Gorillas Will Open Season Tomorrow

Sam Snead Posts 10-Under-Par in Practice Round

DALLAS—(AP)—With the opening round of the $10,000 Dallas open invitation golf tournament only a day away big name golfers and hopeful amateurs alike tuned up their games today on the Dallas Country club course. The tournament starts Sept. 26 and ends Sept. 29th.

Few of them have kept scores in practice rounds thus far, preferring instead to try out different clubs and shots on the more tricky holes.

Sam Snead, the 1946 British open champion, who won the Dallas tournament last year with a 72-hole total of 276, was one of the few who has turned in a practice round score. He turned in a 62 for the 72 par layout yesterday.

Interest yesterday, however, centered on the thirty-six-hole qualifying round for Southwestern amateurs who sought the fifteen places allotted to them in the tournament.

Dick Martin, Dallas, took top honors with a score of 140, four under par. Don Cherry, Wichita Falls, was runner-up with 145.

Other amateurs qualifying were (all of Dallas unless otherwise noted): David Goldman, 147; Jack Manger, 148; John Oliver, Amarillo, 149.

Cards Win From Reds, Increase Lead Over Bums

By RALPH RODEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The ability of the St. Louis Cardinals to come from behind in the several times during the present campaign, the Cards have pulled seeming defeats out of the fire in the waning part of a game. They did it again last night when Rookie Outfielder Erv Dusak hammered one to the outfield and the Cardinals increased their lead over the Cincinnati Reds, 3-1.

Star Musial set the stage for Dusak's blow last night by singling in a run in the ninth to tie the score. Until then, Yanger Meier had blanked the Cards 1-0 on two hits.

The Dodgers' scheduled game with the Philadelphia Phillies was postponed because of rain. The Brooks meet the Phils in a single game today while the Cards tangle with the Reds again under the lights.

Brooklyn will play off yesterday's postponement Thursday, with a doubleheader that day if rain cancels today's tilt.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs split a doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates, winning the opener, 13-3 and dropping the eight inning nightcap, 13-0.

In the American League, Hank Greenberg smashed three home runs to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 and 10-1 victories over the St. Louis Browns.

The twin wins also stretched a Tiger winning streak to ten games and clinched second place for the Bengals as the pennant winning Boston Red Sox nosed out the third place New York Yankees, 5-4.

A scheduled National League twin bill between the Boston Braves and the Giants was postponed because of rain while the other American league clubs were not scheduled.

Memphis, Atlanta All Tied Up in Playoff

ATLANTA—(AP)—The Memphis Chicks and the Atlanta Crackers headed into Memphis today, all square at 1-1 in the Southern association's final playoff.

Whitney Willis was picked to face Atlanta's Earl McGowan on the firing line tonight.

Memphis, second-place finisher, tied the series by shutting out the pennant winners last night, 5-0, on Herman Drefel's fine five-hit hurling and some home run clouting behind him. Ace Bill Ayers limited the Chicks to four hits in eight innings but three of them were circuit outs.

During World War II, Britain's Royal Marines suffered losses of 7-524 men killed and founded in action.

Football Schedule Will Be Published

Complete schedules, by sections, of the nation's major college football will be published in tomorrow's Daily News.

In addition, extra copies of the schedule are being printed and may be obtained after tomorrow at Daniels Auto Rebuilding company, 219 West Tynell, or at the St. Williams Service Station, corner of South Cuyler and Brown.

The two firms are sponsoring the publishing of the schedule.

West Texas veterans are becoming more surplus conscious, according to Karl E. Wallace, chief, Veterans Division, War Assets Administration. "The fort office handled over 3000 personal visits, and 244 telephone calls and mail inquiries in August," Wallace stated. Veteran-businessmen in the Fort Worth-West Texas area were issued 7,205 certificates for use commercially, while 2,664 were issued for personal purchasers. Two certifying teams from the Fort Worth office make regular trips to Wichita Falls, Abilene, Amarillo, Big Spring, San Angelo and Lubbock territory veterans in those areas.

With the approach of cooler weather, blanket time is close at hand. A timely offering of over 15,000 blankets go on sale Sept. 25, and will last until supply is disposed of to commercial dealers. The blankets have previously been offered to veterans.

Enough pliers, 5,965 to be exact, are now available for purchase through WAA in Fort Worth to satisfy a considerable list of purchasers. Small retailers may buy in lots of 100, wholesalers in lots of 350, with prices at 80c, 76c, and 72c, respectively. Sale opened Sept. 20 and will continue until all of the 6 1/2" pliers are disposed of. Orders may be mailed to WAA, T&P Bldg., Fort Worth.

Veterans can now buy army scout cars, 130 of them, located at Red River arsenal, Texarkana. These cars which cost the government $6,130 each are tagged at $350. Conditions of sale specify that veteran purchasers shall use the cars for own small business, professional or agricultural enterprise.

The people of many West Texas towns have received added fire protection since the WAA sold 32 surplus fire trucks to city and county fire departments in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. These fire trucks were mostly 1934 and 1942 model International and Mack trucks that served their hitch in the service at army posts and air fields in Texas, were sold at prices ranging from $1,300 to $1,700, and originally cost the government approximately $7,000 each. Archer City, Breckenridge, Diney, Ranger, Calhart, Burnet, Sonda, Walnut Springs, Granbury, Glen Rose, Abilene, Dimmit, McLean and Vega were among the recent purchasers. Flowers made of richly colored tiles which have not faded in 300 years adorn the cloister walls of the Franciscan monastery at Lima, Peru.

George Washington's salary as President was $25,000 a year.

Benjamin Franklin forecast the use of parachute troops.

Thompson Would Send Salesmen Throughout World

HOUSTON—(AP)—Col. Ernest O. Thompson, member of the Texas railroad commission, said in a speech here last night that the United States should send salesmen to the countries to which it has sent missionaries and soldiers in the past.

"The great industrial plant which America built up during the war is utilized to full capacity. It will be only a short time until the pent-up domestic demand is met and then foreign markets could absorb the surplus," Thompson told the Houston chapter of the American petroleum institute.

The railroad commissioner said that for years America has been sending missionaries abroad and when trouble develops in foreign countries she has sent her soldiers to clear up the situation.

"If we would call in the returned veterans and secure a list from them of the things most needed in the countries where they have been, and then send the veteran out as a salesman I believe the greatest good would be accomplished," Thompson said.

Thompson, who recently made a tour of the oil producing countries in the Middle East, urged that the United States protect its nationals who are developing oil properties there.

Calcutta is the shellac capital of the world.

One atomic missile could paralyze a city and blot it out of the national economy for all effective purposes. By bacterial warfare a ruthless enemy might seek to destroy our nation, using our citizens as human weapon carriers to bring the germs of death to every home in the country.—General Eisenhower.

Shade of Sycamore

By PERCY MARKS Author of "The Plastic Age" "A Tree Grown Straight" Etc.

THE STORY: Gayle tells her friend, Rose, about her engagement to handsome Bruce Bartlett, famous athlete and scion of wealth. Rose is horrified, claiming that Bart is selfish, spoiled and conceited. But when he is early for a date with Gayle, Rose reveals him amiably, giving him a sketch she has made of Gayle. On his request, she sketches him also.

III

It was a quarter past four when Gayle reached the apartment house. She saw Bart's empty car at the curb and knew that he must be in the apartment with Rose.

"Oh dear," she thought, "oh dear. There's no telling what she'll say." By the time she had reached her apartment door she had become frighteningly certain that her fiancé and her dearest friend were already irrevocable enemies.

Before she had the door really open, Bart was on his feet hurrying to her. He took her in his arms, closed his eyes with his foot, and kissed her hungrily. "Darling," he whispered, "darling."

Blushing, Gayle put her hands against his chest and pushed him away. "What will Rose think?"

Rose glanced at them over the board and then returned to her drawing. "Don't mind me," she said placidly. "I've been to the movies."

Bart looked at her and remembered that he was supposed to be posing for his portrait. "Oh, my Lord," he said contritely, returning hastily to his chair. "I'm sorry, I forgot."

"Didn't you just?" Rose chuckled. "Didn't you? Well, it doesn't matter, I'm done."

Confused, taken back by the genial atmosphere, Gayle looked at Rose, then at Bart, and then again at Rose. They seemed to be the best of friends, and apparently Rose was drawing Bart's know what she's talking about," he announced. "It's perfect. Can I take it with me?"

"Oh no. It's got to be fixed." "Fixed?"

"Yes. You have to spray charcoal drawings with fixative or they'll smear every time they're touched. Anyhow, I want to have this photographed before I turn it over to you."

"How about Wednesday? It'll be a good excuse to come up and see Gayle."

"That's all right."

BART still stood before the portrait admiring it. "Perfect," he said more to himself than to her; "just perfect." Then he remembered. "How much?" he asked. "You didn't tell me what you get for drawings like this."

Rose laughed. "I've never sold one before. I've done a few for practice, and this was practice too. And, of course, I've done lots of them in class. I don't want any money."

"Hey, that's no go. Gayle told me you made your own living."

"Not with this kind of work."

"You've got to let me pay you," he insisted stubbornly. "That was the bargain."

Gayle opened the door for the bedroom. "What are you fighting about?" she asked.

"Rose doesn't want any pay for the picture," Bart explained indignantly. "I asked her to do it. It was a commission."

"Is that all? Don't even discuss it with her. You give me a check, and I'll see she takes it. I've got my bags packed, and I'll be with you in a jiffy."

Fifteen minutes later Bart and Gayle were gone. Rose went to the easel and stood looking at her work. "The poor good," she said softly. "The poor good. I ought to have known he would never see."

She chuckled and stepped back a pace. "Gayle saw, though," she thought. "It bothered her. Maybe the next time she'll see what she saw."

Then she turned away and once more spoke aloud. "Oh well," she said. "What difference does it make? Even if she sees it, she won't believe it. She sees it, she won't believe it."

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Going Fishing? Here's How!

To hear Willie Wells and Basil Strube arguing about trout fishing, you'd think it was more important than the atom bomb.

Willie favors dry flies, Basil pooh-poos anything but wet flies. Willie swears by a Royal Coachman; Basil won't hear of anything but a Silver Doctor. And by the time it comes to steel rods versus bamboo rods... #1X&*!!

But on Saturday, each got back from Seward's creek with a catch that couldn't have differed by more than several ounces!

Each had used his favorite kind of fly, his favorite rod and his favorite place to cast. So over a friendly glass of beer, they allowed as how maybe they were both right... which is how so many arguments should end.

From where I sit, if we all respected one another's different opinions—whether about trout flies, or drinking beer, or voting, life would be a whole lot pleasanter.

like. I know the hand of God was in it."

Colin himself tried to be flippancy about it all.

"I was like the marines," he said, "arriving at the critical moment, the well-known nick of time." But his hand was trembling as he greeted me.

This was a little later, after I had persuaded Ellen to take a sedative and lie down for a while. I had gone back to my post and Father Gene and Colin had stopped by the desk. The old Mark alone with Charlotte for a while.

My own hand was like ice when Colin took it in his. I remember wondering just how much emotion the human heart could stand in one day. However, I managed to speak to Colin in a fairly steady voice, and if he saw how shaken I really was, he could attribute it all to the miracle I had just witnessed.

Father Gene said, "I'm taking you and Ellen and Mark over to the parish house until we see what's to be done. Come along now, Colin. We had better let Cecelia get on with her duties."

Colin said quickly, "Not yet." And his dark eyes were on me. "I'd like to talk to Cecelia for a minute, Father. Do you mind?"

"To-Cecelia?" Father Gene stared at him and then at me. "Ah," he said. And again, "Ah." And as he turned away, I saw the light of comprehension flash into the good man's eyes, and the twinkle of delight.

Colin said, "Isn't there somewhere I can talk to you for just five minutes, Cecelia? Away from this eternal hurrying procession of angels of mercy?"

I remember mentioning the diet kitchen as a possible retreat and we must have gone there. For my next memory is of leaning against the sink in the kitchen with Colin's dark face close above me. And of how my heart seemed at one moment to have stopped beating entirely and the next to have taken wings.

For it was there that Colin told me.

"It was the thought of you, Cecelia, that kept me steady," he was saying. "And the hope that one day I might be free to tell you. But I could not speak until—what happened today—did happen."

I put my hands behind me and held onto the edge of the sink.

"I've got a little house," he said, smiling. I thought fleetingly of Tomistall and of how it had seemed the right setting for him. I tried to imagine him in a little house. "I don't need a very big house, Cecelia," he said. "I'm not a very big man. I'm a working man." He said it humbly. Colin looked into my eyes. Oh no, not that, not that. "Buff I need you, Cecelia. I want you—very much."

I let go of the sink. I was crushed in his arms. He kissed me and continued to kiss me before two delighted intermes and an astonished boy with crutches who happened along.

Then Colin lifted his head and saw his audience.

"Well, don't stand there staring," he yelled, his dark eyes flashing. "Go along about your business!"

And I laughed with delight, as he took me in his arms. My black Irishman had not changed too much—not too much.

Local Doctor Will Take Part in Meet

Dr. William Ballard, osteopath and surgeon of Pampa, will serve as chairman of the proctology session of the Texas Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons scheduled at Amarillo Oct. 4, 5, 6, it has been announced.

The meeting will entertain osteopathic physicians and surgeons from all over the state, it was said.

The eye, ear, nose and throat session will be presided over by Dr. Morris Couch, Shamrock.

Delaware originally was known as Cape de la Warr, in honor of Lord de la Warr, governor of Virginia.

Meatless Housewives Are on the Spot

By RUTH MILLETT, NEA Staff Writer. The housewife wearily trudging from meat-market to meat-market is a little confused by the empty show-cases.

When she asks the butcher how soon the meat famine will be over, he answers her with a shrug of his shoulders. "Not until we get rid of OPA."

Every butcher has the same answer for her. That means she is supposed to get mad at OPA and demand that price ceilings be taken off meat.

But OPA is supposed to be on her side—to exist for the protection of the consumer. If she turns against OPA, is she helping herself—or somebody else?

Maybe the show-cases would be full of meat again, if there were no price ceilings on it. But would she, the average consumer, be able to buy much of it if it also zoomed in price?

For housewife, she is caught in the middle. It's no easy problem to feed a family three meals a day with no meat other than an occasional pound of cold cuts.

WHO IS RIGHT? Her butcher tells her OPA must go. Her common sense tells her OPA is her protection against skyrocketing prices. Her family tells her, "Gee, but it would be nice to have one of your nice, thick pot-roasts for dinner, instead of this leathery luncheon meat."

Tartar on Teeth Is Danger Signal

By ALICIA HART, NEA Staff Writer. Two cues to see your dentist, which if ignored may result in trouble, are tartar on the teeth and gums that tint your toothbrush pink.

Of course, healthy gums bleed if brushed too vigorously or if pricked by a flyaway bristle. But gums that continue to act up are something else again, and should have the attention of your dentist.

The reason any tartar accumulates on teeth should be removed early is that if allowed to pile up, it works down under the gums and can create havoc.

These are the more urgent reasons for seeing your dentist. Having no such reasons, you should see him for periodic examinations as often—many dentists say—as every six months. This gives a dentist an opportunity to detect a pit or a fissure while it is still a superficial invasion of the enamel. Halted then, damaging inroads into the pulp of the tooth may be largely averted.

Another Earthquake In Series Recorded

WESTON, Mass. (AP)—A "quite strong" earthquake—the latest in a series of approximately 300 quakes recorded in the West Indies area in the vicinity of Puerto Rico since last August 8—was registered at the Weston county seismograph station this morning.

The Rev. Daniel Linehan said the earth tremors began at 5:09; 41, Eastern Standard Time, and continued for 1 1/2 hours. Father Linehan expressed doubt that today's quake would have been as serious as that August 8 when lives were lost and a tidal wave swept shoreward.

He said the record today was far stronger, however, than most of the shocks that have been recorded since the first severe tremors in August. On some days, he said, as many as 25 quakes were recorded.

SOLVING THE HEALTH PROBLEM
The state of Oregon offers an excellent example of how voluntary medical insurance plans, conducted at low cost and free of government red tape, can solve most of a commonwealths health problems.
The Oregon Physicians' Service recently announced that it had extended its activities to 15 of the state's 36 counties. Many of those counties are small in population, and are principally agricultural. The system used is sponsored by the Oregon State Medical Society and fully meets the high standards set by the American Medical Association's council on medical service. It is planned to extend the service to more counties in the state as rapidly as local medical groups approve it.
Purpose of the Oregon Physicians' Service is to offer the public more and better medical treatment than would be possible under any scheme for "political medicine." As 95 percent of all doctors in Oregon cooperate, each client may choose his physician, surgeons and consulting specialists—something that would not be the case under socialized medicine. Workers covered by the plan may extend surgical and hospital coverage to their entire families. The cost is extremely moderate: $2.00 per month for a spouse, $1.35 for one child, 75 cents for a second child and 50 cents for a third child. Additional children receive the same care without charge.
Other states have similar voluntary plans. It seems to us they represent the soundest and least expensive solution yet proposed to the health problem.

Joseph Stalin last Feb. 9 told the people that capitalism breeds wars and announced inauguration of a new five-year plan to insure "our country" against any eventually. A few days later he called on the Red army to "make the borders of our motherland impregnable against enemies." Abroad and at home these statements were interpreted as meaning that the Russian leader did not believe that the two worlds of capitalism and communism could exist together in peace and that he was calling on his people to guard for the inevitable conflict.
It appears that in the last seven months there has been a change in the thinking of Soviet leadership. At least it would appear that Stalin has found it desirable to modify somewhat the average Soviet citizen's picture of the non-Russian world.
For yesterday (Tuesday) in a startling statement as widely publicized in Russia as outside Stalin declared that he believed unconditionally "in the possibility of a friendly and lasting collaboration of the Soviet Union and Western democracy despite the existence of ideological discord and in friendly competition between the two systems." "Communism in one country"—as opposed to the former Soviet thesis of world revolution—"is fully possible except in such a country as the Soviet Union," Stalin continued.
With this new line of thought the Soviet Premier coupled a profession of confidence that no new war is in the making and remarks calculated to ease the anxieties of his own people concerning the atomic bomb. Dispatches from Moscow report that these had a reassuring effect on the Russian public, which appears to have been more worried about the prospect of standing against a hostile encirclement than of a possible atomic attack. It is not clear what Stalin's remarks were addressed to his own people as much as to the outside world.
Just what psychological objective he was driving at remains obscure. But Russians doubtless were glad to be assured that the United States monopoly of the atomic bomb can not last long, which the Americans themselves have admitted from the first. And non-Russians may find still greater assurance in Stalin's flat statement that "use of the atomic bomb means that Moscow is ready to meet the United States and other nations halfway in the search for a covenant to outlaw the dread weapon."

Can Tax-Supported Schools Teach Ethics—Honesty?
Teach Ethics—Honesty?
In the last issue I mentioned some of the positive features of a sound educational system. This is a right to use government money to create schools that teach ethics and honesty. How can public schools teach the idea that morals are individual decisions and not collective decisions when they are teaching by example that the majority has a right to do a thing that a man would be convicted as a criminal for doing as an individual?
Would any sane person contend that any individual originally had a right to use government money to create schools to train his children, or other children, the way that the individual using force wanted them trained? If he would contend that, he would be advocating that men take the law into their own hands and would bring on nothing but fights and chaos and war.
How can public schools teach the necessity of obeying or worshipping eternal, universal principles of right and wrong when they are in reality worshipping two gods? They claim to teach ethics, yet at the same time they are worshipping the god of the majority and denying the right of the individual to freedom of thought, expression and action. How can the state teach each individual that he should use all the talents God gave him to put himself in harmony with natural law when it is by force taking away from some people part of their talents and denying them the responsibility of being stewards of all their energies?

In Hollywood
By ERSKINE JOHNSON
Hollywood (NEA)—We'll never forget the time Harry Joe Brown was directing an airplane sequence for a movie in which two aviators bailed out at 15,000 feet. There was only one cloud in the sky, and they were told to bail out by the cloud, for scenic effect. But the wind carried them away from the lone cloud. Joe, 15,000 feet below, yelling through a small megaphone at the parachuters, as the cameras ground away: "To your left! To your left! Move to your left!"
ONE AT A TIME—PLEASE
Director Al Rogell, the old reminder, was reminding other directors on the set of "Heaven Only Knows," and he told us some other stories on Hollywood directors and how they react under pressure.
There was even one on himself. Rogell and a camera crew waited aboard a ship for three days to shoot an ocean scene, but no clouds showed up to break the composition line. Finally Rogell saw a sea gull and decided to use sea gulls for scenic effects.
There was a shortage of bread, so he used garbage for bait. He released his cast and crew, then the garbage was dropped, and "Ninety million sea gulls roared down on us to grab the food. They blocked out the background completely."
I stopped the camera and shouted to an assistant director: "It's no good. No good. Send the gulls through one at a time."
Then there's the Wesley Ruggles story.
Three thousand head of cattle were corralled in a canyon in Arizona, for a big stampede shot. But Ruggles didn't think they could raise enough dust. So for a couple of days he had trucks picking up dirt and spreading it around the canyon.
Then, with nine cameras trained on the cattle, the stampede began. The first of the cattle hit the dirt, and the cameras picked up just dust.
The stampede had to be refilled—after crews of men swept the canyon.
FORGET THE FILM—SHOOT
Another cattle stampede shot concerns George Marshall. He had his cameras set up quite some distance from the cattle. He called for action, and the assistant director suggested that since the cattle were out of sight, maybe it would be better to wait until they got into camera range.
Marshall ignored him, and the

By GRACIE ALLEN
Well, I see that a Michigan lady who is famous as a child research expert says that babyboomers are endangering future generations by their habits. It seems they skip meals to lose weight, then tuck in ice-cream sodas, and carload lots.
This is surprising to me, because I thought they at least thought meals at day to enable them to run after Frank Sinatra and Van Johnson and try to trip buttons off their coats.
Well, the babyboomers are dieting so they can qualify for the physique of their idol, Sinatra. So mothers, instead of trying to fatten up a few million headstrong youngsters, let's fatten up Frankie boy and they'll follow suit. We'll start "vitamin" or "voice" movement.
Also, we'd better not go on record against a diet of ice-cream sodas. If the meat shortage continues, we may all be living on them soon.
Bricklayers now are a bigger shortage than bricks—Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt.

Peter Edson's Column
OFFENSIVE AGAINST REACTION IS PLANNED
(Editor's Note: This is the second of two exclusive interviews with the national chairman of the major parties concerning November election campaigns and prospects. GOP Chairman B. Carroll Reece's views were set forth in a previous column by Mr. Edson.)
WASHINGTON, (NEA)—"Hold the Line Against Reaction" is the slogan which Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert E. Hannegan of Missouri has put forward for the congressional elections of 1946, now only six weeks away.
If this sounds as though the democratic party is on the defensive in this campaign, for the first time in 14 years, Hannegan is quick to point out that the defense is really an offense, "against reaction from the dead past." The republicans, he says, have no program, and the democratic offensive is against this lack of program.
It is a common falling of all politicians that they like to state the position of their opponents, setting up a straw man which they can then tear to pieces. To Chairman Hannegan, the platform on which the republican candidates are running in this campaign is merely the generality of, "Take the country back to the tried and true conservatism." On this assumption the principal issue of the campaign is, in Hannegan's words, "Shall we cherish and hold the advances we have made under responsible government as administered by the greatest leader of his time—Franklin D. Roosevelt—and by his associates—Harry S. Truman—or must America turn back to the dead past?"

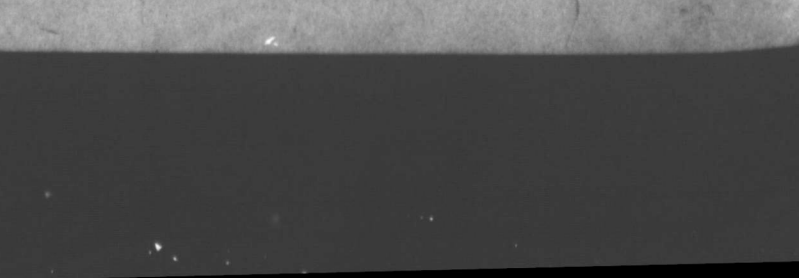

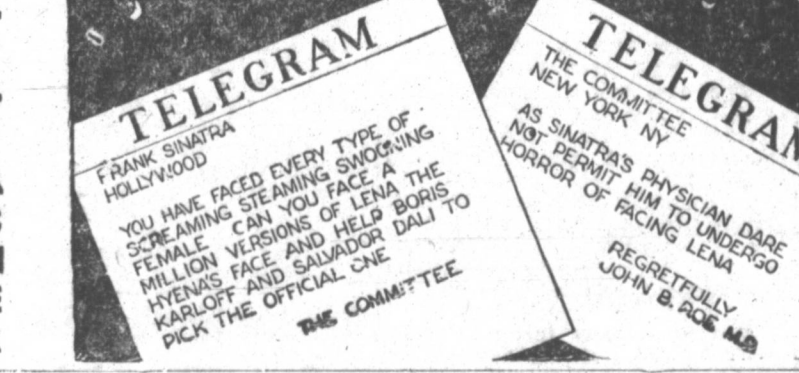

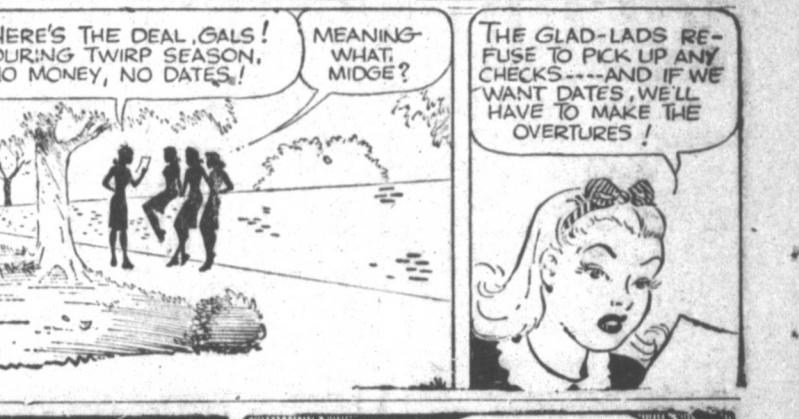

of a cornfield Brutus to the Caesar from Missouri.
CRITICISM—Mr. Wallace's right-about-face toward the Soviet regime and postwar aggression has taken place within six months, for he delivered his criticism of Stalin last March at a dinner given to W. Averell Harriman, who was then re-designated as American ambassador to Moscow.
Incidentally, Mr. Harriman quit because he could not persuade the Kremlin to adopt a "more reasonable" policy inside and outside the United Nations.
"I think," said the secretary on that occasion, "that we can make it clear to the Soviet government that no country, however powerful in a military or economic way, can dominate by mere force even the smallest countries for very long."
SPHERES—Russia can't ride roughshod over eastern Europe and get away with it any more than we could in Latin America or England in India and Africa—
"We must also make it clear to the Soviets that we have no intention of creating blocs or special areas inside or outside the United Nations organization."
Six months later, Mr. Truman's aides point out, the same speaker suggested that Russia be allowed to "ride roughshod over eastern Europe," assailed "British imperialism" in India and Africa and urged that the world be divided into three spheres—Russian, British and American.

DARING—Mr. Truman's friends also note another aspect of the Wallace performance which may nett the President more seriously than the cabinet member's outright defiance and criticism of the administration's foreign policy in their opinion, it shows that the Iowa regards himself as a more important and influential figure than the Chief Executive himself.
Mr. Wallace, they maintain, has exhibited a lack of fear and respect for the man in the White House. They insist that the Iowa would not have dared to flout Franklin D. Roosevelt as he has disregarded the man from Missouri. They attribute the cabinet member's daring to his belief that, with the Letists, the C. I. O. and "Roosevelt liberals" behind him, Mr. Truman does not dare to ask for his resignation on the eve of a congressional election.
HUMBLE—It is true that Mr. Wallace never showed so much spunk when Franklin D. Roosevelt steered the ship of state. In rough or placid water, the Iowa always behaved as a rowdy but humble sailor.
When F. D. R. removed Mr. Wallace/as head of the board of economic warfare, and handed the post to Leo T. Crowley, the secretary of commerce did not peep.

When Mr. Roosevelt agreed to the congressional demand that RFC be removed from the Wallace jurisdiction as a prerequisite to his confirmation for his present post, the cabinet member agreed.
Then, on Mr. Roosevelt's orders, he did not make a speech or give an official press interview for many months—or not until Mr. Truman took office.
BIGGER—Again, when F. D. R. ruthlessly dropped Henry from the national ticket at the 1944 Chicago convention, the new unruly and rebellious member of the presidential household meekly swallowed the snub. Indeed, he took off his coat and campaigned all the harder for the man who had humiliated him.
Now it is Mr. Wallace who does the humiliating—only because, as H. S. T.'s resolute friends tell the President, he believes that he is a bigger man than the head of the party and the party itself.
UNKIND—Few people take too seriously "Elliott Roosevelt's reminiscences of his distinguished father," now appearing in a weekly magazine before their appearance in a book for which Eleanor Roosevelt has written a preface.
But they provide added irritation and exasperation around the White ence, "falls to lift people up, and that is what the world needs—lifting its people up."

The only way America can destroy communism, he said, is "by making democracy work economically."

He urged support of the chamber of commerce in helping meet the economic problem, as well as other problems in the community.

"I'm from this side of the Mason-Dixon line," he said, opening the race issue. "But one of the biggest problems facing America today is the race problem."

His audience was quiet as he said: "Take a pint of blood from my veins (his) and take a pint of blood from the veins of a 31-year-old Negro. The greatest scientist with his finest microscope can't tell the difference."

"CONSCIENCE MONEY"

He called Oklahoma's appropriation for Negro education "conscience money," and insinuated it was probably the same in Texas.

In arguing his point for racial opportunity, he told his listeners they should not be afraid of new ideas—giving help to backward races.

"Don't let traditionalism close your minds," he said. "If we do, we will cry for the ghost of our chance."

He said the mission of religion is to teach men to get ready to live, not to die; that the chamber of commerce must stand for the principles of "the Golden Rule, good government, and the principles of Christianity."

POSITIVE BELIEF

He opposed pessimism, saying he advocated the positive belief that man can rise above war and bigotry. In making his point, he quoted the famous statement: "In the case of the possibility of anything, all the negative evidence counts for nothing if there is one positive evidence."

By analogy, he pointed to the indefatigable work of the scientists, how they worked for the one positive evidence after a thousand negatives.

He discussed politics. He endorsed the work of Byrnes at the Paris peace conference, denounced the doctrines of Wallace, and charged the people with the responsibility of choosing carefully their political leaders. "It's about time we started putting our votes behind principles instead of behind men," he added.

WORLEY IN ATTENDANCE

Congressman Eugene Worley, from this district, was present. Mr. Worley was also there. Citizens were present from Roberts, Ochiltree, Potter and Wheeler counties.

The speaker, a former war correspondent, began his ministry at S.roud, Okla. Then he was called to Los Angeles, Calif., then to Oklahoma City.

W. B. Weathered, president of the chamber, served as hostmaster. Rudolph Q. Harvey, pastor of the Central Baptist church, gave the invocation; Ken Bennett and his orchestra furnished the dinner music; Fred Thompson, former mayor of Pampa, introduced the guests; Harry Kelley, director of musical education at the First Methodist church, gave a reading and sang a solo; and D. V. Burton, member of the chamber, introduced the speaker. They are old acquaintances.

Red Wedgeworth, chamber manager, led the group in singing.

ports to the committee that certain profits were made and do not allow for deductive items, McCone said, "the reporting authority deliberately misleads the people of this country."

Although Kaiser said he favored no profits in war, he told the committee he knew of no country that had won one without an incentive to production.

"If you can do it by a system of soup kitchens to take care of all of us, I'll be for it," he said "if you want to put everyone in soup kitchens so no one makes a dime, it's up to congress to write the laws that way."

Kaiser has insisted that he made no excessive profits out of his shipbuilding operations. On the other hand, he told the committee he and his family face a potential loss of $13,000,000.

The portly west coast industrialist was recalled by the committee to clarify two days of previous testimony which Rep. McCormell (R-Pa) said had left the group "in a temple of confusion."

McCone and Rep. Weichel (R-Ohio), who was questioning Kaiser and his son Edgar when yesterday's six-hour session ended, said they wanted more and clearer information.

Specifically they said they want an explanation of the wide variance between Kaiser's asserted financial position and the claims of the maritime commission which awarded contracts to him and 15 other operators of government-owned ship yards.

There was a tendency among the diplomats to believe that Stalin's statement was intended as a reply to or commentary on, recent declarations by Henry R. Wallace, recently ousted U. S. secretary of commerce, and former British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Wallace had urged a relaxation in the so-called "get tough" policy toward Russia, while Eden had suggested a new approach in dealing with the Soviet Union.

"Would you like to have your children taken from you and placed in a home?" asked the judge.

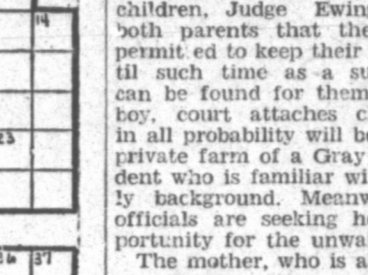

"Yes, I would," the mother quickly answered.

When the father took the witness stand Judge Ewing had to remind him to remove his hat. He also underwent the same questioning about the children's attendance. The father likewise admitted that his children were beyond control.

Other witnesses on the stand stated that the children were constantly filthy, indifferent in their studies and generally poor students, but they were not disciplinary problems as they were well behaved.

At the completion of the hearing to determine the custody of the children, Judge Ewing informed both parents that they would be permitted to keep their children until such time as a suitable home can be found for them.
