DAUGHTER IS MOVIE CRAZY DAUGHTER IS MOVIE CRAZY

Do you have a daughter who is movie crazy?

I hope not as I am living through such a phase now and I don't know whether I will last out or not.

Is it wise to let my teen ager go on making a fool out of herself joining fan clubs, writing to movie stars, constantly begging to go see Lana Turner? Shouldn't I be doing something to halt this thing before it gets any worse?
As it is now she embarrases me terribly with her running after them in search of autographs when ever we are in the vicinity

What CAN I do to stop this?

BLUSHING MOTHER Dear Blushing Mother:

You shouldn't be blushing over something as much a part of an American girl's development as the movie craze is.

Can't you look back for a few years and remember yourself writ-ing to Wallace Reid or Douglas Fairbanks or Mary Pickford for their photos? And can't you remember treasuring them, decorating your bedroom walls with them And then, suddenly, one day finding that their dustry counte-nances had lost that glamorous air, didn't you snatch them all down and throw them in the wastebaket? Don't worry about it, she'll be

Conference schools have a chance to win the basketball championship today, but the number is due to dwindle by the end of the week.

Four of the six clubs still in the running — Southern Methodist, Arkansas, Baylor and Texas A&M — currently share the lead.
The other two — Texas and Texas Christian — are grouped in the next spot. Rice is the only non-contender.

Four conference games this week will change this picture considerably. Baylor, the team that caused

NEW YORK — This is the time of year for the aged and aging baseball writers to have some fun trying to pick additions to Cooperstown's Hall of Fame.

Baseball Writers' Association of America members for ten years or more are authorized by the Permanent Hall of Fame Committee to elect players to the Hall of Fame.

However, it isn't any fun for Ken Smith, national secretary.

We Mourn Loss of A Good Citizen

PAMPA and the rest of the Panhandle have lost a stalwart citizen. Of all the kind things one might say about Dr. H. L. Wilder, specialist in radiology, one thing probably stands out above all others: he would try to the best of his ability to carry out an assignment given him in the interest of his community

Dr. Wilder, who died Saturday morning after residing in Pampa for 19 years, had many honors pestowed upon him in his lifetime-too many to enumerate here. A man must be pretty good to have had so many honors, from so many branches of society. Active church worker, Boy Scout worker, civic club worker, INSTALLMENT EIGHT There is another frightfal blunler which the Socialists have committed. In taking over the railthe coal industry others, they have bought the properties outright from the corporations and stockholders who owned them. They have paid for them with British bonds paying three per cent interest. With each new industry over, the government has added another mass of obligations to its already crushing national debt. Now the folly of this lies in the fact that, under the old order, the stockholders had no claim for profit if none were made by the industry. But all these stocks- pure risk investments have been converted into government bonds-which are a fixed upon the government, charge whether the industry makes a profit or not. And as all these industries have been operating at a greater or lesser loss, the government has had to find taxes the means of paying this debt. Indeed it has been charged in the United States Senate that the British government had got permission from the United States Commission to use $82,000,000 of the American funds granted Britain to pay interest on its debt which it was unable to meet because of the additions to it created by these nationalization schemes.

Thus the great Socialist experiment which was going to liquidate the greedy Capitalist profit-maker has now set him up as a tax-supported institution with the risk taken out of his investment, literally endowing him in perpetuity with his three per cent no matter However, it may what happens. not turn out that way. The hard days are coming in England. coal miners want more money and they are crying out in angry terms for suspending or abolishing the compensation of the former owners. There is no room to describe what might be a gigantic comedy if it were not so grave a tragedythe experiment in socialized medicine in England. That great numbers of people in Britain were not receiving adequate medical attention cannot be denied. What Britain needed was more medical care. That is, the task was to preserve what she had and then take measures to expand the personnel and equipment to cover more people. What she has done is not to increase the instrumentalities for medical care but to spread what she had out so thin that what she has now is medical care that is inadequate for almost everybody. amounts actually to a rationing of doctors with the result that it is literally impossible for the doctors to give anybody adequate care. Meantime, England is being taxed to death. Here is the tax return of aclerk with an income of $2800 a year. He gets a deduction of an additional deduction of $720 for his wife and $480 for his two children. Total deductions: $1760. This leaves $1040 of his in come subject to taxation. And here is the score: On the first $200 he pays 15 per cent $30. On the next $800 he pays 30 per cent 240.

On the next $40 he pays 45 per cent 18.

$ 288. The same man with the same family and salary in the United States would pay $26. If the English clerk goes to the pub for a glass of beer to forget his troubles he pays a tax of 16 cents on the pint. If the family goes to a movie and pays 80 cents each for a seat. half of it is for the government. He need not trouble himself about furs and jewelry, but anyone who has enough to spend for them pays a tax of 100 per cent. These taxes go to pay for school meals, indus-trial injuries, poor relief, family allowances, plus over a billion dollars for the socialized medicine which Sir Stafford Cripps says is "free," another $1,800,000,000 for social insurance, $2,090,000,000 for food subsidies, and more billions for defense, old-age pensions, housing subsidies and debt service.

Whether or not these are good or bad, the fact remains that they ish fairy tale writer, as a youth oost money. And this bitter truth wanted to be a dancer.

Hudson, a Labor member,

The working man has been coddled with the shallow delusion that somehow all the blessed services he wanted could be paid for by soak-ing the rich. But the Socialist leaders found themselves at a point when it became necessary to take their beloved workers on their knees and communicate to them the harsh facts of life. Up to April 6, 1949, outwardly at least all seemed to be going as merrily as a wedding bell in Briain. The Socialists were getting all the favorable publicity in America. Where a Socialist seat in Parliament was contested, they had won every by-election since 1945. We were being fed a pleasant stream of propaganda about the increased production and the bright out-look ahead. Then suddenly on April 6, as if some stage manager had blown a whistle and the scenes had shifted and the play had opened upon a wholly new act, the great of Socialist Britain turned swiftly from a happy romance to a troubled and turbulent drama. That day Sir Stafford Cripps, chancellor of the Exchequer and the intellectual leader of the Labor Party, rose in his place in the Commons and delivered his annual budget speech. The ablest of the Socialist leaders, he has in him a mixture of warm sympathy and cold realism. It was Sir Stafford who told the workers he would never apply labor compulsions. It was Sir Stafford who did that very thing when it became necessary. As Sir Stafford began his now famous budget speech to a crowded Commons the cheers rang out from the Labor benches as he told them of Labor's achievements in the past year. Then he came to his proposals for the ensuing year. At this point a strange phenomenon occurred. His great Labor majority amazed and speechless, while the opposition benches did the cheer-What was it that produced this grim and resentful silence among the Socialist members. It was the Chancellor's simple statement that now "defense and social services must be paid for out of national income." He said must bear the heavy burden of taxes now. He disclosed that England can borrow no more, that no more can be collected out of the existing national income, and that the only way government funds can be increased is by increasing the national income. The only way this can be done, he said, is by producing more and this means that the workers must work more to produce more. The great war on the rich, seemingly, has been won. They can be soaked no fur-That, Sir Stafford indicated. was over. He anounced frankly that if more social services were desired they must be paid for out of tax-es. "When I hear people speak or reducing taxes," he said with cold emphasis "and at the same time see the cost of social services rising rapidly, very often in response to the demand of the same people, I wonder if they appreciate to the full the old adage: We cannot eat our cake and have it," He might have said also that the losses at which Socialist business enterprises are operated must come out of taxes too. But it would not do to put emphasis on these losses.

Sir Stafford told his colleggues that the government had been keeping food prices down by subsidizing farmers. In fact food prices were not kept down at all. The consumer was paying less but the government was paying the rest out of taxes. And this could go no further. It was costing nearly a billion and a half dollars a year and would cost two billion the coming year. The workers were nevertheless demanding lower prices for consumer goods generally, but prices could not be lowered. He said that the prices could be lowered only by having government pay a larger share, which meant more taxes. Then he announced the awful truth to the farm members, that there could be no additional subsidies, and to the industrial members that prices would have to be increased and that no further so-cial security would be forthcoming until the workers produced more Gray County now owns its Courthouse, locks, doors, and plumbing.

The last $1,000 bond of 350 issued more than 20 years ago was paid off shortly before its Feb. Through the 20 years since the building was dedicated on April, 19, 1930, Ray Wilson, county citor, has kept a copy of the Pampa Daily News' Courthouse edition of two days before.

The paper is yellow and brittle with age, but its banner headline still bravely proclaims "Saturday Will Be Big Day Here — Gray County's New Courthouse Is Finest in This District of Panhandle.

The events of the day, according to the advance newspaper story, included a morning concert by the McLean Municipal Band; presentation of a flag to the county by Mrs. W. E. Taylor, president of the American Legion Auxiliary and received by County Judge Ivy E. Duncan; and the dedicatory address by Robert Lee Bobbitt, attorney general of Texas.
