Pampa Gets Only Eight Hits in Games; Garland Notches No. 21

Although they collected a total of only eight hits in the two games, Pampa's Oilers managed to scrape an even split out of a double bill with the Albuquerque Dukes last night, the Dukes taking the first, 2-0, and Pampa winning the second, 4-1.

Dick Scott outpitched Foster "Whitey" White in the first game. Scott gave up four hits, while White, who suffered his 11th loss, gave up seven.

Lefty Bill Garland spaced out four Albuquerque hits in the nightcap to register his 21st victory of the season. Although the Oilers also collected only four hits, four Duke errors aided their cause.

Garland struck out eight men in the first inning, but in the second inning he was hit by a home run and a single to lead the Oilers to a 4-1 victory.

Albuquerque scored its first run in the fifth inning of the opener when DeFazio singled and took second on an error. Dixon singled, Fausett flied out and DeFazio scored on Goldsberry's single.

The Oilers embarked on a 15-game road trip that will carry them to Bogue, Albuquerque, Clovis, Lamona and Abilene in that order.

Tonight's game is scheduled to start at 8:30 in Bogue and will be Junior boys diamond. The game tomorrow night at Bogue will also be broadcast.

Today the Oilers embark on a 15-game road trip that will carry them to Bogue, Albuquerque, Clovis, Lamona and Abilene in that order.

Goering Denies Any Knowledge of Tests

REICHSMARSHAL Hermann Goering, recalled to the witness stand, testified before the international war crimes tribunal yesterday that he had no knowledge of experiments carried out in concentration and extermination camps which the prosecution charges were for the benefit of Goering's Luftwaffe.

In 1944 I was forced to organize a special department to prevent misuse of my name," he testified.

Regarding immersion experiments in which the prosecution alleges victims were placed in tubs of ice water for long periods and then revived by placing nude women next to them in bed, Goering said:

"The idea is utterly opposed to my conception of womanhood and I would have resented it bitterly had I known of these things."

Brooklyn's Lead Is Sliced to Half Game

By JACK HAND (Associated Press Sports Writer)

Brooklyn stands in dire need of a fiery pep talk from Cheer-Leader Leo Durocher today with its National league lead shriveled to a half game after absorbing a 10-0 pasting from the rejuvenated Pittsburgh Pirates.

Stories that the last-place Pirates were putting on a closing surge to save their jobs under the new owners had been accepted with a grain of salt.

With seven more games against the Cards and four more with the Dodgers, Pittsburgh could very well prove the decisive factor in the championship battle.

Nick Strincevich, who lost his first seven starts in 1946, shut the door in the Brooks' faces, allowing only four hits. The Pirates climbed all over Vic Lombardi and three successors.

The Cardinals lit into Johnny Niggeling for a 4-1 verdict over the Boston Braves.

The Chicago Cubs gained ground on both Brooklyn and St. Louis by whipping the Phillies twice, 5-2 and 10-2, but lost second baseman Don Johnson with a fractured left hand.

New York advanced to within a half game of the slumping fifth-place Cincinnati Reds with a 4-3 decision engineered by Dave Koslo with home run help from Walker Cooper and Goody Rosen nullifying a workmanlike effort by Harry Gumbert.

Boston's pennant-bound Red Sox divided a pair with the lowly St. Louis Browns but stretched their lead to 1 1/2 games over New York with only 35 to go.

Jim Bagby grabbed his fifth win in the opener, 5-1, and Ellis Kinder of the Browns fashioned his first major league success in the 5-4 finale with relief help from Tom Ferrick. Teddy Williams bashed his 33rd homer.

Both Cleveland's Bobby Feller and Detroit's Hal Newhouse failed in their attempts to hit the 22 win mark, Feller bowing to Washington, 5-4, and Newhouse losing to Philadelphia 2-0.

Randy Gumpert's eight-game win streak was snapped by Chicago as

Nelson Worried Over Chances
By GAIL FOWLER
PORTLAND—(AP)—Byron Nelson, defending national professional golf champion who prefers to be called "Nelson," who automatically qualified for the 1946 U.S. Open, sat out yesterday's second round qualifying round to catch up on his correspondence.

On the eve of the match play Nelson seemed more concerned with what might happen to him Thursday.

"I'll have to play either Herman Barron or Herman Kester Thursday if I get through—and they're plenty tough when you've only got 18 holes to maneuver in," Nelson gloomed.

The tournament medalist, big Jim Ferrier, erstwhile Australian now of San Francisco, was matched against Sam Schneider of Houston, Texas, in a lower bracket feature.

Ferrier shattered par and P. G. A. records yesterday with a nine-under-par 29-34-63, which, with his previous day's 71 gave him a medal score of 134.

The old mark was held jointly by Fred Morrison of San Francisco and Frank Moore, Overland, Mo., with 136.

All the name players got through the qualifying round.

Postwar Realities Crush Vet's Hopes

By RUTH MILLETT NEA Staff Writer

The veteran who was going to "start anew" when the war was over is finding it pretty tough going.

The business of professional man who was going to move to a different town—or perhaps even to a different section of the country—is faced with the problem of trying to find both office-space and living-quarters for his family. If he has both in the old home-town, he often decides he had better stay there, even though he swore not to when he was overseas and the post-war dream-world looked like the perfect chance for making a new start.

The veteran with a family who wants to take advantage of the GI Bill of Rights to further his education is finding he can't make it on the money allowed him by the government, unless he has a nice bank-account or relatives who are willing to care for the children while his wife works. The high cost of living makes the married veteran's $90 a month look smaller and smaller.

Hence many a GI who thought of "after the war" as a brave new world in which he would have his chance is going back to the same old job he had before the war, or is giving up his dream of fitting himself for a new kind of work.

THE COURAGE IS THERE

And it's not always because he lacks the courage to make a change. Usually it is because he is faced by such choices as these:

Going alone to a new place to make a start, leaving his family behind—or keeping the family together by staying on in the old and think it over . . . !

A new school term is about to begin. Hundreds and thousands of eager eyed boys and girls soon will be over-flowing sidewalks and darting thoughtlessly out into traffic. It is only because their youthful exuberance sometimes makes them forget the danger that lurks in all streets.

Let every motorist in our communities make a pledge to be on the alert from now on . . . to assume some share of the responsibility for keeping our youngsters from being hurt.

for the sake of our children
DRIVE CAREFULLY!

Mr. Motorist . .

You're only one of the people we're appealing to, in an effort to keep our communities' school children free of accidents during the coming school year. But you are the one who must be most alert, conscientious and cautious--because you are at the wheel! Do your part--drive slow to drive safe. And we'll get the school children and their parents --the traffic police and school monitors to back you up!

Legionnaires To Install Officers

Lou J. Roberts, Borger, past state commander of the American Legion, will have charge of the installation of new officers of the Kerley-Crossman post of the American Legion here tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Legion-VFW hall.

J. M. Turner, veteran of World War I, will be installed as post commander, succeeding E. J. Dunigan. Turner was elected commander at a meeting held August 8.

Other officers to be installed include: R. A. Gunn, first vice commander; Jeff D. Bearden, second vice commander; Harry Kelley, third vice commander; Ray L. Salmon, adjutant; Alie Barnett, finance officer; Paul D. Hill, chaplain; Jack Graham, service officer, and W. R. Stuckey, sergeant-at-arms.

Several out-of-town Legion officials are expected to attend.

HOLDING THE BAG HAYS, Kans. (AP)—Mrs. Van Hartman was mystified when she reached into her ice box for a sack of eggs and pulled out a bag of silver coins and pennies.

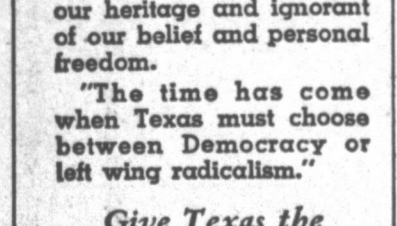

Just then her father, R. S. Maxwell, telephoned to ask anxiously if she had carried home the Lutheran church collection the night before by mistake.

He had concealed the money in the bag, and next morning found himself counting eggs instead of cash.

Vote for BEAUFORD JESTER for GOVERNOR

In his opening speech in the second primary campaign, Beauford Jester declared:

"The principal issue in this campaign is whether the government of Texas shall be conducted according to Texas tradition, or according to the tactics of forces unfamiliar with our heritage and ignorant of our belief and personal freedom.

"The time has come when Texas must choose between Democracy or left wing radicalism."

CIO Members Asked To Vote Saturday DALLAS (AP)—W. Don Ellinger, secretary of the Dallas county CIO political action committee, announced 10,009 postcards will be mailed today asking members to vote in the Saturday run-off election.

Ellinger said a list of candidates would be carried on the card but no endorsements of candidacies would be made.

This possibility was fully reviewed by President Truman and his state, war and navy chiefs at a White House meeting last week.

The diplomatic official gave this account of the way American policy on the Dardanelles had taken shape.

The United States has opposed where it could — but generally had to be content with watching with misgiving — the extension of Russian communist domination over eastern Europe.

The present difficulties with Poland, Yugoslavia and other Soviet dominated nations are regarded here as part of the general pattern of the struggle between the Soviet Union and the western powers resulting from what American officials regard as Soviet aggressiveness.

With regard to Turkey Turkey has a legitimate interest in the Dardanelles — an interest first recognized in a 1774 treaty with the Ottoman empire which gave the Russians certain rights in the strategic waterway.

Ever since, the Russians have sought periodically to increase their Dardanelles privileges. Thus their latest move to gain some form of military council is based on a century and a half of Czarist foreign policy.

What Moscow proposed to Ankara was that Russia and Turkey share in the defense of the Straits. It was this to which American policy shapers emphatically object, even though they are willing to grant Russia many special privileges short of military control.

They contend that in this air age the Russians could not possibly hope to defend the straits by placing fortresses on its shores. They note that the straits were closed in the last war by German occupation of the Aegean islands.

Thus, in the American view, this leaves only one way to defend the straits. That way is to occupy all of Turkey in addition to holding strategic Balkan positions. And this appears to be the American as-

THE STORY: They brought Miss Charlotte into the hospital after the Mrs. Unconscious and suffering from shock, she looked just as beautiful as she had that eventful summer 10 years before.

It was then that I first saw Charlotte Brent and in the delightful shock of her loveliness, I very nearly did spill the milk.

She was coming along the upper hall on her way downstairs and she stopped to greet me, to smile her charming smile and say, "You're Cecelia, aren't you? I hope you'll like us."

That was all, and she continued her way downstairs; but I walked straight past Mrs. Fitzgerald's door and traveled the length of the hall, tingling from head to toe at having been spoken to by such an exquisite creature.

I was still fully in a trance when I finally retraced my steps and knocked at the door of the sick room. It was opened by the current nurse, looking decidedly cross. I later learned that her patient had just thrown a hot water bag at her for the third time that day.

I glanced timidly in the direction of the huge carved walnut bed. There she lay, the lady of the house, frail and yellow-white, with sunken cheeks and closed eyes set in great dark hollows. I stood silent, looking at her with my heart filled with pity.

I was suddenly aware that her eyes had opened and that they were jet black and piercing, and seemed to be glaring at me.

In a husky but authoritative voice, holding more than a hint of brogue, she demanded to know who I was. And my pity changed at once to a feeling that was almost fright.

"It's the girl Ellen brought to help her," said the nurse. "What did she say your name was? Oh, yes, Cecelia, Cecelia Hart, Ellen's cousin, you know. Now please drink this while it's hot, Mrs. Fitzgerald."

The old lady waved the tray away impatiently.

Passage through the Straits for warships not belonging to the Black Sea powers shall not be permitted except in cases specially provided for.

Acheson handed the note to Fedor Orlov, Russian chargé d'affaires in Washington, on Monday. In accordance with diplomatic courtesy however, its contents were not disclosed officially until noon today.

The note itself was drafted only after consultations with the British. Copies were sent to Britain, France, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia, and Romania who were, along with Japan, signatories to the Montreux Convention under which the Straits are now controlled.

Even as the strain of relations intensified from Trieste to the Black Sea, the navy announced that two of its top ranking admirals had left for Europe on a "routine inspection tour" that will include Mediterranean areas.

They are Adm. Marc A. Mitscher acting commander of the Atlantic fleet, and Vice Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, deputy chief of naval operations.

Leaves From a Correspondent's Life Notebook

By IRENE ANGERSTEIN BERLIN (AP)—The big men on the campus of what's left of battered Berlin university are not known for their football or soccer prowess, but by the political parties to which they belong.

The contrast between the university itself and American schools is the manner in which party politics infiltrates into every dusty corner of the German institution.

Attendance at the three-quarter damaged university brings to some 3,000 earnest German students not only the lessons taught in books, but those which are learned in the rough and tumble politics of present-day Germany.

"Sororities? What are they?" asked a young co-ed in faded blue overalls who was pushing a heavy wheelbarrow full of rubble. She was just completing her 86th hour helping to remove debris from the school grounds; she had 114 hours to go.

The most fortunate students have their own books; other lucky ones have been able to bribe the toothless old "librarian" who guards the blackened 50,000 volumes stacked haphazardly in a damp, low-ceilinged cellar; the unlucky have only their classroom lecture notes.

No part of the student body are freshmen, the average student is 25 years old; all of them have 12 years of isolation from the rest of the world to make up.

More than half the students observe political developments with more vigilance than these students. To them the present public emphasis on the "new democracy" is just so much window dressing.

"In reality," said one intense student in speaking of the older generation, "they are still the same unteachable, one-sided, hypocritical bunch they have been for the past 12 years."

"Teach us all systems, not just one, and let us judge through our knowledge," they beg their professor although with little hope. As one student put it: "Our present teachers are such lush parasites they never had to join the party because the Nazis never considered them worthy to hold teaching jobs."

The students concede they are too serious, but they remind you that they live in serious times. "Dancing is fine for young people who feel secure in the future; we do not," they add.

Amazing Escape Nets 10 Hours of Freedom DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Robert Hendrickson, 21, of Philadelphia, enjoyed only 10 hours freedom after making what was described as "the most amazing escape" from Bucks county prison.

Hendrickson, charged with car theft, broke out of a solitary confinement cell, went through a steel mesh grating and a window, wriggled his 170 pounds through a hole five-and-one-half by 13 inches, and climbed over a 10-foot barbed wire fence and a 31-foot wall.

Warden Earl D. Handy said Hendrickson was recaptured five miles from the jail. He was sitting in a parked car waiting to call on a girl friend.

CHICAGO WOLF (AP)—Sam Pecoraro, Chicago park district official, reports his 150 male life guards frequently are lured into the water by fake screams of help from men trying to attract one of the 56 women guards.

The latter complain that sometimes women bathers pull the same stunt for male guard's benefit.

The guards of both sex are getting sick of it, Pecoraro said.

Texas Today

By JACK RUTLEDGE AP Staff Writer In the old days, it says here in the book, campaigning for public office was a simple thing. A candidate would amble into a town, climb on a platform that could be and sometimes was a stump and begin orating with all the fervor possible.

Today, campaigning is hounded by all the complexities of this technocratic age. Take Beauford Jester's campaign for governor. We take Jester because we happen to know at first hand how it's handled.

First, an itinerary is planned far in advance. This is arranged by experts who study carefully where he should appear. Most profitably. Aided by his waste ammunition in a place the votes are enched?

Hotel arrangements are made for the party. That's a major problem in itself. Then it's necessary to get official okay on a place the candidate will speak. This is usually the courthouse lawn in most smaller cities.

Then there's transportation to be arranged. Jester's party jams like a parade. A minor traffic jam can be created in smaller communities when it hits town.

There's the advance car, that is called the green hornet. It goes ahead, verifies reservations, makes last minute plans. There's the sound truck, white-bodied with red and black loud-speakers on top. Arrangements must be made to hook it up with microphones and all.

There's a big bus, called the Blue Goose, which carries some reporters and attendants. There's Jester's own coupe driven by his Major Dommo. There's Ken McClure's Yellow Hornet. There are usually a flock of cars owned by newsmen.

Speeches that go on the air must be checked by lawyers first with Jester, checked by McClure for radio timing, rehearsed, mimeographed for the papers.

It's important to be on schedule. To do this, cars are checked carefully, everyone has to get up at dawn, travel hard, stay up late. The candidate himself takes the worst beating. He has to keep his coat on and look his best despite

County Grand Jury Is Taking Recess

The Gray county grand jury recessed subject to call yesterday without returning indictments on any of the eight cases up for investigation.

District Attorney Walter Rogers said today, however, that all the charges are still under probe by the jurors.

Under law the tenure of present grand jury extends until Saturday, September 21 unless it is dismissed earlier by District Judge W. R. Earling.

The next term of district court is scheduled for Monday, September 23.

BAD BARGAIN

The right of veto, says Trygve Lie, is "the price . . . which the United Nations paid for big power collaboration. In return, the nations of the world expected and demanded one thing from the Big Five: they required that the big powers would seek and find agreement among themselves."

Well, the nations of the world didn't get their money's worth. They didn't get collaboration or agreement among the great powers. They were even cheated out of an unofficial guarantee that the veto would not be used "willfully to obstruct" the Security Council's operations, and that it would be employed only in a crisis where approval of the council's majority wishes might lead to war.

Instead, they have seen the Russian Security Council representative, Mr. Gromyko, veto the potentially powerful, peace-protecting council into a state of virtual impotence. Russia, instead of saving the veto for a crisis, has exercised that right five times in six months, and has threatened its use on two other occasions.

The climax came, of course, when Mr. Gromyko used the veto three times in the stormy council session which ended in disagreement and an indefinite recess. Mr. Gromyko, ostensibly protesting majority proposals for action in the Spanish question, actually did more. He vetoed once more the idea of majority rule. He vetoed away any semblance of authority in the almost powerless general assembly. He even insisted on the right to veto the question of whether matters before the council are subject to veto.

What next? Guillermo Belt, Cuba's representative in the UN assembly, has said that he will try to call a conference of all UN members in an effort to eliminate the veto power. It was inevitable that one of the smaller nations would make this proposal sooner or later. And it is probably just as well that Mr. Gromyko's abuse of his veto power has forced the showdown early in the second year of the UN's existence.

It seems unlikely that Mr. Belt will get very far with his idea. At least one might guess, from Russian policy in the past year, that the USSR might walk out of the United Nations rather than give up this right.

But suppose this highly desirable miracle should take place. Would it solve everything? The chances do not seem very hopeful. We need only look at the recurrent and largely unproductive meetings of the Big Four foreign ministers to see that serious disagreements would not be eliminated. Mr. Molotov can be just as adamant without a veto as can Mr. Gromyko with that weapon in his pocket.

For whatever the rules, it seems that big-power agreement is the only hope, however it may be achieved. The situation in the Security Council and the Big Four meetings are identical in essence. And the only visible solution lies in the long and painful process of attrition by which some minor differences among the foreign ministers have already been adjusted.

In Hollywood

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
NEA Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, (NEA)—Hello, December 14th," Carroll Richter said.

Old December 14th, that's us, folks. To this fellow Richter, people are just dates. Even Marlene Dietrich.

He told December 27th—er, Miss Dietrich, that is—to stay home on August 26.

"But," protested the lady, "I cannot tell my producer that I am not coming to work today because my astrologer doesn't want me to."

"You'll save him money if you do," Richter said.

"Oh . . . poor!" laughed the silly lass.

So she went to work anyway. And what happened? She broke her ankle and wound up in the hospital, that's what.

"See?" Richter said.

Creepy column, isn't it?
A SCIENTIST, NO LESS

Now, Richter does not profess to tell fortunes. He merely calculates the chances according to astrology, which to him is science.

We wouldn't know what astrology is, but the charts, tables, and sheets full of mathematical problems with which we found him surrounded in his cool little house in the Hollywood hills convinced us that he wasn't tossing off his auguries the way Lou Costello dopes horse-races.

We bring him to you today by

Peter Edson's Column:

ABOUT VETS' HOSPITAL SITUATION

WASHINGTON, (NEA)—Within the past few weeks the war department has made a series of announcements on its hospital situation which at face value does not make sense.

First, it is announced the closing of Ashford General Hospital, formerly the old Greenbrier hotel at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. The army paid more than three million dollars for this 6,600-acre resort and put another couple million dollars into improvements. Now it is offered for sale as surplus. It is one of three big hotels taken over by the war department for use as hospitals during the war.

Next, the war department announced the closing of three more army general hospitals as of Sept. 30. They are located at Framingham, Mass., Galesburg, Ill., and Springfield, Mo.

Finally, it is announced that the Corps of Engineers had let contracts for seven new veterans' hospitals, at a cost of 38 million dollars. They are to be located at Wilmington, Seattle, Shreveport, Omaha, Wilkes-Barre, Fresno, and Big Springs, Texas.

This seems to be kicking the taxpayers around something awful, and maybe it is. Why build a new vet hospital when the army general hospitals are being closed and sold at surplus? But the war department answers add up to make a definite picture of the vet situation today.

MANY WARTIME HOSPITALS WERE POORLY BUILT

way of fulfilling our daily duty of telling you what makes the wheels go round in Hollywood. Without the word from Richter, a good many of the A-No. 1 wheels won't even budge.

He dispatches a page of astrological analysis each day to scores of top-notch stars, producers, writers, and directors. And he gets flash phone calls from his clients at all hours of the day and night.

Richter is so modest that we practically had to sit on his chest to get a story out of him. He won't let us use the names of many of his clients—only those who have themselves publicly revealed that they go to him.

Dietrich, Maria Montez, Jean Pierre Aumont, Garbur Bey, Ann Southern, Jean Gabin, Maria Manning, Bob Sterling, Susanna Foster, and Erich Maria Remarque are on the list.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS

The way Richter figures it, a fellow's good days and bad days, talents, hazards and opportunities are written in the stars. Either you take your best bet or you don't. If you act in accordance with the heavenly portents, you're okay; if you don't—sings!

Hollywood's favorite watcher of the skies got into astrology somewhat to his own amazement. A Philadelphia Mainliner whose family since 1828, he was a practicing lawyer when he met the famous Evangeline Adams.

She did his horoscope, told him he'd make a pretty good little astrologer himself. Richter just laughed—and a few weeks later he was studying the stuff at her feet.

Hollywood people aren't his only distinguished devotees. Some are the stars. Two are admirals, and one's a general.

During the war the admirals told him that his horoscopes definitely influenced their tactics. No offense to astrology, but—well, personally, we're just as glad we didn't know about that at the time.

Many wartime general hospitals were of temporary construction. They are not fireproof. They are no good as permanent hospitals. These temporary hospitals are being turned over to the war assets administration for disposal as surplus property as fast as they're vacated.

The National Housing agency is getting most of them. It moves them to sections for temporary housing wherever possible. Otherwise, it knocks down and tries to salvage the lumber.

More permanent wartime hospital facilities are being turned over to state and local governments. Massachusetts took over the army hospital at Camp Miles Standish, valued at a million dollars. The state is spending five million dollars more to make it modern.

Many wartime general hospitals were built in remote locations, they were built near old training areas, to meet wartime needs. It's difficult for relatives and friends to visit these spots today. And they're so far away from metropolitan centers that medical specialists in the big medical schools and clinics are not available for consultation in complicated cases and cases involving difficult surgery.

The entire load formerly carried at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., can now be transferred to Walter Reed hospital in Washington. It's in a much better location, more convenient for visits from veterans' relatives and close to the big Eastern universally medical centers. THE ARMY HAS CLOSED 37 GENERAL HOSPITALS

During the war the army built or acquired 60 general hospitals at a total cost of 248 million dollars. This does not include the several hundred training-camp hospitals, most of which will be closed.

Of the 60 wartime general hospitals, 23 are still active. They represent an investment of 82 million dollars. When the army gets shaken down, it will have 12 or 15 general hospitals.

The war department plans to build only one new general hospital at Ft. Totten, N. Y., to provide a needed hospital near the port of New York.

Twenty-one wartime general hospitals costing 37 million dollars are being disposed of as surplus property. Final decision has not been made on three others, representing an investment of 10 million dollars. By 13 hospitals costing 59 million dollars have been turned over to the Veterans' Administration. So the investment isn't completely lost.

The Veterans' Administration has an 800-million-dollar hospital-building program. It will build 78 new hospitals at a cost of 771 million dollars. It will make additions costing 68 million dollars at 42 of its existing hospitals.

The Veterans' Administration now has 106 hospitals. When this program is completed, there will be nearly 150,000 beds available for veterans requiring hospital care.

WASHINGTON

By GLENN BABB
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
(Subbing for Mackenzie)

All the noisy acrimony of the Paris peace conference has been concerned with trifles compared with the clash of wills between the western powers and Russia. The great powers are locked in a test of strength and nerves over one of the oldest issues of world politics, the Dardanelles.

The issue is this: Russia has served demands on Turkey, the guardian of the Straits—besides the Dardanelles these include the Bosphorus and Sea of Maras—which neither Turkey nor the western powers find acceptable. There are, first, that the Black Sea powers alone take over control of the Straits and, second, that Russia and Turkey jointly assume their defense.

The Black Sea powers are Bulgaria, Romania, Russia and Turkey. Since the first two are firmly in the Russian orbit and seem destined to remain there, Turkey would become a permanent minority of one in any Dardanelles councils. And the second demand would mean that Russia would move in alongside Turkey in military occupation of the shores of the Straits. The junior partner in such an arrangement would have little chance to hold his own.

The United States, Britain and France have ranged themselves behind Turkey in opposing the thrust through the Straits. They are opposing all Russian desires, however. They are willing to alter the existing regime for control of the Straits, embodied in the Montreux convention of 1936, so as to considerably facilitate the movement of Russian and other warships and merchantmen between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. But they want to do this within the framework of the United Nations and the Montreux convention. And the United States for the first time is ready to share responsibility for a plan of peaceful control of the Dardanelles.

The question worrying the other capitals is how much in earnest is Stalin in his demands, how far is Stalin prepared to go in pressing them, whether this means a showdown or just the beginning of bargaining. The answer may mean more to the prospects of world peace than anything achieved at Paris.

AN APT CHOICE
(The Chicago Tribune)

Lionel Barrymore was denied the role of Franklin D. Roosevelt in a forthcoming movie because of the objections of the Roosevelt family. Raymond Massey, who distinguished himself in the role of Abraham Lincoln, turned down the chance to play Mr. Roosevelt.

Godfrey Tearle has been chosen for the part. His photograph shows he resembles the late President. In addition he is a Britisher. It would have been inappropriate to have an American in the role, especially an American who endeared himself by playing Abraham Lincoln.

Making of the new movie can proceed with confidence that the principal actor will be able to portray the essence of Mr. Roosevelt's character—his devotion to the British empire. Out of the devotion came our participation in the second World War, which cost more than a million casualties—250,000 dead and 650,000 wounded, plus material wealth too great to be counted or restored by living men.

Mr. Roosevelt was the most valuable subject of the king in the whole long history of England. It would have been unthinkable to have any but a British actor enact the story of how he served king and country with unswerving loyalty, until the day of his death.

Mr. Wallace has never forgiven the big-city politicians who forced him off the national ticket in 1944, and his hatred is directed principally against Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan. The commerce chief aims to rehabilitate himself by trying to win second place on the slate two years hence, if President Truman runs again.

Only his closest advisers believe that he can regain the No. 2 spot on a ticket headed by Mr. Truman. In view of the politicians' superstition about the need for a nicely balanced slate, geographically speaking, they do not expect the democrats to hoop up a man from Missouri.

It is because of this consideration that certain Truman friends view Mr. Wallace's more recent moves, gestures and demonstrations with something like alarm. They figure that the cabinet member has his eyes on first rather than second place. They also note that, although regarded as the only hang-over Roosevelt liberal, he seems to be courting the conservatives rather than the leftists.

CENTER—The conservative wing of the Truman presidential family seems to be riding high around Washington at this particular moment, although its temporary ascendancy gives no assurance that economic or political exigencies will not force the administration to shift to the left almost overnight.

For the moment, however, the chief executive has moved closer to the center than F. D. R. ever stood except during the war crisis, when he abandoned his reform crusades in favor of mobilizing industry for the winning of the war.

Mr. Truman's recent appointments to the Economic Advisory Council established by the so-called Full Employment Act, to the OPA Decentral board and keep positions in the Budget Bureau and the labor department have acclaimed by such organizations as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers.

They have evoked no eulogies from the liberals and leftists. ENTERPRISE—With respect to an cies may have on so-called satellite

The new Truman-Byrnes foreign policy is based on that discovery. Even if the American Secretary of State wins his demand that United Nations conference recommendations be referred to the Council of Foreign Ministers by a majority rather than a two-thirds vote, his victory will not affect final decisions. The Council will have the last say, and in that body Moscow still retains the veto power.

But Mr. Byrnes figures he will force Russia to act more reasonably if he can obtain full and free debate on these questions, and if he can reveal the Kremlin's inconsistencies, stalling and shiftness. Similarly, General Marshall and Ambassador Stuart placed the blame for their failure to achieve peace in China on the reds. Bernard M. Baruch, in dealing with the problem of atom bomb control has also forced the Russians to accept responsibility for sabotaging any plan to outlaw and internationalize this fearful weapon.

The Paris peace conference seems settling toward failure in so far as the atom bomb problem is concerned. But if the Byrnes strategy succeeds, Moscow will emerge with a friendly friend in the world scene for a few small and weak satellite powers.

Common Ground

By R. C. HOLES

Closed Shop Not The Trouble

Many people think the labor problem would be solved if we eliminated the closed shop. That is not the case.

The reduction in production is just as harmful to society whether men voluntarily combine to eliminate competition, or whether they are forced into the combination. In fact, it would seem that it is even more outrageous to have men voluntarily join together and attempt to get a fictitious wage than it is to have them forced into a combination by a labor union of the state and compelled to get a fictitious wage. The results are just as harmful one way as the other.

And because men are prevented from forcing other men into combinations to rob owners by excluding them from the right to pursue happiness does not lessen the crime. Every labor union's objective is to get a special privilege, to get a monopoly wage, to get more for doing a job than other people are able to get to the same skill and effort.

If this were not true, men are not practicing a united effort in order to coerce an employer into entering an alliance with them to rob the customer.

Although some unions are not able to get as much of a fictitious wage as they would like to, they are just as guilty as if they were completely successful and were able to establish a monopoly wage to the uttermost. A man who is caught in the dark with a lighted match near a building saturated with oil, ready to light it, is as guilty as if he were successful in burning down the building.

Just so the unions that are attempting to exclude other people from voluntarily competing are helping establish values as just as guilty whether they are completely successful or whether they are only attempting to do so are an attempt.

So, the next time you hear a man saying the trouble with labor unions is the closed shop, remind him that the principle is exactly the same whether it is a closed shop or a voluntary conspiracy.

As evidence of this, look at what the railroad unions were able to do to the country, and they do not have what is commonly known as a closed shop. That is, men voluntarily agreed to fix prices and prevented other people from having the right to compete and help.

The problem is to get people to understand that in the long run even if we believe in a conspiracy to rob the customer, it does no harm as if the attempt is made by way of the closed shop.

Striking Against Individuals, Not The Government

People seem to think there is a lot of difference as to whether a strike occurs when the government manages a business or when it is privately owned and managed. It makes no real difference whether the government or private individuals are managing a business; the strike is against individuals in either case.

The numerous strikes in the first half of this year have been against the people. Strikes have been one of the major causes of our inability to get goods.

Reports show that automobile manufacturers for the first six months of 1946 produced only 33 per cent as many automobiles as they did the first six months of 1945. Bituminous coal produced for the first half of 1946 was 22 per cent below the tonnage mined for the first half of last year.

For the first five months of 1946 the revenue to miles of freight on all Class 1 roads was 27 per cent below that of the corresponding period in 1945. The net operating income for the first four months of this year of all Class 1 roads was 65 per cent below that of the same months last year.

Copper production for the first five months of 1946 was 47 per cent as much as in the corresponding period of 1945.

And whom does this reduced production hurt if it does not hurt every man in the United States? There is no such thing as a strike that is not against individuals. A strike is a conspiracy to make things scarce in order to get a fictitious reward for keeping things scarce.

Gracie Reports
By GRACIE ALLEN

Maybe, after all things are creeping back to normal, I recently saw a picture of President Truman taken with three Indians in costume. My goodness, it brought to my mind the good old days when a President of the United States wasn't regarded as being officially in office until he'd been photographed wearing a war bonnet and surrounded by Redskins.

President Truman was presented with a peace pipe by his Indian friends, and I hope he sends it to the Paris peace conference which is beginning to sound like Custer's last stand. When the Indians made peace they simply puffed on the pipe but when we make peace we puff and puff with lots more burping and puffing.

George says the trouble with present-day international relations is that the diplomats put away the peace pipe and start swinging the lead pipe instead.

That certain Truman friends view Mr. Wallace's more recent moves, gestures and demonstrations with something like alarm. They figure that the cabinet member has his eyes on first rather than second place. They also note that, although regarded as the only hang-over Roosevelt liberal, he seems to be courting the conservatives rather than the leftists.
