City Manager B. H. Cruce this morning was musing about the possibility of having a Pampa jitney service, much like the one that runs on San Francisco's Mission Street. Speaking about Mrs. Anna Hutchens' plea before Tuesday's city commission meeting that many Pampa residents can't afford paying $1 a day to get to work (two 50-cent cab fares), Cruce said it might be possible for a man to use a station wagon or the like to run a scheduled route, north and south and east and west.

Thirty men and women came, shouting Red slogans and singing Communist songs. They listened. Then all 30 turned their backs on their anti-Communist homeland and marched back to Red custody - still chanting their songs and slogans. The unanimous refusal of the South Koreans to return home gave the Communists a propaganda victory they were sure to exploit in broadcasts from Communist Pyongyang and Peiping radio.

Knight blasted Shivers and Texas Attorney General John Ben Shepperd in a statement concerning organization of retail and service trades workers in Fort Arthur, Tex. The oil union chief said the CIO Oil Workers represents all the major oil installations in Jefferson county, which includes Fort Arthur, as well as a majority of the workers in other major oil installations along the Gulf Coast.

Paul Bowers In Fair Condition

"It's a good day to be in." That's what County Commissioner Paul Bowers said late this morning from his Highland General Hospital bed where he is recuperating from first-degree hand burns. His injury came about 10 p.m. Sunday at his home, 20 miles southwest of Pampa near the Grandview School, when he went outside to adjust his gas regulator and lit a match, thereby igniting some leaking gas. Slightly injured in the face, too, Bowers said he stumbled and fell on the ground, skimming his hands. Musician Dies In Car Crash

The CIO oil union chief said the Texas governor's "probe into charges of Communist domination of certain Texas unions, through the state industrial commission, obviously is going to be phony, for the commission is an unbalanced and unrepresentative body." The high-powered publicity campaign sparked by Shepperd and abetted by Shivers is an old story to organized labor. Knight said, "It is simply an attempt to poison the minds of the people against unionism."

Pampa Teacher's Article Published

Songs and cries of early-day street peddlers are recorded in an article by Miss Elizabeth Hurley, journalism and publications teacher at Pampa High School, in the 1953 publication of the Texas Folklore Society.

The book, "Folk Travelers," was published by the Southern Methodist University Press, Dallas.

Entitled "Come Buy, Come Buy," the article was taken from Miss Hurley's thesis for her M. A. degree at Texas State College for Women in 1952. To collect material for her thesis, she traveled 2,000 miles over Texas in the summer of 1951.

The article shows how today's radio jingles and singing commercials are merely modern variations of the age-old salesmanship practice, used around the globe by peddlers to entice buyers to the wares they had to sell.

Miss Hurley came to Pampa this year from TSCW, where she taught journalism from 1951 to 1952. She previously had been a reporter and managing editor on daily newspapers in Lufkin, Marshall, and Denton.

Damage to two automobiles amounted to more than $500 as the result of a traffic accident at the intersection of Mary Ellen and 21st streets, police reported today.

The accident, which occurred shortly after 1 p.m. Tuesday, involved a car being driven east on 21st street by Cecil Edward Ikard, 28, 402 E. Browning, and one driven north on Mary Ellen by Mrs. Lola Montez Pullman, 60, 620 Lefors.

Police reported that Mrs. Pullman's automobile was struck in the right side by Ikard's car in the intersection. No one was injured but police estimated the damage to Mrs. Pullman's vehicle amounted to $300 and that to Ikard's car was set at $275.

Ikard was given a citation for speeding and failure to grant the right of way.

P-T-A City Council Members To Bring Disaster Defense Program To School Children

"Duck 'n' Cover," a cartoon-type short movie designed for children by the Civil Defense Federal Administration, was shown to Parent-Teacher Association representatives at the P-T-A City Council meeting in the Junior High School building yesterday morning. The film which is to be shown to junior high school students and all the elementary schools in Pampa this week, is cleverly designed to teach children how to protect themselves during disasters without instilling terror. A little turtle, wearing a Civil Defense helmet besides his natural armor, illustrates how to "duck 'n' cover" during a possible atomic attack. Mrs. Jack Foster, Pampa City Council President, emphasized effectiveness of the same measures in case of natural disasters such as tornadoes.

During the discussion of the film, the members of the council agreed upon the importance of having a place in the home designated as a shelter in case of emergency; a place against a wall and away from windows; possibly under a table. Knowing there was such a harbor would do a psychological good to children as well, they agreed.

Proceeding showing of the film, B. R. Nuckols, county superintendent of schools, spoke to the group on Civil Defense as related to P-T-A. He said that the most members can do is to protect and train their children. "It is appropriate that Oreta Culp Hobby was appointed as National Defense Director," he said, since over 60 percent of the workers must be women. Home nursing and Red Cross courses are very valuable but the biggest problem is to be able to handle fear-stricken people during an emergency. There are 458 major disasters every year in the United States or 3 every two days. Aside from this fact the possibility of atomic, biological or chemical warfare must not be overlooked. Parents and children must be drilled.

Mr. Nuckols told about how the program is organized in a community. "The mayor initiates the program," he said. "While this P-T-A group is initiating the program it obviously takes participation of all clubs and involves the entire community. He told of the Conrad Plan which is an agreement whereby all radio stations in the country would go on an emergency broadcast in case of an enemy attack, thereby eliminating the possibility of an enemy plane riding a radio beam. Pampans would tune in on 1240 in case of danger. This local state and national messages would be the same. He closed saying that the lack of Civil Defense might lose a war.

This was the last City Council meeting for the year.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Grace Friend,

I was a woman along in years and during my youth it was impossible to secure a high school education, but I studied at the YW and read up on every subject possible until I felt I had really mastered my lack.

But here is "the fly in the honey" - I never received a diploma. When asked if I am a high school graduate I have to say "no."

At the present it is necessary to have a diploma in order to enter a line of work I am trying to attain.

Is there any school local or correspondence where I could take an examination and if found fit, secure a proper diploma?

I'll watch the paper anxiously for your reply.

A. G. S.

Dear A. G. S.

There is just a possibility that you might work out your problem with the adult education director in your city. Even though a high school diploma could not be granted you there are certain tests to evaluate your studies which would show whether you are prepared for the work you want to enter.

You would have to discuss the job you have in mind with the director and see whether there are examinations to cover your problem. If so I am sure that the company for which you want to work would accept the result of the tests. This is just conjecture as I don't know what kind of work you have in mind. However I feel that you should try the adult education department on the chance that it will help you.

SICK AND TIRED

Dear Friend Grace

I am writing to you in hopes you will give me some advice.

My husband is always saying that I am interested in every good looking man and he is always picking at me about other girls.

I am sick and tired of the whole mess.

I fear my love will die for him if he keeps on like this. I wait on him from hand to foot but he never helps me. But I wouldn't care if he would only quit picking at me.

O. J.

Do you mean that he wants you to emulate other women or do you mean that he himself is interested in other women? If you think that other women attract him, go to work on yourself and see what you can do to make yourself more attractive. See to it that you don't give him cause for thinking that you are interested in other men.

Let him know that you love him. Make it plain that you aren't the least interested in other men.

Your husband may feel that earning the living and providing for you is doing his share - that you should take care of the household. Of course if you are holding down a job outside of your home and contributing to the finances, then it would only be fair for him to help you with household tasks.

Parent Education Club Members Show Christmas Ideas, Hear "Why Christmas?"

Parent Education Club members met in the home of Mrs. Clifford Whitney 1911 Christine yesterday afternoon for their Christmas luncheon. The program was called by the secretary, Mrs. Myron Marx. Original and creative Christmas gifts, centerpieces and gift wrappings were displayed. There were gilded and jeweled candles, stuffed animals, velvet and sequin accessories, glittered and sequined tree baubles, hand painted and candy trimmed wrappings and novelties made of felt. There was a child's mobile made with a Christmas motif. One felt "stocking stuffer" was a small comb case made in the shape of a small beaded glove. Another felt novelty was a tiny stuffed horse lapel pin. Christmas centerpieces were made of stacked star shaped cookies frosted and graduated in size. A decorative piece was fashioned with a copper mesh covered bottle trimmed with a big bunch of "gold" grapes, loops of ribbon in shades of soft green and a small copper angel.

During the business meeting that followed the club decided to donate books to the new library for their annual project, and to enter the Beta Sigma Phi table-decorating contest. Plans were made for the Christmas party to be held for children of members in the City Club Rooms Dec. 15.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

An aunt wants to know what to do about her brother - in-law's abuse of his little boy.

"My husband and I have both pleaded with this father to delay spanking until he gets over his rage at the boy," she writes. "But we are only accused of trying to 'spoil' him. Just last week when we protested an angry beating we had walked in on, my sister said, 'My child psychology book says it's good to spank when you're angry. It says it's unnatural to wait till you're cooled off.'"

The psychologist author of this woman's book did not, I am sure, intend to condone the angry abuse of children. So I have asked her to take this case of it to her local Family Service Association.

If we don't soon stop expecting child psychologists to do our thinking for us, original thought among American parents will be as extinct as the dodo.

Only the other day, I learned of a young mother whose blind obedience to the psychologists' rule against pressing children to eat had resulted in the serious malnutrition of her little daughter.

Thinking for ourselves, we should quickly spot the weakness in the statement about the "unnaturalness" of spanking in calm. How can it be "unnatural" to spank Johnny in calm if our calm is natural? If it is honest and sincere?

The truth is, we can spank either in anger or calm with equal effectiveness so long as the feeling behind our action is sincere enough to inspire Johnny's trust in us.

It is the trust we inspire that does the work. The great Swiss friend of children, Heinrich Pestalozzi, discovered this truth long ago. He spanked in calm with great success.

"Corporal punishment must be given in love," he wrote. "How pleased my children were when I offered them my hand a moment after I had been obliged to spank them."

I can't imagine why this psychologist endorses angry spanking as more "natural" than calm spanking unless it's because he believes us incapable of true calm toward our annoying Johnny.

Psychologists meet an awful lot of confused, insincere people. Perhaps this one tells us to spank in anger because he knows that honest anger is to be preferred to that kind of dishonest calm used by emotionally sick people to mask their cold-blooded, vindictive rage.

Princess Empire Lines Star In Resort Fashions; Short, 'Round' Silhouette

There is a wealth of fashion inspiration in the resort lines for 1954, in silhouette, in color, in fabrics, in types of clothes. Fashion branches in two directions, according to Women's Wear Daily's report on latest resort and cruise apparel. The first group is figure-defining, rather dressy styles evolved from princess and Empire lines, shorter hemlines, widened tops.

The second group is a positive statement of the casual. Here is the family of smooth fabrics, the boyish influence repeated in jackets, shorts, long pants and shirts. Tweeds and sweaters, leathers and adaptable jackets are classics that you will regard as good investments.

Skirts measuring 14 and 15 inches from the ground are shown for most daytime and cocktail dresses and skirts. Full-length coat costumes spotlight dress length for coat, day or night. The newest is fancy, outside and plain underneath (as a print coat and solid dress in silk, embroidered coat and plain dress in linen).

TUNICS-ARE NEW

Tunics are new in coat costumes, suit-dresses, and "two-piece effect" one-pieces. One category has a sheath underskirt below flared tunic, as a compromise between coat and jacket costumes.

Women's Wear Daily's fashion writers point out that inner constructions provide an entirely new aspect in shaping the predominant round silhouette in all dress fashions. You'll find entire skirt backs under-bust Empire seaming; princess skirts, hipline constructions

Whole new families of flow are coming to the fore as are used in the many brilliant prints of the season. On cotton silks, linens, rayons, the flow may be orange and gold, blue and white, or in bud form, scattered far afield on a background of white. Flowers vary in subtle woodsy tones of blue and more greens to field flow growing in intense, natural shades for a print that almost fills solid.

Stripes are the strongest metric pattern. These vary from pastel candy stripes to huge multicolored stripes. Blue and white stripes are strongly resented in sportswear categories.

Lyndon, Price

Upon the visit to Pampa today of Sen. Lyndon Johnson, it seems timely to note that the vagaries and diodes of politics seem strong men to the psychiatrist's couch; and the weak ones are hauled off to the looney bin. Take, for example, the matter of Lyndon B. Johnson and Price Daniel.

Lyndon, as we all know, was a man who vibrated with delight at the capers of the middle and late-period New Dealers; and then when the rocket was running thin and the taxpayers showed signs of tiring of the performance, he turned his backside to his old chums and had cords printed advertising himself as the Great White Hope of the Conservative South.

As the Whirling Dervish of Southern Politics, Lyndon has no equal unless you want to consider the case of Jim Byrnes, New Dealer turned Democrat. But Jim never pulled a gimmick like Lyndon's spectacular victory in Duval county, so you can't put them in the same league really.

Anyway, with the death and dishonorable discharge of the old red-hot, who had started out as boy wonder and lived on to hear their arteries harden, Lyndon emerged as the leader of the Democratic element in Congress.

The Eastern Metropolitan press fell madly in love with the boy because Eastern publishers like to be "liberal" and they haven't much political sense anyway and they have a habit of getting romantic about tall, young Southerners who know which fork to use for the salad course.

Lyndon has played to the hilt his chosen role of bush-league "statesman" — a frantic exercise which consists of pacifying the far-left Democrats of the Lehman persuasion and telling the voters back here in Texas that he doesn't cotton to the lefties, honest.

Just to show his good faith, Lyndon voted for 71 per cent of the administration's measures in the last Congress. Only 14 times did the leader of the "opposition" vote against the majority party.

The really "conservative" elements of Texas politics regard Lyndon as the greatest menace since Huey Long; and there's strong evidence that Lyndon could give Huey aces and spades and win the contest handily.

Price Daniel, on the other hand, is the young man who rushed in where Shivers feared to tread, Allan, a sure-thing player, was afraid to announce against old Tamm Connally who might have been sent back to the Senate for the umpteenth time as a sort of pensioner, which would have left Allan with nothing but memories and Shoryland.

Price had almost nothing to lose, so he went up against Tamm; and, gol-durn, if the old guy didn't withdraw from the race after he came back down to Texas and sniffed the political atmosphere and sounded out a few of his backers.

Well, the totals are in; and it comes out that Price supported the President only 61 per cent of the time, which is 10 per cent under Lyndon's record.

All of which doesn't prove much except, as we said, politics is a goofy business and heaven protect the innocents.

Comment On UN

Business men in these United States have not always been up front on the battle line in the defense of sovereignty of this nation.

Particularly it has seemed they have been somewhat in awe of the propaganda groups that so vociferously advocate support of the United Nations and reluctant to engage in controversy on the dubious merits of the UN.

But recently members of the business fraternity have moved into the firing line and expressed their rebellion in interesting comment.

After receipt of a letter seeking executive support for United Nations Week, Mr. Phillip Le Boutillier, president of Best & Co. in New York City, retorted to Harry Firestone, Jr., one of the sponsors, as follows:

"The real purpose of your soliciting funds is not to tell the facts but to perpetuate the UN folly, whose next goal is the admission of Red China to the UN. It is alarming how men with the financial responsibilities of yourself and the imposing list of 918 industrial and related tycoons, given in your 1953 Business and Industrial Committee for United Nations Week, can be so blind as to what goes on and why. A few big industrial leaders endorse something and hundreds rush to follow like sheep. Your father was never led by the nose by a lot of hucksters and international dreamers..."

Another business leader, Joseph S. Kimmel, president of the Republic Electric Company of Davenport, Ia., in the house organ of his firm, "Sparks," spoke his mind thus: "The United Nations, if carried to its logical conclusion, will constitute a fraud and conspiracy to deprive Americans of their rights as free men and American citizens. It was conceived in iniquity and born in sin in San Francisco, April, 1946, with Alger Hiss the midwife and by him delivered to the United States Senate."

After these remarks Mr. Le Boutillier and Mr. Kimmel will certainly be unwelcome guests at the Stork Club, but they will have risen rather high in the esteem of honest citizens of this nation.

Bargaining

By Paul L. Folrot

INSTALLMENT X
Reluctance to Compete

A person in search of employment usually tries to explain what he has to offer, hoping to make it sound attractive to the prospective employer. The bargaining ability of an individual is broadly recognized as depending upon his creative or productive strength — his capacity to be of service to others.

What seems obvious enough with respect to an individual's bargaining ability, often loses clarity when employees organize for purposes of bargaining. The organizational process seems to relieve the individual of a sense of responsibility for producing something as a condition of his employment. Instead, he claims a right to a job by reason of his union affiliation.

It is worth remembering that fellow employees are primarily competitors. They are competing for the services of a manager and for the use of the tools and other capital which stockholders have voluntarily placed under that manager's supervision. And many of the employees are also competing for better-paying managerial jobs. This is the process of competitive bargaining which affords promotion on the basis of capacity to perform.

Competing is not an unmitigated joy to all persons. There are many who seem to prefer to duck such pressure when possible. They feel that their own lives might be more comfortable if they could only exercise a little control over others — enjoy certain monopoly privileges.

Monopoly Power
Monopoly power is the power to govern — to force compliance. Such is the power of a monarch over subjects who will accept the concept of the "divine right of kings." People submit to such monopoly power because they see no alternatives.

The European cartel system of industrial organization is another kind of attempt at monopoly power. Supposedly competitive businessmen agree among themselves not to compete against one another. Usually, they try to persuade the government not to license any new businesses which might become competitive. As a rule, the cartel does not have the power to force consumers to buy the products of the industry, so its monopoly power falls as consumers decide to get along without that particular industry. If the private owners of coal mines form a cartel, they may say to consumers: "If you want coal, you must buy from us at our price." This is a less vicious kind of monopoly power, of course, than that of a king or of a nationalized coal industry under which the taxable consumer is obliged to pay for coal whether or not he wants to use it.

Industrial monopoly is not generally a popular thing, as far as the citizens of America are concerned. American consumers do not like to be bullied in the marketplace. They want business managers to compete against one another, thus affording every consumer various alternatives from which to choose. If one seller begins acting like a king or a bully, Americans want the freedom to transfer their patronage to a more reasonable competitor. Thus through the facilities of a free market, consumers can put a bully in his place by the simple process of refusing to associate with him. Competition invites a bully to mend his ways, as a matter of self-interest.

Although the market is fully capable of handling bullies in this manner, there are always opportunists at hand who claim that the market process of control is inadequate, and that they have a better protective plan. They will point to a successful businessman and say: "See how big he has grown in the market place; therefore, he must be monopolist. Join with me and we will organize a counter-monopoly." It is dangerous to entrust one's own freedom to such opportunists; for they are potential bullies themselves.

There are strong reasons for believing that monopoly power is the major objective behind at least a part of the organizational efforts of employees in America. Any person who would defend the "right to organize" for such purposes, in other words, that they have a better protective plan. They will point to a successful businessman and say: "See how big he has grown in the market place; therefore, he must be monopolist. Join with me and we will organize a counter-monopoly." There are strong reasons for believing that monopoly power is the major objective behind at least a part of the organizational efforts of employees in America. Any person who would defend the "right to organize" for such purposes, in other words, that they have a better protective plan. They will point to a successful businessman and say: "See how big he has grown in the market place; therefore, he must be monopolist. Join with me and we will organize a counter-monopoly." It is dangerous to entrust one's own freedom to such opportunists; for they are potential bullies themselves.

Early Birds

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JORDAN, M. D.

A little more than two years ago a new development of considerable value to children suffering from cerebral palsy was brought to the attention of the medical profession. This was not a new and remarkable operation, nor the discovery of a new drug.

It was the recognition that children who have certain physical difficulties can be helped by slight modification of what they were doing if they were perfectly normal.

Since there may be readers of this column who are not familiar with the use of special toys for children with cerebral palsy a discussion of this subject may be helpful.

A few children are born with muscular difficulties resulting from injury to their brains before, during, or immediately after their births. The thinking processes may not be damaged, but they have muscular difficulties, principally of the arms and legs. These prevent them from developing normally as other children do.

At the 1951 meeting of the American Medical Association there was an exhibit on the use of special toys in the treatment of children with cerebral palsy. The study was sponsored by the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, and the American Toy Institute. In addition to the exhibit, an article on this subject was published in the June, 1951, issue of the Crippled Child magazine, and a list of toys used as aids was prepared by the two organizations mentioned.

A toy used for this purpose must be safe to handle, without sharp corners or rough, splintery edges. It must be easy to clean and not apt to rust or stain after washing.

MUST BE ADAPTABLE
These toys must be strong to withstand much abuse as they are frequently knocked off tables and thrown around. Finally, an ideal toy, if possible, should be adaptable for different uses at different ages.

All these ideas, through their influence were embodied and incorporated in Roosevelt's New Deal and Truman's Fair Deal.

Their undoing was that they envisaged Communist Russia as the realization of their dreams, and, although perhaps not meaning to be traitors, they sold out Uncle Sam to Joe Stalin. They were psychopathic, not true Americans.

PSYCHOPATHIC DREAMERS — Their lack of guts, their sense of insecurity and their cowardice were demonstrated by their rush to accept government employment, just as they had been unhappily content with poor pay as college instructors and beneficiaries of fellowship grants. They embarked on a restless, nervous, hungry voyage for security. They were yellow!

The depression had a devastating effect on them. It confirmed their belief that laissez-faire capitalism was a failure. They tossed Adam Smith out the campus window in favor of Karl Marx's system of a planned society.

Fair Enough...

American Brother-in-Law Of Molotov Served Reds In U. S.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER (Copyright, 1953, King Features)

NEW YORK — Official correspondence in the State Department states that Sam Carp, of Bridgeport, Conn., a brother-in-law of Vyacheslav Molotov, the Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, displaced David Rosoff as director of the official Russian trading corporation which was granted a $2,000,000 "break" by the United States Treasury in an alleged income tax deficiency.

Rosoff retained his title of director but was put completely under Carp's orders. Carp also had a habit of visiting Russia annually until the late 'thirties, and brought back bundles of American money, much of it in $1,000 bills. He never been called on to prove what he did with this money and the total amount is hopelessly ballooned-up in the answers which he gave in two separate examinations by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

The second inquiry prodded him for information about the ownership of a violent New Deal paper in Connecticut whose financial affairs were clouded in litigation. The committee asked Carp whether he had put Russian money into this propaganda organ and it was flatly charged that it followed the Communist line in some matters. However, Carp insisted that none of the money went into this radical sheet and the committee failed to subpoena his books. No inquiry ever troubled the paper or its editors. The paper was giving loud support to the late Sen. Brian McMahon, the New Deal's commissar for Connecticut in those days, and to Eleanor Roosevelt in her forays into the CIO's industrial domain in the important munitions centers of Connecticut.

Meanwhile, clusters of "intellectual" Communists infiltrated the pretty little rural New England towns of the area, even as far back as the Berkshire foothills. This penetration was reflected recently in noisy reaction in favor of Eleanor Roosevelt when she made a speech at Kent, LaBoca said Alger Hiss would have done this nation less harm even if he had been allowed to continue his treacherous course as Roy Cohn and David Stone were brought by their official inquiries in Europe for Senator McCarthy's committee.

There are a number of rich New Yorkers in the area who are well spotted by the rest of the community. Joe Connolly, Jr., the son of the late manager of King Features, has bought an interest in the weekly Connecticut Times, which serves that Berkshire region and, for the first time, an aggressive pro-American paper is now carrying the fight to the Reds. Max Lowenthal, revealed by Jonathan Daniels as the original "cover" and promoter of Harry Truman for President, has a summer place up there. Although Truman yielded the allied victory to Russia at Potsdam, there is no reason to think Henry Wallace in the same situation would have served the Russian interests any of the less than open-minded Wallace. Wilton and Ridgfield also are centers of infection.

The State Department documents relate that one of Carp's American agents, a Democrat and a former congressman, told Joseph C. Green, the chief of the office of Arms and Munitions Control, that "Carp's position was so firmly established that he could and did summon the Soviet ambassador to New York to confer with him whenever he wished."

This fixer, paid with Russian money, told Mr. Green that "the other day when he was in Carp's office in New York, Carp called Stalin by telephone. As a result of this conversation, Carp left on the Queen Mary to report in person in Moscow on the difficulties he was encountering in his efforts to purchase a battleship."

The Russians wanted a ship of 35,000 to 60,000 tons with 18-inch guns. Under treaties we were limited to 45,000 tons and 18-inch guns. The officers of our Navy were giving Carp a run-around. At last, plans were drawn for a ship of about 60,000 tons with 18-inch guns, but the Navy insisted that this design would alter naval warfare. Therefore, the Navy gave Carp the business to keep this leviathan out of Russia's hands.

In the end, an American officer was sent to Moscow to explain a set of plans for a great battleship which were sent over in the Russian diplomatic pouch. The information was not specific as to whether these were the authentic plans for the ship which was to make old designs and fighting ways obsolete. As far as the record goes, the Russians never built this monster. There are suspicions in the record that they were willing to spend $200,000,000 merely to get the turrets and the 18-inch guns. It is not clearly revealed whether they wanted them for a warship or for land fortifications.

The public in Bridgeport has been hearing of Sam Carp for years as Molotov's brother-in-law, but the prevailing opinion has been that he is a shrewd but rather comic fellow, who just wanted "to make a dollar" as he put it in his testimony, by exploiting his relationship to Molotov. There has never been any previous public intimation that he was so important that he could summon the Russian ambassador with a snap of his fingers or phone Stalin and receive a summons to Moscow. He has denied with indignation that he ever was a Communist or a Russian "agent," although he frankly admitted that he was commissioned to buy one or more of the colossal warships and that he did buy military planes. He also inquired about the purchase of a watch factory but with undisclosed results.

It is possible to be a Big Clean Guy at this point and say, well, it will be a deterrent to crime and microcosm. It is possible, but it doesn't make much sense. This sudden and uninvited move by authority to subject the citizenry to secret surveillance is much more important and frightening than any mere dodge to quell crime and criminals. It opens up an appalling vista of authority prying into every life without the citizen having any remedy or weapon for fighting back if Houston and Miami can do this without protest, then any city can do it and, in the end, it becomes possible for a government to sow TV cameras all over the land and keep a Gestapo-like eye on what is going on. This makes for a robot police force, an impersonal imposition of fear on the whole community of man.

It is almost certain to become a source for comic sketches and like buffoonery this coming season for the simple truth is that if the Miami story is completely true and hidden TV cameras are being spotted about that city an extraordinary and bold invasion of privacy has been accomplished I can't see anything very funny in a decision to put unsuspecting citizens under the scrutiny of cameras. Actually, since municipal prisoners, even though under lock and key, have not lost their rights as citizens the Houston jail set-up creates a neat legal problem. Does the commission of a felony under State rather than Federal statutes deprive a person of all his rights, including the inherent one of the right of privacy? Three New York lawyers say that it does not. The prisoner is beholden to the law only to the extent of his crime and the temporary deprivation of his liberty. New York lawyers are not cited as omniscient here, but they were the only counsel I had at hand.

TV cameras secretly scanning municipal activities amount to the creation of a captive audience. Two cities have tried to create captive audiences in the way of broadcast music. Grand Central Terminal in New York took a licking when it tried to broadcast music in the terminal without consulting the will of the majority, and the Washington, D. C., bus lines took another licking when they tried to install broadcast music in buses. Both defeats were based on the rights of captive audiences. The use of TV cameras to scan crowds, it seems to me, creates an even more serious type of captivity.

It is possible that Miami will deny any intention of secreting cameras to sentinel crowds. It is possible that the report itself is false. But if it is true, Miami citizens have a beautiful opportunity to see.

International Whirligig... American Traitors Had Sense Of Insecurity And Lacked Guts

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Ever since Representative Martin Dies of Texas began his investigation of American Communists almost 20 years ago, and especially since the Harry Truman - Harry White - Harry Vaughan climax of the last few weeks, the carbuncle question about this Red conspiracy in our midst has been:

"How is it that Americans with fine educations, solid backgrounds, good homes and families, and good jobs and prospects, could betray the country which gave them these riches—which gave them these opportunities—which gave them freedom to talk, to worship, to vote, to work and to live as they please?"

That is the $64 question.

AN UNANSWERED QUESTION—Although no Eisenhower, no Truman, no Brownell, no Senator McCarthy and no congressional committee has tried to answer this question, it is the basic problem behind the current controversy. It is fundamental to our way of life and living.

Either we are a failure or they are. Which? Unanswered, the verdict may be against us. So, this column might be entitled to a psychiatric study of the traitors and their collaborators within the government.

Fortunately, a close-up view of the anti-American actors in this harrowing tragedy, provides extremely comforting conclusions. A nonprofessional, psychiatric study of these political perverts discloses that they were abnormal Americans for quite definable causes. They just were not our kind of people!

OVEREDUCATED CASES — For one thing, they were not "well educated." They were "overeducated."

As students, instructors and clamorous claimants for unnecessary degrees, they lingered pathologically long in academic cloisters.

They could have obtained far more education in business and industry. But they did not have the guts to step out of school and go to work. That observation applies to every subversive listed in FBI files. College was their escape from bread-and-butter reality.

BACKGROUND OF TRAITORS—Few came from good homes, solid backgrounds or constructive environment. Many came from homes broken by divorce or desertion. Some were born abroad—Russia, Poland, Lithuania, Canada—where their families had suffered extreme hardships, as well as social, economic and political hardships. They were hunted and harassed peoples. Few had "good jobs." Most of them starved during the early days of the depression. They headed into Uncle Sam's service during these years at an average salary of $2,500.

Harry Dexter White's salary was only $3,000, although he had corrupted numerous academic degrees when Professor Jacob Viner called him and Lauchlin Currie to the Treasury in 1934. They were failures in their own mind.

A woman boarded a street car with five children. She busied herself seating them. A sailor arose and gave her his seat. Sailor — Are all those your children, Madam, or is it a picnic? Woman — They're all mine, and we're alone.

Harvesters Open Season With 85-42 Victory Over Hornets

29th Straight Win For McNeelymen

By BUCK FRANCIS
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa's defending state champion Harvester basketball team made an auspicious start on a brand new season last night when they racked up an 85-42 victory over the Tulla Hornets at Harvester Fieldhouse.

The victory ran the current Harvester win streak to 29 games.

It was a pretty fair showing on the part of the Green and Golders for a season opener. Ball handling was a little sloppy at times which is to be expected for a lid lifter.

Jimmy Bond, all-state center for the locals, took up where he left off last season by copping high point honors despite the fact he only reported for duty last Friday after completing his football duties for the Harvesters.

Bond poured in 23 points last night on 10 field goals and three from the gratis line. Gary Griffin, junior forward, was close behind Bond with 19 points.

Percentage-wise, the Harvesters fared well on their field goal attempts. The Pampana bucketed 38 of 65 goals on 58 attempts, for a 65.5 per cent.

The Harvesters led all the way after jumping out from 3-0 on a field goal by Griffin after only 30 seconds of play. Two shots from Don Fagan, diminutive guard for the Harvesters, copped last season, has been declared ineligible for this season on the semester ruling set by the T.H.A. Fagan, who was being counted upon to fill one of the guard positions his season, had been working out with the team until yesterday when the ruling was handed down.

The loss of Fagan leaves the Harvesters with only one returning letterman, Jimmy Bond.

The field by E. Jay McIlvain and another by Griffin boosted the Harvesters lead to 8-1 at the three-minute mark. After that it was just a matter of how much the margin of victory would be for the Green and Gold.

It was 17-8 at the first quarter after, 39-20 at halftime and 68-27 after three quarters.

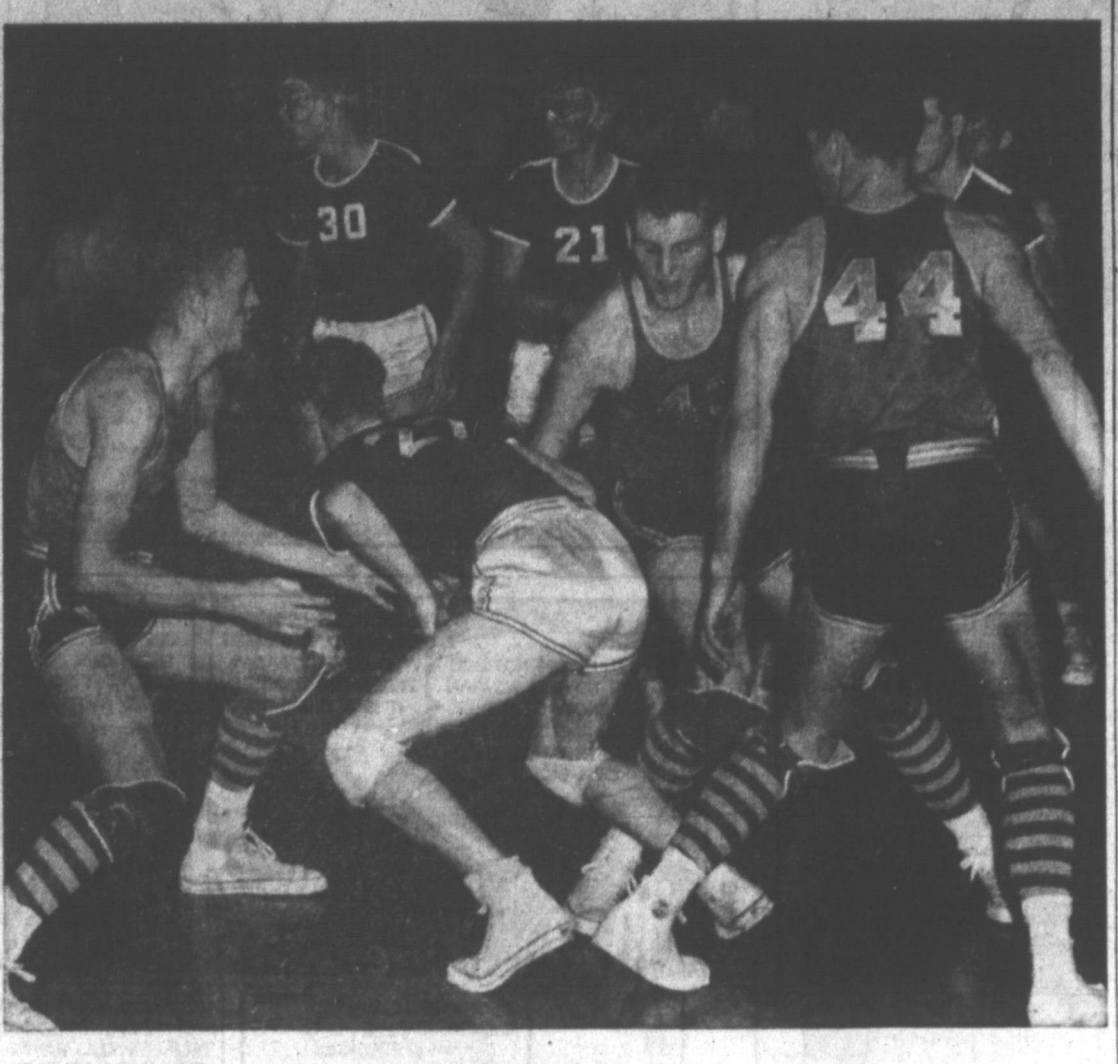

Bond and Griffin led the early onslaught of the Harvesters. Bond collected 14 points and Griffin 11 in the first half.

The Harvesters turned the game into a near rout in the third period by outscoring the visiting Tulla five, 20-7. Bond with nine and Griffin with eight led the third quarter spree.

A SWC Players On West Squad

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2—UP—Four players from two Southwest Conference teams have been named as members of the West squad for the annual Shrine's East-West game Jan. 2.

Carlton Massey, all-American end, and guard Phil Branch were picked from the University of Texas, and backs Fran Cotton, David Johnson and Jerry Coody from Baylor.

CAGE SEASON OPENS — Shown is some fourth quarter action in the Harvester basketball opener last night at Harvester Fieldhouse which saw the Pampana easily down Tulla, 85-42. Guard Bill Giles (No. 27) of the Hornets is completely surrounded by a trio of Harvesters, George Depee at left, Bill Culpepper, center, and Harold Lewis, No. 44, at right. Giles didn't get out of this jam as Culpepper wrestled the ball from the Hornet guard. In background looking down court are Mike Madura (No. 30) and Bill Daniels (No. 21) of Tulla. (News Photo by T. TCU Also Victorious In Lid Lifter Oklahoma Aggies Open Cage Slate With Win Over H-SU

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—UP—Four of last season's top basketball players posted impressive opening victories Wednesday and flashy Frank Selvy of Furman team a 100 to 74 whipping at Raleigh, N. C., setting a new record for record for State's coliseum in the process by racking up 61 points in the first half. Veteran Dave Gotkin hit for 24 points and sophomore center Ron Shavlik for 23 to lead the Wolfpack. But Selvy scored 31 as rout of the Texas Aggies and San Francisco's 51 to 33 upset of California.

Coming through in grand style were North Carolina State, former Southern Conference titan; Big Ten contender Illinois; Missouri Valley champion Oklahoma A&M; and Southwest Conference champion Texas Christian.

A Sound Beating

It was N. C. State which handed Selvy's Furman team a 100 to 74 whipping at Raleigh, N. C., setting a new record for record for State's coliseum in the process by racking up 61 points in the first half. Illinois, ranked the No. 6 team in the nation at the end of last season, got off winging with 45 to 54 triumph over Ohio University as Paul Judson set the Valley champion Oklahoma A&M scoring pace with 17 points.

DALLAS, Dec. 2—UP—Lamar McHan of Arkansas, a throwback to the old-time "triple-threaters," and Kossie Johnson of Rice, a full-back whose power running belies his 178 pounds, stand out as the unanimous choices on the 1953 United Press All-Southwest Conference team.

There was little indecision about most of the spots on the mythical team picked by United Press sports writers and conference scouts, but the handsome McHan and rugged Johnson left no doubt at all of their superiority in the minds of the 16 balloters.

McHan was the circuit's top passer, the total offense pacemaker and leading punter, while Johnson led the loop in rushing, scoring and kickoff returns.

THE ORANGE BOWL HAS come up with the top New Year's Day attraction in landing unbeaten Maryland against the once-beaten Oklahoma Sooners. It was more or less "luck" that the Orange officials landed such a game since it was already determined before the season started that the champions of the Big Seven and Atlantic Coast Conferences would clash in the Miami game.

It was a wise move on the part of the Orange Bowl to line up these two conferences (especially for this year) since it couldn't outbid the Cotton and Sugar Bowls in luring either Oklahoma or Maryland.

Rice and Oklahoma would have been a natural in the Cotton classic. The Sooners would also have realized more revenue by playing in the Cotton because of the bigger purse and also less traveling.

But the Sooners or, I should say, the Big Seven, wasn't taking any chances of being bypassed by the Cotton and Sugar by signing a pact with the Orange Bowl.

If this contract continues, then the Sooners will be making it an annual affair of playing in the Orange Bowl each New Year's Day.

Here is the way we would rank the bowl games this season according to the best teams attracted:

1. Orange Bowl — Oklahoma vs. Maryland.
2. Rose Bowl — U.C.L.A. vs. Michigan State.
3. Cotton Bowl — Rice vs. Alabama.
4. Gator Bowl — Texas Tech vs. Auburn.

A lot of fans, including those in New Orleans where the game is held, are dissatisfied with the Sugar Bowl lineup, mainly because of West Virginia.

Looking back over the West Virginia schedule, we can readily see why the New Orleans fans are "burned" up. The Mountaineers didn't play a team this season that is anywhere near among the top 20 teams either in the United Press or Associated Press polls.

The West Virginia schedule consisted of Pitt, Wayneburg, Washington, V.M.I., Penn State, V.P.E., South Carolina and North Carolina State. The Mountaineers, despite this weak schedule, didn't get out-beaten. They lost to off-beater South Carolina.

With the kind of money that the Sugar is able to offer, we're sure they could have lured a much better foe for Georgia Tech than the Mountaineers.

Tech Five Wins Opener, 85-42

LUBBOCK, Dec. 2—UP—The Texas Tech basketball team, with one win in the bag, left Wednesday night for a road trip to Tennessee.

What I do not know is how you put that thought in my heart... - John 13-7

Dear parents, in that country to which your child has gone, there are no scenes of sorrow, the shadows of the cross, But radiantly happy For evermore, my friends, Who dwell among the angels Where tears are wiped away. Christ, merciful at the tomb of Lazarus.

He realized the loss— The darkness of the valley. The shadows of the cross, The bitter grief at parting, The pain that parents feel, The words though life was ready, The human grief to heal. Oh, there are tears for dying, And hearts to be broken by the grave. There's a loneliness and aching; But Christians should be brave.

For One who passed before we came back that we might see That soul-life eternal. Let this your comfort be.

Donald Ray Richardson

We wish to express our most sincere appreciation to all who in any way assisted us in the hours of our sorrow in the untimely death of our beloved son and brother, Donald Ray Richardson, Nov. 22nd. We especially wish to acknowledge the membership of the Methodist Church and the Bible Baptist Church whose kindness will long be remembered. To Rev. John Brock for his comforting message and to those who furnished the music. We are grateful also to the excellent funeral home for the beautiful last rites.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Richardson Sr. Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Richardson Richardson, Nov. 22nd. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Anderson Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Caswell Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clemons Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Carl Richardson.

Lynna and Glenn Lec

Nov. 24, 1953

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks for all the kind words and visits in the loss of our twin baby girl, Glenna Lee, who was the comfort and joy of our hearts and the pride and joy of our parents. Her loss has left a void in our hearts that will never be filled. May God bless her with each of you.

Santa's Helpers To Divide Candy

O. L. Blinn, chairman of the Candy Distribution committee for the Santa Day activities, has chosen 25 business men, professional men of Pampa to assist Santa Claus in the distribution of the 4,000 sacks of candy to children of the city and surrounding territory.

The candy will be distributed by these men in the corridors of the City Hall immediately following the parade. The children will form two lines at the north entrance of the building and will walk through to the center of the corridor, where they will receive the candy, after which they will depart through the south entrance.

Members of the Pampa Fire department have been busy for the past several days sacking the candy and have just completed the job, it was learned.

Santa's helpers will be Ed Anderson, Ernest Winborne, Bunny Behrman, W. R. Veele, A. B. Bowman, Ben Ogden, Louis Purzley, Bob Addington, Bob Clements, Newt Secrest, Billy Clements, Irvin Cole, John Wales, Ed Cleveland, Leon Gilbert, Mitchell Hill, Russell Kennedy, Al Metz, Homer Deck, Ed Snyder, Evert Carmon and Myron Warden.

Times Changing

CATTERICK CAMP, Yorkshire, England, Dec. 2—UP—Lt. Col. John F. North, commanding officer here, said Wednesday he would bust sergeants who swore at recruits. "In the old days, the more a non-commissioned officer swore, the better he got on," North said. "These days we try to reach men's hearts."

North also has inaugurated a "Mother's Day" when mothers visit recruits and have tea with them.

JayCees Consider Carnegie's Course

Pampa's junior chamber of commerce may be the sponsor of a four-hour class one night a week for 16 weeks, that it would be taught "by the vehicle of public speaking."

George Caddell, Amarillo, representing the man of friend-winning and people-influencing fame, Tuesday noon told local JayCees of the course, and asked them to consider sponsoring it on the local level.

Dick Stowers, lame-duck JayCee president, said the Jayces' board of directors would meet the end of the month or the first part of January to make a final decision.

Emphasizing that he didn't think the course had ever been given in Pampa, Caddell stated that it would be in the form of a four-hour class one night a week for 16 weeks, that it would be taught "by the vehicle of public speaking."

In many cases, the Carnegie man continued, employees' firms pay part or all of the tuition for the course. Only at the last did Caddell mention the actual cost of tuition, $10.

Earl McConnell, local film enthusiast, showed Jayces two films after Caddell's presentation. One was about playful bears. The other was about the savagery of a seldom-photographed fight to the finish between a tiger and a lion.

Outside of today's joint meeting with Pampa's other three civic clubs to hear U.S. Sen. Lyndon Johnson, the JayCees have only two other meetings this month.

Pampa Students On Honor Roll At Plainview

Two Pampans, Beverly Williams and Bryan Clemens, placed on the Dean's honor list for the first nine weeks' grading period at Wesleyan College, Plainview.

Miss Williams is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Williams, 633 N. Wells and earned a 2.20 average out of a possible 3.00. She is a first year student and a graduate of Pampa High School where she earned membership in the National Honor Society.

Clemens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Clemens of Skellytown, and formerly of Pampa. He earned a 2.50 average. In addition to his scholastic achievement, he is a member of the Youngster Mission Band, which sends groups each weekend to churches in the area for services. Clemens, a ministerial student, and his wife, the former Louise Wilson of Pampa, live on the campus.

Real Estate Board Names New Officers

The selection of officers for the new year was made by the Pampa Real Estate Board Tuesday in the Pine Room of the Schneider Hotel.

Those elected were Quentin Williams, president; Garvin Elkins, vice-president; and Mrs. Maxine Stalcup, secretary-treasurer. The new officers will be installed during a dinner meeting early in January. John Bradley is in charge of the arrangements for the event.

During the business meeting, a discussion was held on the value of advertising in newspapers, led by E. L. Campbell, president. The local papers received favorable mention on recent publications concerning advertising promotion for realtors.

A resolution of condolence was given to Charlie Ward on the recent loss of his son, M. V. Ward.

Bruce Coplin of the Pampa News advertising staff was introduced as a new member and Willena Lovell was presented as a guest.

Those present included E. L. Campbell, Garvin Elkins, John Bradley, Quentin Williams, Bob Williams, Charlie Ward, Jay Flanagan, Mrs. Jessie Stoup, Bruce Coplin, and Mrs. Maxine Stalcup.

Church Holding Foreign Mission

Pampa's Calvary Baptist Church is holding a foreign mission week of prayer this week. Among the special activities planned is a program at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday on foreign missions presented by the church's G. A. Girls, with Jacqueline Robertson in charge.

The event will close Friday with an all-day meeting beginning at 10:30 a.m. At noon, a Christmas luncheon will be held. The church's junior adult fellowship met Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Graham with 55 persons present. The program consisted of members by two district teams and two quartets.

In connection with the building of the new addition to the church, the members have designated Dec. 12 as building fund day. The regular church collection will be used that day to help pay the costs of the building project, which is now nearing completion.

Greek Royalty Thank Truman

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—UP—King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece fulfilled an oft-expressed desire Tuesday by thanking in person former President Truman for the post-war aid supplied their nation by the United States.

The tall Greek sovereign and his pert consort entertained Mr. Truman and Averell Harriman, former American aid administrator in Europe, at lunch in the royal suite at the Waldorf. Astoria lowers Margaret Truman and Mrs. Harriman also were guests at the private party.

Two Indiana Banks Held Up 3 Hours Apart

JASONVILLE, Ind., Dec. 2—UP—Two Indiana banks 130 miles apart were held up within three hours Tuesday and robbed of an estimated $55,000.

In the first robbery here, three bandits got $40,000 after kidnaping and terrorizing a cashier and his wife for 11 hours.

The Jasonville People's Trust Co. was robbed about 7 a. m. by three men who seized and injured Cashier John W. Pope and waited for hours, holding Pope and his wife at gunpoint, to rob the bank at daybreak.

Second Robbery Three hours later, the Cass County State Bank at Walton, Ind., northeast of Jasonville, was robbed of $12,000 to $13,000 by two men who held up President L. H. Babb while three customers and two other bank employees were unaware of the robbery.

Pope was knocked unconscious as he entered his hotel apartment at 8 p. m. and was held at gunpoint all night.

His wife, Stella, was seized as she came home from a church meeting. Forced to Open Vault Pope was forced to open the bank and a vault at 7 a. m. The bandits took the money in bills of small denomination and fled after warning Pope not to call police.

Hundred-Dollar Bonnet Has Scribe And Wife Gasp

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—UP—I'm a pretty scared character. A friend sent me a $100 hat. And I don't know where to hang it so that some alley character with no scruples won't walk off with it. This bonnet is made of all-beaver and it says on the inside, "I understand it will hold a hatful of rain without leaking and will shed snow flakes."

I made a search around our town and I couldn't seem to find any body about wearing $100 hats, even in St. Homburg set.

When the "thing" arrived, encased in a cork-covered box, Mama and I got to looking back over the years.

She dragged out an old budget book, going back to the tough old days of the mid-thirties.

"Look," said she, "way back there you could buy a topper for $3, and no sales tax. For the price of this bonnet, you could have had 33-1/3 hats. Why couldn't we put this thing up for auction and maybe settle for half a hundred?"

We won't. I argued that the pearl-gray number was too pretty a thing to fool around with and offer up for nothing but money. Not only that, but feathers in the back must be worth at least a dime a feather. That's just what I told her.

And speaking of hats: When I was a lad, for 25-cents of paper-padding money a kid could get a straw job, fit for fishin'. If he had three or four bucks in his jeans when it came time for his first formal, he could have himself a Benny—or derby.

Rule the Roost And with that iron hat, a kid around town was the cock of the roost.

I do not know how those unfangled $100 bonnets stack up in the test of time and wear, but I'll tell you this, folks:

There are a lot of guys in my home town still sporting Kelly hats that didn't cost 'em a week's salary. Those things don't have to go to the cleaner and blocker every now and again. You can rub the dust and lint off of them with your dirty socks.

Fire Kills Three Brothers, Sister

GREENVILLE, Mich., Dec. 2—UP—Three young brothers and a sister died in a flash fire Tuesday that swept their converted barn home. Two other sisters escaped.

Fire Chief Frank Van Atta said the oldest boy, James McAllister, 13, could have saved himself by jumping from an upstairs window but yelled: "I'm going back to get the rest of them."

Suffocated by James were Ronnie, 8, Laura, 7, and L. D., 5. Their sisters Reeva, 12, and Reba, 11, escaped.
