SOCIAL SECURITY BILL

Few measures of greater significance have ever been inscribed with a president's signature than the social security bill which Mr. Roosevelt signed last Wednesday. In a sense, it is a summation of the political philosophy of the man whose name gave it validity. At least it is a long step toward the social ideal at which that philosophy aims.

The significance of it is not only in the terms of the bill itself, but in the political background from which it emerged. Throughout the history of the republic, political parties have declared their overweening love for the common run of folks, proclaimed their desire to serve the general welfare. The results, however, have been scant. Legislation has been a matter of serving special interests and pretending that by so doing the general welfare was promoted. But now we have a definite, planned piece of legislation that, for almost the first time in the country's history, embodies the theory that government does have a responsibility toward those elements of society that become the victims of uncontrolled economic forces.

Woodrow Wilson had much the same governmental concept, and laid plans for legislation in keeping with it. The world war forced him to devote himself to other things before his program could be fairly launched. The two presidents who followed him could not be said to have any special philosophy that involved any consideration of security against economic stress. Mr. Hoover, out of his experience in humanitarian tasks, did have such a philosophy. His views along such lines are of present interest because of the route which he would follow. In the broadest sense, his conception of the government as a social agency has the same objectives as Mr. Roosevelt's conception does. The difference—and it is a difference that will be emphasized if Mr. Hoover is a political figure in 1936—is in method rather than in principle. If you go back and study the history of political parties, this difference will become more clear. Basically, it is the difference between the two major political parties.

Maintain prosperity at the top, Mr. Hoover says in effect, and it will percolate down to the bottom and the common can partake of it. Encourage the development of vast fortunes, of great industrial institutions and pass laws that further and protect them and the wealth thus created will certainly seep and trickle downward until society as a whole is benefited by it. That is the essence of Republican doctrine. The protective tariff is a product of it. There have been times when it has worked admirably, or at least has seemed to do so. It is to plausible theory and, politically speaking, a practical one. Mr. Hoover wanted to develop it further than any of his predecessors, when the depression interfered.

The Roosevelt view is that the general welfare must be furthered; that if the social structure as a whole is to benefit, prosperity and security must be provided directly at the bottom and middle levels as well as at the top. The social security measure is in keeping with that view. Where the difference counts, politically, is in the groups to which presidents look for counsel and guidance. Under Republican presidents, such counsel and guidance came from the elements of which Andrew Mellon may be regarded as chief spokesman. Call it Wall Street, call it Big Business, or what you will. Under Mr. Roosevelt, there is little or no consultation of such elements.

A president who listened to them, who regarded them as his mentors, could never have put through congress such a bill as that which was given executive approval last Wednesday. Therein, as we shall see as the 1936 campaign gets under way, is the vital point in the present political set-up. There is in the White House a president, and there is in control a political party, who do not take orders or advice from the "top." The social security bill, because of its objectives and its implications, becomes the pivot on which political events may turn. It enables the lines to be drawn straight and distinct between the two concepts of government.

It is unthinkable that the American people can be persuaded that their interests lie either in the fulfillment of the Republican theory of the government's social responsibility or in the radical balderdash of a man like Huey Long. But the efforts are being made, from both directions, to so persuade them.—Wichita Daily Times.

warned them that the party would be split and that they probably all would "hang." He topped this off with the ominous warning that the president had made it perfectly clear that he would take the issue before the country next year if they didn't fall in line.

Turning to Joe Byrns, the vice president demanded whether the speaker would dare to go back to Tennessee and face the people after what he had done during the fight on the bill.

Next was O'Connor's turn. Garner pointed out to him what had been said about his brother Basil and about the rules chairman himself and asked him if he dared face the music.

The boys got the point. They realized that many House Democrats were desperately anxious to vote for a face-saving substitute.

Back to the House floor: Sam Rayburn introduces the substitute as a "compromise." Byrns and O'Connor back him up against Huddleston on a point of order. Rayburn speaks and you can sense that many previously recalcitrant Democrats have had enough of the fight.

O'Connor then rises to urge passage and as he does so, a note comes from Byrns to Rayburn, who controls the time: "Recognize me for three minutes and I'll speak for it."

Byrns speaks: "We can't go back to our constituents and admit our inability to pass legislation." And over she goes, as all but 59 Democrats scramble back under the administration tent.

And the conference report is whipped into shape for final action while administrationists prepare to celebrate, and mimeographs of the holding company executives are oiled to scream out their last cry of rage.

About New York

By GEORGE TUCKER
NEW YORK—Your New Yorker of the boom period who paid $1,000 for a first edition of Dante's "Divine Comedy" is still as much of a bibliophile as ever, but now he has transferred his affections to the less expensive magazine field. There is a lively market for first editions in magazines today.

Copies of the American Mercury, dated January, 1934, are quoted at $4... Vol. 1, No. 1 of the New Yorker, which sold originally for 15 cents, is worth $100... First editions of Collier's, Time, and Liberty are invaluable and are not on the open market... A first issue of Radio News, an obscure 5 cent publication in 1919, brings $1.

An indication of the alertness of "first" connoisseurs was that demand for copies of Mickey Mouse magazine which recently announced a new form. Almost every known "collector" in the country wrote in and requested a special copy.

This new interest in magazine first edition buying has resulted in the opening of dozens of shops which have sprung mushroom-like in the side streets of midtown. All of them have a surprising stock of "firsts."

The young man with the pretty girl said something in Spanish and pointed towards the site of the old "demolished" Spanish Flats which, years ago, were built by Jose de Navarro, wealthy Cuban, as an American investment for the Queen of Spain.

I'm sure it will intrigue you to know that the young man is the great-grandson of that queen, Isabella, who later was banished from Spain. He is the son of Ex-King Alphonso. He incurred the ire of his imperial-sire by marrying—Elmira Sampedra, a Cuban commoner, and he still is known as the Prince of the Asturias, although that title was supposed to have gone whistling down the wind when the revolution transformed the monarchy to a republic.

Their arrival in New York, incidentally, involved a delicate bit of diplomatic procedure. When the royal pair assumed the royal suite at the St. Moritz, the question arose as to which flag should be hoisted in Central Park South. They couldn't unfurl the flag of Republican Spain without offending the prince and the old imperial flag was equally useless, as the Spanish legation which threw the prince out would be displeased. So they compromised and, in deference to the countess, the Cuban flag was run out on the masts.

And, speaking of royalty, did you know that Nilly Rayes, the Broadway juggler, is the nephew of the present queen of Italy, cousin to King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia, and related by marriage to every royal family in Europe? He's a featured artist in Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" revue... Mlle. Ninkas, the dancer, is really a Columbus, Ohio, girl... George Lessey, the actor, is the son of a former dean of Amherst Academy... Arthur Griffin was a successful dentist in Fall River, Mass. before he decided to cast his lot with the Broadway stage... And Mat Duffin, the dancer, is the son of J. J. Duffin, high counselor of the Mormon Church at Salt Lake City.

Namur, a Belgian city which formerly suffered from the overflowing of the Sambre and Meuse rivers, was celebrated for its stilt-walkers for centuries.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Listen, my children, and you shall hear the rather exciting tale of how the administration finally whammed the socks off the "power trust" in the battle over the public utilities holding company bill.

You could hardly ask for a more dramatic struggle than one pitting the White House with all its resources against the $12,000,000,000 utility industry, the House of Morgan, and other powerful banking connections and the largest, most expensive lobby ever seen in Washington.

It had all the elements of a death duel, a slugging match, and a poker game in which no one knew who held the most wild cards until the very end.

Twice the administration had gone to defeat in the House on the Senate-endorsed "death sentence." Everyone knew the House leaders weren't backing up the president.

Democratic Congressman George Huddleston of Alabama and Republicans Cooper of Ohio and Holmes of Massachusetts, dominating the House conferees, showed every sign of an intention to block any legislation whatever Senator Burt Wheeler of Montana, sponsor of the bill and head of the Senate conferees, stood firm.

Then those celebrated administration brain trusters, Ben Cohen and Tom Corcoran, (who averaged about six hours' sleep a night after they started work on this bill 10 months ago), drew up a "substitute" for the "death sentence" clause (which both sides now admit was virtually the same thing) and the "substitute" was secretly approved by Roosevelt.

The scene now shifts to the private office of Vice President Garner, big behind-the-scenes liaison man for Roosevelt.

Present: Garner, Speaker Joe Byrns, House Rules Chairman John J. O'Connor (whose brother Basil received $25,000 from Associated Gas & Electric and who had been sabotaging the administration on the measure), Assistant Floor Leader Ed Taylor of Colorado, Whip Paddy Boland of Pennsylvania—and a bottle.

Garner put the question squarely to his listeners as to whether they realized what they were doing. He

Cotton Pickers Will Demand $1

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 2. (AP)—A strike of laborers in some of the south's cotton fields appeared likely today as officials of the Southern Tenant Farm's Union disclosed that organization has decided to ask cotton-picking wages of $1 per hundred pounds of cotton.

H. L. Mitchell, secretary, said the executive council of the union had decided upon an organized strike, possibly the first ever called among cotton field laborers, as a means of fighting for the wage demands.

Local strike committees, said Mitchell, would determine dates on which strikes in their areas would begin.

"Sharecroppers and tenants will pick their own cotton, of course," said Mitchell, "but in the event they hire themselves and families out to pick on a day-labor basis they will ask the union wage of $1 per hundred pounds of cotton picked."

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

Chapter 36
GLADYS AGAIN

Laurie shivered with sad memory when Albery used the same phrase as Rex Moore had done. She felt like something of no importance, tossed from one hand to another. Fool-proof story to get rid of her; she had sold herself into bondage, and she was terrified.

"And, of course, at present, you must stay on at the office, for the sake of appearances. We can keep in touch that way. Moore will get off on his flight as soon as possible. And then we can plan our little summer holiday, you and I."

His smile, so outwardly charming, fighting his impassive face into virile life, made her tremble.

"Then, that's all fixed up, dear little girl!" he said. "And now I must get off. I've got a business banquet tonight, worse luck!"

He took her in his arms. She was cold under his passionate kisses. A tragic figure, a shrinking victim of the man she loathed, but to whom she had given the right of possession, because she could not help herself.

Laurie had been spending Sunday with her newly-married girl friend from the office out in the suburb where she lived, almost on the fringe of the country.

The tube train took her back to Piccadilly Circus, and she started out to walk back to Westminster by the pleasant route of St. James' park. It was such a lovely mellow night.

There was nothing to go back for. Gladys was not at home. The troupe had gone to the outlying Surrey towns for three weeks, too far for her to come home every night.

Mark Albery was in Paris over the week end, much to Laurie's relief. He had wanted her to go with him. There had been a scene, but she had made a firm stand. It was amazing, even to herself, what power she had over him.

Around Piccadilly Circus was a stream of traffic unusual on a Sunday night. But everybody who could had spent the day in the country. As she was about to cross the Circus, Laurie was held up as the traffic was let through.

A taxi came along and slowed down for a few moments. Its occupants caught Laurie's eye. A young man in evening dress sat on the side nearest her. She remembered. Of course it was Lord Dagenbury's son, young Dallas, whom she and Gladys had met at Pen Gretton. She had taken a dislike to him, and what Albery had told her of him had not made her change her mind.

Suddenly he moved, and a girl's head appeared beside him, leaning forward. Laurie's heart gave a loud knock. Gladys' lovely little head, bare, the dim light on her glorious dark curls. Gladys, dimpling and smiling, in evening dress, an exquisite bunch of orchids on her shoulder, from which the light wrap had fallen.

He bent toward her. The taxi moved on, shot away, leaving Laurie rooted to the spot.

Glad—and young Dallas! What was she doing with him at this time of night in a taxi when she was staying in lodgings at Gullford? It was past ten o'clock now. She must have come from Gullford, dressed for the evening, and be going back there.

Oh, if only Glad would confide in her! Laurie tried to reason with herself, as she walked on. After all, there was nothing out of the way in going out to supper on a Sunday night with a young man. But Glad had not said she had met young Dallas again last night—that you never met him since that time at Pen Gretton?

"That's exactly what I do mean," Gladys replied.

"Glad!" said Laurie again, utterly discouraged, as her sister turned that drooping, sullen look on her. "But I could have sworn it was you."

"You must go about looking in every cab. I should think!" Gladys replied belligerently. "For goodness' sake, Laurie, when will it dawn on you that I'm not a baby, and can look after myself? It wasn't me you saw, and that's that."

Laurie said nothing more.

"They had a nice meal without paying any attention to it, both busy with their thoughts."

"When they were out in the street again, Laurie said quietly: "I must have made a mistake. Glad. But I'm glad I came. Your dance is lovely. You're going to do big things."

"I hope so, Laurie. I love it. I just want to practice, practice all the time." This was genuine enthusiasm, and all the way to her lodgings Gladys talked of her work.

Her chum, who was rooming with her, was in the little sitting room having just finished her meal.

"Nelly," said Gladys loudly, and with a ringing laugh, "please put my sister right! Where was I last night at ten o'clock, dear?"

"Why, here, Glad!" answered the obedient Nelly.

Laurie meets the man—she really loves tomorrow.

Tea Given By Young Women To Honor Visitor In Church

MRS. HOWELL SPEAKS ON THE SHORT PROGRAM

A lovely twilight tea at the home of Mrs. T. W. Jamison was given yesterday afternoon by the Young Women's Auxiliary of First Baptist church, honoring Mrs. W. D. Howell of Dallas, state secretary of the Women's Missionary union, who is a guest of Baptist women here for a few days.

Miss Helen McKinney acted as hostess, and was assisted by Miss Loris Groom in pouring tea after a short program. The tea table was centered with a bouquet of yellow fall flowers.

A vocal duet by Miss Erdine Benton and Miss Groom preceded a talk by Mrs. Howell. About 2 dozen young women were present.

Mrs. Howell conducted an installation of new officers for the First Baptist Missionary union last evening at the regular service. She was being honored this morning by the Junior and Senior Girls' Auxiliaries, and was to be given a tea given by the Missionary union this afternoon.

Fun of Learning Cookery Brought In Cooking School

"Just as the evening of a well spent life brings its lamp along with it, so does the cooking of a really interested housewife who attends the Kitchen Chautauqua keep on the ascendancy in bringing kitchen happiness to her home," says Beulah Mackey Yates, who will be in this city to start in the leadership of sessions of a cooking Chautauqua starting Sept. 9.

"There is fashion aplenty. Ways to dress up good, wholesome, ordinary food, in manners that will tease the appetite graciously and make friends with all the digestive organs of humanity," states Mrs. Yates in a letter.

"And there is plenty of fun, frolic, pastime, and wholesome entertainment in learning 'all about it,'" she further tells. "The opportunities to learn how to prepare the newest dishes, dress them in their very prettiest forms and shapes, any of which are valuable additions to the kitchen of the most modern or particular housewife; the manner and dispatch, sheared of all vexatious worry and toilsome burdens, of planning meals of every kind, comes in with a valuable aid to determine; and particularly the new mode of preparing and fixing the newer salads, is indeed a secret bit of happy-housewifery, to be prized by any one; to say nothing of the valuable household hints available."

Most surely, the readers of this newspaper, under whose auspices the cooking school comes, are in for a pleasant session of cookery experience.

The Kitchen Chautauqua comes to this city under auspices of the Daily News and will be held each afternoon starting at 2 o'clock at the city hall auditorium.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

It's a fact, proved now by science, and suspected by some of us for a good while, that the bad teeth of many of our generation are the result of inadequate diet when we were young. Our parents thought they were giving us everything we needed, but now it seems they simply didn't know.

These days we are aware that certain foods make strong bones, others develop muscles, create energy for immediate needs or protect against disease. Children need all these foods daily to grow and keep healthy.

Milk, vegetables, cereals and fruits must be abundant. Meat not so much over a year old should have diets says that the "meat portion should be the size of the palm of the child's hand."

Leafy vegetables are important, being rich sources of tooth and bone building material. A child not much over a year old should have one or two leafy vegetables, finely-minced, every day.

Cereals can be used in gruels from the time a child is six months old. Gradually thickened, they may appear in porridge form by the time he is a year old. In a restricted diet, cereals can be used profitably twice a day. Two kinds may be served for sake of variety and preference should be given to those made from whole grains.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Baked pears, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, soft cooked eggs, toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Cream of corn soup, toasted rolls, mixed fresh fruits in lemon jelly, cup cakes, milk, tea.
DINNER: Tomato and beet juice cocktail, roast chicken, rice potatoes, carrots in orange sauce, apple and celery and nut and raisin salad, frozen peach mold, coccaunt kisses, milk, coffee.

Children love ice cream and it's so little trouble to make and so nourishing for them, that it should be served often. By varying the flavor, it can be used repeatedly without danger of becoming monotonous.

Two cups milk, 1 package unflavored ice cream powder, 2 cups whipping cream, 1-2 cup sugar, 2 cups fresh peach pulp, few grains salt, 4 drops almond extract.

Add milk very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved. Whip cream until firm and fold first mixture into it. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze as rapidly as possible. Stir thoroughly three times during first hour of freezing. At second stirring add mixture of sugar, peach pulp, salt and almond extract. Cream should be thick for third stirring. Let freeze until firm. Serve cut in slices or pack in melon mold and garnish with slices of fresh fruit.

To freeze in mold fill mold full of frozen cream, packing it in firmly. Cover with waxed paper and press cover of mold tightly over paper. Unless you are absolutely sure that your cover makes a tight seal dip a strip of cloth about 1 1/2 inches wide in melted fat (hot oil) and bind around the cover where it fits down over the mold. Pack in four parts ice to one part ice cream salt and let stand one hour or longer. To unmold wrap a hot towel wrung out in hot water around mold and invert on a chilled serving platter.

REGENT POINTS OUT THAT TEACHERS COLLEGE TO BE BACK ON 5-YEAR PROGRAM

BY JOHN E. HILL, Member, Board of Regents.

The West Texas State Teachers college at Canyon is opening this fall as a five-year college, in response to the demands being made upon it by the advancing standards of our Northwest Texas schools, and in acknowledgement of the soundness of the premise that our teachers should have even better preparation than before, and especially that they should receive their higher training in a college dedicated to that special field of education. This college has the distinction of being the first teachers college in Texas to receive permission to do five years' work, which privilege may soon be extended to the other six State Teachers colleges.

Although the college at Canyon does highly specialized work in the field of teacher training, it also offers all the advantages of a liberal arts college.

The investment in the plant at this college is being increased during the period of 1934 to 1936 from approximately $1,400,000 to $1,550,000. Some of the special expenditures are as follows: Boys' dormitory, $49,500; addition to Cousins hall, $2,000; 10 cottages for light housekeeping, $33,379.80.

We particularly call your attention to the increased facilities for the students who care for dormitory student life in practically fire-proof buildings, with the most modern equipment. In addition to this, through cooperation with the Canyon Athletic society, Buffalo court is being prepared, which will have splendid facilities for boys on an economical basis; additional tennis courts have been provided, and the loan grant agreement has been made for the outdoor swimming pool, which will be a great attraction.

The college is very definitely prepared to give teachers unusual advantages in the field of physical education, which will be appreciated by all the students of our Panhandle, as there is a greatly increased demand for competent supervision of physical education in the public schools.

One reason that the board of regents has cooperated in this expansion program, both in the physical assets and scope of its work, is the high scholarship attainments of the faculty members, 55 of whom out of a total of 70 have the master's degrees and the other 15 are doing work toward their master's degree, and a number of others are within close reach of their coveted honor.

It seems to be a fact that the faculties of our high schools and former consolidated school districts in the Panhandle hold higher degrees than the average for the state, and it has become necessary for this institution to prepare itself to meet the expectation of the territory which it serves, and especially to meet the needs of high school teachers desiring to advance in their chosen fields.

A second reason for this cooperation on the part of the board of regents, seven of whom live much farther from the Panhandle than we, is the voluntary and enthusiastic contribution of more than $30,000 on the part of our citizenship to enable the state to complete the very wonderful museum on the campus at Canyon, which is a property considered the equal of any $100,000 building the state has. With this building has come irrevocable contributions of material for the museum, so that already the board is asking for an enlargement of its housing capacity for the benefit of the people of Texas.

The board has been greatly impressed by the fact that 70,000 visitors registered from all over Texas and from many states of the union have visited this institution within two years and that the work being done by the curator and professor of anthropology is being recognized throughout the United States.

Every citizen of the Panhandle is surely interested in carrying forward the high purpose of this institution, that it be the center of cultural life of the Panhandle, and constantly raise its standards, and be a source of inspiration to our young people; to enable the teachers here to be fitted to do work of the highest standard; that the student life may be surrounded with every educational, cultural and physical advantage; all this being done at a minimum of expense to the people of the Panhandle, and at no greater expense to the state than any of its other institutions.

OFFICERS WILL MEET TUESDAY IN 2 CHURCHES

NEW MINISTER TAKES CENTRAL CHURCH PULPIT

Meetings of officials for this week were announced in two churches yesterday. Stewards of First Methodist church and their wives will have a covered dish supper at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening, followed by the monthly board meeting, and officers of First Christian church will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow.

Although the showers yesterday evening sharply cut attendance for closing services of the day, many Pampans attended church yesterday.

Sunday school attendance reports showed 364 present at First Christian church, where plans were made for homecoming day next Sunday; 150 at Francis Avenue Church of Christ, 117 at Presbyterian church, 462 at First Methodist, and 579 at First Baptist. Francis Avenue church also reported four additions to membership.

A new pastor, Paul Thompson, formerly of Lakeview, conducted services at Central Church of Christ. He accepted the ministry here after preaching on two Sundays last month as a visitor.

Rock Slide Takes Trainman's Life

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Sept. 2 (AP)—The Denver & Rio Grande Western main line railroad track, dicked Saturday by a rock slide which cost the life of one trainman, was open last night.

A fast freight, bound for the eastern slope of the Rockies, was caught in the slide and knocked from the track as tons of earth and rock, loosened by recent rains, tumbled down the mountain side.

Clarence Butler of Grand Junction, locomotive fireman, was killed when he was pinned beneath the locomotive.

Drought Counties Increase From 84 To 112 in Month

Because of a lack of late summer rains, the number of officially designated drought counties in the central great plains has increased from 84 as of August 3—the low mark for the last 12 months—to 112 as of September 1, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced. The number was 100 on July 17. The counties number 45 in western Kansas, 20 in the Texas Panhandle, 10 in southwest Texas along the Rio Grande, 14 in south-east Colorado, 11 in eastern New Mexico, 8 in the Oklahoma Panhandle and 4 in southern Nebraska. A decrease of drought counties in west central Texas in late summer has been more than offset by the increase in western Kansas, eastern Colorado and the 4 Nebraska counties.

The drought area designation provides basic information for the railroad and means that railroad freight rates in these counties are reduced one-third for hay shipped in and one-half for fodder and straw shipped in. Cattle shipped out of these counties to areas where feed is more plentiful are also given a 50 percent reduction of the regular rate. They may be returned for 15 percent of the regular freight rate, a round trip reduction of 50 percent.

Notice of the September 1 designation of drought counties has been sent to State officials and to the railroads. The railroads have a drought status until further notice. Texas drought counties are: Armstrong, Brewster, Carson, Castro, Cuberson, Dallam, Deaf Smith, El Paso, Gray, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Johnson, Jeff Davis, Lipscomb, Moore, Ochiltree, Oldham, Parmer, Peecos, Potter, Presidio, Randall, Reeves, Roberts, Sherman, Swisher, Terrell, Val Verde.

troubles," he said. "Other regular employees also were behind the strikers and sympathizers."

"I didn't see any officers at first but they had said they would be present at the opening."

"The third that started the shooting, as I saw it, was when Mr. Melton broke the picket line in his automobile to take his children to work."

"Right away the shooting started. Windows of Melton's car were shattered and somebody jumped on the running board and slugged him."

"In no time bullets were whizzing everywhere. The workers on the hill in front of the mill and all the others. It seemed started shooting."

"The fighting lasted only about five minutes."

It was at the number 4 plant that Melton was shot as he attempted to take his son to work through picket lines.

Sheriff W. A. Clump called on Governor Johnson for National Guardsmen immediately after the shooting and the governor instantly transmitted a message to General Dozier to muster out "as many National Guard troops as is necessary to handle the situation."

National guardsmen were withdrawn from the scene only last Friday after a 35-day patrol of the mill premises where some workers struck two months ago alleging discrimination against union members.

Sheriff Clump said that it was about 30 minutes before he had planned to bring deputies on duty this morning, that the shooting began—a half hour ahead of the regular mill opening at 6:30.

interview, turned to discussion of threatened war with Italy. He said his warriors had sufficient arms and his country sufficient resources to carry on for some time. He attacked the arms embargo as unfair.

"We have not thought of ceasing our efforts for peace, nor of resorting to force to repeal a further invasion. In the event that war is thrust upon us, we expect that these arms embargoes will be removed."

Should the League of Nations fail to halt war, the emperor said, the lives and property of Americans and other foreigners within the empire would be protected to the limit of the Ethiopians' powers.

The details of these protective measures, he said, would be announced "when and if hostilities begin."

Pressed as to whether he would cede territory to Italy to avoid war, the Lion of Judah said: "I do not wish to institute the practice of giving bribes in order to induce potential aggressors to refrain from war and respect their territorial obligations."

Writes Thanks for Floral Offerings

Mrs. Ida B. Kribbs of Franklin, Pa., has written her appreciation of the floral offerings made by Pampans for the funeral of her husband recently.

Mrs. W. Kribbs died here Aug. 18. He had lived here for several years, doing oil field work.

His body was sent to Pennsylvania for burial after a funeral attended by many friends and relatives.

TO SUPPORT ETHIOPIA

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP)—Senator Pope of Idaho declared today the United States government will be obligated to support the new conceptions to American interests in Ethiopia. The senator made the declaration as he was leaving for Geneva. He based his contention on "the precedence set up at the time of the Boer rebellion and by the action in Nicaragua where American soldiers and sailors were sent to protect American rights."

PRESIDENT

heard their leaders applaud enactment of the Wagner labor disputes law, the Guffey bituminous coal stabilization act, railroad pension measures and the social security program.

President Roosevelt and congress were praised by some speakers. In an address at Fairmont, W. Va., yesterday, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, said the Roosevelt administration's record was so good "that organized labor in this country to come has no choice but to support the president."

This declaration from the head of a union that claims upwards of 500,000 members gave rise to speculation among the political mind-ers here as to whether the federalist October convention in Atlantic City, N. J., would endorse Mr. Roosevelt for re-election.

Labor's demand for a shorter work week was again put forward today with the federation's estimate that 1,000,000 workers still are unemployed.

Labor demands a five day week, a six hour day and a wage that will enable a man and his family to live in reasonable comfort," said Frank Morrison, A. F. of L. secretary, in his Labor day message.

Among labor's problems were listed probable court tests of all the labor legislation enacted by the just-adjourned congress. Leaders also pondered what success they would have at the next session with proposed legislation to re-establish NRA codes and to write the 30-hour week into law without a constitutional amendment.

One coal mine operator carried the Guffey act to court for a test of its constitutionality within 24 hours after the president had signed it.

The new labor relations board, administrator of the Wagner act, is giving careful study to the problem of what industries it can deal with and stay within constitutional limitations on the federal government's powers.

"The board's powers are expressly limited to the prevention of unfair labor practices affecting commerce," and "commerce" is expressly defined as interstate or foreign commerce," said J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, in a radio speech last night.

Madden indicated that the board would make final decisions on its jurisdiction, case by case.

Labor leaders were scattered over the country to make their speeches. William Green, federation president, was at Canton, O., and Morrison at Madison, Wis. Secretary Perkins planned to discuss the social security program in a radio speech to be broadcast from Boston on a coast-to-coast hook-up.

Dusting The Covers Of Texas History

For THE TEXAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF 1936

(NOTE: This is one of a series of articles taken from the 300 special collections of family archives in the University of Texas library. The selections cover all periods of Texas history, from the earliest days of the Spanish missionaries in the province of Texas through the colonial era, to the present. This series of articles, some chosen for their historical significance in the development of the empire of Texas, others for their purely human interest in portraying personalities, economic conditions and social intercourse.)

AUSTIN, Aug. 31.—The flavor of a saga of "Old Texas," tinged with the graciousness of the "Old South," is present in a description of the Capote Ranch of the Erskine family on the Guadalupe river, as it is given in B. H. Erskine's unpublished biography of his father, Andrew Erskine. A similar feeling permeates his story of the early marriage of his mother and father, likewise given in his biographical notes, now deposited in manuscript form in the archives of the University of Texas library.

Andrew Nelson Erskine and Ann Theresa Johnson were married at Seguin, Guadalupe county, Texas, December 27, 1847," the son wrote. "His wife was in her 19th and he in his 22nd year of age. She was the daughter of Joseph F. Johnson, an early day pioneer and settler in Seguin. He came from near Lexington, Ky., to Texas in 1835, with his wife, daughter, Ann, and two sons, Steven and Ignacius, and some negroes, settled on the Brazos river near Richmond, Fort Bend county, Texas. They were on this farm when the family hearing of Santa Anna's near approach with his army of near 2,000 men, the father and his brother, Alexander, were off with Houston's army (about 700 men) near the San Jacinto. The wife Louisa Johnson and children were at dinner when they got the word that Mexicans were coming, becoming scared, they hurriedly left the table, took the negroes and fled to the Brazos river bottom to hide from the Mexicans who they expected would come to their place. They fled in such haste they made no preparation, leaving everything just as it was at the moment of getting notice. An old friendly Indian and his squaw, whom the family had befriended and aided, went to the house, turned the calves out of the pen, took clothes in from the line, and taking such things they thought the family would need, closed the house, and went to find the fugitives in the bottom. They were in hiding three days.

U. S. Drops Plan To Erect a New Russian Embassy

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP)—Strained official relations between the United States and Soviet Russia was given today as one reason for blocking plans to erect a new American embassy in Moscow in the immediate future.

The foreign service building commission, headed by Chairman McReynolds (D., Tenn.) of the house foreign affairs committee, it was learned, is already considering a location of $1,000,000 previously earmarked for construction of the new embassy for building purposes in other foreign countries.

Administration officials declined further comment on the future of Soviet-American relations, brought into question by Secretary Hull's statement of policy Saturday night in which he asserted that continued friendly intercourse depended "on the attitude and action of the Soviet government in supervising subversive activities of the third international, a world-wide communist organization."

After reviewing relations between the two nations since recognition of the Soviet Union, Hull said flatly that the United States held the Soviet Union accountable under the pledge of non-interference given President Roosevelt by Foreign Commissioner Litvinoff, for unfriendly acts and propaganda originating in Russia which had a bearing on this country.

Andrew and his wife occupied their new home, not many months after moving to Capote. They lived there latter part 1948, during 1949 and until some time in the fall of 1950. During which time Andrew was engaged some in farming, but we are sure he also did much surveying for an energetic popular surveyor as he was, and in a time when much land was being located and surveyed, he was sure to be quite busy at his profession. In his campaign in East Africa, feeling sure that he would have once more given pause to "meddlers" in his later speeches of Saturday.

The military port of Naples hummed with activity in preparation for the embarkation of 4,000 black shirt troops, marching there from the training camps near the mountain city of Benevento where they had been training. They sail during the week on unspecified ships.

PLANE CRASH

were carried in the plane. A dozen postal inspectors were hastily summoned to guard the remains of this cargo.

Traffic jammed on the highways surrounding the scene and scores of officers were called. Firemen from Burbank, Hollywood, and Los Angeles answered the alarm.

At the airport, the Western Air Express operations department reported the plane made a perfect takeoff in the face of overcast skies and some fog.

As the big metal ship passed over the administration building in a circuit of the field, however, its motors were heard to misfire.

A mile from the airport, the plane seemed to waver and the pilot apparently tried to head it back, fighting adverse winds and falling power.

Sherwood was one of the veterans of Western Air Express. He leaves his home in Burbank, Calif., where he has been with the airline about two months. He leaves his father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Burlew, and his widow, Lucille, all of Santa Ana, Calif.

Burlew, a graduate of Stanford university several years ago, had been with the airline about two months. He leaves his father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Burlew, and his widow, Lucille, all of Santa Ana, Calif.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 2 (AP)—Two young fliers were seriously injured today when a small plane (monocoupe) in which they were flying crashed at Cayuga Heights, Ithaca. They were Alan Austen, 23, and Scott Parsons, 25, both of Ithaca.

Tropical Storm Moving Toward Key West, Cuba

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 2 (AP)—A tropical storm moved slowly westward from the Bahamas early today apparently bound for the 90-mile stretch of water between Havana, Cuba, and Key West, Fla., but the weather bureau said it was seemingly of limited area.

Reports at 10 a. m. located the disturbance about 200 miles east of the Cuban capital. Meteorologist Grady Norton said its course was difficult to plot because of a scarcity of information from the vicinity.

The disturbance, he said, apparently was following a westward course with shifting gales and "may have winds of hurricane force over a small portion of the center."

Barring a change in direction, the weather bureau said, the storm was expected to pass between Key West and Cuba during the afternoon. The Florida Keys were warned to look out for the gale winds and high tides.

Because of the size and westward movement of the disturbance, observers added, it was not expected to have much effect on the coast from Miami north.

Tourist Slaying Suspect Cleared

DALLAS, Sept. 2 (AP)—The mystery of the disappearance of four Illinois tourists in New Mexico last May remained unsolved today after Dallas detectives abandoned efforts to link a safe robbery suspect with the case.

The youth was cleared of any implication last night after a man who had cashed one of several travelers checks belonging to the vacationists failed to identify him as the person who received the money.

The suspect was held, however, for investigation concerning a $1,000 ice cream plant robbery last Tuesday.

The youth's possible connection with the missing checks was investigated because of similarity of descriptions between him and the man who cashed a number of the checks across Texas and New Mexico.

Police believe the missing tourists, Mr. and Mrs. George Lorus of East St. Louis and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heberer of Duquoin, were victims of a mass murder.
