Slight Rush Is Made on Markets

Lack of rationing points preventd the expected rush for meat purhases at local groceries Friday and Saturday as most stores reported "business as usual" in the lays preceding the more stringent neat rationing order, which is efective today.

'What have you got that doesn't ake points (or very few points)?' vas the question butchers reported hey heard time and again.

"They all wanted to buy, but ey couldn't," Don Eaton, manager f the meat market in Ideal Food farket explained. "Twenty-five ercent of my customers had no points all all."

W. M. Phillips, who manages the neat market at Young's grocery, had the same story. He said he old lots of chickens "and could nave sold a hundred if I'd had hem." He reported fish sales were heavy. Chicken and fish are not rationed.

L. E. West, manager of the Furr food meat market, was the only utcher contacted who reported ncreased business last week.

"I don't know whether the new ationing order was responsible or t." he said, "but I did have more rade last week than previously."

Junior Miss' Will Be Presented Tonight at 8:30, Junior High School

"Junior Miss" will be presented in the auditorium of the Junior high school this evening at 8:30 p. m., by a New York cast, under the auspices of the Business and Professional Women's club. Tickets for the play will be available at the door for all persons who wish to attend

The most likable people in the world will move into Pampa to night, with an air so charming, so hilarious and so shining with infectious good humor that the town will be glad that they have paid a visit in the form of the play, "Junior Miss." This account of those blithe spirits, the Graves family and their friends, was fashioned by Jerome Chorodov and Joseph Fields out of a series of stories by Sally Benson which for several years past have quietly amused the readers of the New Yorker Magazine. It was directed by Stanley Woolf, of whom it is said that he found the play irresistible, and was produced by the Civic Drama Guild of New York. The stories were titillating, but the play leaps far beyond their original gentle amusement and is so inordinately funny that it seems bound to beat into submissive laughter even those adults who, understandably, abnor adolescent brats, especially when they are of the feminine gender In making a play out of the spor-

Visit to Buchenwald

The American people have been accused of reacting coldly or indifferently to stories of atrocities, even of atrocities against their own countrymen. This is not wholly true. And, it seems to us, there is an explanation for the measure of truth the accusation contains.

First of all, it might be recalled that the atrocities of Hitler's nazis were what turned most Americans against the third reich in the days of peace, even when they were ignorant or incredulous of the sinister nazi plan for world conquest. It was Hitler's black heart as revealed through pogroms and concentration camps that first roused our indignation against him.

As for American coldness and indifference, it is likely that numbness would be a better description. We are all familiar with the fact and sight of death. We know how it comes on the battlefield.

But death by slow starvation and unspeakable torture we cannot visualize, even though trustworthy reports and photographic evidence of the result is before us. Nor can we visualize or imagine the in human cruelty that decrees it.

Hence our reaction as incredible story after incredible story of atrocity is brought to us. Our indignation becomes impotent and intellectual. We are reluctant to credit such deeds to members of human race. And, confronted us react in the same way. All of with unassailable proof, we remain us have been looking in all direcstunned and a little incredulous. In that we are probably not too LAW which governs these things. different from other peoples of the earth. Surely the middle-aged civillan German, even after 12 years 1865, someone present objected of Hitler, has been reluctant to that to begin the peace with freebelieve the bestiality of his own kind and kin. He may have had to turn his head to avoid the evidence before his eyes, and yet he might well persist in his disbelief -especially since the American invasion of his homeland, when the urge for fawning innocence has been upon him.

It was this German, his wife and young children and friends, to the number of 1200, who were made to journey from their homes in Weimar, hallowed city of German culture, to the infamous nazi concentration camp at nearby Buchenwald.

There they were made to look and smell and retch and faint at the evidence of the incredible, can be based on the workers' needs

Common Ground By R. C. HOILES tenry Ford II a Thinker

WHAT WAR IS Further quotes from an address made by Henry Ford II at Chicago.

Here is a statement that shows oung, Ford has a sound moral foundation:

"Y ı will find in industry, also a tendency to question the strange optimism which assumes that once he war is over, we shall have nothing to do but move smoothly and gaily into new green fields That indicates a hazy conception of just what this war is. What is this war?-is it a penalty assessed for the world's past errors, or is it an option paid down on a brand new, patented and guaranteed future? Many incline to the sober view that this war is paying an old debt to the Moral Law, and is not the first installment paid on a golden future.

"If we learn anything from it, hat may be a good beginning from which to rebuild the world, but that is still a very big 'if.' In looking ahead, Industry is inclined to discard the view that we already have the makings of a new world in the new materials with which the war has provided us. As a matter of fact, materially the war has produced nothing-at most very little-that can be called new. Most of its instruments and methods had been in existence before the war."

Hope the Cause of Progress This young industrialist figures ve can rebuild the post-war world in this way:

"And, basically, the force that akes the people active is intangible-it is a hope, a confidence, expectation, an assurance, a trust that effort brings reward-a factor which cannot be stated in economic terms, but which, just the same, is the very basis of economic well-being. Confidence culivated in a people will generate the necessary enterprise and effort. Destroy confidence, and everything else withers. When I say 'the people,' I mean 'people': -you and I and everyone. subhuman deeds of their "master race." Enough of the dead, dying and maimed remained there to convince the most stubborn "patriot" among them that there was not much use in lying any more.

We cannot expect a miracle from the visit to Buchenwald. But the tortured and forgotten there have not died without purpose if enough Germans can be brought to see the place of their pain and ignominy.

It is a profound pity that every German cannot be made to see Buchenwald as the Americans found it. But at least those who did can never again extol the German race with the same conviction, however fiercely they may try to forget.

. We condemn the governments of Germany and Japan and we are in exactly as bad a spot as they are. Theirs probably is the sin of commission and our is the sin of omission, equally reprehensible, at least as far as the people who suffered are concerned, who trusted their government.

Nationally we are too busy legislating for "security" for a lot of individuals who have done little or nothing to provide security for themselves. But they had votes and votes were power and power is what makes men go"crazy in legislatures and executive positions.

Could the folks who founded this nation see what we have today in a "get something from the govern ment" population, encouraged and educated to ask and expect to get something from government; they'd drop back dead again. They came not for a cheapskate "security" for their bellies but a security" for an ideal. They saw a vision of free men, that government today has all but made into vassals. They would see today "power groups" in the big brackets both in high and low places, carrying on a regime of dissipation of public moneys that is utterly damnable. They would see giant corporations getting enormous profits on war contracts and labor at the same time aiding and abetting in strikes and a lowering of production standards that sickens the heart of the average conscientious man, and all this promoted and abetted and is definitely the program of the government. How can the citizens have confidence?

German war prisoners should be thoroughly indoctrinated into the workings of democracy. Although forcible indoctrination is prohibited by the Geneva convention, force should be used, if necessary, because the United States is the only country to observe the convention Rep. Richard F.
