Americans Hail Queen Elizabeth

By UNITED PRESS Spectacle-loving Americans gobbled up a rich feast of coronation news, telecasts and broadcasts Tuesday.

And from Manhattan to California many of them hailed Queen Elizabeth's great day with cocktail parties, dinners and dances.

The same millions who determinedly stuck by their TV sets as last summer's national political conventions dragged into the pre-dawn hours, were expected to watch films of the London pageantry.

Many saloon keepers planned to keep their sets tuned to coronation films all day, and along Chicago's West Madison Street it was possible to grab a bar stool before breakfast—about 7 a.m.

He Stands Quietly Prince Charles, a little boy of four dressed in his Sunday best, shared with his mother her greatest moment Tuesday.

The boy who some day will be king watched, his eyes wide with wonder at the pageantry before him, as the Archbishop of Canterbury placed the heavily-jeweled St. Edward's crown on his mother's head. It was the supreme moment in the two and one-half hour coronation ceremony.

Prince Charles came to Westminster Abbey in a car with his nurse shortly before Elizabeth II received "the eminance of her majesty," the holy oil and the royal regalia, including the crown.

Those near the royal box in the ancient abbey stood back a pace as the small figure in white silk shirt and white sport pants made his way haltingly toward the queen mother, his grandmother.

Charles' hair, blond as his father's, was brushed smooth and parted straight as a railroad track. He was just tall enough to see over the balustrade of the royal box to the coronation theater below.

The small boy stood quietly by his grandmother most of the time, his hands folded or else clutching the railing.

Once Elizabeth looked up, hoping to catch her son's eye. But Charles was prepared to put the crown on her head.

Smiles Biggest Smile And then Charles looked around at his mother, smiled his biggest smile. Those nearby saw Elizabeth's face flush with joy.

Near the end of the abbey ceremony, Charles touched the queen mother's arm, and she bent over. He whispered and moved restlessly. His grandmother nodded and guided him to his nurse.

Prince Charles had gone ... perhaps for the same reason boys in all history have: "Please teacher!"

Duke Sees Event On TV PARIS, June 2 —UP— The Duke of Windsor fought back tears in a darkened room, Tuesday, and prayed silently beside his duchess for his 27-year-old niece, Queen Elizabeth II, as she was presented in Westminster Abbey with the crown he renounced for love.

Like millions of other Britons, the Duke and the Duchess of Windsor, who were in London for the coronation of their daughter-in-law, Queen Elizabeth II, were watching the ceremony on television in the company of friends at a quiet party honoring the queen.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor sat close together. Occasionally the duke broke in on the televised voices to explain in a husky voice some intricate detail of colorful regal ceremonies he last saw in 1911 when, as a boy, he was smuggled with his brother "Bertie" (the late King George VI) into the coronation of their father, King George V.

A lot of water has passed under the bridge in these 41 years," he said. "A lot of water, including two world wars."

When the queen knelt before the archbishop, the Duke slumped in his chair and folded his hands in prayer with her.

Stolen Automobile Recovered Here An automobile reported stolen in Amarillo was found by Pampa police at 2:04 a.m. today, parked in the 200-block of North Somerville — in front of a meter which read "violation."

A maroon, four-door sedan, it was reported stolen by Dumas May 28, according to Police Chief Jim Conner.

Local officials late this morning were attempting to determine the identity of the vehicle's owner.

Britons Climb Mt. Everest KATMANDU, Nepal, June 2 —UP— The British Union Jack waved Tuesday where man never had set foot before — atop Mount Everest, 29,002 feet above sea level.

E. P. Hillary, a New Zealand beekeeper, and Tenzing Norgay, a rugged Sherpa guide, reached the summit of the previously un conquered world's highest mountain last Friday and planted the British flag.

They sent down a signal that "all is well," that man finally had won his greatest physical victory over nature — and the elements.

Col. H. J. C. Hunt, leader of the British expedition, immediately dispatched a runner to Katmandu, nearest town of Everest's dangerous slopes, with the glad news that the mission had been accomplished before Queen Elizabeth II's coronation.

It took the runner three days to reach here. The news quickly was flashed to Buckingham Palace and Britain's young Queen was awakened to hear it only a few hours before she was scheduled to begin the greatest day of her life.

Churchill Elated Prime Minister Winston Churchill was "stunned."

"My congratulations on this memorable British achievement in which the whole world has been interested so many years," Churchill said in a message to the climbers.

The victorious expedition twice previously had assaulted the king of the Himalayan Mountains and the third attempt was a race against time.

Hunt's climbers used a route which had been pioneered by another unsuccessful British expedition led in 1951 by Eric Shipton, who favored the use of small parties.

Employe Injured In Contact With 7,620-Volt Line A Pampa power employe suffered second- and third-degree burns this morning as he was working on a 7,620-volt line, an accident that resulted in the dosing of some lights for five minutes in the north part of town.

Robert Shugart, 1041 S. Somerville, atop a power pole at the Pampa sub-station of Southwestern Public Service Co., was holding which had been pioneered by another unsuccessful British expedition led in 1951 by Eric Shipton, who favored the use of small parties.

While Shugart was holding the jumper, Floyd Lassiter, crew foreman, was using it in place. Cooper said, explaining that Shugart must have touched the brace.

Lights in the north part of town were shut off. Cooper continued while members of the crew got Shugart down from the pole. The sub-station is located on Ballard, just south of Tyng on the west side of the street.

Hospital authorities expected the injured man to remain in the hospital for several days.

Weatherman Sees More Hot Weather More sizzling weather—and no rain in sight—is the broken-record weather forecast for Top o' Texas today.

Monday's temperature saw the thermometer rise to 88 degrees in Pampa and the mercury was inching up to 88 degrees at 11 a.m. today.

The highest in the state recorded Monday was 107 at Presidio. It was 102 at Alice and 101 at Childress. Galveston recorded the low of 85. Elsewhere, it was in the 90's.

County Livestock Arena In Offing Construction of a dual purpose county barn and livestock arena stood in the offing this morning if the City Commission will grant permission to the county to build it on Recreation Park.

The building it was disclosed, would be 200 by 60 feet, constructed at the north end of the park behind present buildings and would be used through the year by the county as a storage garage, repair shop, wash and grease rack for county equipment and for the two and three-day periods in February for the Junior livestock sale.

Clyde Carruth and Lynn Boyd, representing the Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Committee appeared before the City Commission in behalf of the project this morning, disclosing that the county commissioners have agreed "in principle" to constructing the combination barn and arena if the city will provide the property at Recreation Park.

Action on the question was tabled by the commission for further study.

Big 3 Meet Delayed PARIS, June 2 —UP— A foreign ministry spokesman said Tuesday that the conference of President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and the premier of France in Bermuda, scheduled for late this month, would be postponed several days at the request of the British government.

Officials said a delay of six or seven days was being considered.

PMA Leaders Select 10 ACP Practices Ten practices are listed tentatively for the Gray County Agriculture Conservation Program for 1954 following a called meeting of the county Production and Marketing Council.

Three practices on the list, according to Miss Evelyn Mason, PMA office manager, are not included in the national handbook as in previous years but will be recommended to state and national authorities by Area PMA Conservation Council.

The list, subject to revision by the state PMA office, includes construction of terraces, diversion terraces, erosion control dams, livestock water dams and sod waterways, seeding grasses, spraying sagebrush, furrowing pasture land and constructing spreader ditches.

The practices to be recommended for use by area farmers include control of bindweed, deep plowing and sub-soiling.

Definite plans for the 1954 program will follow further information from the state office, Miss Mason said.

Attending Monday's meeting were the three county committee members, Clyde Carruth, H. H. Keahy and J. E. Kirby, James Strawn of the Gray County Soil Conservation District, three county committee members from Panhandle and the Carson County office manager, Mayo Duke, three committee members from Clarendon and office manager, Miss Mildred Ritter, a soil conservation technician from Clarendon; Lester Young of the state PMA office in College Station; and Miss Mason.

Money Available For Negro Pool The $500 needed to purchase material for a wading pool for Negro children is now available, but the city has no place to construct the pool it was learned this morning during City Commission meeting.

This brought up the old haggle between the school board and the city over use of the old Carver School campus for a city park in The Flats.

A group of church women, City Manager B. H. Cruse reported, told him they would accept the offer if they could take place in the pool before any definite locale for the pool can be decided.

Another series of conferences between city and school officials will have to take place, said before any definite locale for the pool can be decided.

The school board in the past has offered the city the north half of the Carver campus, but the city wouldn't accept the offer unless the school board would deed the entire campus to the city.

TIE VOTE SEEN Annex Case Still Unsettled By City The City Commission split wide open in voting today on the annexation issue of the "island" in the northeast section of Pampa, resulting in denying the annexation for the time being.

The tie vote, 2-2, virtually left the question of whether the territory should be brought into the city or left out. However, the action did not slam the door on future possible annexation.

Commissioners W. B. Varnon and Frank Dial — in whose ward the territory lies — voted against the measure.

Mayor Tom Rose had to second Commissioner Gene Fatheree's motion in order to bring the vote to a head. The absence of Commissioner W. D. Varnon made it impossible to definitely pass or defeat the measure. However, since it was a tie, annexation at this time could not carry.

County Buys Tar Heater

Seal coating the Celanese Road can go ahead as scheduled now with the obtaining of a troublesome tar pot out of the way.

Following a four-hour haggling session among the commissioners yesterday, the court finally got together and voted to purchase a 600-gallon tar heater from Tom W. Carpenter Equipment Co., Amarillo. Optional equipment was included in the $2,674.50 bid by Carpenter. The apparatus will be used to patch the Celanese Road before Bell, Braden, Barker and Gilven move in to seal coat the 11.5-mile stretch running by the Celanese Plant. However, the county may have only enough money available to seal coat about nine miles at the price quoted by the Amarillo firm doing the job.

Orvil Thornburg, the low bidder at $9,290, was awarded the contract for paving the ramp, and two parking areas at Perry LeFors Field.

Shortly before 4 p. m., the commissioners adjourned to a county commissioner court and reconvened as a board of equalization to work on next year's taxes and budget.

Celanese Begins Acid Production

The Pampa plant of Celanese Corporation of America has begun production of propionic and butyric acid as part of a large-scale production program announced today by Richard W. Kimmiller, general manager of the chemical division of the company.

Celanese production of these chemicals is the result of the entirely new process developed by the chemical division research laboratory. This process involves a one-step oxidation of natural gas component to acetic, propionic and butyric acids and other chemicals yet to be announced.

Propionic and butyric acid offers useful modification of cellulose plastic. Other uses of these acids are in surface coating, lacquers, flavors and pharmaceuticals.

Driver Charged After Accident

A Pampa woman has two citations today, following a city accident in which total damages were estimated at $275.

Wilberine Redus, 30, of 1017 N. Somerville, was involved Monday noon in a collision with Ray L. Jones, 26, of 812 S. Cuyler, according to city police, and was cited for failing to grant the right of way and driving without an operator's license.

Miss Redus backed out from a curb on East Kingmill, west of Ballard, police said, and collided with the Jones vehicle.

Former Pampan Hurt In Fall From Horse

A former Pampan woman was reported in "serious" condition today in the Littlefield hospital, following a fall from a horse.

Mrs. Cleo Johnson, mother of Mrs. Orvil Diggs and O. D. Johnson, both of Pampa, was reported suffering from a cracked pelvis and possible internal injuries.

The accident occurred some 10 days ago.

Wheat meal is being used extensively in Japan and in several European countries. It has been estimated that one whole produces as much meal as 100 head of cattle.

Queen's Coronation

Corner and then to an alcove looking upon ancient King Edward's chair.

It was Prince Charles, four and one-half, brought to see his mother crowned as he, one day, may receive the same crown as the world's oldest monarchy.

Charles sat in wonder, his eyes transfixed on his mother.

Lashing wind and rain swept London during the night.

It drenched thousands who had "camped out" waiting the climactic moment when Elizabeth would pass in the procession to or away from the abbey.

Injured in Crush
Aid stations treated chilled victims of the weather at the rate of more than one a minute around dawn, but most of them thawed out quickly with a rub-down and coffee.

More than 100 were injured and nine were sent to hospitals when a crowd stampeded in Trafalgar Square when they thought a barrier was to be closed.

The solemnity at the abbey was in sharp contrast to the holiday spirit of the crowd which continued despite the gray, cold day and in sharp contrast to Elizabeth's own high spirits earlier.

Began Day Early
The queen began her day sharply on schedule, after being awakened earlier to the sound of a British expedition's conquest of Mt. Everest.

She arose for the day at 6:30 a. m. and promptly at 10:26, rode radiant and beautiful through the palace gates in the gold coach of state on her way to the abbey.

It was a day of magic.
To some it was a fairy tale brought to life. A handsome prince kneeling before his wife and swearing to be her "liege man of life and limb," sealing his pledge with a kiss.

To others it was a deeply moving religious moment, a queen anointed in holy oil and thereby sanctified in the eyes of God.

To still others it was a wild and gay carnival, a London brought to such electric excitement as had not been remembered since the years before the harsh ordeal of World War II and the grinding austerity that followed.

It marked Elizabeth's ascendency to a throne that still links more than 600 million subjects of Australia, Canada, Africa, and around the globe in a Commonwealth held together by this invisible thread of loyalty.

The great swarm of humanity had descended on the central London area throughout Monday night, equipped with thermos jugs and sandwiches, umbrellas and pillows. They sat on the curbs and slept in the parks long before richer folk made their way to stands where seats cost as much as 80 guineas ($240) and limousines crisscrossed their way to official stands seating 11,000.

The Processions
The first of nine processions to the Abbey began at 7:55 a. m. (12:55 a. m. cdt) when the Lord Mayor of London in his coach drove through the streets to the Abbey.

After him came the coach of the speaker of the House of Commons; members of the royal family; the motor car procession of visiting royalty and official representatives including Gen. George C. Marshall representing the United States.

Then one of the most colorful carriage processions of all—the exotically robed rulers of the colonies. In the first carriage rode the Queen of Tonga with the Sultan of Kelantan and then the Sultans of Zanzibar, Johore and Selangor.

The prime ministers of the Commonwealth followed and then the princes and princesses of blood royal and the Laudau bringing the Queen Mother Elizabeth and Princess Margaret.

Then, Elizabeth appeared with the Duke of Edinburgh at her side in the golden coach of state, drawn by eight massive grays. The coach wound through Trafalgar Square down to the Thames and thence to the Abbey.

In red velvet and ermine robes, Elizabeth stepped from the coach at the Abbey annex at 11 a. m. to be met by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, who had greeted her father on the same spot in 1937.

At 11:30 the Queen's procession moved slowly up the aisle of the Abbey, the six maids of honor in dresses of white satin embossed with gold.

Greeted by Choir Boys
First to greet the Queen were the choir boys of Westminster school. Their shrill voices were raised in the cry of "Vivat Elizabeth Regina" (long live Queen Elizabeth).

Then began the two and one-half hour ceremony of the coronation.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, together with the lord chancellor, the lord great chamberlain, the lord high constable, the earl marshal and the garter principal king at arms went to each side of the theater.

Released By Hospital

The Pampa youngster who was hit in the head with a baseball bat while playing in his school's playground is home from the hospital today, following a week's confinement.

J. P. Carlson Jr., 9-year-old son of J. P. Carlson, 112 N. Nelson, was injured near noon May 25 just after the bell had rung to bring the schoolchildren in from the Horace Mann School playground.

At first "somewhat hazy," young Carlson's condition became steadily better till Monday when he was dismissed from the hospital.

Hunt For Enemies

New York City has just witnessed a series of hectic public hearings put on by the House Committee on Un-American Activities — Chairman, Representative Harold H. Velde (R-Ill.).

The committee was digging into Communist penetration of the local theatrical, radio and television fields. No doubt the town will be buzzing for weeks with talk of "witch hunts," "McCarthyism," etc. — most of it artfully inspired by Reds and their sympathizers.

Are the three Congressional committees which are now fighting U. S. Communism actually carrying on witch hunts? If they were, it would be a crime against American liberties. The fact is that they aren't.

We'd better explain at this point what the three committees are, and the job each is trying to do.

There is Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's Government Operations Committee. It is digging chiefly into Red activities inside the government, with special reference at this time to the State Department setup inherited by the new Administration from Dean Acheson.

Senator William E. Jenner (R-Ind.) heads a Senate Internal Security subcommittee which at present is after Communists and fellow travelers in college faculties.

Representative Harold H. Velde, as stated above, is chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. This is a long standing congressional unit, fiercely hated and continuously denounced by leftists of all kinds — because its work down the years has been so effective in showing up such people for what they are.

The main object of all these running investigations is to dig out and expose Kremlin agents, American or foreign-born, wherever they have dug into sensitive spots in this country. Some of such spots are in the U. S. Government itself, the schools and colleges, various vital industries, important labor unions, and the big opinion influencing mediums — newspapers, magazines, theatres, movie studios, the radio and television industries.

Many active Reds are believed to be still entrenched in all these areas. There are also a lot of other people who joined the Communist Party or assorted Red-front groups when it was fashionable to do so, have now seen how deluded they were, and are most anxious to get off the hook.

They can do that, and the investigating committees are glad to help them do it.

Any disillusioned Red or fellow traveler can appear before one of these congressional groups, tell all he or she knows about the criminal Communist conspiracy in the United States, and forswear the Communist philosophy.

A person who goes through this procedure can have it all handled secretly if he wishes. Or he can make public renunciation of Communism if he prefers that.

In either case, he is treated with entire decency and dignity by the investigating committee; and only bigots or cowards will blacklist him after he is fully cleared.

How about people who are dragged into public appearances by the investigators' power of subpoena? That treatment is dealt out only to persons having long records as followers of the Treason Party line, and suspected by the probes of still toiling that line.

When such characters screech, scream, insult the investigators, and refuse to answer questions on constitutional grounds, the logical inference is that they are still Reds or near-Reds and are trying to martyrize themselves for the Communist cause.

If the general public draws this inference from such performances, who can blame it? As someone once observed, "If a guy acts like a duck, quacks like a duck, and runs around with ducks, I say he's a duck."

And if such persons bump into serious trouble with the law on account of having flouted a congressional investigating committee — well, the investigators are engaged in a deadly serious business, not playing a game.

Their job is to track down traitors and espionage agents manipulated from the Kremlin. These people's aim is to destroy the American form of government and turn all of us into slaves of a foreign power, that power being Soviet Russia. Some of our returning Korea war prisoners can tell us how it is to be a slave of Communists.

That's the long and the short of the "witch hunt" chatter. The "witch hunt" is really a hunt for traitors and spies, in a fight to keep America American.

Czech Steel Teeth

Cabled dispatches from Prague, Czechoslovakia, indicating that the new Czech Communist president, Antonin Zapotocky, has stainless steel teeth have intrigued dental authorities in this country.

Stainless steel teeth are entirely possible, for this material has been used for some time in making of partial plates, bridges and the clasping devices that are fitted around good teeth to hold the artificial teeth in place.

Stainless steel is harder and more flexible than gold or silver or other metals used in dental work. The stainless steel is usually employed in the parts that don't show.

German dentists may have used stainless steel in bridgework and plates before Americans caught on to it. But the general practice has been to make the false teeth themselves of porcelain.

For a Communist leader, the only advantage in having stainless steel teeth would be to help him utter the more biting words.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Experience With State Educator

Here is the last installment of the correspondence between Dr. Wallace H. Moore and myself in our attempt to find a satisfactory method of investigating whether tax supported schools are in agreement with the Golden Rule and whether or not they should be discontinued in private schools where substituted.

I am reproducing my letter to Dr. Moore and his final answer.

"Dear Dr. Moore:

"Thanks for your letter of May 8.

"I note you say that my proposal negates the rules and principles of debate.

"It does not interfere with any rules of debate or investigation aimed at ascertaining whether an act violates an axiom. The question and answer method is used by every seeker after understanding of moral and physical laws. Socrates was a master of this method of debate or investigation. The courts of justice use it by having the power to imprison a man for contempt of court for attempting to evade answering by long speeches of the subject.

"Since in non-legal discussion or debates there is no way to prevent either party from filibustering the point by making long speeches instead of coming to the point by answering the question asked, the only way that has ever been used to avoid this is to have both parties agree to a limited time for each answer.

"This method, contrary to your claim, has repeatedly been used in debates. A recent example was a debate on April 26, 1953 at Colorado Springs where State Representative Norman Enfield and Harry Hoiles both agreed in their agreement to debate to limit the answer to each question.

"Another recent case of a question and answer debate was last year at McAllen, Texas, where Judge Roy Hofheinz in debating the school question agreed to answer each question in one minute's time or pay $100 for each minute fraction thereof that he used more than the agreed minute to answer each question.

"My proposal did not limit your answers — it only required you to forfeit $25, a minute out of the $500 you were to receive for each minute of fraction thereof, you used more than a minute in answering each question. You could use 10 to 15 extra minutes and still have $250 or $125 left out of the $500 you are to get for one hour of your time.

"I know of no sincere person who believes that tax supported schools are a violation of the Golden Rule who would not be willing to limit his answers.

"I do not believe I, or whoever was interested, would gain any understanding by listening to a debate where one of the parties refused to limit the answer to each question. I am sure I would not get $500 worth of understanding, so I would not pay anything for such a method of evading questions. I never made any proposal to pay for a debate where answers were not limited.

"Every sincere person that I know always insists on some way of evading answering questions on moral subjects.

"Sorry that I have to classify you in that class since you will not agree to answer questions in a limited time and thus close up an escape from being obliged to answer questions for $500 for one hour's time.

"In all sincerity let's have 'light' on how best to promote education.

Yours very truly,

R. C. Hoiles

On May 14th Dr. Moore answered as follows:

"Dear Mr. Hoiles:

"Your letter of May 13, 1953 was received a little while ago. I gather from it that you do not wish to follow through with your challenge to a debate. So far as I am concerned your letter closes the matter. If and when you wish to sign the agreement forwarded to you, we can proceed with the decisions called for by the agreement.

"As to my sincerity, fortunately, you are not the judge. Sincerely yours,

WALLACE H. MOORE

How Do You Tell Sincerity?

It is hard to believe that any man who sincerely believes in what he is doing will not answer any and all questions about his acts. It is hard to see how a man can have very much faith in any state function when those who are engaged in it refuse for $500 to answer questions.

There is nothing more important than education. People are entitled to know about the sincerity and ability of state educators and what they consider the fundamentals of education. When public educators refuse to answer questions on conditions that restrict evasion it is hard to conceive how they can be judged sincere or people can have confidence in them.

Would a man buy a life insurance policy if the life insurance company refused to give him information about the net worth of the company?

Would a man put his money in a bank if the bank managers refused to give details as to how his money was used?

Would a man buy water for a 12-year period, as is the case in attendance in public schools, if the concern selling the water refused to let the water be analyzed?

There seems to be no more reason why a man should have confidence in public schools when those who are earning their living in it will not answer specific questions than there would be for a man to buy water that was not

National Whirligig... Positive Approach Sought To End 'Gov't. By Crisis'

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON, June 2 — If "normalcy" had not become such an abused and misunderstood word in American political thinking because of the Harding stigma, it would describe precisely the conditions which President Eisenhower and his top advisers seek to create and preserve for their first year of responsibility.

Although it constitutes a radical break from inaugural promises, it represents a positive rather than a negative approach from their viewpoint. It marks an end to "government by crisis," as the 1933-38 period was so frequently characterized.

Prospective and public spending, in the official estimate, will maintain the present level of economic activity through 1955, at least. This conclusion, which is based on a recent review of business and industrial factors, differs from earlier beliefs that there might be a recession next year.

That specter has now disappeared. But this comfortable situation could be affected adversely, if there is any abrupt or violent shift in legislative or administrative action simply for a politician's sake.

In short, the new slogan at Washington is: "Don't rock the boat or change course too quickly."

PLAN TO ADJOURN CONGRESS LATE JULY — This philosophy lies behind the plan to recess or adjourn Congress in late July with a minimum of new or provocative legislation. It is probable that the legislators will merely pass the necessary money bills, extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreement for one year and renew the Excess Profits Act. Both taxes and tariffs will undergo an intensive twelve-month study.

No explosive legislation in the economic or social field will be enacted, barring unexpected bipartisan revolts, there will be no revision of Taft-Hartley, no extension of Social Security coverage, no other welfare reforms, no attempt to tamper with the present agricultural arrangements.

Secretary George M. Humphrey may slow down his movement to boost interest rates on Federal issues, while he observes the results of his first deflationary trial runs. If prices and wages remain fairly stable, so will be. In fact, it was his suggestion that the ship of state drop anchor for a while.

CABINET FRIENDS — HELP — Wall Street friends of Eisenhower's "millionaire Cabinet" deserve an assist for underwriting the era of comparative calm at Washington. Their amicable and prompt settlement, or put money in a bank that would not answer questions about the company. It is unreasonable to assume that people should be consigned to buy education from men who have to evade, as Dr. Moore has evaded, when he found that he could not evade questions by making long speeches.

The more I come in contact with professional educators, the more I am convinced that we cannot reverse the trend toward state socialism and atheism so long as people are not awake to the fact that tax supported schools can only be operated by men who believe in some form of collectivism but do not let the public know their beliefs.

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JORAN, M.D.

An extremely interesting letter comes from Mr. G., who writes: "Recently, when a case of undulant fever was detected in our household, we tried to determine if our cow, whose milk we drank raw, could be the source of the infection. She had passed the standard county veterinarian's test for Bangs' disease less than a year before, and had not been in contact with other cattle since."

"We were discouraged, however, to find that our physician does not consider the standard test for Bangs' disease in cattle as satisfactory. Can you throw any light on this? Is there any general agreement on when (if ever) it is safe to use raw cow's milk?"

It is said that about five out of 100 of our cattle are infected with Bangs' disease. The blood test, which I presume is the standard test referred to in the inquiry, is of great value in identifying infected cattle and hogs. Nevertheless, it cannot be relied on absolutely. One report at hand says: "Attempts to control brucellosis in cattle and hogs by the blood agglutination test have been only fairly successful. The chief difficulty... has been that highly infectious animals in the incubating stage of the disease are sometimes left in the herds..."

In other words, the test cannot be considered completely reliable, though it is helpful. Brucellosis, of which there are several varieties, is a disease which attacks animals as well as human beings. It is estimated for example, that there are about 1,300,000 dairy cattle and 800,000 beef cows involved. No one knows how many human beings are affected with undulant fever, which is the principal human form of brucellosis.

For the control of brucellosis in cattle, certain legislation has been recommended. On the national level, it is suggested that the Secre-

Fair Enough... Government Shows Insecurity In Social Security Matter

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Mary D. Cain, of Summit, Miss., is contesting the newest phase of the Social Security Law, which requires some, but not all, self-employed persons to buy a problematical old-age pension. I recently met Mrs. Cain and found her to be a lady of the uncompromising temperament of Vivien Kellems, of Stonington, Conn., who has been fighting the withholding tax, and the Marshall girls, of Marshall, Tex., who refused to deduct the employees' or pay the employers' share of Social Security on domestic servants. She is a self-employed person, like Vivien and the Marshall girls, a pestiferous, unanswerable nuisance to the Internal Revenue.

The government's insecurity in these dealings is plainly shown by its failure to invoke the criminal penalties written by Congress. These defendants have gone as far as they could to show criminal intent. The law, which Mrs. Cain violated, says "any person who willfully fails to pay such tax shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both."

The government claimed that Mrs. Cain owed $41.32 for social security, as a self-employed person, in March 1952. She paid her income tax, but ignored the "self-employment" tax.

To frustrate the collectors she assigned her weekly paper, Summit Sun, to her niece, Mary Lou Butler, 20 years old, but retained the authority of editor and manager, without pay. Her husband runs an automobile shop and she runs their home in addition to her professional and political activities which now include many speeches to almost any gathering that will hold still and listen.

The government sent a marshal to padlock the Summit Sun, certainly a violation of freedom of the press more clear and imminent than the ill-fated mania which was imagined in the passionate minds of the few metropolitan pundits in the case of Joe McCarthy and the New York editor who claims he quit being a communist. Here was the federal government, personified by a marshal, closing a newspaper to satisfy an arbitrary, petty claim, unsupported by a court judgment. The government was actually to test the law in court and invoked a process like an attachment. Now it was locking up a paper which was a member of the American free press no less important than the most pompous metropolitan daily.

Mrs. Cain saw off the padlock and mailed it to the marshal. She repeated the job for the benefit of newspaper, news-reel and television cameras. She made her crime as flagrant as she could. She gloried and gloated. The violence against the court's padlock probably also made her guilty of deliberate, defiant contempt of the federal district court, but still the Department of Justice, like the District Attorney, has no right to ignore defiant crimes against the government. Federal judges are not supposed to flinch from public feeling and ignore insulting acts of contempt by one "criminal" while abusing an inoffensive Negro witness for coming to the stand without a jacket which he did not possess as happened so long ago in Nashville. But the federal government, in all its tentacles here implicated, was afraid to tangle with Mrs. Cain. The case went the dull routine way of a petty action for a small claim.

Mrs. Cain's attorney is Norman Gillis, 26 years old, who finds himself tackling, in his first constitutional case, an issue comparable to the Dred Scott and Dinkens cases. But Clarence Manion, Dean Emeritus of the law school of Notre Dame, a noted authority on constitutional questions, will help him on the appeal. Mrs. Cain, who has whoops and hollers from the rostrum and in print, she has received more than 7,000 letters and unsolicited donations of $700 for her legal expenses. She will need more.

The tax for old-age benefits imposed on "self-employed" persons is now 2 1/2 per cent of the first $3,600 of income above $400. In other words, 2 1/2 per cent of a maximum of $3,200. However, the provision exists for a rise to 4 1/2 per cent of $3,200.

The arguments stated in Mary's answer to the government's plea for a lien on the Sun, are augmented by John F. Andrews, of Beach City, O. Mr. Andrews, an auctioneer, had a similar case, but he could not expunge himself economically as Mrs. Cain could. So, when the collector tapped his bank account for $84.94, including interest, he threw in his hand.

Mrs. Cain holds that the general welfare clause does not empower congress to assume guardianship over individuals; that the object sought here is no "general welfare" but "particular welfare"; and that the computation prevents her from making private arrangements with private insurance companies for the same purpose, thus violating her right of contract.

Mr. Andrews asked how Congress could make him buy this insurance.

ance and excuse government-workers, railroad workers, teachers and others from the same compulsion. If he became a bricklayer employed by a contractor he would be charged only 1 1/2 per cent, for the same "insurance."

"Is the government qualified to say that the group old-age plans of teachers are satisfactory while no personal plan is not, even though the government does not know what it is?" Mr. Andrews demanded.

These are classical issues which may wipe out social security and with it the bureaucratic Washington power over the internal affairs of the 48 states which now siphon back much of the money for wasteful, Marshall "refugees" and the least hilarious aspect of the government's show of fear in failing to prosecute one class of "criminals" while pretending to prosecute the criminal laws impartially.

The Department of Justice is hounding two Chicago policemen in a distortion of the Moribund civil rights law for using enough physical strength to resist a disorderly person. But here it quits cold, although Mrs. Cain defied the criminal clause and showed the deepest contempt for the court in sawing off the padlock.

There ought to be a law or something protecting old and reversed plays from being turned over to the people who believe that art is anything that has a dollar concealed somewhere in its wrinkles. Although it never hurts to find a beautiful man, the violence in the folds of an artistic enterprise, the concept of art should come first and the scurry for the buck should come second. Look, for example, at "White Cargo."

When I got to town from the red clay of South Carolina early in April, 1924, the first show I went to was Jeanna Egge's "In Rain." It would be useless if it were that the callow boy from the cotton patch was shelling out his ticket money in a hot search for culture. The truth is that I had heard that this was a fairly spicy article and I wanted to hear every word of it. Two nights later I wound up at Flo Ziegfeld's revealing "Follies," certain that I knew his way about the more inflaming treasures of Manhattan. And two nights after that durbar of bare skin and lissome babes I wound up taking a long, less than scholarly look at "White Cargo," a simpleminded effort in which a well-built young woman sashayed around the stage wearing not a morsel of anything and talking in mainly gibberish. There was some nonsense about "much bracelets and many bangles," and about Tondeloy being a misunderstood native girl, but I knew that was window-dressing. What the show was really about was that it gave a sensible opportunity for putting a nearly naked girl on a public stage. It was art, however, in that the original Tondeloy was a good young actress who rose above the lack of. About a year or so ago this was all changed.

Some avid hunter of the long green tangle up with the notion of exhuming this learned drama and assigning the role of Tondeloy to a famed strip teaser. Any fame strip teaser. Several of the more elaborate clothes snickers took on the job and I recall that Miss Rose La Rose, a lady who has brought the edicts of art to a high degree, was singularly successful in the role. She played summer theaters with it against a guarantee and in no place except Lake Hopatcong New Jersey, did she fail to fill the theater with pop-eyed idolaters of high voltage drama. Nothing filled the theater in Lake Hopatcong and I recall a sultry July evening in which, following back stage in scholarly talk with Hal Lawrence, the weed-strewn entrepreneur, I was the notion of startled silence by Miss La Rose who emerged from her dressing room attired in a thin veil of July evening air and, taking a worried stance in the door frame, said petulantly: "Is there as much as a hundred bucks in the house tonight?" I always wondered why she felt she had to come to a final meeting dressed only in the skin she was born in, but perhaps in the upper levels of the Strip this is a chic costume for going over the books and counting the house, and others who made themselves a sack of money as Tondeloy, I see that two girls of Broadway announce the summer tour of Miss Gama, an Egyptian tortoise dancer, in the reversed role. No one can blame them for making the announcement, but if they would look no farther than Page One they would discover that Miss Gama, the begum of a Texas playboy, has retired to Egypt's sunny sands with a pouting statement that she is through with husband, America and our night clubs. Unless the producers intend to exhibit Miss Gama in "White Cargo" at Loew's Port Said or the Suez Paramount they are going to have a tough time. Miss Gama never wants to see our shores again and it will be a mile difficult to stage "White Cargo" here with Miss Gama there.

ELIZABETH the Queen

By Marion Crawford
Former Governor of Her Majesty

Almost two years after the christening of Prince Charles, his baby sister Princess Anne was baptized at Buckingham Palace. Queen Elizabeth holds the princess, who wears a robe from Queen Victoria's days.

FROM her earliest moments Queen Elizabeth has always had that interest in soldiers, uniforms, and military customs which so animated her father.

I remember on one of the earliest of the Monday afternoon excursions on which Queen Mary used to take us, watching the little Princess as we walked slowly round an exhibition of tapestries.

"Now take this one," she would say, and then tell us something fascinating about the way in which it had been made and where it had hung in the past. Queen Mary had much knowledge about such matters which was almost awe-inspiring.

But though usually Princess Elizabeth used to hang on to every word her grandmother uttered, on this occasion I noticed her attention straying.

I followed her eyes and saw, across the room, three tall Guardsmen in their khaki uniforms. Princess Elizabeth was watching them intently, with that fascinated concentration a more modern child might bestow on a visiting film star. She never took her eyes off them during the whole tour we made of the exhibition.

I was amused when we got home to 145 Piccadilly to notice that her first thought was to tell Mummy of this wonderful experience.

Her mother was always very gentle with the children. She would take a great interest in their day's doings, and greet them with a "Well, darling, and what have you seen today?"

This time Princess Elizabeth wasted no time on repeating the lore about the tapestry which Queen Mary had passed on to us. Instead, she ran to her mother and hugged her, saying, "Oh, Mummy, Mummy, there were three soldiers there!"

That interest in things military has remained with her. She would always stand fascinated at the window of 145 while the Guard marched across Hyde Park Corner in the morning, splendid in their scarlet uniforms.

"Oh, look, Crawlie," she would say excitedly. "Aren't they pretty?"

I used sometimes to see the same expression of interest across her face while she watched a parade of soldiers at a much later date.

However much the routine of her life may weigh on her, I am sure the military side of it will never bore her.

ONE of Queen Elizabeth's most charming traits was exhibited in her insistence that her sister, Princess Margaret, should be given all the attention due her. This has persisted from childhood.

When Princess Elizabeth, even as a very small girl, felt that visitors or friends were making so much fuss of her that Princess Margaret was in danger of being neglected, Princess Elizabeth would seize the first opportunity to say, "And now you must come and see my little sister."

The first time I saw that thoughtful gesture was when Princess Margaret was so young that she was still using her perambulator, but old enough to enjoy having people round her and to resent finding herself alone when the visitors or friends were making so much fuss of her that Princess Margaret was in danger of being neglected.

This trait is still with her. Since her marriage it has had less opportunity for expression; and besides, Princess Margaret, with a personality that draws interesting people to her, never has a chance to feel neglected.

QUEEN ELIZABETH has passed this on to her own children. An old ghillie who had spent years in the Royal Service at Balmoral and had just retired, was full of praise for Queen Elizabeth, whose charm and thoughtfulness had caused her to be revered by servants not only in her own home but wherever she went.

"And doesn't little Prince Charles take after his mother?" said the ghillie in broad Scots which had to be translated to be readable.

"Everybody loves him here in Scotland; the servants and tenants flock to see him. After a few moments of being the center of admiration the little boy always takes the hand of the nearest person to him—usually a woman—and leads her to where Princess Anne is sitting up peckily in her pram. 'And now,' he says, 'you must all come and see my little sister.'"

British Looking For Dawn Of New Era

EDITORS NOTE: Hugh Bailie, president of the United Press, is now making his fourteenth visit to London in line with his practice of years of being on the scene of big news events. In the following dispatch he contrasts the scene on coronation day with that of previous visits, particularly the grim years of World War II when London was a blacked-out, bombed city.

By HUGH BAILIE
LONDON, June 2.—This is more than the coronation of a sovereign. It's Britain's celebration of its renaissance after the war. The leaders of the nation hope it marks the dawn of a new Elizabethan era of might, majesty, dominion and power.

This is implicit in all the decorations, the illuminations, the parades, the Abbey ceremonies, but above all in the gay and buoyant spirit of the people in the streets. They haven't felt so good for years. You can hear it in the great voice of their cheers. You can see it in their eager faces, their indomitable determination to seize every opportunity to make the most of it, regardless of whether, fatigue, traffic, crushing crowds, or any other aspect of the festivities.

Remember Dark Days
It's a grand mixture of Christmas and Fourth of July.

These are the same people who through long years watched on rooftops for the fires set by incendiaries of the skies, who manned the first aid stations and the rescue squads when the country seemed burning up and tumbling down around them, who went out to fight in many faraway places. And it seems as if the spirits of those who didn't come back are in the happy crowds too. Now the rooftops, where they once spread the coils of barbed wire for the house-to-house fighting, have spectators perched on them; the big intersections which used to have pillboxes at strategic locations for the battle in the streets of London are jammed with happy throngs like New Year's Eve in Times Square.

London Now Gay
The windows which for five years were shrouded with gloomy blackout curtains are crowded with people waving flags, framed in gay bunting and festooned with bright colors; the ruins which still protrude here and there like decayed teeth are masked by grandstands filled with cheering thousands; the sidewalks where you used to find your way in the dark by following the shuffling of feet are jammed with people who seem ecstatically happy.

The sky that not so long ago was criss-crossed by searchlights and reddened by the flames of burning London will be aglare Tuesday night with the greatest fireworks display on record. Who would ever have thought in the blitz of 1940 that London would ever care for a fireworks display again?

It all adds up to a manifestation of one of the greatest comebacks of all time.

The restaurants where you have to feel your way past sandbag barricades are bulging with customers.

Contrasts Everywhere
Fiesta? Carnival? Mardi Gras? Yes it's all of those, only more so. Commercialized? Sure. The department stores are decorated like those on Fifth Avenue at the Merry Yuletide. But it's all unified with a surge of patriotic and even religious fervor that you can't escape if you plunge into the atmosphere of Britain today.

Contrasts are everywhere. Berkeley square where a mechanical nightingale sings is decorated like the village square on fair day. It's the place where the Home Guard used to drill in those days which were pathetic yet glorious. Now the scuffed ground is bright with new grass, crowns hang from the trees, but the handsome iron railing is still missing, melted for munitions, and a wire-netting replaces it.

Just across narrow Bouverie Street from where this is being written there still stands a burned out building, its windows rows of sightless eyes, memento of 1941. Many can remember the noise of the first V-2, the one that hit in Chiswick in 1944, the explosion followed by the long thunder in the sky, the roaring approach of the supersonic missile, heard after it had landed and the dead were dead. Any noises in the sky today were friendly noises, the fly-past of her majesty's jets.

Detective Demoted

To Avoid 'Handicap'
OKLAHOMA CITY, June 2.—UP—Chief of Police L. J. Hilbert demoted Detective L. G. T. Newton to a uniformed officer with this explanation:

He said he believed Newton would be "working under a handicap" as a detective in view of publicly the officer received for his part in a dice game in which one player lost $8,700.

The operator of the tourist court where the game was held said Newton flashed his badge on him to keep him from breaking up the game.

Tit for Tat

ATHENS, Ga.—UP—The Athens City Lines asked the city council if it could add taxicabs to its bus line operations. Two local cab firms immediately asked permission to put 10 passenger buses in service on city bus routes.

New England Soles
BOSTON—UP—New England's shoe industry is still showing its heels to the rest of the country. In January the region produced nearly 16 million pairs of shoes, a 13 per cent gain over a year ago.

Fire Drill
NEW HAVEN, Conn.—UP—Firemen rushed with unusual haste when an alarm was sounded from Box 324. The box is located in front of their training grounds. There was no fire.

New Push From House Starts Flood-Control Ball Rolling

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—A big new push to upstream flood-prevention work in the United States has just been achieved by R. P. Clifford R. Hope of Kansas, chairman of the House Agricultural Committee. Going before his rearmy-minded colleagues on the House Appropriations Committee, Chairman Hope personally talked them into allowing $5 million for preliminary, first-year work on 48 small watersheds in various parts of the United States.

The total cost of completing these 48 creek projects is now estimated at something under $60 million. The federal government's share would be about half, but the cost division would vary from 45 per cent on some to 85 per cent on others. State and local areas directly benefited will put up the balance. The federal government's share of the work will be planned and carried out by the Department of Agriculture.

If the Senate allows this Hope plan to stand, a third government agency will be put in business in a big way to work on flood control and watershed development on a multi-billion-dollar scale. The two already in this business are of course Army Corps of Engineers and Bureau of Reclamation in Department of Interior.

Farm interests have been trying to get the Department of Agriculture into this picture for some time. The 1936 flood-control act authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to make surveys. From then until operations were stopped by the war, 80 surveys were begun.

Okayed 11 Watersheds
The flood-control act of 1944 started this program up again. Congress approved 11 watersheds for development and work was begun in 1946 on these streams: Buffalo Creek, N. Y.; Colorado, Middle and Trinity in Texas; Coosa in Georgia and Tennessee; Little Sioux in Iowa; and no names, Little Tallatchie in Mississippi; Los Angeles and Santa Ynez in California; Potomac in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Washita in Oklahoma and Texas; Yazoo in Mississippi.

Up to this year, $1 million has been appropriated by Congress to carry on the federal government's share of this work. The total federal cost of the 11 pilot projects has been estimated at $175 million. Some 50 years may be required to complete them.

Thus far only one upstream project has been completed. This is on Sandstone Creek in the Washita Valley, which has become a demonstration area of what can be accomplished on other watersheds.

The 48 additional projects for which Representative Hope has now secured initial congressional approval will be carried out on the same plan. The work includes such things as building block ponds, sediment traps, larger retaining dams, stream straightening, terracing and soil conservation practices.

The 11 original watershed projects cover about 2.2 per cent of the area of the United States. The additional 48 starts, covering 6700 square miles, represent less than 1 per cent of U. S. land area. Everything so far approved by Congress therefore represents only about 3 per cent of what might be done.

New Plan Almost Unnoticed
A rough estimate is that if all U. S. upstream areas were to be flood protected in this manner, the federal government share of the work would cost between $5 billion

Maine Idea
BANGOR, Me.—UP—Potomac Maine is now seeking new riches from its soil. Test diggings of Washington County land have been announced jointly by Bangor and Canadian mining companies, which are searching for uranium, zinc, copper, lead and silver.

Methodist Conference Opens
HOUSTON, June 1.—UP—The 114th annual session of the Texas Conference of the Methodist church opened Monday in Houston. The Texas conference— one of five in the state— includes the eastern quarter of Texas. Some 1,800 delegates, ministers and lay visitors from 400 churches were expected for the five-day meeting.

Outbreaks of the forest tent caterpillar generally occur at 10-year intervals.

What has been done so far is only a scratch—a mere foot-in-the-door approach. The 48 new projects range in size from 17 square miles to 970. The average is 135 square miles—an area roughly 11 by 12 miles on a side. This is getting flood prevention right down to the county and even township level.

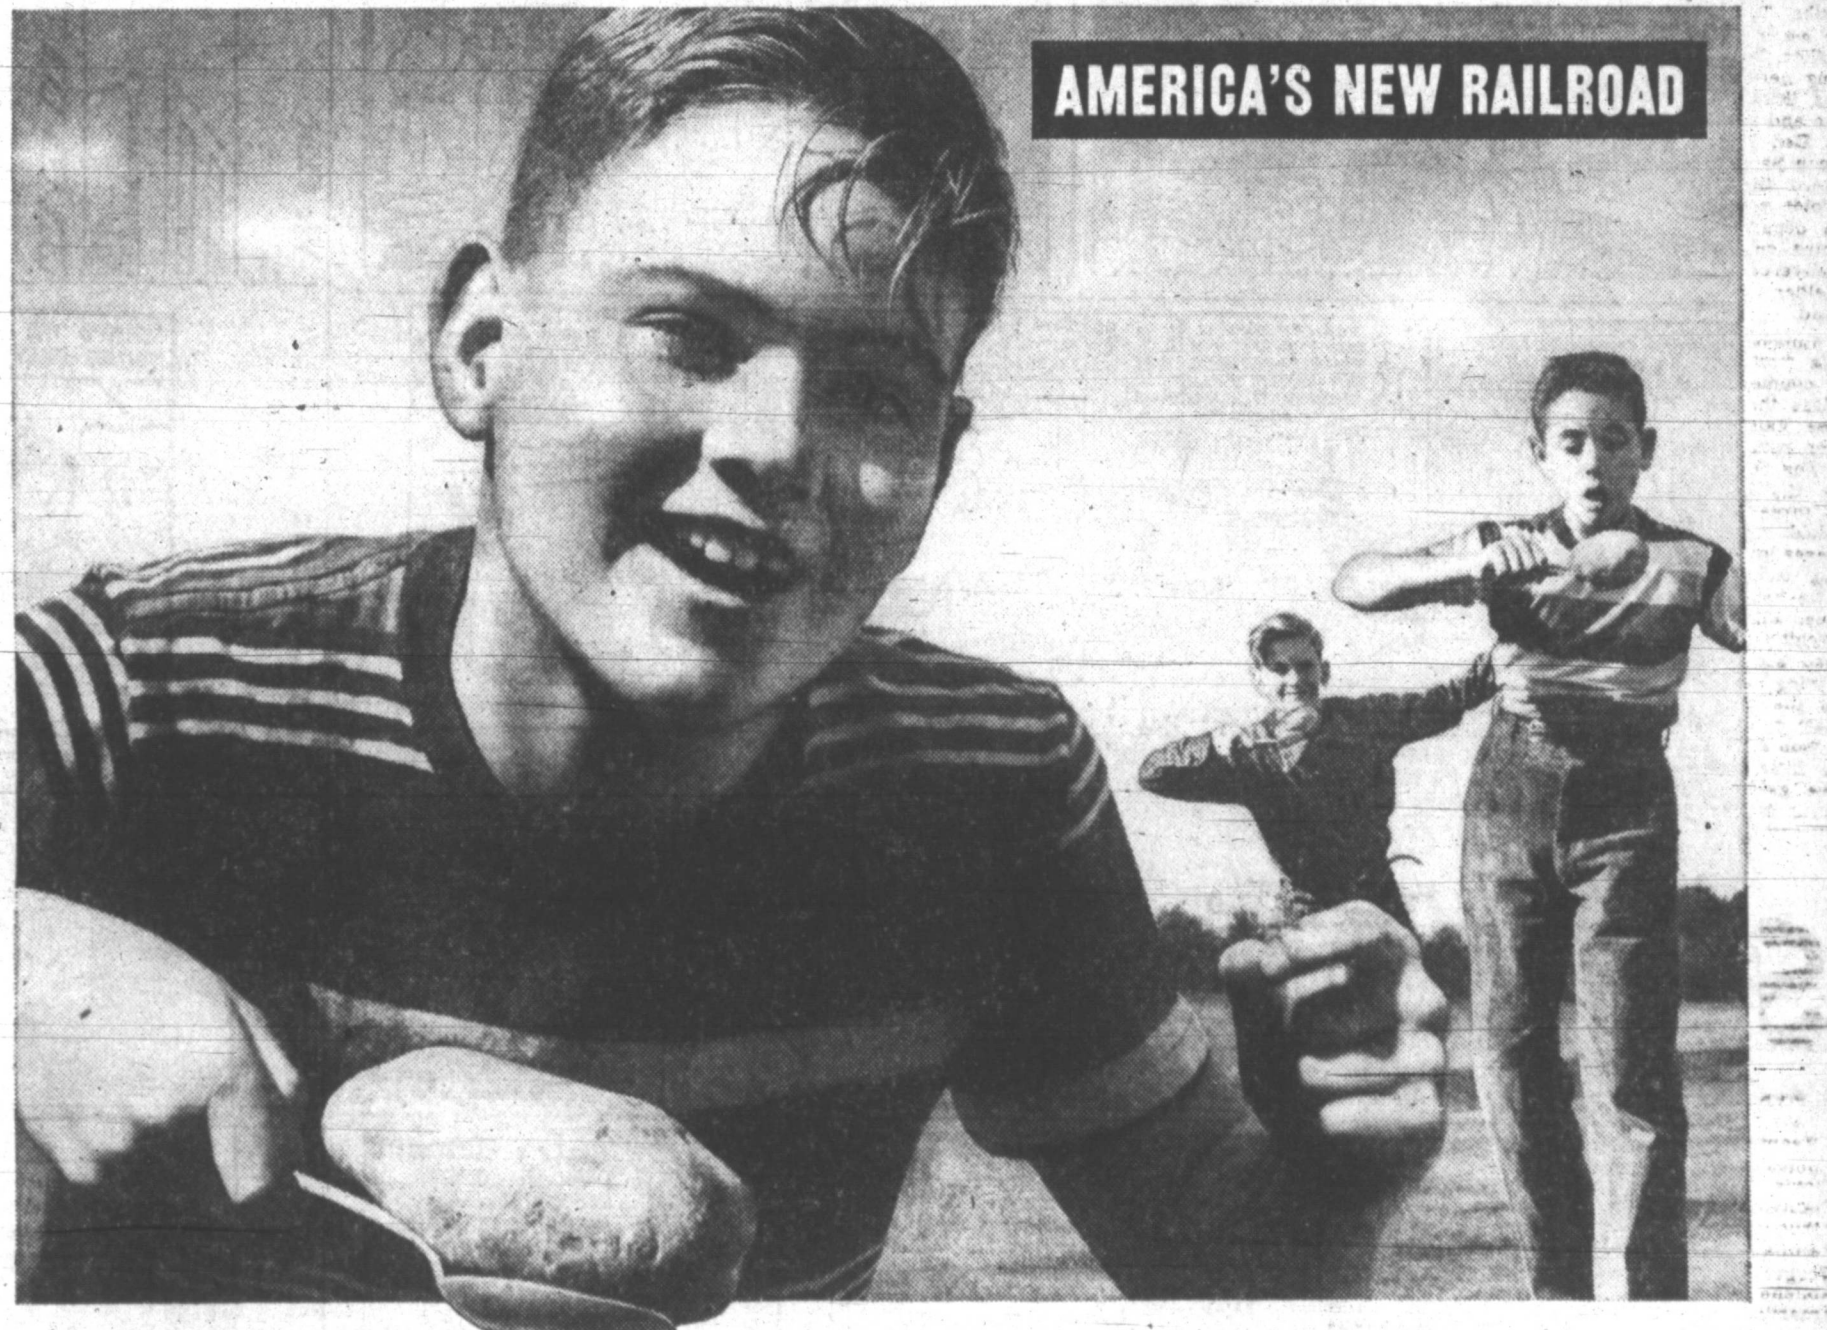

The cost of the improvements for both the federal and local contributions are calculated at about $15 an acre on the 48 new projects. This is said to be small, when compared with costs of $75 to $100 an acre to clear forest land for farming. Bureau of Reclamation costs for developing irrigated land run as high as $200 to $1000 an acre.

On all upstream projects, Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service engineers have a requirement that the benefits must exceed the costs to justify the work. This benefit ratio varies from one and a half to one, up to 10 to one.

The benefits include reduced flood damage, reduced siltation, land enhancement and increased crop yields. But it is not being claimed that this work will prevent all downstream floods.

A 50-yard dash with a potato on a spoon! An exciting bit of Americana—but it's not the World's Greatest Potato Race

That's the 2200-mile dash on the Santa Fe with 1,350,000,000 potatoes

Sombody eat said, "Pass the potatoes!" Out in California, the fertile San Joaquin Valley heard them. And look what happened.

Santa Fe started moving 14,000 to 15,000 carloads of potatoes to hungry markets all over the Midwest and East. 36,000 to 40,000 pounds to a carload. As high as 550 carloads per day at the peak of the harvest. That's more than 1,350,000,000 potatoes. And that's a lot of spuds.

Bag 'em. Load 'em. Roll 'em. And hustle. Sombody eat said, "Pass the potatoes!"

MARKETS ARE PERISHABLE, TOO

From America's largest fleet of refrigerator cars owned by an individual railroad, these yellow Santa Fe "refers" are dispatched to the "Potato Capital of the West."

There the cars are cleaned... checked... loaded... switched. And iced fast (a car a minute, if you please). These potatoes can't wait!

In servicing the cars as they speed east, new icing docks at Bakersfield and Needles, Calif., Belen, N. Mex., Waynoka, Okla. and Kansas City work the clock around.

Electronically-controlled "hump" yards speed the switching.

SANTA FE PRECISION—SANTA FE SPEED

On-time delivery calls for full-time precision to keep these schedules "on the advertised."

After the potatoes come the wheat... citrus fruits... grapes... melons... and green vegetables—all year long—flooding east from Santa Fe country to you. Everything from avocados to zucchini.

It costs Santa Fe millions of dollars to serve you so—and provide you with Super Chiefs, too! But we're proud to say they are earned dollars. Not one penny comes from the taxes you pay.

Once Upon A Time . . .

There Lived A Beautiful Princess Who Came To Be Crowned Queen Of The British Empire

By HARRY FERGUSON
LONDON, June 2—UP—This story should be written by Hans Christian Andersen and like the fairy tales we hear in childhood it should begin, "Once upon a time . . ."

So once upon a time there lived a beautiful princess who married a handsome prince of the royal house of the far-away land of Greece. After passing through the dark days of a great war and the sorrow of the death of her father and grandmother there came a happy time when she rode down an ancient road to a medieval abbey. There she was crowned Elizabeth the Second, by the grace of God and of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other realms and territories queen, head of the Commonwealth, defender of the faith.

Once upon a time is today. From the time the first procession started through the streets Tuesday-morning everything that happened here was centuries removed from the age of the atomic bomb and the internal combustion engine. It was all out of the story books and the long ago when knights were bold, when all ladies were fair and when fabulous jewels flashed from priceless crowns.

No Dread of Midnight Elizabeth, like Cinderella, rode in a golden coach drawn by handsome horses. Like Cinderella, she was crowned and jeweled in breath-taking. But Elizabeth, unlike Cinderella, had no dread of midnight; for when Big Ben proclaims the hour Tuesday night the great ball will just be getting underway and people will be telling each other that everybody is going to live happily ever after.

The gray old city named London put on her party clothes early for the coronation. She sparkled with golden crowns suspended above the streets. Her war wounds were banded in red, white and blue bunting. Her bomb scars were covered with paint or scarlet and gilt.

Two million persons lined the streets. They were packed into specially built grandstands and jammed into every inch of sidewalk space. Thousands of them had stood patiently through darkness and rain for as long as 40 hours.

Nine Processions Nine separate coronation processions moved through the streets. The crowds saw seven sultans, the six feet three-inch Queen Salote of the Tonga Islands. They saw princes and dukes, field marshals and admirals. They saw peers and prime ministers and they gave an especially loud greeting when a coach rolled by and they saw the bulldog face of Sir Winston Churchill, who was wearing his uniform of Warden of the Cinque Ports.

But they still were awaiting the magic moment when the crown of the Queen. It came in mid-morning and for a time the skies cleared and the sun fought its way partly through the overcast.

A lion's roar went up from the throng massed at Buckingham Palace as the golden coronation coach came slowly out the middle gate with riders guiding the eight gray horses. Footmen were on each side of the coach and over their heads the throng could see the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh sitting on her left.

The Queen smiled and occasionally leaned forward to wave. From time to time the Duke of Edinburgh brought his right hand to his cocked admiral's hat in a grave salute. The coach bore left around the memorial that commemorates the long and illustrious reign of Elizabeth's great-grandmother Victoria. Then it headed into the Mall toward Admiralty Arch.

As the sovereign's escort of household cavalry on black chargers straightened away from the parade up the Mall, the throng broke into "God Save the Queen." Almost anywhere she turned Elizabeth was reminded that every inch of her route was drenched with history. When she passed under Admiralty Arch and looked to the left she saw the tall shaft that is capped with a statue of Lord Nelson, hero of Trafalgar whose brilliant sea victories made it possible for Britain to survive.

Place Saved for Children Then there was a half-turn right down Northumberland Avenue and a full right turn into the Victoria embankment. This was the place, which on the Queen's orders, had been reserved for the children. They let out a shrill cry as the great coach rolled on past Big Ben and up to Westminster Abbey where Elizabeth II came to keep her date with destiny.

For all the spectators along the route a dream had come true. They had seen the Queen with their own eyes.

All of them had retreated from the present into the distant yesterdays. Their mood was that here was a fairy tale being enacted before their own eyes and they were determined to make the most of it before the magic spell was broken.

Churchill Stands Solidly Behind The Royal Family

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign Analyst
In all Britain, no one is as close to or as proud of the royal family as Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill.

He defended Edward VIII when Edward abdicated his throne for the "woman I love." He stood side by side with George VI through Britain's terrible war years. He watched the girl who Tuesday became Elizabeth II, sixth reigning queen of Britain, grow up. As he witnessed the solemn climax to Tuesday's spectacle, he could recall that his lifetime has spanned the period between the last two of the six reigning queens—Victoria, and now Elizabeth.

And if Elizabeth's reign is not the prosperous one that all Britain hopes, it will not be for Churchill's lack of trying.

Churchill, after all, is 78. Eden May Be Out

For more than a year now there has been speculation about his successor.

For years, the heir apparent has been Foreign Minister Anthony Eden.

But Eden now is seriously ill and shortly will come to the United States for treatment for what has been described vaguely as gall bladder trouble. Churchill is carrying both the burdens of prime minister and foreign secretary.

Churchill's age and Eden's illness have brought prominently to the fore a third figure who also witnessed the coronation.

He is the right honorable Richard Austen Butler, chancellor of the exchequer and former Cambridge Don. Butler has emerged from the graveyard of Munich to become at least second in line of succession to Churchill and possibly even first.

Butler is said privately to deplore such speculation.

But Butler at the age of 50 is eight years younger than Eden; 28 younger than Churchill and he is a recognized power in the conservative government.

Wants Strong Britain Butler's principal aim is to make Britain once again a strong economic world power, and in doing so to "free the people" from a crushing burden of taxes without

Foreign Aid Budget
WASHINGTON, June 2—UP—The administration plans to spend $5.5 billion for foreign aid during fiscal year 1954 beginning July 1, Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey said Monday. That would be $1 billion less than the Truman estimate for the current year, but $1 billion less than the Truman estimate for the 12 months starting July 1.
