Kremlin claims plane on spy mission

Soviet general says U.S. spy plane accompanied Korean airliner

By RICK GLADSTONE Associated Press Writer

A top Kremlin general said today a U.S. spy plane rendezvoused with a South Korean airliner that entered Soviet airspace on Washington's orders and ignored at least 120 warning shots before a Soviet warplane destroyed it

"The plane obviously must have been flying toward. Soviet airspace fulfilling a spy mission ... Why did it proceed in no other place than the one with Soviet installations?" asked Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, the Soviet military chief of

In a rare news conference at the Soviet Foreign Ministry televised overseas, Ogarkov told foreign reporters that Soviet defense forces detected Korean Air Lines flight 007 flying side by side with an American RC-135 surveillance aircraft for 10 minutes near a sensitive Soviet military zone in the Sea of Japan, 310 miles off the jetliner's intended course.

"Their flights were certainly coordinated so as to make our task more difficult and confuse our air defense forces," the marshal said.

He said the South Korean Boeing 747 later tried to flee when interceptors scrambled to meet it and defied 120 warning shots before a Soviet warplane blasted it with an air-to-air missile.

This was the first Soviet acknowledgment that one of its planes downed the South Korean jetliner with a missile, one of two Ogarkov said were fired. Previously, the Soviets had said only that the flight was "stopped."

On the warning shots, Ogarkov said Soviet pilots fired two sets of warning shots, including a series of "four bursts" totalling 120 rounds of tracer

The United States has admitted that an RC-135 spy plane was in the area the day of the shooting, but claims it was never closer than 300 miles to the jetliner and was on the ground in Alaska one hour before the jetliner was shot down Sept 1.

Asked by an American reporter why the Soviets couldn't identify a jumbo jet, and why in any event the plane carrying 269 people, including 61 Americans, was shot down, Ogarkov

"The Soviet air forces made attempts to make it land but the plane evaded, altered course... All possibilities were exhausted and only then was the order given." He did not say why the plane couldn't be identified.

The elaborate Soviet response to world outrage over the destruction of the aircraft came as the Soviet Union faced a possible rebuke in the United Nations and increased retaliation elsewhere for the incident. All people aboard the jetliner are presumed dead.

Standing in front of a detailed map, Ogarkov said the Soviet radar trackers determined that the RC-135 peeled off and flew back toward Alaska shortly before the jumbo jet entered Soviet airspace, leaving the commercial liner to proceed alone.

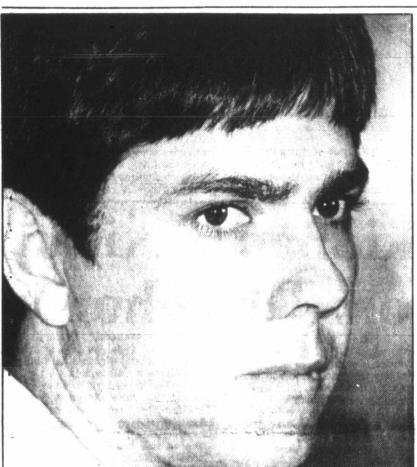

'Obviously they felt that plane was being controlled, precisely controlled, I would say, and the entry was deliberate," Ogarkov said.

Japanese police said a child's body, with glass and metal fragments imbedded in it, had been found by fishermen off the northern coast of Japan. Officers said the fragments indicated the youngster may have been a passenger aboard the downed jetliner and said an autopsy was being

Earlier in Madrid, Secretary of State George P. Shultz called the Soviet act "shocking to the conscience of mankind

Shultz, speaking at the 35-nation Madrid Security Conference, said the destruction of the jetliner was part of what he called systematic Soviet human rights violations.

KENNY RODGERS...serviceman takes stand

Says company procedure not followed

Energas serviceman testifies

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior staff Writer

Taking the stand in his blue Energas work shirt, pants and work boots, serviceman Kenny Rodgers admitted Thursday that he didn't follow the company's written service procedure when he turned on natural gas at a Pampa mobile home that caught fire later the same day.

Rodgers, 22, testified in the $21 million lawsuit filed against the gas utility company by three family members who were burned in the fire

The young Energas employee, a native of Pampa, began working for the company Oct. 16, 1981, according to company records.

"Kenny, I want you to know I'm not picking on you - I know this has been a bad experience for you too," the plaintiffs' lawyer Dale Friend told Rodgers as questioning began.

The young man's employer, Pioneer Corporation and its subsidiaries. Energas and Westar Transmission Companies, is negligent and responsible for the fire Aug. 27, 1982, partly because the utility did not properly train Rodgers, the plaintiffs

James Boleman IV, his wife Ana and infant child Anna are parties to the lawsuit. The mother and child suffered third - degree burns in the fire over more than half their bodies.

The serviceman followed his Energas bosses on the stand Thursday. Pampa Energas Manager Jerry Norris was first to testify. "Do you have any way to know how Kenny was doing his turn - ons?'

Friend asked Norris "Not without being right there," the Energas manager answered.

'Would any supervisor know the specifics of what he did?" Friend

"Not without being there...Not unless there was another individual there to observe," Norris said.

Through the Energas manager's testimony, Friend laid the legal groundwork for introducing a memo from Rodgers' company personnel file over repeated objections from the Norris testified that the ability to accurately read meters is essential to nearly every task of an Energas serviceman.

The memo from the personnel file deals with a supervisor's reprimand of Rodgers for incorrectly reading

Prior to the trial, District Judge Don Cain had signed an order prohibiting testimony about information in the personnel file

But through Norris' testimony, Friend was able to enter into evidence one "inter - office" memo. The jury was briefly removed from the courtroom for arguments about the memo. Judge Cain overruled Energas attorney Tom Milam's objection, and the memo was admitted.

After the seven - woman, five - man jury was seated again, and over Milam's continued objections, Norris read the memo to the jurors.

The note, written Aug. 24, 1982, three days before the fire, from Pampa Service Foreman Richard L. Taylor to Norris reads in part:

"In the past few weeks I have noticed many re - reads. I found most re - reads were due to over - reads and some meters not read at all... Kenny Rodgers was the meter reader at this time. I have received numerous complaints in the month of July on his reading.'

Taylor testified next about the way Energas trains its servicemen and about the way he checks to make sure his men do their jobs properly.

The company keeps no records of employees' training. Energas servicemen receive no classroom training, take no written tests, and the company has no record that an employee satisfactorily completes training, Taylor testified.

All training is on the job, he said. A new employee goes along to work orders with other servicemen and supervisors and learns the job from them. Taylor said

Taylor keeps track that the servicemen are working orders properly by checking each morning to ensure the men have answered all the questions on their order cards, he said.

'Normally, I'd just go through and make sure they were filled out properly," he said. Sometimes, the foreman checks

'around behind them' and goes with See TRIAL, Page two

Wholesale prices climb slightly

Drought pushes food prices up

prices, driven up by the first food price increase in four months, rose 0.4 percent in August, the government said

Food price hikes, largely the product of the summer's drought and heat wave, were posted for vegetables, poultry, eggs and pork. Food prices rose 0.4 percent, matching the overall

Experts had been predicting that the devastating weather would send food prices up next year, but the speed with which the increases are being felt shows just how severe the drought and

Even with the food price increases, however, many economists say that the Labor Department's wholesale price calculation for all of 1983 may rise at its slowest pace since the mid-1960s.

Indeed, prices for the first eight months of the year were flat. For the year ending in August, prices rose just 1.4 percent, their best 12-month showing since 1967. They had risen 3.7 percent in 1982.

-Poultry prices soared 5.1 percent after falling 2 percent in the preceding -Egg prices, off 1.4 percent in July,

-Pork prices rose 0.6 percent after five months of sharp declines. On the plus side, prices continued falling for beef and veal, down 13 percent, a sharp cutback, however, from July's 4.8 percent drop. As for beef and veal prices, which have been moderating as breeders liquidate their herds rather than pay high feed prices, many analysts expect higher prices in the coming months as the liquidation ends and the supply of cattle going to market shrinks.

Fresh fruit prices fell 5.6 percent

As for other areas of the wholesale price report, the department said energy prices rose a modest 0.3 percent, slightly higher than the 0.2 percent gain of the previous month. Gasoline prices rose 0.4 percent, less month before. Natural gas prices edged downward 0.2 percent after tumbling 1.2 percent. Heating oil prices rose 0.5 percent after falling 0.7 percent.

The energy price calculations reported today were actually for July. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

The department also reported that: -Passenger car prices rose a sharp 1.3 percent after holding flat in July Light truck prices were up 0.3 percent reversing a 0.3 percent decline.

-Capital equipment costs rose 0.7 percent, their sharpest rise since November 1981. Much of the increase was due to higher motor vehicle prices.

Associated Press photographer William Foley today said the first rocket barrage came at about midnight and the second about 75 minutes later.

Nine rockets hit in the first attack and three in the second, sending the 1,200 Magines at the airport into bunkers and foxholes on each occasion, Foley reported

No further attacks had occurred by dawn, but artillery fire could be heard n the mountains, where Christian and Druse militias have been struggling for control since the Israeli army withdrew to a new defense line further south last

The rocketing came a day after the U.S. Navy frigate Bowen fired on and destroyed a Druse militia battery that had shelled the airport, where four Marines have been killed and 28 wounded since late last month.

In a telephone call to the Marines commander, Col. Tim Garaghty, Reagan offered his condolences Thursday for the casualties and said: "I am determined to see to it that we provide you whatever support it takes to stop the attacks on your positions.

"Tell the Marines the entire nation is proud of you and the outstanding job you are doing under difficult odds," Reagan told Garaghty. The telephone call was reported in Washington by Larry Speakes, the chief White House

Jobless picture improves slightly

The unemployment picture in Pampa and Gray County improved slightly in July, according to statistics released by Charles Vance, manager of the local Texas Employment Commission office. Vance reported that unemployment in Pampa dipped to 9.9 percent in July, down from 10.2 percent the previous The jobless rate for the remainder of the county fell slightly, from 11.3 percent in June to 11.1 percent in July. The rates for Pampa and the county were higher than both the national and state unemployment rates at the end of August. Local statistic for August will not be available until next month. The latest report shows Pampa with a work force of 13,123. The city has 11,822 persons with jobs and 1,301 who are unemployed.

In the remainder of the county, 2,709 persons are employed and 337 are without jobs out of the work force of Vance said the change from June to July was so small that no conclusions could be drawn from it. He said there are job openings in the county for food service and clerical workers, bookkeepers, retail sales, domestic work and a variety of unskilled labor jobs.

PERRYTON - Grand opening ceremonies for the Senior Citizens Center will be held this weekend.

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies will begin at 6:30 p.m. for the new facility located at 15th and Jefferson, between the YMCA and the city swimming pool.

Dedicatory remarks will be delivered by Rev. Steve Rehrig, chairman of the building committee; Mayor Quentin Rizley, Ochiltree County Judge Howard Jones and June Kindy, president of the Ochiltree County Senior Citizens Association

The ceremony, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce Perryton Partners, will be followed by a barbecue provided by Wheatheart

All county residents age 55 and over are especially invited to attend Music during the meal and for a dance afterwards will be provided by Opal Vanderburg and band from Beaver, Okla.

An open house for the new building will be from 3-5 p.m. Sunday. Board members will be on hand to give guided tours of the facility. The new center has 6,000 square feet of floor space, including a game room, a large all-purpose room, a library, an arts and crafts room, a kitchen, a storage room

The building is a result of the efforts of the Golden Age Group, who decided to raise funds after the defeat of a 1982 bond issue which would have included a senior citizens area as part of a proposed exhibition center.

The group elected June Kindy as chairman to raise funds and began a fund-raising drive in August, 1982. The goal of $150,000 was reached by December. The building was contracted to John Croftright and Sunburst Enterprises of Booker, with groundbreaking ceremonies held Dec.

The Senior Citizens Center, with final costs of construction and equipment topping $200,000 (all raised by contributions, including $15,000 from First National Bank), is designed to serve senior citizens of Perryton and the surrounding areas.

The board of directors are June Kindy, president; Brucé Julian, vice president, and Wilma Shrof, secretary-treasurer. The building committee consisted of Rev. Steve -Rehrig, chairman, and Harold Hudson, Pat McAllister, Karen Knowland, Evelyn Barnett and Ms. Kindy.

students have it made Some SMU

DALLAS (AP) - While the University of Texas at Arlington is facing a crisis in student housing, Southern Methodist University is accomodating some of its students in facilities that feature free coffee, maid service, a pool and a free drink at "happy hour.

About 75 SMU students are upholding the Dallas school's reputation as a "country club" school. As a temporary measure, the school has put the students in a Dallas hotel while their dormitory is being

SMU housing director Eugene Ward said the displaced students should be back in their dorm by the beginning of October. The cost of housing the students at the Twin Sixties Inn is about $10,000 a week, according to hotel general manager Jody Johnson.

Ward said the university is spending a little more than twice as much to house the students as they are paying the school. He said the temporary measure is "a hassle for us and for the students."

Not all of the students, however, agree.

"The first three weeks have been great," said SMU sophomore Charles Slack. "With wake up calls, free papers and coffee each morning, it's not a bad way to start the school

"You'd never see anything like this except at SMU," said Ben Smith, a junior. "Where else would you find a dorm where you can enjoy happy hour, take a dip in the pool and then call room service?"

At the nearby University of Texas at Arlington, the housing shortage is a different story

UTA's growth, which has made it the state's fifth largest school, has created a housing shortage that is forcing prospective students to enroll elsewhere, officials said.

"Lots (of students) are finding another place to live, and others may have gone to another school if it has more housing," said Will Parker, UTA director of student housing.

UTA officials said that on Sept. 1, about 580 students were on a waiting list for dormitory units and another 1,100 wanted to lease an apartment or house from the university.

Story of Perot adventure

Author writes Texas thriller

DALLAS (AP) - Ken Follett topped the best-seller lists with his riveting British spy novel "Eye of the Needle. Now he is well on his way up the non-fiction list with a Texas-style thriller he says even he couldn't have dreamed up.

This real-life story sprung from the mind of Dallas computer multi-millionaire H. Ross Perot, who decided in 1978 to finance a commando raid into revolution-torn Iran to spring two of his employees from Ghasr prison, a jail fortress in the center of Tehran. The mission succeeded, thanks to a well-timed riot that freed 11,000

At a press conference Thursday, Follett told reporters in his clipped British accent the plot of "On Wings of Eagles." As he introduced the characters in the story, he brought their real-life counterparts on stage the two "$13 million jailbirds," Perot and the employees of his Electronic Data Systems who trained for and helped conduct the secret mission.

"I couldn't have dreamed this up." said Follett, who began the book two years ago at Perot's request. Perot said he wanted the book written

"as a permanent record for the men who did the job." A major character in the book was not present at the news conference, though his portrait loomed on an easel beside the stage - Lt. Col. Arthur leading Perot's employees safely out of Simons, who led a well-executed but ill-timed mission to an empty North Vietnamese POW camp in 1970, was deeply depressed over his wife's death and seized the offer by Perot to lead the secret Iran mission, Follett said. Follett said he received no guidance from Perot, but said, "We had an agreement that if he felt Simons was portraved in a wildly inaccurate way, the book would not be published." "These men sitting here owe their

Perot said neither he nor EDS would profit from the book. The book begins in 1978, but the story began in 1976 when Perot sent William Gaylord and Paul Chiapparone to Iran to oversee a $20 million contract to computerize the country's social but because the banking system in Iran had collapsed, it was impossible to get . the money into the country, said

Department produced no results because political ties to Iran were the U.S. government's involvement. "Mr. Follett is much more objective about that than we are," he said.

Follett told of Perot taking the dangerous step of going into Iran himself to visit Gaylord and Chiapparone in prison. Perot expected to go unnoticed since no one in Iran

But the first person he saw in the prison was former U.S. Attorney, General Ramsey Clark, who supposedly knew Perot. Follett said a it was a tribute to Perot's uncanny "luck" that Clark mistook him for Eastern Airlines president Frank Borman.

With bail out of the question, Simons decided the two men would have to be broken out of the prison and smuggled out of the country, Follett said.

DALLAS (AP) - U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, a shoo-in whenever he runs for office in his East Texas district, admits that a cocaine investigation and hit-and-run accident are trying his constituents' patience with his sometimes flamboyant lifestyle.

"I'm glad the election is not next told the Dallas Times Herald in an interview published today. The Lufkin Democrat returned Wednesday night to tour his East Texas district and meet with constituents for the first time since the Justice Department dropped its drug investigation of him and the automobile accident occurred. But 1983 has been his most trying year, primarily because of the six-month federal drug investigation into allegations that he used cocaine at several parties.

Two weeks after the Justice Department announced that it was dropping the probe, Wilson ran his 1979 Lincoln Continental into the rear of another car on a Potomac River bridge and left the scene. He told police he thought he had hit a guardrail and fined $25 Wednesday for a misdemeanor offense of colliding.

The investigation and accident seem to have caused Wilson more problems than any other recent incidents.

Baytown council approves ban on living in subdivision

BAYTOWN, Texas — About 300 families will have to leave their homes in the fashionable Brownwood subdivision because of a new city ordinance barring anyone from ever again living in the flood-prone and hurricane-ravaged area.

'Our attachment to our sticks and stones is not realistic: Brownwood is gone. It is no more," Gene Shepherd, president of the Brownwood Civic Association, said before the council voted Thursday night.

Brownwood homeowners can sell their land to the federal government, which has $1.5 million available to buy the property. Under he ordinance, the federal government will give the land to the city of Baytown to keep as an "open green space

Homeowners who choose to keep their land may do so, city officials said, but no fences or buildings may be put there.

Congress draws deficit blame

The nation's governors, largely because of partisan wrangling, were unable to get together on a formal resolution expressing concern over continuing high federal budget deficits. Nonetheless, most of them were concerned about how such deficits, which have a tendency to "crowd out" private borrowing and put upward pressures on interest rates, will affect what is starting to look like a genuine recovery in most of the country

It's too bad the governors, like most of the media, did little more than mouth pious phrases about the size of deficits. About the only numbers we get on the federal budget these days is this week's breathless update of the size of the projected deficit next year. Too seldom do we get information on total spending, the driving force behind deficits.

To make a little sense out of the budget confusion, it might be helpful to compare spending totals as they are today with the totals projected two or three years ago. That will give us an idea of whether deficits result from mismanagement, misallocation of resources, poor economic planning. or just plain overspending.

In the summer of 1981, projected spending for fiscal 1983. the year in which we are currently laboring. was $728 billion. The current figure for this year (which ends Sept. 30) is $815 billion, nearly $100 billion over target. Could that have anything to do with the size of the

The 1981 spending projection for fiscal 1984 was $758 billion. Current projections indicate that FY 1984 spending will be more like $858 billion, almost exactly $100 billion over target. That couldn't be contributing to the deficit, could it?

There's an important point about these 1981 projections. Two years ago it was assumed that inflation would be higher than it has turned out to be - which means real spending has actually grown faster than it appears on paper. If budget projections were taken seriously in Washington, you might have expected spending this year to be lower than the 1981 projections, since inflation hasn't been as high as had been expected.

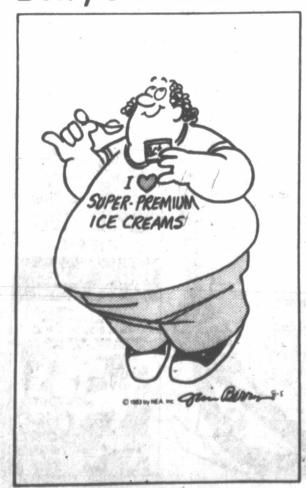

Is higher spending due to President Reagan's military buildup? President Carter's last budget projections. completed in January 1981, proposed to spend $238 billion on the military in fiscal 1984. The current budget calls for military spending of about $240 billion. There's fat and waste there, to be sure, but military spending hasn't been the budget buster.

Federal spending overall is now 25 percent of GNP. When Reagan assumed office it was 22.5 percent. The number of people receiving food stamps is higher under Reagan (22 million) than under Carter (19 million).

This has happened, for the most part, because Congress is eager to demonstrate its "compassion" by adding a little here and a little there to administration budget proposals and because so - called "entitlement" programs continue out of control.

The administration can be faulted for not being more aggressive, for not proposing actual spending reductions. But it's safe to say that the primary blame for high spending and high deficits resides in Congress.

Balance of trade looming crisis

In an article entitled "America's Hidden Problem." Business Week has focused much - needed attention on the coming crisis in international trade. It is a looming crisis that either people aren't generally aware of or don't care about.

The magazine begins its description of the crisis with the report that U.S. foreign trade is "running $60 billion in the red -18 times the figure in 1973." It quotes a business research organization to the effect that the deficit "could hit $174 billion

The magazine predicts that the trade problem could turn out to be the economic disaster of the decade

It is hard to understand why more Americans aren't alarmed at what is happening. As foreign - made products replace American - made products in the U.S. market, factories are shut down and workers are laid off in the affected industries. In order to maintain profitibility, more and more American companies locate or expand plants abroad.

In the face of this, many extreme free trade proponents insist that there's nothing to worry about. For example, Dr.

Richard McKenzie of Clemson University recently wrote in Conservative Digest that "trade - international or domestic - is always in two directions." That textbook answer simply isn't true. Japan for example, wants to sell more and more goods in the U.S. It is markedly unenthusiastic about allowing American goods to be sold in Japan, whether agricultural commodities or machinery.

What Dr. McKenzie and others who share his viewpoint don't understand is what Business Week refers to as the industrial 'targeting' policies pursued by France, Japan, and other countries to gain strong or dominant shares in key markets.

American companies simply can't compete when foreign countries determine that they will take market share from American companies and products. A case in point, Business Week says, is the action of the $16 billion marketing subsidy provided by Eureopan countries for the sale of the Airbus. No amount of U.S. productivity or managerial skill can overcome a foreign political decision to support the sale of a specific product with vast sums.

The free trade purists say that part of the problem is that American companies have failed to invest in new technology. Again, that simply isn't so. Business Week cites the textile industry, which free traders have referred to as geriatric, as an industry which has spent $6 billion on new machinery in the last five years. This industry has to compete against textiles producedin the Peoples Republic of China where, according to a report in Barron's Financial Weekly, the wage rate is 16, cents an hour. What this means is that investor - owned American companies can't hope to compete with autocracies which dictate wage scales and prohibit worker protests.

The American government and people haven't come to grips with these realities. It is not enough to say that the answer to our trade problems is a greater adherence on free trade principles when competitor nations play by a different set of rules. Unless Americans address this problem and support a more realistic trade policy, based on our nation's economic interests, American companies will continue to lose market share in everything from textiles to computers. The jobs which are lost won't be made up in other industries or services.

Home loan industry still worried

NEW YORK (AP) — Home loan rates may be heading lower again but that isn't likely to assuage the worries of those in the industry, more and more of whom seem to feel they are destined to be victimized.

It is understandable. If there is one thing that drives the industry, it is the level of interest rates since home sales customarily are made on loans of 80 percent or more of the purchase price.

Rates up, sales down

The National Association of Home Builders last year estimated that a rate rise to 18 percent from 13 percent reduces the number of possible buyers by more than 7 million families, leaving only 17.2 million families able to buy

Even though home mortgage rates have fallen slightly in recent weeks, to just under 14 percent, they remain well above the levels of last spring, when the average was around 12.5. That's a loss of 3 million potential buyers.

"The slowing of resale activity is a direct response to the rise in mortgage interest rates over the past 90 days," says

Jack Carlson, the chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors.

Concerned about the future of interest rates, Carlson has been outspoken in denouncing the big federal budget deficits, which he believes will, unless corrected, inevitably put long-term pressure on borrowing costs. Not everyone is as concerned about the industry. Critics argue that housing has been given such favored tax treatment over the years that it has come to be viewed as an investment as well as shelter.

That contention is quickly countered by developers and owners who point out that high interest rates, real estate taxes, fuel bills and repairs have all but eliminated operating profit or cash flow from many operations. "Debt service is taking too many rentroll dollars, and the risk is growing that highly leveraged programs will exhibit zero or negative cash flows," says Daniel Fruitbine, chairman of D.B.G. Property Corp., a syndicator. As he sees it, syndicators will have to place larger downpayments on their properties in order to avoid the consequences of high interest rates, losing in the process the advantages of leveraging and the protection of tax dollars.

There are critics also who argue that the United States no. longer is underhoused, if it ever was, and that in fact there houses and apartments could suffice for many people, and that vast amounts of useable housing have been abandoned in big

Countering such assertions, the various housing industry groups have argued that good housing is the underpinning of many institutions and that it is a requirement of such basic goals as good mental and physical health.

They seldom hesitate to use this defense, especially in shooting down the trial balloons of those who would limit housing's tax benefits in order to help reduce the federal

That irony — that housing should be sacrificed, as they see it, so that government can get its house in order — is not one they are likely to abide

Not, at least, so long as they seek to blame government officials for getting themselves and housing into the current predicament. That is, into the interest rate mess.

It matters not if you won or lost

All I know about baseball is what I see on television. And the only thing they show on the news about baseball is managers and players pouring out of the dugouts, slugging each other over some question concerning an umpire's call. Baseball owners are now aware that the fans expect at least one good fight on the field or they don't feel they got their money's

It is for this reason that owners have changed their thinking about the type of baseball managers they must hire for their "Corky, I'm going to have to let you go."

"Why, Mr. Stillwater? The club is in first place in our division, and we've never been playing better ball.

"Have you seen the attendance records for our last 28 games? We haven't filled half the park. Do you know why? Our team doesn't have the fighting spirit."
"How can you say that, Mr. Stillwater? Morale has never ben higher and the players are determined to get to the World

"I'm not talking about that kind of fighting spirit. I'm talking about the kind that sells tickets. When was the last time one of the infielders tried to deck a pitcher from the opposing team?"

"I don't approve of that kind of stuff, Mr. Stillwater,"

Attorney says assassination plot was drunken banter

· CHICAGO (AP) — The chatter of "a loud-mouthed drunk in a-bar" led to criminal charges that landed a wealthy real estate broker in jail for allegedly plotting the assassination of Mayor Harold Washington, the broker's attorney claims.

The suspect, Lawrence N. Oberman, 38, was indicted by a Cook County grand jury Thursday on two counts of solicitation to commit murder and one count of possession of cocaine, said Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley.

Oberman was arrested Wednesday night. At a preliminary hearing Thursday, Circuit Court Judge Joseph J. Urso set bond at $4 million.

 SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Thousands of Chileans defied tear gas, riot dogs and club-swinging police to march in a public official or a private citizen." anti-government demonstrations that left at least two dead,scores hurt and hundreds jailed.

"Me's going to fall! He's going to fall!," hundreds of young slum dwellers screamed Thursday night as Santiago streets filled with the acrid smoke of tear gas and bonfires in the the fifth monthly "Day of National Protest" against President Gen. Augusto Pinochet's military government.

But the demonstrations and the response by security forces appeared less violent than in the previous protests, in which witnesses said police fired randomly at marchers and in some cases machine-gunned them in their homes.

A coalition of labor groups and opposition political parties has organized the demonstrations each month since May to vent anger over the severe economic recession and Pinochet's political restrictions.

Pinochet, who seized power from an elected Marxist government 10 years ago, has granted some concessions to appease the protesters. But he also has denounced them as subversives and rejected their demands that he resign.

Thousands of police in cities nationwide chased demonstrators with dogs, waded into marchers with clubs and lobbed tear-gas grenades as Chileans paraded in the streets during the day and banged on pots and pans for an hour at night. The pot banging has symbolized the protest movement. The two deaths reported Thursday pushed to 41 the number of people killed in the five protests. Police said 10 people received gunshot wounds and more than 600 were arrested. The government said a policeman accidentally shot a woman to death in the port of Valparaiso and a man was shot dead in the Santiago slum of La Victoria. The Interior Ministry said the man was killed by unidentified people who fired from a passing car, although witnesses said the fatal bullet came from a police weapon Among those detained and then released were Rodolfo Seguel, leader of the miners union, and former Senate

President Patricio Aylwin, both affiliated with the five-party Democratic Alliance which endorsed the protest Gabriel Valdes, an ex-foreign minister who is president of the alliance, was tear-gassed and doused by a police water of Santiago's main avenues. Valdes accused police of wantonly attacking peaceful protesters and said the alliance might scrap further talks with Interior Minister Serio Onofre Jarpa aimed at setting a timetable for restoring democracy in Chile

Christian, Druse fight drags in other factions

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The Christians and Druse, traditional antagonists, have once again pushed Lebanon into civil war, dragging a hodge-podge of factions, fighters and philosophies into the clash.

Each side has its allies and arms suppliers. For the Druse, it's Syria, the Palestine Liberation Organization and several smaller militias. The Christian side, supplied by arms from Israel, is made up of several family factions. The Lebanese army, equipped and trained by the United States, is charged with stopping the feud that dates back to the 1800s. But caught in the middle are the American, French,

Italian and British multinational peacekeeping troops warfare has raged relentless abrupt withdrawal from the central mountain range last weekend. Minutes after the last convoy of Israeli troops left, the heavily armed Christian and Druse fighters began battling for control of the strategic hills rising from Beirut's southern

Most of the 250,000 Druse had an informal autonomous rule in the Chouf and Aley regions until Israel introduced the Christian militiamen into the area when it invaded Lebanon last summer to uproot the PLO

The Druse, a mystical Islamic sect, are believed to have about 2,000 regular fighters, and claim they can field and arm between 6,000 and 10,000. They are heavily armed with field artillery, mortars and Soviet-made rocket-launchers supplied by the Syrians or by Palestinian guerrillas who evacuated Beirut during the Israeli invasion.

On the other side, an estimated 2,500 hardcore rightists are armed with a full range of equipment. They have old U.S.-made Sherman tanks, supplied by Israel, and

Daley told a news conference Thursday that Oberman offered to pay an undisclosed sum of money to have Washington, the city's first black mayor, assassinated. Daley declined to say how much money was offered or what was the Daley said the offer was made to an undercover informant he identified only as Keith Freeman.

George Murtaugh, Oberman's attorney, said in a telephone interview Thursday that his client was set up and that his tape-recorded comments were "light drunken banter." He said Freeman is Oberman's cousin and helped law enforcement agents for his own benefit.

He said the tape recordings are "a parroting of a loud-mouthed drunk in a bar. I'm talking about my client. He's the kind of guy that you walk away from in a bar. "I'm glad it's tape recorded. When you hear the tapes, you'll see how silly this thing is." However, said Daley, "Threats of violence must be taken seriously and we do take them seriously whether they involve

Unnamed sources were quoted in the Chicago Tribune and Chicago Sun-Times as saying that Oberman was tape recorded offering $1 million for the mayor's assassination because he was concerned about the future of the city under Washington's administration

Murtaugh said Oberman will plead innocent to the charges at his arraignment, which is scheduled Sept. 29.

Daley, who lost to Washington in the city's Democratic mayoral primary last February and is the son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, said Washington's safety was never in jeopardy. He said the mayor's bodyguards were advised of the investigation when it began Aug. 12.

Grayson Mitchell, Washington's press secretary, said switchboards at city hall lit up after the report about the alleged plot Thursday morning. He said the mayor first learned of the allegations from news reports, but was

"It's not the first threat," Mitchell said. Washington has been the subject of "bomb scares and threats fairly frequently

Pampa volunteer assists Hurricane Alicia victims

Pampa resident, Peggy Thomas, has been among the many Red Cross volunteers in the Houston area in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia. Thomas, a professional social worker. volunteered to help hurricane victims in the Houston area when she heard Red Cross needed more caseworkers to aid those affected by the recent disaster.

Joyce Roberts, executive for Gray County's Red Cross

Mother concerned about son's drinking

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old son goes to his friend's house to drink beer every Saturday and Sunday afternoon. His friend is 15, and I don't know if his parents are home at this time or not.

Should I let my son go on doing this and bury my head in the sand like an ostrich? I can't tie him up in his room for the next five years.

I don't want him to turn into an alcoholic by the time he is 18. He has come home from his friend's house so drunk he can hardly talk or walk straight. He keeps promising not to do it again, but it's the same story the next weekend. Please help me.

DISTURBED MOM IN LODI, OHIO

DEAR MOM: If you love your son (and I'm sure you do or you wouldn't have written to me), you will forbid him to visit his beer-drinking friend again. Allowing him to spend his weekends getting drunk makes you guilty of child abuse! Please call Alcoholics Anonymous and ask for its help. Your son is possibly an alcoholic already. I beg you not to put this off. It's the most important thing you have to do today.

DEAR ABBY: I was supposed to get married in July of 82, so my co-workers gave me a shower. I postponed my wedding because my fiance said he wasn't ready for marriage, but he promised we'd get married at a later date. My co-workers insisted I keep the gifts, thinking we would eventually marry. Now, 14 months later, my fiance tells me he thinks we should call it quits - that we are not "right" for each other.

I am so embarrassed about those shower gifts. Should I just haul them back to the office and go up and down the hall giving out presents like a department store Santa Claus? Or should I mail each gift back individually? My friends and relatives have offered to return all the

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "George," and I enjoy cruises and tours. We are both in our late 60s. The problem: George always finds a pretty young girl he wants his picture taken with, so he hands his camera to someone and says, "Would you please take our picture?"

He always manages to put his arm around the girl's waist or shoulder to give the impression that they're more than strangers.

When the trip is over and the snapshots have been developed, he carries them to his hangout, the coffee shop in our small town, and proudly shows them around as though being with a young lady is a great accomplish-

When I tell him this irritates me, he says I'm a poor sport to object to his harmless picture taking. What do you think, Abby?

themselves in an uncomfortably familiar situation as they travel to Clovis, N.M. for the second game of the 1983 football season

Clovis blanked Pampa, 23-0, last season enroute to its second consecutive state championship, and the Wildcats are expected to go all the way again despite an 1-7 loss to Palo Duro last week.

'We played Clovis a good game last year even though they beat us by three head coach John Kendall. "I look for a tough game, but I expect the kids to go out and play a better game than they did last week.

Pampa couldn't get its offense or defense untracked until the second half in a 28-8 season-opening loss to Hereford.

"The kids realize they didn't play the first half like they are capable of playing,' Kendall said. "We just need to put a complete game

Kendall said Clovis has a sound defense to complement a fleet running game, led by Robert Grimes, who rushed for 102 yards and scored a TD against Palo Duro.

"Grimes is a super back and Clovis has the speed on the outside to make things happen anytime," Kendall said. "They're a lot like Hereford, only faster."

The Harvesters' No. 1 objective will be to get their offense going. Coach Kendall pointed out that Pampa had the ball only 13 times last week. "We can't win games like that," he noted Despite the intense heat this week, the Harvester Coach was pleased with workouts.

"The kids really worked hard considering it was the hottest week of the season,' he said

The Harvesters have had a couple of players out with illness and injury this week and Kendall was waiting until today to see if everyone can come back strong. If they do, he will go with basically the same lineup as last week.

Redshirts key for Red Raiders

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) - Few teams in the nation have engaged in such an extensive redshirting program as Texas Tech, which held out 19 players in 1981

The object of redshirting is to stockpile talent, giving players, especially freshmen who aren't likely to help you right away, an extra year of eligibility, thus providing more depth and upgrading the overall talent of the squad in the future — usually at the expense of the present.

Jerry Moore sacrificed the present when he arrived at Tech in 1981. A former assistant at Nebraska, where redshirting was a way of life, Moore immediately began building for the future.

His first team was a dismal 1-9-1, But last year the Red Raiders climbed to 4-7 and lost heartbreakers to Washington and SMU, which were ranked No. 1 and No. 2 in the country at the time Although Tech has been highly regarded by most pre-season prognosticators this year, Moore believes his team may still be a year away from reaping the full benefits of redshirting

"We really expect our redshirt program to begin paying dividends next year and the year after that," said Moore. "I think we're a year away from being a pretty good football

The Red Raiders figure to get a good reading about the quality of this year's team when they open the 1983 campaign at Air Force on Saturday in a regionally televised game. Kickoff is at 1:20 p.m. MDT.

The Falcons, 8-5 last year including upsets over Brigham Young and Notre Dame and a Hall of Fame Bowl victory over Vanderbilt, kicked off their season last week with a convincing 34-13 romp over Colorado State.

"I'm impressed with how hard Air Force plays," said Moore. "They play with a high intensity level, and they don't seem to make mistakes. They look to me to be a lot like what SMU was last year. I think Air Force would be right at the top of our league (Southwest Conference).

Tech is 0-2 in its season openers under Moore. "We haven't played well in either of our openers, but maybe it's been a case of just opening against good teams," said Moore.

The Raiders operate out of the I-formation, with I-back Robert Lewis expected to see a lot of action. Quarterback Jim Hart is a rollout specialist. Air Force, meanwhile, is one of the nation's most potent wishbone teams, with quarterback Marty Louthan and fullback John Kershner

In the first meeting ever between the two teams last year, Tech rallied for a 31-30 victory in Lubbock.

Associated Press Writer Top-ranked Nebraska may find it hard topping last week's performance against defending national champion Penn State

Ray Perkins faces an even tougher task as the college football season enters its second week on Saturday, replacing the late Bear Bryant at Alabama.

Eleven of the nation's 20 teams, including No. 2 Oklahoma, No. 4 Auburn and 14th-ranked Alabama, open the 1983 season on Saturday. All told, 18 ranked teams are scheduled to play. Only third-ranked Texas and No. 10 Georgia are idle.

Nebraska, coming off a 44-6 drubbing of No. 20 Penn State, will at home against Wyoming's wishbone attack. "I was pleased with our

That may be hard to do. The Cornhuskers rolled up more than 500 yards on offense, while the defense limited Penn State rushers to a mere 82 yards.

Interceptions key 49ers' victory

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) -Interceptions helped decide the game, including one that wasn't caught.

The San Francisco 49ers intercepted five passes and wreaked havoc on the Minnesota passing game all night. But-49ers quarterback Joe Montana said one of his passes should have been intercepted on the first series of the game and that made the difference when it wasn't

It was safety John Turner standing in the end zone with the ball bouncing off his hands on that play. Montana was laying on the ground, wincing in pain from a groin injury. But the ball hit the turf and Ray Wershing kicked a 38-yard field goal.

The Vikings failed to move the ball and a rejeunvenated Montana threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Clark on the next series and the 49ers had a 10-0 lead. Minnesota came back with

Law professor can't practice law

CHICAGO (AP) — Banished by McCarthyism to the fringes of his chosen profession, George Anastaplo sends this message from more than 30 years of exile from the legal system: Thank Anastaplo, one of the victims of a Red Scare that swept the country during the 1950s, was denied a promising legal career which was within his grasp as the top University of Chicago law school graduate.

But he turned adversity into accomplishment.

Though blacklisted for decades from law school jobs for refusing to answer questions in the 1950s about his political affiliations, Anastaplo has carved out a career as a teacher, scholar, profilic author of philosophy and law — and in the last three years a law professor.

"I do not know of anybody else's career, from among those I was in school with, that I would prefer to mine," said Anastaplo, who teaches at Loyola University

Yet at the age of 57, Anastaplo's dreams of practicing law have never been fulfilled — and he says he is content to leave it that way as an example of how the system can fail. However, the Illinois Bar Association isn't content with his

It has asked the Illinois Supreme Court — which reconvenes next week - to reconsider Anastaplo's application for a law license — which was denied in 1951 after he was interviewed by the court's Committee on Character and Fitness.

Anastaplo shouldn't have been denied a license because of his "principled refusal" to answer questions, said Al Hofeld, state bar president. "We are not taking this action for Mr. Anastaplo's sake, but for the sake of the legal profession, which should be able to admit past mistakes and hold its head

Body said to respond to facial expressions

WASHINGTON (AP) -Mimicking the facial expressions associated with such emotions as anger, happiness and sadness can trigger some of the physical changes brought on by the real feelings, San Francisco researchers contend.

In experiments using professional actors as well as scientists, researchers say they were able to measure changes in heart rate. temperature and the electrical resistance of skin when faces showed emotion.

Moving facial muscles apparently sends signals to the autonomic nervous system - the part that controls certain muscle and gland activity - that spur the physical reactions, said the report to be published next Friday in Science magazine.

Since people tend to imitate the expressions of those around them, the research may have a bearing on why smiles can be infectious in a happy group or why feelings of anger can turn a crowd into a mob, say researchers.

Imitating the expressions of others in social situations may mean people actually experience some sensation of what others feel and have deeper empathic feelings than previously believed.

The findings also could have implications for people who are sad, depressed or

But Anastaplo feels his case, which he argued before the U.S. Supreme Court, perhaps should remain as is.

"A lot can be said for allowing this case just to stand as a reminder of what can go wrong when the bar and the courts and the law schools misconduct themselves," said Anastaplo.

"It's a reminder you need not be ruined forever if you do something that's right," added Anastaplo, who is not joining the bar's effort. "I think young lawyers need to be instructed it's not the end of the world if you don't get what you want."

There once seemed little doubt Anastaplo would get what he wanted. A war veteran, Anastaplo graduated No. 1 in his law school class. His peers regarded him as brilliant, destined for success.

In 1950, after passing the bar exam, Anastaplo made a routine appearance before the state high court's Committee on Character and Fitness.

It was the beginning of a battle now recounted in law

Asked whether a Communist should be permitted to practice law, Anastaplo responded: Yes, if qualified.

"Don't they believe in revolution," Anastaplo recalled being asked. He responded, "We all do," citing the rights of revolution guaranteed in the Declaration of Independence. Then asked whether he was a Communist, Anastaplo said:

That's really an improper question." In 1951, the committee rejected his request for admission to the bar, a decision upheld in 1954 by the state Supreme Court. In 1955, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

Anastaplo continued his schooling, ultimately receiving a Ph.D in constitutional history and political philosophy. In 1957, he reapplied for admission to the bar.

suffering with certain of extremities, was distinct. emotional problems. If they initiate the opposite emotional expressions, this might trigger more positive feelings. Paul Ekman, Robert W. Levenson and Wallace V. Friesen said studies they conducted at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco indicate that even very similar emotions such as anger and fear can trigger noticeably different physical reactions

For instance, both anger and fear resulted in similar heart rate increases. But vascular function, as measured by the temperature

Temperatures went up with anger, but fell below normal with fear, noted the study.

The researchers studied six emotions - surprise, disgust, sadness, anger, fear and happiness. All subjects, including 12 actors and four scientists, were videotaped during the exercises. They also wore heart rate monitors on their chests and sensors to measure temperature and skin resistance on their fingers.

Without being told what emotions they were mimicking, subjects got instructions to move parts of their faces into certain positions and hold the resulting expressions for 10 seconds

For instance, some were told to raise their eyebrows and pull them together, then raise their upper eyelids and finally to stretch their lips horizontally back toward their ears. This model for the fear expression resulted in higher heart rates, lower temperatures and a slight decrease in skin resistance.

Miller said that to appease pageant officials, he will not announce his top choice in the contest until moments before the nation watches Miss America crowned on television Sept. 17.

Albert A. Marks Jr., executive director of the pageant, has characterized Miller's picks as "a cruel injustice" to the contestants.

Miller said his decision to stop picking a winner before preliminary competition begins was made after he received a letter from James Williams, the father of Miss North Carolina 1983. Elizabeth Gray Williams.

Williams pleaded with Miller not to announce his computer choices this year, saying that the professor's "hobby" cost his daughter the crown. Miss Williams' father said Miller's predictions had a negative impact on the judges.

Debra Sue Maffett, 26, of Anaheim, Calif., has reigned as Miss America 1983 since the finals last Sept. 11.

This year, Miller said the odds for the women named in his top 10 winning the title range from 9-1 to 15-1.
