Unions Move Survey Is Planned For Housing Needs Into Dumas

DUMAS — (Special) — Union organization work went into full swing here today after slimmering for almost three months with two of Dumas' large department stores almost fully organized. Biggest organization headway was made at the C. R. Anthony Store, The Daily News learned this morning, but no election for union representation has been held.

Grant Morgan, manager of Gordon's Department Store, said the move appears to take in all retail employees, a CIO-affiliated union. However, he added, no wage demands have been made. The store manager did admit the union would have a fight on its hands before "this is all over."

Merchants in Dumas were conferring with their attorneys to see what could be done to combat the situation, but no definite plans were in the offing by noon today.

House Group Slashes Budget For 27 Government Agencies

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The 1952 budget of 27 federal agencies was slashed 10 percent — $665,900,025 — today by the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee recommended the House give the agencies $6,171,777,440 for the fiscal year starting next July. President Truman had asked $6,837,677,465; the same agencies got $11,932,720,332 for the present year.

The funds are for the so-called "independent offices" whose finances are lumped in a single bill. Almost all of them were cut, including the Atomic Energy Commission and the Veterans' Administration.

Units Break Contact With Driving Reds

TOKYO — (AP) — United Nations troops fell back on rear front today. Both ends of the 100-mile Korean front had already fled across the Han River.

In the east they abandoned Yanggu and pulled back below the 38th Parallel. This was the last allied hold in Red Korea on the active fighting front.

In both withdrawals UN forces broke contact with Reds. The allies also broke contact south of Hwachon Reservoir, and withdrew so rapidly a vast no-man's land was created on this east-central sector.

On the northern approaches the Chinese were about 10 miles from the old South Korean capital. But Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U.S. Eighth Army commander, expressed confidence that he could halt north of the Han River.

The Han borders Seoul on the south. However, the general did not mention the war shattered city in his statement.

"We are withdrawing in order," Van Fleet said in an unembellished front-line tour. "We are keeping units intact. We are taking a tremendous toll of the enemy while enduring only minimum losses."

As the Reds neared Seoul, civilians streamed out of the city to the south. A South Korean government spokesman said 200,000 had already fled across the Han. Another 200,000 are expected to follow, leaving about 100,000 in the city which has lost military significance to either side.

It was a familiar flight. Communist troops twice have occupied and twice abandoned Seoul. The force of the Communist drive appeared to be weakening. Eighth Army headquarters said Friday, it reported UN troops in their path fought "a stubborn delaying action."

Five Red divisions hammered toward the South Korean capital from the north. Some were only 11 miles away, near Uijongbu. Others were closer on the Munseo-Seoul road to the west.

In some sectors the Reds had gained 30 miles since they launched their spring offensive Sunday. But they paid a terrific price in lives. The UN command estimated 25,000 Reds were killed in four and a half days.

"They're spending people like we spend ammunition," one officer said. A single American artillery division in the west fired more than 30,000 rounds — about $1,500,000 worth — in two days. The UN withdrawal was a series of heroic fights.

Swarming Communist masses recently surrounded UN units — Turks, Belgian, British, Americans. An Australian outfit fought Reds on three sides. Philippines, New Zealanders, South Koreans, Canadians and Americans pitched in each time to rescue trapped units.

Most fought clear with relatively light losses. But one, the British Royal Gloucestershire First Battalion, lost heavily. (See ALLIED, Page 2)

Canadian Fire Chief Elected

CANADIAN (Special)—John P. Wilkinson was elected chief of the Canadian Volunteer Fire Department Wednesday. Carl W. Zybach, chief for the past four years, declined re-nomination. F. L. Williams succeeds Roy L. Duram as assistant chief. Other officers are Earl Rhea, Jr., captain; and J. Clark Reagan, lieutenant re-elected for Hose Company One while Company Two made Lt. Lawrence Teague its captain and elected Dean Cook lieutenant. W. L. Worley was elected secretary-treasurer, succeeding Wilkinson who had been secretary as well as captain of Company Two for the past several years. The retiring chief and assistant chief have seen several improvements in the department during their tenure in office. A new 500 G.P.M. combination booster, pumper truck was added to the equipment last year. They were also instrumental in revising the department's by-laws, making them more definite and more workable as a result of the changes was a provision for election of officers every two years. Before the revision, officers served indefinitely. Chief Wilkinson has been a fireman for many years, and at this time is second vice president of the Panhandle District Firemen's Assn. He is secretary-manager of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, and tax assessor and collector for the Canadian Independent School District.

Space Ships In Near Future Seen

CANPORA (AP)—Dr. David F. Martin, an Australian scientist, says some of us may be here when robot space ships are flying round the moon. He told a reporter, however, it was highly improbable that scientists could ever land on the moon. Dr. Martin recently returned from the United States where he consulted with U. S. Air Force officers on atmospheric problems. He is chief scientist of the Radio Research Board of the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization. He also predicted that "in our time" artificial "space stations" would circle the globe, recording by radio valuable information for scientists on earth. "This is not idle speculation," the scientist said. "It is something to which scientists in America are giving serious consideration. A great deal of the work they are doing is highly secret. I doubt whether it has anything to do with the flying saucers people have reported."

Among the inventions of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, are an electric probe for locating bullets in a human body and a device resembling modern iron lungs. Air pressure which is 2,114 pounds per square foot at sea level is only 280 pounds per square foot at 50,000 feet.

Crime Still Climbing, Says FBI—

Crime in the U. S. continued to increase during 1950, being up 1.5 percent over 1949. As usual, the biggest percentage of increase was not in the "wide-ked" cities but in the country. Rural crime rose 4.4 percent, with urban crime up a mere .4 percent. Of the seven major crimes listed in the FBI's annual report, on which these Newscharts are based, only robbery declined in both city and country. The FBI says that every five minutes during 1950, someone in the U. S. was feloniously assaulted or killed, during each day 146 persons were robbed and cars of 468 others were stolen.

Buddy Baer Finds No Fun In Being A One-Man Gang

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Take it from Buddy Baer, it's no fun being a one-man gang. The former boxer is six feet, six and a half inches, with 272 pounds of beef. While pint-sized men may look at him with envy, Buddy sighs: "There's only one time when being this big has an advantage: when you're watching a parade." At all other times, he added, it's a bore—a bother and an expense. "Why the only things I can buy in a clothing store are handkerchiefs and ties," he explained. All his other clothes must be specially made. His shirt collar fits 18 1/2, the sleeve 40 inches. His shoes are miniature gunboats—15 double E's. As for his suit size, he doesn't know; the numbers don't run that high. Another hazard of his size occurs in nightclubs and other public places. Citizens, with the over-confidence that comes from alcohol, often try to pick fights with him. "They are always coming up to me and saying belligerently, 'aw, ya bum, you never could fight,'" he related. "I have a pretty good way with drunks. I agree with them. I talk with them for 15 minutes and they usually go away happy. Buddy's size has paid off in Hollywood, despite his walling. He has landed a number of good films and is now starting a good role in "Flame of Araby." He and Lon Chaney play villainous brothers. The studio managed to find an Arabian steed big enough to support Buddy, but it was quite a search. "I'd like to do more pictures," the ex-boxer remarked. "I think I can handle the roles that Laird Creger used to do." He has the bulk for it, and a handsome face, too. It is virtually unmarked by his years in the ring. Buddy and his brother Max exchange a lot of kidding with each other. Recently Max was offered $100,000 a year to turn wrestler. Buddy told him: "You know, I think you've found the right field for yourself. After all, you were so close to the canvas for so long."

Churchill Vows To Overthrow Labor

LONDON (AP)—Winston Churchill declared today he and his followers in Parliament will do "all in our power, by every constitutional means open to us" to bring down the tottering Labor government. The 76-year-old conservative leader scornfully described Prime Minister Alee and his cabinet as "that cluster of lion-hearted limps." (A limpet is a marine gastropod mollusk, but the dictionary also defines it as "a tenacious office-holder" humorous.) Churchill told a political rally the Labor party is afraid to face the voters in a new national election now. He asserted that among the warring chieftains of the socialist high school the "only bond of union" is a "fear of the judgment of their fellow countrymen" at the polls. "In every quarter of the world we are regarded by our friends with anxiety, with wonder and with pity," Churchill said. "And by our enemies, including some of those countries, we have helped the most in the past, like Egypt and Persia, we are regarded or treated with hostility and even contempt."

TSCW Inaugurates New President

DENTON (AP)—Texas State College for Women inaugurated Dr. John Almon Guinn as its sixth president today. The 46-year-old New Braunfels, Tex., native has held the post since the retirement last September of Dr. Louis Herman Hubbard president from 1926 to 1950. A campus open house and inaugural luncheon preceded the inaugural exercises, set for 2:30 p. m. Dr. Guinn was president of San Angelo College from June 1, 1949, until he came to TSCW. Previously he was superintendent of public schools at Alice, Dean of Students at Schreiner Institute, Kerrville, then a rural school principal in Guadalupe County. He studied at the University of Texas, the University of Chicago and Heidelberg. He won five battle stars and two combat citations for Navy service during the war.

Canadian Has Variety Show

CANADIAN — (Special) — A "Breakfast in Hollywood" and variety show, sponsored by the senior class, were held in the high school auditorium Tuesday night.

W. H. Bryant served as master of ceremonies assisted by Jimmy Horton and Ann Malloy.

Opening feature was the presentation of an orchid, flown in from Hollywood, to Mrs. W. J. Conliser for being the oldest woman present. She told the story of her arrival in Canadian as a bride Jan. 1, 1897, and of the trip by buggy that took nearly a day to reach the Conliser ranch near the present site of Lake Marvin. Her son Tom now operates the ranch.

A varied program of music and dance numbers was presented.

Principal Harvey Trullitt won the wash basin as a prize for having the dirtiest feet and Carl Zybach won the quart-size coffee cup for being the "tireddest looking gent."

Donald Hodges won first prize in the amateur contest with his impersonation of Al Johnson. Jan Waters placed second with a reading.

Malaya Planters Ask Justice For Terrorists

JOHORE BAHRU, Malaya — (AP) — The rubber planters in Johore want stern justice for Communist terrorists raids of murder and plunder and rubber scrap in "alarming proportions." The Johore Planters Association declared the rubber robbers were living well off the proceeds of what they sell while the death penalty for thefts "has been a mere threat and the only result has been to bring the law into contempt."

The rubber planters said that their casualties are running high in trying to keep rubber estates producing despite Communist terrorist raids of murder and plunder. Nineteen planters were killed in 1950 in Malaya, five of them in Johore state.

Star Advises Aspiring Actor

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Wake up, kiddies. Our teacher for today is Dean Jagger, who has some advice for struggling starlets. His words: stop struggling.

Jagger is one of Hollywood's most respected and — more important — most consistently working actors and didn't he snag an Oscar a year ago because of his work in "12 O'Clock High," for which he doffed his toupee?

Now he doesn't argue that you should go bald to make a success in the movies. It isn't that simple. But he does have a word of caution for the suspension-happy youngsters who give their studios much trouble.

"The important thing is to keep working," he opined. "You can't make a hit when you're at home on suspension."

"Besides, you never can tell what you can get out of a role, even the smallest of one."

Jagger mentioned some of the pitfalls of young players: "They begin to think that their billing or the size of their dressing room is more important than the job they are doing."

Jagger's main advice to actors is contained in two words: be self-sufficient.

"A lot of actors have only one life — their career," he explained. "They do get tense, and lose all sense of proportions."

"I've always tried to maintain varied interests. I'm not a great political thinker, but I try to keep up with what's going on in the world. I work in my garden when I have the time. And I don't worry about my career. People told me I had to be careful about roles after I won the Oscar. I told them that was crazy."

"I've done four pictures since I won, some good, some not so good. But I've been working. And I've been happy."

Controls Loosened On Canning Articles

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The government today loosened controls on jars, glasses, lids and jar rings used by housewives in canning fruits and vegetables.

The order, effective April 26, would allow wholesalers and retailers to fix ceiling prices on such items by adding to current costs the average percentage markups they used from May 24 to June 2, 1950.

The Office of Price Stabilization said the order was needed "to start the flow of these goods to housewives." Since the items are sold mostly during spring and summer, OPS said, the general price freeze caught most dealers with price lists which failed to reflect increases that occurred during the latter part of 1950.

Jagger is one of Hollywood's most respected and — more important — most consistently working actors and didn't he snag an Oscar a year ago because of his work in "12 O'Clock High," for which he doffed his toupee?

Now he doesn't argue that you should go bald to make a success in the movies. It isn't that simple. But he does have a word of caution for the suspension-happy youngsters who give their studios much trouble.

"The important thing is to keep working," he opined. "You can't make a hit when you're at home on suspension."

"Besides, you never can tell what you can get out of a role, even the smallest of one."

Jagger mentioned some of the pitfalls of young players: "They begin to think that their billing or the size of their dressing room is more important than the job they are doing."

Jagger's main advice to actors is contained in two words: be self-sufficient.

"A lot of actors have only one life — their career," he explained. "They do get tense, and lose all sense of proportions."

"I've always tried to maintain varied interests. I'm not a great political thinker, but I try to keep up with what's going on in the world. I work in my garden when I have the time. And I don't worry about my career. People told me I had to be careful about roles after I won the Oscar. I told them that was crazy."

"I've done four pictures since I won, some good, some not so good. But I've been working. And I've been happy."

Weight Lifting Babes Keep In Good Shape

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Most people have the idea that girls who frequent gymnasiums are either too fat or too strong. The consensus has always held to paraphrase Dorothy Parker: Men seldom make Dates.

With girls who lift weights, lifting, and other forms of exercise, are the latest vogue for beautiful young ladies who want to keep in shape. John Terlazzo's gym, for one, has a ladies' night twice a week.

Ladies' Night at the Gym is an awe-inspiring sight. A group of dainty damsels in tight T-shirts and loose muscles, lift bar-bells, bend knees and otherwise spend two busy hours. Some come to lose pounds, some to gain.

Terlazzo, a smiling man with muscles on his muscles, explained that varying exercises can result in a loss or gain in weight.

"See that girl?" he said, pointing to a tall red-head straining to lift a bar-bell. "She came in in January. She weighed 115. Kinda spindly, you know. Now she's up to 125, and you can see for yourself."

She came over. Her name was Joan Zanichelli, and she worked as a secretary. She said she loved lifting weights, felt wonderful and thought her training sessions were working wonders. Terlazzo beamed.

"See that girl?" he said, pointing to a pretty blonde wearing the uniform plus a choker with a rose on it. "She hasn't been here very long, but she seems to like it."

The blonde, who turned out to be an actress named Fran Gregory, was lying down on what looked like an inclined ironing board. She was swinging two weights around in her hands.

"That exercise," whispered Terlazzo, "is very good for bust development." He said it had something to do with tensions and "pull."

The incline made the exercise help a certain set of muscles. Later she would do the same thing lying horizontally, which would build up some other muscles.

"Have to exercise all the muscles in the chest region," said Terlazzo, "otherwise the result would be — well it wouldn't look just right, that's all."

The theory behind the whole thing, he explained is that plain old exercising isn't enough. It's the weight resistance that does the trick. Terlazzo calls it "calisthenic exercise with weight resistance."

"We had a girl come in here last time," he said, "who was in terrible shape. Just awful. She was so out of shape that I had her just bend down and touch her toes and she was stiff for a week. I'll gradually increase her exercising, then add weight resistance, and she'll be in good shape in a couple of weeks."

He ran over to help singer Lea Kane, a little brunette, adjust a pair of iron boots on her feet. Then he ran back to explain that kicking and swinging the legs with those things on the feet helped build up the leg muscles.

Some of the girls, Terlazzo said, are worried at first. They are afraid they'll develop great bulging muscles. But he tells them to forget that nonsense.

"Women are different from men," he said. "It's something to do with glands. They'll never get big biceps, for example. They don't have to give that a second thought. They'll just get in better shape."

Controls Loosened On Canning Articles

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The government today loosened controls on jars, glasses, lids and jar rings used by housewives in canning fruits and vegetables.

The order, effective April 26, would allow wholesalers and retailers to fix ceiling prices on such items by adding to current costs the average percentage markups they used from May 24 to June 2, 1950.

The Office of Price Stabilization said the order was needed "to start the flow of these goods to housewives." Since the items are sold mostly during spring and summer, OPS said, the general price freeze caught most dealers with price lists which failed to reflect increases that occurred during the latter part of 1950.

SUPPORT YOUR CHURCH

"Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it..."

YOU IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN YOU

Character is a by-product of the church. It is like the pump and old wine are changed with benedictions that fortify and influence for a better citizenship and a stronger democracy. In the church the material is made religious character. Statesmen today declare that the church alone can furnish leadership to handle the affairs of state in these perilous times. Then we with our children should go to the church of our choice on Sunday. "You in the Church and the Church in you" are a combination for good. Be a regular CHURCH-GOER and a daily BIBLE READER.

You have called a man to become your minister; you have chosen him with calm deliberation...with great care. That means that you desire a spiritual church in the service and worship of God.

The minister is your prophet, even as he is also the prophet of the Most High. It follows that you have promised to listen to the message which that "preacher-prophet" is to bring. Else, why did you make him your minister? He expects, through prayer and meditation, to find the will of God for himself and for you and for our world. Listen then to what the divine purpose for you may be!

The preacher is the leader of his people, under the Spirit of God. How necessary that there shall be women and men to follow where he marks out the path of Christian living! That likely means regular attendance at the services of prayer in your church. It means also an eager listening to the Scriptural exposition, in which men find what God has for them to be and to do, as well as the blessed aid of His Spirit in all one's efforts.

The Church is a fellowship of women and men, inspired by the example and the teaching of the Master, united about the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, and committed with Him to the coming of the Kingdom of God upon the earth. It takes us all together to create and to maintain such a healing and strengthening and comforting fellowship. You and I need the divine comradeship which the church affords. Let's do our part to make a good church in our community; God will do His part, we may be sure. As much as does the Preacher, we have a ministry to carry out. "Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it..." Attend your church.

Dedication Set Sunday For Lefors Methodist Church

Dedication of the Methodist Church of Lefors, which was completed in 1948, will be made Sunday, April 29, with the Rev. W. E. Hamilton, Methodist district superintendent, officiating. The building was constructed during the ministry of the Rev. N. S. Daniel, and was designed by the Rev. H. H. Hunt of the Chillicothe church. It's valued today, including furnishings, at about $30,000.

Finished in white stucco, the building has stained, arched windows. The interior is finished in white plaster with steel-fabricated oak beams across the ceiling. It is hoped that all former pastors of the church will attend the Sunday meeting. After morning services, dinner will be served at the church. The Rev. N. S. Daniel, former pastor, will speak at the evening worship hour.

Those working on the building committee include Arlie Carpenter, Ray Jordan, Ben Garber, Hank Brenning, W. T. Cole, W. R. Conley, Bernard Johnson, B. O. Bright and W. R. Cullinson. The Rev. Walter V. O'Kelly is pastor of the Lefors church at the present time.

Trustees of the church are Vernon Northcott, Neil Jordan, A. M. Bennett, Bill Heese and W. T. Cole.

From Bondage To Freedom

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. The story is well known of how Jacob and his great company went down to Egypt, and flourished under the power and patronage of his illustrious son. But it is a story that cannot be too well known.

CHURCH H. SMILEY

I realized this some years ago when a Baptist minister, who was an accomplished elocutionist, came to address a large men's meeting over which I was presiding. His "address" that day consisted of a recitation without comment of the 11 chapters of Genesis, in the Authorized Version, that tell the story of Joseph. For me it was a thrilling experience.

I had never before realized how the amazing story is so amazingly told, the details and contrasts brought out with vividness and dramatic effect, the steadfastness under temptation, the fortitude under imprisonment and bitter disappointment, the uncorrupted character under power.

Church H. Smiley will be guest speaker at the missionary breakfast in the First Christian Fellowship Hall at 7:30 Sunday morning. His topic will be "The Challenge of Christian Missions Today." He will also bring the morning message at 11 a.m. Sunday on the topic "The Great Affirmation." Tickets for the breakfast may be secured from Mrs. H. R. Kees, 401 Crest, and Mrs. R. A. Mack, 1116 S. Barna.

KILLER'S PACE BY JULIUS LONG

THE STORY: Star Williams, famous criminal lawyer, makes a heated appearance in court to present Star's argument in behalf of Rose Bidault. A charge of murdering her husband, Jim Marshall, his leg-man, am convinced that nothing Star can say will save Rose from the chair. Her defense is that her husband was shot when a small automatic was dropped and went off by accident. One expert has testified that this particular type of gun had safety devices preventing it from going off unless it is fired when dropped.

STAR WILLIAMS picked up State's Exhibit No. 1, the murder weapon. I realized that it was identical, except for its pearl grips, with the little automatic which Madam Sonya Sargata had pointed at me when I had burst into her hotel room.

Star carried the weapon back to the jury. "You need not be alarmed, ladies and gentlemen. This pistol positively can not harm you, even if I were to drop it. And this particular gun has been in court for 10 days; it has lain on the table in plain view of all of you, so that it cannot possibly be loaded. "Even if it were loaded and if I were to drop it on the floor before you, no bullet could crash into your skull as Rose Bidault claims a bullet tore into the skull of her late husband. Mr. Tanner's high-priced experts have told you it couldn't happen. Yet, ladies and gentlemen, how many times have we read in the papers about the unloaded guns going off and killing someone?"

Star let the force of this rhetorical question sink in, then turned suddenly toward Andy Tanner. "The little gun slipped out of his hand. It crashed to the floor. It went off with a roar that made everyone, including the jurors, jump out of his chair. In stunned silence Star stared at the little automatic, then he picked it up and carried it carefully back to the exhibit table.

Aside from Star himself only Nick Ricardo seemed to have retained his presence of mind. Nick was busily snapping pictures with his candid camera, and the judge, who had forbidden such a practice, was too nonplussed to take note of this. Star calmly faced the jury and said: "I am so glad that none of you was hurt by the bullet fired by this unloaded gun. I assure you that I should have retained a better grip on it were it not for the fact that Mr. Tanner's expert witnesses had convinced even me that the gun absolutely, under no possible circumstances could be discharged accidentally even if dropped to the floor!"

IT was the ball game, all right. Star ended his argument with this final ironic statement, and though Andy Tanner carried on valiantly in rebuttal, the frightened jury heard not a word that he uttered. They fled in a panic to the jury room and voted for acquittal in the record time of six minutes. A few minutes later Judge Wanamaker declared Rose Bidault free. Still stunned, still a little angry with her lawyer, Rose's first words after adjournment of court were: "Well, you might as well have killed me as scared me to death! What was the idea, running out on me like that?"

Star shrugged. "Well, I got you off, didn't I?" "Well, I like that! It was who-ever loaded that gun that I've got to thank! All you did was to drop it!" Star smiled wryly and nodded. "As you said, you've got whoever loaded the gun to thank!" Joe Worley, Andy Tanner's aide, called: "Congratulations, Star! Tanner gave the youth a sharp and disapproving frown, and he reddened. Tanner's defeat at Star's hands had long ago rankled to an extent precluding any of the social amenities on Tanner's part. Star smilingly thanked Worley and went on to the jury. He shook the hand of each juror. Rose Bidault took her cue and did likewise. Kitty Coyle had sat beside me, and now she said: "I don't know how he did it, but he did it, I'm sure! What was he doing all night, anyway?"

"Learning how to pass a miracle. By the way, when you left Max Feldstein I had an idea you meant to tell me something."

"I did, but it doesn't mean anything anymore. Max warned me that he had overheard Andy Tanner tell Nick Ricardo that if Star failed to show up he was going to have disbarment charges filed against him."

Tanner had been keeping his fingers crossed, hoping Star wouldn't show up so he would have no chance of losing the Bidault case—and at the same time he had counted on using Star's failure to appear as ground for disbarment.

RICARDO's paper wouldn't be on the streets until noon but that reporter had raced from the courtroom in high gear. Max Feldstein had just come back from phoning his paper. The reporter's actions were purely perfunctory, for it would almost take the Judgment Day to rate an extra in River City.

"How about a new statement?" Max asked Star. "I'm tired of quoting you as saying the secret of your courtroom success is that you never represent a guilty client."

Star grinned. He liked Max, who was crowding 60 and who had been on the courthouse beat so long he knew more courtroom technique than most of the lawyers. The antithesis of Ricardo, Max never dramatized himself, and never used any information given in confidence and off the record.

"I'll give you a quote and it'll be different, Max. You can say that Rose Bidault was freed by the hand of Providence, which is quicker than the eye."

BEAUTY AFTER FORTY

"I have always kept my hair nice and had it colored by a professional hairdresser. I want to wear a chignon. I have a slender neck, high forehead, yet my face is sort of round. Please suggest a hair style.—Mrs. Cy."

Wear a soft, wavy bang to camouflage the high forehead. Draw your hair back into smooth, sleek lines. Attach the chignon at the nape of your neck to flatter the slender neck.

"I have gray hair, good coloring. I have a navy suit for spring. Am I, at 47, young enough for bright accessories? I want two or sets. Could you suggest what is hat right? I weigh 135 and am 5 ft. 7 in.—W. W."

Age does not limit color accessories and at 47 you are a young woman. For the first accessories I suggest a bag of red, polished calf, shoes to match blue hat with blue veiling dotted in red, blue and blue gloves. For the other set of accessories—navy blue bag and matching navy shoes, a rough white straw sailor, to be worn in the new way, straight on the head. Cover the hat with navy veiling in a coarse mesh. Chalk-white head choker, white wash gloves, blue blouse and, for a change, a white one.

You can wear your white and red accessories in a mix-match fashion at times and have a three-way costume. Be sure that you get a lipstick to match whatever shade of red you choose. Being well dressed and well accessorized means buying things which complement whatever you have and things which go together.

"I have long hair and will not cut it. Will I be considered 'dated' and old-fashioned—Q. R."

Of course you have a right to wear your hair in any way that you please but you should at least compromise with fashion and work some way that is smart to wear long hair. Your hats should be designed to wear with that style. Or you could set a fashion of your own of going without a hat.

Our fathers, chained in prison dark, Were still in heart and conscience free; How sweet would be their children's fate, If they, like them, could die for thee!

Faith of our fathers! holy faith! We will be true to Thee till death!

er and virtual dictatorship, and through it all the very noble and very human Joseph, avenging himself by a very subtle trick upon the brethren, who had own people, and lead them out of a foreign land, when there arose "a Pharaoh, who knew not Joseph." The racial and religious prejudice, unfortunately still rife in the world, even in our own supposedly enlightened, democratic, environment, soon wreaked its havoc upon the Jews.

Great works of ancient time soon became the symbols of injustice and oppression. Forced to make bricks without straw, the remnant of those who had come to Egypt seeking food, and finding apparent happiness, were cast into bondage, suffering cruelly, and his prospect of ease and power, to share the affliction of his own people, and lead them out of bondage toward freedom.

But it was, as we know, by no means as simple as that. Hardships, discouragements, rebellious spirits, yearnings to turn back, wanderings in the wilderness, conflicts, marked the way until the freedom of Canaan was won.

But it was a march from bondage to freedom. All is not bright and pleasant in this record, but what is bright and what shines with especial glory, is the conception of liberty enshrined in the ancient Jewish scriptures. In a world in which everywhere slavery was prevalent, it is remarkable how the Jews designed laws and regulations to protect the community against slavery and the individual in his rights.

One cannot go into this fully here, but one can point to the laws designed to prevent a debtor against becoming permanently in bondage to his creditor, and the Cities of Refuge as safety for those who had inadvertently injured another.

The heritage of liberty that the world owes to the Jews is immense, but unfortunately the world has never fully appreciated it.

The thing most important is what we do, not what we say. God's open secret is seen through grace, truth, and love. —Mary Baker Eddy

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Life everlasting, without beginning or end, is discussed in the Lesson-Sermon titled "Progression after Death" to be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 29. The Golden Text is taken from Proverbs, and reads: "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead. . . He that followeth after righteousness and mercy, life, righteousness, and honour."

From the King James Version of the Bible will be read this citation: "Keep they heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Proverbs 4:23) Also included in the Lesson-Sermon will be this statement from page 286 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Progress is born of experience. It is the ripening of mortal man, through which the mortal is dropped for the immortal."

It had been 300 years since Henry VIII had known no limit of debauchery. After 18 years of marriage to his dead brother's wife Catherine, the fat monarch fell for Anne Boleyn, the queen's maid of honor. But Anne told the king to hands off unless he meant to marry her. So he meant to marry her. But for

"Faith of our fathers! Mary's prayers Shall save our country back to Thee; And though the truth that comes from God, England shall then indeed be free."

Edited for use by all denominations, Faber's hymn reads: "Faith of our fathers! living still In spite of dungeon, fire and sword; O how our hearts beat high with joy, When'er we hear that glorious word."

Our fathers, chained in prison dark, Were still in heart and conscience free; How sweet would be their children's fate, If they, like them, could die for thee!

Faith of our fathers! we will love Both friend and foe in all our strife; And preach Thee, too, as love knows how By kindly words and virtuous life.

Faith of Our Fathers

'A Catholic priest ponders religious persecution in England'

Father Frederick William Faber was a real a Protestant. He followed the classic, John Henry Newman, to the Catholic faith. In his adopted church Faber missed the hymns of Wesley, Watts and Cowper. So he determined to write some of his own. He didn't know one note from another, and he began by memorizing 14 tunes and writing words to them. In all he was the first 150. In 1849, at age 35, Faber was sent to London to convert an old whisky shop into an oratory for a group of fellow priests. In his spare time he wrote hymns and reviewed the religious history of England.

The Wheels Of The Gods Grind Fine

"It's an old story that the wheels of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly fine. Which is a six-bit way of saying you're going to get the business sooner or later, one way or another."
Take, for example, Horrible Harry, Or, as Al Smith used to say, "Let's take a look at the record."
Back in 1944, when Harry was the virtually anonymous running mate of Mr. Magic, he shivered out to San Francisco where he got himself interviewed by the papers. Harry said a lot of his old mentor, Boss Pendergast, who had done a job in the federal poke for cheating on his income tax. That was the beginning.
A few months later he was asked about a Los Angeles politician who was running for Congress on the Democratic ticket and allegedly doing a little side work as kliegman of the Ku Klux Klan. Harry's deathly answer was: "If he's ours, we're for him."
The next year Harry borrowed an Army bomber to fly to the funeral of old Tom Pendergast who had gone nose-up while waiting to get his citizenship back. ("They take away your citizenship when you check in at a federal pen.")
In 1946, Harry read the address Henry Wallace was planning to deliver. It was with a bit of enthusiasm about the Communist government of Russia. Harry played the speech. Later he said he regretted it. Maybe he didn't understand what it said.
In 1948, he looked around at the so-called un-American Activities probe and announced that any notions of Communist influence in Washington were "red herrings." Shortly thereafter, Alger Hiss — the fair-haired boy of the State department — was convicted of perjury. In Communist party leaders were convicted; three atom bomb spies were found guilty — two of them getting the death penalty. J. Edgar Hoover said there were 50,000 party members in the country and 10 that number who were doing the work of the party.
In 1949, it was disclosed that Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan — the man chosen to represent the President when General MacArthur comes to Washington — was involved in the "five per centers" and "deep freeze" scandals. Mr. Acheson refused to turn his back on Algy Hiss and Horrible Harry refused to put "General Vaughan" in the "black" list of traitors, for which military assignment he seems most eminently qualified.
In 1950, Harry broke all previous records by announcing that the Great Red Dean of Eastern Washington was the world's No. 1 foe of Communism. Dear, what a shock!
Last year, again, Mr. Truman

Having New Furniture Takes The Joy Out Of Life For Mac

By HENRY McLEMORE
If there is anything more uncomfortable to have around than a new automobile it is new furniture.
Everybody knows how miserable a new car makes a fellow. He almost cries when it gets rained on, and does cry when he misses his aim at the garage and takes that lovely new paint off that lovely new fender.
There never was a man manful enough not to have a quivering lower lip when the back bumper and tail light of his new car got a good smashing up.

I have blubbered over mishaps to new cars for many years, but it was not until November of last year that new furniture came into my life again to break me down into a plain, old cry-baby.
While we lived in Florida we didn't care what happened to our old furniture. Cats and dogs slept on it, people in wet bathing suits sat on it, and hurricanes buffeted it from here to there. But not a hair did we turn.

Then we moved to New York where foisting canvas chairs and old furniture was frowned upon by the social set as we were trying to get in with. So we bought a lot of new things, mostly from DeGaal and Walker, the Walker being Hugh, an old friend. We figured Hugh would let us have a couch or a coffee table or a desk for maybe 10 or 12 years.
So we got the furniture. Very lovely furniture, too.
Wish to goodness I never had bought it. Haven't had a moment's peace since it was delivered, all shiny and pretty and laudly. I'll never forget coming back into the living room and seeing a cigarette I had left stretched out, full length, all ashes, burned into the top of the coffee table.
I sat myself down and wrote a congressman to the effect that the Marine Corps had a "propaganda machine" better than the Kremlin's. That one really set off the fireworks. Old Horrible Harry had to let me know when the Marine Corps convention and say it was all a dreadful mistake. Unfortunately, however, he'd put it in writing and so he couldn't beg off on the old excuse of having been misquoted.
This year, Harry continued his brilliant streak of genius by writing a personal letter to a Washington music critic who said that Margaret sang flat most of the time. The President's letter threatened the critic with physical violence and described in some detail the sort of mayhem the President of the United States intended to inflict on this citizen if they ever met (perhaps General Vaughan would hold the coats). Poor Margaret — by all accounts a nice girl — is said to believe Daddy would write such a letter; that just goes to show you that it's a wise daughter who knows her own father. Especially when Daddy is Harry Truman.
And the climax of this sterling career of in-mouth administration was the firing of General MacArthur.
Perhaps MacArthur will be the peculiar instrument of the gods who, as we remarked, are supposed to create a fine-grained sort of gear.
Of all Harry's sins, the finest of a general is hardly the most serious. But it certainly is the least popular.
In any event, future historians should write a nice exercise in judgment when they try to sum up the enormity of the Great Era of Stupidity in which Harry Truman was the chief actor.

"The Morals of Controls"
I want to reproduce an article by Frank Chodorov under the heading of "The Morals of Controls" from the magazine Faith and Freedom. In his sub-head Mr. Chodorov asks these questions: "What are the effects of controls on ethics? Does the passing of law make a moral act immoral?" I quote:
"The impression is abroad that price fixing and wage fixing are economic matters. That is partly so. These controls — mark the word — also to constrict human behavior, and human behavior is surely the concern of ethics. This should not be lost sight of in the welter of economic argument.
Morality, Politics, Economics
"An analogy is in order. When a robbery is committed, the victim is impoverished and the robber is enriched, and thus the act has an economic aspect; also, it is political because punishment is involved. Our main concern with robbery is the injustice of it, and injustice is a moral concept. In like manner, controls are political because the law is involved. They deal with prices and wages, which are economic matters. Yet it cannot be denied that they direct themselves to human behavior, are intended to control it, and therefore must be treated from the point of view of morals.
"The very word tells its story. What do these controls aim to control? Nothing but the way the individual orders his economic life. By its provisions for enforcement and punishment, the law concedes that it is in conflict with normal behavior. Furthermore, the extensive machinery set up for detection and punishment is an admission that the law does not have the approbation of public opinion. Putting it plainly, the law has written into the thought and behavior of the citizen a code of conduct that did not exist before the law was enacted. It proposes to root this newly discovered 'demon' out of him.
"To understand the character of this 'demon,' we must apply ourselves to the nature of man, as revealed in his way of making a living, and there we find the pernicious habit of selling his labor (or labor products) to the highest bidder. Putting it in reverse, man is asked because he offers more satisfaction than the law allows. That is what he controls. "Whence comes price? Since we see no evidence of it in the animal world, we must conclude that it is purely a human invention. And, mark you, it is a concept that appears only when men associate; a lone human on a desert island would never think of price. Price is a product of social interaction, a habit of men that could hardly be termed immoral."
The Law of Parsimony
"He is an odd creature, this human being, in that he entertains a multiplicity of desires. All other living creatures are well satisfied with a meal and a mate. The human, however, starts only with food, fuel, and shelter; from the modest beginning he climbs to the heights of ambition and desire. He is never satisfied with what he has, but he is never satisfied with what he does not have. He is never satisfied with what he has, but he is never satisfied with what he does not have. He is never satisfied with what he has, but he is never satisfied with what he does not have."

National Whirligig

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — Millions of American consumers will enjoy a temporary break in prices on many lines of goods through May, according to the charts of the economists in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. But there is no guarantee how long it will remain a better buy than the market has been since last June's post-Korean inflation.
The lull in retail levels is not expected to extend to foods, for there are offsetting factors such as peak demand and possible shortages of animal feed for cattle and dairy flocks. But sales and reductions have already begun in such lines as television, radios, refrigerators, household furnishings and some lines of clothing.
Unfortunately, the factors behind any drop in prices are not basic. Even without more sweeping and stringent controls planned by Price Administrator Michael Disalle, there can be no permanent or severe recession in the price of federal rearmament expenditures which will reach $4,000,000,000 monthly next year and use 22 percent of total national production.
Panle buying precipitated by the Korean affair and the stepped-up national defense effort is principally responsible for the prospective declines.
Many firms stocked so heavily that they have strained their credit resources, and need cash to meet their loans. Individuals behaved accordingly, and are fairly well-supplied with perishes and clothing replacements.
"FAT" — Customer resistance also accounts for non-seasonal bargains, especially among the rather stable group who are temporarily unemployed because of factories' conversion from peacetime to military manufacture.
But the hopeful, overall reason is that, unlike the rearmament period of 1939-1941, the average American family has more "fat" in its kitchen, his living room, his closet and his garage. World War II scarcities also taught them how to economize and conserve on essential things.
BACKLOGS — For the long pull, 1953 may be a time for belittling. Barring an unforeseen and dependable peace settlement with Russia, it will be several years before our rapidly expanding plant will roll out guns and butter to meet our needs in both fields.
The postwar lull, as it was natural, had an adverse effect on the good old quality of American thrift. We went on a spending spree. Whereas we laid aside $157,000,000,000 in savings of all kinds from 1941 through 1949, only $19,000,000,000 were available, we fell far below that record from 1948 through 1950.
As a result the 1941-1945 figure, which amounted to 25 percent of combined disposable income, we put away only $61,000,000,000 in the post-war years, or only 7 percent of a far higher national income. The amount spent helps to account for large individual inventories now. But it reflects a severe drop in "rainy day" backlogs.
and the market place makes possible the practice of association. If we take this practice as the starting point of all morality, then we must concede an important place to price in ethics. It is as much an ethical as an economic concept.
"In itself, price is moral. It is mechanical. But, it is possible for man to manipulate this mechanical director, and if there is any immorality in the price mechanism it must be in the manipulation. When artificial shortages are created, the price indicator is forced to act as a mechanical director, and if there is any immorality in the price mechanism it must be in the manipulation. When artificial shortages are created, the price indicator is forced to act as a mechanical director, and if there is any immorality in the price mechanism it must be in the manipulation."

It's Your Money ... John Beck

BEHIND THE PLANNERS' CURTAIN
THE PROPS: On April 6-7-8, in the beautiful Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, a group of 77 lawyers, economists, politicians, industrial leaders and labor representatives met to discuss arrangements for your future and mine. That isn't the way it was officially stated, but it sums up the objective in simple words.
On the program card this was a "Conference on the Economics of Mobilization." The problem was to reach an agreement on method within the framework of the title. "Can we agree?" was the question. The "we" involved in the agreeing seemed to be most of the lawyers and politicians, and some of the economists, with a broad consideration of the labor view. Our industrial leaders and practical economists were the stepchildren of this conference.
The theme of the conference was: "The role of monetary policy and fiscal policy were discussed together. In the combination of these two things the funny-money boys had all the answers for our economic ills — 30 further proposals needed. The financial splits of the Federal Reserve Board, they say, can maintain the price equation, thus stabilizing wages and prices while controlling inflation. They do it with mirrors!"
THE FALLACY: Those who hold for direct controls see the fallacy in this approach. They recognize that monetary control is dependent upon fiscal policy, and that the latter is subject to political considerations. And they understand that money and politics mix about as safely as gasoline and whiskey. So they insist that physical controls are needed to supplement the other controls. They are right in the first assumption, but they are wrong in thinking that direct controls can offset the weakness of a political structure. They are wrong when they assume that these controls, however combined and imposed, they may be, can ever do more than suppress inflation for a very limited time. Professors Harvard and Jewkes, two of England's leading economists, made this quite clear, but to no avail, it seemed. The planners dreamed on.
Seid Jewkes: In England we found that one control leads to another, and to another, and to another, until you have the whole lot of them harnessed together. Inefficiency, waste, higher prices (inflation), and lower living standards for everyone. In the end it leads to totalitarian rule and misery for all concerned.
THE DEFENSE SPEAKS: Coming to the defense of our free enterprise system were some competent men as W. C. Mullendore of California, Phillip Costery of New York, Meyer Kestbaum, Herman Steinkraus, and several others. Backing these men up was the entire group of able and loyal representatives from the department of economics, University of Chicago, and a few others.
In a powerful argument, Dr. Aaron Director, professor of economics (U of C), spoke for free markets, and open (honest) inflation if this was to be our way of life, distasteful as it might be. He pointed out the long range dangers of controls and the probability of our being unable to decontrol in the end.
In closing, Dr. Jacob Viner of Princeton summed up. He admitted the inefficiency, waste, and danger under controls but thought that we—the 150 million American morons—had been sold on the idea and if we didn't get controls across the board we would think our government had deserted us. For "psychological" reasons, then, he considered economic controls necessary to the peace of our dumb minds.

ing all of it on his own flesh and blood.
But the government, itself shot through with corruption and immorality, if we are to believe our own investigating committees, apparently believes in a double standard for spies just as it pursues a double standard in its relations with the citizenry, over whom it has become the master instead of the servant. It sentences the Rosenbergs — civilians — who may have had some distorted beliefs, to death, while Green Glass, the army man, the welder and double-crosser, who well might be regarded for his squealing and rat-like activities by slapping him over the wrist with a few years in the jug. That may be "justice" but it certainly doesn't sound like morality.
As might be expected, Green Glass lawyer was none other than O. John Rogge, the same Rogge who, as a Frankfurter "hot dog boy" was wangled into the Justice Department a few years ago as assistant attorney general, and who prosecuted the mass Sedition Case of Americans against Communism, trying his level best to railroad the all-but-helpless defendants — of whom I was one. This is the same Rogge who was a prime author of the notorious Red Stockholm Peace pledge, who helped manage Henry Wallace's presidential campaign, who defended the Communists on trial not so long ago, who was branded a "Red Front" by Life magazine when he took part in the notorious Waldorf dinner honoring visiting Communist leaders, who has made trips to various parts of the world to participate in Red-sponsored activities in company with Charlie Chaplin and singer Paul Robeson, and who just this past year was an honored guest of the Kremlin where he laid a wreath on the grave of John Reed, the American Communist leader buried in Red Square, Moscow.
Rogge, in turn, was one of Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter's chosen boys, as Dean Acheson is and as Alger Hiss was. Man oh man — WHAT A NETWORK! Hiss, one of the bigger fellows and head of the Carnegie Foundation, as well as Roosevelt's advisor and assistant to Acheson, happened to be so clumsy that he couldn't help getting caught, even with Frankfurter personally appearing at his trial as a witness for him.
Horrible examples are made of small fry like the Greenglasses and Rosenbergs but nothing is said about the Rogges and Frankfurters and Achesons and Chaplins and Robesons, et al. Dr. Klaus Fuchs is chuckled in the house-gow for swiping our atomic secrets for Russia, but not a whisper could be heard about Albert Einstein, who recommended Fuchs, and helped get him over here from England. Strange, eh?

A Thought Or Two

By DAVID BAXTER

The recent conviction and sentencing to death of the Rosenbergs is supposed to be proof that the United States is getting tough with its native Communists. It also indicates something else — the desperate chances a man and woman will take for their collective idea, they are bold enough to follow it out to its logical conclusion — Communism.
The spy case also brings into clear focus the rat side of the Communist. Having begun with the notion that majority rule via the state is god and having dropped all pretense of morality — of the Golden Rule and Ten Commandments — it probably didn't even occur to a cornered rat like Green Glass that it might be wrong to help send his own sister and brother-in-law to the hot seat.
I am not an advocate of capital punishment nor of using force except in defense — never in starting it. Neither am I a judge nor do I ever desire to be one — but if I were and the law called for it, I would certainly hand a filthy criminal like Green Glass — an officer in the army — an even heavier job than his sister and brother-in-law, against whom he turned state's evidence in order to get himself off with a light sentence. I would have even less respect for a trusted army officer betraying his countrymen and sending his own sister to death than I would have for the civilian spy, the Rosenbergs. The Rosenbergs may have, through twisted and perverted reasoning, actually imagined they were doing something for their cause in helping Russia get the weapon with which to murder our people wholesale. They took a calculated risk and they're about to pay the loser's penalty. But Green Glass was a rotten welder who gambled, then tried to get out of paying his share of the loser's debt by load-

Washington . . . by Peter Edson

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The coming battle over who is to run the huge, $10 billion to $13 billion defense program, which will include economic aid programs will be a struggle for power in Washington and 10 other cities.
President Truman has attempted to settle this argument before Congress gets a crack at it.
By a letter to William C. Foster, present administrator of the Marshall Plan, the President has issued a directive that the State Department shall have the major voice in deciding which country gets what aid and how much.
This would apply to both military and economic aid. What it means is that Department of State will have control over the Department of Defense military aid to foreign countries and the Economic Cooperation Administration's Marshall Plan aid.
This may be all right as far as it goes. The question is whether Congress, in its particular show, even though Congress did give the civilian State Department authority to control military assistance allocations.
When the original Marshall Plan legislation was before Congress, Gen. George Marshall, who was then secretary of state, wanted the program run by his department. Congress would have turned over to a committee of three, which has now been working on the problem over a month.
COMMITTEE GROUNDED
On the committee are Charles H. Bonesteel 3rd for State Department, Col. George A. Lincoln for Defense and Ambassador C. Tyler Wood for ECA. What this looks like is a predominantly military committee, and three were general staff officers during the war.
Colonel Bonesteel, a West Pointer, did much of the original work on MDAEP, the North Atlantic Pact military defense assistance program. Colonel Lincoln, a brigadier general during the war, has been an instructor in social sciences at West Point since 1947. Colonel Wood, a New York stock broker in civilian life, is now deputy administrator to Ambassador Milton Katz for Marshall Plan operations in Europe.
Their present task is really to draft an omnibus bill which will put all foreign assistance programs in one package. It would allow for the merging of the Department of Defense military assistance program with ECA's economic assistance and the infant Point Four program of aid for under-developed countries, now in the State Department.
Drafting of the legislation itself is being done by the legal staffs of the various departments. This legislation — can be made very simple. It is the preparation of estimates and suggestions for presentation to Congress that has proved so difficult.
Organization of the new administration is also proving tough. Paul Hoffman has pointed out that there are 32 government agencies with a hand in foreign aid programs of various kinds. Getting them all under one roof is considered essential. Present indications are that the military assistance program won't be completed till 1954 or 1955.

"I ALWAYS START HIM OUT THIS WAY IT GIVES HIM CONFIDENCE."
The original job of the four-year Marshall Plan has been concluded a year ahead of time. So we now propose to abolish it. We have, however, a new problem in re-arming western Europe. We therefore propose that a new agency be set up to do this job and we will transfer to this new agency the Marshall Plan staff and the liquidation of its affairs.
The arguments against this are that the ECA organization is under one roof is considered essential. Present indications are that the military assistance program won't be completed till 1954 or 1955.

ALL IN A LIFETIME

Highway Deaths Reported High. AUSTIN (AP) - Highway slaughter maintained its high rate in Texas last month. The Department of Public Safety today reported 196 killed or mangled by 175 in March a year ago.

Many Parts Of World Represented In India. NEW DELHI (AP) - Nearly 750 foreign students are studying in Indian universities. Education Minister Abul Kalam Azad said recently in parliament.

She had to let herself inside with a key. The place had been deserted by the servants at the time of Barney's murder. They had all taken sides against Rose, and of course they had refused to work there for her.

I had hired a cleaning staff to keep the house in some habitable shape. It would be up to Rose to find servants - if she wanted to remain in the place, which I didn't think she would. It wouldn't be so pleasant for her to live here in River City from now on. And she would have more than enough money to haunt the gay spots the world over.

SHE led me into her private sitting room, threw her handbag onto a writing desk and told me to wait. She disappeared inside her boudoir and left me there alone.

The murder that had happened right in the middle of this run. That's where they had found Barney's body, at any rate, and the evidence indicated that he had not been moved after he had dropped the bullet in his brain. That was the only thing about Rose's story that held water, the fact that the bullet had coursed upward through his mouth.

It was this corroborating circumstance that had caused Star to carry on with her fantastic yarn about the dropped gun going off accidentally when it hit the floor. Only one other piece of evidence to substantiate it, and that was negative. No nitrate deposit had been found on Rose's dainty hand when the paraffin test had been made by homicide.

These were not enough to sell Rose's story of the accidental death of old Barney Bidault. Andy Tanner's experts had been conclusive enough for me. That particular model of 25-caliber automatic pistol can't be fired accidentally - unless a Star Williams gimmicks the works.

"Come in, Marshall, and I'll give you your check."

THE STORY: Rose Bidault told the jury that her husband was killed by a gun which went off when it was dropped. Gun experts at her trial said her pistol couldn't have done so, but Star Williams' attorneys threw the gun in court and it goes off. Star says Rose was the hand of Providence, which is quicker than the eye."

He helped me a bit if he hadn't carelessly dropped that gun."

I laughed. "You don't really believe that gun could go off accidentally, do you?"

"I saw it with my own eyes! So did the jury and everybody else."

"Sure, but what nobody's eyes saw was Star's hand working quicker than the eye and serving as a proxy for the hand of Providence! Star was late only because he had spent the whole night learning how to slip a gimmick into that gun so that it would go off when it was dropped. Also he had to learn how to load it quickly - with a blank, of course - in front of a whole jury, a judge and the D. A. I still don't know how he did it - but if he hadn't you'd be on your way to the death house, not to your home!"

ROSE BIDAULT rode several blocks in absolute silence, then she said: "All right, I'll buy it. But you couldn't Star have told me what he was up to and relieved my suspense? It was terrible!"

I shrugged. "For the same reason he couldn't tell even me. He had to be sure your manner wouldn't give him away. He's a natural actor himself, but we aren't."

Rose bit her lip and maintained a sullen silence until we reached her house. It was quite a pile, one of those old East Broad Street mansions that stood like mausoleums all along its length. In the old days all the high society had lived in them, but lately zoning restrictions had been lifted, and a few of the piles had been razed in favor of business blocks.

I stopped under a porte-cochere. Rose got out angrily without waiting for me to open the door for her.

"About that ten grand," I told Rose Bidault, when we had driven a couple of blocks from the courthouse, "you aren't going to be a couple, are you?"

She flared up. "Who's a wether? I don't feel that I owe another cent to Star Williams! He nearly scared me to death, showing up late, and he wouldn't have WTC Water Group Opposes Controls LUBBOCK — (AP) — The water committee of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has adopted a policy of fighting federal control of water resources on all levels. At a meeting here yesterday the committee heard an analysis of the report made by President Truman's water committee, Fred Husbands of Abilene, WTC Manager, said the plan would put water resources under federal control through appointment of "virtually" river basin czars for six-year terms. The WTC committee endorsed legislation pending before the Texas legislature which would strengthen the authority of the state board of water engineers, inventory water resources and eliminate unused water rights. Husbands was authorized to appoint a subcommittee to help the High Plains Water Conservation and Users Assn. obtain a locally administered conservation district for the high plains irrigation area.
