I ran into same inconsistency during the last war when the son of a Jehovah's Witness not believing in military service, was brought ventist church which likewise does not believe in bearing arms. This men's own sons had been exempted and were in a medical detachment where they would not have to touch a gun. Yet, along with the rest of the draft board, he referred the Jehovah's Witness to the courts as a conscientous objector and the youth was sent to prison for two years. What the man did was to initiate force. I thought this inconsistent in that if he didn't believe in war or having his own sons fight in one he should not have been on a draft board to seize other people's children or send them to prisons. As I see it, the same principle holds in this school issue.

I doubt if our correspondent's statement about Catholics maki tirades against public schools is based on fact. It seems to me coastal islands, been captured, or still fight in them, in spite of portation to parochial schools, faded into the hills. That is why six weeks of as bad a mauling Catholic priests have repeatedly estimates of casualties are next against terrible odds, as a n y stated that if the public schools had "religion" they would be all the same lines (with Roman Catholics); namely, they believ in establishing denominational schools. But Seventh-Day Adventists do not ask and never have asked and will not ask for tax money to help finance their schools. Further, they are not only willing and do support their own schools but they are willing to carry their share of the tax load for supporting the public schools. Adventists have no tirade to make against public schools as the Catholics do, although no doubt improvements could be made in some respects within the present system of public education."

I'm sorry if, in my column on "Romanism and Education" I seemed to draw any parallel whatsoever between Catholics and Ad-

New let's examine the minister's other statements. First, Adventists believe in establishing denominational schools.

Why? Because a prominent Adventist professor I once studied under puts it this way: We do not want our children's minds perverted by some of the immoral things taught in public schools. own schools but are willing to support the public schools besides? Is he saying that his people are willing to pay for teaching that his own church holds to be evil

Now Adventists claim to believe in morality and the Golden Rule. Such being the case, I should think they would not only be unwilling to pay for an evil they don't want their own youth exposed to but that they would also be unwilling to the immoral thing of paying for something from which they receive no service or value in return, particularly if such taxation is forced under the penalty of having one's property forcibly expropriated if one does not submit. The very idea of force should be repugnant to any. Christian, that is, in employing purposes. The contention that Adventists do not want public money for their private schools is just

Before an attack there is usually a peculiar sensation some part of the body. This is known as an aura. The sensation is hard to describe but an "uneasy feeling" in the stomach area is one of the most common. Those who have epileptic attacks learn to recognize this aura and to know that an attack is on the way. At the beginning of a major attack, the patient may give a loud scream or yell, which is called an epileptic cry. When an atrector Elia Kazan thought Ruth tack first begins the head is usually drawn back or to one side, the jaws are fixed, the hands clenched and the legs extended straight out. This is quickly followed by muscular contractions, noisy breathing, and a brick-red colored face. During all this period from the epileptic ery on, the patient is unconscious. ATTACKS CAN COME EARLY After the attack, the patient recovers consciousness without any recollection of what has happened. Attacks may come only at night so that occasionally someone may be epileptic for years without knowing it.

Sometimes there is a family history of the disease. If this is the case about four-fifths of those children who are headed for epilepsy have an attack hefore they are four years old. This makes for an early diagnosis. When there is no family history the first attack is likely to come later.

The outlook for the victim of epilepsy is now considered more hopeful than it was several years
