Beginning rush month activities complimenting eight pledges, Upsilon chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority entertained with a breakfast Sunday morning in the home of Mrs. E. E. Shelhamer, 1211 N. Russell, with members of the social committee, Mrs. Roy Johnson, Mrs. C. W. Henry and Miss Johnnie Davis as hostesses.

The program, Miss Helen Houston presented a war bond from the chapter to Mrs. Shelhamer, past president. Decorating the table from which breakfast was served was an arrangement of yellow roses, the sorority flower, in a low black bowl. Using a forecast for the future as the decorative theme, individual tables were centered with crystal balls on black and gold hand-painted signs of the zodiac. A yellow rosette was arranged beneath each crystal ball. Repeating the motif, black and yellow horoscopes containing the calendar of activities for the month as well as the names of the mystery pals, marked each place.

The other day we sent out an SOS call for a chocolate cream pie recipe for Mrs. Howard Boyd, and our call was answered by Mrs. R. E. Grider. The recipe sounds very, very good and it has been tried and tested—so thank you to Mrs. Grider!

- MRS. GRIDER'S CHOCOLATE PIE
2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
1-3 cup cocoa
1-3 cup flour
1/2 cup salt
3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
Meringue
3 egg whites
6 tablespoons sugar

Baked the pie, and while it is heating, mix together the sugar, cocoa, four and salt. Beat the egg yolks slightly and stir them into the dry ingredients. Add the hot milk to the mixture gradually, stirring constantly until the mixture is free from lumps. Cool and cover with meringue. Bake in a slow oven until the meringue is delicately brown.

Now that avocado pears are on the market it is a good idea to put them to use and brighten up your table with this refreshing green color. Stuffed avocados sound even better when they are stuffed with cheese. This recipe serves from 6 to 8 people.

- STUFFED AVOCADO SALAD
2 large ripe avocado pears
3 ounces (1-3 cup) cream cheese
2 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons blanched almonds, finely chopped (optional)
3 tablespoons ripe olives, finely chopped

Remove seed; if cavity is small remove small amount of meat. Blend cream cheese, blue vein cheese, lemon juice, salt and paprika. Add almonds, olives and olives, mix thoroughly. Fill avocados with cheese mixture, place halves firmly together, wrap in waxed paper. Chill for several hours. To serve cut in round slices, place on bread and lettuce, surrounding a mound of peeled grapes cut in halves. Accompany with French dressing. Serve dressing separately.

Girl Scouts

Mrs. K. E. Thornton

Today Oct. 4, marks the beginning of a busy week for all Pampa Girl Scouts as well as those persons interested in helping with the Girl Scout program.

Miss Ida McClure, expansion plan field advisor, began her first week in Pampa this morning. Miss McClure will be in Pampa one week in every month giving training courses to old and new leaders. Arranging discussions with mothers and girls, as well as interviewing interested women who could assist in making a well rounded program for our Girl Scouts.

High light of the week will be the coffee Tuesday morning at 9:30 in the Council of Clubs rooms in the city hall when the local council will entertain all adult members of the Girl Scout organization as well as friends and any women who plan to become leaders or committee members. Invitations have been sent to all Parent Teachers Associations and the regular members of the Pampa, Miss McClure will make a short talk after which plans will be made for future conferences and meetings.

The council feels that this will be an excellent time to meet with Miss McClure to discuss problems and suggest new ideas.

Tuesday afternoon has been set aside for a meeting of committee chairmen. At this time Miss McClure will be able to help these chairmen with any problems they might have. If any committee chairmen are unable to attend this conference they are asked to please telephone Miss McClure for a later appointment.

Miss McClure plans to talk to High school girls who are interested in Senior Scouting Wednesday afternoon. Training courses will begin Thursday morning when an introductory course for new leaders will be given in the Girl Scout office in the City hall.

Thursday afternoon the Brownie leaders and their troop committee members will meet with Miss McClure to plan programs and training courses.

The Intermediate leaders with their troop committee people will meet Friday afternoon.

Saturday all loose ends will be tied up and plans completed for future courses, suggestions made so that all work can progress until Miss McClure's next visit in November.

This is a wonderful time for all of those people who plan to help with this work to avail themselves of the opportunity of becoming familiar with the Girl Scout program. To be a Scout leader is a tremendous opportunity for any woman. Her service to the nation will be multiplied and will not end when the war ends. The attitudes and knowledge that girls learn in Scouting today can influence the whole future of America.

West Texas C-C Protests Reduction In Value of B and C Gas Coupons

(By The Associated Press) Some public officials in Texas and the southwest dislike the office of price administration order reducing B and C mileage rationing coupons in value from three to two gallons, but an OPA official at San Antonio urged southwesterners to accept the slash with cooperative spirit.

Texas railroad commissioner Olin Culberson had this to say: "The attitude taken against Texas in the matter of gasoline rationing is as ridiculous as carrying grapefruit to the Rio Grande valley."

Culberson characterized the latest cut in gasoline rationing for the southwest as "a continuation of the discrimination that has been practiced against us in the whole matter of gas rationing."

Said J. Kenneth Black, district OPA officer at San Antonio: "Up to now, people in this part of the country have felt that further restrictions were not necessary and that when they did become necessary they could reduce their mileage requirements without interfering with the war effort. That time has now arrived."

"Let's control the gas situation before a shortage rears its ugly head, as it has in depleted tire stocks."

The West Texas chamber of commerce asked the OPA to amend gasoline rationing regulations to allow traveling salesmen more mileage in West Texas, and protested the reduction in value of B and C coupons.

The protest, signed by WTCC president M. C. Ulmer and other officers, called the OPA's restriction of traveling men to 480 miles per month unequal, disproportionate, discriminatory and unfair to West Texas and said the B and C reduction increased the injustice. The protest was sent to OPA district director Mark McGee at Fort Worth.

BUY VICTORY STAMPS Ickes Says Coal Set-up To Be Worse

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—(AP)—The coal situation will get progressively worse every week until a contract is signed between operators and miners, secretary Ickes asserted at a press conference today.

Asked why a contract would increase production, he replied: "Coal miners are used to working under a contract. There is undisputed evidence that they just don't feel encouraged to produce at the maximum rate because of uncertainties over working hours and wages."

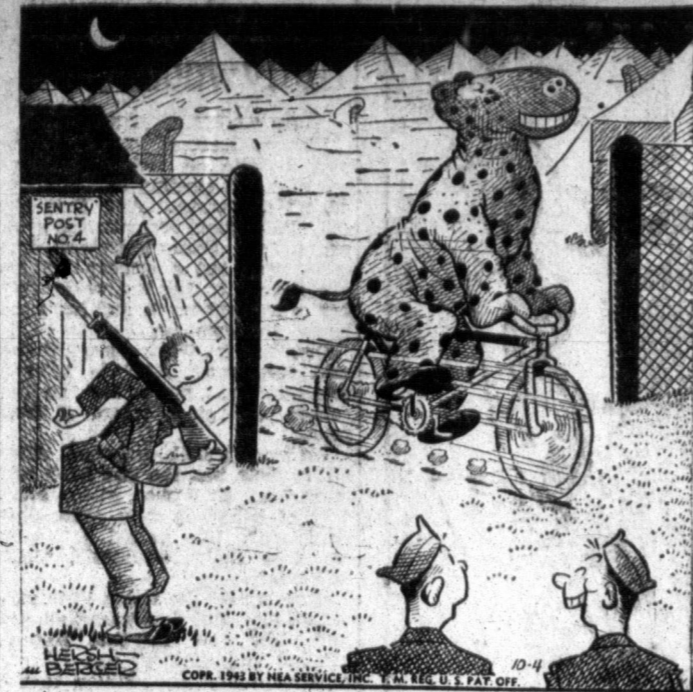

Then he praised the miners, saying, "I think that all things considered the miners have done a damn good job mining coal, for which they haven't received any credit."

If the eight and one-half hour day is adopted generally, "we will expect greater production," Ickes said. "We haven't any doubt we'll get it. And if we don't get it, there will be trouble ahead—a railroad trouble and industrial trouble."

We have talked a great deal, and demanded much, in that the white man abandon his prejudices against the negro, but we have done little toward breaking down the negro's prejudices against the whites."

Army Would Rather Not Check on Wives

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—(AP)—The army today opposed suggestions that it check the morals of wayward wives of service men before granting them dependency allowances.

Brig. Gen. H. C. Gilbert, administrator of dependency benefits, asserted the whole system of dependency payments would bog down in administrative detail if the faithfulness of wives had to be determined. He appeared before the house military committee considering legislation to loosen dependency allowances.

Short (R-Mo) charged that "harlots are marrying these boys just so they'll get the money that goes to wives."

He said a hospital in his district was filled with venereal women, many of them drawing dependency allowances from men overseas.

General Gilbert said, however, it should not be the function of military or government agencies to check on the conduct of the wives. He told the committee that congressional consideration of the subject of wayward wives would have a bad effect on men already overseas.

Although "most men have an inherent faith in their wives," he said, the fact that congress is considering such matters might cause every soldier "to become concerned" about his own wife.

Court To Test OPA Rulings on Liquor

AUSTIN, Oct. 4—(AP)—Liquor administrator Bert Ford said today an agreement had been reached with the office of Price Administration to determine whether OPA rulings supersede the state liquor control board.

Ford said the last legislature continued in effect the requirement that the board obtain the best price available in the sale of confiscated liquor. But the OPA ruled subsequently that inventories of such liquor must be submitted to its regional office for pricing before sale.

The board has informed Amos J. Coffman, regional OPA enforcement officer at Dallas, that it intends to sell a quantity of confiscated liquor on Oct. 15, without regard to maximum prices, Ford said.

right bank of the river. When they could touch bottom they halted, listening and looking. From down river the noise of the raid on Coblenz could be heard, muffled by distance. But near by there was not a sound to be heard nor a soul to be seen. The river bank, the whole country, appeared deserted.

"Come on," whispered Imhof. They waded softly ashore and scrambled up the bank, gaining the road that runs beside the river. Here they halted again, dripping, while they looked in both directions, listening intently. A keen glance round satisfied Danforth that the coast was clear and he set about restoring circulation by rubbing himself vigorously and jumping softly about.

Imhof, meanwhile, checked their exact whereabouts. The sunken plane lay a furlong or more upstream. The current had carried Danforth and himself that far before they crossed and got ashore, more or less in the middle of a straight reach of the Moselle. Farther down, the river curved left out of sight. Round that bend lay Winnigen, on the left bank. Then the stream curved again to the right, passing the village of Lay, which was Imhof's first objective on the march to Coblenz. For from Lay a path climbed into the hills flanking the Moselle and joined one of the small roads intersecting the plateau.

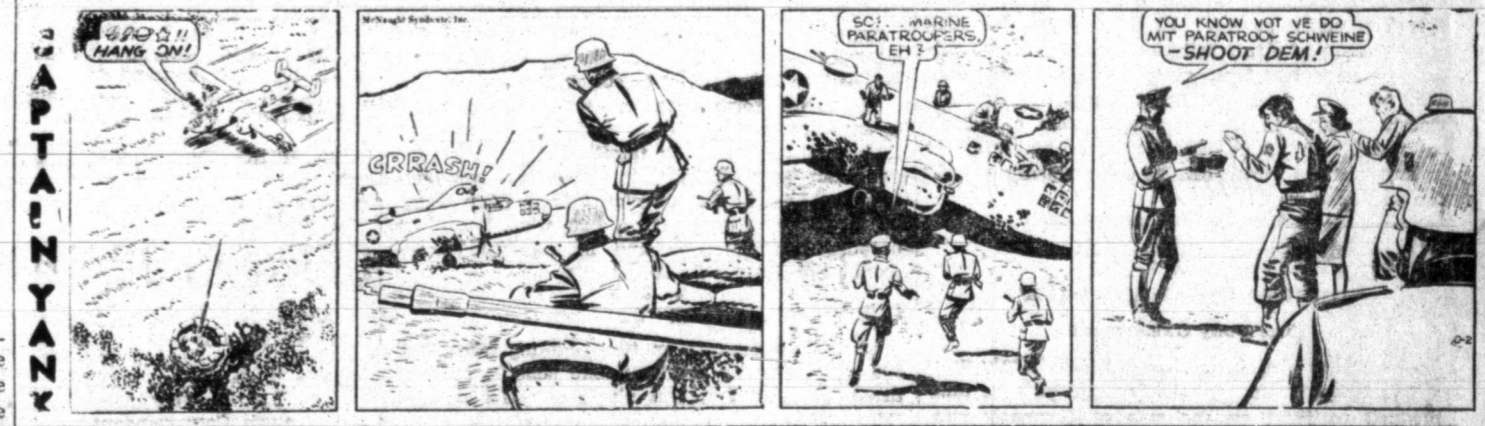

But as far as Lay they had to follow the high road. They would have to go carefully. There might be an air raid warden's post on the way and, with the raid, the warden would be on the job. Danforth, now warmed up, stopped moving round.

"You taking this road to Coblenz?" he asked Imhof. "Well, I'll peel off here—in the opposite direction," the flyer said casually. "Good luck to you, Captain."

His hand went out, seeking Imhof's. "Hold your horses," answered Imhof. "And put that hand back in your pocket."

Errand for Q-74

By Malcolm Taylor

THE STORY: Capt. Raymond Imhof, Q-74, U. S. Army intelligence, has been assigned to follow development of a plane down leading to certain important information which has been unable to bring out of Germany. Imhof is to parachute into enemy territory down by a Q-74. RAF Pilot-Officer Danforth. Over the Moselle the plane is hit by tracer bullets.

DOWN AND UNDER CHAPTER VII FOR ages, it seemed to Imhof, he dangled from the plane, struggling to keep his face toward the tail and hanging to the belt like grim death. His grip was almost slipping when he heard the command, "Let go!"

He came up sputtering and tingling all over as the plane moved on, level fore and aft and from wingtip to wingtip, almost skimming the water. Then, with the last bit of flying speed, Danforth shoved the stick full forward, forcing the tail down. It touched, with the sound of furrowed waters, dragged an instant and then the whole plane settled on the breast of the river.

Imhof struck out for the plane, where it floated upside down. He swam fast, across the river anxiously, but the pilot was nowhere in sight. When he reached the fuselage, however, Danforth bobbed up almost within arm's reach.

The plane, though filling fast through the open emergency panel and the Nazi's bullet holes, remained afloat for some time, and they clung to it, taking breath.

"I wish she'd sink," said Imhof. "She will soon. She's filling fast," said Danforth. "Look out!" he resumed a moment later. "She's going."

They kicked away and watched. Suddenly the nose of the plane, weighted by the mass of the engine, plunged to the bottom, sending the water in the fuselage audibly rushing forward from the tail toward the cockpit. At the same time, the current, banking up against the inclined surface of the now submerged wings and of the emptying aft half of the plane, forced the tail up higher and higher till it came to rest at an angle of 45 degrees or so above the water.

DANFORTH cast an appreciative eye at the unsubmerged part of the plane, slanting upside down out of the river. "English swine-dogs come down out of control, rudge bottom and drown. That's what it will look like."

"I certainly hope so," said Imhof, more than a shade doubtfully. "Otherwise we might as well have put an ac in the Voelkischer Beobachter," he added, surveying the tail with his RAF insignia projecting aloft. "I thought the whole plane was going to lie level on the bottom."

"You did?" exclaimed Danforth incredulously. "A plane's like a sledge-hammer," he explained through chattering teeth. "Goes down nose first, same as in the air. Thought the river was deep enough to sink her. You said so. G-gosh! It's c-c-cold."

"I meant lying horizontal, not standing on her head," Imhof replied. "Mutual m-m-misunderstanding," chattered Danforth. "Got to get out of this ice water before I freeze to death. Haven't your blubber?" He struck out for shore at racing speed.

Imhof lunged, grabbed a flying ank and drew him back and, incidentally, under. "Heh!" Danforth spluttered indignantly. "Swim quietly," Imhof replied. "That flailing crawl's enough to bring Himmler here on the run. Besides, you were going the wrong way."
