TWINS DISCUSS COINCIDENCE

It was a happy reunion for the Mikesell twins who on their first birthday met in a confab over the incidentals of their coincidental birth. For although Margaret and Kathryn were born to Dr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Mikesell and George and Nor-

Ship Building Far Exceeds Allied Losses

WASHINGTON, August 14—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill triumphantly announced today that "a total of over 90 U-boats were sent to the bottom of the seas during heavy fighting in May, June and July. The American and British leaders also declared in a joint statement, which indicated the two already have met for their current war talks, that the Nazis still have large reserve forces of undersea raiders and that the Allies can expect continued success in the all-important battle of supply lines to Europe only if the most effective measures possible are continued in force and even improved in results. The statistics and tone of the statement seemed to make it clear that the one weapon on which Adolf Hitler had counted to keep his fortress of Europe impregnable had failed completely at the strategic time, due to the overwhelming success of Allied counter-measures. Out of 2,500 vessels involved in the operations against Sicily and in moving large numbers of reinforcements following up the initial invasion, the report noted, only 80,000 tons had been lost. Moreover, it was disclosed that new ships completed by the Allies in 1943 "exceed all sinkings from all causes by upwards of three million tons."

Dads in Non-Essential Work Face Induction

WASHINGTON, August 14—(AP)—Thousands of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers holding non-war jobs tonight were laid open to possible induction even before their class becomes vulnerable as of whole October 1. This was apparent in a sweeping series of new orders aimed frankly at using Selective Service as a powerful instrument in the labor-military manpower situation to:

ANOTHER 'BELLE'

Romance rode again with young Major Robert K. Morgan and his famous flying fortress, "Memphis Belle," a veteran of 25 victorious missions over Europe. Back in his hometown of Asheville, N. C. Major Morgan revealed his engagement to a San Antonio girl, Jane Huckins, above, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Joseph Huckins. When Major Morgan flew to Memphis last June, it was slim, hazel-eyed Margaret Polk who greeted him with a kiss. It was she after whom the "Memphis Belle" was named. But something happened and only a few days ago, Miss Polk briefly announced "There will be no wedding, but Bob and I will always be good friends." (NEA Telephoto.)

Allied Chiefs Hold Meeting On U. S. Soil

QUEBEC, Aug. 14—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill already have had a preliminary meeting in advance of coming to Quebec for full-scale war talks, somewhere in the United States. Churchill left here Wednesday night, appeared briefly Thursday morning at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and apparently met the American chief executive shortly thereafter at an undisclosed point in the United States. When they will reach Quebec, where their chiefs of staff already are engaged in deliberations on the future course of Allied arms in the war, cannot be announced. Canadian officials said it had been permissible to announce to-night that the two Allied leaders had met. Previously, it had become known definitely that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden also would attend the Quebec war councils. Presumably the American secretary of state, Cordell Hull, or Under-Secretary Sumner Welles, also will join the deliberations. That would serve to give greater emphasis to political considerations in the meetings here, although the best available information indicates that military matters will remain uppermost on the conference agenda. Here in the Chateau Frontenac, headquarters for the combined chiefs of staff, American military experts were busy over the blueprints for victory with their British "opposite numbers," even carrying their discussions to the luncheon and dinner tables.

Russians Fighting In Streets of Kharkov; Austrian Plant Hit

Rome has been knocked out of the war by American air power. In the wake of Friday's second raid on the Italian capital the Italian government announced yesterday that it had "decided publicly and formally to declare Rome an open city without further delay" and was taking the necessary steps according to international law. The two all-American assaults on the Italian metropolis July 19 and Aug. 13 spilled 1,600 tons of explosive and fire bombs on the city's railroad yards, and Allied headquarters in North Africa reported yesterday that the big Littorio yard was completely blocked. In order to comply with the declaration and spare Rome further punishment the Italians would have to convince the Allies that they had stripped the city of all troops, defenses, military installations and war factories. German troops fighting desperately to reach the Sicilian bridgehead at Messina and escape to the Italian mainland would not be permitted under terms on an open city covenant to pass through Rome on their way to help man the new Nazi line in northern Italy. The picture in Sicily began to resemble the German debacle in Tunisia last May, but with the important exception that the Nazis were making an orderly retreat on Messina under cover of fierce rear-guard resistance. British and American forces had swept within 34 miles of Messina in virtually all sectors. Despite the best efforts of Allied planes and warships, which had the waters of Messina Strait boiling with bombs and shells, the Germans appeared likely to save the bulk of their Sicilian forces to fight another day. They were getting considerable equipment across the strait, too, but doubt was expressed that they would be able to salvage many tanks or big guns. A German correspondent whose message was broadcast by the Berlin radio described as "torture" the punishment the Nazis were taking from Allied planes and artillery as they backed dazedly toward their escape boats. The great Russian summer offensive appeared if anything, to be gathering momentum. Front line dispatches declared the Red army had

Rome Must Be Stripped Of Military

NEW YORK, August 14—(AP)—Rome must be stripped of every military to be declared an open city, which would place it outside the war zone. Information collected from Washington and London sources indicates that the Allied opinion of the open city is one from which have been removed all troops, defenses, military installations, including headquarters and headquarters staff, military production, including every kind of war factory, and transportation facilities which are used for the movement of military supplies or personnel. When all this has been done the power in possession then declares the city "open." The procedure in the creation of an open city is initiated by a third party, asking for conditions of the side hostile to the city in question. In the case of Rome, the Allies would not be bound to rely on Italy's word that all conditions had been fulfilled, but probably would take steps to have representatives see for themselves that they had been. A plainly-worded clause in the Hague convention of 1907 expressly outlawed attacks on open cities. Article 25 of the regulations says: "The attack or bombardment, by whatever means, of towns, villages, dwellings or villages which are undefended, is prohibited."

Lake McClellan, Pampa Pool Barred to Air Base Soldiers

Effective immediately, military personnel of Pampa Field are barred from swimming in Lake McClellan, the Pampa Municipal pool, or in pools in any town in this area, Col. Daniel S. Campbell, commanding officer of Pampa Field, ordered last night. The order was issued in conjunction with similar measures being taken by civilian authorities over the nation, designed to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis. Improvement was shown in Pampa's sole case of polio, the attending physician said last night. The case is that of the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Salsbury, 1025 Fisher. While hot packs will be used the next two weeks, the boy is getting along fine and is free of temperature, the doctor said.

Investigation Of A. & M. Affairs Is Considered

AUSTIN, August 14—(AP)—Two state senate investigating committees today toyed with the idea of looking into recent administrative changes at Texas A. & M. College, but a decision was not expected until the middle of next week. Sen. Houghton Brownlee of Austin announced that the senate's general investigating committee would be "open for business" here Wednesday but said he was not authorized under committee rules to say in advance what the agenda would be. Referring to possibility of investigating the resignation of Dr. T. C. Walton as president of A. & M. and the dismissal of H. H. Williamson as director of the college's extension service, he added: "We have not yet had any formal complaints, and the committee would have to have something to go on before starting an investigation." Sen. Penrose Metcalf, chairman of a senate committee given broad authority by the 48th legislature to

Northern Italy Attack Heard

CHIASSO, on the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Sunday, Aug. 15—(AP)—Heavy explosions heard from the direction of Turin indicated early today that the RAF again was attacking northern Italy. Travelers from Milan reported yesterday that following the RAF bombing early Friday the rush to leave Milan was so great that people climbed to the roofs of buses and police were obliged to use force to push people back. They said the food distribution system broke down and that while some stores reopened they lacked bread. A lack of water contributed to the difficulty of fighting the fires, some of which still were burning yesterday. A department store saved in Saturday afternoon. The latest bombing of Milan accomplished more devastating results than any previous raid, the travelers said.

Tommy Manville Will Marry Texas Girl

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Aug. 14—(AP)—Tommy Manville, white-haired marrying millionaire, obtained a marriage license today—his seventh— to wed Sunny Ainsworth, 19-year-old blonde Texas show girl. Manville, who gave his age as 40, said they would be married Tuesday at 11 a. m. at his Mamardroneck, N. Y. estate. Miss Ainsworth, who wrote her name on the license application as "Mae Marie Ainsworth Ettinger Moran," accompanied Manville to city hall to apply for the license, wearing green corduroy slacks and a white blouse. She has been married twice before, and has a four-year-old daughter. She is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Patrick Kain of Matagorda, Tex. When Mayor Stanley W. Church filled in the necessary papers before issuing the license, he asked Manville, "what is your usual occupation?" "Marrying," replied Tommy. When the mayor refused to accept the reply, Manville substituted "estate manager."

New York Boy, 13 Kills Small Girl

FISHKILL, N. Y., Aug. 14—(AP)—A 13-year-old boy camper from New York city set dejectedly tonight under questioning by state police who said he admitted criminally attacking and slaying a 10-year-old girl friend and tossing her body into a cornfield. State Police Captain Walter P. Reilly said no charge had yet been placed against the youth, apprehended at a summer camp about a mile and a half from the scene of crime. The battered body of the victim, Elizabeth Voigt, daughter of an East Fishkill farmer, was found by State Police Sergeant George J. Corsilia in a field bordering the eastern states parkway. Parents of the child, who had left home yesterday afternoon, notified state police when she had failed to return this morning. The troopers, obtaining the description on a boy with whom Elizabeth was reported to have been seen strolling yesterday, went to the camp and took the suspect into custody. Motorists Rush To Fill Tanks With Gasoline

Announcement of the gasoline curtailment, lopping one gallon off the four previously allowed weekly on A cards, created a rush at representative Pampa service stations yesterday. The cut goes into effect at 12:01 a. m. Monday. Warned in advance of the reduction in gasoline rations, one local service station owner has been warning his customers to get their cars filled up in time to take advantage of the extra gallon while there was still time. That warning paid off yesterday and the operator was doing a good business. At another large station, the increase in business was not so large, but the owner said there was more business last Saturday than on the preceding Saturday. He had 3,000 gallons of gasoline on hand. Other filling stations reported they had no rush early in the day but expected late afternoon and night trade to speed things up. The production superintendent of one oil company yesterday had warned all his employees to be sure and have their cars filled up with gasoline so they could reap full benefit from their coupons, before the axe fell.

Girl Who Received Pencilin May Live

NEW YORK, Aug. 14—(AP)—Hope for the life of two-year-old Patricia Malone, whose condition was considered hopeless until a supply of pencilin was obtained for treatment, quickened today after the child ate this morning for the first time since her illness became acute. Dr. Dante Colitti, staff surgeon at Lutheran hospital, said she was "improving slowly." However, her temperature, which was normal yesterday morning, was 101 throughout the night and at 8 a. m. today. Patricia is suffering from a blood disease, the staphylococcal type of septicemia. "We are hopeful, but not optimistic," Dr. Colitti said. The rare pencilin was brought to New York from New Brunswick, N. J. Wednesday night when doctors despaired of saving her life. Informed of the child's condition, City Editor Paul Schoenstein of the Journal-American obtained from government officials release of the drug, the supply of which is controlled by the army.

Ike Not Affected By Rome Decision

LONDON, Aug. 14—(AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's authority to direct military operations in the Mediterranean is not restricted by the Italian decision to declare Rome an open city, an official British statement said today. "The unilateral declaration by the Italian government that Rome is being converted into an open city cannot, of course, affect the full liberty of the commander in chief," it said.

Ice Shortage Sweeps Texas

It's just like old times in Texas when a man used to ride over to his neighbor, 20 miles away, and bring home whatever he was out of. Suffering acute ice shortages, many heat-stricken Texas communities are importing their ice from other towns. Austin Ice Manufacturer W. H. Pitts said plants there were shipping between 60 and 70 tons of ice daily to other Texas communities. One Brownsville Ice Manufacturing concern has been buying 40 tons a day from San Benito and Harlingen.

Our Subs Sink Seven Jap Ships

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14—(AP)—Destruction of seven more Japanese merchant vessels by American submarines waging a relentless war of attrition on enemy maritime power was announced today by the navy. In addition five enemy ships were reported damaged. The successful attacks announced in a radio communiqué raised the total of 309 the number of enemy ships of all types which have been reported blasted by gunfire or torpedoes of undersea raiders since the war started. This total includes 217 craft sunk, 29 probably sunk and 63 damaged.

Rawson Is Named Envoy to Brazil

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 14—(AP)—The foreign ministry announced today that Gen. Arturo Rawson, leader of the June 4 revolt which overthrew President Ramon Castillo's government, had been named Argentine ambassador to Brazil to replace Adriaan C. Escobar. Add Pyrol to your Gas and Oil. Motor Inn—Adv.

Straight From Shoulder: The Seiberling Rubber Company has performed a real public service by informing motorists, flatly and with stated reasons, why they must not expect a flood of tires in the near future.

This might seem, if one were too indolent to read the convincing explanation, to be in conflict with official statements that synthetic plants next year will make more rubber than the United States ever used in any normal year.

First because as Seiberling explains, "synthetic rubber" is not rubber, but a soft plastic, and up to now nobody has solved the problem of making satisfactory tires without using at least some natural gun rubber.

And a careful reading of the book supplied by the American Book Company, was evidence that it was more subtle and even more dangerous than the Rugg books.

The MacMillan Company sent in two books—"Civics in American Life" and "The Rise of Our Free Nation". The Allyn and Bacon Company sent in one book, "The Story of Our Country"; Ginn and Company sent in one book, "Never Surrender"; D. C. Heath and Company sent in two books, "You and Your Community" and "Citizenship in Our Democracy".

I have read enough of each of these books to find that their premises were not based on freedom, not based on the kind of a society our founding fathers hoped to establish; that is, a society where all men were equal before the law.

All of these books, to a greater or less degree, spread the doctrine that the state would improve the lot of the worker, if they only had enough faith in the state. All the text books are what might be called "Santa Claus" books. They offer a pleasant illusion for the children; they make it easier for the teachers. It is easier for a teacher to give a child a book to read that makes the child think he is going to get something for nothing.

Senator Bone of Washington (Democrat) writes this editorial about the suspension of prison sentences on Anaconda Wire & Cable Company officials who did not deny furnishing defective wire to the government.

"The cold, hard fact remains that the crime for which an American boy would be shot to death, if committed in a war zone, has... been considered so trifling that it should be punishable by a pitifully small fine.

"If the greed of men goes to such length that they are willing to endanger the lives of soldiers to enrich themselves they will find that some day, when this terrible war comes to an end, the people of America will write an iconoclastic thesis against such inequities in a fierce whirlwind of retribution."

Correct, Senator: Senator Bone of Washington (Democrat) writes this editorial about the suspension of prison sentences on Anaconda Wire & Cable Company officials who did not deny furnishing defective wire to the government.

Give Him an Inch—Joseph Curran, far left leader of the National Maritime Union, has a new idea. He wants the government to take up the working papers of seamen who have been suspended by the NMU for what the union may decide constitutes misconduct.

Already, by force of strikes, the union has forced many captains to back water on their own disciplinary actions. Already, by suspending a union member, Mr. Curran can deprive him of working rights wherever the NMU has contracts. Now Curran—who was against this war until Russia was attacked—wants to set ashore everywhere any seaman whose conduct offends Mr. Curran.

The Nation's Press: CONGRESSMEN MUST BE "GREASED" (L. A. Examiner—By George Brown)

Misguided members of organized labor unions have been publicly invited to subscribe to a fund for the purpose of bribing members of Congress.

An investigation of the campaign now under way will be demanded by members of the House of Representatives as soon as the summer recess comes to an end in September.

A few House members who are still in the city are indignant and if Congress were in session today the investigation would be put under way at once.

A dispatch to the New York Times from Philadelphia on July 16 quotes a letter, purporting to have been signed by William Boeber, financial secretary of the CIO United Automobile Workers Union Local No. 2, under date of July 6, to members of that union, as saying:

"The officers of our international union have asked us for $1 each. They are not demanding that dollar, they are asking for financial help to fight the anti-labor legislation of the future, which is sure to follow the war. They have spent millions gaining several points in Congress, which are now paying dividends to all of us.

"And as it may seem in this great democracy of ours, Congressmen must be 'greased'—that is, wined, dined and bribed for their votes; and they can be very effectively. This greasing process costs a tidy sum with every session of Congress. This is what your dollar goes for."

That is the boldest charge that has been made since reconstruction days, that members of the United States Congress are venal, that their votes may be bought, and have been bought, "at every session of Congress."

The charge is not merely a part of the general campaign of organized labor to "purge" from public life members of the Congress who voted for the Smith-Connelly anti-strike law.

That charge, it was quickly perceived at the Capitol in Washington, was part of a general smear campaign aimed at the integrity of Congress as an institution.

If the allegation is permitted to go unchallenged the people may be misled into believing that it is true, that members of the Congress may be "greased" with labor money.

A thorough investigation of this reflection upon the Congress as a whole is demanded, and it may be stated here that it will be demanded, as a matter of the highest privilege, on the day Congress returns to its job.

It is the present intention to summon Mr. Boeber before a special committee of the House, and to demand of him the names of any members of the House accused by him of accepting bribes.

"I speak the plain-worded truth, I give the sign of democracy. By God I will accept nothing which all cannot have their counterpart of on the same terms." —WALT WHITMAN.

REPORTING ON THE COLLECTIVIST TEXT BOOKS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS: The condition that faces the American people as to text books in the public schools advocating collectivism is very serious. Readers will remember that this column has opposed such collectivist books as the Rugg books, being taught in the public schools.

Recently a friend of the writer brought in a text book, "Democracy At Work" which is being used in the public schools. After reading this book, I found that it was just as bad as far as freedom is concerned as the Rugg books, or "America, the New Frontier", which is also taught in the public schools.

I requested the Superintendent of Schools to write to all the different text book companies in the United States and ask them to send him the book which they regarded as best defending the free enterprise, the American way of life.

Seven text books were sent in. Only one of the text book companies, the American Book Company, even claimed that their books defended and presented the law of supply and demand, or free enterprise system.

And a careful reading of the book supplied by the American Book Company, was evidence that it was more subtle and even more dangerous than the Rugg books.

The MacMillan Company sent in two books—"Civics in American Life" and "The Rise of Our Free Nation". The Allyn and Bacon Company sent in one book, "The Story of Our Country"; Ginn and Company sent in one book, "Never Surrender"; D. C. Heath and Company sent in two books, "You and Your Community" and "Citizenship in Our Democracy".

I have read enough of each of these books to find that their premises were not based on freedom, not based on the kind of a society our founding fathers hoped to establish; that is, a society where all men were equal before the law.

All of these books, to a greater or less degree, spread the doctrine that the state would improve the lot of the worker, if they only had enough faith in the state. All the text books are what might be called "Santa Claus" books. They offer a pleasant illusion for the children; they make it easier for the teachers. It is easier for a teacher to give a child a book to read that makes the child think he is going to get something for nothing.

Then the teachers do not have to work as hard to keep their children interested when they are promised pleasant things, as when they are requested to read something that disciplines their minds.

Few people realize what has taken place in the public schools. The most important thing in our lives is the education of our children. And to send our children to schools that teach them collectivism, teach them something that all history bears evidence will bring poverty and misery and loss of character, if continued, is certainly not treating our children justly, to say the least.

If anybody can find a single solitary text book that is suitable for the lower grades of school, to be used in what is called the social studies, which to any degree defends and advocates the free enterprise, the competitive system, the American way of life, the law of supply and demand, I would be delighted to have them name the book. There is nothing more important than that our children have an opportunity in their youth to be trained to respect the inherent rights of every other person. The text books that are now in the public schools do not do that.

The scarcity of the things we have, the crimes we have, the bad laws we have, certainly are not improved in any way by the text books used in our public schools.

We should bow our heads in shame to think of the great disservice we are rendering to the children of the public schools.

It is time for the American people to wake up as to what they are doing to their children.

DEMANDS—Bureau of Labor Statistics reveals the apparent fallacy in relying on piecemeal earnings as a guide for readjustments in pay scales. And it should be noted here that Frances Perkins' reports, while not exactly doctored, usually favor the employed, not the employer.

Her economists found that "average hourly earnings" went up forty per cent between January, 1941 and May, 1943. But the weekly envelope was swollen sixty-two per cent.

Meanwhile, general living costs shoveled upward only 24.1 per cent although food registered a 48.2 per cent markup. This hourly receipts still top the added burden on the family budget by almost sixteen per cent. And the amounts taken home on Saturday night exceed two and a half times the extra household expenditures.

These arguments make no impression on organized labor's representatives, however. They maintain that half of the nation's forty million employed are workers of now than they were when the war started. And they will resent it bitterly if their current demands are not cashed by F. D. R.

JAMMED—Jesse H. Jones's War Damage Corporation would have lost a lot of business if Mussolini had been deposed, Sicily had been conquered and the German crisis had occurred before the renewal date for policies on July first. But the favorable turns abroad came too late, and the five million-sold holders of this insurance are signing up for a second year almost unanimously.

Although this protection against destruction by the enemy has been written in every state, territory and possession, around sixty per cent of the nation's population would have been killed or maimed if the war had been won by the Axis powers.

It looks like an impossible job. For one thing, it will take a vast, cumbersome and very expensive federal job-holder machine to pay out these allowances to every farmer and/or processor and/or wholesaler and/or retailer. For another, it is doubtful that the average family's food costs will be lowered noticeably.

The big trouble with the whole subsidy scheme, as we see it, is that the law of supply and demand is a tough and tricky old bird, who, despite the fiercest efforts to defeat him, almost always wins the last battle.

Adversity Preferred: We should be interested in a brief, convincing exposition of the reasoning which led the OPA to forbid suburbanites to fatten their own beef.

The number who have land on which to raise a steer is relatively small, of course. But can you think of any good reason why Jim White, who has a couple acres of grass, shouldn't raise his own calf, kill it or have it killed, and eat the meat, if he wants to do so?

Neither can we. The OPA can, through. The OPA has imagination.

The biggest mistake in life is to constantly fear you'll make one.

DESERTERS

The National Whirligig News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER: DECREE—The threat that prospective wage increases may generate another inflationary cycle has provoked a fresh outburst of condemnation of Washington's handling of this explosive problem.

Political and economic critics now assail the famous "Little Steel Formula" as an artificial standard for considering these new demands. It is pointed out that this scheme is based on "average hourly earnings," an ignominy altogether the "average weekly earnings."

The latter total measures more accurately the trend in industrial income, for it reflects such factors as overtime, longer hours, and steady employment. Nor does the Presidential criterion allow for raise granted before January, 1941, the base month for the White House decree permitting a fifteen per cent advance between that period and May, 1943, if conditions justify it.

The small amount distributed so far testifies to the excellent quality of Tokyo flyers at Honolulu and in the Aleutians. The hostile airmen evidently concentrated on military targets and only scattering fire hit homes of civilians. Most of the destruction consisted of automobiles parked on the streets, clothing of workmen at Dutch Harbor and merchandise on route in trucks or other vehicles.

So it looks as if Uncle Sam's first experiment in this form of personnel positions were previously employed as (1) an elevator operator, (2) a soda mixer in a drug store, and (3) a telephone girl. And Mr. Ramspeck's sleuths hold that these are not isolated cases. They will submit the samples to Congress as indicative of the conditions which prevail in almost every Government department.

The serious evil is that such persons in authority open doors to equally unqualified friends. They pass around the word that "It's a possession, around sixty per cent

Around Hollywood

By ERSKINE JOHNSON: This is the story of a man who, because he wanted to be an actor, discovered that his worst enemy was his father. He studied and rehearsed constantly with the hope of an acting career. He achieved a certain amount of prominence on the stage but there was always something in the background which stood between him and his goal.

Then he came to Hollywood and made his motion picture debut as an actor. And again it was the same old story. He was a good enough actor, but well, there was that barrier—the someone he had encountered on the stage. And then an important Hollywood executive, wise in the ways of show business, straightened him out.

"You ought to give up acting," he said. "No matter how good you become, you'll never get the recognition you deserve. People will always say that you'll never be as good an actor as your father."

The young actor saw the wisdom of the friend's advice and cast aside the greasepaint and the thoughts of stardom and became a director—one of the best directors in Hollywood. The man whose worst enemy was his father—Director Lloyd Bacon, son of the famous Frank Bacon.

This is the story of a man who became one of Hollywood's brightest stars because he didn't say a word. He was new to Hollywood, a not-so-successful Broadway stage actor who had decided to try his luck in motion pictures. So far it had been all bad.

Then came a motion picture in which he was cast as a villain. It was just another small role—only three days work—only three lines of dialog. But his agent had an idea. Would the producer mind if the actor wore a black suit? It was an odd request, the producer said it would be all right. Then, just before the picture started, the agent went to the producer again.

"Look," he said, "my client has only three lines of dialog in the entire picture. Would you mind very much if my client just didn't say anything?"

The producer was dumfounded. An actor not wanting to talk. What was going on?

"Well," explained the agent, "we've discussed the role and my client says he can play it much better without saying anything."

The actor was right. The picture was Producer Samuel Goldwyn's "Barbary Coast." The star was Edward G. Robinson. But the unknown bit player who stole the picture because he didn't say a word was—Brian Donley.

Pincers Work Both Ways

A dozen or so years ago there was a tiny basement restaurant in the Greenwich Village section of New York city where artists and writers gathered. There was a heavy old piano and, occasionally, someone would get up and play while the whole group burst into song. Above the voices of the others could be heard that of a young girl, newly arrived in New York from the hills of Tennessee. Presently she was urged to sing alone and she soon proved to be an attraction.

One evening a young man stopped by the restaurant with a group of friends. He was a successful musical comedy and vaudeville star. He heard the young girl from Tennessee sing and was struck by her beauty and the power of her rich, untrained voice. Her ambition impressed him. He gave her a note to the theatrical producer, Sam Harris. She was auditioned and signed for a leading role in a Music Box revue. She scored an immediate hit, became the toast of New York and finally saw herself and no work. Then, as placement directors, they make good in these kind pledges to their pals.

Note: Scores of young men and women who came here to do a real wartime service are quitting in disgust every week. They are unwilling to draw their pay for doing nothing.

AMONG every day the local newspapers carry their indignantly-led-up letters.

Nazis Broadcast Suggestive Drivel To Our Soldiers

By PETER EDSON

A check-up on recordings of some of the Berlin propaganda which the Nazi radio has been beaming to the American Expeditionary Forces in North Africa and Sicily reveals some highly amusing stuff. It's too bad this program can't be picked up in the United States because it would do more to unify sentiment in this country than any soap opera dramatization of a fireside chat, and it would serve the further purpose of making everyone want to catch the first train to Berlin and cut the tongue right out of every one of the actors and script writers in the Goebbels talent stable. Gad, what our boys ought to put up with and how they must suffer.

Prize program on the Nazi radio is a broadcast called "Home, Sweet Home," starring Midge and Fritz. OVI transcripts of the FCC monitoring service recently revealed this as a forced effort to make the boys homesick. It's a kind of variety program. The incidental music runs mostly to sentimental ballads which might make a man miss his best girl if he tried right hard, but the real propaganda, punch is this as a forced effort to make the boys homesick.

"Have a nice weekend? I'll bet you're sizzling over there in North Africa." This is probably intended to make the troops discontented.

"Halo, SREF!" she greeted them on another program. Then she went on to explain that SREF stood for "Samuel Rosenman's Expeditionary Force" and that Samuel Rosenman was the man who was in charge of the government in Washington at the time the plot was hatched to send the American troops to Africa.

Most of the troops probably never heard of Rosenman, but this will give you an idea of the type of stuff the Nazis pick up and capitalize on. This one is told by Midge:

A little girl is hearing good night to her mother, daddy presumably being over there: "Mother, need I brush the looth the dentist is going to pull tomorrow?"

Or this one: Midge: Can you tell me Napoleon's nationality? Fritz: Course I can. Midge: That's right. Fritz: What do you mean, that's right?

Midge: Corsican. The "Home, Sweet Home" hour really went to town, though in a recent skit on life in the home of an American club woman, Mrs. Cold White, introduced while talking on the phone to Eleanor Roosevelt. Other characters are Comrade Popovskiy, a caller, Mrs. White's daughter, Frances, and a colored butler, George Washington Rastus Lincoln.

ANTI-NEGRO: The build-up is to establish Lincoln as a faithful retainer, whom Mrs. White identifies to Comrade Popovskiy as "one of the family." Popovskiy also knows Lincoln, having made his acquaintance at a meeting of the Colored Epitip Society, at which Popovskiy made a talk filled with good Stalinist doctrine that all races are equal. Popovskiy is explaining this to Mrs. Cold White when Lincoln speaks up as follows:

"All, dat is what Mrs. Roosevelt said in her column the other week, that us of the dark-skinned races, mixing with the cultured people of the nation, would produce better progeny, or something of the kind."

Says Mrs. Cold White: "It's absolutely true. I agree with her."

Again you realize what straws the Nazis are grabbing at to create disunity. Anyway—billied as a star of the Metropolitan opera, of radio and the screen. The name of the young man who helped the girl on the road to fame—radio star Phil Baker. The girl with the untrained voice from Tennessee—Grace Moore.

Today's War Analysis

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The outer walls of the Axis fortress of Europe were collapsing in the east and south and its roof was newly pierced by deluges of Allied bombs on this mid-August weekend but it is on an impending new mobilization of America, Canadian and British military brain-trusters in Quebec that world attention centers.

Under personal direction of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, top-ranking Allied air, sea and ground warfare experts are gathering in Canada to chart new war directives for the global struggle.

There are several essential factors that tend to reveal in broad outline matters which the experts are considering. The means to achieve desired strategic ends now are available to the Allies as never before.

Mediterranean victories that have made Italy in a matter of weeks an impotent, tottering war paralytic of German hands instead of a helpful Ally are yet to be exploited fully.

Moreover, there was bold evidence the Allies were winning in another phase of the war. Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt announced jointly that 90 U-boats had been sunk in May, June and July and that new ships completed by the Allies in 1943 "exceed all sinkings from all causes by upwards of three million tons." This government supplement reopening of the short Mediterranean route to the Indian ocean and the Middle East.

That is a matter of supreme consequence for the war planners. It vitally bears on the time element of weeks off the period otherwise necessary to organize and deliver new and heavier blows to add to Axis misery on any front around the world.

And time, working now in Allied favor, is the key to what may happen if Europe on another grim winter approaches for Nazi invaders in Russia.

Nazi blitzkrieg veterans are in full flight from Sicily. They were confronted in Russia with a greater and far more perilous flight behind the Coluber on an 800-mile front.

When the strategic conference in Canada ends, its chosen spokesman unquestionably will say that taking enemy weight off Russia still is a prime Allied objective. The absence of Russian leaders from the council of war in no way alters that.

And Allied successes in Sicily, not only in the territory so quickly swept clear of the foe, but in the weaving of an international mixed force of a unity of command are staff work, makes a western invasion attempt a far less risky venture.

People in the occupied areas once were our customers. At first they will have no money to buy goods from us. The amount we spend in helping them to become self-supporting is trivial compared to the amount they will spend when they resume the creation of wealth.

Foreign Relief Director Herbert Lehman.

The climax of the skit comes when Frances appears and announces that, following the beliefs of her mother, she and Lincoln are to be married. And the announcer cuts in to say that the descendants of Mrs. Cold White will be coal black.

This is the picture the Nazis are trying to build up in "Home, Sweet Home." If it isn't sickening enough for you, you should read the script of the program in which Fritz describes Midge over the radio for her friends in Africa, since he can't send them her picture.

Says the announcer to Midge: "I want to tell them about your hair and your eyes and your thighs—I mean your size."

There follows a lot more suggestive drivel, including the line, "In seduction, it's the introduction that counts," and in which the announcer gives Midge a descriptive going over that is about the closest thing to radio ravishment that will ever be recorded. Its purpose, obviously, is to weaken the moral fibre of the American troops. This from the superior Nazi, Aryan culture.

Police Radio Aids In Recovering Car

Pampa's police radio station, KPAM, was responsible for the recovery of a 1939 Ford coupe, belonging to J. I. Stanley, 426 N. Cuyler, stolen in Pampa early Friday morning.

The automobile was found in Memphis by Texas state police, then taken to Estelline, where it was stored.

The car was recovered Friday afternoon, a few hours after it was stolen. The Pampa police station put the report of the stolen vehicle out over the radio network. It was relayed by the Amarillo police radio on its periodic report, and led to the recovery of the automobile.

Many Casualties Reported in Rome

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 14—(P)—The hour-long American air raid on the city of Rome resulted in a "great number" of casualties, the Rome correspondent of the Swedish paper Dagen Nyheter reported today.

The dispatch said no figures were announced but that ambulances and rescue cars were extremely busy after what the Rome press described as a "massive raid."

The Rome correspondent of another Swedish newspaper said many fires were started in the Tuscolana district near Lorenzo station and many private dwellings in the Pretestino, Cosilino and Appio districts were ruined.

Brownfield Man Robbed of $50 after Joining Former Convict in Drinking Bottle of Wine

Two quarts of wine was the start of a tangled series of events that led to the photo-finish arrest by Pampa police of a man held in county jail on a charge of theft from persons amounting to $50.

It began Wednesday when Chester Massengale, Huntsville, the man charged, had a chance encounter with a man from Brownfield. Massengale had the wine, got to talking with the latter, who had arrived in town by bus and asked him where he could find a room.

The rest room of a filling station on S. Cuyler was the place where the bottles were first tapped. Then the Brownfield man said it was hot weather for wine drinking and wanted some water. Massengale suggested they go to his hotel room.

At the room, more wine was drunk, and finally the Brownfield man, according to District Attorney Walter E. Rogers, "passed out," whereupon Massengale relieved his companion of $50, went downstairs, and notified the hotelkeeper to call the police to get the man out of his room.

Police made the call and duly had the sleeping man confined in the city jail. When he recovered from his stupor, he told his story to the police, who checked with the hotel, then made a run to the bus station.

There they apprehended Massengale who had boarded an Amarillo-bound bus that was just leaving the station on S. Russell.

He had $25.82 in his possession, Ray Dudley, Pampa police chief said.

Arrest of Massengale occurred Thursday morning, but it was not until Friday that the case was cleared up, a statement obtained from him, and he was transferred to county jail.

Massengale, Chief Dudley said, was an ex-convict, who had served two terms on charges of car theft in state prison. His home is in Huntsville, but he had been working in Plainview, quit a job there and came to Pampa, arriving here Monday.

The other man had been working with his son who farms a place near Brownfield.

The 31st district court grand jury probably will hear the case when it convenes again here, within the next two weeks.

Woman Rescued From Elevator

OMAHA, Aug. 14—(P)—Mrs. Leah Smith, 18, an elevator operator, underwent three hours of agony last night when her leg became caught between the lift and the shaft of an elevator at an Omaha hotel, during which she pleaded with doctors not to amputate the leg.

She was extricated after firemen removed steel sheeting on the shaft wall and cut off her shoe. Physicians said today that barring complications her foot will not be crippled.

Allen McCormick, bellboy at the hotel and Mrs. Smith's brother, held her in his arms during much of the ordeal. She maintained her courage throughout, and doctors gave her sedatives to alleviate the pain. The doctors debated at one time whether the leg would have to be amputated to free her. Mrs. Smith pleaded with them not to do so.

SMILE—YOU LOOK BETTER

If times are hard and you feel blue,
Think of others who are worrying, too.
Just because your trials are many,
Don't think the rest of us haven't any.
Life is made up of smiles and tears,
Joys and sorrows mixed with fears;
And, although it seems one-sided,
Trouble is pretty well divided.

And those who travel fortunes road
Sometimes carry the biggest load;
If we could look into every heart
We'd find that each one has it's part.
(Author Unknown)

Quiet a number of complaints have been coming in about the way in which "paying guests" are treated in private homes here in Pampa. Since Pampa is overcrowded, it is necessary and right for people to rent out every available space, but there is a limit to their good humor, even if they do hesitate to tell us so. Ruth Millett, NEA correspondent, has something to say about situations like these:

"Apparently women need to improve their "paying guest" manners. Word from Washington says that landladies in the capital have such a preference for men roomers that girl war workers have a difficult time finding a place to live.

Years of experience have probably taught landladies that men are easier to have around than women. Anyhow, the girls who have to live in rooming houses or private homes ought to look into the matter, and if they think it may be true their "paying guest" manners aren't as good as their guest manners, they ought to get busy and improve them. Maybe they have long, chatty conversations over the telephone every night—keeping the line busy so that the other roomers can't get their calls.

Maybe they hold the bathroom for long periods at a time while they put on their makeup, wash out things they could send to the laundry, and try out the latest reducing exercises.

Maybe they borrow the landlady's iron and forget to return it when they're finished.

Maybe they are a little bit snooty toward the landlady.

Maybe, being women and used to looking in corners for dirt, they are unnecessarily critical of her housekeeping.

Maybe they get too chummy among themselves, and then have fights, ending up in one woman roomer—or both—packing up and moving out. Maybe they are too addicted to shopping around to settle down in one place and look on it as home, but are willing to pack up and move on every time they hear of a rooming house that seems to offer some advantage theirs doesn't have.

Maybe they can't resist gossiping about the other roomers. There is a chance, though, that their rooming house manners are the very best and that the only reason they aren't welcomed by landladies is the fact that landladies are women, and being women, just naturally prefer to have men around the house."

If you wish to "get even" with someone who has done you a wrong—forget it.

Things do come to a pretty past. Yes, with all the solemnity that could be mustered, with all the regal dignity, and with the soothing strains of Lohengrin, a wedding took place at the USO last Wednesday evening... not really, of course, because Harry Garson was the minister. At this wedding however, Virginia Lee West, was the bustling bride, gowned in a gray sports skirt, jersey blouse and anklets, with an off-white tea towel caught at the top of her tiara of hobbit-pins. She carried a large tawled geranium in a silver bucket as her bridal bouquet. The bridegroom was John Branham who was as nervous as Wilkie on election day, all dressed up in his best G. I. clothes. Bob Murphy offered various wedding music, throwing in a bit of boogie-woogie here and there. The wedding went well and the couple left immediately after the ceremony to grab a hamburger at the nearest eating place.

Many Pampans are glad to know that Lorene McClintock, former Pampa music teacher, is back for a visit. So many nice things could be said about her that it would be difficult to start, because among her accomplishments, which are many, she plays the piano such that puts you out of this world and sings just as nicely.

He: "Pardon me, bit you look like Helen Brown."
She: "Yeah, and I look almost as bad in red."

Yank—"Where did you get your deep southern accent?"
Southern Belle—"Why, honey, ah got it from drinkin' out uv a Dixie cup."

Most people around town think that Maurine Jones is one of the nicest persons they know. Maurine always has time to stop and chat for a second, or at least smile and call out a big hello. Another personable woman around town is Evora Crawford, who is always happy and has the nicest hair style! Both Maurine and Evora were in a local restaurant the other night eating watermelon, and wishing that they were out in the watermelon patch so that they could dispense with all the culinary and eat it "Pickanniny" style. Nuts to preventions—Yes?

From occupied Belgium, where the Nazis have butchered considerable livestock in their systematic looting of the country, comes the following anti-Hitler joke:

Premier Winston Churchill and Adolf Hitler decided to meet in a Spanish bull ring, agreeing that whoever was first gored by the bull would have to acknowledge defeat. The bull, according to the joke, made for Churchill, who stepped aside, however, and whispered something in the bull's ear. Then the bull turned around and attacked Hitler, goring him to death. Churchill—the story goes—later explained that he had whispered: "That's the guy who killed all the cows."

Ever notice what pretty carscrows and clips that Bernice Chapman wears most of the time? She can always be seen at work with a noval pair on, and has quiet a collection of interesting ones. And speaking of collecting, Wilma Chapman has an elegant collection of souvenir spoons that have come from here and you, in and out of the United States. Mrs. Sam Williams has enough salt and pepper shakers to furnish every restaurant in town and still have couple of dozen left over. They are as tricky as they are pretty too.

The Mike Roaches have the most healthy looking Victory Garden around town. Looks like a lot of work must have been required, and I hear Jack and Dan got their quota.

Everyone is glad to have Wayne and Ruth Phelps back for a short visit from Bucyrus, Ohio. They are visiting Wayne's mother, Mrs. Leila Phelps and his sister, Eugenia in Pampa and will also visit her parents in Berger. Wayne was formerly the advertising manager of the Pampa News, and has many friends in Pampa.

"Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do which must be done, whether you like it or not."

Lt. and Mrs. Lawrence S. McBee

Johnson-McBee Vows Are Said

Miss Natalie Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Johnson of Colorado Springs, Colo., became the bride of Lt. Lawrence S. McBee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace McBee of Pampa, in a single ring ceremony read at the Slove Memorial Chapel, Colorado Springs, Colo. Vows were taken August 5, at 4 p. m., with Chaplain Ray N. Johnson reading the ceremony.

Miss Leta Gale played the following organ selections: "Largo," "Ave Maria," "Liebestraum," "Always" and Lohengrin's Wedding March. The chapel was decorated with tall white candles, palms, ferns, snapdragons, gladioli and garden flowers.

Attending the couple was Miss Alice Anderson of Cheyenne, Wyo., maid of honor, wearing a gown of light blue net and a tiny flower hat with tulle ruffles. She carried a colonial bouquet of summer flowers. Lt. H. R. Brettell of Laramie, Wyo., served Lt. McBee as best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon with a full length train, and full length pointed sleeves. Her bridal veil of tulle was caught to a Juliet cap embroidered with pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of tea roses, lilies and pink centering a gardenia.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride. The bride's table was centered with an arrangement of white shasta daisies, ferns, and baby breath, carrying out a green and white color scheme. Approximately 50 guests attended the ceremony. (Continued on Page 10.)

Her father is with the 83 Ft. Squadron in England, and has been stationed there since last November.

Beverly Ann will return to her home in Durango, Colo., September 1, and will attend school there.

Ensign and Mrs. George Lane, Judge and Mrs. W. R. Ewing, and Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Bowen.

Plans selections were given during the evening by Miss Jean Paxson and Miss Bonnie Nell McBee. Mrs. Bob McCoy entertained with several solo numbers.

Schwind-Collins Vows Are Said In Ft. Knox, Kentucky

Miss Madeleine R. Schwind, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schwind, 215 Sunset Drive, Amarillo, became the bride of Lt. Frank M. Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Collins of Chanute, Tex., on August 14, at Ft. Knox, Ky.

Lt. E. Cardonic read the marriage ceremony. Attending the couple were Mrs. Margaret Dial, of Pampa, sister of the bride and Lt. James McClain of Ft. Knox.

Mrs. Collins was graduated from Pampa High school and from Brantley-Draughon business college in Fort Worth. She has been employed by Walter G. Russell, accountant, in Amarillo for the past three years.

Lt. Collins is a graduate of New Mexico Military Institute and was formerly employed by the Shamrock Oil and Gas company in Sunray.

The couple will be at home in Elizabethtown, Ky.

Viernes Club Meets In C. Ford Home

The Viernes club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. Coyle Ford at 308 N. Sumner.

The afternoon hours were spent in sewing. A refreshment plate of fruit salad and cake was served to the following members:

Mmes. Charles Miller, Burdett Keim, A. C. Crawford, W. E. Jordan, Homer Doggett, Francis Hukill and Emmett Forrester.

Mrs. Bill Robinson attended as a special guest, and a gift was presented to the hostess by club members.

Plans were made for a breakfast to be held August 7 at 8 o'clock.

Cpl. and Mrs. Leo H. Moore

Miss Daisy Schaffer and Cpl. Leo H. Moore are married in single ring ceremony. In a single ring ceremony read Monday, August 9, Miss Daisy L. Schaffer, daughter of Mrs. Dick Schaffer of Pampa, became the bride of Cpl. Leo H. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Moore, of Wheeler.

Attendants were Miss Marie Frazier, maid of honor, and Pfc. Fred P. Klaus, best man. Miss Frazier wore a white linen suit with a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Moore is a graduate of Pampa High school and is now employed at the Pampa Army Air Field.

Cpl. Moore is stationed at Camp Robinson, Ark., in the Medical Service of the United States Army. Mrs. Moore plans to join her husband the latter part of this month. They will make their home in Little Rock.

Miss Eliose Taylor And Quay Martin Wed In California

Miss Eliose Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Taylor of Pampa, and Quay Martin, SK/1c, U. S. N. R., son of Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Martin, of Texarkana, were married Thursday, August 5, at 7 p. m. in Los Angeles, Calif.

The candlelight ceremony was read by the Rev. L. M. Denton, D. D., in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ell Rhodes, relatives of the bride. A background of a large mirror reflecting a crystal bowl which contained pink and white carnations and a miniature statue of the Madonna Mary furnished a scene for the marriage ritual.

The bride wore a white silk suit with fitted coat. Her corsage was of red rose buds and baby breath.

Attending the couple were Mrs. Ell Rhodes and Joseph H. Martin, Y. 2c, U. S. N. R., brother of the groom.

A reception was held in the Rhodes home after the ceremony. The couple are at home in San Diego, Cal., where Storekeeper Martin has been stationed since his enlistment in the Navy, November 25, 1941.

Mrs. Martin was graduated from Pampa High School in 1941, where she was a member of the Pep Squad, a Capella Choir and National Honor Society. She is a member of Sigma Tau Sorority and was employed by Danziger Oil and Refining Company prior to her marriage.

Storekeeper Martin, while in Pampa, was employed by Stanolind Oil Company. He is a graduate of Boddaw High school, near Hope, Arkansas, and attended Brantley-Draughon Business college in Fort Worth, Tex.

V Notes RED CROSS VOLUNTEERS

By MRS. H. E. HAHN
At a meeting in Dalhart this week of the North Plains Camp and Hospital Council, Pampa was able to report that three sunrooms at Pampa Field have been completely furnished. The V. F. W. Auxiliary, the American Legion Auxiliary and the Pampa Rotary Club have furnished one sunroom each. One squadron dayroom has been completely furnished by the Parish Council of club women. Furnishings for one dayroom have been promised by the Eastern Star. Of all the reports given by the eighteen chapters which comprise the North Plains Camp and Hospital Council, Pampa's was, by far, the best.

Mrs. Massa, production chairman, emphasizes the importance of having ing all outstanding garments turned in as soon as possible, in order that all shipments can be made ready by September 1. This week Mrs. E. C. Hart and Mrs. Sam Logan have been busy with preparations for shipping pajamas and convalescent robes. These garments are made up into bundles of five; they are then ready for packing. Mrs. Hart stated that the pajamas and robes are attractive and of superior workmanship.

Mrs. W. R. Campbell has started another First Aid class at Pampa Field. She leaves town on the 1:30 bus and is met at the entrance by a jeep, in which she is conveyed to the sub-depot. Mrs. Campbell says that riding in a jeep is not so jolly as one might think; it is somewhat similar to riding a wild mustang. Despite this, however, she is having lot of fun with her class of 20 men and 3 women, all of whom are workers in the maintenance department.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT
Mrs. C. P. Buckler, surgical dressings chairman, announces that the surgical dressings program will be suspended from Monday, August 16 until September 15. The room is being closed in order to give the mothers an opportunity to get the children ready for school and to enroll them in their classes. Sometime before September 15 Mrs. F. L. Reppert, surgical dressings supervisor for this area, will come to Pampa to conduct a two-day institute. She will go over our problems with us and help up to work out difficulties that may confront the surgical dressings organization.

And Pampa men discharged from the armed forces because of disability is informed by the Red Cross workers in the service hospital from which he is sent that the Pampa Red Cross Chapter stands ready to extend assistance to him in the home community. It was stated today by Mrs. M. F. Roche, chapter home service chairman.

The chapter is notified of his discharge and is ready to get in touch with him the minute he arrives home," said Mrs. Roche.

With the price of American victories evident in the substantial upswing of the Red Cross case load month by month, the organization's traditional claims assistance service is expanding rapidly. Mrs. Roche pointed out.

Forty-six Red Cross field directors have already been assigned to Veterans' Administration hospital facilities, she said, and Red Cross units in army and navy hospitals are being augmented by staff aides who are also trained in preparing applications for pensions, insurance, allotments, allowances, hospitalization and other benefits.

In all areas throughout the country, Red Cross Veterans' Administration field directors assisted 2,258 veterans with claims in October 1942. By January of this year the number had reached 14,781, and by April the total was stepped up to 25,309.

The entire resources of the Red Cross are available to veterans at all stages of their adjustment to civilian life, if they desire to make use of them," said Mrs. Roche. "The Pampa Chapter is preparing to do its full part by the men from this community."

New Farrow Picture Stars Ladd, Young

By BROWNWOOD EMERSON

The Orient, war, and romance are mixed in Paramount's "China," showing today, tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday at the LaNora.

Directed by John Farrow, who megged "Wake Island," and "Commandos Strike at Dawn," the film shows how the devotion of an American school teacher to her pupils stirs a callous salesman to rousing deeds in behalf of the Chinese.

Alan Ladd and Loretta Young are the co-stars. William Bendix, who jumped to fame as a brawny marine in "Wake Island," and Ladd are cast as American oil men thrown by circumstances into the struggle of the Chinese against the diabolical Japs.

Loretta Young and Alan Ladd are the stars of Paramount's thrilling film of the Far Eastern battle front, "China," now at the LaNora theatre. William Bendix, Philip Ahn, Soo Yong, Iris Wong and Sen Yung have the top supporting roles. Recently, Miss Young, at the behest of Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, was decorated with the coveted Order of the Plum Bloom for her work on behalf of China relief.

Jean Porter of Cisco, Eastland county, has the role of the chum of Virginia Weidner in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's pieturization of Lillian Day's novel, "The Youngest Profession," story of how girl autograph hunters meet movie stars and entangle parents in harmless but annoying gossip.

The picture is showing Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at the LaNora.

Adding to the interest of fans is the utilization of the plot to bring in stars in guest appearances, Lana Turner, Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Robert Taylor and William Powell, among others.

The Texan in the cast, Miss Porter, has appeared in "Babes on Broadway," "Nazi Nuisance," and "Heart of the Rio Grande."

German Ack-Ack
Fire Intensified
A U. S. BOMBER STATION IN BRITAIN, August 14—(AP)—Anti-aircraft fire rising in umbrellas to as high as 34,000 feet and German fighter planes in heavy strength were met Thursday by American Flying Fortress crews in their strong raid on German industrial targets—it was what our men call a rough day.

Lt. Robert D. Metcalf, Sacramento, Calif., told of German flak so heavy and so high as to split up formations of the Nazis' own fighter planes. He added that he saw at least 100 fighters at one time and that they were "playing leapfrog" through the fire.

Yanks Had to Hide from Own Divebombers in Taking Troina

By DON WHITEHEAD
WITH THE AEF AT TROIINA, Aug. 6 (Delayed)—(AP)—The sun was dropping behind the Sicilian hills on the fifth day of the battle for Troina when Lt. Stan Mastly, Philadelphia, gathered his seven-man patrol together in a vineyard at the edge of no man's land. He was going to try to get into Troina.

For five bitter days the fight for this enemy stronghold had been deadlocked in the valleys and on the ridges below Troina. The Germans had been ordered to hold at all costs, and fought hard from their strong defensive positions.

Night after night tired American troops (Terry Allen's fighting first division) attacked. Sometimes they managed to cling to a ridge, sometimes they were shoved back and had to come out of their foxholes and trenches to try again.

Mastly reported to Major Charles (Chuck) Horner of Doylestown, Pa., his battalion commander. "When you come back if you manage to get into the town—give Lt. and K. companies directions on how to reach Troina," Horner said.

"Do you want me to fight if we meet anyone? Each man is carrying a bandolier of ammunition and one hand grenade. We are traveling light."

"No, don't try to fight. There are too few of you."
"OK, Goodbye, sir."
"Goodbye and good luck, Mastly!"

The youth led his patrol across the top of the ridge into the dusk toward Troina, looming dark against the skyline two miles east of us.

We wrapped ourselves in blankets and lay down in slit trenches to try to get some sleep before Mastly's return. Overhead the shells from our artillery moaned across.

It was 11 o'clock when Mastly came back. "We got about half way when a machinegunner opened up on us," he reported to Horner. "I put my men on a ridge and took one man with me to try to work around to the right, but they opened up with rifles and we came back. We found a wounded German and talked to him but couldn't get anything out of him."

"We'll sit tight tonight," Horner said, "and see what happens. We went back to our slit trenches. We were up at dawn and had a can of meat and beans for breakfast, with chocolate dissolved in cold water."

"We are going into Troina," Horner told Capt. Albert H. Smith of Baltimore. "Order all the companies to move."

And with the sun throwing long shadows in the valley below we filed down the ridge, which had been "home" for two days and nights, and onto a gravel road winding toward Troina.

Joe Belden, of Time and Life magazines, and I joined Lt. Everett

Booth, Chicago, Ill., whose company was scheduled to enter the city first. Along the road were burned out German halftracks, trucks and mobile guns, smashed by shell fire. Every culvert was a strong point and had been occupied by the enemy. They had taken cover under every ledge and protecting bank.

It was 7:20 a. m. now and we were about a mile from Troina when our dive bombers roared over the sun to unload their cargoes. The city on the big cliff above us was obscured by smoke and dust.

As the column turned a curve a machine gun and rifle chattered from the vineyard above. The troops took cover behind the bank.

"Which way did those shots come from?" Booth asked. "This way," a soldier said, pointing into the vineyard toward Troina. "All right, I'll work my next platoon around on the flank," Booth said.

We crawled back along the bank and ran across an exposed place into a shallow irrigation ditch. Little bullets slipped over our heads. Our divebombers hammered at Troina again, six of them, and in 10 minutes another six.

A few minutes later another flight dived screaming down in echelon over us. Another dive in and then another. We lay in the ditch holding our breath, making ourselves as small as possible.

"For God's sake," Booth shouted, "don't anyone move." The plane's machine guns were chattering as they raked the road which a few minutes before was enemy territory. Then they disappeared over the ridge.

"Every man take of his undershirt," Booth cried. "We'll lay them on the ridge over us, and dammit, hurry!"

We stripped off our undershirts, most of them gray from days of wear with no chance to wash them. "They'll have to be whiter than this or they can't be seen," someone quipped.

Second Lt. Faust Anderson, Kansas, Wis., grinned. "Didn't I say we were getting close air support?" Pvt. Robert Martin, Detroit, scrambled into the ditch with us. I lay on his legs. Someone was lying on mine.

"Damn those Jerries!" Martin growled. "Hell!" Anderson snorted. The planes were overhead again. Circling down, they came again in a screaming dive. But their bombs smashed into Troina.

"Now, that's great going, guys," Anderson said. "Thanks." The divebombers had silenced the enemy snipers, so we began working our way around the ridge until we stood below the cliff city of Troina. Civilians stood on balconies and ledges waving white flags.

Sheets were draped from windows.

People to Get Say on Federal Food Matters

WASHINGTON, August 14—(AP)—Food Administrator Marvin Jones has called in a one-time associate in congress, former Rep. William L. Nelson (D-Mo.), to help rebuild the wartime food program along lines which would Nelson said, give "the folks back home more to say about what's to be done."

The Missouriian, who was one of the Democrats swept out of office by the Farm Belt uprising at last year's election, has been named special assistant to Jones. He will serve as the connecting link between the food administrator and the state and local agricultural war boards.

Nelson served nine terms in the house, and for many years was a member of the agriculture committees headed by Jones.

The new assistant told an interviewer that it was his intention to "give the folks back home" greater responsibility in running future farm programs.

"Regulations issued from Washington," he said "will be held to the very minimum."

Nelson said the decision to decentralize the food program reflected the thinking and wishes of the people.

"That's one thing I learned since the election," he added.

"I BELONG HERE, KEN"

CHAPTER XII

KNOWING the truth didn't change essential values. Barbee knew she couldn't go to Ken and say, "It isn't because you're a civilian that I'm ashamed to present you to my family. It's because you're illiterate, because you haven't had my advantages, because we don't belong to the same world."

No, there was nothing to be done about the hurt she had dealt Ken, Barbee decided after a sleepless night. They'd had a couple of days together; they'd both gone overboard about the other without stopping to think first—at least she supposed Ken had, too, or else why would her smugging have hit him so hard? But there was nothing to be done about it. Nothing.

It was a stifling day, heavy with an oppressive heat. One of those bad summer days that breed uneven tempers, poor concentration, and accidents. Barbee heard the siren of a rapidly approaching ambulance as she turned in at the guard house gate. She pulled to one side and let it pass. By the time she had parked her car and returned to the guard house to check in for the day's work, the ambulance had picked up its burden and departed.

"Who's hurt?" Barbee asked anxiously.

"Ken Carter," someone answered. "A drum of carbon dropped on him in the furnace room."

Barbee stood there for a moment with the world blacking out around her.

The guard told her that he'd been taken to Riverview Hospital. It wasn't very far in distance, but it seemed like an eternity in time before she was parking her car before the hospital steps and flying up them to the broad door marked ENTRANCE. It was an hour and a half before they let her go up to the room where he had taken him. She tiptoed in fearfully. Ken, his brown face looking incongruous against the white pillow, seemed to be asleep.

"How is he?" Barbee whispered to the nurse in attendance.

"His left leg is badly crushed," the nurse told her. "The doctor thought at first that he'd have to amputate—but he's going to wait a day."

"Oh, no, no—not that—" Barbee cried.

There was a movement on the bed. "Cut it off—no good any way—can't get in 'em Army—can't fight—" Ken's voice was heavy with the anesthetic.

Barbee bent over him, "Oh, don't say that, Ken—don't say such things—" She was crying bitterly.

Ken's vague eyes focused slowly upon her. "Barbee—what are you doing here?"

"What am I doing here?" trying to still her sobs. "I'm here because I belong here, Ken."

What was she saying? It was madness. But she couldn't fight it any longer—this wayward love. She and Ken might belong in different worlds, but she loved him. Nothing could change that.

Consciousness quickened in Ken's face. Anesthetic or no anesthetic he could understand that. "Say it again, Baby. Say it again!"

"I belong here, Ken. I love you."

LATER they talked more calmly. The doctor had been confident and reassuring.

"Do you want to write to your grandmother?" Barbee asked softly. "She ought to know."

"No," Ken was emphatic. "It would only upset her. She wouldn't believe that I'm getting along all right, and she couldn't come to see for herself."

"Why—why not?"

"Because, she's paralyzed—didn't I ever tell you?"

MacKenzie Says India Problem Can Be Solved

By CHARLES HONCE
 NEW YORK, August 14—(AP)—India's problem can be solved, says DeWitt MacKenzie, Associated Press war and foreign affairs analyst, in a book published today by Doubleday Doran under that exact title.

MacKenzie, who has been studying India for many years and who re-visited that country for six weeks early this year to look into all of the complicated questions troubling that fabulous sub-continent holding one-fifth of the world's population, presents two possible solutions.

One is based on proposals of "Indian leaders and impartial observers"; the other is that of a distinguished Briton who could not otherwise be named. The urgency of solution is stressed.

MacKenzie believes that Indian leaders, who have turned down the British proposal for dominion status after the war, might now, without loss of face, petition for a renewal of negotiations. He finds encouragement in the fact that a more cooperative spirit appears to be arising among leaders of divergent Indian interests. Also he was told in a well-informed quarter in New Delhi "that the governing council would reopen the case if it saw a legitimate chance."

Throughout his book, MacKenzie stressed what he believes is the vital and immediate necessity for some resolution of the question because of its crucial bearing on the war.

India is described as the arsenal of the Orient, as the place where Japan was stopped in her initial sweep through the East and as the

Prop Wash

By A CADET WIFE
 Mrs. Tabor, fondly called Audrey by all of us, once again provided the Cadet Wives club with a morning of fun. Her picturesque, flower-bordered garden was the perfect setting for a breakfast given Tuesday morning in place of the regular meeting. However, we had a short business meeting.

Election of officers from the class of 43-I was the main event, and Sidney Perrin was voted vice-president. She will automatically become president when 43-H graduates. Congratulations, Sidney. Also our congratulations to Mary Orr, treasurer.

Immediately following the election, we had delicious coffee, pecan rolls, bacon and grapes served by Eva Blanche Burkey and Frankie Collins. The girls ate sitting on the grass in the cool morning breeze, all comfy and cute in slacks, shorts, and bathing suits.

About 30 members attended and in addition we were glad to have stepping off place for an approaching land offensive against the Nipponese. A peaceful and politically contented India would vastly aid the war effort, the author says.

For generation the Indian situation has been under the scrutiny of Reporter MacKenzie.

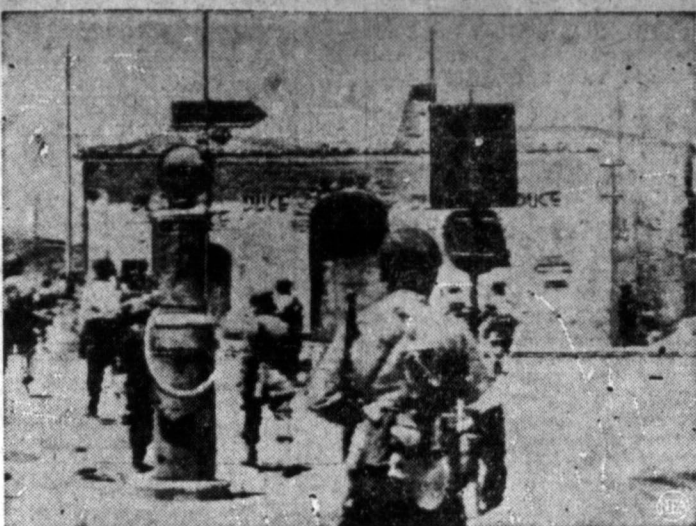

His book is a crowded and sensational picture of Indian life, thought and aspirations; a story of the 562 bejeweled princes and their fabulous wealth; of the lovely unchangeable of illiteracy and hunger and un-dreamed of splendor; of religious and racial differences in a land of 400 million people speaking 225 dialects and with an average annual income of $26. Even a Nautch girl sways here and there.

But the picture, such as it is today, was found to be immensely improved over that of the visit 26 years ago.

"India," MacKenzie says, "is developing a new social and political consciousness."

In this awakening he sees the possibilities of solving the complex Indian problem.

Ration Coins To Be Latest Device

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14—(AP)—If you've figured out now how to tell the new pennies from dimes, you're ready for the next course in wartime coinage—ration tokens.

The office of price administration (OPA) says it was fairly certain that ration coins would go into use on or about Jan. 1 to supplement, but not replace, ration stamps.

Good only for food rationing, the tokens are to be colored red and blue to match the stamps in war ration books. They will be handed out by the grocer as change for ration stamps. Thus each stamp could be given a higher point value and ration books would last longer.

There has been discussion of having tokens come in two sizes, a one-point coin about the size of a nickel and a 5-point token as big as a quarter.

Violation of Meat Order Is Charged

DALLAS, Aug. 14—(AP)—A suit has been filed here in federal court charging that the West Texas Packing company of San Angelo violated a war food administration order forbidding the slaughter of livestock by local slaughterers or butchers without a valid permit.

The WFA order, effective March 31, reserved only to the farmers the right to slaughter cattle, hogs or other stock without permit and then only for family use.

The suit claimed the firm had no permit and no quotas as provided in OPA regulations.

Judge W. H. Atwell set a preliminary hearing on the case here for next Tuesday.

Ration Book Three May Be Valid Sept. 12

When will the stamps in Ration Book 3 become effective?
 Information has not been received by the county rationing board here as to when the new book will go into use, but it is surmised that stamps in Book 3 will become valid Sunday, September 12.

This date is based on the fact that Z, the last red meat stamp in Book 2, becomes valid September 5 and meat stamps are arranged on weekly consumption.

OPA officials say only that the newest book will become valid "soon after" September 10.

The OPA mailing center in Dallas has been closed down. How this will affect Gray county and what to do with late applications, since the deadline fell on Tuesday, are subjects on which the county office has received no information to date from Lubbock headquarters.

Wounded Moved Quickly in Sicily

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 14—(AP)—American battle casualties in Sicily are reaching north African hospitals as quickly as 12 hours from the time they are wounded. Col. Daniel Franklin, surgeon of the U. S. 7th army, announced today.

Medical corps personnel habitually remove the wounded under fire. They have a system of collecting stations that feed the casualties to airplane ambulances for hospitalization.

Franklin disclosed that medical men and equipment of captured Italian army units in Sicily are now aiding the Allies. Paroles have been extended to Italian medical officers to serve in their own hospitals under American direction.

Airmen Miss 13th Attack on 13th

A U. S. BOMBER STATION SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 14—(AP)—With a collective "whoof," 13 airmen at this heavy bomber station relaxed—relieved that they didn't have to go to their 13th attack on Friday 13.

Sweating out the 13th mission is enough without having to take such a day for it.

The airmen—not superstitious, only careful—includes: Lieut. Bernard A. Naqovitz, pilot, of College Station, Texas.

Yanks on Malta Aid Sicily Drive

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, August 14—(AP)—It was disclosed here today that an American light bomber squadron based at Malta has been giving Allied ground forces valuable support in the battle of Sicily.

The group, specially trained in low-level bombing and strafing, first saw action in the North African campaign. The group commander is Col. Malcolm Green, Jr., San Francisco, and the squadron commanders include Maj. Leo Fielder, Hamblin, Texas.

Coal for Dealers Ordered Limited

WASHINGTON, August 14—(AP)—Secretary of Interior Ickes said that as a result of production losses due to work stoppages coal dealers will be limited to 90 per cent of "last year's requirements" of anthracite.

The solid fuels administrator said work stoppages had resulted in a loss thus far this year of 3,500,000 tons of hard coal and that "we are going to have trouble to supply the demand."

Freezing And Canning Methods Are Given By Mrs. Julia Kelly

"Quick freezing and storing in freezer lockers is the most desirable method of preservation for most foods because more of the original flavor, texture, color and nutritional value of the fresh product is retained," pointed out Mrs. Julia Kelly, in a recent house-to-house visit with members of the Wayside Home Demonstration club.

"As in all methods of preservation, the first thing to remember is to start with good quality food and fresh, unspoiled ingredients for preservation. Other factors contributing to a successful frozen product are proper handling in preparation; good air-tight, moisture-vapor-proof containers or wrapping; quick freezing; and storage at near zero temperature with correct humidity."

"Vegetables which are most desirable in frozen lockers are: peas, spinach, lima beans, asparagus, sweet corn, and snap beans. Vegetables that yield good products, but which are less frequently frozen are: carrots, beets, turnips, squash, broccoli, cauliflower, andokra."

"To prepare select fresh, tender products at the right stage for eating. It is necessary to wash well, drain, sort, trim and cut the vegetables as for eating or canning. Steam or scald the vegetables to stop enzyme action or chemical changes which take place as soon as the vegetables are gathered. Blanching or scalding shrinks the food and it brightens the green color in vegetables. It further cleans the product and destroys some bacteria. Pack either in brine or plain in suitable containers, leaving head-space, seal, label products and keep in cold place until they can be placed in locker for freezing and storing. Fruits and meats may also be stored in the freezer lockers, concluded Mrs. Kelly.
