

Lightning triggers area grassland fires

Pampa Fire Department battles one of several smokey grass fires in area

BY JULIA CLARK

Lightning started them, the wind fanned them and the hail "beat them out".

More than 2,000 acres were burned in grass fires as a thunderstorm cell blew its way across the southeastern and central part of the Panhandle Tuesday night.

Lightning danced across Panhandle skies, reaching down with fingers of blinding brightness as it dazzled the eyes of the casual observer.

However, for the more than 75 Panhandle area firefighters who were in the canyons, gullies and on hill tops fighting fires caused by nature's fury, the lightning wasn't so pretty.

Lightning-caused fires sprung up on the J.A. Ranch south of Claude, the Johnson ranch west of Alanreed and the Billy Davis ranch south of Lefors.

Ed Roberts of the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department estimated more than 1,000 acres of grassland on the Davis and Darcey ranches south of Lefors were destroyed by five or six separate lightning-started fires.

Fanned by the erratic winds, the fires consumed more than a section and a half of dry grassland as it jumped gullies and roads, Roberts said.

He said firefighters came from Pampa and McLean to help keep the fires from reaching threatened ranch houses and out-buildings.

The Claude fire department was called to the J. A. Ranch south of there about 5:30 p.m. Fire chief Sam Stewart said the combined forces of the Claude and Clarendon fire departments and ranch-hands fought the fire until 12:15 Wednesday morning.

They initially had it out, with only a section or so destroyed, Stewart said, but then the wind shifted to the north and it spread sparks from the burning mesquite.

"The wind direction kept changing, spreading sparks and re-igniting the fire," he said.

Another factor which hindered all the firefighters Tuesday night was the rough terrain in which they had to work, Stewart said.

Any time the grass is this dry and there is a lot of lightning, there are going to be grass fires, he said.

Lightning struck dry grass on the Johnson ranch west of Alanreed, but before the firemen could reach it, the hail and then rain "beat it out," Roberts said.

Not only did firemen have to beware of getting caught in the fire, they had to "watch where they were stepping" because of the danger of rattlesnakes in some of the gullies. Other firemen were thankful for their hard hats when baseball-sized hail pelted them.

At one point, the driver of a McLean fire truck, trying to get around a fire reported he was driving 40 miles an hour and the wind-whipped fire was out-running him.

As one fireman put it, "The Lord blessed us with rain," just when they needed it.

Gas turn-on policy revealed

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior writer

If an Energas serviceman turns on natural gas at a residential meter outside, before first coming inside a home to check connections and appliances, then the employee has violated the utility's written procedure for hooking up service, according to evidence jurors heard Tuesday in a $21 million lawsuit against the company.

Lawyers at the counsel table had to duck as an unwieldy section of copper gas line and connections was shown to jurors and entered into evidence in the suit against Energas.

The engineer and lawyers demonstrated to the jury how gas came out of the line, which is attached to a metal gas pipe between two valves and was removed from the burned home.

Harrison testified that when he checked the home's gas system, the test dial on the meter outside clearly indicated the copper tube in the trailer was leaking badly.

The engineer said his investigation concludes the fire that burned the Bolemans was caused by the ignition of accumulated gas that leaked into the trailer from the uncapped copper line. He said the leaking gas could have been ignited by any number of sources,

Mrs. Boleman suffered mostly third-degree burns over 65 percent of her body in the fire. Her deposition deals in part with the quality of her life before and after the fire.

Robert F. Harrison, of Rye, Colo., a consulting engineer and expert fire investigator called by the plaintiffs, testified for the rest of the trial Tuesday.

Harrison said he investigated the fire scene twice, on Sept. 9 and Sept. 22. He said when he tested the questioned copper line inside the burned trailer, it was wide open and leaking gas at a rate of 187 cubic feet per hour.

The engineer and lawyers demonstrated to the jury how gas came out of the line, which is attached to a metal gas pipe between two valves and was removed from the burned home.

Harrison testified that when he checked the home's gas system, the test dial on the meter outside clearly indicated the copper tube in the trailer was leaking badly.

The engineer said his investigation concludes the fire that burned the Bolemans was caused by the ignition of accumulated gas that leaked into the trailer from the uncapped copper line. He said the leaking gas could have been ignited by any number of sources, including burning pilot lights or electric motors.

The questioned line was disconnected when the Bolemans moved into the trailer last year. Previous residents had disconnected the copper line when they removed a clothes dryer.

Harrison said ignition of the gas caused an intense flash fire, not an explosion. The hot flash fire's burning was sustained by a heavy accumulation of gas, he said.

The copper line is hooked into a gas pipe that also fed the trailer's hot water heater. The Energas employee who serviced the Boleman trailer the day it burned, would have been within inches of the dangling copper line when he lit the hot water heater, Harrison said.

The gas company claims the questioned line was covered with boxes the day service was started at the victims' trailer.

Harrison said any boxes stacked in the area would have left a burn pattern on the wall. A burn pattern suggesting boxes were stacked there was not left on the wall, the engineer said.

The fire expert was also questioned about the company's written service procedure for turning on gas at a residence.

Dale Friend, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, went over the Energas procedure with the fire and natural gas expert.

Friend pointed out to jurors that the service policy orders servicemen to take several safety precautions inside a home before gas is ever turned on at a meter.

Pampa fails to get relief from drought

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

While severe thunderstorms with heavy rain, hail and high winds swept south of town over several counties, Pampa again failed to receive any general relief from the heat and scarcity of moisture which has prevailed for two months.

With a high Tuesday of 104, residents watched storm clouds build up south of the city yesterday evening and inch northward, bringing cooling breezes and cloud cover, but no rain locally.

Some power outages hit the northeast section of Pampa Tuesday evening between 5 and 6 p.m. Southwestern Public Service officials reported, but no major damages were reported to transmission lines.

SPS servicemen were still patrolling the lines this morning to check on the situation, according to Scott Langford, SPS general foreman for construction.

Langford said several fuses went out on various transformers in the northeast section. Some of these were due to overloads on circuits from use of air conditioners.

A whirlwind was reported near the city landfill, throwing trash and debris into the air. It was first thought that some of the debris landed across transmission lines or that the winds had twisted the lines, but this had not been confirmed this morning for certain, Langford said.

Four or five transformers tripped off from heat or lightning, Langford said.

Most of the fuses and transformers were back in operation within 30 minutes, with the others restored to service within an hour, Langford said.

Miami reported damage to several structures from high winds which hit the city as the storm cell headed east

Winds gusted up to 75 to 78 miles an hour, reported Nancy Mears of the Roberts County Sheriff's office.

One barn was blown down in the north section of town. In the southeast section of Miami, a carport blew down and a garage collapsed, with part of it blown away. Several fences were also blown down by the winds, Ms. Mears said.

Despite the winds, no rain was reported in Miami, but rain and hail fell south of the town. Hail up to 4 inches deep was reported on some roads in the area, with some crop fields receiving heavy damage from the storm.

The storm cell which skirted Pampa touched off a number of grass fires caused by lightning. Firemen were busy battling the blazes near Alanreed, Lefors, McLean, Kellerville, Groom, Wheeler and Shamrock. (See related story.)

Despite last night's storm, the Pampa area is still suffering from the extended heat spell.

Larry Morris, lab technician with the Pampa water treatment plant, reported that the plant pumped 240,841 million gallons of combined lake and well water in August, about 40 to 50 million gallons more than last August. In July the plant pumped 220 million gallons; normally 150 to 170 million gallons are pumped in July.

To date Pampa has received about 13.07 inches of moisture. But only .08 inch was recorded in July and .53 inch in August. Temperatures in the 90s and low 100s have dominated the area since the first part of July.

This has resulted in very dry grasslands around the region. The Pampa Fire Department has been Mourners denounce Russians; Kremlin launches attack on U.S.

By The Associated Press

More than 100,000 outraged mourners jammed a Seoul stadium today to denounce the Soviet Union for downing a South Korean jetliner, and Washington accused the Soviets of lying despite their admission they destroyed the aircraft.

In London, an international organization of commercial pilots urged a ban on flights to Moscow to protest the attack, but there was little immediate response from pilots' associations of individual nations.

And in Moscow, one day after the Soviets acknowledged attacking the jetliner, the government-run press unleashed a savage attack on the United States, comparing U.S. officials to Nazis and accusing President Reagan of stirring up anti-Soviet hysteria.

"God will not forgive this deed," South Korean Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup told mourners, many screaming with grief, during the mass rally in Seoul. "Retribution and curse will fall upon them for the crime they have committed."

A statement read to the crowd said: "It is difficult to control our tears and keep from gnashing our teeth when we think of the last terrifying moments of the passengers and crew...An inhuman attack by Soviet planes using sophisticated weaponry...An attack during a time of peace and not war."

Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was downed Thursday over the Sea of Japan after crossing Soviet territory on a flight from New York to the South Korean capital. The 269 people aboard are presumed dead.

After ignoring or denying Western accusations that Soviet interceptors destroyed the Boeing 747, the Soviet government Tuesday admitted its jet fighters shot the jetliner down but said Soviet pilots believed it was a U.S. spy plane.

The Kremlin placed total blame for the disaster on the United States but has offered no proof to back its charge that the plane was spying. The United States has admitted a U.S. spy plane was in the region but says it had landed hundreds of miles away when the jetliner was downed.

Tuesday's Soviet statement in Moscow came moments after the United States and Japan presented to the U.N. Security Council transcripts of a Soviet fighter pilot announcing he was rocketing the jetliner and then proclaiming: "the target is destroyed."

In Tokyo, Japan's Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe said today the "indisputable evidence" of a Soviet attack had forced Moscow to change tactics and admit it shot the jet.

Abe's statement came shortly before the Cabinet met in emergency session to discuss Japan's position toward the Soviet Union. Meanwhile, Japanese searchers off northern Japan said their hunt for bodies and wreckage was frustrated because the Kremlin bans them from entering Soviet waters.

Today's mass rally in Seoul came after South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan accused the Soviet Union of committing the "double crime" of threatening peace and trying to cover up.

The plane carried people of 15 countries, including Americans, and Korean Air Lines arranged for 97 relatives of foreign passengers to attend the memorial. Many wept in the wailing group of bereaved Korean family members and friends.

The Pampa Police Department reported 32 dispatched calls during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Wednesday, TUESDAY, September 6.

7:33 a.m. - Sandra Corporation at 822 E. Foster reported someone took a company pickup from the driveway sometime between 7:30 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday. According to the report, the stolen vehicle is a 1975 Ford one-half ton pickup, dark green over light green with wood side boards. Texas license plate number AK 9915.

9:45 a.m. - Mary Ann Nace of the 2300 block of Fir reported the theft of a blue BMX bicycle with the number 4 plate on the handle bars. It was taken about 10 a.m. Monday from the front porch.

10:06 a.m. - Jerry Weaver, owner of Pampa Foreign Car Service at 812 W. Kingsmill reported someone entered his building through a dog door and took some tools.

3:30 p.m. - Mitzie Blalock of the 500 block of North Russell reported someone took a blue and white girl's "Sparkler" 20 inch bicycle from the yard sometime between 9 p.m. Monday and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

4:20 p.m. - William J. Derrington was seen taking a roll of re-enforcement wire from the Ivan Dement Construction Company storage yard at Duncan and Perryton Parkway. He was released on his honor until the owners could be notified.

7:20 p.m. - Furr's Cafeteria reported someone had a meal and left without paying.

WEDNESDAY, September 7

4:10 a.m. - David Pendergrass of the 1600 block of Somerville reported someone he knows cut the left rear tire on his car.

Arrests:

Gilford Allen Lisle of Shamrock, charged with indecency with a child. He was turned over to the county.

Steven Wilson Rivera of 1026 S. Reid, arrested on outstanding warrants.

Sammy Joseph Whatley of 1101 S. Clark (or 626 N. Banks), charged with fleeing and evading and failure to stop and render aid at an accident.

Harold Loyd Ward of 100 Campbell was stopped for a traffic violation and then arrested for driving without a license, driving across a median and public intoxication.

John, I now feel some peace in my mind.

The 13-year-old daughter of one of the lost crewmembers prompted emotional outbursts in the stadium with a farewell address "to my dear father and his friends who are now with him under the chilly waters."

Breaking into tears, she said: "Father, you always wore a happy smile each time you came home from a trip. On Sept. 1, I waited for that smile, but instead, I received sad, sad news. It tore my heart out."
The Security Council's emergency session on the plane crisis resumes today, but a resolution is not expected before Thursday or Friday. The Soviets would almost certainly veto any measure calling for sanctions against them.

In London, the world's largest commercial pilots' organization called Tuesday for a 60-day ban on flights to Moscow to demonstrate its "revulsion" at the destruction of an unarmed passenger jet. But it remains unclear how many countries would agree to such a measure, and Thailand said today it would not impose such a ban. "We are giving expression to the many messages of outrage from our members," the governing body of the International Federation of Airline Pilots' Associations said in a statement after a meeting near Heathrow Airport.

Despite the Soviet admission of downing the plane, Reagan administration officials said Moscow was trying to escape responsibility for what they called a massacre of innocent civilians.

"The world community still needs straight answers," Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said. "We are tired of lies and half-truths."

Scavenger cells cancer fighters

HOUSTON (AP) - A natural cell found in the human body can be triggered to control the spread of cancer in patients with malignant tumors, the new chairman of the cell biology department at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute says.

An incorrect address was published in Sunday's Pampa News in a letter to the editor from Dorothy Mackie Bird. She lives at 2610 Fir. The address was incorrectly published as 2620 Fir.

was director of the Cancer Metastasis and Treatment Laboratory at the National Cancer Institute in Frederick, Md., said specially processed macrophages cells may be "turned on" and caused to seek out and kill cancer cells at loose in the body.

Fidler and a 21-member research group hope to start clinical evaluation of activated macrophages therapy here next spring.

Macrophages, said Fidler, are "the body's scavengers. When the body is invaded by bacteria, viruses and fungi, the macrophages can muster to mop up those infections."
The macrophages can react the same way toward cancer cells, he said, if they can be primed to attack the malignant cells.

"The macrophages must be 'turned on' to work well and gobble up the cancer cells," he said.

Fidler has helped develop a complex method of activating the macrophage to attack cancer. The process involves placing a bacteria molecule called MDP inside a fatty cell called a liposome. Inserted into the bloodstream, this causes macrophages to become 4,000 times more active in seeking out and killing cancer cells.

Protests against Soviet Union spreading across United States

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO

Associated Press Writer
 Longshoremen refused to unload a heavily guarded Soviet freighter, states banned Soviet vodka sales, and 11-year-old Samantha Smith called the destruction of a Korean passenger jet "really horrible," as thousands mourned the flight's 269 victims.

The freighter, the target of threats since Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was gunned down over Sakhalin Island on Thursday, docked Tuesday at San Pedro, Calif.

"Local 13's position is that we will not work the Russian vessel at berth 178," said a dispatcher with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union who declined to give her name.

About 250 protesters picketed at the freighter Novokuibyshevsk, anchored three miles offshore since Friday because of anonymous telephone threats, entered Los Angeles Harbor with a Coast Guard escort.

In Dunellen, N.J., thousands attended a memorial service for Ray Petroski, a 36-year-old postal clerk who was one of 61 American citizens killed in the attack. Soviet officials admitted Tuesday destroying the plane, but said they thought it was a spy plane.

One mourner, Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, R-N.J., urged that U.S. ports be closed to Soviet vessels and that other nations join in an embargo on Soviet landing rights until the Soviets apologize and pay reparations to the families of the victims.

"Let the Soviets keep their ballet dancers and cultural delegations," Rinaldo said. "We don't want them in the United States."

About 500 people crowded a church in Danbury, Conn., to mourn another passenger, 33-year-old business traveler Mark McGetrick.

New Hampshire's Liquor Control Department voted 3-0 Tuesday to stop selling Russian vodka at state liquor stores. In Iowa, Roland Gallagher, director of the Beer and Liquor Control Department, he has decided to delay further orders of Russian Stolichnaya vodka for the state's 214 liquor stores.

Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste last week ordered his state's Liquor Control Department to stop selling Russian vodka and brandy.

During an hour-long demonstration outside the South Korean consulate in Seattle, about 400 South Koreans bearing signs and flags raised clenched fists in anger against the Soviets and bowed their heads in prayer for those aboard the jet. Members of the Korean Veterans Association then led about 50 people on a six-block march marked by shouts of "Murder Russia."

In Boston, 400 demonstrators rallied in front of historic Faneuil Hall to demand reparations for the victims. Some protesters carried large pictures of Soviet President Yuri Andropov, captioned: "Wanted: For Murder of 269 Airline Passengers."

About 100 people in the group, which was sponsored by the Latvian Memorial Committee, wore black armbands and held lighted candles.

"The purpose is to come together and mourn the deceased and also perhaps provide an opportunity for all the families to get together and share their grief," said organizer Aristidis Lambergis. He said 11 of the flight's crew and passengers had ties to New England.

For young Samantha, the girl who toured the Soviet Union at Andropov's invitation after she wrote him a letter, the crisis brought back old fears of war.

She called the attack "a really horrible thing to do," and said that instead of fighting, "we should just be talking."

"If war starts, I would write again to Andropov because he promised me he would never start a war with our country," she said Tuesday from her home in Manchester, Maine.

Allie Ephraimson-Abt's family took their sorrow into the courts, seeking $60 million in damages in a federal court suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Lawyers for the 23-year-old woman's father, Hans Ephraimson-Abt of Saddle River, N.J., seek damages in her death from the Soviet Union, the airline, three airline employees, the makers of the airplane and its guidance equipment.

In a different court, the University of Maryland basketball team canceled its Nov. 20 home game with the Soviet national team because of the air disaster, said athletic director Dick Dill.

called out to extinguish more than 40 grass fires since July 1.

Crops are generally falling to the heat and lack of rain.

Gray County Agriculture Agent Joe Van Zandt said, "Things are going downhill in a hurry." Dryland crops are "burning up," he added.

"All of our pasture grass is brown, very dry, very susceptible to fire," he said. Van Zandt cautioned people to be very careful on grasslands, since "just any little thing could set grass fires off." The recent number of grass fires gives credence to his warnings.

"We need a good wet spell. Wheat farmers have got to have moisture," he said. "Practically no volunteer wheat has sprouted, as is normal by now." As a result, many farmers may have to plant on harvested flattened wheatfields instead of depending on volunteer wheat, he said.

"But as hot as it's been, it's just not wheat planting time," he said. Hay crops are "being bailed up prematurely" before they dry up too much, he said. And dryland sorghum is "sure not going to do very well" for the most part.

John Fields, Carson County Agriculture Agent, reported most crops will "be limited. Everything's hot and dry."

Dryland crops in Carson County are "totally gone," with "no moisture to speak of" since June. "It's just too late for most dryland crops."

"Irrigated sorghum is doing pretty well - average to above average," Fields said. One benefit of the heat and dryness has been "a light insect problem," but irrigation costs are up, he added.

"It's just one of those hot, dry years - unseasonably so," he said. Farmers could have used help from rain, "but it never came," he said.

"Grain sorghum is hurting pretty bad," said Wheeler County Agriculture Agent Don King. Some individual areas are faring good, but most are not doing well, he said. "Cotton is suffering," he said. "Rain is really needed" if the crop can be salvaged.

Pasture lands in Wheeler County are hurting from a lack of regrowth. Land which has been eaten off by stock or which has been bailed up "is just not growing back," he said.

"There just hasn't been a whole lot of change" in the crops situation in the past month.

The problems with sorghum and pasture land portends shortages of feed for animals this winter, King said.

Rain from recent thunderstorms has been too widely scattered or too infrequent to be of any general benefit for area farmers and ranchers.

Weather forecasts foresee no relief, at least for the next several days. Highs will remain in the 90s, with only slight chance for isolated thunderstorms as summer ends and fall nears.

a meter, Energas servicemen should first "check all appliances making sure all appliances are off and are connected properly. If you find an open, house line, cap it off. If a range connector is not connected properly, cap it off," the service procedure says.

Only after checking all appliances and connections inside a house, should the employee turn on gas at the meter outside, the policy says. The serviceman then should run a "shut-in" test at the meter. The employee looks at a test dial to see if it shows any leaks in the system.

Appraisal district

to meet Thursday

The board of directors of the Gray County Appraisal District will meet at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in Suite 196-A of the Hughes Building.

The directors will review and take action on expenses and receive a financial report from Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard.

"If shut-in holds, light customer's appliances, making sure everything is in good working order."

"(If any appliance (is) left off or is unsafe to operate, advise customer and be sure to write this on your route sheet and computer card," the service procedure continues.

Friend told the jury that later testimony will show that the Energas employee who hooked up the Boleman home went straight to the outside meter and turned on gas, before he even knocked on the front door to see if anyone was home.

The service computer card for the Boleman hookup was previously placed on file in the lawsuit.

Four questions are asked on the card, with a box to be checked "yes" or "no" by the serviceman.

The question: "Were there any leaks?" on the card filled out for the Boleman order was marked "no."

Defense lawyers began cross-examination of Harrison late Tuesday afternoon and continued this morning.

Energas attorney Tom Milam tried to show that the trailer's air conditioner would have circulated any leaking gas throughout the trailer. The gas could not have accumulated in just one end of the home, Milam tried to show. The smell of any leaking gas would have been overpowering, he claimed through the engineer's testimony. Why wasn't there an explosion; if as the plaintiffs allege, there was such a heavy accumulation of gas, Milam asked.

Chamber will elect directors

Members of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce will elect seven new directors this month.

The new directors will be elected to three-year terms, Chamber President Ed Sweet said.

Ballots will be counted in the Chamber office by the Election Committee at 10 a.m., Sept. 20. Chamber members should have their ballots in the office by that time, Sweet said.

Nominees for the position include Charles Cooley, Dona Cornutt, Reed Echols, Phil Gentry, Joe Gidden, Larry Gilbert, Gene Hall, Bill Harris, LeWayne Hogan, Mike Hutcherson, Paul Simmons, Roy Sparkman, Richard Stowers, Jr., and Wayne Stribling.

Former Cisco mayor pro-tem convicted, given life sentence

EASTLAND, Texas (AP) — Cisco's former mayor pro-tem has been convicted of the murder of his wife last spring and sentenced to life in prison.

The state district court jury that began hearing the case Aug. 22 deliberated only 45 minutes Tuesday before returning a guilty verdict against Loyal Lundstrom, 60, in the shooting death of his 27-year-old wife, Doris.

The jury then needed only 50 minutes to assess Lundstrom the maximum sentence it could give. Jurors said their first vote each time was unanimous.

The body of Lundstrom's wife was found March 5 in the motel the couple operated in Cisco, 45 miles east of Abilene on Interstate 20. Lundstrom disappeared after his 27-year-old wife's death, but surrendered to authorities March 16 at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Lundstrom wiped his eyes with a handkerchief when the verdict was announced. He was remanded to the custody of the Eastland County Sheriff's Department pending his transfer to state prison.

During the punishment phase of the trial, defense attorney Bill Hart had asked jurors to place Lundstrom on probation, saying, "This man has suffered; he does not need to suffer any more." Hart said he would appeal the verdict.

"Justice prevailed," said District Attorney Emory Walton, who sought the life sentence. "I'm happy with the way the trial turned out."

The state rested its case against Lundstrom on Friday, and defense attorney Bill Hart closed his case Tuesday without calling any witnesses.

Hart maintained that Lundstrom was out of town when the murder occurred. The defense attorney acknowledged that Lundstrom had pointed a shotgun at his wife to scare her after she demanded a divorce, but argued that the former city councilman didn't fire it.

Rather than killing Mrs. Lundstrom, Lundstrom merely caused her to faint, Hart said.

"You bet she was scared," he said, "as any wife would be who told her husband she'd committed adultery and her husband points a gun at them."

In his closing argument, Walton called Lundstrom possessive, domineering and jealous.

"He treated his wife exactly as he treated his children," Walton said. "They didn't do anything except what they were told to do."

"Someone in this community needs to say something for Doris and the five little children he left motherless," Walton said.

Lundstrom's daughter, Linda, testified Friday that the former city official monitored her stepmother's movements and actions, even phone calls.

"Anytime she would leave, she'd have to say where she was going and how long she would be there," Miss Lundstrom said.

Miss Lundstrom testified that her stepmother "was a very outstanding Christian woman," and said the two "were very good friends."

It was the second time Lundstrom has been convicted for killing his spouse. He was convicted in 1968 of slaying his first wife, Helen, and served part of an 18-month prison sentence before the Minnesota Supreme Court overturned the conviction on grounds that criminal intent was not proved.

Lundstrom was not retried.

Inmates help out

Prison inmates begin clearing parks

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirty Texas prison inmates, armed with saws, pitchforks and axes, will be working in two Houston parks through Saturday to clear them of broken limbs and debris left by Hurricane Alicia.

Watched by four guards, the inmates worked from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday in Hermann Park. Warden Howard Mitchell said.

Many of the prisoners are first-time offenders who volunteered to help clean up debris left by the Aug. 18 storm that killed 21 people and left damage estimated at more than $1 billion.

"These are young first-offenders between the ages of 19 and 26 and all of them are trustees assigned to do work outside the perimeter" of the Texas Department of Corrections' Central Unit in Sugar Land, where they are serving their sentences, Mitchell said.

The only cost to taxpayers will be a daily lunch of three sandwiches, a bag of potato chips and a cold drink for each inmate.

"It's a lot more peaceful out here, it seems like," said one inmate. "You don't see no bars and the bosses aren't walking around with guns."

City Councilman Jim Westmoreland asked the prison for help after state officials refused to send National Guard troops to assist with the task.

Westmoreland said using the inmates allows the parks personnel to continue working in the neighborhoods.

Meanwhile, electricity has been restored to all 750,000 customers who were out of power at the height of the storm. But as many as 30,000 people still had no telephone service Tuesday.

Ken Brasel, spokesman for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., said many customers should have phone service soon. "We have good weather and all our regular crews and 800 extra people were all working," Brasel said.

Defense in sheriff 'Humpy' trial to begin presenting case today

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors finished presenting their story of terror and torture and have turned the civil rights trial of a former Texas sheriff and three deputies over to the defense.

As the government rested its case Tuesday, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda dismissed one of the counts against former San Jacinto County Sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker.

DeAnda, acting on defense attorneys' requests for directed verdicts of acquittal, removed Parker from a charge of depriving Gerald Casey of liberty without due process of law.

Testimony last week indicated Parker was not present when Casey, 28, a Houston construction worker, underwent water torture as deputies sought to force him to confess to a burglary.

Parker remains charged with two counts of depriving liberty and one count of conspiracy to violate civil rights.

Also named in the six-count indictment are deputies John Glover, Carl Lee and Floyd Baker. Conviction on the civil rights charge carries a maximum 10 years in prison and $10,000 fine. Each of the other counts could result in a one-year prison term and $1,000 fine.

Roy Beene, Lee's attorney, presented his opening statement a week ago when the trial opened in federal court in Houston.

Beene told the seven-man, six-woman jury the government would be basing its case on the word of criminals trying to avoid prison.

Federal authorities wound up their case Tuesday with testimony from a Houston construction worker who said deputies shackled, beat and "drowned" him to make him talk about the theft of a tractor.

James Hicks, 33, was the fifth such witness to take the stand.

A jail inmate at the time also testified Tuesday he saw Hicks undergo the ordeal.

Hicks told jurors he was bound hand and foot in a chair which was tipped on its back. Then his head was wrapped in a towel and doused with water, he said.

"They drowned me. I drank and swallowed a lot of water," Hicks said of the September 1980 incident. "Some person was stomping on my stomach and groin area, making me regurgitate the water."

Hicks said prior to the water treatment, he was beaten about the head with a blackjack wielded by Lee. Baker questioned him during the ordeal, Hicks said.

Bleeding from the eyes and mouth, eyes swollen shut, Hicks said he talked to Baker.

"I had to talk to him. I didn't want them to repeat the process they had just completed," he said. Hicks then accompanied two deputies to a spot where they discovered a bulldozer reported stolen.

Hicks' account was verified for the most part by Theodore Randolph, 23, a convicted murderer being held at the time in the San Jacinto County Jail, about 50 miles north of Houston.

Randolph said that under orders from Baker, he retrieved the water for Hicks' ordeal.

"Sheriff Parker told me to do what his officers told me to do," Randolph said. "If I didn't, I could get in a lot of trouble."

Attorney General surveys damaged beach homes

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — About 300 beach house owners on Galveston's west end are in limbo after Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox told them that his office has not yet determined how many of their homes have wound up on state property due to erosion caused by Hurricane Alicia.

Mattox, who came to Galveston Tuesday with a team of experts to do his own survey of the storm's damage, told the owners not to rebuild the homes until his office determines which structures are in violation of the Texas Open Beaches Act.

Alicia, which blew ashore August 18, eroded beaches as much as 75 feet to 100 feet on this island.

Many people could lose their beachfront lots and homes because they now are on the seashore of the natural vegetation line on the beaches, which is against state law.

"We have not ascertained yet where the line of vegetation is," Mattox told about 100 people who met with him Tuesday morning at the Galveston County Courthouse.

Mattox, who donned blue jeans and tennis shoes and braved a driving rain storm to survey the damaged houses, said the state will contract "with environmental engineers who will look at the area and try to make a determination as to where that line is."

The attorney general said he hoped state officials and property owners would agree to a moratorium on beachfront construction until the decision can be made.

Mattox said some of the toughest decisions will involve property that suffered relatively minor damage from the hurricane, but was left on what is now public beach by Alicia's erosion.

"It may be too harsh to place the vegetation line where it actually is today," he said. "I hope the line of vegetation will shift back out."

Mattox told Galveston City Councilman Gene Lestas that he was not prepared to say if the state plans to compensate property owners for their losses.

A Recovery Task Force appointed by the City Council drafted a resolution Tuesday asking Mattox to delay enforcing the Open Beaches Act.

Attorney Roland Bassett, who wrote the resolution, said plans to enforce the law now would have "extremely harsh economic and other effects on the owners" of the beachfront property.

Frustrated residents turn off image

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Leonard Garcia says he's not a non-believer.

"We just want some peace and quiet," he said Tuesday before turning on floodlights that made a purported image of the Virgin Mary disappear from an outside wall of a house where crowds have gathered for almost a week.

"What we fear the most is the aftermath," said Garcia, son of Angie Gutierrez, on whose house the image had appeared.

Garcia's stepfather, Candelario Gutierrez, put up two floodlights donated by neighbors in hopes the disappearance of the image would have the same effect on crowds which have swarmed to the neighborhood for nearly a week.

Hundreds of people showed up again Tuesday to see the image, which was first reported last Wednesday. The image was created by a neighbor's porch light reflecting off the rear bumper of a 1975 Chevrolet.

After the floodlights went on and the image disappeared Tuesday night, groups broke into prayer and song, apparently trying to make the image reappear.

Many among the hundreds of people who gathered around the home for a sixth straight night yelled for the floodlights to be shut off.

A half-dozen police were visible and others were standing by in case a disturbance resulted.

Mary Ibarra, the next-door neighbor whose son first saw the image last week, insisted Tuesday night that the Blessed Virgin would appear in some form despite the blaze of floodlights aimed on the wall.

Garcia said if the floodlights don't deter the thousands flocking to the area, the matter may be taken up in court. A petition is being circulated to support a lawsuit if the Ibarra continue to "disturb the peace" by promoting the image as the Blessed Virgin, he said.

"These people don't seem to have any consideration. They ruin the yards. My parents can't get any sleep," Garcia said. "People want to believe in something so bad they lose common sense. Our neighborhood is a peaceful neighborhood and we want to keep it that way."

Since the image was first seen, the elderly, crippled and disabled have been brought to the scene after a widespread rumor that a blind woman had regained her sight.

PUC hears protests against proposed high voltage line

AUSTIN (AP) — Opponents of a proposed power line say it would cut through a church camp, cemetery, and farm and ranch land, pass by a new subdivision and possibly threaten people on the ground and in the air.

Central Power & Light, Houston Lighting and Power Co. and Southwestern Electric Power Co. have asked the Public Utility Commission for permission to build a 400-kilovolt line from six miles north of Huntsville to the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

Advances opposition to the project was generated by an Episcopal bishop, and on Tuesday more than 200 people jammed a PUC hearing room for the opening hearing on the $141.2 million proposal.

The Rev. Maurice Benitez of Houston urged church members to oppose the power line because it would cross Camp Allen in Grimes County. Benitez said the church had invested $10 million in the camp, which is used each year by more than 12,000 people, including 1,500 children in the summer.

More than 1,000 letters were filed with the PUC against the project in response to Benitez's request.

In written testimony, Milton Lee of the PUC's engineering division recommended rerouting the power line around the camp at an expense to the companies of up to $600,000, or less than 0.5 percent of the total cost.

On Tuesday, Texas Farm Bureau director David Foenher of Boling, Wharton County, said the 153-mile corridor would cross "some of the most fertile farm and ranch land in the nation."

He said possible health hazards to people and livestock from the direct current line "should not be lightly dismissed."

Foenher suggested as alternatives to the proposed route, the companies could build the line through unimproved areas, put it underground "or not build it at all."

"Amen," said several spectators. Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said the issue "has raised real concerns, real anxieties and genuine fear, and I don't think the fear is without justification."

Caperton said he thought the line was "ill-conceived, ill-planned, and frankly, it's just not needed at this time."

"If we err," he said, "let's err on the side of the safety of the residents."

Edna Marlin, a resident of the hamlet of Spanish Camp, near Wharton, also referred to the safety question when he said, "Don't use us for guinea pigs."

Marlin also said the line would cut across a 100-year-old cemetery.

If "this big giant does what it proposes to do, we little fish can't swim out... we'll be caught in the net... it's a horrible thing," he said.

Jane Andrews, a Sealy developer, said the line would come within 150 feet of her Glen Meadow subdivision in Austin County. "It will kill it," she said. "No one will want to live there."

"None of this has been proven safe," she added. "It's too new."

Bernard Snoch, a Catholic priest with churches in Austin and Colorado counties, criticized company lawyer Bill Woolsey for what he called "Perry Mason-type tactics."

Woolsey cross-examined Foenher, showing him color photographs of crops apparently growing under and near power lines and of crop-duster airplanes flying safely under distribution lines, but Snoch said, "I buried two pilots."

Hearing examiner Angela Williams scheduled testimony through Friday, and there were indications the hearing might extend into next week.

Justice department approves Senate plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A state Senate redistricting plan adopted nearly two years ago by a five-member board of Texas Democrats has been approved by the U.S. Justice Department.

"It's an important achievement," Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday.

The proposed plan, however, still faces scrutiny by three federal judges in Dallas.

A Dallas law firm that represented several Republicans and minorities in the redistricting case has asked the federal panel to reject the plan and to write its own version of 31 Senate districts.

The Legislative Redistricting Board adopted the plan in October 1981, after Republican Gov. Bill Clements vetoed one adopted by the Legislature in May.

The Justice Department filed a late objection to the plan, but the Dallas court left intact the redistricting board's districts for the 1982 elections. The court, however, instructed the 1983 Legislature to either draw its own map or face the possibility of a court-imposed plan.

Senators this year outlined in a resolution a plan that changed Senate districts to satisfy objections raised by federal officials and others.

The resolution approved by the Senate was worked out through months of negotiations between Mattox's office and lawyers for the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Mattox then filed a "consent decree," including the resolution, with the court in Dallas.

The new plan creates two additional Senate districts with 60 percent or greater Hispanic population — in Harris County and a South Texas area including a portion of Bexar County, Mattox noted.

Congress reneged on budget cuts

If this bill is passed, we will reduce the deficits by $380 billion, and $280 billion of that will be in spending outlays. I figure that, yes, it's a compromise, but we're getting three dollars in reduced outlays for every one dollar in increased revenues.

History is eerily repeating itself this year as President Reagan and Congress grapple with the nagging problem of federal deficits.

Having failed in several attempts to deal with the deficit problem in the only sound way - by cutting spending - earlier this year, Congress passed a budget resolution that will call for an extra $73 billion in tax hikes. Specific attempts to locate that revenue have failed miserably, most notably in House Speaker Tip O'Neill's effort to cap the third year of the Reagan tax cut.

Where there's a will to enhance revenues, however, there's a way, and the will is not lacking on Capitol Hill this summer.

The president, meanwhile, promises to veto any such proposals in the near term. Yet his staff continues to make noises about "contingency taxes" for 1985 and beyond.

"These taxes, we're assured, will never come to pass without congressional spending restraint. But that's what the president promised last year, arguing, in fact, that Congress had agreed to $3 in spending cuts for every $1 in tax hikes.

This was hardly the result. The budgets agreed to by Congress last summer would have produced spending totals of $761 billion, $812 billion and $874 billion, respectively, for the next three years. By this January, however - after the deal - those figures rose to $805 billion, $848 billion and $918 billion.

Over three years, then, the federal deficit was widened by more than $100 billion - not by the Reagan tax cuts, but by the 1982 tax hikes, which delayed the recovery, and by the administration's failure to enforce the spending limits agreed to in the three-for-one deal.

This year, the call is for a nearly equal $73 billion. And the president is putting up even less of a fight to explain to the American people what's really happening - even though he has a specific deal he can point to so that we can point the finger at Capitol Hill.

How should we bring down deficits? Spending cuts, as we've suggested, are essential. This spring, Sen. Orrin Hatch drew up a plan that would have brought the budget into near balance within three years - without a tax increase. He was supported by more than 20 colleagues. But he had no backing from the White House, and the plan died.

Economic growth is another way. A 1 percent drop in unemployment saves at least $25 billion in federal red ink, partly through decreased spending on welfare and other social programs, partly through increased tax collections.

Faced with any offers from Congress to trade yet another tax hike for more paper spending cuts, the president should deliver a swift "no thanks."

Can Democrats ignore middle class?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

NEW YORK (NEA) - New York Mayor Edward Koch is one of the nation's shrewdest politicians, and when he warns his fellow Democrats that they are headed for defeat by Ronald Reagan in 1984 unless they change their tactics, they would do well to heed him.

Beginning at San Francisco's Commonwealth Club, Hizzoner (as he is called in New York) is embarking on a series of speeches around the country to Democratic and civic groups. His message, he disclosed in an interview with a political reporter for The New York Times will be blunt: By "pandering to every special interest," the Democratic Party has put itself "on a path to destruction." It must turn away from "left wing" special interest groups and start addressing the concerns of the middle class or it will lose the presidential election of 1984 just as it did in 1980.

A glance at the campaigns currently being waged by the various Democratic presidential candidates makes it very clear what Koch is criticizing. Without a single exception, they are aiming their appeals at the highly organized pressure groups: black, Hispanics, gays, women, the education lobby, the anti-nuclear protesters, etc. A speech by Mondale, or Glenn, or Cranston, or Hart is rarely more than a laundry list of the things the speaker promises to do for these blocs of voters. The most spectacular recent example was the pledge of both Cranston and Hart to the National Women's Political Caucus that, if elected, they would use the power of the federal Treasury to coerce states into passing the Equal Rights Amendment.

The advantage of pitching to such blocs is that it produces an immediate sensation of benefit to the candidate - rather like the "rush" or "high" experienced by a drug user. The groups in question are represented (or at least allegedly represented) by intensely mobilized left-leaning organizations that are forever holding widely publicized meetings. The candidate appears before one of these meetings, and is cheered to the rafters. As a sort of bonus, every reference to President Reagan is roundly booed. The media report the event as a love-feast (which of course it was), and the candidate dashes on to the next meeting. By adding up all the women blacks, Hispanics, gays and teachers in America he can easily demonstrate that he will out-poll Mr. Reagan by four or five votes to one.

What Mayor Koch wants to know is: Who, amid all this excitement, is paying attention to the basic concerns of the great American middle class? "I don't find a single candidate who is heading in the direction I'm talking about," he warns. "They're starting to pander again."

The basic question is how a voter thinks of himself when he (or she) enters a voting booth. The voter may, in fact, be a female teacher, middle-class, heterosexual and Hispanic; but which attribute will predominate? Perhaps none. More likely her attitude toward the listed candidates will be an amalgam - the product of a combination of impulses in varying directions. She may be proud of her Hispanic background, a supporter of ERA, a firm anti-communist, and vaguely distrustful of gays. Does that make her anti-Reagan?

Koch is well aware that most people, most of the time, are primarily concerned with the state of the economy, above all in its relation to their own personal interests. In addition, the middle class, with more "stake in the system" than the poor but without the ability of the rich to ride out bad weather, are concerned over such collateral problems as street crime, immigration and the perceived decline in the "family values." What Koch is saying to the Democrats is that their must be able to appeal more powerfully than Mr. Reagan to this huge, central bloc of voters.

Not even the officially certified "minorities" are all safely in the Democratic bag. Some 10 percent of blacks, perhaps 30 percent of gays, 35-percent or more of Hispanics, and (according to recent polls) about 45 percent of all women are already in Mr. Reagan's corner. If middle-class voters next year are broadly satisfied with him, where shall the Democrats look for victory? The battle, Mayor Koch is warning, will be won there or not at all.

Unemployment is not what it seems

By OSCAR COOLEY

The wheels of the U.S. economy are turning a little faster than they were, but not much. In January a little under 11 percent of the labor force was unemployed, in June 10 percent, in July 9.5 percent. Many have been unemployed for months.

Must we give up and admit that large-scale unemployment is permanent and that the employed must support millions of unemployed indefinitely?

We do not allow the market for labor to function. Hence the labor piles up and is called "unemployment." It would be worthwhile giving the market a try just once.

In a free market, labor behaves like a commodity, such as corn. It is bought (by employers) at the lowest price they can get it for, and it is sold (by employees) at the highest price they can get. It moves: it does not lie unused and wasting.

But unlike corn, labor is human. It has a mind of its own. If the highest price this human corn will sell for seems to him too low, it won't sell. It will wait for a higher price. And if it can persuade other human beings to feed and shelter it, it will wait a very long time. Long-term unemployment some call it.

Here an error in thinking is often made: people see the unemployed person as a helpless victim. They are sorry for him. They commiserate over the many months he has been in this fix. And they vote to give him more unemployment compensation.

He accepts their sympathy - and their unemployment compensation - and waits patiently for them to get him a job, which society owes him, they say. But in the job world things are changing. In many cases, the kind of work he formerly did is done no more, so he won't get his old job, or one like it, no matter how long he waits. Michael K. Evans, economist, estimates that since 1980, 1.9 million jobs in manufacturing have disappeared - disappeared forever. An unemployed person cannot afford to wait for a job that has disappeared that long. He must get a different job.

But flexibility is not an outstanding characteristic of labor. On the contrary, it is very inflexible. It does not move freely like a well-oiled machine, as many have noted.

One of the main causes of its inflexibility is seldom noted. That is the financial support, such as unemployment pay, food stamps, etc., which society gives the jobless worker, enabling, indeed encouraging, him to hold out for the same kind of job he held in the past, and at the same wage rate.

Economic recessions are not what they used to be. They are worse. The reason is that society, that is, the government, is supposed to do things to stimulate a depressed economy today, whereas a century ago the people had to shift for themselves and they knew it. They did not sit back and wait for society, or Washington to rescue them. The government did not pretend to save money, for them, out of their pay, and call it "unemployment compensation."

In that benighted period, it was up to the worker to save money when he was earning it and have it ready to fall back upon when he was laid off and not earning. Naturally, they made those jobless periods as short as possible.

"Unemployment" as we know it today is a creation of government. The more paternalistic the government becomes - that is, the more completely people come to assume that society owes them a living and the government should deliver it - the worse the problem of unemployment will be.

Church council's silence shameful

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The silence of the mainline churches on the recent actions of the World Council of Churches is shameful.

At its recent meeting in Vancouver, the WCC, which is supported by leading Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox and independent churches, adopted positions hostile to the free world and supportive of revolutionary regimes, including most definitely the Soviet Union.

One action alone makes plain the character of the WCC namely its refusal to demand the Soviet Union withdraw its 100,000 troops from Afghanistan. Indeed it rallied to the Soviet Union by calling for a cut-off of arms shipments to rebels who are striving to recover their country from its occupiers.

In the next breath, the WCC called for Israel to withdraw from territories it entered in 1967, though Israel has been repeatedly attacked by Arab forces since it founding. The international church organization also found time to announce its continued support for "liberation movements" in Southern Africa, including the terrorist SWAPO organization in Namibia.

In a hypocritical action, the World Council of Churches said it could not act on a human rights plea on behalf of Soviet Christians unless the Soviet delegates themselves brought the matter up. According to the Associated Press, the petition from the persecuted Christians in the Soviet Union accused the Soviet delegates of being government pawns. The WCC always has treated tame puppet Soviet clergymen as the only acceptable voice of the faithful in the Soviet empire.

Given these shocking actions, it isn't surprising that the WCC hailed the communist government of Nicaragua and condemned American intervention in Central America, alleging U.S. financed military killings in Honduras. The WCC never misses an opportunity to condemn the U.S.

American church leaders who continue to support the World Council of Churches in the face of these actions certainly have some explaining to do to the man and woman in the pew whose offerings in the collection plate are used to help support the WCC. If the WCC ever had any worthwhile role to play, it is far in the past. For years, the WCC has used money, derived from collections in the churches of the free world, to give aid and comfort to nations and terrorist organizations that are bent on violence and the destruction of freedom.

One wonders: where are the church leaders who are so vocal in calling for peace and disarmament and in opposing aid to Central America freedom-fighters? Do they close their eyes to the WCC's pro-Soviet actions and choose to see no evil and hear no evil?

Handwritten letters gain value

By PAUL HARVEY

A dollar bill with George Washington's picture and reproduced signature on it is worth only a dollar. Indeed, the value of that dollar has been shrinking every year.

If you have a letter with George Washington's signature on it it is worth $950 and that value increases every year. Of all collectibles, none has been a more consistent money-maker than "autographs."

Americans who have collected autographs of athletes, movie stars and other celebrities are now buying and selling and trading in an expanding hobby market.

One group of collectors aggressively pursues autographs of U.S. presidents.

Prices and demand are increasing so rapidly that the hobby has become an investment science.

The value of most presidential autographs has doubled - even quadrupled - in five years. Few investments can match that!

Lee Simonson is an autograph authority, a dealer out of Lewiston, New York.

Legacy

In this feature we excerpt material that has appeared on The Pampa News' editorial pages in previous years, whether from the editorials or the column written for many years by Freedom Newspapers' founder R.C. Holles.

And when we first came to disregard justice in taxation and respecting the rights of the individual that he should get all that he produces, it was only a matter of time until we then decided that we wanted more of this discriminatory tax income, so we passed the graduated income tax. We also began to tax business corporations for furnishing jobs and raising the standard of living. And this way of getting tax money arbitrarily led to the belief that the state could perform many, many additional services to the public. And when people had dried up the additional tax income from double and multiple taxation and put so many taxes on business and the men with initiative that millions of people were out of work, then the government began to tax in another way, by inflation. They established a banking system that poured billions and billions of new currency and new credit into our economic operations.

He announces a new record price paid for a presidential autograph. A handwritten letter written and signed by William Henry Harrison during his 30 day term in office was auctioned in New York for $120,000 - purchased for the Malcom Forbes collection.

What's a man like Forbes doing in this "hobby"? One West Coast buyer who asks that his name not be used (mostly because he fears robbery) is investing millions in buying thousands of presidential autographs.

The handwritten Truman letter in which he threatened to kick a music critic in the groin auctioned for $50,000.

And because the total number of presidential signatures is limited to less than 2.3 million pieces, their value to collectors cannot go anywhere but up.

Face it, there are just so many Washingtons and Lincolns to go around.

Interestingly, no handwritten letter signed by Dwight Eisenhower while he was president has ever appeared on the market. If you can find one you're instant rich!

Watch tape transcripts

During a meeting at the United Nations in New York Tuesday, members of the Security Council watch a television showing transcripts of radio transmissions by the Soviet pilot responsible for downing a South Korean jet. American Ambassador to the United Nations Jeane Kirkpatrick, right, introduced the tapes to the council. (AP Laserphoto)

Tapes tell of shooting at plane

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. government has released what it calls "a transcript of the shootdown of Korean Air Flight 007."

The tapes of intercepted transmissions by Soviet fighter pilots were played Tuesday for a meeting of the United Nations Security Council. A translated transcript was released by the White House.

The first column gives times of the Soviet pilots' transmissions on a 24-hour clock in Greenwich Mean Time. The second column refers to the pilots, with 805 the number of the pilot of the SU-15 that eventually fired the rocket that shot down the Korean airliner, the White House said.

The third column is the text of the conversation by the pilots. They are apparently talking to three different ground control stations, but the responses from the ground are not available. Here is a portion of that transcript.

18:20:22 (805) (I) need to approach it (closer).
18:20:30 (805) I'm turning lock-on off and I'm approaching the target.

18:20:41 (163) (For) 163?
18:20:49 (805) I have broke off lock-on (weapon no longer locked on target).

----- (163) (Right now I can't) see it.
----- (805) Exactly. I have executed (unspecified).
18:21:17 (163) Executing.

18:21:24 (805) Yes. I'm approaching the target. I'm going in closer.

18:21:35 (805) The target's (strobe) light is blinking. I have already approached the target to a distance of about two (2) kilometers.

18:21:40 (805) The target is at 10,000 (meters).
18:21:51 (163) I see both, distance 10, (and) 15 kilometers.
18:21:55 (805) What are instructions?
18:21:59 (163) Roger.
18:22:02 (805) The target is decreasing speed.
18:22:17 (805) I am going around it. I'm already moving in front of the target.

18:22:23 (805) I have increased speed.
18:22:29 (805) No. It is decreasing speed.
18:22:42 (805) It should have been earlier. How can I chase it. I'm already ahead of the target!

18:22:55 (805) Now I have to fall back a bit from the target.
18:23:05 (805) Repeat.
18:23:10 (805) The target's altitude is 10,000 (meters).
18:23:18 (805) From me it is located 70 degrees to the left.
18:23:37 (805) I'm dropping back. Now I will try a rocket.
18:23:49 (163) 12 (kilometers) to the target. I see both.

----- (121) I'm in a right turn on a course of 300.
18:24:15 (121) Executing.
18:24:22 (805) Roger. I am in lock-on.
18:24:56 (121) I am turning to a course of 30.

----- (121) Roger.
18:25:11 (805) I am closing on the target. Am in lock-on. Distance to target is 8 (kilometers).
18:25:16 (805) I have already switched it on.
18:25:33 (121) On a course of 30.

18:25:46 (805) Z. G. (Missile warheads locked on).
18:26:20 (805) I have executed the launch.
18:26:22 (805) The target is destroyed.
18:26:27 (805) I am breaking off attack.
18:26:33 (163) What are (my) instructions?
18:26:08 (163) (Call).
18:26:47 (163) (The indicators for) my wing tanks lit up. The fuel remainder differs by 800 liters for now.

18:26:53 (805) Fuel remainder 1600.
18:27:01 (805) I am executing. What is the distance to the airfield?
18:27:05 (805) Roger.

Theory of mutual deterrance applies economically too

WASHINGTON (AP) — The theory of mutual deterrance, usually applied in a military context, holds that each superpower forgoes attack because no matter what damage it could inflict, the other side could strike back.

In a different way, the same theory applies economically. And that is one reason for the measured, relatively mild sanctions President Reagan imposed against the Soviet Union for downing Korean Air Line Flight 007.

There wasn't much he could do in economic reprisal that would not have hurt the United States in the process of punishing the Soviet Union. The dilemma is not a new one. But it is particularly difficult for a conservative president who has warned Moscow that aggression will bring a strong U.S. reaction.

Reagan called the jetliner attack an instance of Soviet aggression, but his reaction did not include the kind of economic sanctions that had been invoked in earlier crises.

The extended current U.S. restrictions on Soviet commercial aviation, and asked other nations to join in acting against Moscow on that front. He suspended some diplomatic and transportation exchanges. And he urged Congress to toughen U.S. military deterrent strength.

But he did not block other avenues of trade or negotiation with Moscow, notably the new, five-year grain sales agreement. The deterrent to that is that cancellation of the $10 billion agreement probably would do more economic damage to the United States than to the Soviets.

Reagan made that argument himself as a candidate, opposing the partial grain embargo then-President Carter imposed in retaliation for the Soviet military move into Afghanistan.

The 15-month embargo, which extended into the Reagan presidency, affected about $2 billion worth of grain sales. Reagan said that put an unfair burden on American farmers, and did little harm to the Soviet Union since grain was for sale elsewhere. The embargo also cost the government money, to make up for farm losses under grain price support programs. Reagan lifted the embargo on April 24, 1981, three months after he took office. In doing so, he said there was no weakening of U.S. determination to resist Soviet aggression.

Vegetable, pasta dish creates a welcome change of pace

Mention pasta and everyone's eyes light up. In its almost infinite variety, it's one of those soul-satisfying foods that never fails to please.

As a nation we have vastly expanded our pasta horizons over the past few years. We no longer view it as just something to go under the meatballs and tomato sauce. Pasta's versatility and economy, as well as its impressive nutritional value, have made it a favorite of creative cooks who enjoy trying new flavors and combinations.

One interesting, budget-wise and nutritious way to serve pasta is to team it with a glorious mix of seasonal fresh vegetables, cheese, and a lively light sauce to blend the flavors.

Start by cooking the pasta to just the "al dente" stage. It should have a firm but not hard mouth feel. Test by tasting frequently as it cooks in a large quantity of rapidly boiling water.

Select a mix of fresh vegetables—that complement each other in color and flavor. Cut them into bite size pieces for easy eating and cook them only until crisp-tender to preserve their best qualities. Add a favorite cheese, either grated, shredded or diced, for extra protein and appetite satisfaction.

Spaghetti Italiano begins with an eye-appealing blend of five colorful vegetables, cooked to crisps-tender perfection in Italian dressing. A light, creamy sauce of salad dressing and milk is tossed with the spaghetti and grated parmesan cheese. The easy and flavorful sauce will complement any vegetable combination you create. Next time, try varying the "veggies" or the type of pasta to make your own new main dish masterpiece.

SPAGHETTI ITALIANO
1 c. broccoli flowerets
1 c. 1-inch zucchini sticks

1/4 c. Italian dressing
2 c. chopped tomato
1 c. mushroom halves
1/4 c. parsley
1/2 c. milk

1-3rd c. salad dressing
7 oz. spaghetti, cooked, drained
1/2 c. grated parmesan cheese
2 T. slivered almonds, toasted

Cook broccoli and zucchini in dressing over low heat five minutes. Add tomato, mushrooms and parsley; continue cooking until vegetables are tender. Drain. Gradually add milk to salad dressing in saucepan; heat thoroughly. Pour over hot spaghetti. Add cheese; mix well. Serve vegetables over spaghetti mixture; top with almonds.

Pasta Medley is a range-top main dish of garden-fresh, stir-fried vegetables, mozzarella cheese and mostaccioli. Quick and easy to prepare, it's perfect for in-a-hurry weeknight dinners or as a unique addition to a buffet-style dinner party.

PASTA MEDLEY
2 c. cubed peeled eggplant
1 c. zucchini slices
1/2 c. celery slices
1/4 c. chopped onion
2 T. margarine

2 c. shredded mozzarella cheese
8 oz. mostaccioli noodles, cooked, drained
1 c. chopped tomato
1/2 c. salad dressing
1/4 t. oregano leaves
grated parmesan cheese

Saute eggplant, zucchini, celery and onion in margarine in large saucepan or skillet until tender. Add mozzarella cheese, noodles, tomato, salad dressing and oregano; cook, stirring constantly, over low heat just until cheese is melted. Sprinkle with parmesan cheese; serve immediately.

Make the most of your garden's or supermarket's bounty of fresh vegetables with Spaghetti Italiano. Five colorful vegetables cook to perfection in Italian dressing and are served atop a flavorful spaghetti mixture.

Maple walnut takes the cake

This is not the usual plain pound cake. Brown sugar gives it delightful maple flavor that walnuts round out.

MAPLE WALNUT POUND CAKE

2 cups sifted unbleached all purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
Two 1/4-pound sticks butter (1 cup), soft or cut into 16 pats

1 1/4 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 large eggs
1 cup walnuts, chopped medium fine

On wax paper stir together flour, baking powder, soda and salt. In the large bowl of an electric mixer cream butter, sugar and vanilla. At medium speed beat in eggs one at a time, beating 1 minute after each addition.

At low speed, gradually beat in flour mixture until barely blended. With a wooden spoon, fold in walnuts.

Turn into a well-greased, lightly floured 2-quart, swirl-shape tube pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean—about 50 minutes.

With a small metal spatula, loosen sides; turn out on a wire rack; cool completely.

FACTS OF LIFE

LEICESTER, England (AP) — "People take for granted the miracle of human development and few understand how rapidly an embryo develops from the moment of conception," says Dr. Marjorie England, British embryologist and author.

In her book, "The Color Atlas of Life Before Birth," she says a human embryo's face is already beginning to form by day 32, by the eighth week all basic body systems have been laid down, by the ninth week the sex of the baby can be determined, and by week 10 the fingernails have formed.

Experts disagree on beauty pageants' effects

By DEBBY HALE
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Each year, thousands of American girls flash smiles, dress up in their finest, dress down in swimsuits, and try to persuade a panel of judges that their personality is the best on stage that night.

Whether they're parading across the boardwalk in Atlantic City or a hardwood floor in a high school auditorium in Arkansas, many are beauty pageant contestants. Though the pageants cater mostly to girls, from as young as 5 months to about 26 years old, they occasionally attract baby boys.

One child psychologist who believes pageants sometimes can be harmful to the very young is Dr. David Loe of Jonesboro.

Interviewed by telephone, Loe said, "If problems exist, it would be because of pressure from pageant officials or parents. A lot has to do with the maturity and the emotional strength of the child. ... If they perceive ... that their failure is very disappointing to someone very important in their life, then that could be very traumatic for them."

In an earlier interview, Loe said young beauty pageant contestants "are parading around up there to see if the world loves them or not. It's a terrible burden to put on a child."

If the parents stress that a pageant is only for fun, he said, the youngster might enjoy the competition. "Possibly a young person could ... come to realize that there's nothing intimidating about being around a group of strangers or about being exposed to the attention of others," he said.

But, "Frankly," he added, "I don't see how it would have any personal benefit for the child below the age of, say, 5 years."

Another Jonesboro psychologist, Dr. Jim Chaney, said beauty pageant competition could range from being very beneficial or destructive. If a youngster wants to compete and isn't pressured, he said, the experience could help the child develop courage to accept failure as well as success.

Chaney's daughter, Margie, is Miss Jonesboro, a title she twice before lost. "She has learned to have the courage to fail because she's placed herself in a position for evaluation in front of the public," he said.

On the other hand, Chaney said, "A child can develop a feeling that they're acceptable to their family only if they're winners." This situation develops primarily when parental pressure exists. "The pressure primarily surfaces 'when there are parents who need to achieve their own place in the sun,'" he said.

Rose Ann Hester, director of Young America Pageants in Memphis, Tenn., said pageants helped prepare children for competition. Critics, she said, "don't realize that competition is part of the real world. You're in competition as far as dating, as far as getting grades in school."

Pageants boost a child's confidence, she said. "When they're little ... it helps them to overcome their shyness."

But Loe says a child can overcome shyness in other ways. "While the beauty pageant may not be harmful for most children," he said, "I also think it's not necessarily the best way to overcome these problems. There are other ways with less fanfare," like learning to ride a bicycle in front of other children.

Chaney said parents should leave the idea of beauty pageant competition up to the child. "It's like New York City," he said. "You either love it or hate it."

Trace minerals found to be essential to health

Some minerals that are essential to good health are needed in minute amounts. Yet, despite the small amounts needed, they are just as vital as various vitamins and other nutrients. Minerals play an essential role in many body processes including the formation of blood, bones and teeth, the regulation of body fluids, in the life processes of cells, and in muscle and nerve functions.

Minerals are grouped into two general classes: macrominerals (calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, sodium, potassium and chloride) and the micro or trace minerals (iron, manganese, copper, iodine, zinc, fluoride, selenium, molybdenum, chromium and others). Trace mineral requirements are so small that they are often measured in micrograms. One thousand micrograms equal one milligram and 1,000 milligrams equal one gram. A gram is about 1/28th of an ounce.

Through its publication of recommended dietary allowances, or RDAs, the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council periodically updates its guidelines on how much of any nutrient - vitamins and minerals - men, women and children should consume. The most recent guidelines were released in 1980.

RDAs are established by the board only when adequate scientific data support its recommendations. So far, RDAs have been established for only three trace minerals - iron, zinc and iodine. In the case of six others - copper, manganese, fluoride, chromium, selenium and molybdenum - the board in 1980 proposed "estimated safe and adequate intakes." Recommendations were estimated because less information is available to base allowances on.

Of all the trace minerals, lack of iron probably poses the greatest nutritional concern, particularly for infants and young children, pregnant women, women of child-bearing age, and older people with low food intakes.

Iron helps transport oxygen in the body. It is a part of hemoglobin that carries oxygen in the red blood cells. Since most iron is in the red blood cells, substantial amounts can be lost through heavy menstruation, hemorrhaging and blood donation.

Liver and red meats, oysters, enriched bread and iron-enriched cereal products, dried peas and beans, dried fruits and leafy vegetables are good sources. The body hoards iron absorbed from foods but, on the average, only about 10 percent of what is consumed is absorbed into the body.

Vegetarians have a more difficult time getting enough iron because the iron from animal sources is better absorbed. Iron is the only trace mineral that the Food and Nutrition Board concedes may require the taking of dietary supplements by certain population segments.

Severe zinc deficiency is rare in the U.S. although, nutrition sources say, zinc intakes may be marginal in some population segments. Animal and organ meats, seafoods and eggs are better sources than vegetables.

Thyroid enlargement was a serious health problem in some areas of the U.S. until iodized salt was introduced in 1924 to help overcome iodine deficiencies. Iodine is found in hormones produced by the thyroid gland. These hormones help regulate the body's metabolic rate and are vital to normal growth from conception to adulthood.

Fluoridation of community water supplies has reduced sharply the incidence of dental caries (cavities) in the U.S. Fluoride also is found in small amounts in soil, plants and animals. Fluoride is incorporated in combination with calcium and phosphorus into the crystalline structure that strengthens the teeth.

Generally a balanced diet from a wide variety of foods is all that most healthy people need to satisfy their vitamin and mineral requirements.

School encourages localized teaching

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer
MOREHEAD, Ky. (AP) — Some boys at Pike County's Outpost School have mixed elements of legend and everyday life in the region to create a fictional character named Thomas Buckskin.

Buckskin, their tale went, once had the strength to lift trucks and move mountains. But he lost his hair, the source of his strength, when it was caught in the fan of a car he was working on, and the story ended with Buckskin sitting on a mountain and drawing unemployment checks.

The boys had been grade-school dropouts, but a teacher was able to capture their attention and fire their imaginations by letting them write about what they knew, said Appalachian educator and historian Jim Wayne Miller.

As schools grow, that kind of individual attention diminishes, Miller told a Conference on Appalachian Children and Families at the recent Appalachian Celebration at Morehead State University.

And without localized teaching, children tend to become part of a national "pseudoculture" fueled by the media, said Miller, a member of Western Kentucky University's department of languages and intercultural studies.

Miller told the scholars and educators that in small community schools, "teachers knew the parents of the students. When they had problems the teachers would talk about them and figure out what to do."

He said studies had found few neurotic problems among children in such community schools and indicated that "mountain children as a result of experiencing the family as a reality had a firm idea of who they were, where they belonged and what they wanted to be" while urban children were "more uncertain about what they wanted to be."

But increasingly, as mountain schools grow and become centralized, "teachers have no sense of understanding who those students are and where they are coming from," Miller said.

History, rather than being related to the region, is often taught straight from textbooks, most of which "present American history and culture in a very abstract way."

"Few people present the colors and textures of America," he said.

"Very often children in our region do not get the kind of reading that depicts the life they are familiar with," he said. "Therefore, they get the idea that reading is about somebody else."

The trend can be reversed, Miller said. "A school curriculum can take locality and circumstances into account, paying attention not only to what is taught, but also to where it's taught and to whom."

Rookies, subs keep Pirates in race

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

When it gets to pennant race time, the Pittsburgh Pirates usually rely on their veterans.

For now, though, rookies and reserves continue to keep the Pirates near the top of the National League East.

Rookie Lee Tunnell threw a three-hitter, extending his string of shutout innings to 28, and reserve Jim Morrison homered as Pittsburgh beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 Tuesday night.

The Pirates are one percentage point behind first-place Montreal in the jumbled division scramble. Philadelphia is in third, one-half game behind, and the fourth-place Cardinals are just 1 1/2 games back.

"We needed a good ballgame," said Tunnell, whose team had lost three in a row, including a doubleheader sweep by the Cardinals the previous night. "I'm just happy I did what I was supposed to do."

Ken Oberkfell was the only St. Louis batter who figured out Tunnell, 8-5. Oberkfell singled three times for the only hits off the right-hander.

"It was too much Tunnell and not enough Obies, right?" commented Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

In other NL games, Montreal bounced Chicago

8-2, Philadelphia beat New York 2-0, San Diego downed Los Angeles 8-3, Cincinnati routed San Francisco 11-1 and Houston at Atlanta was rained out.

Tunnell's 110-pitch effort resulted in his second shutout of the season. It was his third complete game.

The 22-year-old pitcher, who pitched seven shutout innings in his last start, admitted that his concentration occasionally drifted from the mound and the St. Louis batters.

"I was just thinking that if I weren't here I'd be making $1,200 a month teaching school," said Tunnell, who was a secondary education major at Baylor University. "I'm just grateful for the chance to play."

Morrison got a rare start in place of Pittsburgh's regular third baseman, Bill Madlock, who suffered a torn tendon in his left calf Monday night. Morrison responded with his fifth home run in the fourth inning off John Stuper, 9-10, and an RBI groundout in the sixth. Expos 8, Cubs 2.

Manny Trillo went 4-for-4, including a home run and two doubles, and drove in four runs to pace host Montreal.

Trillo's RBI double triggered a three-run first inning. He drilled his second homer of the season in the second inning, and Andre Dawson followed with his 29th home run.

Dawson's blast, off Dick Ruthven, 11-11, gave him 100 runs batted in this season.

Charlie Lea, 14-8, won his seventh straight game, tying a team record for consecutive victories by a starter set by David Palmer. Lea allowed four hits in six innings. Scott Sanderson finished up for his first save, which was the second of his career.

Chicago's Leon Durham tore ligaments in his thumb trying to field Trillo's double in the first inning and is expected to be out of action for three weeks.

Phillies 6, Mets 0

The game in New York featured a matchup of rookie pitchers — Tony Ghefl of Philadelphia, making the second start of his career, and Ron Darling of New York, making his major-league debut.

Ghefl gave up five hits in 4 1/3 innings and did not get a decision. Reliever Tug McGraw went 2 2/3 innings to get the win and Al Holland got his 18th save as the three Philadelphia pitchers combined on a seven-hitter.

Darling struck out five of the first seven batters he faced, and went 6 1/3 innings in taking the loss. He gave up just one run — a bizarre one — and five hits before leaving with a pulled left hamstring.

The Phillies scored in the fourth when Joe Morgan walked, took second on a groundout and came home as Darling balked twice while Mike Schmidt was batting.

Two errors by third baseman Hubie Brooks in the eighth inning led to Philadelphia's other run.

Padres 8, Dodgers 3

San Diego won for the seventh straight time in Los Angeles, trimming the Dodgers' lead in the NL West to one game over Atlanta.

Terry Kennedy drove in four runs with a home run and two singles and Luis Salazar also homered to lead San Diego. Tony Gwynn of the Padres singled to extend his hitting streak to 16 games.

Winner Ed Whitson, 4-7, gave up seven hits in pitching his second complete game of the season. He yielded only two hits in the first five innings.

R.J. Reynolds' first major-league hit, a three-run homer in the sixth, accounted for the Dodger runs.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-2, took the loss, the third consecutive defeat for Los Angeles.

Landry sees wide open battle in NFC East

DALLAS (AP) — Monday night's wild shootout with the Washington Redskins gave Dallas Coach Tom Landry cause to reflect on a NFC East race that he says "looks like a wide open battle."

The Cowboys came from 20 points down to defeat the Super Bowl Champion Redskins 31-30 in the National Football League opener for both teams.

"I don't think anybody in the East will be a doormat this year," he said. "Any team can win at anytime. The records in the East may not be as good this year."

Landry said, "It's almost too early to say who will dominate the east but if you don't streak (win a number of games in a row) you won't win the division."

Landry was suffering from a heavy cold Tuesday after one of Dallas' most stirring comebacks.

"I'm not in good shape," Landry admitted.

But helping Landry's spirits was the pride his team displayed after trailing 23-3 at halftime.

"I was surprised we won because we had so far to come," said Landry.

"It's one of the great things in football or sport when you achieve something that looks impossible. What we accomplished took a lot of pride."

"When you are getting kicked around, you've got to show some character."

Landry said the victory ranked at the top of Cowboy comebacks.

"This is the most points I've seen us overcome (in a half) and come back to win," Landry said.

The Cowboys were so disgusted at halftime that quarterback Danny White slammed his helmet down on the floor.

"I didn't want to say anything so I just threw my helmet," White said.

Running back Tony Dorsett said Landry appealed to the team's pride.

"Right before we left the lockerroom (at halftime) for the field he (Landry) told us: 'This is going to show what you are all made of.'" Dorsett said.

The Cowboys must travel to St. Louis for another road game Sunday and Landry said it wasn't fair.

"The NFL should avoid that (road games) after you play on Monday night," Landry said. "We're just fortunate in that we don't have to travel too far."

Landry said of St. Louis: "The Cardinals are a hustling team. I've always had respect for them. They are after you all the time."

Landry is concerned because the Cowboys lost last year after a Monday night game when they had to travel.

"It's always tough to bounce back," he said.

AL roundup

White Sox reduce "magic number" to 11

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Comiskey Park in Chicago is not necessarily known as a home run paradise. It just seems that way when Greg Luzinski and Ron Kittle bat.

Luzinski has already hit three roof-top jobs in left field at Comiskey this season. And Tuesday night, Kittle hit the roof to help the American League West leaders beat the Oakland A's 7-6.

"It was only a matter of time," said Luzinski of Kittle's spectacular shot. "He hit the facing up there earlier this year. With his power and stroke, if he gets a pitch in the right spot, he can hit it a long way."

Kittle homered in his fifth successive game. The blast was the 32nd of the year for the White Sox rookie and he became only the 20th player in the 73-year history of Comiskey to hit a ball on or over the roof. Only Luzinski, Ted Williams and Jimmy Foxx have done it more than once.

"I knew it was out the moment I hit it, it was only a question of whether it would stay fair or not," said Kittle. "I've been feeling comfortable at the plate, I've regained my confidence and I made it count."

In other AL action, it was Baltimore 8, Boston 1; Milwaukee 6, New York 3; Toronto 6, California 4; Minnesota 5, Texas 3 in 10 innings and Seattle 3, Kansas City 1. Rain washed out the Detroit-Cleveland game.

Kittle's homer, his sixth in the last seven games, came in a two-run third off loser Chris Codiroli, 12-10, that sewed up the contest for the White Sox and reduced their "magic number" for winning the West to 11 games.

LaMar Hoyt, 19-10, won his eighth consecutive game and matched his career high of 19 victories which led the AL last season. He allowed eight hits, including a pair of solo homers by Wayne Gross, but departed in the eighth. Four pitchers finished up, including Dennis Lamp, who notched his 12th save. Orioles 8, Red Sox 1

In Baltimore, Jim Palmer gave up eight hits in 7 1/3 innings and Eddie Murray and Rick Dempsey hit two-run homers as the Orioles defeated Boston. The victory was the 12th in 14 games for the Orioles, the AL East leaders.

Palmer, 4-4, allowed the only Red Sox run in the fourth on a single by Carl Yastrzemski. The RBI by Yastrzemski was his 1,840th, snapping a ninth-place tie with former Boston great Williams on the all-time list.

Murray lined his 27th homer off Dennis Eckersley, 7-12, in the first, following a two-out single by Cal Ripken, Jr. Dempsey's fourth homer, off Doug Bird, came after a two-out walk to Singleton in the seventh.

"I didn't get tired. My arm feels fine," said Palmer, working his way back from an injury. "But it's inconclusive. Anybody can win with eight runs."

In Milwaukee, Ted Simmons ripped a two-out, two-run triple in the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie and lead the Brewers over New York.

The Brewers set the stage for Simmons' hit when leadoff hitter Paul Molitor reached first on second baseman Willie Randolph's error. One out later, Molitor was forced at second by Robin Yount. But Cecil Cooper followed with a single and Simmons tripled to chase Yankee starter Dave Righetti, 14-6. George Frazier relieved and threw a wild pitch, allowing Simmons to score the Brewers' final run.

Simmons' hit made a winner of Brewer reliever Jim Slaton, 12-5. Slaton pitched three innings of three-hit relief, allowing a run on Don Baylor's eighth-inning homer. Pete Ladd pitched the ninth to earn his 19th save.

Twins 5, Rangers 3

In Arlington, Darrell Brown delivered a run-scoring single in the 10th inning to lead Minnesota over Texas and snap a five-game losing streak.

Reliever Ron Davis earned his fourth victory against seven losses while Ranger starter Frank Tanana took his seventh loss against as many victories.

Tim Lincecum led off the 10th with a single, moved up on a sacrifice and came home with the game-winner on Brown's single. John Castino followed with a single off Ranger reliever Victor Cruz and Gary Ward brought Brown home with a sacrifice fly. Mariners 3, Royals 1

In Kansas City, Steve Henderson drove in one run with a fifth-inning double.

Right-hander Bob Stoddard, scattered five hits over 5 2/3 innings to pick up his eighth victory against 14 defeats.

Administration talks of plenty of firepower waiting in wings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says that not only does it intend to maintain the 1,200-man Marine force in Lebanon, but is prepared to send in reinforcements if U.S. troops continue to come under attack.

Reacting to the deaths of two more Marines on Tuesday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes warned that the "considerable firepower" of American forces poised offshore could be brought into play if necessary to protect U.S. forces.

He was referring to a heavily armed amphibious force carrying 2,000 additional U.S. Marines that was headed for the Lebanese coast.

On the importance of maintaining the U.S. role in trying to contain fighting among Lebanese factions, Speakes said, "Should this multinational force pull out, there's a distinct possibility of a reinstatement of full-scale war in Lebanon."

He said there are no immediate plans to send ashore the newly arriving contingent, which is armed with M-60 tanks, amphibious troop carriers, 105mm howitzers, 81mm mortars, various anti-tank missiles and 60mm machine guns.

But he added: "They are there to indicate that if there are difficulties involving our Marines that we do have considerable firepower offshore that would be able to step in."

Earlier Tuesday, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had said the Marines in Lebanon will "just try to improve their defensive positions, and, of course, they are firing back. They are firing back from their own positions and they are firing back from our offshore naval units."

However, a Navy official who declined to speak for attribution, said later that U.S. ships had not fired anything other than "illumination rounds" to provide light for the ground-based forces to return fire.

Speakes directed a specific warning to Syrian leaders, saying they "should know that we do have considerable firepower offshore and they should be circumspect in their own active involvement in instigating any violence in the area."

Asked about the extent of Syrian responsibility for factional hostilities coinciding with the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the troubled Chouf region outside Beirut, a White House official who answered only on condition that his name not be used said the Syrians "have an inordinate amount of influence on these factions."

The official said the Syrians are instigating a delay in implementing an agreement between the Lebanese government and these factions. "We would like to see them come around with their own withdrawal and allow these various factions to participate in a united government in Lebanon," he said.

At the State Department, spokesman Alan Romberg said the Marines, who have been part of a four-nation peacekeeping force in the area for more than a year, were "performing a critical role in support of the efforts of the Lebanese government. No one should mistake our determination to continue in this just cause."

Per capita income really fell

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Beware inflation. That warning, issued day after day in myriad ways by those ubiquitous "economic observers" in government, business and academe, seems to apply to the present, future and past.

This conclusion is reached by the Commerce Department announcement on Labor Day that per capita income of Americans last year rose 5 percent to $11,107 from $10,582, an improvement almost anyone can figure to be $525.

But the calculation is rather meaningless, because in reality per capita income didn't rise at all. It probably fell instead, as indicated by the 5.8 percent inflation rate that prevailed in personal consumption expenditures.

There is, almost all economic observers agree, sufficient confusion about the probabilities of inflation in the future, without adding that of the past.

But one indicator, the rate of productivity, is generally viewed as a fairly solid barometer of things to come. If production efficiency falls, inflation ensues. If it rises, it appears to put a cap on inflation.

State will appeal overturned conviction

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor says the state will ask a higher court to review an appeal court's decision to overturn the murder conviction of a man sentenced to life in prison for the torture-killing of a 4-year-old boy.

An appeals court in Corpus Christi on Sept. 1 ordered a new trial for Gary Ray Barber, 28, ruling that some items admitted into evidence were obtained without a search warrant.

Barber had been convicted of the April 1981 torture killing of Tommy Lott, which some authorities described as the worst case of child abuse ever discovered in Harris County.

Assistant Harris County District Attorney Jim Lavine said Tuesday the state will ask for a discretionary review of the ruling by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

One of the items mentioned by the court was not admitted into evidence, said Lavine.

"If we try (Barber) again, we will try it without those (items) and the outcome will be the same," Lavine said.

The appeals court opinion said, "Since the record lacks articulable facts which would justify a warrantless search, we hold that the warrantless search was illegal, and the evidence obtained thereby was inadmissible."

The opinion said that evidence was bloody clothing, "a vibrator which may have been used to cause the anal injuries and macrame rope which may have been used to cause the linear markings found on the deceased's body."

Barber is in a Texas Department of Corrections facility. He was convicted of murder in January 1982 by a jury in Corpus Christi, where the trial was moved from Houston because of pretrial publicity. In March 1982, state District Judge Joe Kegans sentenced him to life in prison.

Pet remedies

Will garlic pills kill fleas and ticks on dogs? Will diatomaceous earth, a talcum-like silica substance that's derived from the shell of single-celled organisms called diatoms, eliminate intestinal worms in animals? The

Veterinarians discount use of home remedies to treat pets

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Is garlic effective in combating fleas and ticks on dogs?

Will diatomaceous earth eliminate intestinal worms and do away with the need for over-the-counter preparations or those prescribed by a veterinarian?

The answer to both questions is an unequivocal maybe.

At one time, all medications were gleaned from the plant world. Penicillin, for instance, had its beginning in mold. Digitalis — used in controlling certain heart ailments — originally came from the foxglove flower.

And garlic was once used almost universally to reduce high blood pressure.

But with the growth of the multi-billion dollar industry that manufacturers synthetic drugs, the use of "home remedies" is now widely discounted by doctors and veterinarians alike.

"I'm aware of garlic being used to control fleas and ticks," said a spokesman for the San Diego Zoo. "But it's an outdated concept of veterinary medicine and is not used here."

Dr. Eric Miller of the St. Louis Zoo concurs.

"There is no proof that garlic is effective on fleas and ticks. I know of no zoos that use such home remedies."

A Midland veterinarian, who did not wish to be named, also doubts the effectiveness of what he refers to as "folk remedies."

"It's an interesting subject," he said. "But it's superstitious witchcraft medicine."

He and other veterinarians, however, say most over-the-counter flea and tick products — including collars — display a limited effectiveness.

They also admit that to their knowledge no formal studies have been conducted on the issue of "veterinary folk medicine."

But advocates of home remedies think they know why no such studies have been done.

"It's probably economics," said Dr. Joel Wallach. "It would be pretty hard for pharmaceutical companies to get a patent on garlic."

Wallach is a former newspaper columnist and a former veterinarian with the St. Louis Zoo. He's now a naturopathic physician who operates three clinics in Portland, Ore., and has recently published a 1,200-page book on animal care called "Diseases of Exotic Pets."

"It deals somewhat with home remedies," he said. "Yes, there's a certain amount of validity to them. All kinds of plants have remedial effects. They do work. And they lack the potential toxicity of commercial chemicals."

"But with garlic, there were problems with its consistency because of different growing conditions. Also, there's the smell and inconvenience. We're a convenience-oriented society."

Wallach said he had not heard of diatomaceous earth being used for worms and suggested that anyone wanting to try garlic for repelling fleas and ticks "should play with it."

"There are no known harmful effects. The amount to use depends on how bad you want the animal to smell."

Diatomaceous earth is a crumbly, talcum-like silica substance that's derived from the shells of single-celled organisms called diatoms.

Its uses range from thermal insulation to filter material in swimming pool filters. It can be purchased from swimming pool equipment outlets for about $10 per 50 pounds.

One Midland woman, who asked not to be identified, said she had been using diatomaceous earth for years and claims it's been 100 percent effective in keeping her dog free of worms.

"I sprinkle about a teaspoon on their food every day," she said. "It appears to dissolve, but it's not soluble in water. It works by clogging the digestive tract of worms. The digestive tract of dogs is much larger, so it doesn't hurt them."

"I started using it in 1967 on the advice of a veterinarian. My dogs are checked periodically and have shown any signs of worms," she said.

"Diatomaceous earth won't work on heartworms, though — only on intestinal worms."

On the advice of a Midland woman who shows dogs, she began using garlic about six weeks ago and says its 80 percent effective on ticks and 90 percent effective on fleas.

"I'm using four garlic capsules a day on each of my dogs because we have a bad flea and tick problem where we live. But most people could probably use one or two a day and be all right."

"I roll them up in small pieces of hamburger or moist dog food."

"I realize there's a lot of controversy about home remedies. But it doesn't hurt to try them. They're cheap and won't harm animals the way some chemicals do."

Two injured in private plane crash

PELL CITY, Ala. (AP) — A Texas pilot broke both ankles and suffered head injuries when his single-engine plane crashed during takeoff in gusty winds at the St. Clair County Airport.

A spokesman at University of Alabama Hospitals in Birmingham said the pilot, Carlin Johnston, 44, of Austin, Texas, was in fair condition Tuesday.

The plane's passenger, Judith Carpenter, 46, of Austin, was treated at St. Clair County Hospital for minor injuries from the crash Monday and was released, a hospital spokesman said.

St. Clair County Airport spokesman Chuck Lyner said Johnston had no problems landing the plane for refueling, but crashed on takeoff at 5:26 p.m. He said gusty winds apparently forced the plane to the ground at the end of the runway.

"He departed in windy conditions, and there was also some rain," Lyner said. "He just didn't make it."

A Pell City Fire Department spokesman said the plane was heavily damaged. Miss Carpenter was thrown from the plane, but Johnston was trapped inside, the spokesman said.

The two Texans were on their way to visit friends in North Carolina, the fire department spokesman said.

The Federal Aviation Administration will investigate the crash, Lyner said.

Names in the news

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Actress Suzanne Rogers figures that after nine years her days on NBC's "Days of Our Lives" are numbered.

"I think it's time for me to make a move," Miss Rogers said Tuesday on the QUBE cable television program "Soap Scoop." "If I don't do it now, I'll be unhappy."

"It seems they don't want to improve the story lines of the older people that are on the show," said Miss Rogers, who plays Maggie Horton.

In an telephone interview from Los Angeles, where "Days of Our Lives" is produced, Miss Rogers said Sept. 23 will be her last day.

Miss Rogers said she's going to try moving into movies and prime-time television.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana has revealed what up until now has been a public secret — she has talent as an amateur artist.

Her drawing of her 1-year-old son, Prince William, stole the show when it was exhibited at a London gallery Tuesday night.

It's a 6-inch pencil sketch on the back of notepaper from the royal yacht Britannia showing William supporting himself on his hands and practicing his first baby steps.

The drawing is among 140 portraits and self portraits by famous people included in a new book for the charity Mencap, which helps the mentally handicapped.

The first public work of art by the 22-year-old wife of Prince Charles is not signed, but Mencap says in a caption: "The Princess of Wales, herself an emblem of femininity, has avoided the cardinal error of most artist-mothers regarding their sons, which is to make the sons indistinguishable from the mothers."

The sketch shows the child wearing dungarees and with his freckles clearly visible.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, divorced in 1979 from Patrick Nugent after 12 years of marriage, has announced she will be getting married again.

"We're deliciously happy," said the 36-year-old daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson describing herself and husband-to-be, accountant Ian Turpin of the Grand Cayman Islands.

The wedding will be at the LBJ Ranch later this year or in early 1984, Ms. Johnson said.

Turpin, 38, is director of trust operations of the Grand Cayman Islands' Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Ms. Johnson, chairman of the board of Austin's Bank of the Hills, has four children from her marriage to Nugent. Turpin has one son from a previous marriage.

LONDON (AP) — No special treatment will be accorded Crown Prince Willem Alexander, heir to the Dutch throne, at Atlantic College near Cardiff, Wales, aides to the 16-year-old prince have indicated.

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese professor says he has developed a one-arm robot that can play an electronic organ with its five fingers as skillfully as a human.

Professor Ichiro Kato of Waseda University in Tokyo said Tuesday the robotic arm — which extends from a shoulder to the fingertips — can play Waseda's school song as well as a human organist.

It can strike keys 10 times a second in motions controlled by a microcomputer, Kato said. The robot can also perform cross-finger piano techniques by crossing its index finger or its middle finger over its thumb, he said.

Kato said he is planning to build an organ-playing robot complete with head and body by next spring.

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Opposition leaders are demanding an investigation of a news report that fugitive financier Robert Vesco runs a major drug-smuggling operation from the Bahamas with government protection.

"These are staggering allegations," Kendall Isaacs, leader of the opposition Free National Movement, said after hearing the report on "NBC Nightly News" on Monday.

There is a dark cloud hanging over the reputation of the nation," Isaacs said Tuesday. "We therefore call on Prime Minister Sir Lynden Pindling to speak to the nation as soon as possible."

The NBC story said Vesco, who fled the United States in 1973 while under indictment, has been running a cocaine and marijuana operation for at least two years from Norman's Cay, an island about 225 miles southeast of Miami. Vesco was expelled from the island in 1981, but NBC said he walks freely in public on Norman's Cay.

In an official statement Tuesday, Pindling denied allegations that government officials were providing protection for Vesco in return for monthly payments of about $100,000.

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — An ex-convict who argued his own case all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court will defend himself against charges that he murdered one of 17 people killed in the Joliet area this summer.

A judge ruled Tuesday that ex-convict Donald R. Lego could have newspapers and current Illinois law books to prepare his defense in the Aug. 26 stabbing death of Mary Mae Johnson, an 82-year-old widow.

Lego, who was taken into custody Saturday, is the only person arrested so far in the killings which began June 25 with the murders of two elderly sisters. Authorities have declined to say what evidence they have against him.

Lego, 51, has served time in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri prisons and has acted as his own lawyer in criminal cases starting in 1961.

NEW YORK (AP) — Five men left a city shelter rather than join a program to put hundreds of homeless people to work cleaning the shelters and parks for $12.50 a week, the facility's director said.

People who are mentally or physically unable to work are being exempted from the new program, in which city officials hope will involve 1,000 homeless people at the 16 city shelters within a year.

Mayor Edward Koch spent an hour Tuesday listening to residents' complaints at the Harlem shelter where the five men had lived.

Asked if the residents had anything to say about the work program, Koch replied, "Yeah, they want more money."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to delete 100 instances of sex discrimination from federal laws are contained in a 50-page report on women's issues that has been sent to President Reagan.

The report was requested by Reagan after Barbara Honneger, a former Justice Department official, charged that the administration's program to eliminate discriminatory federal laws was "sham."

The report lists laws that have already been changed to eliminate sex discrimination and proposals for more deletions. Kim Hoggard, a White House press officer, said Tuesday it also lists about 1,000 women Reagan has appointed to federal posts.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions and membership organizations spent $2.1 million on political literature promoting candidates in 1982, according to the Federal Elections Commission.

An FEC report issued Tuesday said 25 unions and five membership organizations spent $2.1 million to promote 714 candidates for Congress and $4,623 to advocate the defeat of another 180 candidates. All but $5,591 of the spending was related to congressional races.

Unions and corporations cannot make political contributions but may spend money to urge members, officers and shareholders to vote for or against certain candidates. There were no reports of corporate expenditures for political messages in 1982, the FEC said.
