority to pass a valid title.

Of course all of this is wild surmise. But there is that iron curtain. So They Say

On Up-American Activities but has not been identified as a Communist. Lattimore has been charged with being a Soviet spy by Senator McCarthy speaking on the Senate floor and in committee. He took cognizance of this charge to the extent of a book of denial which, naturally, has received priceless free advertising from the New York Herald Tribune and New York Times. The public is asked to believe that it was by mere coincidence that Lattimore obtained half-interest in the Vermont property from Stefansson, with his record, and sold it to Southard, of all people, with his record.

Mr. Gilman, the great authority on Alaska as "Our Hidden Front," made no reference to these interesting factors in his opening essay. The article minimizes the whole situation with humor which attempts to ridicule exposures and those who make them.

Mr. Gilman reports that he discovered only a hot-bed of damaging gossip and rumor. "The scare has reached the point where some wondered whether if they dared attend Bethel's barbecue where several hundred gather to eat Angus beef because suspects might be present and that might be guilt by association," he wrote. "Or talk of the man wondering if he should bale hay for a neighbor whose wife took her child to the Randolph playground where suspects also bring their children."

These droll sallies are a commentary on the Rutland Herald's estimate of the intelligence of the shrewd Vermont Yankee. The shrewd Vermont Yankee is supposed to believe that they dispose of the coincidences here set forth and other information of equal force.

Bid For A Smile

The store had been in the Jones family for generations, so when a notice "Under New Management" appeared in the window the villagers awaited curiously the coming of the new proprietor. Days passed, and Jones still was behind the counter and the notice still prominently displayed. Then one bold spirit asked him when the new people were coming in.

Jones—What new people? Management? In the window. Customer—You've got "Under New Jones-Oh, that? Didn't you know I got married? —

Big Boss—Did you deliver that message to Mr. Dunn? Office Boy—Nope, he wasn't in. Big Boss—Why didn't you wait for him, as I told you? Office Boy—Well, the door was locked, and the sign on it said: "Return, immediately," so I beat it back as fast as I could.

The man who knows it all had his little boy to the circus. In the menagerie tent he pointed to the chimpanzee and said: Dad—that, my son, is a gorilla. When he reached the lion he called it an Angora goat and when he came to a yak he called it the sacred cow of India.

Angora Man—We have them guys in here every day. In one town a guy who bought a program wanted me to tell him in which cage he could find the synopsis. —

The actor was in trouble about the role the landlord called existing precedent. "Look here, you ought to be glad to have a man like me in your house. In a year or two people will be coming to it and saying: 'Jones the actor, used to live there.'"

Landlord—Mister, if you don't pay up, people will be peating tomorrow. —

Reporter—I've got a perfect news story. City Editor—The man bite the dog? Reporter—Now, a bull threw a congressman. —

One estimate made by Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the Citizens Committee, is that the 26 plans so far adopted cover 35 to 40 percent of the Hoover recommendations, and will achieve savings of $1,250,000,000 a year.

As for reorganization legislation, only ten public laws seem to have been enacted to date. Two covered Civil Service classification and revised pay rates, and went up twice because the first version wasn't acceptable to Congress. In all, eight plans were vetoed by Congress and 26 were approved.

The eight plans Congress killed covered Department of Agriculture, Interstate Commerce Commission, National Labor Relations Board, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Security Agency, creation of a Department of Social Security, transfer of Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Commerce Department and reorganization of the Office of Comptroller of the Currency.

Before the Dishes Are Done

By BETTY KNOWLES HUNT

EASY ON ENEMIES?

In the July 18th issue of the magazine, "The Reporter," Sid Lens explains, in an article called "An Easy Way With Reds," how the "sensible" British handle their Communist "democratic tolerance."

The theme of Mr. Lens' article is that it all works out fine—and keeps British Communists "out in the open" where they are "easy targets." He writes: "Startling exposures such as that of Senator McCarthy, would create no sensation in Britain. Nor would membership in a subversive or 'front' organization cause a worker to lose his job, either in government or industry."

Some British employers have tried to make their employees sign non-Communist affidavits, but they have been "properly and publicly spanked." Most unions accept Communists as members and even officers, but even those unions who don't "would fight vigorously against any private employer who tried to discharge a Communist just because of his politics."

It would seem to me that more than mere "politics" is involved here. As J. Edgar Hoover has said over and over again, the Communist party is not a political party at all, but an enemy fifth-column in our midst, loyal to Soviet Russia, and dedicated to our own destruction! Maybe I am blind, but I simply cannot see any reason under heaven why a private employer should not have the right to fire any known Communist on his payroll, as potential saboteurs and spies.

Recently Mr. Hoover told Congress that there are 50,000 known Communists in this country, plus ten times that many fellow-travelers, and that most of them hold jobs in basic industries. Labor columnist, Victor Reisel, has also hammered away on this point, and detailed figures on the vital plants in the north-eastern section of New England, New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia.

Men from these regions have told Mr. Truman that he is still strong with labor, racial and liberal groups, and they believe that they can squeeze through if he will exert himself to bring about a large vote.

Mr. Truman's aides, however, explain that there are many obstacles to a presidential stamping tour. They positively refuse to let him do any politicking unless American forces in Korea have begun to rout the invaders. It is doubtful if that will happen before November.

PLEDGES — Nor can the president, as he did in 1948, again reassure the people that Democratic retention of House and Senate will see the fulfillment of his numerous "social welfare" pledges.

For one thing, it is likely that the next Congress will be more liberal than the 80th and 81st sessions. It certainly will not vote for costly peacetime projects in the face of annual budgets ranging from fifty to sixty billion dollars.

Not. Although they do not bluntly inform the party leaders to this effect, not a single M.C. wants Secretaries, Acheson or Johnson to show up in their backyards. Nor are there any other Cabinet members whose presence in records are impressive enough to bring out voters in a delirious, Democratic mood. That is why they want the head man in person.

DEWEY — Although members of the New York Republican delegation in the House are recorded to Governor Thomas E. Dewey's refusal to seek reelection to his present post, they are still trying to persuade him to take a place on the November ticket. They would like him to run for the U. S. Senate.

Under this plan, Senator Irving M. Ives would be named for the governorship, assuming that both Mr. Dewey and he agree to the swap. The senatorial assignment would not make such demands on Mr. Dewey's health, which is one reason why he wants no more of Albany. It would also permit him to engage in part-time law practice, thus recouping his fortunes.

HANLEY — The fact is that numerous House GOP-ers figure Lieutenant Governor Joseph B. Hanley to be a weak candidate for the executive office. Although he is an unknown to downstate voters, an Ives-Hanley slate would be tonehappy geographically, as both hail from outside the metropolitan area.

The political advance another argument against the Hanley candidacy, namely, his age. He is seventy-four, and even if he should win, he might be considered too old to warrant a re-nomination four years hence.

In fact, several ambitious young Republicans seek the lieutenant-governorship nomination on a Hanley-headed ticket figuring that they might get the nod for the top job in 1956.

DONOVAN — Of course, the ideal ticket from a Republican standpoint would be Col. William J. Donovan for governor and Mr. Dewey for senator, or vice versa. Col. Donovan's record in war and diplomacy, as well as his religion (he is a Catholic) seems to commend him. And both would be Cabinet material if a Republican should win the White House in 1952.

An amusing factor in this belated pre-convention scheming is the lack of consideration given to Mr. Hanley's wishes. In view of his great expectations since Mr. Dewey announced his retirement, he and his friends would

WASHINGTON — President Truman has been heartened during these difficult days by the steady flow of congressional delegations from Capitol Hill, begging him to appear and speak in their districts and states in the fall campaign. Their petitions for help from the top convince him that he is still popular with the masses.

The requests, for some strange reason, have been particularly insistent from members representing urban centers in the north-eastern section of New England, New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia.

Men from these regions have told Mr. Truman that he is still strong with labor, racial and liberal groups, and they believe that they can squeeze through if he will exert himself to bring about a large vote.

In fact, several ambitious young Republicans seek the lieutenant-governorship nomination on a Hanley-headed ticket figuring that they might get the nod for the top job in 1956.

DONOVAN — Of course, the ideal ticket from a Republican standpoint would be Col. William J. Donovan for governor and Mr. Dewey for senator, or vice versa. Col. Donovan's record in war and diplomacy, as well as his religion (he is a Catholic) seems to commend him. And both would be Cabinet material if a Republican should win the White House in 1952.

An amusing factor in this belated pre-convention scheming is the lack of consideration given to Mr. Hanley's wishes. In view of his great expectations since Mr. Dewey announced his retirement, he and his friends would

LOOKING AHEAD

By GEORGE S. BROWN

PROBLEM OF SURVIVAL. It seems clear now that our federal government must make war-scale military expenditures for an indefinite period. Regardless of the duration of the Korean conflict, it already has demonstrated that neither our present nor our previously planned military strength would be sufficient in an all out showdown with the sprawling Communist war machine. Our government must therefore spend heavily, at least during the next several years, to build up the fighting strength of the armed services.

The new spending for actual war, piled on top of the already huge "cold war" outlays and the other staggeringly expensive federal government services which have mushroomed in the past 20 years, creates a whole new series of national problems and dangers. In war time or in any prolonged preparation for war, a danger that can be equal to that of war itself is the abnormal growth of government in size and power and cost.

AN HISTORIC DANGER. Power once conferred upon an individual is seldom voluntarily given up. The same truth applies in government, only more so. History confirms this. Many of our federal government's controls, taxes and spending programs, adopted as emergency measures prior to and during the last war still are in force—five years after the end of the war (for instance, travel and communications taxes). Our free enterprise economy has survived this burden but not without injury; and any new controls and burdensome taxes that might be extended over a long period could very well fatally cripple our system.

Another danger about which our people need to be alerted is the intensification of the undercover work of those movements seeking to scrap our capitalistic enterprise system. Probably the greatest menace created by the 50,000 American Communists and fellow travelers will be in their Fifth Column work fomenting strikes in vital industries, otherwise sabotaging war production, and agitating for disunity. The menace of the disguised Socialists, or Planned Economy advocates, will not be so easily recognized, and that fact makes their movement the more dangerous.

We now know that the British Socialists did their decisive work in England while opponents of Socialism were preoccupied with the war. To a few Fabian strategists and a few alert observers who had watched the infiltration of the slyly disguised Socialist propaganda into all British thought, the sudden rise to power of the Fabian's Labor-Socialist Party at the end of the war was no surprise. To almost everyone else, in England and America, it was.

If our economy should become critically strained because of the terrific burden of this new war effort following so closely upon the sapping cost of the last one, our capitalist system might be able to promise only "blood, sweat and tears"—something like the sacrifices, hard work and heart-breaks experienced by our forefathers who established freedom in America. The disguised American Socialists would step forward then, as they did in England, with their rainbow of promises—"the good life, jobs for all, security for all from cradle to grave, fair shares"—all provided by the "Welfare Government."

Therefore the health of our national financial structure—our economy—is of paramount importance. Even the wisest and most management of the government's fiscal affairs will be fraught with constant dangers. Ca Omar Bradley, chairman of

The Chipmunk Who Found Full Security

(Reprinted from The Orange Disc, Magazine of the Gulf Company.)

Once upon a time a young chipmunk named Everett was a graduated from college and came home to visit his father, an elderly gentleman who lived under an oak log near Covington, Ky.

The first night he was home, Everett swaggered down the tunnel into the burrow dining room and helped himself to a big meal of his father's choice of seeds. Then he selected one of his father's best cigars, as full inch long and all Havana.

"It's nice to have you home again, son," Mr. Chipmunk said. "Yep," said Everett. "Must be," said Mr. Chipmunk, "I suppose you'll soon be leaving to look for a job."

Everett flicked his cigar ash onto the rug. "Not a chance, Pop. Definitely not a chance. The fact is, I don't like the whole economic system today."

Mr. Chipmunk twitched a whisker ever so slightly. "What's the matter with it, son?" "No security," Everett chirped. "The way I see it, the state ought to take over. Give you a job, give you a snug warm place to live, give you plenty of seeds to eat, give you free medical care, give you free clothes, give you —"

Mr. Chipmunk gently raised a protesting paw. "Now, just a minute, son. I'm proud of the American system. I lived by it all my life. I've worked hard, managed to save a few seeds every year, and we've not done too badly. The mortgage on our log is fully paid up. I was able to send you through high school and Chipmunk Aggies. And in a year or two, I think I can retire."

Everett grimaced at him. "Wise old, Pop! Wise up! Why beat your brains out? If the state'll give you everything, what's the sense of scurrying all over the forest trying to earn a buck?" Mr. Chipmunk's tail snapped irritably. "Now listen, son. In the first place, stop calling me Pop. In the second place, you'd find that if you got complete security you'd lose your freedom. If the state were to give you everything, it would control everything. Control your body and soul. I don't believe you'd like that."

Everett burst out laughing. "Slow it, old timer, slow it. You just haven't got the word yet, that's all. But you'll learn." He whacked his father a jovial blow across the stripes. "Say, sport, how about lending me the car

The Doctor Says

WRITTEN FOR NEA BY EDWIN J. JORDAN, M.D.

Far more people suffer ill effects from being overweight than from being underweight. However, it is astonishing how many people inquire about how they can add to their poundage. Although some are naturally skinny, they would usually improve health-wise if they could bring themselves up to normal weight.

The human body operates like a machine for which the food is fuel which is converted into energy and used up in physical and mental activity. There are, therefore, two ways to gain weight: one to cut down on the activity output and the other to increase the food taken in. Less exercise and more rest reduce the output and must be considered by the person who wants to gain. From the practical view, it is usually easier to gain by increasing the fuel, or food, intake at the same time holding the output or exercise down to what it was.

The fuel intake can be increased in several ways. One of them is to choose the foods which have the highest energy or calorie value since these will do the most weight as well as into work. The starches or carbohydrates and fats supply more energy and have more effect on weight gain than proteins do.

DIET BALANCE IMPORTANT. When trying to gain weight one should include fatter meat, more margarine or butter, more cream, more sweets, more potatoes, more bread, cereals and other high calorie-containing foods. Balance must be maintained in the diet however. It is not wise to cut out entirely the fruits, vegetables, meat, milk and eggs which supply substances which help to maintain good health.

Another thing which can be done besides choosing the right diet is to eat more at each meal. The amount one eats is largely a matter of habit and this can be changed like any other custom. The stomach can be trained to hold more by gradually increasing the amount taken at each meal. One good way to do this is to eat until the appetite is satisfied and then always take a few more mouthfuls. After a while the appetite becomes better and the stomach holds more before it gets that full feeling.

More food can be taken also just by eating extra meals. A small mid-morning meal, an afternoon or bedtime snack of weight-gaining foods are helpful. A glass of half milk and half cream is a good example of what could be taken. It cannot be emphasized too often that a balanced diet must be kept up. Almost anyone who does not have a real disease can gain weight by following the plan of decreasing, or at least not increasing, activity and increasing the food eaten. Even those who claim that they just can't gain no matter what they eat can usually add weight if they know what to do and keep it it.

Dr. Jordan will answer questions from his readers in a special column once a week. Watch for it, recognize these dangers when he observed there was a limit on what a nation could spend "without imperiling its economic survival."

And so to sum up: The nearer we come to balancing all government budgets, federal, state and local, whatever the cost in temporary sacrifices, the less will be the inflationary pressure and the more certain we can be of economic survival. And above all else, each citizen should serve as a committee of one to expose the disguised Socialists at work and to keep the public everlastingly aware of the value of individual freedom—so we won't lose it at the end of the war emergency like England did.

In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—LIVES WITHOUT POPCORN:

Temperament is popping on the set of "Pagan Love Song."

You can give a stubborn mackerel a suspension, but you can't make him wag his tail and look frisky when Esther Williams dives into his brothers and sisters.

Hundreds of tropical fish are giving the studio a bad time in Esther's ocean-sized swimming tank. The finny actors are in a plexiglass aquarium and they're supposed to register happiness when Esther swims behind them.

Maybe the fish haven't heard that Esther is one of the 10 top box-office stars and that she's considered quite a dish by non-gill breathers. Anyway, the guppy Barrymores react as if Esther had ideas for a fish chowder supper when she swims by them.

A diver is sent down into the drink to hammer at the tank and disperse them, but his knock-knock only sends the fish into another corner. Esther is weary, and the director is discouraged and the crew is wishing aloud that Lassi could double as a worm-gulper when I leave the set.

John Dall, Jane Wyatt and Lee J. Cobb are the stars of "The Gun" on the General Service lot. It's Jane's first screen try as a sexy trouble-maker after a series of wholesome girl roles and there are more than the usual quota of set-papers around to see Jane go bad.

Director Felix Feist rehearses Lisa Howard in a scene with Dall. "Turn to the right, cutie, watch the white line, cutie," he shouts. Nobody bats an eyelash. It's perfectly all right for Feist to call Lisa "cutie." She's his wife in private life.

The script calls for Lisa to dash into the kitchen and inform Dall that there are no eggs in the ice-box. Lisa, I decide, must have X-ray eyes. She doesn't even open the ice-box.

HORSES MUST LISTEN
Rod Cameron and Pedro de Cordoba are before the cameras at Republic in a highly dramatic scene for "The Black Hills." The script calls for de Cordoba, as an Indian chief, to offer Rod freedom for the whites defending a frontier fort. It's a long speech and director Joe Kane halts the action to confer with the stunt wranglers about the set of the horses on which Rod and de Cordoba are mounted.

Clumps of grass are waved in front of the animals by men hidden from the camera as the action proceeds. The horses' ears stand at attention. It would never do for the Triggers and Champions to show floppy ears during de Cordoba's speech. The audience might get ideas.

Dick Powell and Rhonda Fleming are putting one over on the censors on the "Cry Danger" set. The scene is the interior of Rhonda's trailer and the couch that she and Dick are sitting on is her bed. As long as the covers aren't turned down and the pillows plumped for 40 winks, the censors don't care.

The sequence is important to the continuity, so Dick and Rhonda repeat their lines over and over, and sip real coffee. The final tally when the director shouts "print it" is five quarts of caffeine soup. Dick and Rhonda are groggy. That's a lot of coffee for a scene that will be a half-minute flash on the screen.

Marjorie Main and Jesse Whitmore are playing a train scene on the same studio's "Mrs. O'Malley and Mr. Malone" set. While a union man jiggles a long plank that rocks the set, Marjorie walks into a compartment and discovers a corpse. Douglas Fowley, the teeth-chatterer in "Battleground," is the rickety mortis boy.

The makeup man swabs chocolate syrup for blood on Fowler's undershirt—all screen cadavers smell like the ice cream fountain at your local drug store—and Marjorie and Whitmore argue about the murderer.

Van Johnson and Kathryn Grayson are working in a night club scene for "Grounds for Marriage." As the play-back machine pipes a hot jazz number played by the Firehouse Five Plus Two onto the set, Van beats out the rhythm and snaps his fingers. He's a Charleston bug in real life, so the sequence is pie-easy for him. The director shouts "Cut," but Van goes on knocking himself out. Kathryn and other actors wait until he's off the Charleston jag. Then everybody goes back to work.

There's a big sangebursner, "Beyond the Sunset," with Glenn Ford and Edmund O'Brien, at Paramount.

No fancy buckles, hats and holsters for Glenn and Eddie. They wear dark trousers, plain shirts and string ties.

"It's '39 Steps' on horseback," Eddie flips.

Yank in Korea Feels Closer To Home When Night Falls

By HAL BOYLE

KOREA — (AP) — There are night times here that make American soldiers feel closer to home.

Many have told me so. To those holding outposts the darkness has the terror of the unfamiliar. But the night in any war tugs with uneasy fear the belly of one on guard. He can't see what may be coming toward him and he wonders if his cry of "halt!" will be followed by a bullet.

But most soldiers aren't on guard at night in an army or there wouldn't be enough to keep awake to fight at daybreak.

And many of those who are duty-free to go to sleep stay awake and look up at the night and they feel closer to home.

For the cooling air takes away the humid heat of day and cloaks the sense of unfamiliar for those in bivouacs without fear. They might be breathing the night air of home — the town where they were born — if they have any imagination and most everyone here has imagination to wish he were again at home, as men do in wartime.

And as they think of home they compare the nights there and the nights here without malice. They can't see the rice paddies or the oxen or the Japanese-style rooftops or all the hundred and one other things strange to them.

The Korean land comes into its own — and it is beautiful as most lands are at night under a climbing moon.

The lonesome soldier hears the family sounds from a nearby Korean home — the rugged sores, the soft padding steps of a mother getting up to see that her baby is all right. And he says to himself:

"That's the way my folks sound at home."

And many and many a soldier in this old and young army has a family of his own to think of — a child crying in nameless panic at the lack of light, a wife getting up to say the world still laps it in love.

The hills have a splendor of their own here under the etching power of the moon and a sky of midnight blue that brings Heaven almost within reach of believing hands.

"I never noticed there were so many stars before," said one soldier touched with awe.

Texas Republicans Whoop It Up, Say Party Will Carry State in Presidential Election

By MARTHA COLE

GALVESTON — (AP) — The word should have spread to the hinterlands by now that Texas Republicans expect to rise again and carry the state in '52.

That's nationally — for president. It's been a week now since the "Grand Old Party" closed its state convention here on that crescendo of optimism.

Col. R. B. Creager of Brownsville, the grand old man of the Grand Old Party in Texas, declared: "I think there is a definite possibility of Texas going Republican in '52. I say that because of the split in the Democratic party. In my honest opinion the majority of the Texas Democrats do not agree with the present administration."

Creager has been the Republican national committeeman from Texas since 1922 and in the past few years has presided over the national committee as their dean. He's 73 years old now, and there's a stoop in his back that used to be straight as a ramrod. He has white hair and a red complexion aggravated by a recent illness.

"But for the poor aim of old Fateac Time with his scythe, I wouldn't be here today," he said.

Creager sat quietly at the speakers' table during the state executive committee meeting Monday, Aug. 7, and the state convention the next day in the ballroom of the Buccaneer Hotel.

He didn't do much talking, but one of his best workers, Eugene Nolte of San Antonio, was in the midst of everything that went on. And one of his favorite sons, Henry Zweifel of Fort Worth, was re-elected chairman of the state executive committee.

The Republicans had only about 300 or 350 persons at their convention, so they didn't have the numbers that the Democrats have for all the whoopla and shouting of a state Democratic convention.

But they had the same smoke-filled hotel rooms, hasty corridors conferences and convention floor bickering.

One convention-wise reporter remarked that the Democrats had more disputes, but the Republicans took longer to settle theirs.

The dispute at the GOP state convention — over seating of two Galveston County delegations — went on for five hours in a courtroom manner before the state executive committee as jurors.

The complainants were a group of Texas City Republicans, most of them Yankee Republicans who have moved to Texas recently, who charged that they had been barred from the county convention at Galveston by an armed policeman at the door. They held their own rump session on the lawn.

The conferences went on during the noon recess; the dispute waged again for an hour after noon when Nolte asked for a recess while they worked on a compromise. They came in 20 minutes, started up for a few minutes, then hastily called another recess.

Little groups stood in the outside corridor whispering furiously until finally they call came back with a compromise.

The nominating committee had troubles of a different sort. The 31 members — one from each state senatorial district — met in a private dining room and tried to find candidates while the convention marked time in the nearby ballroom.

They used the "how about" system. Convention secretary Charles Watson of Brownsville would call a state office — say land commissioner.

state filled and took it back to the convention for approval. The young Republicans were the ones that raised the roof. They started their convention the morning of Aug. 8 and ran far into the night. Some of them admitted they were too young to vote — the age limits on the Young Republican Federation of Texas are 18 to 35 — and a few of them had their mothers with them. They brought out New Year's eve horns, paper streamers and confetti when they started making campaign speeches for their candidates. Time was when no love was lost between the Young Republicans and their elders. This was the first time the Young Republicans had held a state convention since 1940. All of their officers were introduced at the regular convention the next day and were cheered.

Jesus' Tribute to John the Baptist

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. If there were any doubt concerning the greatness of John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus, that was settled for all time by Jesus' tribute to John. His words were clear, decisive, and in the very height of praise. "Among those that are born of women," said Jesus, "there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist." It is as if Jesus was answering the thoughts of those who did not think so highly of John—those who judged by outward appearances and failed to see anything great or prophetic in an ill-clad ascetic preaching a stern gospel of repentance. "What went ye out for to see?" said Jesus. "A reed shaken with the wind? A man clothed in soft raiment? Mocking their thoughts. He continued, "Behold, they which are gorgeously appareled and live delicately, are in kings' courts." It is always necessary to remember that greatness in men, and truth in religion, are not always associated with outward forms and trappings, no matter how gorgeous they may be. In my boyhood I used to hear itinerant Canadian Methodist ministers sing a hymn descriptive of themselves: "No foot of land do I possess, No cottage in the wilderness, A poor wayfaring man, That is not necessarily characteristic of the true preacher and prophet. The laborer is worthy of his hire. But in so far as it represented a self-denial and devotion in voluntary service, there was something noble about it; just as there is something ignoble about a professed servant of God being too engrossed with worldly ambitions. Suppose a figure like John appeared in modern society. Remember, he was rough and ill-clad, ascetic in manner and habit. If he denounced the sins of our time, and asked men to repent; how would he be received? Would he be called a prophet, or a crank? The question is provocative, but turn from it to the remarkable saying of Jesus, that followed his tribute to John as the greatest of those born of women; Jesus said, "But he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." What did Jesus mean by these words? I think the usual interpretation is that Jesus was stressing the nature of the dispensation of the gospel, the dispensation of love, as greater than the dispensation of law; the New Testament, or Covenant, as built upon the Old. It was a dispensation of love, a fulfillment rather than a denial of the law. I think the meaning may be brought out more clearly, if we compare Jesus with John. Jesus made the comparison Himself. He spoke of Himself as coming "eating and drinking." He was not an ascetic. He came to give men life, and to give it more abundantly. Repentance is good, only as it is the gateway to constructive living. Expression, not repression, is the dominant note in the true citizen of the kingdom of God, the kingdom which John said was "at hand," and which Jesus said is "within you."

DR. G. GORDON BAYLESS, evangelist and former pastor of First Baptist Church of Pampa, will conduct a revival meeting August 20 to Sept. 3. Business and Bible Study for Baptist Circles

Bible study in Psalms was continued by Women's Missionary Circles of the First Baptist Church when they met in homes Wednesday. Members of the Lillie Hundley Circle held a breakfast meeting in the home of Mrs. W. R. Bell. After breakfast the women had a business session and Bible study. A song by the group and prayer by Mrs. L. H. Musgraves opened the meeting. Mrs. H. C. Wilkie led the Bible study with each member taking part in the discussion. In closing a prayer was offered by Mrs. D. W. Slaton. Attending were six members and one guest, Miss Blanche Musgraves. Members of the Geneva Wilson Circle met with Mrs. T. V. Lane, who also opened the meeting with prayer. During the business meeting, which was conducted by Mrs. O. A. Davis, members voted to hold meetings at 9:30 a.m. during the remainder of August. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 20. The Golden Text is: "Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding" (Daniel 2:20, 21). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "When we fully understand our relation to the Divine, we can have no other Mind but His—no other Love, wisdom, or Truth, no other sense of Life, and no consciousness of the existence of matter or error" (page 20). Grace Friend

Dear Mrs. Friend: After reading the B.M. letter in your column I realize that there are a few who have the same problem as I have except in a slightly different vein. I am 20, a senior in college and home for the summer. I have found that there are few things to go in a small town when a girl doesn't have a fellow to do them with. During previous summers I have been kept busy by other things but this summer, with college friends scattered here and there I have suddenly realized that the fellows I used to know aren't around much any more. It seems that the kids who I have met through church groups, etc., are high school age or all settled down and married. The fellows that are out to have a big party are not the kind I want, either. To get to the point, I would give anything to have a fellow to play tennis with; to go square dancing with; who likes good music and sports; is tall and between 20 and 30. I don't have romance in mind at all, I just want to have someone to do things with during the rest of the summer. There must be some way to get to meet fellows like this but, believe me, I can't figure it out. I would greatly appreciate your suggestions. Dee

Dear Dee: I remember a fairy story I read when I was a little girl in which the heroine searched frantically for the magic talisman and couldn't find it anywhere. Then she gave up and devoted herself to other pursuits and suddenly found the object for which she was searching right before her. Of course the moral was that you don't need to go elsewhere to find happiness but that it will come to you wherever you are once you stop thinking about yourself and devote your time to useful activities. The same lesson might apply to you. Don't be so determined to find the man of your dreams and you

The Future of a Duckling

How carefully Nature prepares her little ones for life! Three little ducklings; all three have webbed feet that will propel them through the water, fuzzy down that will turn into the best water-proofing Nature can fashion, strong flat bills that will snap food from the water quicker than you can say "Donald Duck."

Nature prepares her little ones for life—except in the case of man.

Consider that youngster who is fascinated by the ducklings. MAYBE he'll gain a clear understanding of right and wrong. MAYBE he'll find courage to meet life's many discouragements. MAYBE he'll discover the Faith that enables a man to build spiritual values into his life.

Those things a child needs most, Nature does not provide. Parents must provide them—by giving him the advantage of thorough religious training in the Church.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

George's Trump Gift Is Key to Victory

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

"I'm an easy fellow to get along with," said George. "I didn't come here to kill anybody, and I'm willing to give up a trick now and then."

"Don't think you're fooling anybody," East observed gruffly. "I just can't do anything about it. You simply stumbled on the right line of play."

George didn't argue about the "stumbling." Like old Onat Khayam, he is willing to take the cash and let the credit go. East was correct, however, when he said that he couldn't do anything about it. George had managed to bring a difficult contract home by giving up the right trick.

West had opened the king of spades, dummy winning with the ace. The hand looked like a "pianola" as George, playing the South cards, began to draw trumps.

When West discarded a club on the second round of trumps, George stopped abruptly. It was time for a little thought.

If South continued to draw all of East's trumps, he would then have only one trump left in his own hand. When he led diamonds, the enemy would be able to lead a spade, forcing out the last trump. They would surely gain the lead with the second high diamond to cash the rest of their spades. Since South could not make 10 tricks without getting a diamond, it was clear that he could not afford to draw trumps.

After some thought, George decided to abandon the trumps. He switched to diamonds, and East won with the king. East returned a spade, and South ruffed with his low trump. George led another diamond, and West won with the ace. West returned a third round of spades, and South was forced to ruff with the jack.

It was at this point that George generously led a third round of diamonds, allowing East to trump with the nine of hearts. George could have taken this trick away from East by drawing the trumps earlier, but as we have seen, drawing trumps would have cost him the contract.

After trumping the third round of diamonds, East was helpless. He returned a fourth spade, but dummy was able to ruff this trick. This, of course, was the reason George had abandoned the trumps.

George re-entered his hand with the ace of clubs and could then afford to draw East's last trump. The rest of the tricks, of course, were easy.

British, French Parliamentary Recall Refused

LONDON — (AP) — The British and French governments have turned deaf ears to demands that they recall their parliaments from summer vacations immediately to deal with European defense problems.

Porter Premier Paul Reynaud yesterday urged Premier Rene Pleven to recall the French assembly from the recess it began only 11 days ago. He is reported to have received the cold shoulder from Pleven. The assembly is slated to reconvene Oct. 17.

Britain's Conservative leader Winston Churchill and Liberal head Clement Davies called on Prime Minister Attlee to summon Parliament right away. Attlee demurred. He already has ordered commons to reconvene Sept. 12 — a month earlier than usual.

He stepped in. "Hello, Ellie," he said.

Janet stared at him; she must have guessed instantly who he was. It was a moment of two, I don't know quite how long, before Ellie straightened and turned to her. "Janet," she said, "this is your father."

Janet said, "I'm very happy to meet you," and started to cry. After that, for a while, it was all confusion. Janet had a mild case of hysterics, and Jack laughed her out of them. He handled her beautifully. Within a few minutes she was laughing again and talking to him with adolescent excitement.

Ellie stood quite aloof. From time to time, while he talked to Janet, Jack would look at her furtively. It was the kind of look she had given him in the early days of their marriage. But Ellie would say nothing except when spoken to directly, and then she spoke as shortly as she could. I was a little angry with her. I could understand the disappointment she was feeling, but it was unlike her to be so harsh.

JACK and Janet were getting along famously; they had taken to each other at once. Finally I suggested we all go to a nightclub. Jack grinned and turned to Janet. "Someplace very elegant and fancy?"

Janet shone. "Oh, I'd love it." She turned to her mother. Jack looked at Ellie too, all his hope in his eyes.

Ellie stood quite still. It was the moment I had been afraid of. Then she said: "You three go along. I'm hideously tired tonight, and I'll have a hard day tomorrow." Janet started to protest, and Ellie said sharply: "Really, Janet, I have to rest. I'm sorry."

She went to Jack and put out her hand, formally. "Jack, I'm awfully glad to see you again. I know you and Janet have a lot to say to each other. Call us up, and we'll all have dinner soon."

There was a bad pause, and then Jack saved us. He smiled and took her hand. It looked almost like a natural smile, and very gallant. He said good night, waited for Janet to get her coat, and went out.

I closed the door behind them. I

Mr. Chipmunk winked at the Sheriff, put on his hat, and walked out of the jail.

SIX NEW CASES
HOUSTON — (AP) — Six new polio cases are being treated in Houston hospitals, making a total of 226 polio victims this year. There have been 15 deaths.

Next morning at 7 o'clock the phone rang beside Mr. Chipmunk's bed. "Sorry to bother you, sir," said a voice, "but your boy had an accident last night. Smashed up a couple of rabbits in a convertible. Frankly, sir, he'd been drinking. We had to out him in jail."

"I'll be right over," Mr. Chipmunk said tensely.

Twenty minutes later Mr. Chipmunk arrived at the jail, a formidable structure the chipmunks had built by inverting an iron wash tub and imbedding the rim in solid rock. The Sheriff led him to Everett's cell. Everett was alternately yelling and gnawing on the bars. "Lemme out!" he squawked. "Lemme out of this place!"

Mr. Chipmunk stared sadly at his son for a moment. Then, suddenly, he gave a little chuckle. "What's funny," Everett screamed. "Get me out of here!"

Mr. Chipmunk put a paw through the bars and patted Everett's head. "Tell me, son," he asked, "are they keeping you snug and warm?"

"Sure, but —"

"Are they giving you enough seeds to eat?"

"Sure, but —"

"Are they giving you free medical attention?"

"Medical attention, he says! Get me out —"

"And I dare say the good Sheriff will find a safe, easy job for you — on the rockpile. Am I right, Sheriff?"

"Right," said the Sheriff. "And I suppose that the Sheriff will even give you a free suit of clothes — a little number with horizontal stripes."

Everett looked aghast at his father. "Cut the comedy, Pop!" he wailed. "Get me out of this place!"

I AGREED to go along with Jack and lend moral support when he met Ellie for the first time in so many years. I even offered to phone and tell her he was in town.

"No, don't call. I want to surprise her." Jack grinned in his old boyish way and then sobered.

"You know, I'm taking over for the company in Southern California next year. She'll be going back after the play closes, won't she?"

"I suppose so." I was inexpressibly sorry for him. His hopes were obvious; I thought they were also futile. He was going to be hurt. Eleanor Lane was beautiful and successful and rich. It was true that she was still in love with the memory of Jack Lanning; but there was nothing in this nice, jovial man of 45 to remind her of the man she had married.

I did go work worth mentioning that afternoon, and the performance in the evening was terrific. Jack was perfectly happy. He was as charming and likable as ever, and somehow that made it more painful.

We went backstage. Ellie's maid let us into her dressing room. I was relieved to see there were no visitors, except Janet.

Then Jack came in behind me, and stood in the doorway.

Ellie was sitting. She turned to smile at me, and her eyes suddenly changed. Her face was perfectly blank; it was almost an expression of fright. She made a quick move to get up, almost awkwardly, her eyes on Jack.

He stepped in. "Hello, Ellie," he said.

Janet stared at him; she must have guessed instantly who he was. It was a moment of two, I don't know quite how long, before Ellie straightened and turned to her. "Janet," she said, "this is your father."

BODY INGREDIENTS
The average 150-pound human body contains 75 pounds oxygen, 50 pounds carbon, 15 pounds hydrocarbon, 4 pounds calcium, 3 pounds phosphorus, 2 pounds chlorine, 2 pounds nitrogen, 6 ounces magnesium, 5 ounces sulphur, 5 ounces fluorine, 4 ounces sodium, 3 ounces potassium, 2 ounces iron, 1 ounce silicon, 14 ounces iodine, and a trace of manganese.

What on earth do you mean?" She turned. Her face was pinched and her eyes were huge. For a weird moment I felt I was looking at the Ellie Lane of 20 years before. She spoke suddenly, harshly. "You know what it was like. I can't go through that again. I've managed to fool everybody now and then I've even fooled myself. But only because he wasn't around. Look how Janet look to him—he can't help looking like he does and being popular if I went out tonight, I'd go back to him. And then it would all be the same. The first time he joked about my looks I'd hate him. The first time he called me Funny Face I'd shrivel up again."

I gaped at her. I think it must have been two minutes before I realized that in her heart Ellie had no idea that either she or Jack had changed at all in 20 years.

THERE was a knock, and Janet came in. "We're waiting for you," she said to me. "What's up?" Then she went to her mother and smiled. "He's wonderful, Mother."

"Of course he is." Ellie's voice was tight.

"But I'm glad I took after you. I have enough troubles without being a pifecaf."

at saw Ellie stiffen. Then, very slowly, she turned. "What do you mean?"

Janet was not looking at her, and did not see her expression. "Oh, I don't mean he's repulsive," she said carelessly. "Anyway, a man doesn't have to be good-looking if he's nice. He's just got a wonderful, funny face."

Ellie sat quite still. She could not take her eyes off Janet. Finally, she turned to me. "You'd better get out of here," she said. "If I'm going with you folks tonight, I have to dress."

Clear Weather Aids State Crops

AUSTIN — (AP) — Hot, clear weather helped Texas farmers make rapid progress on field work the past week.

Weather conditions were near ideal for harvesting of cotton, grain sorghums, peanuts and corn in central and southern counties and for beginning of the rice harvest on the coast, the U. S. Department of Agriculture said.

The USDA noted an excellent supply of green range and pasture feed in western, northwestern and northern counties. But growth was slowing as surface soil dried in hot, windy weather. Dry grass was getting short in coastal bend and extreme southern counties, and livestock was beginning to lose flesh.
