All-Time Polio Record Is Set For The State

The highest number of polio cases ever recorded in Texas in a single year was reached last week as 214 new cases boosted the year's total to 2.784.

The total broke the old record of 2,778 cases set in 1950. With three and one - half months re maining this year, this means the grim new record will far exceed that of two years ago.

State Health Officer George W. Cox recalled today that he had foreseen a record - breaking year as early as last fall and had appealed for "permanent community sanitation campaigns in an effort to sten the tide." He renewed his appeal today.

"It has been a dark year, and will get even darker before cool weather of fall causes a drop in cases," Dr. Cox said. He offered this advice to prevent a heavy incidence of polio in 1953:

"All enteric diseases-including polio can be effectively controlled by proper sanitation in the home and community. I feel that maintaining a year - round program of basic sanitation will do as much as anything to insure against another record - breaking polio year in 1953."

Fitty-four counties reported polio last week, three for the first time. Cochran, Denton and Terrell Counties each had a single case, their first of the season. Other counties reporting were Harris 27; Tarrant 24; Dallas 18; Galveston 14; McLennan 12; Jetferson 9; El Paso and Nueces bock, Potter6; Grayson and Travis 5; Fisher and Gregg 3; Brazos, Brown, Calhoun, Ector, Hale, Midland, Tom Green, Victoria and

What's The Use?

There is a saying that there is no honor amona thieves. Apparently that applies also to politicians, in spite of our recurring hopes that each new shining knight who arises may be an honest man with the interests of the country at heart.

Ever since its convention in Chicago, the Democratic party has been sweet-talking the South and saying nothing as many ways as possible.

You had us all wrong," various of the leaders said in effect. "We are not the red-eyed socialists you thought we were. That FEPC thing? You know it has no chance to pass, so what are you worried about?

"Kill the right to filibuster? That's absurd. We all believe in free debate on any issue. State's rights? Aren't you a bit over-excited about that? You know we all believe in states' rights "Anti-lynching bill? We are sure we can reach a compromise that will be satisfactory to everybody.

'Tidelands? Is that an issue? This is the first time we ever heard of it. Come on up and tell us about it.' It was all hot political opium, straight from the Washington joss house. The Southern leaders have been breathing deep and swallowing hard. Jimmy Byrnes took a few good whifs and said he's go along.

Alabama, Georgia and the others have given evidence a few good whifs and said he'd go along.

So now with the Dixie revolt squelched, the Democratic politicians turn to gathering in another block of votes. Now they woo the northern Negroes. Now the FEPC does mean something . , . a big tough something with long sharp teeth.

None other than the Democratic nominee for president, Gov. Adlai Stevenson, the reluctant draftee from the Abraham Lincoln country, is the new sponsor of the FEPC

Wonder how Jimmy Byrnes feels now. Wonder what Texas Gov. Allan Shivers thinks as he prepared his data for his conference with Stevenson on tidelands. What's the use of spending the time and the

Some Changes Due

Down around Austin there are speculations that this may be the next to last time that candidates for five presently elective officers will appear on the ballot for state-

All state reorganization plans discussed for Texas, and all those adopted for other states, would remove the administrative, bookkeeping and housekeeping agencies out of state elections and, theoretically at least, out of Texas already has many agencies administered by appointive, overlapping-term, non-paid boards which select the departmental heads and ride herd on policies. There are also a few directly appointed departmental executives, such as the secretary of state and adjutant gen-

Four of the elective state officials have constitutional status. A fifth post was created by the legislature. The constitutional offices are comptroller, treasurer, railroad commissioner, and land commissioner. The commissioner of agriculture holds office by statute.

Because it would require a constitutional amendment to change the method of selecting the first four officials, comparatively little effort has been made toward the adoption of the now more general commissioner-manager system. Advocates of the change argue that in addition to achieving greater efficiency, the plan eliminates statewide races for offices which attract little attention and the voter has little chance to learn the qualifications of the candidates.

Three other constitutional offices are elective: governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general. Under plans now contemplated they would remain so. However, the old Graves Administrative Code bill, based on a report to the Legislature in the '30s, called for apointment of the attorney general.

Until recently, the superintendent of education was elected statewide, but the office was abolished by the Legislature under the Gilmer-Aiken bill, and on appointive commissioner was authorized.

Some of the reorganization measures have tended to increase the power of the governor by reducing the number of departments and by giving the governor authority to appoint the department heads for terms corresponding to his own term of office.

This is a reversal of a long trend. The Texas system always has been to restrict the power of the governor and even recently his control over most state business has been further reduced by making the terms of appointive boards overlapping. Just how far the new reorganization moves will get in the Legislature next year is still only a matter of speculation. The only certainty is that there is a great need for reform and for a businesslike system in state government here than in most other states of the union. The really big problem is not what to do, it's where to

LOOKING SIDEWAYS

In Old Manhattan: The legend among people out of show business getting a job in a Broadway show is a mysterious, occult matter in some skulduggery combine at just the right moment. That is noncasting a new road show of 'Mister Roberts' and Bruce Bennett of the motion pictures will have the title role. The show will be out 40 weeks

This is how Bruce Bennett got the job. Joan Crawford made a new motion picture called "Sudden Fear." Bruce Bennett had the role of her lawyer in that picture. It was not a spectacular role-nor a long one. He played a hard-collar pebble-kicker-type of man. Miss Crawford brought the new film to New York and, in a tiny theater owned by RCA-NBC, she showed it to a few friends. Among the friends were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Logan. We all sat there in the dark and watched a fine, chilling suspense melodrama and, when it around and went out into the late afternoon heat. I saw Logan walking up the street and caught up with him. I tried a gambit or two but he was preoccupied. I hailed a cab and was about to get into it when Logan spoke. "You know this Bennett?" 🕳

"Barely," I said. "Interesting type," said Logan, who obviously knew nothing about Bennett and had known less than that until that afternoon. And 48 hours later Bennett was tagged for "Mister Roberts." Logan happened to see him in a relatively minor, quiet role in a movie he might never have seen if Joan Crawford hadn't invited him. No agents, no mystery, no complexities. Sheer chance. You know Yma Sumac? Good. know Erica Lund, Miss Sumac has a three-octave range. Miss Lund has three and one-half octaves of range. And also plays the guitar. She also would vote for either Burl Ives or Yul Brynner for president. They gave her a

He was looking for a partner with whom he could sing ypsy songs and earn a dollar with which to eat. She didn't know any Romany, but he ear-taught her enough to sound authentic. She pieced out her half of the duo with South American songs. They went out and did fine. People liked them and they earned what is known as good money. Then Brynner went n to executive work in radio and television and Miss Lund was without a partner. She decided she'd never sing popular numbers again. Too dull. But she remembered a man named Ives from "Syracuse. she called on him. He listened to her problem and went through his collection of American folk songs finding things suitable for her style
