

Two more Marines killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rockets and mortar shells slammed into U.S. positions at the Beirut airport today, killing two Marines and wounding two in the third day of Lebanon's renewed Christian-Druse civil war.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan announced the casualties as Christian forces conceded the fall of the central mountain highway town of Bhamdoun to Syrian-supported Druse attackers.

"They (Druse) have entered Bhamdoun. They are committing massacres and crimes unprecedented in the history of humanity," said the Voice of Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party in admitting the fall of Bhamdoun, 12.5 miles east of Beirut.

Jordan said the airport bombardment started at 4:05 a.m. (10:05 p.m. EDT Monday), forcing the Marines to scramble for cover. The source of the barrage was unclear, but Marines responded by firing 155mm illumination rounds.

Another Marine spokesman, Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, said the Marines did not return fire because the fatal barrage came from a densely populated Shiite Moslem neighborhood northeast of the airport.

It was the first deadly attack on the Marines since Aug. 29 when two leathernecks were killed during intensified fighting between Christians and Druse, who have been battling for dominance in mountains near Beirut.

Those were the first Marine combat deaths in Lebanon in the year since the Reagan administration deployed them at the Lebanese government's request.

The 1,200 Marines are part of a multinational peacekeeping force sent last fall after the Israel's June 1982 invasion to rout Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon.

Jordan said the latest victims were posted within the airport perimeter. Two armored cars brought the four casualties to a helicopter that evacuated them to the Navy's carrier

Two Jima off the Beirut coast, Jordan said.

Associated Press photographer Don Mell, who spent the night at the Marine base, said the American peacekeepers dived into bunkers and foxholes on their highest state of alert, known as "Condition One," when shells and rockets started raining down.

Several rounds struck the runway near the terminal building of the closed airport. A few landed within the Marine zone and others exploded nearby, Mell said.

Druse and Christian forces are battling for Israeli-vacated areas in the Chouf and Aley mountains while the Lebanese army is trying to secure the coastal highway to southern Lebanon and the Beirut-Damascus highway, which transverse the embattled high country.

The fighting was touched off by the Israeli army's withdrawal from the central mountain regions of Aley and Chouf to pull back to a more defensible line along the Awali river in southern Lebanon.

Chautauqua proclaimed big success again

By LARRY HOLLIS

Members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association said Monday's Chautauqua at Central Park was "a great success" and are already making plans for next year's event.

"We're very pleased with it," said Brenda Cornelison, noting that workers were busy all day overseeing the various aspects of dealing with the large crowd.

Darlene Birkes, PFAA president, said she could not provide an estimate of the number who attended, but she felt there were "a great many more than last year," when an estimated 4,000 attended.

She said it was hard to keep track of the numbers since there were several areas of the park involved in the exhibits, displays, food booths and demonstrations. "There were lots of people in all the areas," she said. "We had a lot of out-of-towners," she said, indicating that the 10-kilometer run attracted many of these. The drawing for gifts at the end of the activities also indicated this, with a number of out-of-town people among those winning the donated items.

"Groups running the food booths said they had sold one-quarter to one-half again more than last year, so this indicated that there were a lot more people," Mrs. Birkes said.

"When you see all those throngs of people enjoying themselves, all the many hours of planning and worrying become very worthwhile," she added. The association is already making

President avoids tough sanctions against Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, avoiding tough economic sanctions in the wake of what he says "can only be called the Korean Air Line Massacre," called for U.S. strength to deter the Soviet Union.

With a tough vote coming up in Congress on the MX missile and possibly others on U.S. military involvement in Central America and Lebanon, the president worked a reminder about the Soviets' "massive military build-up" into his nationally broadcast address Monday night.

"Until they are willing to join the rest of the world community, we must maintain the strength to deter their aggression," he said.

Reagan, turning to Congress for a condemnation of the downing of the Korean jumbo jet, decided not to delay arms negotiations, reimpose a grain embargo or try to halt high technology shipments to the Soviets.

In his speech, he sought to present the United States' case against the Soviet Union for what he said was "the savagery of their crime," and used a tape recording of a Soviet pilot reporting to a ground controller that "the target is destroyed" two seconds after a missile was launched.

The president acknowledged that a U.S. RC-135 spy plane operated in the area where the Korean plane had flown before it was downed. But he said the plane was back on the ground, in Alaska, one hour before the Korean plane went down, and declared, "At no time was the RC-135 in Soviet airspace."

Murder-suicide Children watch parents killed

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior writer

PANHANDLE — Three small children watched as their dad used a 12-gauge shotgun to kill their mother, her brother and himself Monday afternoon at their isolated home southeast of Panhandle, Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed said this morning.

"We got a call that there were three bodies. We went out there, and sure enough, that's what we found," Reed said.

As his wife, Susan Vaughn Meaker, 28, tried to move out, Kenneth Wayne Meaker, 35, shot and killed the woman, the sheriff said. During the family dispute, Meaker also murdered his wife's brother, Ralph Ray Vaughn, 27, Reed said. The employee of a pest-control firm then put the gun to the side of his head and committed suicide, the sheriff said. All three victims lived near the small community on U.S. 60.

Vaughn was shot in the head and was found lying on the ground in the trailer house's front yard about 20 feet from his dead murderer. Susan Meaker was found sprawled on the ground about 40 feet away from the two men. She was shot in the back near the Meakers' car, suggesting she may have tried to escape, Reed said.

The sheriff said one of the Meakers' three small children, ranging in age from about three to eight years old, called their father's sister-in-law and told her what happened.

"She got a call from the kids, and she went out there, and that's what she found," Reed said.

The woman then phoned the sheriff's office and reported the double murder-suicide, the sheriff reported.

The three victims were pronounced dead at the scene by Carson County Justice of the Peace Buddy Davis. Davis ordered an autopsy that was performed late Monday night in Panhandle by pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann.

Reed said the results of the autopsy weren't complete this morning. "They were scattered across (the yard) in front of the trailer. It was a mess," he said.

The sheriff said the weapon used to take three lives is a pump, 12-gauge shotgun.

Reed said he did not interview the children, though he believes they witnessed the shootings.

"They had about all they needed. I imagine we'll eventually talk to the Kremlin labels speech 'hateful'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today accused President Reagan of making an "aggressive, hateful speech" about the downed South Korean airliner and claimed he was trying to exploit the tragedy to bolster his military policy.

In an English-language broadcast, Radio Moscow said Reagan "made bitter, slanderous attacks against the Soviet Union in a bid to arouse anti-Soviet sentiments in the American nation."

It said Reagan, in his nationally televised speech Monday night, "stressed the need to further rearm America."

Also today, the Communist Party daily Pravda told its public for the first time of the details of U.S. charges that a Soviet fighter shot down the Korean plane last Thursday. Pravda said Soviet forces "could have done so" if they deemed it necessary and did not explicitly deny the accusation.

The newspaper said "possible dangerous consequences of such a provocative flight were ignored," and spoke repeatedly of the risks of entering Soviet air space without permission.

It said the Kamchatka peninsula, transversed by the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 last week, is a closed area, "intrusion into which may draw the opening of fire."

The West, Pravda said, is "putting forward the version that the plane went off course because of technical trouble and was shot down by a Soviet fighter."

It was the first time the state-run press has told readers of the Western accusation that Soviet warplanes shot down the jetliner, killing 269 people. Previous accounts only have implied the charge by speaking of what the Soviet government called a "vicious Western campaign of slander."

Frost Belt personal incomes growing fastest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Frost Belt states of the Northeast posted heftier increases in personal income over the last four years than the faster-growing states of the Sun Belt, the Commerce Department says.

Faced by a 34.8 percent increase in Massachusetts and a 29.8 percent jump in Rhode Island, the New England states showed a 33.7 percent increase in per capita income from 1979 to 1982, according to a report released Monday.

Per capita incomes in the Middle Atlantic region rose 32 percent, with increases of 33.7 percent in New Jersey, 33.6 percent in New York and 31.3 percent in Maryland. Personal incomes rose 39.7 percent in Oklahoma to pace a 33.4 percent increase in the Southwest region, which also includes Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

The Commerce Department attributed the Northeast's increase to a smaller-than-expected growth in population combined with an expansion of the manufacturing and service sectors of local economies.

Americans' per capita income rose 5 percent last year, up from $10,582 in 1981 to $11,107 in 1982, according to figures compiled by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis. Per capita income was computed by adding the income earned by all people divided by the nation's population.

Alaska was the nation's richest state with a per capita income of $16,257 while the poorest was Mississippi, where the average income was $7,778.

Personal income rose an average of 28.3 percent from 1979 to 1982, the Commerce Department said.

Eleven states, mostly in the Northeast and the West, had increases that were at least 7 percent above the national average. All six New England states had increases that topped the national average. Pennsylvania was the only northeastern state that did not enjoy a better-than-average increase during the period.

Even though Connecticut ranked second only to Alaska as the nation's richest state, the northeastern states were generally not ranked among the most wealthy. Despite the increases, Massachusetts was 10th, New Hampshire and Rhode Island 26th and 27th respectively, Vermont 38th and Maine 41st in a state-by-state ranking of personal incomes.

The five richest areas in 1982 were Alaska, $16,257; the District of Columbia, $14,550; Connecticut, $13,748; New Jersey, $13,089; and California, $12,567. The five poorest states were Mississippi, $7,778; Arkansas, $8,479; South Carolina, $8,502; Alabama, $8,649; and West Virginia, $8,769.

Employment growth in manufacturing, particularly the result of increased defense spending, allowed the West to remain the nation's richest region.

The Southeast, which traditionally lags behind the nation in heavy industry, remained the poorest region, the report said. But several southern states posted big gains in personal income. Louisiana showed a 37.5 percent increase, which ranked third behind Alaska's 43.3 percent and Oklahoma's 39.7 percent.

Festival to be repeated

Members were discussing future ideas during the event yesterday. A committee meeting will be held later this week to discuss this year's Chautauqua and to begin planning for next year, she said. "We know we want to expand the children's area," she said. Members were very pleased with the activities for children this year, which included a petting zoo, puppet show and story telling. "But we feel we need more," she said. Association members complimented the crowds, saying there were few problems. They were pleased especially with the "phenomenal" way in which many helped to clean up the park toward the end of the activities. The only major disappointment for many was the inability to launch the hot air balloon. "It was just too windy," said Vickie Moore. "We waited until after 7 p.m.," she said, but the wind did not drop low enough to allow launching of the balloon. She said the wind needs to be between 0 and 10 miles per hour for a good launch, with 10-13 mph being marginal. The wind was generally above that yesterday. The park had crowds throughout the day as people came to enjoy the variety of activities and to purchase the variety of foods available. The weather aided the enjoyment, with fair skies, temperatures in the low to mid-90s, and a good breeze to help cool the park. While nearly all the booths were busy, crowd pleasers at the main stage area included the Tri-State Blue Grass Express, Tae Kwan Do karate exhibition and the Kwahadi Indian dancers from Amarillo. Children flocked to the petting zoo, which included a python, llama, cockatiel, parrot, miniature donkey and rabbits. Other activities ranged from auditions for the Act I Community Theater group, participating in cheers with the New Yorkers Cheerleaders, viewing various arts and crafts displays, taking wagon rides, watching National Guardsmen show their skills, and obtaining information from various organizations. There was something for nearly everyone. PFAA members hope to make 1984's Chautauqua even better.

oldest one," he said. The sheriff estimated the holiday killings occurred about 2 p.m. Monday. The call reporting the deaths came in between 4 and 4:30 p.m. The isolated mobile home is located about 8 miles east of Panhandle and about three miles south of U.S. 80. The sheriff said the double murder-suicide was apparently the result of a marriage gone sour. "She was moving out," the sheriff said. The murdered woman had loaded many of the couple's possessions into a car when she was killed. Ralph Vaughn was killed because he "apparently" had come to the trailer to help his sister move out. Assisting the sheriff and Davis at the scene Monday were Chief Deputy Buck Fields and County Attorney Ed Hinshaw. The bodies were taken to Smith Funeral Home in Panhandle where service are pending. The couple's surviving children are sons, Jared Neal Meaker and Robin Lance Meaker, and daughter, Michelle Renee Meaker. Kenneth Meaker was born Aug. 8, 1948 in Amarillo. He had lived in or near Panhandle his entire life. He graduated from Panhandle High School in 1966 and attended Amarillo College. He was a member of the Catholic Church. In addition to the children, survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Roy Meaker; one brother, James Meaker, all of Panhandle; and an aunt, Purl Meaker of Pampa.

Reagan policies criticized

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO
Hundreds of thousands of workers rallied against President Reagan and "Bonzo economics" on Labor Day, while some employees made peace with management and millions of others took a break from their work to revel in summer's last long holiday. Americans thronged beaches, parks and backyards, dousing the 90-degree heat that swamped much of the country in pools, lakes and ocean surf. At least five drownings were reported. The three-day weekend proved deadly on the nation's highways, where 436 perished between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday, 14 less than the 450 fatalities safety officials had predicted. For construction workers in Michigan, autoworkers around the nation and symphony musicians in Utah it was a time of harmony, as they moved away from confrontation and towards contract settlements. Workers paraded through America's cities by the thousands, but in New York City, the 425,000 marchers far outnumbered the 50,000 spectators who sparsely lined Fifth Avenue. "It's a disgrace," said Mrs. Paul Gutenstein. "I'm ashamed that people would rather swim than come to the parade, after what kind of government we've got." AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who reviewed the New York parade, lashed out at the Reagan administration's economic policies, saying the recovery "has bypassed working people and benefited only a handful of corporate entrepreneurs and corporate profits." "The current occupants of the White House have so identified the general welfare with enriching the rich and pandering to the powerful that everything else strikes them as 'special interests,'" the nation's foremost labor leader said. For laborers in about 150 U.S. cities, Labor Day was renamed Solidarity Day III to show the strength of the nation's unions. The Solidarity Day bash in Austin, Texas, drew 10,000 people to a march starting at the state Capitol, bearing picket signs with slogans such as "Bust the Union Busters Today" and "Hallelujah, I'm a bum, thanks to Reaganomics." In Cleveland, about 15,000 union members joined in a 350-foot parade through town, as some marchers hefted signs reading "C'mon, Ron, stop the Bonzo economics." One of Reagan's films was called "Bedtime for Bonzo," about a chimpanzee. United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber said Monday was "one of the nicest Labor Days that I've celebrated in a long time," as the union reached agreement with Chrysler Corp. on a tentative contract for 56,000 workers. Chrysler workers, who granted the No. 3 automaker wage concessions when its outlook was grim in 1979-81, had been clamoring for a pay raise since the company announced record profits the first half of 1983. The Minnesota AFL-CIO had a smashing time, charging $3 a whack to let people pound a foreign car with sledgehammer to show support for American-made products.

Opposition thwarts efforts

Begin successor having problems

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The opposition Labor Party today tried to woo some of Parliament's small-party factions away from the dominant Likud bloc and thwart Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's efforts to form a new government. Three of Shamir's potential coalition partners were reported in contact with the Labor Party, and Israel Television said Labor will seek a no-confidence vote on the government's economic policies if Prime Minister Menachem Begin does not formally resign within a few days. Begin announced his decision to resign Aug. 28 but has delayed carrying out the move in order to give leaders of his Herut Party time to shore up its coalition in Parliament. Labor spokesman Yossi Beilin said the four-man, ultra-religious Agudat Israel faction already has held talks with Labor leaders, although the faction's spokesmen said Monday they wanted to remain in the Likud-led coalition. Beilin said two other partners in Likud's coalition, the National Religious Party and TAMI, which have a total of eight seats in the 120-seat Parliament, had agreed to talk with Labor. The talks with NRP were scheduled for today, while the meeting with TAMI had not yet been set.

Rig count climbing

Ray Hupp, vice president of the Pampa Ingersoll-Rand Plant, said the nationwide count of drilling rigs in production is continuing to climb — good news for the Pampa manufacturer of mobile oil rigs and high-quality metals. Hupp said the national count of operating oil and gas drilling rigs conducted weekly by the Hughes Tool Company has climbed steadily for the past several months. The rig count was down as low as 1,800 during the month of April. It had climbed to 2,174 as of August 22, Hupp said. Officials with Ingersoll-Rand have previously said employment at the local plant won't pick up until orders for new rigs increase substantially. The rig count was as high as 4,530 during the oil boom in late 1981.

Educators pursue the high-tech dream

DALLAS (AP) — Texas A&M and the University of Texas are leading a move among state colleges to spur high-technology research and teaching in the state despite a low priority given the idea thus far by the Legislature, educators say.

In the past three years, several universities have taken steps to upgrade their high-tech departments, including the physical sciences, computer sciences and engineering.

The steps include:

- Attempts to lure world-class scholars, including Nobel Prize winners, who can build strong research groups;
- Moves to create institutes or labs, including a proposed giant underground tunnel that would be 100 miles in circumference, to lure more pure scientific research to the state;
- Million-dollar endowments for chairs and professorships in pure and applied sciences;
- Increased expenditures on equipment and laboratories; and
- More ties with industry to fund such expenditures.

The Dallas Morning News said in a story Monday that a 1982 congressional study suggested the quality of education that Texas universities offer in the high-tech fields has been the only thing that has kept the state from competing for new industry on an equal basis with California and Massachusetts.

The survey, by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, lauded Texas as having all the elements necessary to become a high-tech center — available labor at low cost, a relatively low cost of living, and a favorable tax climate.

Largely because of those factors, the state attracted several high-tech companies such as Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., Tandem Computers Inc., ROLM Corp., and Advanced Micro Devices Inc. since 1979.

But the same 1982 study found Texas woefully lacking in one important factor — high-tech higher education.

Texas has the financial resources to develop universities to rival such schools as Stanford, California-Berkeley, Cal Tech or Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Texas educators say.

"It's the presence of Stanford University that's responsible for the Silicon Valley," said Steven Weinberg, a Nobel Prize-winning physicist whom the University of Texas hired away from Harvard last year.

Such schools are able to support high-tech communities with research, a steady pool of highly trained workers and continuing education programs.

Kenneth Ashworth of the Texas Coordinating Board of Colleges and Universities said Texas colleges have been unable to get significant state funds to improve their research, faculties and academic programs.

"One of the deficiencies of Texas legislators is their lack of appreciation in research as investment rather than a yearly operating cost," Ashworth said.

The Coordinating Board asked the Legislature this year to increase high-tech research funds from $2 million to $34 million, but got only a $1 million increase, Ashworth said.

Texas and Texas A&M joined forces and played a key role four months ago in convincing a 12-company consortium — Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. — to locate in Austin. Gov. Mark White called the move a "turning point" for Texas' high-tech development.

As part of the consortium's package, the state contributed more than $15 million to the UT computer sciences and electrical engineering departments.

UT also will use consortium money to create 30 new faculty positions in microelectronics and computer sciences.

"We expect to be the top university in computer science within 10 years," said Manny Chandy, chairman of the UT computer sciences.

A&M has smaller faculty endowment endowment plans. It intends to spend about $10 million for endowed chairs and smaller endowed professorships, said Clinton Phillips, dean of faculty at Texas A&M University.

Last year, the University of Texas spent almost $8 million on engineering and computer-science equipment for its 10,000 students in those fields. A&M spent $1.1 million for its 11,000 students. Texas-Arlington, third largest with nearly 5,000 students, spent $250,000 and Texas Tech, with 3,800 students, spent $500,000.

UT plans to spend $85 million worth of construction on engineering and computer labs during the next three to five years.

The impact at UT from getting Weinberg has been "enormous," said Tom Griffy, chairman of the university's physics department.

Among Weinberg's chief contributions has been his ability to attract top graduate students and young professors, Griffy said.

"I think it's fair to say that the students who apply here are the students who apply as well to places like Berkeley, MIT and Cal Tech," Griffy said.

"Graduate students go to the places where the most exciting research is being done. They want to be in a place where the secrets of nature are being discovered," Weinberg said.

So many physics professors from other universities have been requesting sabbaticals at UT lately that, for the first time, the department is having trouble finding office space, Griffy said.

W. Bryan Wilson, director of business development for the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, said Dallas-area universities, such as Texas-Arlington and Southern Methodist, can match UT and A&M in the high-tech race.

"The research bases and the places where their kids can be used are in Dallas. And the local university base is one of the fastest growing in the state," Wilson said.

Lab enhances images taken from afar

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Exploring for oil has one thing in common with searching for sunken ships — both are easier with a technique known as remote sensing.

So when Texas oilman Jack Grimm needed help in his search for the Titanic, he called on Texas Christian University's Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research.

TCU's computerized equipment turned Grimm's fuzzy underwater photos into images of a 38-ton propeller and two statues, signs that Grimm's expeditions may have finally located the Titanic's resting place in the North Atlantic. The find may return half a billion dollars' worth of jewelry and artifacts. TCU charged Grimm a few hundred dollars to cover expenses.

But seeking sunken treasure is not the main purpose of remote sensing. The technology is useful for many other things. It monitors reclamation at Texas strip mines, fights fires in Australia, and gives U.S. negotiators inside information on the status of Soviet wheat crops.

And at TCU, the remote sensing lab's main use is as a research tool for oil and gas exploration.

"The main thrust of the center has been to educate and demonstrate to industry the use of this tool in exploration," said Ken Morgan, director of the center.

Remote sensing, he said, is simply the gathering of information from a distance — as with aerial photography and radar, for example. More sophisticated remote sensing uses data transmitted from satellites.

NASA's Landsat satellites have been a major source of data for TCU's use, Morgan said. Such satellites, in polar orbits about 600 miles high, record the brightness of patches of the Earth's surface with a complex mirror and prism system. The satellite scans different wavelength ranges, including the infrared region, invisible to the eye. Brightness levels are recorded as numbers from 0 to 255, corresponding to 256 shades of gray. The numbers are stored on computer tapes, which TCU buys from NASA. TCU's $250,000 computer system then analyzes the numbers, transforming them into multicolored images displayed on a video screen or converted into photographs.

"From 600 miles, you'd be able to see a football field and determine if it's artificial turf or real grass," said Morgan.

The colors produced by the computer system look nothing like real-life colors. Vegetation appears red or pink; water is dark blue or black. The concrete, asphalt and bricks of urban areas show up as bluish gray.

TCU's computer system can combine Landsat data with other information (such as radar images from airplanes or other satellites) to reveal different features of the Earth's surface. Analysis of these features can help pinpoint promising spots for oil and gas drilling, Morgan said. While many major oil companies have their own remote sensing equipment, few independent companies can afford it. The TCU center will perform analyses for small or large companies, for a fee ranging from $10,000 to $50,000.

Since its inception two years ago, TCU's center has served about 30 companies, Morgan said, most looking for oil and gas. He said the center "has been in on some oil discoveries," but information about them is confidential.

Other projects have included helping mineral companies search for uranium, molybdenum and silver. And the center has attracted international attention from groups contemplating a variety of other uses for remote sensing.

An Australian group visited the TCU center and decided to buy similar equipment for use in fighting fires. Photos taken from helicopters flying over burning buildings can be analyzed to identify hot spots and flames hidden by the smoke.

Officials from China observed TCU's system in preparing a remote sensing program to monitor farming problems there.

Remote sensing can track the spread of plant diseases, look for signs of drought and even spot water pollution or estimate crop yields. The U.S. government uses Landsat data to gauge the annual Soviet wheat crop, Morgan said.

Drunken driving, speeding blamed for many of state's holiday deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — The highway slaughter continued in Texas on the last day of the Labor Day holiday weekend, raising the state's traffic death toll near the 51 fatalities that had been predicted by the Department of Public Safety.

At least 44 deaths were reported by midnight Monday. During the same 78-hour period last year, 50 people were killed on Texas highways and seven others died of injuries suffered over the weekend.

Of the fatalities reported by Monday night, 27 were victims of one-car accidents, including three people who were killed when a car struck trees in Travis County and two people who died when their car hit a bridge abutment near Waxahachie.

Among the deaths reported Monday were Kimberly Peden, 21, of Houston; David Todd Graves, 20, of Austin; and Clay Trailer of Austin, who died after their car ran off the road west of Austin, and was sheared in half when it hit two trees.

Wendy C. Campbell, 21, of Kerrville, was killed when two vehicles collided Monday afternoon just east of Ingram in Kerr County.

Patsy Pallas, 40, of Austin, died when her car ran off the road and into a pond Monday afternoon near Austin.

Yvette Valadez, 9, of Weslaco, was killed in a two-vehicle accident three miles west of Harlingen Monday. The accident also injured eight people.

James Coleman, 45, Mount Pleasant, died when his car ran off the road Monday north of Pine Mills in Wood County.

Damon Hughes Williams, 31, of Houston, was killed in a three-vehicle accident west of Austin on Monday. Six other people were injured in the accident.

Wanda Goldwin Lamphere, 60, and her 80-year-old mother, Peggy Cannon Hicks, both of Phoenix, Ariz., died after their vehicle went out of control and flipped over 3 1/2 times about 11:30 a.m. Monday on Interstate 20 two miles west of Stanton in Martin County.

Douglas Wesley Williams, 17 months, was killed about 2 a.m. Monday in a one-vehicle rollover three miles south of Garden City in Glascock County.

Gerardo Ortiz, 19, of Carrollton and Jose Hernandez, 19, were killed when their car ran off a road and struck a bridge abutment at 4:30 a.m. Monday about one mile south of Waxahachie on Interstate 35.

Freddy Fernandez, 19, of San Angelo was killed in a one-vehicle rollover at 2:18 a.m. Monday at a San Angelo intersection.

Billy Johnny Goings, 31, of Joaquin was killed at 12:30 a.m. Monday when his pickup hit a guardrail and overturned into a ditch on U.S. Highway 84 in Joaquin

Police start over in woman's death

HOUSTON — Homicide detectives, who have interviewed almost 50 people and filed enough reports to fill four desk drawers in their unsuccessful search for the killer of a wealthy woman, say they are starting over.

Ruth Kottler, 61, the manager of the Benjamin Franklin Savings and Loan, was found March 1 fully clothed in the bathtub of her westside apartment. She died of asphyxiation after being beaten.

The same week two other women — Bertie Eakins and Elizabeth Faubus, the estranged wife of former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus — also were found slain in bathtubs in their homes in the same area.

Despite the similarities of the cases, police contended from the beginning the killings were not related. Separate suspects have been charged in the cases of Ms. Eakins and Mrs. Faubus.

Although they said they had thought Mrs. Kottler's murder would be the easiest of the three cases to solve, police still have no suspects in the case.

Detectives Steve Clappart and Jim Binford recently were assigned to the case.

They will reinterview the same people and retrace the case.

"I wracked my mind for a novel way to approach this," Clappart said. "There are some more things we're going to do now."

Clappart said Mrs. Kottler apparently was attacked as she opened the door to leave for work. At first, police thought the death was linked to a robbery at the savings and loan. Since no money was missing, police now think the burglar alarm at the bank might have malfunctioned.

"The alarm and the killing are the kind of coincidences that really jump out at you," he said.

Binford said a case containing about $30,000 in jewelry was missing. A check stolen from Mrs. Kottler was cashed at a supermarket about 30 minutes after the victim's body was found, he said.

Solidarity Day III rally draws 10,000

AUSTIN (AP) — A Labor Day rally in downtown Austin attracted an estimated 10,000 people in a show of solidarity for labor unions and disdain for the Reagan administration.

Many in the five-block-long procession Monday carried signs with slogans such as "We Will Be Heard, Equal Rights For Everybody," "Bust the Union Busters Today, Not Tomorrow," and "Hallelujah, I'm a bum thanks to Reaganomics."

The march, which began at the Capitol, was one of about 150 such rallies held across the country as part of Solidarity Day III.

Organizers said the Solidarity Day parade was to show that despite dwindling membership and recent concessions to management, organized labor in America is alive and well.

Hundreds chanted, "Hey-hey, ho-ho, Ronald Reagan's got to go."

"Ronald Reagan has put a bunch of right-wing, anti-labor reactionaries in power," said Jim Booe, executive assistant of the Communications Workers of America.

Booe said most of Reagan's appointments, including Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, are unsympathetic to the needs of workers.

"We've got the biggest bunch of union busters in power since the Calvin Coolidge administration. We intend to change that in 1984," Booe told a crowd that included former Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall, Attorney General Jim Mattox, Texas Agriculture Secretary Jim Hightower, State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco of Austin and state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

"Mr. President, the weak need the help of the strong," Booe said. "The strong, including your rich pals, can take care of themselves."

Other speakers praised the quality of union workmanship, calling union members the best workers in their professions, who must often go through rigorous training and apprentice programs to enter the union.

"Employers don't pay us top dollar because they like us, but because they know we can get the job done," said Gene Evans, 26, a member of Austin's Carpenters Local 1266. "I studied four years as an apprentice and I feel I'm as qualified in my field as a doctor or lawyer."

G.O. Chipman, 75, told the throng that he went to work for Texas Power and Light Co. in 1925 and helped organize a union to make sure that workers got a day's pay for a day's work.

"Unions look after the interests of the average worker," said Chipman, who is still active in the Fort Worth chapter of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

"They make sure workers aren't abused in the workplace. Then Ronald Reagan comes along and damn near destroys the union. He's proof we don't need an actor as president."

Radiation board calls for prosecution of Gulf Nuclear HOUSTON (AP) — If the Texas Radiation Advisory Board has its way, Gulf Nuclear Inc. will be prosecuted by the state for a February radiation exposure accident at its Webster plant.

A resolution adopted Aug. 28 by board members charged the incident posed a direct threat to Gulf Nuclear employees and the public.

The resolution urged prosecution of the company "by every legal means."

Nine workers were exposed to radiation at the plant Feb. 8 when one employee accidentally cut in half a capsule containing americium-241.

The state health department did not learn of the accident for six weeks, when it was reported by one of the nine employees who had been exposed to the radiation. The employee later was fired.

Radiation board member William G. "Jack" Hendrick of Austin, a health physicist and manager of Texas Nuclear, a radiation services company, told the Houston Post in an article published today that Gulf Nuclear's reaction to the accident was "just unconscionable" to him.

Gulf Nuclear "just left (the exposed) people alone for six weeks," Hendrick said. "The fact there wasn't a much greater threat to the public outside the plant was just sheer ... luck. It wasn't because the company did anything right."

Carol Vance, an attorney for Gulf Nuclear, said there was no legal requirement for the company to report the radiation incident.

"I fail to understand on what factual basis such a resolution was passed," Vance said. "Both (the health department) radiation agency and the attorney general have been more than vigorous in trying to proceed against Gulf Nuclear."

Prosecution expects to rest

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor says he wants to call five more witnesses to testify against former San Jacinto County Sheriff James "Humpty" Parker and three deputies who are accused of using water torture to get prisoners to make confessions.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward said he expects to rest his case later this week. The trial, which was recessed until today for the Labor Day weekend, began Wednesday before U.S. District Judge James DeAnda.

Parker and former deputies Carl Lee, Floyd Baker and John Glover were named in a six-count federal indictment that accuses them of violating the civil rights of jail inmates and of depriving people of liberty without due process of law.

Federal authorities say at least 15 people may have undergone water torture between 1976 and 1982.

Last week, two victims testified they gave false confessions because they were tortured. A third said he was told the ordeal could have been avoided if he confessed to a crime, while another man said he was handcuffed while deputies poured water over his towel-wrapped head and warned not to mention the torture to anyone.

Prosecutors also have produced witnesses to the tortures. But defense attorneys have tried to challenge the credibility of the witnesses, many of whom have past criminal records.

Hance's entry changes game

The belated entry of U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock makes the race for the Senate seat held by retiring Texas Senator John Tower a completely new ball game. It means that the big conservative-liberal battle will be in the Democratic primary next summer and will not necessarily be an issue in the general election in the fall.

Hance's entry into the race also means it will be even more difficult for the Republican Party to hold onto the seat Sen. Tower has occupied since the early '60s.

Rep. Hance, of course, is a certified conservative. He went down the line with the president on proposals to cut taxes and federal spending in the first year of the Reagan administration.

His opponents, former State Sen. Lloyd Doggett and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, are both certified liberals. Doggett has tried to paint Krueger as a conservative boll weevil, but in Doggett's eyes, anyone to the right of Karl Marx is a radical conservative.

Their race for the Democratic nomination should be a dogfight and will split the state Democratic Party right down the middle along ideological lines.

The Republicans might have a shot at retaining the seat if either Doggett or Krueger win their party's nomination. Then, the general election would be a liberal-conservative race and the Republicans' likely nominee, turncoat Democrat Phil Gramm, would have a chance to overcome the Democrats' numerical superiority in Texas.

But if Hance wins the Democratic nomination, Gramm may as well hang it up. Their voting records and political philosophies are almost exactly alike and there would be little difference between the candidates. In that case, Texas conservative Democrats, whose votes the Republicans have to have to win any election in this state, would have no reason to desert their party and Hance would probably win easily.

Sen. Tower has managed to keep the Senate seat in Republican hands down through the years mainly because he didn't have to run during presidential elections in most cases. The always heavy Republican turnout and the light overall vote in those off-years were the major ingredients in his continued success.

Given that background and the certain heavy vote to be cast in 1984, the Republican chances are pretty slim regardless of which Democrat wins.

The only way the odds could be changed is if the GOP is finally successful in convincing former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach to make a race for the U.S. Senate. If he gives in and decides to become a candidate, it is the Democrats who might as well go home.

With Staubach in the race, ideology would become virtually meaningless. His popularity in Texas would virtually assure the Republicans of victory no matter who his opponent might be. And, he wouldn't even need a "Hail Mary" completion at the end to pull it off.

"I'm really not too sure what to make of the Vicki Morgan tape situation."

There's nothing magic about age 65.

By OSCAR COOLEY

We talk glibly about "senior citizens," but just what are they? Does everyone get to be a senior citizen? If so, when? When one becomes 65, is the usual answer. But there is something magic about age 65 which gives one seniority - makes one "old" on that date?

Of course there is not. Some get old years before they are 65, some not until years after. Sixty-five is merely an arbitrary age which the U.S. Congress - or was it FDR? - decided, back in 1935, when the Social Security act was enacted, was the age at which the average human being became old and therefore eligible for certain privileges.

They ignored what any sociologist could tell them: that the average life span is on the increase and that what is old this year will not be considered so a decade hence. Even worse, they ignored the fact that not everyone ages at the same rate - that there is no one senior milestone for everybody.

As a result we have people who at 55 are decrepit and at 60 are ready to go on the town, and we also have people - an ever-increasing proportion, in fact - who are quite hale and hearty at 65 and fully able to continue an active, self-supporting life. But it is time for them to retire. Somebody, away back some time, decided it would be.

That everybody should retire from his life's occupation at the same age was generally accepted on the ground that all they would be treated alike and fairness would rule. But all are not being treated alike. Some, because of early aging, are being retired too late, while some are being retired when they are both able and willing to go on working. People are individuals. They are not alike and hence it is not just or fair to pretend that they are. Individual differences should be considered.

As long as a person has health, strength and vitality, he normally wants to continue the activities of middle age. If he (or she) has headed a family, they are probably well grown and able to shift for themselves, perhaps with some financial help. The parent does not feel the same compulsion to work and earn as he has: if he wants to continue working, it is more for psychic than for dollar wages. To be told that he cannot continue working - that he has arrived at the standard age for retirement and collection of his monthly Social Security check - is discouraging.

In some occupations such as farming, operating a small store of his own, or a profession, he will not have to retire, but in most wage or salary jobs he will be told that, having reached the age of 65, he is now being retired. They will not say that he is eligible to retire if he so chooses; rather, he will simply be given notice that he is being removed from the payroll to comply with the firm's policy of retirement at 65.

If a person is able to work, wants to work, but is summarily unemployed, the product of his labor is wasted as truly as if he had worked and produced only to have his product thrown away. One can imagine the waste that is taking place because of such forced retirement.

The remedy? Let each individual decide for himself when he will retire. Let government give him no retirement pay unless his doctor certifies that he is unable to work, in which case he should receive a pension sufficient to sustain him but not enough to induce unnecessary retirement.

There should be no pretence that these payments come from a fund created by making him and - or his employer, over the years, pay a "social security" tax out of his earnings.

Such a policy would not enforce anybody to retire, nor would it force anyone to work. There would be no fixed age at which earners would be moved to save for their own old age. There would be senior citizens, as there always have been, but membership in that fraternity would be purely voluntary.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 6, the 249th day of 1983. There are 116 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Sept. 6, 1901, President William McKinley was shot in Buffalo, N.Y. He died eight days later.

On this date:

In 1620, the Pilgrims sailed on the Mayflower from Plymouth, England to settle in the New World.

In 1909, American explorer Robert Perry sent word that he had reached the North Pole five months earlier.

In 1914, the first Battle of the Marne began during World War I.

In 1966, South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was stabbed to death during a parliamentary session in Cape Town.

Ten years ago: Former United Mine Workers President W.A. "Tony" Boyle was arrested and charged with murder in connection with the 1969 murder of union rival Joseph Yablonski.

Five years ago: A Soviet prosecutor asked that American businessman Francis Crawford be given a five-year suspended sentence on currency speculation charges.

One year ago: Men claiming to be part of a Polish resistance group seized the Polish embassy in Berne, Switzerland, threatening to blow it up unless martial law was ended in Poland.

Today's birthday: Montana Sen. John Melcher is 59. Thought for today: "Mediocrity knows nothing higher than itself, but talent instantly recognizes genius." - Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Scottish writer (1859-1930)

New England town lifts itself up

By ROBERT WALTERS

CHICOPEE, Mass. (NEA) - The calamitous events of the past 15 years here are the municipal equivalent of being fired from your job, divorced by your spouse and losing your home - all in rapid succession.

In the late 1960s, the Defense Department disclosed that Westover Air Force Base, a sprawling 7,900 acre facility long used by the Strategic Air Command's B-52 intercontinental bombers, would be almost totally decommissioned.

As a result, the community lost 4,750 primary jobs at the military base and an additional 3,670 secondary jobs.

The nationwide recession of the mid-1970s accelerated economic stagnation in the aging western Massachusetts mill town, producing the loss of an additional 2,000 jobs.

In 1980, Uniroyal Inc. announced that it was abandoning the tire manufacturing plant which was the city's largest employer. Another 1,600 jobs were lost just as the most recent nationwide recession was beginning.

Many of Chicopee's residents abandoned the city. Between 1970 and 1980, the population here declined precipitously, from 66,676 to 55,048 - a plunge of more than 17 percent.

But in a display of resourcefulness which typifies New England's perseverance and resilience, city officials in early 1982 resuscitated the long-dormant Chicopee Development Corp. and transformed it into the catalyst to attract additional investment, new business and more jobs to Chicopee.

The dramatic initial success of that effort is unique, even by New England standards, but throughout the region there is compelling evidence of an economic revival inspired by the extraordinary dedication and determination of its people.

"We focus primarily on what's here and nurture it," explains CDC President Carl Eger Jr. "Growth comes from within. That's the story of New England."

That philosophy is vividly illustrated by the region-wide trend toward conversion and rehabilitation of century-old mill buildings into modern office buildings, manufacturing facilities and distribution centers.

In Manyard, Mass., the Digital Equipment Corp., one of the country's leading producers of mainframe computers, is headquartered in a 15 million square foot converted mill where woolen blankets once were made for the Union Army.

The former Uniroyal plant here has been refurbished and is now the Chicopee Industrial Park which serves as an "incubator" for approximately 30 young companies producing specialty plastics, electronic circuit boards, surgical masks and a host of other products.

At the same time, the region has turned to two of its most bountiful natural resources - wood and water - to provide energy not only for its revived industrial base but also for the homes of its people.

Firewood from New England's 29 million acres of timberland has become so popular as both an industrial and residential fuel that it now provides the energy equivalent of more than 25 million barrels of oil annually. More than 20 percent of all households in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire now rely upon wood as their primary source of heat.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has received hundreds of applications for permits and licenses for the construction of new hydroelectric facilities or the rehabilitation of old dams to generate electric power in the region. Northeast Utilities, one of the region's largest power companies, operates 23 commercial hydroelectric facilities in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Here in Chicopee, the tradition of reliance upon available indigenous resources inspired CDC to take over the abandoned portion of the Air Force base and redesignate it as the Westover Industrial Airpark.

More than 1,500 new jobs have been created to offset the earlier losses at Westover. One firm moved into the industrial park last autumn with 40 employees but now has more than tripled the size of its work force and expects to double it again by next spring.

Eger acknowledges that "we've tried to do an awful lot of things at once," but both the city and the region have been strikingly successful because of the productivity, skills and commitment of their people.

This should scare Mozambique

By ART BUCHWALD

The Pentagon is getting nervous. With a White House foreign policy based on a military response to every situation, there is a growing gap between the number of worldwide commitments we've decided to make, and the armed services' ability to meet them.

Just last week the Pentagon's joint Chief of the Day received a call from National Security Adviser Clark's office at the White House.

"The President wants you to send two carriers, three missile cruisers, and six B-52s as a warning to Mozambique."

"We're plumb out of aircraft carriers, cruisers and B-52s."

"How can you be out of them? We've given you the biggest military budget in history."

"We have the money, but most of the stuff isn't built yet. You people have asked us to send aircraft carriers to Lebanon, Central America, Libya and Southeast Asia. We don't even have one in dry dock. I wish the White House would check with us before you do any more saber rattling."

"We're not saber rattling. Our national security is at stake in every part of the globe, and if we don't show the flag, our credibility will be zilch."

"Well, we can't send any carriers to Mozambique."

"What about nuclear submarines?"

"They're all spoken for. We have to keep them on station as our main deterrent to the Soviets until we can put the MX missiles in place."

"What can you send to Mozambique?"

"How about a World War II destroyer? We got a bunch of them in mothballs."

"What kind of message is that to the Russians?"

"With all due respect, one of the problems is that you keep sending messages to the Soviets with U.S. naval ships. Why can't you people use the diplomatic pouch like every other country does?"

"The only thing the Soviets understand is strength. If we don't produce a task force for Mozambique they'll interpret it as a sign that we are unable to police the world."

"There is just so much we can do. The Pentagon is always happy to further American foreign policy, but if you would consult with us first, we could let you know whether we can support it militarily."

"I thought the armed forces had contingency plans for every situation on the face of the globe."

"We do have the plans. We just don't have the troops. You have to figure out a few diplomatic initiatives that don't require military muscle."

"Well, if we can't send the fleet, what about flying in the Rapid Deployment Brigade to Kenya?"

"You already requested them for Honduras."

"Okay, then ferry over some AWACS."

"All our AWACS are spoken for."

"Then dispatch the 82nd Airborne."

"We don't have the planes to transport the 82nd Airborne. Do you want us to pull a division out of Germany?"

"No, that would be the wrong signal to the Kremlin, particularly at the moment we're putting Pershing missiles into Europe."

"Do you people really have to send a message to Mozambique at this time? Couldn't we at least wait until the dust settles over Chad?"

"The president and Mr. Clark are very concerned that if we don't show we're serious about Mozambique, they'll be laughing at us in Angola."

"So let them laugh."

"Watch yourself, General. I'm speaking for your commander in chief. What have you got in our military arsenal to warn Mozambique?"

"If you want the truth - two jeeps, a WAC, and the U.S. Marine Corps Band. Once we ship them overseas you people are on your own."

Everything's quiet in straits of Taiwan

By DON GRAFF

MAKUNG, Pescadores Islands (NEA) - Let me tell you, it wasn't easy getting here.

The original plan was to take the train from Taipei to Kaohsiung. From Kaohsiung there is a ferry to Makung - a four-hour trip and, I thought, a nice change from plane and train.

The ferry, however, was booked full and had been for a week. So were all the flights from Kaohsiung to Makung. This is a very popular vacation spot for Taiwanese, even in the broiling high summer.

Deciding my luck might improve if I flew back to Taipei, from where there are more flights, I did. And it did.

I was on standby, but finally made it here on what is now my top candidate for the world's worst airline, Far Eastern Transport, FAT for short, whose personnel sets a new standard for an attitude of "Why are you bothering me?"

I'll spare you further details, and have only given you these in order to set up this line: Fat chance you'll ever catch me flying FAT again.

Back to "here," the Pescadores - the old Portuguese name, the currently preferred Chinese is Penghu - are a cluster of islands and islets in the Taiwan Straits, where the two Chinas glare at each other across a few miles of water that neither is able to cross.

The islands are a military outpost of considerable strategic importance to Taiwan, of which fact there is ample evidence. Squat concrete bunkers and an occasional observation tower line the road in from the airport.

Military compounds are spotted around the town, armed guards at the gates. Battle-ready ships, in from the straits, tie up at the main pier - under the melancholy gaze of a semi-heroic statue of Chiang Kai-shek.

But what most advertises Makung's garrison character are the troops. They roam the streets day and night, on duty and off, in American-style army in field green, navy in crisp white and air force in cool blue.

There is no sense of tension in any of this military show, however. The Republic of China may be in a continuing state of war with the People's Republic, but this outpost is very much at ease.

All the real action is down at the fishing wharf and in the gift shops along the main streets where Makung's entrepreneurs push coral jewelry, a local specialty, on the bargain-hunting vacationers from Kaohsiung and Taipei.

Drought, PIK boost grain prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The reduced harvest prospects because of government acreage curbs and this summer's drought have helped boost grain prices significantly, says the Agriculture Department.

It's a mixed bag of sweet and sour apples, frankly. For a corn farmer with bins full of grain from previous crops and who is signed up in the payment-in-kind program, the price increase is good news. Or maybe the farm was in that lucky place that got a couple of inches of rain just at the right time in July and again in August.

But if his bins are empty and fields are blistered by heat — and the farmer failed to sign up in PIK to get free surplus grain for reducing 1983 plantings — things might be a bit grim. Livestock producers, particularly those who turn out grain-fed cattle and hogs, also are caught in a bind.

"Because of the smaller crops, livestock producers will be faced with higher feeding costs," says the department's Economic Research Service in its latest outlook summary. "Therefore, as cattle and hog producers adjust by reducing herds, red meat supplies will increase this fall and winter. The higher costs will affect broiler production the least."

According to USDA's price report issued last week, the national hog-corn ratio dropped to 13.6 last month from 13.9 in July. A year ago, the report said, the ratio was 26.6.

The ratio numbers express the number of bushels of corn that are equal in value to 100 pounds of live hog sold by farmers. In other words, a hog sold in August brought only enough to pay for about half the corn that it was worth a year ago.

As of mid-August, the report said hogs sold by farmers averaged $47 per 100 pounds. That was up from $43.40 in July. A year earlier, however, the all-hog price nationally averaged $61.20 per 100 pounds.

Corn, meanwhile, was $3.45 per bushel in August, matching the record set in Oct. 1974. That was up from $3.13 in July and $2.30 per bushel a year ago, the report said.

Looking at the cattle market, the average August price of all cattle sold as beef was $53.80 per 100 pounds, down from $54.80 in July and $58.10 a year ago.

Challenger astronauts celebrate Labor Day later than others

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Happy with Challenger's "fabulous" flight and eager to do it again, the five shuttle astronauts rested at home today and tried to readjust sleep schedules turned upside down during their six-day mission.

The astronauts, who returned to earth Monday, praised their "wonderful machine" which now gets a breather as its sister ship, Columbia, prepares for a flight next month with a European research facility in its payload.

On the nearly flawless eighth shuttle flight, the Challenger's success with a variety of experiments and with launch and landing in darkness prompted the crewmembers to speak of a hopeful future for the space plane.

"It will be doing some very good work over the next 15 years," said mission specialist Guion S. Bluford Jr., the first American black in space, who said the flight was "a fabulous experience."

Said 54-year-old Dr. William Thornton, the space traveler, "It's a wonderful thing. More and more people will be going where we went in the future."

President Reagan, who welcomed the Challenger crew home with a telephone call, said the flight showed the shuttle "will be the dependable workhorse for all space applications."

Mission commander Richard Truly brought the 100-ton Challenger drifting out of the night sky to a featherlight touchdown at 3:40 a.m. EDT on a pool of light on a concrete strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. The flight started Aug. 30 at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"That was fun," said Truly as the spacecraft rolled to a halt. "Let's do it again."

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, boss of the shuttle program, called the flight of the Challenger "the cleanest mission yet."

The crew launched a communications-weather satellite for India, used Challenger's robot arm to move a four-ton weight about in space, completed a complex series of medical tests, processed live pancreas cells in a pharmaceutical process that may help conquer diabetes, and successfully checked out the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite that is vital to the Oct. 28 flight on Columbia of the European Spacelab.

The astronauts start five days of debriefing Wednesday that conclude Sept. 13 with a news conference.

Dale Gardner, a mission specialist, and Dan Brandenstein, a pilot, thanked Johnson Space Center workers.

"Every time we put our hands on a switch... it was with every confidence that it would work," said Gardner. He praised "the wonderful machine and the great training" the crew received.

Abrahamson said that Challenger experienced only 18 problems. He said most of his concern was toward a malfunctioning toilet that has failed on each flight. Its design is to be reviewed.

The satellite launched for India was having difficulty Monday in deploying solar array panels that provide it with electric power. But its American manufacturer, Ford Aerospace, expressed confidence that it would begin working properly.

Lucas cuts his own wrists

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — A drifter who claims he killed 100 women in 16 states tried to kill himself by cutting his wrists with a broken lightbulb in his jail cell, authorities said.

Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway said deputies found Henry Lee Lucas bleeding in his cell as they began serving lunch shortly before noon Sunday.

Doctors in Bowie, about 30 miles south of here, stitched two gashes and treated several other cuts on the back of Lucas' left hand, Conway said.

"He took glass from a lightbulb and cut the back of his left hand, wrist and elbow. He was taken to Bowie Memorial Hospital and treated and then taken back to jail," Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said.

McGaughey said the wound was "never regarded as serious" but said he would describe the injury as a suicide attempt.

Lucas, 42, has been charged with the killings of five women in Texas and claims to have killed more than 100 women in 16 states.

He was convicted in 1960 of murdering his 74-year-old mother and spent six years in a mental institution before he was paroled from a Michigan prison in 1970.

Wallpaper borders enhance a room

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Today's new fashion of putting up wallpaper borders on the walls borrows a decorative ploy that was popular in the 18th and 19th centuries.

In the past, a wallpaper border was used as a rule to finish an already papered wall. Nowadays, borders may be used in this way, but are just as likely to be applied alone to a painted wall as a decorative accent.

This practice has two advantages. First, today's often featureless rooms cry out for the imaginative use of borders to create an illusion of architectural detail. Borders are available which imitate corbels, plaster mouldings and other architectural flourishes which once were commonplace in homes.

Second, both the original purchase of material and the cost of application are considerably less for a border than for a full wallpapering job.

One of the nice things about borders is that they offer the do-it-yourself decorator considerable scope, says Bob Jaxon, a wall-coverings designer who recently completed a border collection for a wallpaper manufacturer.

Prepared, dry-strippable borders such as the ones he designed can be applied around windows and doors, on cornices and at the ceiling, chair rail or baseboard level on walls.

In addition, said Jaxon, he has used them to create supergraphic illusions, to enhance window shades, valences, mirrors, room dividers and folding screens as well as to dress up poster frames, and as accent trim on doors, cabinets and furniture.

Jaxon advises using a wallpaper border to correct architectural flaws in a room. For example, to raise a low ceiling, paint the ceiling a light color and extend the ceiling paint one foot down onto the walls. Paint the rest of the walls a darker hue and where the two colors meet, apply a purchased wallpaper border in a compatible design. The illusion of a higher ceiling will be the result.

To lower a ceiling, reverse the trick, painting the ceiling a dark color and the wall beneath it a lighter color.

Jaxon has also used a wallpaper border in a geometric Greek key design to create a trompe l'oeil headboard by applying the border to the wall behind a platform bed.

Another idea is to apply a border to a sliding glass door by carrying the wallpaper border across the window.

One of the most successful uses of the inexpensive borders he designed for Printpack Inc. is to decorate children's rooms. A hobby horse motif border was used, for example, to trim a crib, on the wall at crib level, to frame a bulletin board and to decorate an old truck refurbished to hold toys. The same border also decorates an inexpensive lamp and a waste bucket.

Later, as the child grows and matures, you can strip off the juvenile border and select something more sophisticated," Jaxon said.

Another advantage to borders over a full room of wallpaper is their more subtle effect.

"As rooms have gotten smaller, we have had to learn discipline and work for smaller effects. In a small room, which could be overwhelmed by too much strong color and pattern, a border can add distinction without being too loud," said Jaxon.

Wallpaper borders come in a wide range of sizes — from a 2-inch width to as wide as 8 inches. Personal taste is the usual guideline in size selection. But as a rule of thumb, the farther away the border from eye level, the larger it can be.

"A 2-inch border wouldn't mean much in a very high-ceilinged room," said Jaxon.

Nearly every manufacturer includes borders as part of wallpaper collections. Some also offer separate collections composed solely of borders.

The available border patterns range from reproductions of early American stencils through florid Victorian motifs to modern designs. There is also a good selection of borders with juvenile motifs, such as balloons, ice cream cones, toy trains and sports equipment, useful for those who are decorating children's rooms.

Architectural detailing is reproduced in borders that imitate plaster mouldings and other architectural details for those who wish to add distinction to a plain room.

Consumers will also be able to find coordinating fabrics and fabric borders at shops catering to home sewers. The fabric borders are usually available on full lengths of fabric but some specialists also offer separate fabric borders which can be used as trim for upholstery and pillows.

Wallpaper borders come in many price ranges — from a high of about $9 a yard to as low as 50 cents a yard. Look for them wherever wallpaper is sold.

Dear Abby

Fat woman tired of only "thin is in"

DEAR ABBY: Please, please print this again:

"DEAR ABBY: Do you know what it's like to: "Walk down the street and have a total stranger say, "You have such a pretty face, it's a shame you're so fat?" "Shop in a grocery store and have people watch to see what you put in your cart?"

"Walk into a restaurant and wonder if you'll fit into the booths or chairs? (Or worse yet, go to someone's home and pray there will be a chair that's sturdy enough to hold you?)

"Squeeze into a theater seat and sit in agony during the entire performance while the sides of the seat dig into your thighs?"

"Lose out on a job for which you are highly qualified because of the way you look? (They never tell you that's the reason, but somehow you know it is.)

"Be told that someone would like to date you if you would lose some weight?"

"Wonder if maybe you wouldn't be better off dead?" "Well, I do. I know there is nothing you or anybody else can do about my problem, Abby, but it felt good to get it off my chest. Thanks for listening."

FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE

"DEAR MISERABLE: I know of two solutions to your problem. One is Overeaters Anonymous, P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504. It has chapters in nearly every city in the nation, and a more loving, caring, understanding and supportive group of people you could never hope to meet.

"The other is The National Association to Aid Fat Americans, Inc., P.O. Box 43, Bellerose, N.Y. 11426. This is a group of frankly fat people who have banded-together for the purpose of helping the obese to accept themselves as they are. There is much to be said for both organizations.

"When writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope."

Abby, the above letter changed my life. I was also "Fat, Female and Miserable," so I decided to do something about it. I made a choice. I decided to quit trying to be something I was never meant to be: thin!

For 20 years I had tried every diet that came along. I lost and gained and lost and gained. Finally I could no longer handle the feeling of failure, so I went the other route and joined The National Association to Aid Fat Americans.

I have finally learned to accept myself as I am, and I've never been happier. Sign me...

OLD-TIMER

DEAR OLD-TIMER: A great idea! Children?

DEAR ABBY: The photographer in Fort Myers, Fla., wanted to know why lovers always close their eyes while kissing. Obviously the purpose is to shut out other distractions so that the ecstasy of the moment may be full and complete.

I, too, am a professional photographer, but my problem is not whether couples close their eyes, but how to get them to shut their mouths! In recent years, it seems that more and more bridal couples try to "swallow" each other while kissing. This is in extremely poor taste (pun intended), especially in view of hundreds of guests.

Please print this, but don't use my name, as I'm still in business.

Dr. Lamb: allergic to eggs

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the past 10 years I have experienced an apparent allergy to eggs. First I had sneezing and itchy eyes when I made angel food cake. This has gotten progressively worse. I cough, my throat feels shut off and now my chest hurts when I break an egg. I can no longer eat foods that contain hard-boiled eggs. I have trouble eating in a restaurant, especially at breakfast time.

It is difficult to cook for my family as they do not enjoy hearing me choke and suffer afterward. I even lose my voice just stopping to buy eggs. My family doctor said there was nothing he could do and just to avoid raw eggs. I called the office of a new ear, nose and throat man and upper respiratory tract allergy doctor and explained the problem and he said just to avoid eggs. I have read your column for a long time and am asking your advice.

DEAR READER — Your story will sound unreasonable to some but such extreme sensitivity to eggs is documented. In one such reported case the patient had to keep china and silverware completely separate from that of other members of the family so the patient's dishes wouldn't become contaminated with a trace of egg during washing and handling. Fortunately such extreme sensitivity is rare.

I think you should be seen by an allergy clinic. The ear, nose and throat physician may not be primarily an allergist. However, I'm confident that all will tell you that the most important thing is to avoid eggs entirely. Some allergists do use desensitization shots to help relieve symptoms and you might get some benefit from antihistamines but they may make you sleepy. It is not an easy problem.

Airline industry not benefitting from nation's economic recovery

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the economy is on a sharp rebound, the nation's airlines still are struggling to end three years of record losses, and disappointing results so far have prompted renewed talk of fare wars after the summer travel season.

"In the face of a rather strong economic recovery, the airline industry is not participating," said Wall Street analyst Julius Maldutis, who watches the industry for Salomon Brothers.

The airlines historically have been among the first to prosper when the economy rebounds, but that was the rule before the government stopped regulating fares and air routes, opening the way for stiff competition among carriers.

During the first six months of the year the 11 largest airlines recorded operating losses of nearly $500 million, and some industry analysts say that with traffic not rebounding as strongly as had been expected in the third quarter, the carriers might have trouble breaking even for the year.

The industry had been banking on a solid second quarter followed by a prosperous summer travel season to help them end three years of losses. But on both counts there has been disappointment.

Although a few airlines showed surprising strength in the second quarter, the major carriers earned only $68 million from operations during the three-month period, half the amount in the same quarter in 1982 — a year in which the industry ended up losing $750 million.

The quarter was not without its winners and some startling surprises.

American Airlines, for example, led the pack with an operating profit of $57 million, substantially better than a year earlier. And Pan American World Airways, which has been on the endangered list for more than a year, shocked the industry by parlaying a cost-cutting campaign into a $49.7 million operating profit.

But those performances were more than offset by a $51 million operating loss at Delta Airlines, traditionally one of the most savvy and profitable carriers; a $27.5 million operating loss at struggling Republic Airlines; a $20 million operating deficit at Western Airlines, and worse than expected performances at a number of other carriers.

And in recent weeks industry experts have pulled back their expectations for the current third quarter as travelers appeared to be flying less than anticipated, costs began to edge upward and competition prevented airlines from scrapping discount fares as much as they had wanted. More than 80 percent of all travelers continue to fly on discount tickets, the industry estimates.

"It was thought that this (the third quarter) was the quarter that would show the first evidence of a solid recovery," said Alfred Norling, an airline industry analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co. "But every day it appears that is not going to be true."

The airlines' performance this year has been especially significant because it provides the first evidence of the industry's response to prosperous economic conditions since deregulation.

"This is a new experience for us," said Georges James, vice president and chief economist of the Air Transport Association, the industry trade group.

But while the airlines have been struggling, Wall Street analysts and airline executives say the carriers have turned the corner toward profitability.

"The industry is showing a recovery, but unfortunately it's not going to be as strong or as robust as was expected generally," said Maldutis.

Dallas firm buys TV station in Worcester

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A Dallas-based corporation interested in subscription television is buying Worcester's WSMW-TV, Channel 27, for $8 million, according to the station's general manager.

Brian Higgins confirmed on Monday night that an agreement had been reached between Central Massachusetts Television, Inc., of Dallas and Sybos, Inc., which owns WSMW-TV.

Papers were filed last week with the Federal Communications Commission. The sale is subject to the commission's approval in the next 30 to 60 days.

Higgins said the agreement had been negotiated for less than a year with Noland Hill, president of CMT. The corporation owns Channel 33 in Dallas, along with real estate and savings and loan holdings.

Higgins said he believed WSMW-TV will be CMT's only venture into the New England market.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Actress Brooke Shields wants no special attention at college — so Princeton University officials are making a special effort to chase away reporters and photographers interested in her move onto campus.

The 18-year-old actress, known for modeling Calvin Klein jeans and starring in the films "Endless Love" and "The Blue Lagoon," began the Ivy League school's week-long freshman orientation program Monday prior to the start of classes Sept. 12.

The university announced that it would respect Miss Shields' request to be treated "like any other student" without press conferences, photo sessions or other fanfare.

University officials instructed security guards to keep an eye out for media representatives, who were promptly ejected from the campus. Princeton spokesman George Eager said Monday.

The freshmen checked in Sunday, and Miss Shields was assigned to share a suite with two roommates.

LONDON (AP) — Speculation that Princess Diana is expecting a second child has started up again in British newspapers after she interrupted her vacation in Scotland with Prince Charles and made a quick trip to London.

Tabloids on Tuesday pointed out that her return coincided with the return to work of the royal gynecologist, George Pinker, after his two-week summer vacation.

The 22-year-old princess

had been vacationing at Balmoral Castle in northeast Scotland with Charles, Queen Elizabeth II and other members of the royal family.

She boarded a British Airways flight Monday from nearby Aberdeen, flew to London's Heathrow airport and was then reported to have driven to the couple's London home at Kensington Palace.

Neither her 34-year-old husband or their 14-month-old son Prince William traveled with her.

Buckingham Palace refused to comment on speculation that she is expecting another child and said of her London visit: "This is a purely private matter."

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Wearing a red and black jumpsuit, Joan Jett led thousands at the Electric Cowboy festival singing one of her big hits, "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" over the Labor Day weekend, although she concedes, "Some people think it's very unlady-like to sweat and run around on stage."

"It's a natural body function," she says. "If you jump and run around like I do on stage you are going to sweat."

Performers at the weekend festival included Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, Cheap Trick, Joe Walsh, Mitch Ryder, Leon Russell, Gregg Allman, Johnny Van Zant and the Marshall Tucker Band.

"I'm very aggressive and determined," said Ms. Jett, who performed Sunday. "People always mix that up with being mean."

"I'll tell you what's really gratifying," she added. "I get letters from girls who say I inspired them, whether it's to pick up a guitar and play rock 'n' roll — or to go in and ask their boss for a raise. That's inspiring to me."

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Four people entering the second month of a fast to protest the nuclear arms race could face a "life-risking crisis" within a week or two, a doctor says.

The four, who have lost 19 to 38 pounds apiece, have no plans to end the "Fast for Life" until they see significant movement toward nuclear disarmament, said protester Charles Gray.

Dr. Linda Hole is monitoring the four. Four people in Paris and three in West Germany also are fasting.

"I feel if this action costs us our lives, it will be of good use," said Gray, 58, a former sociology professor. The fast started Aug. 6, the 38th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

NEW YORK (AP) — Field mice living along the Love Canal toxic waste site in Niagara Falls have half the life expectancy of mice living a mile away, according to a four-year study.

While the cause of the shortened life span has yet to be determined, the livers of the mice showed the typical response to toxic chemicals, according to a report on the study by John H. Christian, a professor at the State University of New York.

Old news is good news to him

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Caren, who acquired his first rare newspaper at the age of 11, now has 15,000 historic newspapers in his collection — not bad, considering he is just 23 years old.

It all started when elementary school classmates brought in some brittle pages from early-20th-century newspapers that they had found in an abandoned house. Caren, who was interested in baseball, was anxious to find an old sports page.

"I coaxed them to take me to the house, and from there I lugged back a hundred newspapers, going back to 1895," he recalled in an interview. "I later found out it was a storage area for an old Brooklyn newspaper."

"I was fascinated. Starting from the sports page and going to the front page, I became interested in the national and international news. Why just read some dreadful textbook version of history when you can relive it, see it through the eyes of the reader of that day?"

That was a springboard, said Caren, motivating him to hunt flea markets, antique shops, antique shows and garage sales, buying newspapers on his $1-a-week allowance wherever he could find them. His first "major" purchase was a 1770 British newspaper that cost him $4.95.

"Surprisingly, many early newspapers can be purchased at very affordable prices," Caren says. "Most 19th-century newspapers can be purchased for under $25, and even 17th-century ones are available at under $100."

"Usually, though not always, age is an important factor in the price," he points out. "But content is also extremely important. A paper of April 14, 1865, would be worth less than $15. The paper of April 15, 1865, with news of Lincoln's assassination, would be worth from $100 to $1,000."

Condition and the scarcity of a specific publication also affect the value, he adds, noting that papers that everybody has saved are virtually worthless.

"Those who are putting away the big headlines today, like Kennedy's assassination, the moon landing and Nixon's resignation and think they'll make a lot of money will find they're very common and have little monetary value," he says.

In building a collection, there are many areas from which to choose, notes Caren, who concentrates on historical events and scarce early American and British newspapers.

"Some collect by title, some by historical period, some by biography — just George Washington material, for instance — some by geographical location. I really run the gamut," he adds.

One of his finds, picked up at a book fair, is a Colonial American paper, The Essex Gazette, "published by Samuel and Ebenezer Hall at their Printing-office near the Town-House" in Salem, Mass., Jan. 31, 1775.

"What's unusual is it has on the front page the petition of the Continental Congress to the king of England," Caren notes.

Caren's collection includes the largest newspaper ever printed, 5 feet long and 4 feet wide — an issue of The Constellation, printed in Boston in 1859 as a novelty; an original Confederate newspaper printed on wallpaper because of the shortage of paper during the Civil War; a phonetic newspaper, the Anglo-Saxon; and a rare illustrated Gold Rush newspaper printed in California.

Among the major events chronicled in the newspapers dating back to the 1640s in Caren's collection are the trial of Charles I in 1649; most major battles of the American Revolution; the death of George Washington; the Northwest Ordinance; the Louisiana Purchase; major battles of the War of 1812; the Monroe Doctrine; the fall of the Alamo; the Battle of Gettysburg; the Gettysburg Address; Custer's Last Stand; the explosion of the Battleship Maine, the sinking of the Titanic, and the Lincoln assassination.

"The New York Herald of April 15, 1865, carrying the news of the assassination, is the most widely reproduced paper," Caren notes. "Many reproductions had an illustration of Lincoln on the front page, while the original had no illustration."

The reproduction would also be yellow and brittle, says Caren. He explains that a newspaper from the 1600s would be in better condition than World War II newspapers, since early papers were made of rag or linen stock, while 20th-century papers of wood pulp deteriorate rapidly.

Caren, who majored in business at the University of Maryland, lives in Rockland County, N.Y., where he is starting a business dealing in Americana, ephemera and rare newspapers.

"I still have that first sports page from 1913," he says. "Thirteen is supposed to be unlucky but it turned out to be lucky for me."

American's are paying more to eat out

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Americans are spending more of their food dollars in restaurants and a new report from the Agriculture Department says the eating-out trend will continue during the rest of the 1980s, with increased competition for consumers' appetites — and money.

The report comes from the Economic Research Service of the USDA and covers what the department classifies as "separate eating places" that includes fast-food operations, traditional restaurants, cafeterias, etc. It does not count places like school lunchrooms or restaurants that are only an adjunct to another business like a department store.

The report looks at the changes in the industry between 1966 and 1979 and includes predictions for the rest of the current decade.

According to author Michael G. Van Dress, an economist, the retail value of all food served away from home in 1979 was $102.4 billion. Between 1966 and 1979, there was an annual increase of 2.7 percent in the number of people served and an annual increase of 3 percent in real sales, adjusted for inflation.

"Consumers' willingness to spend more of their food dollar away from home was triggered by rising per capita income, an increase in the number of multi-earner households, a trend toward smaller households, a more mobile populace and the national inclination to purchase greater convenience," Van Dress wrote.

He said real income probably will continue to rise in the 80s — meaning more business for restaurants. He also said, however, that rising costs for things like food, energy and labor "may lift menu prices, blunting sales somewhat."

The expansion trend, especially in fast-food enterprises, may be slowed by a glut of establishments in some areas.

Van Dress predicted that industry will respond to increased competition with price cutting and heavy advertising, including coupons and other promotions. He also said there would be more mergers and takeovers. "These methods favor corporate franchises and chains," he added.

The big news during the 1960s and 1970s was the growth of fast-food outlets. The number of fast-food restaurants jumped 76 percent between 1966 and 1979, while the number of traditional restaurants providing sit-down service dropped 6 percent.

Van Dress said, however, that even the limited menus of fast-food outlets are adapting to changing tastes.

Teacher of the year has ideas on education

EDITOR'S NOTE — LeRoy Hay, National Teacher of the Year, heads his school's English Department. He also teaches theater arts and futurism. That seems appropriate, with education playing a large role on the political stage and big changes ahead for the schools, as he sees it. He has lots of ideas about both.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — During his first year at Manchester High School, English teacher LeRoy Hay was assigned lunchtime duty in a cafeteria that held 600 students. The year was 1968, and penny-throwing was all the rage.

"The cafeteria overwhelmed me. I was scared," he says. "The first advice I got from another teacher was, 'Keep your back to the wall.'"

During his second year, Hay watched in horror as a student nodded off during one of his most inspired lectures. "Do you know what that does to an idealist just out of college?"

Apparently, nothing much. Hay went on to earn a master's degree, a doctorate and the top honor bestowed on an American teacher: the title of National Teacher of the Year.

He may not be quite the idealist he once was, what with 17 years of teaching under his belt. But he is not so hard-bitten that he doesn't feel somewhat giddy about his prize — a year off from the classroom to travel around the country offering his opinions on the state of education in America.

Among them:

- Until teachers' salaries climb to between $20,000 and $40,000 a year, the idea of merit pay will not work.
- Television has made students less imaginative. Disruptions in family life have rendered them less capable of making decisions.
- Schools will be markedly different by 1990. Grade levels may disappear.

Hay is more qualified than most to make such predictions: in addition to English and theater, he teaches futuristics at Manchester, one of 600 U.S. schools that offer the subject.

Hay grew up in Cortland, a New York state farm town, the son of high school dropouts and the first of his family to attend college. After getting a degree in secondary education at the State University of New York in Cortland, he moved to a Syracuse suburb, taught for two years and married his high school sweetheart, Lorraine Latimer, also a teacher.

A decision to go into theater brought him to the University of Connecticut in 1968 to accept a graduate assistantship. To help foot the bill, he taught English at Manchester High.

As an authority figure, he had to rely on his wits. "Nobody would ever be physically afraid of me," says Hay, who at 39 looks more like a student than a teacher. He is tall and thin, with shaggy blonde hair, dimples, thick glasses and a wispy moustache.

In Connecticut, he planned to get his master's degree, then teach theater and direct college plays, a plan that became more attractive with each passing noon hour spent ducking pennies in the cafeteria.

Then, midway through his second year at Manchester, the job of drama club adviser opened up. Hay stepped in, and realized he didn't have to leave high school to teach theater and direct plays.

"It brought to me an excitement that had been missing," he says. "I put in a theater arts course, and I began to do the things I really wanted to do."

In the years since, Hay has had two children, earned a Ph.D. and become chairman of the 20-member English Department at Manchester High, which has an enrollment of 1,600 students in grades 10-12.

He also has watched inflation gnaw away at his salary and veteran educators succumb to teacher burnout. Worst of all, he says, have been the changes in the way society views and values its teachers.

Hay's first-year salary was $5,200. "But back then, you had a community's respect. To be a teacher was to be someone special."

He now earns $27,000 a year, "but that respect has all but disappeared," he says. "Now, you're seen as a public employee."

The image of the American teacher changed during the '70s, Hay says.

"In the '60s, kids learned just because someone said they should. They did not question authority — that was the pre-Watergate era. As a result of Watergate, our whole society changed. We became a doubting society."

At the same time, he says, "inflation was running at 10 percent, and our salaries were going up 4 to 5 percent. Now salary is the key issue in the minds of teachers, and in the minds of young people deciding whether to become teachers."

To capture their share of fresh talent, school districts will have to pay teachers between $20,000 and $40,000, Hay thinks.

A member of the Congressional Task Force on Merit Pay.

Hay sees a plethora of problems with merit pay, advanced by President Reagan and others as one means of improving the schools.

Hay thinks mediocrity has crept into the classroom because 'schools reflect society, and for the past 20 years, excellence has not been stressed. During the 1960s and '70s, we stressed equity, not excellence."

Among merit pay's detractors are the National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers' union, of which Hay is an active member. The NEA first wants to raise teachers' low starting salaries — about $12,600 on the average.

And he still worries that merit pay could prove divisive. "If you are not a merit teacher, does that make you non-meritorious? I anticipate tremendous lawsuits. If your kid is not put in a meritorious teacher's classroom, has he been discriminated against?"

Hay is also concerned that merit pay tends to favor teachers of good students, since their progress is more easily measured than that of average or poor students.

Above all, he says, "you need a system that avoids saying this teacher is better. I see that as a potentially destructive force in schools that would pit teacher against teacher."

Hay did not consider himself a good teacher until he had been on the job for 10 years. A good teacher, to Hay, is one who listens as well as lectures.

"A good teacher gains the respect of all kinds of students. You must be honest and open. And you have to love kids."

Are there kids he doesn't like? Hay is honest. "You bet your life," he replies.

Hay was chosen from among more than 1 million elementary and secondary school teachers under the 32-year-old national teacher program, which is sponsored by the Council of Chief State School Officers, the Encyclopaedia Britannica Companies and Good Housekeeping magazine.

The 1983 National Teacher of the Year is a backyard gardener and a bowler, a traditionalist who prefers a jacket and tie to the blue jeans and T-shirts some of his fellow teachers wear.

A tough grader, Hay says he is stingy with A's for a reason. "I want my students to know that excellence does not come easily."

Son Brandon, 14, and daughter Emily, 11, are "good, solid students," who are allowed to watch TV and play video games in moderation. Emily is not allowed to watch daytime dramas. "I do not want her moral and ethical values shaped by the soaps."

Hay thinks today's kids are more sophisticated than ever, "but only vicariously. They have no more first-hand experience than they did 10 years ago."

He also believes kids are made to grow up too fast. "We expect them to be little adults. We reason with them as adults. We make the adult world available to them. But even in high school, they're still kids. They still draw pictures on the blackboard and tell terrible jokes."

He is pleased that his tenure as top teacher coincides with the emergence of a national debate on education.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Bright ideas are likely to come to you in rapid succession today. Your first ones will be good, but your later ones will be better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're entering a hopeful cycle and general conditions look promising, but you must be wise about how you capitalize on your opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even if things have gone rather well lately, strive to raise your sights. New heights can be scaled if you are ambitious enough.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your realistic and practical outlook is to your advantage.

However, in this time frame, flavor your thoughts with a dash of wishful thinking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be on the alert now, because you could uncover a second source of income. It is likely to be suggested by business associates, not personal pals.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Screen candidates for partnerships with care in this period. Team up only with those who are in complete harmony with your aims.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Timing is very important where your work or career is concerned. If you act prematurely there's the chance a good idea could fizzle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful in investment situations today. Guard against jumping into situations impulsively. Make no moves until you're certain of all the facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to let projects overlap at this time. Before launching a new venture, be sure the old one is finalized properly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are discontent with your present job, don't make a sudden change at this time unless you have something better lined up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Continue to look for additional ways to add to your resources, but avoid taking risks where you could possibly lose more than you hope to gain.

4-under-par 280

Ellis wins sixth Top O' Texas crown

By L.D. STRATE
News Sports Editor

Richard Ellis of Plano went on his annual pillage of the Top O' Texas Tournament with a four-round total of 280 to win by three strokes over Richard Ryden, a former NAIA All-American from Cameron University.

Ellis claimed his fifth consecutive title Monday in the 36-hole finale at the Pampa Country Club course, shooting a six-under-par 65 for the first 18 holes, and finishing with a two-over-par 73 on the final 18.

It was the sixth TOT title for the Pampa native, who indicated he may not play again in the tournament due to conflicts with his job as a golf course executive.

That may be good news to a lot of his competitors.

Ellis found himself trailing by eleven strokes after an opening round of 73 Saturday, but surged to third place Sunday after a two-under-par 69.

Greg Reynolds and Greg Turner, who were tied for the lead after 36 holes, handed command over to Ellis after Monday's first 18 holes. Reynolds shot himself out of contention with a 79 while Turner slipped to a 73.

Meanwhile, Ellis was shooting his 65, which included seven birdies, four on the front nine.

Ryden, who was in a three-way tie for fifth after the opening round, turned out to be Ellis' toughest challenge down the stretch. Ryden was alone in fourth place after Sunday's second round and climbed into third place with an even-par 71, two shots behind Turner and nine behind Ellis going into the final round.

"I was hitting my sand wedge much better the last 27 holes and I starting making a few putts," said Ryden, who had the tournament's only hole in one Saturday. "The first two days I just wasn't putting very good."

Ryden, who had eight birdies on the final 18, felt he had a chance to catch Ellis on the last three holes.

"I had a birdie on No. 15 and Richard bogied it," Ellis said. "That put me four behind and I felt I had a pretty good chance, but I also knew how Richard played."

Ryden cut the lead to three with another birdie on No. 16 and another bogie for Ellis. However, Ellis got back in the groove with a birdie on No. 17 and Ryden had to settle for par.

Ellis' six TOT titles is a record that may never be equaled. Amarillo's John Farquhar is the closest with three tournament wins. Ellis won his first title in 1969.

Dallas cornerback Ron Fellows is about to be tackled by Washington's Ken Coffey (48) and Vernon Dean (32) during a Monday night NFL opener at RFK Stadium in Washington. The Cowboys rallied to win, 31-30. (AP Laserphoto)

Cowboys rally past Redskins to win 1983 NFL opening game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Danny White and the Dallas Cowboys wrote a new ending to what was beginning to look like an old, familiar script.

For 30 minutes it was 1982 all over again for the Super Bowl-champion Washington Redskins before White rallied his team with three second-half touchdown passes and a 1-yard run for a 31-30 Dallas victory.

"It was kind of like two games out there. The first half, I don't think I ever saw a team play better than Washington," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

The Redskins, who whipped the Cowboys 31-17 in the National Conference championship last Jan. 22, took up on Monday night where they left off, opening a 23-3 halftime lead.

Joe Theismann ripped the Dallas secondary for 181 yards and a touchdown in the half. John Riggins ran for 64 yards and a score and Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 23, 30 and 39 yards.

White, who had completed just one of nine passes to that point, and the rest of the Cowboys were on the ropes.

"We had terrible field position in the first half. It was embarrassing for our offense," said White.

Landry's halftime speech to his team included the admonition to be "cool" and "play with your heads."

"We felt we had to keep up the tempo for the second half," said Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs. "We didn't want to go into a shell; we wanted to keep working the way we had been working. I felt the first five or six minutes of the second half, we couldn't let anything happen."

Gibbs' halftime talk was prophetic.

The Cowboys struck the first two times they touched the ball, wide receiver Tony Hill beating cornerback Vernon Dean on a 75-yard touchdown pass and then cornerback Anthony Washington on a 51-yarder.

"On the first play, we adjusted and had Vernon covering man-to-man but he didn't hear us because of the crowd noise. Vernon thought he was getting help inside and he was all alone out there," said defensive captain Mark Murphy.

The first pass to Hill was the first that turned it around," Theismann said. "It didn't kill us but it woke up the Cowboys."

The Redskins, trying to regroup, marched to the Dallas 14-yard line before the drive stalled on a 10-yard holding penalty against tight end Don Warren.

Moseley attempted a 31-yard field goal but was wide to the right, only his second miss in 27 attempts in the regular season dating back to 1981.

Moseley's miss was the opening the Cowboys needed. They marched 80 yards for the go-ahead score.

Tony Dorsett, who finished with 151 yards, including 77 on one play in the first half, picked up 27 yards in the go-ahead drive. He got 18 of them in one carry to the Washington 9 and Ron Springs ran it to the 1. White got the final yard himself, bootlegging it in around right end for a 24-23 Dallas lead with 6:59 to play.

Theismann, who completed 28 of 38 passes for 325 yards, tried to rally Washington — but cornerback Ron Fellows stepped in front of Charlie Brown, intercepted the ball and returned it 33 yards to the 4. Two plays later, White completed the Cowboys' scoring with a 1-yard pass to Doug Cosbie.

Theismann, who had passed 41 yards to Brown for his first TD of the season, passed 1 yard to Don Warren for his second one — but it came with only 10 seconds to play.

"The Redskins?" mused Dallas cornerback Dennis Thurman. "They've got to feel they were robbed."

Elway takes beating in first game

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

So the kid is human, after all.

Hit him and he falls down. Knock him down and he gets hurt.

Cut him and he bleeds.

John Elway will have to wait a little longer to start working his miracles for the Denver Broncos.

He's got plenty of time.

He had none of it in Pittsburgh. Elway, who enjoyed an occasional Saturday afternoon scamper when he was throwing the ball for Stanford, ran out of fear — and with good reason — against the Steelers on Sunday.

On his first pass as a professional, he let the ball go and Jack Lambert flattened him.

On his second one, Lambert was in his face again.

He never even got to throw his third one before Lambert separated him from the ball — and nearly from his sensibilities.

By the second quarter, Elway's right elbow was ballooning, his left one was bleeding, both ravaged by repeated two-point landings on Three Rivers Stadium's artificial turf. "I guess I'm going to have to learn how to pass with elbow pads on," he said.

He saw the second half from the sideline while Steve DeBerg, whose job Elway had taken in training camp, called the plays.

It was frustrating, Elway said, having to spend the second half of his first pro game off the field. But when DeBerg passed for the winning touchdown in the closing minutes, nobody showed more exuberance along the Denver bench than this million-dollar-a-year rookie, who waved his bandaged, ice-packed arm in celebration.

His stats were dreadful — one completion in eight passes for 14 yards, four sacks, one interception.

"Right now," said coach Dan Reeves, "he doesn't have a great deal of confidence," a reference not so much to Elway himself as to the Broncos' offensive line. It permitted the Steelers to sack Elway and DeBerg seven times. They passed for 49 yards. They lost 48 in sacks. Net gain: one yard.

Afterward, before Elway met the press, DeBerg did, facing dozens of writers and sportscasters. He stared at the crowd. "I could get used to this," DeBerg said.

He probably won't have the chance. Elway is likely to start next Sunday in Baltimore.

"A lot of this game is motivation and John's got to be motivated next week," DeBerg said, "playing the Colts, with their defense."

Not that Baltimore's defense is all that great, mind you. But it could have been Elway's defense. He was drafted by Baltimore but swore he'd never play for the Colts, finally forcing the trade that landed him in Denver.

That power play, and perhaps the size of his contract, did not endear Elway to Terry Bradshaw.

the Steelers' "saviour" 13 seasons back. He had a few unkind things to say a while back.

He'd been drafted by Pittsburgh, Bradshaw said, and he didn't want to play in Pittsburgh — but he did. And Elway, with four fewer Super Bowl rings, was making maybe three times what he was.

"I think," Bradshaw said then, reflecting on Elway's salary and all the national attention, "that he's got to pay his dues first."

On Sunday, Elway made the down payment.

Oilers improve attitude despite losing

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles is pleased with the blend of veterans and rookies he hopes will soon break a seven-game regular season losing string.

But it likely will take more of a blend of offense and defense for the Oilers to break out of their skid.

"We've had the influx of an excellent draft, new assistant coaches and a more experienced head coach," Biles said Monday in explaining the Oilers have an improved attitude despite the continuation of the losing string.

"Our veteran players are extremely hungry for some wins and they realize that we have drafted some talent."

Although Biles praised an overall good team attitude, the major improvement in performance has been on the offensive side of the field.

The Oilers offense put 38 points on the scoreboard Sunday against Green Bay but the defense allowed 41, including a 42-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud in overtime.

The offense rolled up 498 total yards but the defense allowed 479, including a team record tying five touchdown passes by Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey.

"We've put in a lot of changes on defense and I've just got to have a lot of patience that in time we are going to get it done." Biles said. "There is still a degree of learning to get it done on defense."

Nebraska has tight grip on top spot

By The Associated Press

Nebraska strengthened its hold on the top spot in the Associated Press' first regular-season college Top Twenty football poll, while defending champion Penn State slipped from fourth place to 20th.

The Cornhuskers, which ripped Penn State 44-6 in the inaugural Kickoff Classic last week, took 44 of 50 first-place votes and 993 of a possible 1,000 points Monday from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Nebraska had 976 points in the preseason poll.

Oklahoma, which opens its season this weekend at Stanford, received three first-place votes and 868 points for second place.

Texas, which gets under way Sept. 17 at Auburn, got two firsts and 865 points for the third spot.

Auburn, which opens its season this weekend at home against Southern Mississippi, received the other first-place vote and moved from fifth to fourth with 757 points.

Notre Dame, which opens at Purdue on Saturday, rose from sixth to fifth with 659 points and Michigan, which hosts Washington State in its opener, climbed from 10th to sixth with 593 points.

However, Florida State slipped from seventh to 12th after barely beating East Carolina 47-46.

Ohio State, No. 9 in the preseason poll, replaced Florida State in seventh place with 586 points. The Buckeyes open at home against Oregon on Saturday.

North Carolina, a 24-8 winner over South Carolina, moved up from 11th to eighth with 568 points. Southern California, which plays host to Florida this weekend, slipped from eighth to ninth with 560 points.

Georgia, which knocked off UCLA 19-8, jumped from 15th to 10th with 528 points.

While UCLA fell from the rankings, Florida moved in with a 28-3 triumph over Miami.

The Second Ten consists of Arizona, Florida State, LSU, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Iowa, Maryland, Washington, Florida, Washington and Penn State.

In the preseason ratings, it was North Carolina, LSU, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Iowa, Maryland, Washington, SMU and UCLA.

Mrs. McDonald denounces Reagan's speech, actions

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan praised Kathryn McDonald for her "composure and eloquence," but the widow of U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald angrily denounced the president's televised response to the Korean jet disaster that claimed her husband's life. "Reagan's speech 'should make the American people furious,'" Mrs. McDonald, 34, told reporters at the Atlanta home of her mother-in-law shortly after the address Monday night. "Once again, we get a lot of rhetoric signifying absolutely nothing," she said. "It was full of information about the incident and nothing about what we are going to do about it."

and I want some action. We need something to prove that the United States has not become a milquetoast nation." Reagan announced some sanctions against the Soviet Union, but he said he had decided not to delay arms negotiations, reimpose a grain embargo or try to halt high-technology shipments to the Soviets. In his address, Reagan said, "Our prayers tonight are with the victims and their families in their time of terrible grief. Our hearts go out to them — to brave people like Kathryn McDonald, the wife of a congressman, whose composure and eloquence on the day of her husband's death moved us all. He will be sorely missed by all of us here in government." There was irrefutable evidence that the Soviets last week had shot down the Korean Air Lines jetliner that carried McDonald and 268 others, Reagan said, noting that another Korean airliner had been hit by a missile and forced down in the Soviet Union in 1978. "Are they going to make a habit of doing this every five years?" Mrs. McDonald demanded. "Will we become angrier if they do it every two years?" She called on Reagan to prohibit the sale of grain and pipeline equipment to the Soviets and to ban American tourism in the Soviet Union.

Japanese cite 'clear proof' that Soviets downed Korean plane

By The Associated Press

Japan today said there was "clear proof" the Soviet Union deliberately shot down a South Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard, and Canada protested the incident by suspending the Soviet airline's landing rights.

The Soviet Union, while not directly acknowledging that Korean Air Lines flight 007 was shot down, said Monday the fighter that intercepted it "fulfilled its duty" in protecting the nation. It was the closest the Kremlin has come to conceding its forces downed the plane.

Japan and the United States today were expected to present to a U.N. Security Council meeting transcripts of an intercepted radio conversation between a Soviet fighter pilot and his ground control which indicate he saw the plane's navigation lights, took aim, fired, and declared his target destroyed.

In Tokyo, Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda told a news conference at the prime minister's official residence that the transcript was "clear proof" the Soviets attacked the Korean airliner on Thursday.

President Reagan, calling Thursday's disaster "the Korean Air Line massacre," demanded an explanation and an apology from Moscow.

Accusing the Soviets of barbarism, he announced cancellation of an agreement on transportation cooperation and reaffirmed the U.S. ban on Soviet planes landing at U.S. airports.

In Ottawa, Canadian Foreign Secretary Allan MacEachen on Monday announced his government was suspending landing rights for the Soviet airline Aeroflot for 60 days, and restricting its use of Gander, Newfoundland, as a refueling stop.

Aeroflot has had two weekly round-trip flights between Moscow and Montreal, and uses the Gander airport to refuel on flights to Havana.

"We want explanations, we want justification, we want compensation for the victims," MacEachen said.

"Soviet aircraft stray off their course and come into Canadian airspace and they're not shot down. You should be careful about shooting down a plane when you're not certain what you're shooting at," he said.

Barn contains a world of many delights

By JOYCE VENEZIA

Associated Press Writer

COOPERS MILLS, Maine (AP) — In this sleepy little town between the capital and the coast, the scene is framed by totem poles.

There, amid old plastic barrels, deteriorating lobster traps and a flock of wandering sheep, stands Elmer's Barn, packed with everything from jewels to junk.

Inside, its proprietor, Elmer Wilson, sits on an old car seat, presiding over four floors crammed with motley merchandise that could put grandmother's attic to shame.

In between zig-zag paths lie chests of glass prisms, boxes of antique post cards, shelves of wooden duck decoys, cradles full of porcelain dolls, bags of shucked corn husks, and whatever else a connoisseur of knick-knacks desires.

Dozens of old violins hang from the ceiling next to the egg beaters. In a pile of books is a 1906 seed catalog. In cupboards under counters are hundreds of wooden eggs and spindles.

There's no cash register, but Wilson gives receipts. The king of castoffs, dressed in a T-shirt and pants held up by suspenders, doesn't take inventory or hit his customers with a high-pressure sales pitch.

"If I had a bigger house, I'd just keep filling it," Wilson says with a chuckle.

He says he loves everything in the barn and deliberately overprices some things so they won't sell. But they do.

"One time I sold everything in the building to an auction house," he says. Within weeks, he had combed enough barns and garages to fill the four floors again.

"People from every walk of life will drive by and see the totem poles and say 'What ... is in that barn?'" Wilson says. "A lot of people say I should charge admission, but I just can't."

His business started by accident, when he held a small sale to clear his first barn. "Now I'm here, with bigger and better items I've salvaged," he says. "After 20 years of doing this, people approach me" when they have goods to sell.

For advertising, Wilson passes out brochures in several resort areas, but most of his business is by word-of-mouth or from curious travelers on Route 17.

The tourists who wander in and out find uses for just about every odd thing.
