Controversy On Navigation Is Sidetracked

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—(AP)—The United Nations economic and social council postponed a decision yesterday on the controversial issue of Danubian freedom of navigation after Russia had implied that she had no immediate intention of opening the Danube to free navigation between the Soviet and American occupation zones.

In closing a two-day debate, chairman Andrija Stampar of Yugoslavia announced that a decision would be postponed until next week. This action was interpreted as a move designed to give some delegates an opportunity to obtain new instructions from their governments.

A few minutes earlier Peru submitted a proposal to toss out of the council the bitter fight between the United States and Russia which saw the Soviet accuse the U. S. of direct interference in the internal affairs of countries involved in traffic on the Danube.

Previously the Soviet served notice on the U. S. that military measures in the Danubian area were of primary importance and asserted that changes of measures taken by Soviet military authorities in the Russian occupation zone are not possible.

The Soviet declaration was made as a big split in the council developed over a U. S. proposal to convene an international conference at Vienna to resolve problems now obstructing the resumption of international traffic on the Danube.

Britain, Belgium and Lebanon lined up in support of the U. S. proposal but Peru and Chile came out in strong opposition, declaring that the council does not have the competence to take up the question of the conference of Yugoslavia and See CONTROVERSY, Page 8

M'Arthur Reports Progress Being Made in Program

TOKYO, Sunday—(AP)—General MacArthur declared today that the Korean progress was made in July in Korean labor legislation, public planning, public safety and education. His report also noted that Seoul police had repulsed Korean communist efforts to free groups of counterfeiters and that the Korean press was clamoring for independence.

Residents of Southern Korea, which is American-occupied, were beset by acute food problems and the effects of heavy floods and cholera, the supreme commander added. There were some food demonstrations. Some help came from the United States, which sent food ships carrying 37,000 tons of food to Korea, as well as 28 tons of drugs for use in health campaigns.

MacArthur reviewed at length plans for a proposed legislative body from major Korean political parties and electees from the provinces.

Such a body, his report maintained, would "provide opportunity for Korean political representatives to experience in handling the kind of problems which will confront them when a provisional government is formed through the U. S.-Soviet joint commutative body would enact ordinances which when approved would have the force and effect of law." MacArthur noted, and would screen Koreans appointed to important posts.

Vets May Secure Local Medical Aid

All veterans of this area desiring or requiring outpatient medical treatment resulting from an injury connected with military service may be treated by the local doctor of their choice, at the expense of Veterans Administration, the Pampa chapter, American Red Cross, announced yesterday.

The first step in securing the desired treatment is to fill out Form No. 2877. When this form is approved the veteran will not only receive medical advice free of charge but will also be authorized to obtain prescriptions prescribed by his doctor from a local drug store without cost, according to Red Cross reports.

The doctors in this area have been advised low such cases are to be handled and the local druggists have been issued the necessary form to complete, in order that they may secure reimbursement for all prescriptions given in such cases.

Pampa-Perryton Highway 18 Plans Are Progressing, Fund Drive Begins

A concerted drive is now underway here to raise $50,000 by public subscription for the right-of-way costs of the Pampa-to-Perryton highway, it was announced yesterday afternoon.

A total of $9,500 had already been raised late yesterday, and the leaders were spurring on for the full amount by Oct. 10. The state highway commission begins holding public hearings at Austin on Oct. 14, relative to new highways, and the committee is planning to have $50,000 by that time to present in order that this road, which has been sought for almost 20 years, can be made a reality.

The road will be known as State Highway 18, it was said.

Jake Garman, head of the special highway committee, said: "It's going to be necessary for every business man in town to invest in this project. It should be emphasized that this is not a gift, but an investment in the future of this community."

The route for the road has already been surveyed by the highway commission, and has been designated. Since the commission does not buy rights-of-way for roads, it was necessary for this community to raise the money. This was necessary because Roberts county is thinly populated, and could not assume the cost through that county. Gray and Ochiltree counties, through which a few miles of the 65-mile route will run, will assume the costs incident to their share. The road, of course, will be built by the highway department.

Most of the $50,000 will go for the purchase of fencing, its erection.

The committee has announced the larger contributions thus far made as follows:

- Mrs. Fannie Lovett $500
- Culberson Chevrolet $1,000
- Purley Motor Co. $1,000
- W. H. Potts, Inc. $1,000
- Southwestern Pub. Serv. Co. $1,000
- Texas Gas & Power Co. $1,000
- Food Stores $1,000
- Fraser Inc. Co. $500
- Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. $500
- W. H. Bros. $500
- Gilbert's $500
- Brehman's $500
- Friendly's $500

and for new wells which must be drilled for ranchers whose land is being dissected by the road. Most of the land lying in the right-of-way was donated, it was said.

The money will be placed in escrow, and separate escrow agreements have been drawn up for each land owner concerned.

It was emphasized that the highway commission is waiting on action by the Pampa committee. Every business concern will be contacted, Garman said, and will be asked to make an appropriation. The progress thus reported in an effort to get a direct route to Perryton and Ochiltree county is the culmination of several months' work on the part of a number of citizens in this community.

On the committee spearheading the drive headed by Garman are Frank Smith, assistant chairman; Frank Culberson, chairman of the special right-of-way committee; Bill Fraser, Delia Veiers and C. P. Buckler, Garman said.

Blaze Causes Little Damage; Mostly Smoke

Slight damage was caused yesterday at 2:30 p. m. when a fire broke out in the rear of the Smart and McWright garage, 703 West Foster St.

Fire Chief Ben White said the blaze started when gasoline used in cleaning down motors on the floor of the garage ignited and later blew up a 50 gallon drum of alcohol. Firemen extinguished the fire in a few minutes. According to the chief and his men there was more smoke than flame in the building.

No One Hurt in Car Accident During Fog

No one was injured when two cars were in slight collision in the 800 block on West Francis at about 7:45 last night. The accident occurred during the heavy fog.

J. W. Crisler, 422 North Cuyler, was driving his 1941 Studebaker east, and Leon Stokes, 1146 South Wilcox, was going west in a 1937 Ford passenger car.

Both cars had bent fenders and bumpers. City police investigated the accident.

Highway Check Is Tribute to Husband

Mrs. Fannie Lovett, 121 N. Houston, a pioneer resident of this city and a witness to its growth, was accorded the honor of making the first contribution to the Pampa-Perryton highway right-of-way check for $500 was accepted yesterday.

Mrs. Lovett's husband, the late H. B. Lovett, was the first chairman of the Pampa chapter of commerce highway committee. That was 14 years ago. He made the first contribution to the Pampa-Perryton highway right-of-way check to be considered as a tribute to the efforts of her husband.

There were 287 families in this city, committee member said.

Demos Entering Final Elections With Head Start

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The democrats, who concede they have a fight on their hands to retain control of the house, will start off with a 60-seat pre-election head start over the republicans.

An Associated Press survey yesterday showed 67 democrats running for the house either have no opposition in the Nov. 5 elections or have both majority party nominations.

Only seven republicans are assured of election in advance of the voting.

Another 27 democratic candidates are virtually "in" before the balloting. They are running against republicans in the democratic South. This would give the party in power a total of 104 seats, with another 114 needed for a bare majority to organize the house in the 80th congress beginning Jan. 3.

But the republicans are campaigning with a confidence unequalled in the 16 years the democrats have had control of the house. They say they will capture up to 50 democratic seats while retaining their present strength. They will need only 26 returns to swing it.

The present house line-up is: democrats 237 and four vacancies; republicans 132; American labor, one, and progressive, one. A majority is 218.

The 67 democratic house candidates assured of election in advance are:

- Alabama—Frank W. Boykin, M. Grant, George W. Andrews, Albert Rains, and Pete Jarman.
- Arkansas—E. C. Gathings, Wilbur See U. S. POLITICS, Page 8

King George II Entrusts Premier With Formation of New Government

ATHENS—(AP)—King George II last night entrusted Premier Constantinos Tsaldaris with the task of forming a new Greek government a few hours after the exiled monarch returned to the capital of his strife-torn native land and immediately turned his attention to governmental problems.

The king, returning after five years of exile, stepped upon a quay carpeted with olive branches intended as a symbol of his hopes of binding up Greece's wounds and was received by an outwardly tumultuous welcome from thousands of Greeks shouting "long live the king" and "greater Greece."

The king went into a political conference almost immediately, received Tsaldaris' resignation as premier of the royalist-dominated government and then appointed him to head the new regime. Tsaldaris announced he would call upon the leaders of the opposition parties in parliament for consultation on the formation of the new government.

The communist press greeted the king's return with stony indifference, playing down the story and referring to him only as "George."

French Line' Is Approved By Conference

PARIS—(AP)—The peace conference approved yesterday the "French line" as a frontier between Italy and Yugoslavia and the establishment of the internationalized zone of Trieste, and Yugoslavia defiantly announced she would not sign the Italian treaty nor withdraw troops from the disputed area.

Over strenuous Soviet-Slav by an 11 to 8 vote retaliated objections the delegates then by inserting into the treaty an American proposal which would bar Yugoslavia from collecting any of the $1,300,000,000 reparations she is claiming from Italy if she persists in her stand. The vote was not a two-thirds majority, however.

The action took place in the Italian political commission, where U. S. Senator Tom Connally declared of Yugoslavia's threat "no one is trembling in his boots." He predicted outside the conference that Yugoslavia "on reflection and consideration" would eventually sign the treaty.

Soviet Delegate Andrei Vishinsky charged that the American article barring Yugoslavia from privileges of the treaty "violated" the Big Four agreement in the council of foreign ministers and had "hidden aims" behind it. His statement indicated Russia would oppose the article both in the conference plenary session and in the foreign minister's council.

Vice Premier Edvard Kardelj of Yugoslavia asserted the article "dictates" represents "a threat and an attempt to intimidate Yugoslavia."

The American proposal, presented by U. S. Ambassador to Rome James Dunn, called for the provisions of the present treaty shall not conform to the provisions of the new treaty.

Missing $10,000 Tube Radium Believed Found

PARIS—(AP)—A $10,000 tube of radium missing since Thursday from the sanitarium of the Paris hospital was believed located yesterday at the city dump.

The Paris Junior college electroscopes was used at the dump in a search for the missing radium and a positive reading resulted. However, efforts to locate the tube have failed.

Hospital authorities said efforts were being made to borrow radium from Southern Methodist University of the University of Texas to aid the search.

It was believed the tube was taken to the dump by mistake in a pile of bandages.

Reds Repeat Demands as to Dardanelles

MOSCOW—(AP)—The Soviet Union reiterated yesterday its demands that Turkey and Russia organize a joint defense of the strategic Dardanelles to the exclusion of other powers.

In the latest exchange of notes with Turkey on the vital Black Sea gateway to the Mediterranean the Soviet Union proposed that discussions between the two nations precede any formal conference involving nations signatory to the present nine-power Montreux convention governing the straits.

The Russians declared that a Turkish note on Aug. 22 failing to accept the Soviet plan implied that such an arrangement was incompatible with Turkey's sovereign rights and threatened Turkish security.

The Turkish reply said that to change the present form of defense of the straits would deny the existence and aims of the United Nations charter and show the United Nations a distrust that "the Turkish government does not understand."

The Turkish government makes an obvious contradiction with its own statement on the desire for re-establishment of friendly relations with the Soviet Union based on confidence, while finding it possible, meanwhile, to express such suspicion which has no foundation and besides is incompatible with the dignity of the Soviet Union," said a statement of the Soviet foreign ministry.

Despite the point of view expressed by the Turkish note, the Soviet government maintains the opinion that only by joint means can Turkey and the Soviet Union secure freedom of merchant navigation and also security in the straits.

Total Shutdown Of Transportation Hits Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press
Power company strikers and sympathizers forced a complete shutdown of street car transportation in Pittsburgh Saturday and Sunday and new violence marked the state of emergency proclaimed in the Hollywood movie labor dispute.

However, a conditional AFL offer to postpone the threatened new midnight deadline furnished a bright spot in the nation's labor picture.

AFL street car operators in Pittsburgh quit work early Saturday when pickets for striking independent union workers of the Duquesne Light Co. surrounded all 12 car barns. Although the AFL Pittsburgh central labor union organizer earlier in the week had indicated any carrier it would not tolerate any picketing with the operations of streetcars, the motemen voted against returning to work until the power strike is settled.

A spokesman for the Pittsburgh Railway Co. said the operators had refused to cross picket lines because they "didn't want to get hurt."

Meanwhile, the power company workers, who struck for a 20 percent wage boost, scheduled a night conference to vote on any new offer the company might make to end the five-day old strike.

After proclaiming Los Angeles county in a state of emergency, Sheriff Eugene Biscaccia called in 150 special deputies to enforce the peace but two automobiles were overturned in a new clash at the entry gates of Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer studios in Hollywood. Several outbreaks of violence have marked the three-day dispute between two rival AFL unions and the film capital.

Present, Past Peace Officers Are Indicted

DALLAS—(AP)—Three peace officers, a former sheriff and a farmer were indicted here late Friday on charges of peonage.

The indictment accused the defendants of holding R. D. Andrew, a Negro, in involuntary servitude. Named were W. J. Price, Rockwall county sheriff; Luther Hunter, Rockwall county jailer; William Frazier, constable of Precinct 3 in Terrell; Jack Pullen, former Rockwall sheriff, and Norris Pierce, a farmer.

The indictment alleges that Andrew was placed in jail at Terrell, later transferred to the Rockwall jail and then taken from the jail to work for the benefit of others. It said he had committed no offense.

A second indictment charged Price and John Pullen, a deputy, with violation of the civil rights of a Negro man and woman. A Lee Price and Avalois Hammon. It charged that the Negro man and woman were arrested in Garland without legal cause, then taken to Rockwall and beaten.

Business Transfers Are Made in Jail

Realty transfers are not all transacted in real estate offices—they can be consummated in jail too.

That very thing happened Saturday when County Clerk Charlie Thut aided in the $500 property sale of two lots and household furnishings, located in the Hunter addition, belonging to E. L. Wilbon and Bertha, his wife, to Bruce Brooks.

Wilbon was brought down from the jail to the sheriff's office to secure his signature to the transaction. Wilbon is now serving a 30-day sentence for aggravated assault on a female.

Behind Weather's Alaskan Curtain, B-29 Is 'Spy' for War With Winter

These ice-laden, glacier-cut mountains of the Kenai Peninsula in Alaska were the first landfall for "Operation Stork" on its initial, Pictures and Text By KEN GUNN NEA Staff Correspondent

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, (NEA)—The advance agent for an Alaskan U. S. Army is alone B-29 that is spying on weather's weapons and strategy ever day over a front thousands of miles long.

The airborne snooper is listed in Army orders as "Operation Stork," the first regularly scheduled long-range weather reconnaissance flight into weather's big arsenal in the North Pacific between San Francisco and Alaska. What it finds on its daily 13-hour run from Suisun Army airfield to this northern base will provide vital intelligence for the forthcoming ground force maneuvers in Alaska, and for much of the United States as well.

The plan, worked out by the Army Weather Service Headquarters at Langley Field, Va., and by energetic young Col. Karl T. Rauk, commanding officer of the 59th Squadron, is to fly the 2462 mile route, north one day and south the next. Observations will be made at about the same points and altitudes regardless of the direction of the flight.

Weather data gathered at approximately 16 stations along the route are to be radioed to stations in Alaska and along the Pacific Coast. This information will be immediately made available to all military and civilian weather agencies. Colonel Rauk believes this information will greatly aid meteorologists in forecasting weather for much of the United States and Canada as well as the air and shipping routes of Alaskan and North Pacific waters.

On the first day's run, on which I was a guest snooper, our specially equipped Superfortress headed out for-shrouded run from Fairfield, Calif., to Anchorage, Alaska.

We cleared the Parallon islands, 36 miles west of San Francisco, by radar and down we went through the fog. Lt. J. R. Buchanan of Santa Paula, Calif., at the weather observer's station in the bombardier compartment, checked the altitude at 500 feet on the radar altimeter and ordered the pilot to level off.

Lt. J. C. Crose of Turlock, Calif., the navigator, checked the plane's position by Loran and set the course northwest. For almost 100 miles, Operation Stork "flew on the deck," 500 feet above the water. Sometimes the choppy waves of the Pacific were visible. Sometimes the wing tips of the plane could barely be seen.

At designated points the weatherman would get very busy with his instruments, the pilot would swing the plane 45 degrees off the line of flight, fly that direction for two minutes, swing around to 90 degrees, fly that for two minutes, and then resume the flight on the original course. After this maneuver, the weatherman would hand the radio operator a note containing all the information he had been able to wring out of the weather at that point. The cross-cross flying was to enable the weatherman to get drift indicator readings on three lines of flight and determine the direction and velocity of the wind.

Probably one of the busiest members of the crew during the entire flight was the radio operator, T. Sgt. E. P. Bishop, of Mesa, Ariz. Hand-capped by low altitude and bad atmosphere conditions, he would sometimes have to try several contacts before getting the report through. After finally getting his report off, he would relax, light up a cigarette, lean back—and the weatherman would hand him another report.

At a point about 1100 miles out, the pilot made a circling climb to Weatherman on the snooping B-29 is Lt. J. R. Buchanan of Santa Paula, Calif., here inspecting a specially-mounted instrument for determining humidity.

10,000 feet, the weatherman made observations at each 1000 foot level, and the navigator set the course north over Kodiak Island at Anchorage.

Heavy cloud banks that obscured Kodiak Island began to thin as the flight came in over the Cook Inlet and with the icy mountains of the Kenai Peninsula glistening to the east, Operation Stork dropped into Anchorage out of clear skies.

JAYCEES—The Junior chamber of commerce did not hold a regular noon luncheon this past week. Instead, members met with the Senior Chamber for the quarter banquet held at the high school cafeteria that evening.

ROTARY—Members heard two principal speakers, Knox Kinard, superintendent of the city public schools, and Eugene Worley, congressman from this district. Mr. Kinard discussed support and betterment of the public schools. Mr. Worley, who met with many groups here this past week, discussed problems confronting the nation—both at home and abroad. High school music students, Dorothy Meers and Phoebe Osborne, presented a short program. The program was conducted by Winston Savage, Senior high principal.

LIONS—Club members, as usual, had a good time (although they do consider serious matters relative to the betterment of the community). The Harry Kelley quartet—composed of Kelley, Ken Bennett, Red Wedgeworth, Roy McMillen, and Leonard Beiden—sang "Sweet Adeline." William D. Williams of Amarillo gave a 10-minute talk on speeding up the housing program in the Panhandle. Congressman Eugene Worley was a guest of the club. He spoke on the same subject as he did before the other clubs.

KIWANIS—The committee on underprivileged children and support of churches presented a colored moving film on "The Power of the Blood," a religious subject from Scriptures Visualized Institute. It was shown under the auspices of the Central Baptist church, and projected by a member of the church, Earl Miller.

Congressman Eugene Worley made a number of remarks on various subjects. Among other things he said: "The attitude of congress, I'd say 99 percent of them, is to rid us of all OPA controls." He said the OPA decontrol board of today is a compromise of two schools of thought—those who want rigid control over the economy, and those who would eliminate all controls. "I doubt," he said, "if there will be any disposition at all to retain any controls after next June." Touching on the international situation, he said: "The things that go to make up wars are still in abundance." The U. S. desire for peace, he stated, is being used by nations wishing to expand their territory. The U. S. foreign policy has been stiffening since the London peace conference. To remove the 23,000 marines from China, as Stalin is urging, would be like turning the country over to the communists—Communism, with

Panhandle Briefs

October has been designated All-Out Church Month for Wellington in a campaign to increase attendance at all city churches, sponsored by the Kiwanis club.

"Let's show the churches of Wellington that we are proud of them," the Rev. Austin Moore, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene and campaign chairman, declared. "The Kiwanis club urges everyone in the city to go to the church of his choice during the month. We believe that the attendance in all city churches can be doubled if everyone will do his part in working with us on this campaign."

According to the Donley County Leader, "Fall Rode in on a Chill Special."

The Leader said—if beginnings are any indication, it looks like a long cold winter, it was decided here Monday when the first day of fall was ushered in with a frosty 40 degree reading.

The cold front blew in from the north Sunday morning and has been led by winds of 42-mile-an-hour velocity with occasional gusts up to 50-miles-an-hour.

Rep. Eugene Worley was guest speaker at the Lions club in McLean Tuesday, giving his experience as an eye witness of the atom bomb tests. He was also speaker at the Masonic barbecue held Monday evening.

West Texas State college will open its 37th year on October 1. Advanced students at the college have been enrolling for the fall term during the past week. According to the Canyon News, the number has been satisfactory, in spite of the fact that the session is not opening until this late date.

From all indications the enrollment will be very large for the fall term. All of the dormitories are filled to capacity, and housing facilities around Canyon are taxed to the limit, the News stated.

Plans have been announced by Supt. George Graham and President of the Board of Trustees Leo Forrest to utilize two buildings from the Hereford Prison of War camp to establish a Junior high school as part of the Hereford public school system.

Release of the two buildings, for which the schools had made application months ago, was received from Washington last week; and permission has been granted to move them from the POW camp site.

The Men's Service club of Miami, which has not met during the Summer months, will hold its first fall meeting on Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., according to an announcement Harry Kelley, former resident of Miami and now of Pampa, will be guest speaker of the evening.

Jimmie Osborne registered Chester White gilt, Snowwhite, was first place winner in the Sears gilt contest held recently in connection with the Carson county fall festival, according to reports in the Carson County News-Review.

One hundred and fifty rural youths took part in festival contests. A Kid Pony show was also held.

With Panhandle jammed with the greatest crowd since pre-war days, the Carson county fall festival, held Saturday, Sept. 21, provided entertainment for hundreds of visitors and local residents.

The Carson county living war memorial was the beneficiary of the day's receipts and from all indications it was a successful day, both as to pleasure and profit.

At a special meeting Tuesday night, the Perryton city council decided to let the people of Perryton know that the paving project is city sponsored and to correct any erroneous impressions some citizens might have that the paving is a project of private individuals.

On September 3, the council met to receive bids for city paving and accepted the bid of O. C. Watson, head of the Watson Construction company of Perryton.

The surface and sub-soil moisture condition was listed as "fair to good," compared to last week's listing of "poor to fair." Recent rains have brought about this change, as well as an improvement in the cotton situation.

Mrs. Deion Kirk was awarded first prize in the Slogan Contest staged the past week by Hansford county fair association. The prize was $12.50 awarded to Mrs. Kirk for her slogan: "Herds of cattle, sections of wheat, winter grazing, bread and meat."

More than 40 citizens handed in slogans in the contest and three of these were sent in from out of county.

all these vil things it stands for, is on the march all over the world, including the United States and South America.—The only reason the loan (three and three-quarter billion dollars) was made to Britain was to help the country maintain at least a semblance of balance of power in Europe against the communists. Most of the world respects only force.—The people should examine carefully the international facts of life. The people should be like the old man in the story, who said he did not believe in ghosts, but that he was afraid of them just the same.

Lefors Teachers Attend Meeting

LEFORS, (Special) — E. R. Reeves, superintendent of Lefors school, and Mrs. Paul Johnson, school nurse, attended a one-day conference on the Crippled Children's program, sponsored by the Crippled Children's division of the Texas State Board of Health Thursday at Amrillo.

Through these individuals, it is hoped that the public at large may be reached and thoroughly informed of what the state and private agencies are doing to care for crippled children.

Petit Jury Calls Mailed Out Twice

Attaches of the sheriff's department several days ago were instructed to mail jury notices to 24 men in Gray county to appear for jury duty on Oct. 2, 1946. The sheriff and his men in all good faith, mailed same as per instructions. Friday the sheriff's department was notified that the order had been a mistake and the actual date was Oct. 8, 1946, instead of the previous order calling for Oct. 2. So Deputy Sheriff Jeff Guthrie sat down again to mail out the 24 notices and informing the jurors to disregard the October 2 notice and appear on October 8.

Those empaneled for county jury duty for the first week are: Don Saulsbury, C. M. Jefferies, Jack Arrington, Calvin Whitley, Joe Key, S. B. Batts, J. H. Dekle, N. C. Jordan, Charles M. Carlock, Bernard Johnson, George Graham, L. W. Matho, B. Baldrige, Fred Bentley, Don Alexander, E. M. Spillane, George Colebank, E. L. Eutace, D. C. Kennedy, Joe Hawkins, Don Foster, C. L. Burton, Byron Hash, and John Bowers.

GOOD DEED

OLYMPIA, Wash. — (AP) — The state highway patrol reported this incident: Patrolman R. C. Caldwell, of Olympia, helped an old lady across a busy street. He handed him a dime and said: "I know you buy scouts are not supposed to accept tips when you do your good deed, but you can put this in the troop treasury if you want to."

The junior colleges in the U. S. — 630 of them — will have a record 355,000 students this year.

Sleeping under canvass for the fall camporee 150 Boy Scouts of the Adobe-Walls council, Boy Scouts of America, are entering their first day of competitive camping today at Lake McClellan. After check in at the camp last night a campfire program of skits and patrol stunts was held. These will also count on their points during the camporee. Scout Executive Hugo Olson said that the boys will be judged on hike craft, camp craft, cook craft, patrol spirit, and attendance. Aiding Olson at the camp and also serving as judges are: Field Executives Thos. Cochran and Don E. W. Evans, G. R. Berrien, chairman of camping and activities committee; and D. R. Wallace, district commissioner.

Peace Place 'Welcome Scouts' Find Soap, Autographs, Even

At the top of this grand stairway in Luxembourg Palace, Paris, a welcome committee works to provide anything the delegates, reporters and other officials desire. Anything that is, except a peaceful settlement behind those doors leading to conference room. It may be possible to help an American reporter who had been trying to find the secretary of one of Foreign Minister Bidault's cabinet. All he remembered was that she was called Josette and that she was an attractive brunette. The man's "welcome" operatives found her the same day. They did not wait to find out whether the reporter wanted Josette for a story or a date, because they were too busy running down other requests. Samples: A Scandinavian writer wanted an autographed photograph of General de Gaulle. A Chinese official wanted to find a Frenchman who spoke Chinese to serve as a guide between sessions. And an American correspondent wanted to know where the Black Market operated and could he have some addresses, please?

At the top of the grand stairway, these matters are handled by a staff of 16 interpreters. All speak English, three speak fluent Russian, and the others can answer questions in Spanish, Italian, Hungarian, Finnish, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, and Persian. There is a shopping bureau as a part of the center, too, to help the feminine side of the peace conference.

A new snap-on cap will enable a glass jar of coffee to hold its flavor indefinitely. The ultra-vacuum lid can be re-sealed airtight with the palm of the hand. Grease spots on rugs can be removed by applying baking soda, rubbing in well and allowing to stand overnight. Remove with vacuum sweeper.

WAR BRIDE GETS HOMESICK. TAKES GI SPOUSE HOME

MCRGANTOWN, W. Va. — A European war bride who's homesick is taking her husband back with her, in a reversal of the usual order. She is 17-year-old Madeline Jacobs Falkensine who met her husband when he strolled into her parents' bake shop in Maastricht, Holland. Husband Lawrence Falkensine is a veteran of the Battle of the Bulge. Madeline wants to return to Maastricht to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jacobs, and her 20-year-old brother at the University of Delit. Falkensine said he would accompany his wife and try to land a job as a civilian employe of the war department in Europe. He was honorably discharged from the army last February and Mrs. Falkensine came to this country soon afterward.

Chocolate and cocoa stains are treated the same. For white cottons or linens, dip fabric up and down in hot water; wash in hot suds, bleach any remaining stains with hydrogen peroxide, rinse well. For any washable colored fabric, wash in lukewarm suds, and use carbon tetrachloride to remove grease spots caused by cream. With either type of fabric, remove stains before laundering.

Communism, World Affairs Speech Topics

Representative Eugene Worley of the 18th congressional district repeatedly attacked communism in a speech following the regular Lions club meeting here yesterday. In the talk which Worley had earlier terms as a "general discussion of world affairs," he almost immediately spoke in opposition to the request of Stalin for the withdrawal of US marines from China. He said he believed that this action would virtually turn China over to the Japanese.

Referring once more to statements made by MacArthur, Worley said, "one million Jap soldiers which were taken prisoner in Manchuria have been made as to whether or not these men are being held in utter serfdom in the mines of Northern Siberia." Worley lashed out at communists against when he said, "I believe that communist principles of government and philosophy are synonymous with nazism or any other totalitarian form of government. I am not an alarmist, but I must point out that Russia has maintained an occupation force of over four million men, as compared with our own force of 250,000 men."

In regard to atomic power, Worley termed it "the greatest discovery ever made by the human mind." He quoted scientists who have had a leading part in the project as having said, in a maximum of five years the secret of atomic power will be in possession of all the major nations. When asked about the late disagreement between President Truman and Henry Wallace, Worley described the incident as "regrettable." In regard to our foreign policy Worley added, "Secretary of State Jimmie Byrnes is pursuing the only policy possible under the present conditions."

They're Singing on: Gran'father Mountain

Aunt Becky: At 91, she remembers old gospel songs forgotten by the hymn books. Preacher Gragg: World will "put away the estuimic bum."

By NEA Service LINVILLE, N. C. (NEA)—Grandfather Mountain resounded with song. Folks came from miles around—20,000 of them from North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky and Georgia to hear the singin' and the preachin'.

"They jammed the rolling meadow at the foot of 'Old Grandfather.' There were youngsters whose voices were tuneless and there were oldsters like Aunt Becky Tester who wouldn't let her 91 years keep her at home in Sugar Grove when there's real singin' to be done.

This was the day the "song masters," who still thrive throughout the rural south, had waited for. They had spent months in training their duets, trios, quartets and choirs. This was the day for which country preachers saved their most "rousin'" sermons.

"This was the day of the 'Singin' on the Mountain,' the biggest 'singin' convention' of them all. For 22 years the 'Singin' on the Mountain' has been held at the foot of 'Old Grandfather.' Each year it has grown in size and importance. For not only do all the country folk and farmers come; cousins and friends who have strayed to the cities return in sleek cars and new clothes to revive old memories and to renew old acquaintances.

Dinner is "on the ground," picnic style, and the huge hampers that each country family brings assures plenty of food for all. Big Joe Hartley, a farmer, his mustache bristling, was chairman of the "sing." But the real glory went to the "song masters" who "sounded" their tuning forks and lead the groups through the high nasal harmony of rural gospel favorites. And to the preachers who decried the sin of worldliness and liquor.

She said Klein became so irritated when his two markets were meatless that he would come home and strike her. After their separation, she said, she continued patronizing his shops but two weeks ago he not only refused her meat but struck her asking for it.

Mrs. Klein was awarded a divorce on grounds of cruelty.

One-Man Indian Tribe Leaves Reservation

WASHINGTON—(AP)—There's a one-man Indian tribe. And the "tribe" has left his own reservation.

The office of Indian affairs got out a press release yesterday to report that Elliott Anderson, a 70-year-old widower, is the last of the Ozette tribe, which in the early 80s numbered 67. By 1923 only eight were left, and now Anderson is the sole owner of tribal rights in the 719-acre Ozette reservation in Callahan county, Wash.

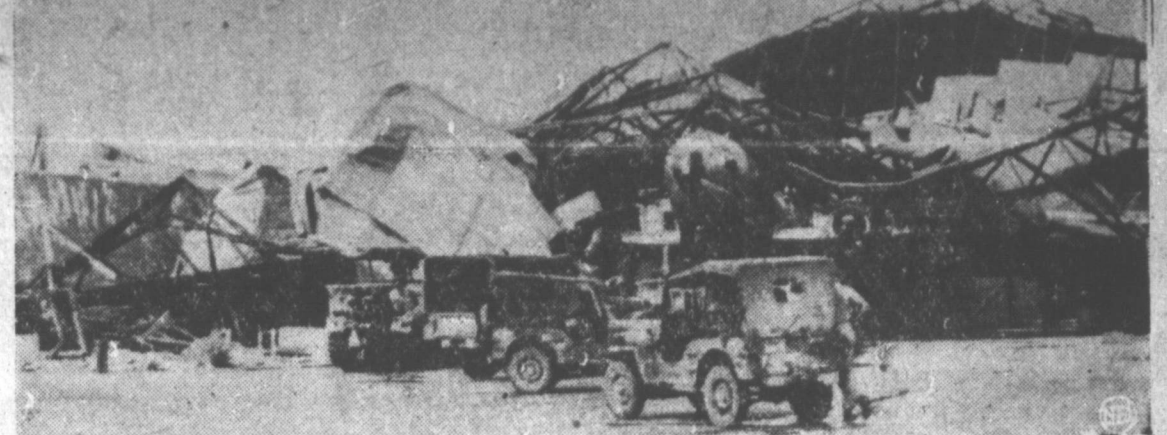

Several years ago Anderson left his reservation, a wild, roadless area of forest and ocean beach, to live with friends at the Makah reservation at Neah Bay, Wash.

"The Soviet government believes that possibly fuller discussion of this question by way of direct negotiations between the governments should precede such a conference," the statement added.

On Aug. 7 the Soviet Union submitted to Turkey a five-point proposal for a new control of the Dardanelles. These were that the straits should always be open for the passage of merchant ships of all countries; they should be open always for passage of warships of Black Sea powers; warships of non-Black Sea powers should not be permitted passage except for cases specially provided for; only the Black Sea powers (Russia, Turkey, Bulgaria and Romania) to have a hand in the control of the straits; Turkey and Russia as the powers most interested in and capable of insuring security of the straits to jointly organize their defense.

Turkey took exception to the fourth and fifth points, but agreed to the first three.

Strikes

night if negotiations toward a contract agreement show progress and if the CIO maritime engineers also agree to a postponement. Government conciliators planned conferences with the principals in Washington in an effort to reach a settlement.

The threatened maritime tieup would affect virtually every ship in the merchant fleet.

The AFL has demanded a 30 percent wage boost and the VIO a 35 percent hike. A similar strike threat has come from Harry Bridges' CIO longshoremen, engaged in contract talks in San Francisco. Bridges seeks 33 cents more an hour for his men.

HAIR STYLE STARTS FASHION

Everyone knows that fashions in clothes affect fashions in hairdos. But it's news indeed when things happen the other way around. This season that wonderfully smart hair-do, the upsweep, has inspired a bevy of brand new fashion features in clothes. Clothes are now catering to your "updo", and they've done it with a whole new series of sleek high necklines. These new necklines call for an updo to complete the pretty sweep from shoulder to head. Throat-hugging necklines are fashion's latest whisper, and before fall is through, the whisper is bound to be a roar of approval, because never were necklines more flattering than these new chameleons!

The new neck treatments range all the way from the pert "dandy" collars, inspired by the stand-up collars with turned-back tabs worn by dandies of another day, to tiny "baby" collars, demure and dainty as the collar on an infant's christening dress! Remember the turtle neck? It was a grateful favorite in its day. Now it's back—but in modified form with a rather Chinese feeling to it. It's lower, softer than its turtle neck original. A variation of this is a rolled collar turned down over the dress instead of standing up from it—very pretty and soft—and stunning with a choker necklace.

Another high neckline, fresh and new, is a stitched, round collar that finishes dapper-as-you-please in a gentleman's white bow-tie. Very chic on black frocks. Trim, too, are high plain necklines—just a wide bit in front for tucking in a bright scarf. Yes, the updo is having its day with specially designed necklines to play up its best features. And this means your hair is going to be dramatically high-lighted this year. Severe throat huggers will lead the eye right up the line from the nape of your neck to the crown of your head, and lovely line it is when the hair is clean and shining to accept its beauty! It's going to be a season when hair care will be revealed.

New necklines aren't the only fashion the upsweep has brought to favor. Throat-huggers are a direct result of the hair updo, as is the choker necklace. Swing into the new fashions now—you'll enjoy them when they're topped off with lovely shining hair!

WRITER EXPLAINS WHAT APPEAL CAN BE MADE BY 21 GERMANS FACING WAR CRIMES SENTENCES

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON—(AP)—To whom can the 21 Germans—on trial at Nuremberg for war crimes—appeal for mercy when the international court hands down their sentence Monday?
They can ask the Allied control council to reduce their sentences. But that's all. The council can't increase the sentences. Nor can it grant the defendants, headed by Goering and Von Ribbentrop, a new trial.
For example: if Goering is sentenced to death, the control council can reduce his sentence to life imprisonment, or less.
If he's sentenced to life imprisonment, the council can't increase the sentence to that of death.
When the four Allies—United States, Britain, Russia, France—occupied Germany at war's end, each took over a part, or zone, of the conquered country.
Supreme boss in each zone of occupation is the general commanding his nation's troops in that zone. The four generals are the control council.
General Joseph B. McNarney, commander of the American zone, is the American member of the four man control council which the 21 Germans would have to turn for mercy.
Here is the background of the trial, the court, the prosecutors, and the control council's part in the sentence.
When the Allies decided to try Hitler's top men for war crimes, they had to set up a special court and special rules, for nothing like this had ever happened before.
This government sent Robert H. Jackson, associate justice of the supreme court, to London to work out plans with representatives of Britain, Russia, France.
The four men drew up an international agreement under which major German war criminals would be tried.
The present group of 21 German bigshots was chosen for trial.
The court was composed of four judges, one each from the four Allied countries taking part in the trials. Francis Biddle, former U. S. attorney general, was named P. S. judge on this international court.
Jackson was named prosecutor for the U. S. each of the other three Allies was represented by a prosecutor of his own.
The prosecutors drew up the indictment against the 21 men. They were allowed to have attorneys to defend them. They were accused, chiefly, of three kinds of crime:
1. Crimes against peace—by planning and waging aggressive war.
2. War crimes—killing hostages, wantonly destroying cities, murder of prisoners.
3. Crimes against humanity—enlightenment of peoples or extermination of them, such as the Jews.
The question arises: this court is brand new. These crimes were committed before the court existed. Then how can these men be tried for crimes which were not punishable when they were committed?
To which the Allies say: what these men did were crimes under international law long before this special court was created. These men knew what they were doing were crimes when they committed them.

Hillbillies of Tennessee Reportedly Going Modern

By RONALD AUSTRY
AP Newscasters
NASHVILLE, Tenn.—The sun is "a sottin'" on the old-time Tennessee mountaineer, the country's supreme individualist, and his ancestors' way of life.
On the way out is the simple existence in which some mountaineers raise their crops, herd their flocks, weave their cloth, cobble their shoes, grind their grain in water-wheel mills and attend Old Harp singings. The ballads of medieval Europe still are heard in the mountains— but less often than the hot ticks of radio.
The water-wheels still turn in the mountains—but you hear more about the atomic bomb works at Oak Ridge.
And the omnipresent tourist is there, accompanied by a blaring auto horn that shatters the silence of the hills.
The latest report on the minority of Tennessee mountaineers who still preserve their customs of yesterday comes in semi-official form from a state agency, the Department of Conservation, whose publication, the Conservationist, says in a current issue:
"This free and rugged way of life is vanishing before the forces of civilization. For a decade the customs of many have changed rapidly as good roads, electricity, the radio and tourists reached into their gorges and coves."
Modern Youngsters
"Only the elderly people withstood this tide of progress as most of the youngsters took modern with a bank—lipstick, new slang and all!"
But now, the Conservationist says, the transformation is becoming more complete because of the service men returned from all parts of the world, and their wives from outside the hills. They "will revamp the way of life in the mountains."
Electric ranges, washing machines and other electric appliances already have appeared in hand-hewn cabins in the hills, largely because of the TVA and rural electrification.
Electric pumps have cut out a lot of water-toting from the spring on the hillside and many a black wash pot has disappeared from beside the creek.
Yet despite the invading influences some of the older east Tennessee mountaineers still retain cus-

Editors: The following story, written by Kathleen Kasischke, 11-year-old daughter of Associated Press Staffer Richard Kasischke, describes an American child's life in occupied Berlin.
By KATHLEEN KASISCHKE
BERLIN—(AP)—When mama and I came here to join daddy Aug. 1, and moved into a house in the suburb of Zehlendorf, it seemed at first as if we hadn't left America. Our bloc looked like almost any other suburban block in America—nearly.
But after a while I felt something like Alice after she stepped through the looking glass. There were many strange things. When I walked a little way down the street I saw a house with only one wall standing. They told me it was bombed. Near the wall was what at first seemed to be a brown flag on a pole, but when you look again you see that it is a third story radiator on its pipe.
Lots of other things come strange like that. I can't imagine Detroit's downtown buildings smashed like Berlin's. In the suburbs here we see shell marks on houses. Detroit had lots of care but we see mostly jeeps here.
I am now going to summer play school while they are getting the regular winter school ready. I go afternoons with nearly 80 other children aged six to 14. Army trucks used for school buses pick us up at our street corners. The buses are driven by GI soldiers and we have a lot of fun kidding them.
In our school are several Chinese children, some Polish, Danish and Czechoslovakian children. Some of these children can speak German but not English but we are teaching them lots of words on the bus.
I've been playing with some German abandoned with the advent of the country general store.
Some of the cammer hill-dwellers have turned to home business with all the vim of a Yankee storekeeper. They learned the tourists pay big money for "those quaint little things made by hillbillies."

man children in the neighborhood but not much until I can learn to talk German and understand them. After school hours I sometimes go shopping with mama, but we don't call it a grocery store, but a "commissary" set up by the army. There isn't much fresh milk here but I get chocolate bars and chewing gum, not from the drug store but from the army post exchange. They have no bubble gum.
If we should ever become dormant in respect to the scientific demands of the times, it will be the beginning of the disintegration of our country—Frank J. Lausche, governor of Ohio.

Gourrielli ACTIVE OZONE CREAM

Neglect a dry skin, and you invite that "years older" look. You tempt lines, and later wrinkles, and you encourage a noticeable scuffing of cuticle that simply won't take a smooth make-up. This dryness needs Active Ozone Cream, with its balance of moisture, oil and nascent oxygen, because this skin type, so fine and fragile, with proper care can be so beautiful.

Notice the exhilarating tingling as this cream starts to lubricate and soften that dry surface... to relieve that tense pull of dry skin... to awaken a flower dewiness to make others say, "How well you look!"

WHAT WE NEED IS MORE PEOPLE TO GET MAD AND DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT

This was a weekend to draw the ire of those Americans who, looking nostalgically to other days, still believe in the innate freedom of man—to make of his life and fortune what he would.

Pessimistically, a Washington newspaper headlined the weekend edition: "86 Meatless Days Until Christmas," and a group of restaurant operators in Philadelphia said they would quit if their prices were rolled back by the omnipresent OPA and its "expert" directives.

To bring the situation a little closer to home, an irate grandmother at Pampa wanted to know where she could get some beef for her two grandchildren, both organically lacking in calcium. All day, she said, she had phoned, trying to find enough for the babies. A Pampa grocerman remarked "They're making a bunch of damn bootleggers out of us." (And they are; we know.) A group of restaurant operators at Pampa and Amarillo held meetings. They might have to close, they said, if they could not get beef for their menus—beef, here in the heart of the beef country.

In the meantime, our representative, Mr. Eugene Worley, was visiting constituents in this area. Election, though he could probably depend on the "solid South," was just a few weeks away.

He said, in substance, "I'm for OPA. We (the congress) are as eager as you are to throw off the government controls." He doubted, he added, if controls would be renewed the next time, but he thought it should continue now. The beef shortage, he explained, as Mr. Truman explained in Washington, is not because of the OPA.

As we have said many times before in this column, the people are likely to get just about what they want in this land. At least, they will get it if they exert enough pressure, raise enough real honest-to-goodness fuss. We feel they are falling down on their jobs a little bit. They are getting mad now, but they should have gotten mad a long time ago. The administration and many of the congressmen are standing adamantly in defense of their paternal care over the people. The people, we believe, don't want that care, don't want their lives regulated by a political doctor from afar.

In our verbal struggle against regimentation, we have had little help from the outside; but now the force—the ire—of the people who elect the leaders of our country is beginning to rise up in defiance.

Perhaps the "solid" south is not going to be so solid. Tradition, which patterns life and thought, is a strong and strange sociological element. But the vicissitudes of life can change anything—even tradition.

One very angry housewife called this week, to say she was in favor of strong protest—anything, she said, short of a revolt. We don't think revolt is necessary; certainly it is not desirable. What we need is some more people to get mad, and when they get that way to let themselves be known.

We have nothing personal against Mr. Worley. We just don't agree with him, and we think that a very large number of other people don't agree with him. He was frank in stating his position, but he qualified it with the statement he doubted OPA would be renewed.

We think it should be discontinued now — not next spring or next summer. It's up to the people.

Garfield certainly should be an Academy Award nominee for this picture.

telephone was finally granted—for the house he sold 18 months ago to Hedy Lamarr, who since has sold it to the Humphrey Bogarts.

Ingrid Bergman is working overtime, what with the film "Arch of Triumph" and her Broadway-bound stage play "Joan of Lorraine." She's rehearsing the play every night with its director, Margo Jones, who flew to the coast for pre-rehearsal rehearsals. . . . Ransom Sherman, the radio star, will be the late Bob Benchley's shoes on the screen. He'll be seen in three new films.

Jules Stein and his MCA bright boys swear they'll earn a million dollars this year for the new show-business heat-wave, Skitch Henderson.

RECORD-BOUND? — Rosalind Russell has received 21 citations from civic groups for portraying Sister Kenny—and the film has not yet been released.

It has been held up, in fact, by RKO, for fear the people would think the studio was capitalizing on the increased infantile paralysis cases.

THEY MAY TRY THE IDEA IN ABOUT 20 YEARS

WASHINGTON, (NEA)—The sad spectacle of New York tied up by shipping and trucking strikes, plus the apparent breakdown and revision of the government's wage and price stabilization programs, again revive interest in how a second round of wage-increase strikes can be avoided.

When congress had before it President Truman's program for compulsory cooling-off, fact-finding, and the drafting of workers who strike against the government, one of the experts called in for evidence by the senate labor committee was Dr. William M. Leiserson.

"Uncle Billy" Leiserson is one of the country's few labor statesmen. He was a garment industry arbitrator for years. He was for six years chairman of the national mediation board, handling railway labor disputes. He is now on a special labor research project for Johns Hopkins University.

Before the senate committee, Dr. Leiserson severely criticized the whole idea of strike-control legislation "with teeth in it." Asked if he could draft a bill with a better idea, he said that he could and he would. But the committee didn't like his idea. They buried it. It is here and now due up for a look.

LEISERSON ADVOCATES VOLUNTARY ARBITRATION

Dr. Leiserson says candidly that his ideas are unpopular today. Ten or 20 years hence, after other ideas have been tried and have failed, he thinks someone may give his ideas a try. He has long held that the only way labor peace can be attained is through more voluntary negotiation and arbitration, and he still believes it.

In brief, his proposal is to set up three new agencies in the department of labor, a federal mediation board, an arbitration division, and a board of adjustment. Each would deal with different phases of labor disputes.

The federal mediation board would have three members, appointed by the President with the consent of the senate. The U. S. conciliation service would be transferred to this FMB. It would be called in by either side in a labor dispute, to encourage settlement by direct negotiation, mediation, conciliation.

If agreement could not be reached in this manner, the dispute would automatically go to the arbitration division, headed by a presidentially appointed arbitration commissioner. His job would be to attempt to induce labor and management to name a board of arbitration of their own choosing or of his choosing.

There would be no compulsory arbitration. But if arbitration were agreed to, such agreement would have to be made in writing, the issues to be arbitrated would be specified, and when the arbitration award was made it would be filed with the federal district court.

If neither side filed application to impound the award on major technical irregularities within 10 days, the court would declare the award in effect. In case of irregularity, the case could be appealed to a circuit court of appeals or referred back to the arbitrators for clarifi-

EMBARRASSMENT

The state department—the headache department of the United States government if there ever was one—has a new embarrassment in the demand of American exporters and shippers that it do something to prevent looting overseas.

Looting and pilferage of American goods rose to new highs during the war. Starving and cold people in ports had little scruples, or their scruples were dulled by their conditions and the general moral letdown that comes with wars.

During the war the government took it on the chin—and the taxpayers in the pocket books. Losses were charged off to winning the war. It was figured to be cheaper to lose a few hundred million dollars' worth of food, clothing and equipment than to start arresting or shooting allies, and it was calculated that only plentiful machine guns and gunners, withdrawn from the front, could put a stop to pilferage.

DWINDLE—Now the government is getting out of the role of the principal American exporter and private exporters are reporting a loss. But business isn't like what it was in the old days! Millions of dollars' worth of goods is disappearing from foreign docks and piers. Shipments of scarce goods, such as cotton, are being held up by the will and whim of the government. Billions of dollars' worth of American products, dwindle to nothing before they reach the consignee.

Most of the goods have already increased their rates on shipments to the Far East and a jump in rates on shipments to Europe is expected momentarily. Even rates to Latin America were dulled by their conditions and the general moral letdown that comes with wars.

Shippers are demanding government action to protect America's re-nascent foreign trade. The maritime association of New York is demanding that the state department build off foreign countries and insist that they police piers and warehouses.

C. H. Callaghan, executive vice president of the association, declared that current high losses, through looting were apparently "the result of organized criminal activities." Another member declared that some of the goods are being taken entirely in the hands of gangsters.

INSULT—But one of the toughest things in international diplomacy is the fact that the United States people aren't honest. We can tell another nation that it mustn't shoot down American airplanes, we can tell another country that we do not like the way it runs an election—that's easy! But to square away and protest that their stevedores,

MACKENZIE'S Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The return of King George of Greece from exile to his throne, a kingdom may provide the test of exactly how much give-and-take there is between Russia and Britain in their battle for zones of influence—a contest in which America also has interests to safeguard.

Greece long has been John Bull's key outpost on the edge of the Balkan peninsula. This hardly little sticks into the side of the Balkans like a plum in a pudding. All the rest of the peninsula, excepting European Turkey, is included within Russia's new zone of influence.

Strategic Greece therefore becomes a might atom in the Russo-British maneuvering for position and right now it is a flaming match in a powder plant.

The question is whether Moscow will concede John Bull his place in Greece, or will insist on including it within Russia's sphere. There we have in miniature the momentous problem which has divided Europe into two camps: How far does Russia intend to go in its expansion?

He who knows the answer to that knows whether another world war is likely.

But to return to our mutt: Greece is in the throes of civil war between supporters of the British-backed king and leftist elements, including communists. The main fighting is in the north among the mountains along the Albanian and Yugoslav borders.

The leftist retort to this is that Britain is maintaining a large military force in Greece and that the recent plebiscite which recalled King George was dominated by British influence. John Bull merely shrugs his shoulders and says that his troops are there at the invitation of Greek government.

The sum and substance of all this, of course, is that the Balkan peninsula is the school-yard, and Russia and Britain are two big boys who are eyeing each other across a line which has been drawn between them. If one of them would step across that line, the fight would be on.

The return of King George to his throne certainly isn't likely to ease the situation. It really means the consolidation of the royalist forces against the leftist forces.

The immediate threat is that the civil war might develop into hostilities between Greece and Yugoslav-Albanian leftist governments. One need not dilate on such a contingency to demonstrate the terrific threat which it would establish to world peace.

WRENS (NON-MILITARY) DISRUPT HOME LIFE

ELLEVILLE, Ill.—(AP)—A Joseph stoppage was caused at the work stoppage by a couple of wrens, the feathered variety. One wren built a nest in the Yuengel work pump, another atop a work shop bench. Neither the pump nor bench, vowed Yuengel, were disturbed until the wrens' families materialized.

What Does It Mean To Be a Christian?

I want to discuss an article that appears in the October 1946 issue of the Adult Student, a Methodist publication. The article is headed, "What Does It Mean To Be a Christian?" and was written by Charles E. Schofield, editor of Adult Publications. So Mr. Schofield's knowledge of an election—that is to what the Methodists think Christianity should mean.

In the subhead of his article he asks, "What does it mean to be a Christian today?" Evidently he thinks that being a Christian today is different from being a Christian at any other time in the world's history. He says:

"It means, of course, to put one's trust unequivocally in Jesus Christ as Saviour and to commit oneself without compromise to serve him as Lord and Master."

This certainly means to do what He taught people to do, to follow the principle He taught by precept and by example.

Then Mr. Schofield goes on to interpret Christianity today as meaning the adoption of "The Social Creed of the Churches." What is this social creed that the Methodists claim represents Christian principles?

He explains the positive and affirmative action the general Christian has taken upon such questions as the abolition of child labor; the prevention of unemployment; the provision of adequate safeguards against accidental injury in industry; a fair basis of wages and hours of labor; security for old age; the right of labor to organize for collective bargaining and social action, etc.

Now what do the Methodists mean by "the prevention of unemployment?" What do they mean by "security for old age?" Do they mean the state should attempt to guarantee these rights? What do they mean by "the right of labor to organize for collective bargaining and social action?"

Do they mean by this that labor unions have a right to organize for the purpose of threatening an employer that if he does not pay them what they demand they will voluntarily stop for the purpose of injuring the employer so that he will pay them more than he would pay them on a voluntary basis?

Does Mr. Schofield believe it is Christ's duty for me to injure any man? Would he contend that the employers had the same right to combine to get as much for their dollar from the workers as they possibly could under the threat that they would all simultaneously discharge their employees if they would not accept a lower wage?

Does Mr. Schofield believe that God is a respecter of persons? Does he believe that the Commandment, "Thou shalt not covet" does not apply to the worker as well as to the employer? Does he think the threat to injure another is a little wonder we are having one strike after another when a large church organization so departs from the Christian principles of peace and good will among men and teaches that collective bargaining with the idea of establishing monopoly wages means Christianity.

The columns of this paper, of course, are open to Mr. Charles E. Schofield, editor of Adult Publications, or any other Methodist who can answer questions, to attempt to harmonize collective bargaining that sanctions strikes with the meaning of Christianity.

The great trouble with these leaders of organized religion is that they build a hierarchy for themselves to such a point that they never get out of their own will not permit their statements to be questioned by anyone outside of their hierarchy. When any man gets in such a position he is in a bad way as far as understanding God's law are concerned. He can go astray and no one can point out his errors. Such men enjoy being looked up to and counted as final authorities and are not willing to permit their proposals to be analyzed from a long view standpoint.

There are no embarrassing moments to a man who really understands the meaning of Christianity. Such men are always willing to meet their critics on equal terms and time and space. There is nothing more dangerous to get in a position where your statements cannot be challenged as to how they are out of harmony with God's will.

warehousemen—and petty officials—are a bunch of burglars in a capital-ist insult.

And to make matters worse, most of the foreign ports are tightly organized. Many of the ports in Europe and some in Latin America are thoroughly in control of left-wing unions or syndicates.

In many of these countries the governments are uneasy about the strength of the left and for the United States to insist that the government take drastic action to police its waterfronts would render the foreign government open to charges that it was speaking to destroy its along-shore labor unions. There are a few governments which our own state department would not see embarrassed at almost any cost.

SUSPECT—Another reason why the state department is embarrassed at demands that it take effective action is that American ports are not centers of pristine honesty themselves.

Gentle hints that things aren't what they should be are likely to meet with a bored rejoinder: "Yes, things are bad all over. And just what is the United States government doing about our exports to the port of New York?"

The fact is, there have been tremendous losses along the north and East Rivers. Swiss watches worth $375,000 disappeared from one steamer and 2,500 cases of Scotch disappeared from a single shipment. Few shipments of Scotch go through intact, but, of course, everybody who handles the cases, from Glasgow quayside to New York warehouse is suspect.

ORGANIZED—Any all-out effort to break up pilferage in American ports would engender the same charge that a similar effort in Europe or South America would meet— "It's an attempt to hurt the unions!"

Our ports are tightly organized, so tightly that few but union men have access to piers and warehouses. Heavy policing would undoubtedly be regarded as a slur on organized labor.

Once, when complaints became so insistent that the city had to act, additional guards were assigned to piers. In some cases a single patrolman was assigned to a pier on which hundreds of men, all of them pretty tough, were working. These cops discreetly kept pretty much to themselves.

There have been few arrests for petty thefts at the pier, although occasionally a well-organized gang is rounded up, usually about the time it tries to dispose of its loot to a fence.

WORLD-WIDE—Probably the kindest thing to be said about looting on both sides of the Atlantic and Pacific is that it's a symptom of a world-wide letdown. Americans in England during the war were amazed at the breaks in the honesty of the British working man, ordinarily one of the most honest fellows in the world.

Millions of dollars' worth of goods, much of it essential to winning the war, was stolen. A favorite trick was to drop a sling of cases as it swung out of the hold and over the pier. The goods that poured out disappeared as if there were a regiment of magicians on the quay.

At one time, American naval officers suggested to the British that military guards be posted on the piers. The British refused on the grounds that such action would be met by a protest strike.

Shipments on British railroads suffered, too. Things got so bad that British shippers disguised their goods. Food and clothing were labeled as airplane and motor parts to the officials of the provisional Belgian government and said they wanted to do something to help their country.

UNPUBLISHED—All this recalls an unpublished story about looting on the continent. Shortly after D-Day a group of six Belgian youths approached one of the officials of the provisional Belgian government and said they wanted to do something to help their country.

He suggested they enlist in the Belgian army and be sent to England for training.

No, they said, they wanted to do something more important. They wanted to be of real and immediate help.

"What do you want to do?" they were asked.

"Just what we are doing now," they replied.

They had come into possession of two large American army trucks. When they wanted gas, they simply drove up to a dump and got it without question.

"Then we drive down to the beaches and put our trucks in line with the other American trucks. Soldiers fill our trucks with all manner of things, food, clothing, ammunition.

"We have been driving to the south of France (then still in German hands) and selling the things to the Maqui. Now we want to do the same thing for the new Belgian government."

Their offer was refused and the six men were hustled into the Belgian army.

THOMPSON—This column recently referred to Wade Thompson of Tennessee as a former law partner of Cordell Hull. Home-town friends have since informed us that Mr. Thompson, a native of Ashland, Ky., was never a lawyer but has always been connected with the real estate business.

Something new has been added: The customary string of tin cans and "Just Married" sign hung from the tail section of an American Airlines four-engine plane as it taxied across Love Field.

Among the passengers were Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Buchanan, Jr., married just ten minutes before the take off in the office of Jean Dubuque, city director of aviation. The bride was the former Odessa Keco of Grapeland.

Miss Lois Watson, Orange, secretary to the county attorney, says their office got the following from a woman who had been married in Orange:

"Please send me a duplex of my marriage certificate. You will remember me. I had on a black dress, trimmed in red."

Shade of Sycamore

By PERCY MARKS Author of "The Plastic Age" "A Tree Grows Straight" Etc.

THE STORY: Gayle, daughter of a college professor, has just become engaged to handsome Bruce Bartlett, famous athlete and scion of wealth. Visiting his home and parents for the first time, she is frightened by the splendor in which they live. Although Mrs. Bartlett greets her kindly, Gayle feels that she has come to a happy maid such extreme luxury.

VI
THE little electric clock on the table beside the bed said 8 o'clock when Gayle awoke the next morning. "What do I do now?" she wondered helplessly. "I'll bet nobody else will be up before 10."

She pressed the button, and in a few minutes the maid entered the room. "Good morning, Miss Kent," she said, smiling pleasantly. Then she went to the windows and drew up the shades. Bright sunshine streamed across the blue carpet. "It's lovely today—real spring."

"It looks wonderful from here. Won't you tell me your name, please?"

"I'm sorry," the maid said. "I ought to have told you last night. It's Lucille. What would you like for breakfast?"

Gayle considered. She was hungry, and she usually prepared her breakfast and gulped it in a wild rush. She might as well make an occasion of all this leisure and service. She said she thought she'd like orange juice, toast, coffee, and an egg with a slice of bacon.

Lucille nodded. "Right away," she promised and left the room. Gayle washed, ran a comb through her hair, slipped on a bed jacket, and went to a window. She seemed to be looking out on an endless park, all trees and lawns and flowers. Below her window a white dogwood tree was in full bloom, and two scarlet tanagers were balancing on its branches. She sighed. It was all too perfect for her.

about the housing shortage in Denison. One day last week babies were being born at the Madonna hospital at the rate of one every fifteen minutes.

The love affair of Buck, a high-jumping deer in the Fort Worth zoo, ended like so many others. He let a woman trap him. Buck and True Love, his girl friend, eloped from the zoo. True Love was captured a few hours after the escape. But Buck roamed around for days.

One day he appeared at the home of H. B. Herd. Minnie Milton, the maid, placed a bucket of water in an enclosed part of the back yard. Buck drank from it, and Minnie had the water ready. But after Buck drank it, he looked around to find that the gate had been closed and two attendants were waiting to return him "home."

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram said that ended one of the zoo's "dearest" romances. Back in the zoo, Buck and True Love were placed in separate pens.

A new, exciting life has dawned for Jewel Gibson, grandmother. At an age where most women sit back and relax and watch the grandkids "grow," Mrs. Gibson of Fairbanks, Texas, has written a book which may be a best seller—"Joshua Beene and God."

Not only that, a second is written and sold, but not quite ready for publication. Four others are mapped and ready to write.

It would be nice to say that life has just begun for grandmother Gibson. But that wouldn't be quite correct. She's led an interesting life all along.

She was born at Bald Prairie, near Franklin, Texas. She chopped cotton on her father's farm. She was called the best-dressed girl in their neighborhood. She says she always wore a new cotton sack with shoulder straps that fit.

She wanted to be a tight-rope walker in a circus first, later had desires to ride wild broncos and bulldog steers. Then she met a handsome preacher and decided to dedicate her life to the heathens in Africa.

Instead, she met and married Felix Gibson, an oil-well driller who had a solid gold watch, a tailor-made suit, and clean finger-nails. They've moved about quite a bit—Austin, Wichita Falls, Houston, Cayuga (between Palestine and Corsicana), Mexia, Hearne, Calvert, Corpus Christi, Huntsville.

She attended Westminister Junior college at Teahuacana, Texas, and began teaching. She received her B. S. degree from Sam Houston state teachers college.

She taught for twenty years. In fact, she taught until her book was published over one from every direction. The experience was as pleasant as she had thought it would be, but she did not linger over it. She was in her slip and brushing her hair at the dressing table when Lucille returned.

She permitted Lucille to draw the dress, still smelling faintly from the iron, over her head; but she pulled up the zipper at the side before Lucille had an opportunity to.

Lucille tugged a little at the hem and then stood up. "It is very chic," she said admiringly. "Just a dress," said Gayle, half inclined to add, "which I made myself."

Lucille shook her head. "No. It is right." Then she almost visibly retreated to the position she considered proper and stated impersonally, "Mr. Bruce is still sleeping, and Mrs. Bartlett is in the conservatory. He asks if you would be so kind as to visit him there."

"Of course. But I don't know where the conservatory is."

"I will show you."

GAYLE followed Lucille down the marble stairway, across the hall, and through three rooms before they reached the conservatory. She saw half a dozen servants working. "And last night," she thought, half amused at her own innocence, "I thought they had a dozen servants. There must be scores."

The rooms were all very large, and one, which she supposed was the drawing room, was enormous. She tried to bolster her courage with contempt, and told herself that if the room wasn't all cluttered up with furniture and rugs, it would be swell for roller skating.

The attempt failed. Her steps don't, she'll be up here drawing my bath and washing behind my ears. I couldn't stand that."

She drank her coffee too fast and scalded her tongue, but she took one final hurried gulp, slipped out of bed, and hurried window a white dogwood tree was in full bloom, and two scarlet tanagers were balancing on its branches. She sighed. It was all too perfect for her.

There was nothing to do but go forward.

she said, "I felt like a wayward wife who deserted a nice, steady husband for a glamorous playboy," she said about quitting teaching. She likes the profession.

About the book, Mrs. Gibson said her two sons (one is a doctor) like it, her husband is waiting to see what the critics say, and her mother was shocked with angry.

In a letter which Mrs. Gibson said "doomed and damned my book" her mother said: "And you're the girl who used to write poetry about birds, and who used to cry when you heard a naughty word!"

But she's enjoying her new life. She's traveling a lot, signing books and having a good time. And planning new books.

She's a very unusual—and very young—grandmother. She's still in her early forties, and full of fun.

SHOW HER THAT YOU ARE PROUD OF HER.

DISTINCTION IN DRIVING NEW CAR
BALTIMORE, Sept. 27—Nathan Goldbergh and Charles Levine, each driving a new 1946 tan and brown sedan of the same make, went to the same theater after parking on the same street.

Police awakened Goldbergh by telephone at midnight and asked him to check upon his car—Levine was worrying.

Not only were the cars the same make, color, parked nearby, etc., but both had dents on the right front fender. Goldbergh's key fitted Levine's car, and the mileage was almost the same. Levine's 3,582, Goldbergh's 3,570.

'BIMBER' MCONSHINING

ANY SMOKE?
SPOKANE, Wash.—(AP)—Firemen searched the apartment house from cellar to attic for the fire that a tenant had reported he heard crackling.

The crackling noise, deduced Capt. Arthur Perusse, came from crickets.

DALLAS—Navy Secretary James Forrester will address the State's petroleum operators at the Victory Meeting of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association Oct. 17 and 18 in Houston.

Mr. Forrester, secretary of the navy since 1944 and under secretary for four years prior, will speak Oct. 18 on "Oil and Victory."

The theme of the meeting is petroleum's part in helping win the war, for which Texas alone supplied nearly three-fourths of all the nation's increased oil needs.

In accepting, the cabinet member wrote: "In reply to your recent invitation, I shall be most happy to address the members of the Texas petroleum industry at their Victory Meeting on Oct. 18.

The story of oil in relation to our final victory is an amazing one, and I shall do my best to do it justice."

Secrecy Now Lifted From Canol Project

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate war investigating committee was advised yesterday that President Truman has lifted secrecy from all papers of the joint chiefs of staff relating to the $134,000,000 Canol oil project.

Adm. William D. Leahy, the President's chief of staff, wrote the committee of the President's action.

Leahy also wrote to advise you that if in the opinion of the committee there are in existence any other papers bearing in any way on its investigation of the Canol project, a request by the committee for such papers will receive prompt and adequate consideration.

Files of the joint chiefs of staff relating to the Canol project were turned over to the committee last Monday. However, they bore a "secret" notation and hence could not be used in public hearings.

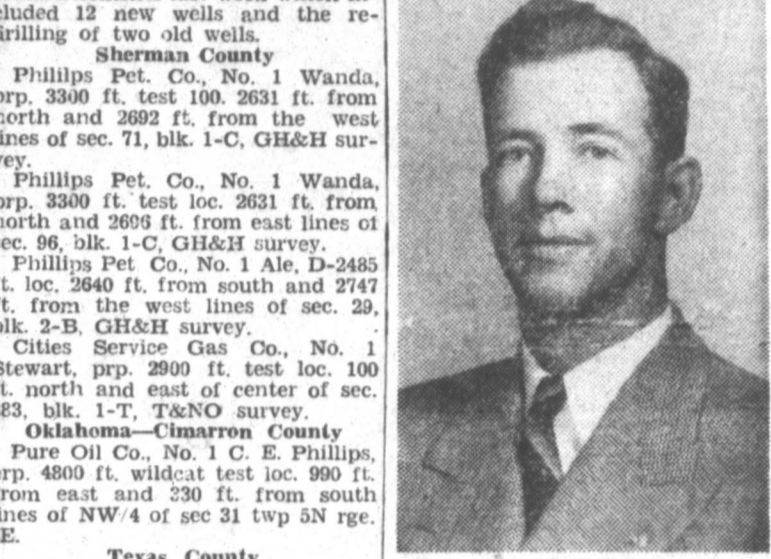

Reopening its investigation of the wartime effort to develop an oil field in northwestern Canada, the committee called Adm. Ernest J. King, former chief of naval operations, to a hearing last Thursday.

He was excused from testifying, however, when it developed he had a prepared statement that included some material from the files marked secret. King had received permission from the chiefs of staff to make use of the material.

The committee decided then it would not proceed until the chiefs of staff gave it full freedom to make public use of the documents. King is to return on Monday.

5 Reports Presented Panhandle API Meet, Held Last Thursday

A "public invited" meeting of the Panhandle chapter, American Petroleum Institute, was held Thursday, Sept. 26, in the Palm Room of the city hall.

The program consisted of five reports on promoting the stimulation of production. These reports were presented by representatives of member oil companies. They were: "Automatic Equipment," Joe Cronin, Phillips Pet. Co.; "Parfin," Leo Fry, Standoli; "Gravel Pack and Control of Shale Break," Tom Hogan, Texas Co.; "Marble Shock," Ralph O'Neal, Phillips Pet. Co.; "Acidizing," Max Harrison, Kiwani Oil and Gas Co.

Following each report the audience participated in a discussion on that particular report and asked questions on various points that were not clear.

The announcement was made that the spring meeting will be held in Amarillo.

Kerosene Doesn't Meet Coal Oil's Old Requirements

Your reporter enjoyed the discussion by Allan M. Trout on the difference between kerosene and coal oil that appeared in the Louisville Courier-Journal so much he decided to reprint it for your enjoyment.

"If you tote it away in a tin can with a potato stuck in the spout, it is coal oil. If you pour it in an old lamp with a smoky chimney and a wick that needs trimming, it is coal oil. If you pour some in an old lantern that had been battered and hung around the barn lot for God knows how long, it is coal oil."

"If you mix it with pine tar and rub the compound on the old mule's sore shoulder, it is coal oil. If you mix it with turpentine and apply same to the bedspread with a feather, to scatter the hitchhiker bugs therein, it is coal oil. If you mix it with lard and rub it on the hide of a mangy old hound dog, it is coal oil."

To tell you the truth, sir, I doubt if kerosene would meet the domestic and therapeutic requirements of Kentucky ridge runners who cannot get along without coal oil. I been around a lot of country stores in my time and I never heard anybody ask for kerosene.

WASHINGTON IS ENGAGED IN SPECULATION OVER SELECTION OF HARRIMAN'S SUCCESSOR

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Truman's freshly stressed emphasis on surprise appointments served to widen the field today in the "guess who" contest over a new ambassador to Great Britain.

The Chief Executive's completely unheeded selection of W. Averell Harriman to step into Henry A. Wallace's post as secretary of commerce recalled at least two other instances in which Mr. Truman caught even some of his closest friends way off base.

One was his pick of J. A. Krug to succeed Harold L. Ickes as secretary of the interior; the other his appointment of Fred M. Vinson, then secretary of the treasury, to be chief justice.

Barring the selection of a Missourian, four dominant factors figured in the speculation over a successor to Harriman.

Those factors are the possible candidate's pocketbook, political stature, personal health and past record.

Alphabetically, here is how they stack up:

1. Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, soon to be out of a job due to the state law which prevents an incumbent from succeeding himself. Because of his political philosophy, Arnall's choice might help woo some members of that democratic faction left disgruntled by Wallace's dismissal.

2. Undersecretary of State Will

Clayton, a successful businessman with personal assets equal to the financial and social obligations involved. Clayton, however, now holds down a post of such far-reaching economic responsibility that it is unlikely he would be sidetracked to Britain.

3. General Mark W. Clark. Speculation here has centered chiefly around the fact that a number of Mr. Truman's recent diplomatic appointments have been from military ranks. But Clark's tasks in Austria remain of such magnitude that there is doubt he would be transferred to even as important a post as ambassador to Britain.

4. James Dunn now ambassador to Italy. Wealthy enough to maintain the post, he has been mentioned chiefly because of his stand in favor of close Anglo-American cooperation.

5. Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson. His choice could serve the double purpose of filling the post with a democrat who has gone along with new deal policies, and at the same time ease a strained situation on the nation's high tribunal.

6. Joseph P. Kennedy. Here the speculation stems chiefly from the fact that Kennedy's choice might prove welcome in the political sea-saw territory of the northeast. However, Kennedy, a former ambassador to London, incurred the wrath of many Britons by his early pessimism over their wartime chance of victory.

7. Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Prog-Wis), who at best would be a 100 to 1 shot. As a close friend and former colleague, Mr. Truman has been reported eager to find a job for LaFollette in the administration. But (a) LaFollette often was critical of administration foreign policy and (b) Wisconsin democrats might object on the ground that he ran unsuccessfully for the republican nomination in this year's primaries.

8. Freeman Matthews. If Mr. Truman elects to pick a career man "Doc" Matthews would be a likely choice. Now head of the state department's office of European affairs, he has been in on several of the international conferences upon which American foreign policy has been built.

9. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Diplomatic observers with a penchant for long shot odds eyed this possibility on the double grounds that she is familiar with and sympathetic to the problems of England and possesses a politically potent name.

Gracie Reports

By GRACIE ALLEN

I see that after a seven-year social spell, the White House will again be the scene of state dinners this season. With power politics putting everybody on edge, the President and his wife might feel safer if they restricted themselves to a small party for Martins and the Coys.

Inn the good old, or at least the quiet old, Hoover days, if somebody dropped a hot potato in the French ambassador's lap, the whole thing was cleaned up with a little tact and benzine. But now think what might happen if the minister from Turkey and the Russian ambassador happened to reach for the same slice of bread.

When Mrs. Truman figures out the seating arrangements she'll have to make sure that a neutral diplomat is put between diplomats from countries who are trading on the tails of each other's coats. And since Switzerland is the most neutral country, I suggest she'd better put the Swiss ambassador between Secretary Byrnes and Mr. Wallace.
