AN HISTORICAL EPISODE OF LIFE IN THE GREAT SOUTHWEST

BY J. EVETTS HALEY ILLUSTRATED BY H. D. BUGBEE

IN THE ENTIRE story of the chasein all the annals of hunting-there is nothing to compare with the slaughter of the American buffalo. In the scope of territory involved, in the number of men engaged, in the systematic destruction of millions of great beasts, and in its economic significance, the hide hunt stands

It drew its devotees from around the world, especially English sportsmen and European explorers, and artists and writers to depict and record its vivid life and wild appeal. But in its final and efficient stages, it drew its hosts of hunters from the rough and rugged, aggressive and adventurous men of the American frontier. In this period it attracted the active interest of the great fur and hide companies as big, if bloody, business — employing thousands of hunters, skinners, freighters and camp men. Its rise was sounded by the roar of the Sharps' rifles from the Canadian border to the lower breaks of the Staked Plains. While the robe business had engaged the northwestern Indian traders for decades, the real hunt boomed and practically passed with the decade of the seventies. It was a matter of genuine historic significance. For the passing of the buffalo and the destruction of the Indians' larder meant the passing of the Indian problem on the western plains, and the opening of this vast region to ranching.

At one time this hardy animal-ed from the Atlantic tideland into the Rocky Mountains, and from the great Slave Lake in the Arctic clear down into Mexico. Its range had been slowly beaten back by the inroads of the settlers until, at the end of the Civil War, it was fairly restricted to the Great Plains area, reaching from just below the Conchos to well above the Canadian border.

Seasonally, it moved, in keeping with that strange but elemental urge; migrating north with the rise of grass in the spring, and back south with the subtlest suggestion of approaching fall. The building of the transcontinental rail lines in the late sixties and early seventies cut the herd in two. With convenient points of supply and transportation thus provided, the business of hunting buffalo for their hides almost immediately came to life.

In 1872, the village of Dodge City, in western Kansas, became the center of this incipient trade in the Southwest. Below there, clear to the Colorado and the Conchos, grazed the greatest concentration of big game ever witnessed by the eye of man. East, among the settlements, existed a demand for fine and finished robes. Here was the supply; back there the demand. Still hostile Indians, extremely jealous of further inroads upon their wild game, made the hunt a hazardous pursuit.

It did not matter to those with the hardihood to venture! Rugged men made up their outfits along the railroads. With bar lead, kegs of powder and scant supplies — for wild meat was their fare—they headed out in every direction from Dodge City.
With genuine knowledge of animal nature, they got their stands on the

this shaggy mountain of beef-rang- individual groups that made up this vast herd, and with guns mounted on their rest-sticks, killed them off in bunches. Meanwhile, they lived high on rich roasts of buffalo hump, boiled tongue, and roasted marrow bones while their outfits skinned their kill by the thousands, pegged the green hides on the ground to dry, baled the flint hides high on their wagons, and freighted them back across the seas of buffalo grass for shipment east from Dodge City.

Thus harassed by a continual hunt, the main southern herd drifted to the south. The hunters followed in the spring of 1874, and met them on their migration north, on and below the Canadian, in the Panhandle of Texas, in the heart of the Indians' hunting range. And here the Comanches and Kiowas - supposedly held on reserves in The Territory-fell on the hunters in wrath to wreak their terrible vengance. Many scattered hunters were killed, but the fight at the trading post of Adobe Walls, on the Canadian, taught the Indians the power of the Sharps' rifles and the accuracy of the hunters' eyes.

And so the slaughter went on with concentrated fury around Fort Griffin and the foot of the Plains down through 1878, when the bulk of the southern herd, estimated in excess of three million animals, was killed off. Then the Indians, with insufficient food to sustain them, were forced back on the paternalism of the federal government.

And thus, at last peace came to the far-flung frontier settler while the good tight turf of the buffalo grassnature's richest cover for these windswept Plains-beckoned to the bowlegged men who made their livings in the dust of cattle.

If they are permitted to continue having exclusive rights, our government will eventually become a fascist form of government, our production will go down, and our standards of living will go down. Here are some of the things that the labor leaders want to take out of the Taft-Hartley Law: The new proposed law would make the closed shop legal. There are few things, if any, more un the antitrust laws and to the use of injunctions is not affected under the present Taft-Hartley Law. Under the Taft-Hartley law only a very limited use of injunctions is permitted, solely upon petition by government officials, and solely when an unfair labor practice had occurred, when there is strong evidence of an unlawful strike or boycott, or when there is a threat to public health or safety.

The Taft-Hartley Law authorizes unions to sue and be sued in federal courts. The law merely applies to labor organizations the same rules and responsibilities that are accepted by other groups as a matter of course.

The fact that we have had the Wagner Law with all its discriminations is evidence of how confused the public has become as to what moral laws govern human relations. Nothing is needed more than a free market in labor and a better knowledge that labor unions are not for but against the public

This is exactly the s saying that the government tal your money, my money and the money of other taxpayers and throws it around without paying any attention to who gets it or what they do with it. I know that's the way it looks to some of us, with the cost of government going up and up and up, but that isn't the way it is. Actually, and without exception in the whole record of na experience, the strings of supe vision are inseparable from any form of federal expenditures and it is only natural and logical tha should be true.

The government has an obliga tion to see that when some of the peoples' money is committed for a definite and specific purpose that the money is used for that pur-pose. Make This Home Recipe To Take Off Ugly Fat

It's simple. It's amaxing, how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky, unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this recipe yourself. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. It contains nothing harmful. Just go to your druggist and ask for four ounces of liquid Barcentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit pulce to fill bottle. Then take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it.

If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender, more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't just seem to disappear almost like magic from neck chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles, just return the empty bottle for your money back.
