There was no harm in win-hing the first trick without hesitation. South had no choice of play. Then however South should have done some thinking. It was only necessary to count up the tricks needed for the contract. South could expect to win seven tricks in aces and kings. He therefore needed two additional tricks in low cards. Since only four club tricks were

Many Reds Find No Future In Jobs

It doesn't always pay to be a top-flight Communistit may, indeed, lead to swift oblivion. That is the gist of an article in the June 20 issue of U. S. News & World Report, which starts: "It is beginning to dawn upon Communist leaders outside of Russia that maybe there isn't much future in their jobs. Competition for the No. 1 spot in the Communist hierarchy is tending to decline as a

The article deals with what has happened to many a one-time Communist big shot who for one reason or another displeased the super big shot, Stalin. As a typical example, the eight-step career of Comrade X is given. As a youth he takes part in street riots and battles with the police. He joins a socialist organization, becomes an important figure in it, and is instrumental in turning it Communist. He spends several years in a Balkan prison as a convicted revolutionary. On his release he goes to Russia, meets Stalin, and is given intensive Communist training. He goes back home as a party organizer and serves some more time in prison. He spends the war as a guerilla leader and afterwards plays a major role in turning his country over to Communism and Kremlin domination. Then he makes a slip - and execution follows, perhaps after a flamboyant trial.

U. S. News cites a number of cases, past and current, in which this pattern has been followed almost to the letter. Rudolph Slansky did a great job for Communism in the Czechoslovakia sell-out - he's now awaiting trial for treason and you don't need to be much of a seer to forecast what his end will be. Traicho Kostov did the party's work in Bulgaria — he was hanged a year and a half ago after being charged with plotting against the *Communists. Laszlo Rajk served the Kremlin well in Hunagary, then made what Stalin regarded as a misstep and also wound up at the end of a rope.

An interesting current case is Rumania's incredible Ana Pauker, who once was one of the most revered of all non-Russian Communists, and who was practically a buddy of Stalin's. As U. S. News says, "she was so faithful to the party line that people joked about it - said she carried an umbrella in sunny Bucharest every time it rained in Moscow." It is generally believed that she had her husband executed for deviating from that line. Now she has been accused of similar deviations, and has been fired as Rumania's party leader. It hardly seems likely that Mrs. Pauker has a very bright future to look forward to.

Many pages could be given to listing the names and records of people who faithfully and fanatically carried out Stalin's orders, who slipped, or, in the Kremlin's view, lost their usefulness, and were then accused, imprisoned, and finally executed by their ex-friends. Just how dampening an effect this may be having on the Communists who are still in power in the satellite nations is one of those questions that no one can answer exactly. But even the most zealous Communists must have some of the normal human emotions, and it seems only reasonable that they must occasionally wake up sweating after dreaming of what has happened to colleagues and prede-

The U. S. News article ends on this note: "A biographer quotes Stalin as having said: 'To choose one's victims, to prepare one's plans minutely, to slake an implacable vengeance and then go to bed — there is nothing sweet-

"Whether or not he actually said it, that's the way it.

Most of us are familiar with the manner in which the official Washington heart bleeds for two great groups of voters - veterans and taxpayers.

A Matter Of Timing

So if it were possible for the Democratic machine to direct a combination message to both of these groups, since veterans are also taxpayers, wouldn't it be good

Apparently the administration could see the political wisdom of such a program. There remained, then, only a matter of timing such a project so that it would do the most good. And for any candidate that the Democratic convention might happen to name.

As a result of nice political timing, all veterans carrying United States government life insurance and National Service life insurance have received, or will receive an official notice from the administrator of Veterans Affairs "in the interest of economy." The notice first points out that "the expense of administering the two large government life insurance programs is borne by all taxpayers, including policyholders"

"In the interest of economy, the Veterans Administration will discontinue sending receipts for insurance premiums becoming due after July 31, 1952.

What isn't mentioned in the official notice is that this government insurance scheme has been going on for more than 10 years and it wasn't until this year, an election year, that it was deemed worth the effort to try to economize. This in spite of the fact that private insurance companies have successfully operated in the same

Human Rights And The United Nation's"

Here is more of "Human Rights and the United Nations" by Rus-J. Clinchy and published by the Foundation for Economic Education, Inc.
Mr. Clinchy continues under the sub-heading of "Forced Uniformmental peril to the rights of manfirst, because there can be no volto impose its definitions of these rights on everyone. No law nor concept has any real power or effect, no matter what it may be, unless there is such a general accept-ance of it that no police force is necessary to bring about its acceptance by the vast majority. There is not the slightest possibility of any ent body of the United Nations today receiving such dominant ac-ceptance; and therefore the end result of any attempt to impose this code upon the nations could only be greater disunity and strife. Only a unifying faith in the dignity of man, with the inevitable diversities of expression of individuality, enables man to accept the assumptions of the good life. No imposed

A CASE HISTORY

"The history of the Roman Empire should illustrate to us the impossibility of imposing a uniform structure of governmental control, and a mode of life, upon various forms of national units.

code can ever attain any measure

"At first glance, it would appear as though the formation of that Empire was a great success, indicating the possibility of creating a unified government across a diversity of peoples today. An imperial government, centered in Rome, set out to bring the world under one unity of control and command. Within two centuries is had imposed its rule upon th whole of the Western world, and the common system of government extended from the Rock of Gibraltar to Persia and from North cased within the borders of this

"It is true that this system developed a surface appearance of order, and the people achieved some material benefits. War between the units ceased for a time; highways, aqueducts, dams, and many other public works were constructed; a unitary code of Roman law ruled the world: Latin became the universal language of formal and of-

"But the fact of history is thatthis surface uniformity never went below the surface. Within another crumbled. Yet the individuality of the conquered groups, which the Empire had endeavored to stamp out, persisted.
Athens, Jerusalem, Alexandria, and Constantinople vere still individualistic producers of concepts. Only Carthage was nonexistent. It had been swept off the earth. An over-all pattern of posed upon a diversity of culture religion, and forms of mores and governments. Because there was no unity beneath the uniformity, even an imperial power could not endure. But while the supergovernnent, with power to enforce its dictates, could not exist, the individual areas of unity did exist, Only true unity within any society can exist without compulsion. And if compulsion is necessary, then the superstructure is an evil deception. Only those who will unite can

"A code of ethics, which the United Nations Covenant pretends. to be, must follow, rather than preede, the existence of those common beliefs upon which society rests. For a code of ethics can only serve as a record of what is, rather than as a formulation of what should be imposed by a majority. There have probably been no greater disasters in the course civilization than those which have arisen from the attempts of well-intentioned people to enforce ethical codes upon societies which had no common acceptance of the base of the codes. Athenian democracy could not even be forced upon the Spartans, a day's walk away. The attempt to do this sort of thing has always resulted in strife and conflict, as those who felt that their way of life was being coerced by an alien have rightly resisted in mind and spirit, as well as with

AN ANCIENT ERROR This attempt through the United Nations Covenant on Human Rights repeats the ancient error of eeking to impose a code upon peo ples before the common values and principles exist which make voluntary acceptance possible. The inevitable result can only be greater disunity, resentment, and violence -until the yoke of such a superstate is thrown off and the freedom to unite voluntarily with those of a common mind and spirit is restored. "The Covenant offers to clear meaning of these human rights of which it speaks. There is no unequivocal definition of these rights which would protect their value; nor is there a recognition of the moral aspects of rights that inhere

There was a young salesman named Ted Whose car ran him into the red.

Now Ted is ahead . . . thanks to one of the greatest services ever offered the motoring public-a service that helps engines last longer, perform better, use less gasoline and oil!

It's exactly the same service that kept test cars new in Conoco's spectacular "50,000 Miles-No Wear" road test! In that famous 50,000-mile test, with 1,000-mile drains and proper filter service, test car engines showed no wear of any consequence: in fact, an average of less than one one-thousandth inch on cylinders and crankshafts. Gasoline mileage for the last 5.000 miles was actually 99.77% as good as for the first 5,000. Now you can get this same 1-2-3 "50,000 Miles - No Wear"

The right load-carrying units. The frame, axles, springs, and other units that carry the load are "Job-Rated" on Dodge trucks. Each is engineered to provide the strength and capacity needed to support your load.

Better weight distribution. Dodge short wheelbase allows more weight to be carried on front axle. Because the engine is located farther forward and front axle is moved back, you haul bigger loads without overloading.

The right load-moving units. You get an engine "Job-Rated" with plenty of power to pull bigger loads at low cost. All load-moving units-such as clutch, transmission, rear axle-are engineered to move bigger loads.

Two views of one method of brake construction on a Soap Box Derby racer. Two blocks of 2 x 4 wood, hinged at the center, connect the brake to the body of the car (above photo). When the cable attached to the foot pedal moves forward, the upper portion of the double block straightens out, forcing the drag-brake down (below). The brake is pulled up by an ordinary screen-door spring.

OUR NEWSBOYS

The eager-faced lad who stands on the corner in all kinds of weather selling newspapers is, in every sense of the word, an American businessman. He is a self starter. He is upbright and early and on the job late at night. Nobody backs him with capital or confidence. He supplies all this himself — and banks solely on his own alertness and salesmanship. Your newsboy may deliver your newspaper to your door. If so, he is even a more astute businessman, for he not only throws his papers at countless front porches, but doubles back regularly to make collections. Yes, the newsboy is an American institution. Keep up the good work, youngster. We're ALL behind you!

The South, always a Democratic stronghold, this year is destined to play a decisive role in choosing the Republican presidential candidate. The race between Sen. Robert A. Taft and Gen. Dwight Eisenhower is so close that the votes of the Southern delegates to the Republican National Convention may turn out to be the determining factor in the contest. Above Newschart shows the states and the number of delegates that each candidate will be wooing. Without the votes of these delegates, neither one of the major GOP contenders has amassed enough strength to insure victory on the first pallot.
