

Pampa building permits nearly $4 million above last year

The Pampa Department of Building Inspection issued 39 building permits in August with a total valuation of $1,593,544, bringing the total for this fiscal year to $15,401,094, an increase of nearly $3.8 million over totals for last year at this time.

Shirley Muns, assistant building inspector, said total valuation of the August permits increased by $1,042,422 over totals for July. Twenty-seven permits were issued in July, with a valuation of $551,122.

Total building permits for the fiscal year to date number 324, a decrease of 64 from the 388 issued at this time last year. But total valuation for the previous fiscal year at this time was only $11,628,263, making an increase of $3,772,831 this year, Ms. Muns said.

The number of permits this August increased by only one over the 38 permits issued in August, 1982. But valuation for last August was $834,442, short by $759,102 for the August valuation this year.

Building permits for August collected $3,768,255 in fees for the city, compared to $2,418 for last August. Total fees for the year to date are $29,232,75, down slightly from the $29,236,50 of this time last year, Ms. Muns reported.

Building permits issued in August break down as follows: 12 single-family units, one commercial building, three mobile homes, three permits for relocation or demolishing, 14 alterations or additions to present dwellings, five alterations or additions to present commercial buildings, and one other.

The department issued 29 electrical permits for fees of $1,515.19 and 69 plumbing permits for $1,827.44 in fees. Fiscal year to date totals are 254 electrical permits with fees of $5,626.22 and 473 plumbing permits with collection of $7,968.02 in fees.

Total of all fees collected in August is $7,110.88, Ms. Muns said. Last August fees totaled $3,114.30, with the comparable fiscal year totals at $38,395.55. Total fees for this year to date are $44,938.99, an increase of $6,543.44.

Department employees made 78 building inspections in August, 60 electrical inspections, 109 plumbing inspections, and 51 miscellaneous inspections. Total inspections for this fiscal year are 630 building, 499 electrical, 948 plumbing and 309 miscellaneous.

BOB PRICE... faces foreclosure

Bob Price ranch to be auctioned away

SBA announces plans to foreclose on 9,670-acre spread next month

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior staff writer

The Small Business Administration is foreclosing on former Congressman Bob Price's huge ranch, and the agency will auction off the spread from the steps of the Gray County Courthouse next month, officials said.

The 9,670-acre ranch is in hock under several million dollars in both government and private loans.

The SBA is finally cashing in a delinquent note, according to agency officials Jim Gilbert and Barbara Hurt. "We are foreclosing," Gilbert, Lubbock SBA acting director, said Wednesday.

Price took out two SBA loans on the ranch property. The first loan was issued Aug. 22, 1979 for $291,000. It was granted to pay previous debts and for planting crops. The terms require yearly payments of $21,000. The second SBA loan was granted Nov. 28, 1979 for $198,000. It was approved for operating expenses. The terms require yearly payments of $13,310.

"The loans are in default, due to non-payment. The collateral was the ranch," Hurt said.

The agency will auction off its lien on the ranch that was acquired for the first SBA loan. Hurt said the agency will sell the lien position to the highest bidder for cash. The forced auction is scheduled for 1 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 4.

Price tried to sell the ranch, which was bought by his grandfather in 1907 and spreads across four counties, at a "voluntary" auction last April 28. Pampa oilman Leonard Hudson entered the top bid for the property at $3,025,000, about $312 per acre.

The deal never closed.

Hudson is suing Price for the return of $325,000 earnest money put up as a deposit on the land. Hudson said the deal was off. The Farmer's Home Administration would not allow his Pampa corporation, Leonard Hudson Drilling Company, to assume outstanding FHA loans on the Price ranch. The agency's ruling violated the sale's contract, Hudson said.

Price countersued. He said financing is Hudson's problem. His suit claims he arranged alternate financing at Panhandle Bank & Trust in Borger.

Both men are suing the Borger bank for release of the earnest money.

Hudson also sued the broker who handled the April auction, Bill Reavis, of American Auction Company in Duncan, Okla. A default judgment against Reavis was entered in a Pampa district court when the broker failed to answer the suit within 10 days.

In his legal answer to Price's suit, Hudson entered what may be the real reason for the failure to close the April sale — the ranch property is covered under huge and possibly undisclosed debts—debts that may total more than the earlier auction bid.

The Pampa oilman claims the former U.S. Congressman and state senator could not produce a "good marketable title," "subject to no liens."

Price never removed the objections discovered by the attorneys for the title company," Hudson said in answer to Price's demands for the money from the April auction.

Bob Price was not available for comment Wednesday or today. His wife said he was "in Dallas on business" and could not be reached.

Mrs. Price said this morning that they did receive a registered letter notifying them of the SBA action.

A search of land records in the Gray County Clerk's office reveals that at one time or another Price has put up the title of his ranch for loans from more than a dozen individuals and companies and from the government.

After the auction, the large number of loans may leave some lien holders standing at the back of the line "shut out" from collecting any money due, according to the SBA officials.

The Gray County and federal agencies' records reveal a tangled mess of creditors. It may resemble an effort "take a number and try and collect," when the list of lien holders try to recover something from the ranch auction next month. It's certain the government will collect its money first, according to the officials.

The FHA is first in line to collect on delinquent loans on the Price ranch. That agency holds the first and second liens on the property. The FHA made two loans totaling $724,000 to Price in February 1978. In order to protect that original loan, it bought another

Vandals fail to open safe at high school

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Pampa High School was the object of wide-spread vandalism sometime last night.

Head custodian, Earl Meaker, found the damage about 6:30 this morning, according to high school principal Paul Payne.

The most extensive damage was to the school office, where one or more persons apparently entered through a smashed window pane in the door of the outer office. Payne said other areas had also been damaged, but he had not had time to examine the entire building early Thursday.

According to an investigating officer, a five-pound sledge hammer was used to make a hole in the wall next to the office safe. It appeared the intruders removed a section of paneling from the wall before taking the sledge hammer to the plaster and brick wall.

It also appeared a heavy screwdriver was used in an attempt to break the combination lock. Payne said the lock would have to be replaced.

The only things anyone would have found in the safe are permanent student records, according to Paul Boswell, deputy superintendent of schools.

"Any money is deposited with the bank, daily," Boswell said.

Shultz demands Soviet official 'tell the truth'

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says U.S.-Soviet relations could sour further unless Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko "tells the truth" today about the downing of a South Korean jetliner.

Shultz has said the downing of the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet is the main topic for his scheduled meeting with Gromyko today at the residence of U.S. Ambassador Thomas O. Enders.

But there was no suggestion in a speech given by Gromyko here Wednesday that Moscow is prepared to change its story that the Boeing 747 was on a "special duty for the American authorities" — presumably meaning a spy mission — and that the Soviets had every right to shoot it down.

The jetliner disappeared over the Sea of Japan Sept. 1. All 269 people aboard are presumed dead.

While Shultz accused Moscow of covering up the facts, Gromyko said Wednesday that Washington is hiding what he called the true purpose of the flight into Soviet territory and bears responsibility for the consequences.

Gromyko said the jetliner flew over some of "our most important strategic facilities" and refused to obey signals to land.

"Our fighters fulfilled the orders of their base to cut short the flight," Gromyko said in a speech to the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Shultz, who sat impassively in the front row of the conference hall during the speech, said afterwards he was "very disappointed" in the speech.

"Falsehoods have been continuous," he said, "and juggling of the facts is too mild a word for the way in which the Soviet Union has responded to this Korean plane shootdown."

Shultz earlier told reporters he wants to know from Gromyko, "what is their explanation, why don't they tell the truth?"

He said another meeting scheduled with Gromyko in New York later this month may hinge on whether "anything satisfactory" emerges from the meeting here with his Soviet counterpart.

If not, Shultz said, it is "certainly a possibility" that the New York meeting, to be held in connection with the opening of the U.N. General Assembly, may be canceled.

When the Shultz-Gromyko meeting here originally was planned, prior to the shootdown, the major issue was considered arms control. It was also thought likely the two would discuss a possible summit between President Reagan and Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov next year.

Shultz decided to narrow the agenda to discussing the airliner incident.

In suit against Energas

Burn specialist takes witness stand

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior staff writer

Dr. Sally Abston, a burn specialist on the staffs of the Shrine Burn Institute and John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, testified Ana Boleman told her she "is no longer attractive, no longer lovable," as a result of burn injuries.

Dr. Abston testified as color photos showing Mrs. Boleman and her baby's severe burn injuries were displayed to jurors hearing the former Pampa residents' $21 million lawsuit against the local gas company.

The doctor treated the mother and child after they were badly burned in a fire here last year. Abston said the infant, who was two months old at the time of the fire, is her youngest, most severely-burned patient who survived.

The Galveston specialist testified about the treatment of injuries suffered by the Bolemans during the fire in their Pampa mobile home Aug. 27, 1982.

Jay Boleman and his wife and child are parties to the lawsuit against Ploger Corporation and its subsidiaries, Energas and Westar Transmission Companies. The suit says the local utility is negligent and responsible for the fire.

Dr. Abston testified about the numerous skin-grafting surgeries necessary to keep both the mother and child alive. Initial treatment with intravenous fluids was required to prevent shock, she said. In addition to the operations to cover the third-degree burns over both the woman and infant, daily "Clorox" whirlpool baths were needed to remove dead tissue and prevent infection, the doctor testified.

Abston then talked about the victims' needed care after their release from the hospital treatments lasting several months.

Both mother and child will need numerous cosmetic surgeries. They must continue to wear mesh, pressure suits that reduce scarring, the doctor said.

"(Their) scars will always be there," Abston said.

"She had a fear of dying — a fear shared by her doctor," Abston said about Mrs. Boleman's initial reaction to her injuries.

"She asked frequently about the baby during her hospital stay. It imposed a lot of anxieties on her.

"She is concerned she is no longer attractive and is no longer lovable.

"She was fearful of the trial," the plaintiffs' witness said during the effort to outline the victims' mental suffering.

The fire erupted just hours after an Energas serviceman turned on natural gas at the Bolemans' Pampa trailer.

Four witnesses have testified a copper gas line inside the trailer was uncapped and leaking gas when they investigated the cause of the blaze.

The gas company has denied all allegations in the lawsuit and asks that the family receive nothing.

After two full days of questioning, a seven-woman, five-man jury was seated to hear the case August 31. Pampa District Judge Don Cain has scheduled three weeks for the trial.

Testimony resumed this morning.

More booze, less smoke on TV shows

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers who sampled three decades of television shows ranging from "Leave it to Beaver" to "Dallas" conclude that drinking is up during prime time but smoking is down.

Their review of "The Twilight Zone," "Perry Mason," "Alice," "M-A-S-H" — 200 1/2 hours of situation comedies and dramas in all — found a 10-fold drop in TV smoking since 1950. But during the same period, on-the-air drinking has risen dramatically.

The research, published in part in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted by Drs. Warren Breed and James R. De Foe of the Institute for Scientific Analysis in Berkeley, Calif.

"We believe that television producers accepted the idea that smoking is dangerous to your health," Breed said in an interview. "We think they have shown good responsibility to the public in terms of health."

The depiction of drinking, however, was excessive, Breed said. TV often fails to show the consequences of overindulgence and rarely portrays people turning down a drink, he said.

"I would say that television does not handle drinking as responsibly as it could," he said.

The use of booze on TV was unchanged until recent years. Throughout the 1950s, '60s and '70s, actors on the hour-long shows committed an average of four "drinking acts" per hour. But in the early 1980s, this doubled to eight per hour. In a drinking act, the actor actually takes a gulp on camera or has a glass in his hand.

Breed attributed the increased drinking to the advent of shows like "Love Boat," in which drinking plays a part in the plot.

"A pleasure cruise ship where people weren't drinking would be ridiculous," he said.

The researchers counted all the liquid consumed, not just alcohol, and "people on television drink more alcohol than soft drinks, coffee or water," Breed said. "Drinking on television does not reflect reality."

Cigarette smoking was highest on the hour-long drama shows during the 1950s and early 1960s, when actors puffed an average of 4.4 cigarettes every hour. By 1982, this had dropped to just under a third of a cigarette per hour.

"Characters from all occupational strata smoked, but one profession is noteworthy," the researchers wrote.

"In a 1961 episode of 'Dr. Kildare,' both Dr. Kildare and his mentor, Dr. Gillespie, smoked. In contrast, not a single cigarette was seen in 10 hours of two 1971-1977 hospital dramas, 'Medical Center' and 'Marcus Welby, M.D.'"

The research, conducted for the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, also attempted to keep track of illicit drug use on television. But this turned out to be almost nonexistent.

To help former resident

Local Lutherans raising funds

Zion Lutheran Church is in the process of raising funds to help pay medical expenses for Lisa Koenig Morgan, a former Pampa resident who has Hodgkins disease.

The church is holding a rummage and bake sale Friday and Saturday to raise funds for Mrs. Morgan, who now lives in Umberger. The sale will be held at the church, 1210 Duncan.

Just before Christmas last year, doctors discovered that she had Hodgkins disease, a form of cancer which attacks the lymph glands in the neck. Rev. Charles Paulson, minister of Zion Lutheran Church, said. Since then she has been undergoing chemotherapy treatments at the Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo.

Though she is now in remission, she will be under treatment until December, Rev. Paulson said.

"Lisa's medical bills have been tremendous," he added, "and due to a technicality she and her husband were temporarily not covered under insurance, and since the illness have not been able to get coverage for the illness."

A number of Lutheran churches are having fund raising projects to help Mrs. Morgan and her husband, Donnie, pay medical expenses, Rev. Paulson explained. The Aid Association for Lutherans is matching all funds raised.

Mrs. Morgan attended junior high and high school in Pampa, graduating in 1978. She was a member of the PHS Harvester Band and participated in other activities.

She is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Timothy Koenig, now living in Brownsville. Rev. Koenig was minister of Zion Lutheran Church here for a number of years.

Contributions to the Lisa Koenig Morgan Medical Fund may be sent to Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, Pampa, TX 79065.

Hodgkins disease affects the functioning of the lymph system, which provides a special fluid flowing through specific vessels and passing through the filter of the lymph glands before entering the blood stream.

The disease has four stages. If caught in the first or second stages, radiation treatments are usually all that is needed to get rid of the disease. After that, chemotherapy by the use of drugs is necessary. Unfortunately, there are no symptoms for the disease until the last stages. These include lowered resistance to disease (colds and flu, for example), fever, night sweats and swollen glands.

"I was diagnosed in the fourth stage of the disease," Mrs. Morgan said.

"I receive a total of eight different chemicals: four at one time, and the other four the next time, alternating between the two regimens each time," she said.

The drugs have many side effects, including nausea and vomiting, loss of appetite and weight, hair loss, mouth and stomach ulcers, and body rashes and itching.

"Fortunately, I have lost only about 50 percent of my hair. Total hair loss occurs in 98 to 99 percent of all chemotherapy patients, so I am really lucky," she said. "My hair has begun to grow back. I have little one inch hairs sticking up through the rest of my hair all over my head."

"Most of the side effects are not severe enough for me to limit my normal activities, except for the two or three days immediately following a treatment. The doctor says this is due to my age and my generally good health before the treatments began," she explained.

The drugs are given intravenously, most often in a vein in the top of the hand. This causes problems, however. The veins frequently become blackened, weak and unuseable. When it has been determined that a patient can benefit from the procedure, a catheter (or small tube) is threaded into a much larger, stronger vein near the collar bone on either side of the body. It is then sutured in place and can remain for weeks or months at a time, requiring only regular dressing changes and daily flushing with an anticoagulant (blood thinner).

"Donnie has learned to do both of these procedures and does them for me at home," Mrs. Morgan said.

Drugs can then be given directly into the catheter rather than starting a new IV each time.

"I have had such a catheter since January," she said.

She takes treatments two or three times a month at the Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo.

"The treatments have been successful and should be finished by Christmas time. Ironic, because we found out I had the disease the day before Christmas last year," she added.

Despite the success in treatments, however, large medical expenses have been incurred, beyond the couple's ability to pay currently.

Dallas area drivers may face expensive auto pollution tests

DALLAS (AP) - New guidelines probably will be announced by late September that may require drivers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to undergo expensive inspections to reduce the pollutants emitted by their vehicles, city and federal officials say.

The new requirements will be issued by the Environment Protection Agency, the Dallas Times Herald said Wednesday.

In anticipation of the EPA action and the expected resistance from citizens, Dallas officials have begun planning inspection and maintenance procedures that would make it more difficult to tamper with pollution equipment or make changes that would allow a vehicle to use leaded fuel, the Times Herald said.

"It's a good beginning," EPA spokesman Roger Meacham said. "They are planning for the future. It is likely Dallas will have to have an I-M program of some kind. What exactly it will be is not clear."

The program for inspections and maintenance could involve tailpipe emissions testing, tampering inspections, misfueling checks or a combination of these, officials said.

The EPA is considering a mandated program as a way to reduce hydrocarbon and nitrogen oxide emissions, which form ozone when they react with sunlight, officials said. Ozone is an odorless, colorless gas that causes respiratory problems.

Under the federal Clean Air Act, cities and counties are required to meet air quality standards for ozone, carbon monoxide, sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides and particulates or dust.

The EPA last February proposed loss of federal highway grants, bans on construction, and other sanctions against counties - such as Dallas and Tarrant - that failed to meet its standards.

EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus announced June that such sanctions would not be imposed against areas, such as Dallas, that were making a good faith effort to comply.

Meacham said since an estimated 70 percent of the ozone that forms in the Dallas area is from automobile emissions, it follows that the EPA would concentrate its efforts in that area.

Michael Morris, a transportation planner with the North Central Texas Council of Governments, said it no longer is a question of whether the EPA will require automobiles in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to undergo stricter pollution inspections, but how strict the program will be.

"The key to it is the detection method," he said.

The most effective and expensive program is a tailpipe emissions test, he said. New Jersey requires this type of inspection yearly. Under New Jersey's system, if a car exhausts too dirty, repairs must be made before an inspection sticker is issued.

Other programs require visual inspections for tampering or tests for misfiring. The visual inspection is designed to prevent removal of pollution equipment such as catalytic converters.

The misfueling tests detect damage to pollution equipment from the improper use of leaded fuel.

Demo breakfast set Saturday

A "Dutch treat" breakfast for Gray County Democrats will be held at 8 a.m. Saturday in Pampa's Coronado Inn Restaurant, according to county chairman Robert Wood.

State Representative Foster Whaley and State Senator Bill Sarpaulis are among the officials expected to attend, Wood said. Brief statements on legislative and political matters will be made during the breakfast, which will kick off a Panhandle tour.

Other planned stops on the tour include Borger, Dumas, Hereford, Tulla and Plainview. Wood said all local Democrats are invited to both the breakfast and tour.

Persons interested in attending the breakfast should contact Wood at 665-1936.

Big nuclear project in Texas on schedule

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) - A nuclear project whose price tag has jumped more than five fold during a decade of nagging problems finally is "moving along on schedule, on budget and according to plan," an official said.

Dan Jordan, president of Houston Lighting & Power Co., praised the 5,700-member construction team of the South Texas Nuclear project at a ceremony Wednesday to mark the completion of construction of the Unit 1 reactor dome.

Exterior concrete work on the first reactor building was completed two months ahead of schedule, Jordan said.

About 3,500 workers in hard hats clapped, whistled and cheered as a 15-foot evergreen tree was perched atop the 250-foot-high reactor dome for a few minutes.

Jordan noted that critics of the project have said it never would be completed, or would not produce electricity at reasonable cost.

"We don't believe there's ever been a better team put together than this one," he told the construction force.

The nuclear project was expected to cost $1 billion when began 10 years but its price tag has now been put at $5.5 billion.

In addition to HL&P, which is the project manager and biggest shareholder, the project is owned by the city-owned San Antonio and Austin power systems and Central Power and Light Co. of Corpus Christi.

The construction force was rebuilt almost from scratch after HL&P dropped Brown & Root as the designer-builder of the project in late delinquent loan of $826,268 from a private lender, according to Pat Sultenfuss, an agency loan officer in Temple, Connecticut General Life Insurance Company had threatened to sell the ranch before the FHA bought off the company's note, Sultenfuss said.

Loans and interest Price owed the FHA in May totaled $1.7 million.

Next to collect and third lien holder is the SBA, the agency that is forcing the sale of the ranch.

Hurt said the agency hopes to sell the ranch for at least enough to pay back the loans to the FHA and the first of the two loans granted by the SBA.

All lenders in line to collect after the first three liens are satisfied may be out of luck in getting a piece of the ranch pie, Hurt and Gilbert said.

"If somebody's behind us, they better get worried," Gilbert said.

Private satellite launches set

WASHINGTON (AP) - A series of three satellites to collect data on the Earth's food, energy and water resources are being planned by a commercial venture that includes a firm that launched the first private rocket.

Beginning in 1986, the commercial venture known as Space America plans to launch three sensing satellites at two-year intervals that will make polar orbits 575 miles above Earth, the group announced Wednesday.

"We have gone from a suborbital flight a year ago to a point where we have, essentially, an all-up system ... ready to go into production," said retired astronaut Donald K. Slayton, head of Space Services Inc. of America, a Houston firm that launched a test rocket from a coastal island in Texas last year.

Space America hopes to produce natural resources data more cheaply

Correction

The identification published under a photo in Monday's Pampa News was incorrect.

The next lender behind the SBA that has a lien on the ranch is the Borger bank. Price's outstanding loans to bank total about $600,000, according to a source who asked not to be identified.

Panhandle Bank & Trust might protect its interest by bidding at the auction and buying off the SBA lien, Gilbert said.

After PBT, the next lien holder is again the SBA for its second loan to Price. That lien position is so far down the line, the agency doesn't expect the ranch auction to pay it off.

And several lien holders wait in line after the SBA. The title records at the county clerk's office list more than a dozen loans using the ranch as collateral.

The county records do not show any payments or settlements of past loans on the property. But a partial listing of past or present lien holders includes:

The FHA, SBA, Western Lease Banc. Inc., Patagonia Leasing Company, Floyd Cockrell, Eunice Pierson, Federal Land Bank of Houston, J.W. Campbell, Systems Leasing Company Ltd., Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, Rogers Drilling Company, Panhandle Bank & Trust Company, Malouf Abraham, Harold D. Courson and J.B. Vegle Jr.

The Gray County records only record liens issued since 1981 and may not list all liens on the Price property, Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said.

The Price ranch, about 14 miles northwest of Pampa, extends across parts of four counties, Gray, Carson, Roberts and Hutchinson Counties.

The source said Texas' homestead law may allow the former politician to hang on to 200 acres of the ranch property, despite the SBA action. A bankruptcy pleading might also stall off the scheduled sale, the source said.

Before he tried to sell the ranch, Price asked friends in Washington for an appointment to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the government agency that regulates all commodities trading in the United States. The appointment was never offered to the former congressman. He later blamed his troubles with the ranch sale for his failure to receive the new government job.

Price, a Republican served in Congress from 1967 to 1975 and in the Texas Senate from 1978 to 1980.

Chamber breakfast to feature Whaley

The Legislative Affairs Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce will sponsor an Eggs and Issues breakfast at 7 a.m. Sept. 15 with State Rep. Foster Whaley.

The buffet breakfast will be held in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn, with the public invited.

Rep. Whaley will be discussing events in the past legislative session and the upcoming proposed special session, Roy Sparkman, committee chairman, said.

Whaley will also discuss Texas legislative affairs, with a question and answer session following his talk.

Tickets are $4.50 per person and are available at the Chamber office.

'Sage of the Southwest' C of C banquet speaker

Dr. W. C. Newberry, the "Sage of the Southwest," will be the featured speaker for the annual meeting of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, Oct. 20, in the Heritage Room at M. K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

A reception will begin at 6:30 p.m., with the banquet starting at 7:15 p.m.

Due to limited seating capacity, Chamber members have first opportunity to purchase tickets, currently on sale. Any remaining tickets will go on sale to the public on Sept. 23, according to Ed Sweet, Chamber president.

Dr. Newberry received his bachelor of science degree in physical education at Southwest Texas State University, his master of education from Stephen F. Austin University and his doctorate of educational administration from the University of Texas. He currently is professor of educational philosophy at Southwest Texas State.

In addition to being a football and baseball coach for 10 years and a public administrator for three years, Dr. Newberry also has been a rat poisoner, grave digger and tree-top cutter, he claims.

He has spoken in 41 states while delivering over 1500 speeches to all types of audiences, Sweet said.

"Dr. Newberry is a strong believer in the importance of freedom for individuals to develop," Sweet said. Dr. Newberry also believes "the pursuit of happiness is impossible without freedom. His hobby is observing other people and creatures." Sweet added.

Tickets for the catered meal are $12 per person.

Former sheriff's deputy says he 'tried to help' the prisoners

HOUSTON (AP) — A former deputy sheriff said he once hit a prisoner with a blackjack in self defense, but denied he ever tortured anyone brought in for questioning about a crime.

"The only way I violated their rights was to try to help them," said former San Jacinto County sheriff's deputy Carl Lee. "I was trying to keep them straight."

Lee, former sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker and former deputies Floyd Baker and John Glover are accused in federal court of violating the civil rights of prisoners who said they were shackled, beaten and water-tortured.

Lee testified Wednesday he hit James Hicks, 33, with a blackjack on the side of the face after he heard Hicks "severely cursing" Baker and after Hicks spit in Lee's face and kicked him in the groin.

"I hit him because he attacked me," Lee said of Hicks.

Hicks testified Tuesday he was shackled, beat and water tortured by Lee and Baker.

Lee, the first defendant to take the witness stand in the case, also testified he had never heard Parker or Glover threaten or abuse prisoners.

Lee, Parker, Glover and Baker are accused in a six-count indictment of depriving people of liberty without due process of law and with conspiring to violate civil rights.

The case is set to continue Friday after a recess today because of the Jewish holiday.

Also Wednesday, the attorney for a former jail inmate who testified that San Jacinto officers nearly drowned him in a torture session said the defendant never told him about the alleged abuse.

Conroe lawyer J. Ritchie Field, who represented Vernell Harkless in two burglary cases in 1977, said his client never mentioned water torture.

But a defense lawyer for Baker conceded such treatment "was used not only in San Jacinto County but in others in East Texas."

In a statement to jurors as defense attorneys began presenting witnesses, defense lawyer Ed Mallett said such treatment was reserved for serious criminals and used only to recover stolen property.

Field said he might not have allowed Harkless to enter guilty pleas to the two offenses if he had thought "some sort of coercion was involved."

Harkless testified Sept. 1 that lawmen handcuffed him to a chair, covered his face with a towel and doused his head with water until he "thought he was going to suffocate to death." Four other men told of similar incidents during the prosecution phase of the trial.

Harkless testified there were three such treatments during two days while he was a prisoner in the Walker County jail in September 1976. He said Parker, Glover, Walker County Sheriff Darrell White and two other deputies were present.

White testified Wednesday he authorized San Jacinto County lawmen to visit Harkless, but said he did not accompany them.

Harkless eventually pleaded guilty to charges in San Jacinto County, receiving two years' probation on one count and a year in jail for a misdemeanor charge reduced from a felony, Field said.

Field said that at the time, Harkless faced "30 to 40 home burglary charges" in East Texas.

Because of that, Field said it was his impression that Harkless "wouldn't get this kind of deal except the sheriff had taken a liking to him." Field said he had seen Harkless in the jail before, where he was performing a variety of tasks, and assumed he was a civilian employee because of his freedom.

Mallett, representing Baker, conceded water treatment was used in San Jacinto County, but told jurors his client did "only what he had to do under the law."

Tom Taylor, who is representing Parker, told the jury in his opening statement that he planned to attack the credibility of prosecution witnesses using three arguments, including allegations of perjury.

Taylor said all witnesses who testified they were tortured by Parker or his deputies had criminal records.

"Some of the things you heard are just not true," Taylor said.

Federal authorities say at least 15 people may have undergone water torture in San Jacinto County between 1976 and 1982.

Parker pleaded guilty to similar charges in March but the plea was withdrawn after a federal judge ruled the sentence agreed upon in a plea bargaining arrangement was too lenient.

On death row

Inmates are worried and upset about fate of fellow prisoner

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas death row inmates say they are upset about the imminent execution of a fellow prisoner, saddened by the death of a Mississippi inmate and worried that people will become oblivious to the death sentence.

James David Autry, 28, last week was ordered by a state judge to die before dawn Oct. 5. Autry, the only one of 178 Texas death row inmates with a scheduled execution date, was convicted of killing a Port Arthur convenience store clerk rather than pay for a six-pack of beer in 1980.

"We feel really awful about it," inmate Billy Hughes said Wednesday. "We're very concerned about him but don't see much hope unless something dramatic happens. The state has been pushing to get him for a long time."

Many inmates are trying not to think about Autry's fate, said Thomas Andy Barefoot, convicted in the slaying of a Harker Heights policeman.

"Most people tried to look away from it. It makes them nervous in a sense. It's a feeling kind of like the one you get in a dentist's chair while waiting to have a tooth pulled — only magnified 100 times," said Barefoot, who came within 12 hours last January of being put to death.

"It's an unknown. You know the truth about what it's going to be, but you don't know if it will be," he said. "Looking back, the hardest time will be the week before (the execution date)."

Autry's execution date was set less than one day before Jimmy Lee Gray was put to death Friday in Mississippi's gas chamber. Gray was executed for the slaying of a 3-year-old girl he kidnapped, raped and killed.

"I started praying for him at 11 p.m. on that night and continued until I heard he was dead," Barefoot said. "I don't condone what he was accused of doing, but I didn't look at it that way. I looked at it from the point of view that he was a human being and no one deserves to die."

Hughes, who was convicted of killing a state trooper, said Texas prisoners were upset by Gray's death.

"They were shocked and hurt because it didn't seem to get much attention. They're scared that people are getting used to executions and that soon they'll be just a normal part of the day's news like freeway accidents," he said.

Hearing examiner delays opening of Ma Bell's rate increase case

AUSTIN (AP) — Wrestling with Southwestern Bell's complicated rate case is about as exact a process as "trying to nail Jell-O to the wall," says an assistant attorney general fighting the $1.7 billion request.

But Geoffrey Gay's argument in favor of throwing the case out was rejected Wednesday by Public Utility Commission Examiner Jacqueline Holmes. However, she did agree to postpone the hearing by 13 days.

Opening day is now set for Oct. 24. If granted, the rate hike would triple monthly residential bills for basic telephone service.

Gay said the Bell request is "vague" and "incomplete." Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence acknowledged that all the numbers aren't in, but he said they will be by Sept. 26.

"I say it's time to go ahead and get started," Lawrence said.

The rate request is complicated by the court-ordered American Telephone and Telegraph Co. divestiture, which is effective Jan. 1. Gay said AT&T and Bell are trying to get all parties in the case to "march to the beat of the doomsday drum."

"It's appropriate for the commission to slow this case down," he argued.

Ms. Holmes, saying she was not "listening to Bell's doomsday drums," said there was sufficient information on file to begin the revenue deficiency portion of the hearing on Oct. 24. The rate design portion will begin on Dec. 5.

Revenue deficiency is the amount of money a utility company says it needs. Rate design is the process of determining which customers should cover the increase.

Gay complained that Bell's request is partially based on "future test year" data. State law requires rate requests to be based on historic data.

"It's a speculative case," he said. "It's like trying to nail Jell-O to the wall."

But Lawrence said the major changes in the telephone industry make it necessary to use projected data.

"It would be totally inappropriate to ignore the changes that are happening in this industry," he said. "We don't want to look backward because that's not the way the world is going to be."

Consumers Union, Texas ACORN and the League of United Latin-American Citizens had asked for a 60-day delay in the hearing.

Jim Boyle, utility counsel in charge of representing residential and small commercial consumers, said there was "absolutely no way" he could be ready for the case by Oct. 11, the previously set opening day.

Lucas vows 'they'll never get me to trial'

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — A drifter who claimed to have killed 100 women in 16 states and later tried to commit suicide told that he'll never be brought to trial.

"They won't get me to trial. I can promise that," former mental patient Henry Lee Lucas told the Wichita Falls Record-News during a recess in a pre-trial hearing Wednesday.

"If I had my way, I wouldn't be here now," the 47-year-old drifter said, holding up his bandaged left wrist, the result of a suicide attempt in jail Sunday in which he slashed himself with a broken light bulb.

"I'll never make it to trial. I done told them that," Lucas said.

Lucas, who is charged with the murders of six Texas women and four women in other states, sat passively in the Montague County courtroom Wednesday as his court-appointed attorney, Don Maxfield of Wichita Falls, sought to suppress the numerous statements Lucas has given law enforcement officers about women he says he has killed.

State District Judge Frank Douthitt ordered the hearing continued today.

Douthitt said Wednesday he would probably order a change of venue in Lucas' case because of pre-trial news coverage. But he postponed a hearing on that move, scheduled for Wednesday, until Sept. 14.

Lucas pleaded innocent after he was charged here with the slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich of Ringgold. His car was found abandoned near Needles, Calif., a few days after he and Mrs. Rich disappeared in September 1982 from Montague County.

Maxfield said authorities violated Lucas' rights by questioning him repeatedly from Oct. 18 to Oct. 24, 1982 without his having appeared before a magistrate. Maxfield said that violated the Texas Criminal Code, which requires that a suspect be brought "without undue delay" before a magistrate.

Lucas' attorney also seeks to have a search warrant used to look at Lucas' car last year invalidated.

Lucas was indicted Tuesday by a Fort Bend County grand jury in Richmond in the stabbing death of Deion Marie Wilkinson. The body of Ms. Wilkinson, who was 22, was found March 4, 1981 under the Brazos River bridge near Richmond.

Lucas led authorities about two weeks ago to the scene where the nude body was found.

He was convicted in 1960 in Michigan of murder in the death of his 74-year-old mother, Viola Lucas, and served 10 years in a Michigan prison and mental hospital for that slaying.

Residents decide to sell hamlet to developer

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas developer has succeeded in buying 90 percent of the town of Buckingham, which had seen its rural lifestyle surrounded by Dallas' urban sprawl in the past decade.

A majority of Buckingham's 60 land owners agreed Tuesday to sell to Dallas land developer Michael Block and his partner, WenClay International.

The town was less than a quarter of a section. It sits about a mile northeast of the sprawling Texas Instruments plant in north Dallas and is surrounded on one side by Dallas and on the other by Richardson.

Buckingham incorporated in the 1950s to avoid annexation. Its 1980 population was 159.

Residents had turned down two previous offers to buy their property since early 1982. The price of $6 that Block offered was twice what another developer proposed to pay a year ago. Block will pay $40 million for the 135 acres — out of 150 total acres — that he's buying.

"Everyone who decided to sell has done quite well," Bob O'Donnell, a resident and former mayor, told the Dallas Times Herald. "People who bought two acres and a home 10 years ago for $55,000 will end up getting around $550,000 out of the deal."

The buyers will find themselves in the unusual position, as developers, of owning almost all of the incorporated town, which had a 1980 population of 159.

"There won't be that much in city government that will be a problem to them," O'Donnell said.

C.W. Kendall III, a real estate broker who worked almost a year on pulling the deal together, said no detailed development plans have been drawn up. But he said the property will have a mixture of residential, retail and office development.

"Buckingham is a town that has grown up and aged with its children," O'Donnell said. "But to keep the kind of lifestyle that made it attractive to us is something that's no longer realistic."

About one of every four residents now in Buckingham are tenants, he said. "Some of the children have inherited the homesteads from their parents, but instead of living on it themselves they rent it out and hang onto it as an investment."

The possibility of selling the town originated in early 1982

when developer Jim Christian approached a number of property owners and city officials with the idea of building a small retail center.

O'Donnell said that idea was rejected, but the fact that it was considered caught the attention of the Lincoln Property Co., whose offer was rejected last year after a series of town meetings.

About two months after the offer from Lincoln Property Co. was turned down, Kendall and broker Tim McNamara contacted the Buckingham homeowners group about Block's proposal.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Conservatives' action puzzling

It is disappointing, even a little disheartening, to see ostensibly conservative groups entering the fray with arguments and apologies for continued government regulation and intervention into the economy. When the agency involved is making an internal effort to deregulate on its own, and when technology has advanced to the point that there isn't the faintest shred of justification for continued government regulation, conservative resistance to such healthy changes is doubly distressing.

It comes to politics rather than principle, of course. Leaders of Accuracy in Media, the Conservative Caucus, American Legal Foundation and the American Business Media Council have long contended that most electronic media are notable for a "liberal" bias and for unfair treatment of conservative candidates and causes. There's something to be said for the contention. And there's little doubt that the existence of government regulation, most notably the FCC's misnamed "fairness doctrine" and its administrative corollaries, give conservative groups a handy club with which to beat their adversaries in the media.

The FCC hasn't yet been so sensible as to repeal the "fairness doctrine" entirely, but it has repealed rules that require a broadcaster who makes a "personal attack" on an individual to provide him with a transcript and a "free opportunity to respond, and that require stations that endorse candidates to give all other candidates "free" response time. The groups named above are opposing these slight relaxations of the rules.

What's curious about the conservatives' move is that it implicitly endorses explicitly socialist assumptions about the nature of broadcasting.

It is an accident of history and bureaucratic exploitation of circumstances that broadcasting has been regulated by the federal government since the 1920s rather than, like newspapers, being protected from such regulation by the First Amendment.

Operating on the false assumption that without government control radio stations would never be able to restrain themselves from "stepping on" one another's signals, legislators formulated the curious doctrine that the airwaves belonged to "the public" (i.e., the government) and that government must allocate operating frequencies to prevent chaos. One power led to another, of course, with the result that electronic journalism grew up as a government - controlled entity rather than enjoying the First Amendment freedoms the Constitution guaranteed for the print media. From the standpoint of those who take personal liberty or the Constitution seriously, of course, it's an intolerable situation.

You'd think conservatives would have noticed that the media they most often (and most justifiably) accuse of being biased are precisely those operating under government control. Government control gives conservatives media watchdog groups opportunities to file actions and issue news releases, but it hasn't made the electronic media notably fairer. Indeed, a good case can be made that government control, by throwing roadblocks in the way of wide - open discussions on the electronic media contributed to the bias and superficiality many perceive in television news coverage.

The "fairness doctrine" has not ensured fairness nor has it helped conservatives. It is puzzling to see conservatives defending this anachronistic intrusion into what passes for journalism in the electronic media.

Lebanon's dream is fading away

By PAUL GREENBERG

There are times when the history of the Middle East's peoples might make the Book of Job sound like a musical comedy.

Another dream is dying this week - that of a Lebanon where people of diverse creeds would live together in peace. The Lebanese may survive but Lebanon itself remains a fiction despite a long year's struggle to revive it. One can tell the dream is almost gone because of the insistent voices of the diplomats saying it isn't.

The Israeli withdrawal to the south of Lebanon, it is explained over and over, doesn't mean a partition of the country; it is but a stage in Lebanon's reunification. That has to be said over and over because it certainly looks as if the Israelis have tired of sacrificing lives for a reborn, united Lebanon and are settling for their own section of the country. It would balance Syria's in the North and East, the enclave held by the small international force around the Beirut airport, and the vacuum that will now be left for the Druse, the Phalangists, and the rest of the multitudinous Lebanese militias to fight over. All that stands between what's left of Lebanon and more chaos is that still thin illusion, the Lebanese army, which for the moment is more phantom than force.

While Israeli diplomats speak of an eventual independent Lebanon, the Israeli press is predicting a bloodbath between Druse and Christians in the central mountains once Israeli troops no longer can keep the two apart. That may be only the overture to an endless danse macabre. In a classified memorandum that has just come to light, officials of the State Department report a rise in "serious threats to life and freedom for many Palestinians in Lebanon solely because they are Palestinians." The memo estimates that the new if largely nominal government of Lebanon regards only about 100,000 of the 400,000 Palestinians camped there as legal residents. Conclusion: "This therefore leaves about 300,000 Palestinians who are unwanted in Lebanon by that government."

That government may have its own methods of persuading the Palestinians to leave. Those methods were revealed a year ago when the Phalangists - the leading party in Lebanon's government - were given free rein in the Palestinian campus near Beirut. The massacre that ensued was the beginning of Israeli disillusionment with their Phalangist allies. The party that was supposed to lead the new, unified Lebanon had begun its administration with an atrocity of appalling dimensions even by Lebanese standards. The Phalangists then proceeded to march into the Shouf Mountains, provoking the Druse there. The Israelis, with loyal Druse of their own, were not about to sanction that, either. Israel now has forced the Phalangists to quit south Lebanon, where they had begun to harass the Moslem population. But they may soon be free to turn against the Palestinians.

With three out of every four Palestinians unwanted in Lebanon, how long before they are encouraged to leave by a series of massacres? Then there are the Lebanese Moslems - who have their own revenge to take against the Palestinians after long years of abuse by the Palestine Liquidation Organization, which is busy liquidating itself. And so the endless cycle of retaliation in this culture of revenge continues, creating ever new victims to be avenged. The outlook for the Palestinians still in Lebanon, hundreds of thousands of them, is less than bright.

Where are they to go? To quote the State Department's masterful understatement, "there is considerable reluctance on the part of virtually every Arab state to accept the Palestinians." For years various Arab states, despite their rhetoric about One Arab Nation, refused to absorb the Palestinians. They were much more useful as objects of pity and propaganda. Once again they are to be left to the mercy of the infidel. The result already begins to take shape. As this State Department memo says of the Palestinians in Lebanon, "at least half live under very poor and dangerous conditions, in or near refugee camps; many have been confronted by a drastic increase in threats to their lives."

The Israelis cannot be expected to accept 300,000 more Palestinians on the already volatile West Bank, certainly not in the absence of a peace treaty that would assure Israeli's security. The authors of this memo proposed that the U.S. consider admitting up to 10,000 Palestinian refugees, but that idea was mixed even before it got to the secretary of state. "Impractical," officials said, meaning it would be opposed both by partisans of Israel and by Arab nationalists who would say it was a conspiracy to disperse the Palestinian people.

Not wanted in Lebanon, the Palestinians would seem to have nowhere else to go. The Middle East abounds not only with revenge but irony: the clearest historical parallel to the Palestinians' plight may be that of Europe's Jews who were seeking refuge, anywhere, in the 1930s.

Now is the time to organize an international rescue mission, or at least an international conference that would demand an end to the Palestinians' homelessness by insisting on Lebanese citizenship for some, by shaming the Arab state into accepting others, by calling on other nations to take their share. But there seems little interest in actually doing anything other than expressing the hollow hope that everything will work out. Later, perhaps, the world will offer sympathy.

Meanwhile, the endless tragedy goes on, act after act. Perhaps the history of the Palestinians could best be summed up by a verse attributed to Al - Mu'tadid, last of the Abbasid caliphs:

And forth they went imploring God for rain:
"My tears," I said, "could serve you for a flood."
"In truth," they cried, "your tears might well contain Sufficiency, but they are dyed with blood."

Pets great companions for elderly

By RUSTY BROWN

My friend, Helen, is a spunky 70 - year old who loves cats. She came awfully close to losing the pleasure of their company.

Sometimes when I phone her, she's propped up in bed, watching TV. "The kittens are all on my stomach," she chortles, "washing each other's faces. It's a scream."

And any time I go to see her, Buddy, Mickey and Ginger put on a show: tearing around the room, boxing or tumbling over each other, legs and paws entwined. Even the placid older cat, Dolly the Duchess, swishes her tail for the younglings to swat, then gives them an ill - tempered smack.

Helen talks to her felines, of course, alternately scolding them for their high jinks, or holding them up, one by one, to cuddle and stroke. "They follow me like dogs," she says. She is obviously pleased with their attention, their uncritical adoration and affection.

And why not? The circle of friends her age is dwindling. Few stop by to visit, and Helen's car is getting cranky and often refuses to take her out. The hours would be long and lonely were it not for the madcap cats whose softness and love are always within reach.

A month ago, Helen moved from the home she lived in 22 years. The cost of repairs and upkeep had long ago out - paced her Social Security check.

As if the trauma of the move weren't enough, she faced a crisis with her cats. Most apartments she looked at or called about wouldn't take pets. One apartment owner said she could move in - if she made a non - refundable deposit of $100 per cat. But mostly, her pleas elicited nothing more than cold, firm no's.

With her moving date just days away, she finally found a remodeled duplex inn an older part of town owned by a cat - respecting landlord. "Sure," he said, "you can bring your pets."

Now, at last, Helen and her cats are settled in and purring again.

My friend knows how lucky she is, and that many other women have had to sacrifice their beloved friends when they made similar moves.

Yet, much has been written lately claiming pets are immensely beneficial for the elderly. Pets are said to reduce loneliness and depression, even lengthen life. They help people cope with day - to - day frustrations.

It has been reported that stroking and talking to a pet lowers blood pressure; that victims of heart disease who have pets survive longer than those without.

Realizing all this, more and more nursing homes are providing pets, either temporarily or permanently, for their residents. Most of the world, it seems, is convinced that pets are a plus. All except apartment owners, that is. And we all know why.

Encouraging news on both sides of the question, however, may be just ahead.

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D - N.Y., has introduced legislation to forbid pet bans in federally funded housing for the elderly and handicapped. The measure has passed the House and is expected to pass the Senate when it reconvenes in September. California and Arizona, incidentally, have already passed similar legislation and measures are pending in other states.

But apartment owners aren't about to let sleeping dogs lie: They may offset their predicted defeat with requirements that pets be neutered, regularly vaccinated and licensed. Renters may have to put up a refundable deposit to cover pet damage, and it may be that a favorable reference from a previous landlord also will be expected.

None of these requirements seem too harsh or unreasonable. They are a small price to pay for the love of a devoted companion.

I know my friend Helen agrees with that.

Don't kill yourself until...

By PAUL HARVEY

The suicide rate for boys 10 to 14 tripled and the suicide rate for girls doubled in the past 30 years.

Suicide is now the tenth leading cause of death in the U.S. Americans are killing themselves 75 a day; schoolagers 13 a day.

Drugs are a factor. But other drugs may help prevent suicide.

In Memphis a "mood clinic" is seeking to "treat the symptoms" of suicide with antidepressant drugs. The clinic has treated thousands of patients and - cross your fingers - not one has killed himself.

The approach to the problem in the 1950s was to "talk them out of it." Counselors staffed thousands of suicide prevention centers around the nation; they manned "hot line" telephones.

More recently, biomedical scientists have sought to correct chemical imbalance in the brain with drugs.

Both disciplines have contributed to a better understanding of the subject:

Women are three times more likely to try but men are three times more likely to succeed.

The suicide rate is highest in April and May, lowest in December (except for the few days around Christmas).

Most suicides use guns.

And nearly all suicides are planned. They are not impulsive acts. There is a period of deliberation and contemplation during which counseling and - or drugs may help.

The correlation between clinical depression and suicide is increasingly evidenced. In the autopsied brains of people who kill themselves there is a notable deficiency of serotonin - a compound which transmits signals between nerve cells in the brain.

Frederick Goodwin of the National Institute of Mental Health says "the biomedical factors are of overwhelming importance."

Doctors have already found three commercially available drugs useful in treating depression. Lithium carbonate, one of the three, has been available for 20 years.

So now both the biomedical and talk - therapy approaches to suicide prevention are plowing the same field.

Our expanded research - though may believe it is not expanding fast enough - has taught us symptoms to watch for and even techniques for self - help.

Because far and away more people kill themselves "at night" when "everything appears darkest," psychiatrists and psychologists are counseling patients suffering depression never to make any major decision at night.

If all who contemplate killing themselves would "wait until morning" a very large percentage - possibly more than half - wouldn't.

Support for Moscow flight boycott spreads

By The Associated Press
 Support is growing among Western pilots for a boycott of Moscow-bound flights to protest the downing of a South Korean jetliner as the attack continues to prompt widespread demonstrations.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, scheduled to meet today with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, said U.S.-Soviet relations could worsen unless the Soviets provide a more candid account of what happened.

But Gromyko on Wednesday maintained the South Korean Boeing 747 "tried to escape" Soviet air space and ignored orders to land. He called Soviet borders "sacred," and reiterated Moscow's contention that the airliner was on a spy mission for the United States — a claim denied by U.S. and South Korean officials.

Shultz and Gromyko are attending the 35-nation Madrid Conference on European Security and Cooperation.

The Soviets reportedly stepped up their search for the plane's wreckage today. A Japanese Maritime Safety Agency patrol boat reported sighting 55 Soviet vessels in Soviet waters off Sakhalin, including a Soviet intelligence ship that tossed two cables from its stern into the sea, agency officials said.

It was unclear whether the intelligence ship, the 720-ton Okean, had discovered the crash site or material from the missile-downed aircraft, said officials at the northern Japanese port of Hokkaido.

They said 43 Soviet fishing boats were spotted drifting near the Okean about 18 miles northwest of Moneron, a small Soviet island off Sakhalin. Another 11 Soviet guardships and fishing vessels were situated about a mile closer to Moneron, the officials said.

Japanese, U.S. and South Korean vessels barred from entering Soviet waters are pressing their search in international waters, but so far have found no trace of the plane.

In Ottawa, hundreds of angry Korean Canadians chanted "Soviet murderers" outside the barricaded Soviet Embassy, pelting it with eggs and trying to storm it Wednesday. In New York, nearly 1,000 protesters clashed with riot-helmeted police near a Soviet diplomatic mission.

By Wednesday night, airline pilots in Britain, Canada, Denmark and Sweden had announced they will join a 60-day boycott of flights to Moscow, called for by the International Federation of Airline Pilots.

Spokesmen for pilots' groups in France, West Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Italy, Belgium and Luxembourg indicated they probably would join the boycott. In Switzerland, pilots of the national airline Swissair are seeking government permission for a boycott. And Australian pilots have refused to fly Soviet diplomats within Australia for 60 days. Qantas, Australia's international carrier, does not fly to Moscow.

Flights by the Soviet airline Aeroflot have been suspended for 60 days in Canada, and NATO countries are considering similar sanctions. The United States has barred Aeroflot landings since 1981, when martial law was imposed in Poland.

Japan's top Cabinet ministers, headed by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, decided at an emergency meeting Wednesday that Japan would continue to apply "maximum pressure" on Moscow to provide a true accounting of the air tragedy, but stopped short of announcing sanctions.

The Foreign Ministry also reacted strongly late Wednesday to Soviet charges of "criminal carelessness" by Japan for not warning the airliner that it had entered Soviet space.

Soviet Ambassador to Japan Vladimir Pavlov was called into the ministry Wednesday night and told Japanese officials were unaware of the plane's location until after it was shot down.

Protestors boycott vodka and reprogram video games

By The Associated Press
 Chanting demonstrators clashed with police outside a Soviet mission, a video arcade filled its games with anti-Soviet messages, and eight states campaigned against Russian vodka as outrage mounted over the shooting down of a Korean jet with 269 people aboard.

U.S. publishers announced a boycott of the Moscow Book Fair, but longshoremen who refused to unload vodka and lumber from a Soviet vessel because of the attack on the passenger jet by a Soviet fighter plane Sept. 1 did not plan to interfere with unloading by other workers today, a Los Angeles port official said Wednesday.

Protesters chanting "We want to kill them" stormed a police barricade near the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York Wednesday after a largely peaceful demonstration by Korean-Americans. The handful who clashed with police were among a crowd of nearly 1,000 involved in the demonstration organized by the Korean-American Association of New York, which claims to represent 150,000 people.

The scuffle, in which one protester was bloodied and two police slightly hurt, followed a prayer vigil and march to honor the 269 victims of the attack. During the vigil, a coffin-like box was draped with a banner bearing the names of the victims. The box was carried on a 20-block march from the U.N. to the Soviet mission.

Three video games at the University Arcade in Austin, Texas, have been reprogrammed with anti-Soviet messages following the attack.

"Robotron" now urges players to save the human race from the "Communist mutant from outer space, Andropov," a reference to Soviet President Yuri Andropov. "Stargate" players score points by hitting "aggressive Soviet ships." A third game gives a message at the start of play: "Russia: We want answers and an apology."

As of Wednesday, eight states — Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Montana, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Ohio and Virginia — had agreed to ban or voluntarily boycott Russian vodka.

Pennsylvania officials said they will propose a ban Sept. 14 at a Liquor Control Board meeting.

West Virginia has banned purchase of Russian vodka since the 1979 Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

In New Mexico, the director of the Los Alamos National Laboratory said all official travel to the Soviet Union by the lab's scientists was prohibited for safety and political reasons.

The Moscow Circus announced it was canceling its Canadian tour after officials in Toronto, Vancouver, Halifax, Calgary and Winnipeg called off performances. The Atlanta Ballet canceled its October tour of Moscow and Leningrad.

Tryggvi McDonald, son of Rep. Larry McDonald, the Georgia congressman who was killed in the attack, addressed 750 demonstrators who rallied at Lafayette Park near the White House. He tried to deliver a protest letter to the Soviet Embassy, but an unidentified employee refused to accept it, tossing the envelope through a fence.

Reagan had dilemma on hands when he spoke about plane

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a classic Ronald Reagan performance — or was it?

There was the president of the United States, offering his typically tough talk directed at the Soviet Union.

Shunning the graphics that he often uses to illustrate a televised speech to the nation from the Oval Office, Reagan opted instead for a dramatic tape recording as he reported the radio transmissions of Soviet pilots shadowing and then attacking a Korean Air Lines 747 jetliner.

But how often does a presidential speech draw praise from liberal Democrats and sharp criticism from his longtime support in the ranks of the conservatives?

That is what happened in the wake of the president's speech Monday night outlining the limited sanctions he has decided to pursue in response to the Soviet role in the catastrophe. The Soviets on Tuesday admitted that one of their pilots fired the shots that destroyed the airplane carrying 269 people, all missing and presumed dead. With few options available, Reagan administration officials labored all weekend to find concrete measures they could pursue to respond to the attack and give body to their frequent words of outrage.

But Reagan had a dilemma on his hands. In 1980, he said the U.S. response was inadequate when President Carter imposed a grain embargo and tried to organize a boycott of the 1980 Olympic games in Moscow after the Soviet military moves into Afghanistan in December 1979.

The United States has just completed a renewed grain sale agreement with the Soviet Union, and any disruption of that contract was ruled out this past weekend. The president had just backed off the restrictions on the shipment of U.S. equipment for a Soviet natural gas pipeline, and that, too, could not be an element in his response.

In fact, it was felt the best response would be an international one, and not one clearly engineered by the United States.

Citing the problems Reagan encountered with France and other allies when he tried to impose the restrictions on the pipeline shipments, one administration official said "his whole point is the United States tried to act unilaterally and it didn't work."

"We don't have an American plan we're trying to ram down people's throats," said this official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The initial reaction from Congress was favorable. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said Reagan offered "the right response."

Digging deeper

US marines digging deeper as fighting in Lebanon heats up

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Marines manning the front lines around Beirut Airport are digging deeper, sleeping in bunkers and foregoing such comforts as showers and hot food. The war in Lebanon has spilled into their compound.

"To be honest with you, it's really been shaky," said Cpl. Gerald Shanley, 22, of Kent, Ohio, a mortar forward observer attached to "Charlie Company."

"They're coming in from out of nowhere and like I said, you don't know when it's going to happen," he said.

Since Saturday, when Moslem Shiite militiamen attacked a joint U.S.-Lebanese outpost, the Marines have come under fire every day from the Aley and Chouf mountains which rise a few miles from their forward positions.

Four Marines of the 1,200-man contingent have been killed by shellfire during the fighting.

Marines say some of the rounds were clearly aimed at them, while others were probably strays, fired either by Phalangist or Druse militiamen or the Christian-dominated Lebanese army, all battling for control of the hills.

"They were fired from the east, from the north, from near and far," said Warrant Officer Charles Rowe of San Francisco.

Since the fighting erupted last weekend, Marines from the three rifle companies manning the perimeter have been sleeping in their underground bunkers in case of attacks at night.

A few nights ago, one rocket slammed into the tent which was home to Lt. Richard Hasey of Arlington, Va.

"I saw this little blur," said Hasey as he fingered the gray metallic remains of the rocket. "I came running over. Somebody was stamping out this little fire. It was my laundry."

With the new fighting, the Marine compound looks like a set of World War I trenches and earthen bunkers.

French intervention brings about partition

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The French military intervention in Chad has produced, for the moment, the outcome most feared by President Hissene Habre — the effective partition of his country.

Three weeks after Paris sent a task force to its former colony, the dividing line between the Libyan-backed rebels and French-propped government forces is frozen and the fighting virtually at a standstill.

About 3,000 French paratroopers face an almost equal number of Libyans across a 200-mile-deep no man's land of uninhabited desert. No French soldier has come within sight of any Libyan, and both forces avoid patrolling in the other's direction on land or in the air.

Habre has pledged he will never accept a partition such as currently exists along the 15th parallel, but he admits he lacks the military means to do anything about it without active French help.

French officials say President Francois Mitterrand wants the task force to stand as an impenetrable barrier to any Libyan attempt to push south while he seeks a negotiated settlement of the CMHAD CONFLICT.

To Habre's anger, Mitterrand is not looking for action. He has told the Chadian leader the task force will not help him launch an offensive to reconquer the Libyan-held northern desert, which includes the president's birthplace, Faya-Largeau.

One African ambassador commented that Habre was desperately trying to create the war fever that might stir

Marine engineers have been building a new network of trenches and ditches linking bunkers so the troops can move without exposing themselves to fire.

Throughout the day, when the gunners from the hills are taking a break or looking for other targets, troops fill green sandbags to shore up bunkers and observation posts.

If shelling is heavy, the troops stay in their bunkers, eating cold field rations when it is too dangerous to go to the mess tent. Hot showers are an occasional luxury.

In observation posts, Marines standing in shoulder-deep holes and peer through binoculars at the smoking hills to the east. Behind them, only a few hundred yards away, the Mediterranean laps the sand. To the northeast, the graceful curve of the coast reveals Beirut's chalk white buildings on the horizon.

Shelling is not the only danger the Marines face. Snipers in nearby villages pepper Marine positions with small arms fire.

The dirt road from the headquarters compound to two of the rifle company outposts skirts the village of Hay El-Sellum, which remains in the hands of Moslem Shiites.

Gunmen have built two earthen bunkers not more than 20 yards from the Marine road. Reporters riding a jeep back from the outposts could see three gunmen on one mound.

Marines say most of the fire lately has been coming from batteries about 15 miles away, out of sight and hearing.

"The other night we saw them come right over that ridge line," said Shanley, pointing to a wooded hill to the east.

"You could see the flash, and the rocket would come right down on you. All you could do was get down," he said. "If you see the flash, you got about 10 seconds before impact."

The Druse, whose sect is an offshoot of Islam, have been fighting both the Christian Phalangist forces and the Lebanese army since Israel pulled back from the Aley and Chmemouta on Sunday.

The Israelis invaded Lebanon in June 1982 in an effort to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization. They decided to redeploy south because they suffered a growing number of casualties from guerrillas while occupying the mountains.

Navy, Marines shell Druse guns

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Navy went into action in Lebanon for the first time today, teaming up with Marine artillery to pound Druse gunners who shelled Beirut airport again in violation of a cease-fire pledge.

"We hit the target that we aimed at," Warrant Officer Charles Rowe said after the Marines joined the frigate Bowen in blasting militia positions southeast of the airport that fired on the Marine compound.

Rowe said the Navy and Marines retaliated at 12:45 p.m. — 6:45 a.m. EDT — as the airport was under renewed shelling.

He said the Bowen fired four rounds of high explosives from its five-inch guns and the Marines fired six rounds from a 155mm battery.

On Wednesday, U.S. and French jet fighters streaked over Lebanon for the first time in a warning to Druse gunners who killed two French peacekeeping troops and wounded a Marine.

The hills southeast of the airport are controlled by leftist Druse militiamen trying to stop the Lebanese army from moving into mountains from a highway intersection on the airport's edge.

At least three shells slammed into the runway about 200 yards from two American generals visiting the 1,200-man Marine contingent today. One shell blew up the airport's fuel station, state radio reported.

The radio also said Lebanese army positions at the Khalde highway intersection and neighboring hills just a mile southeast of the Marine zone came under heavy shelling.

Lt. Gen. John H. Miller, commander of the Fleet Marine Force Atlantic, based at Norfolk, Va., and Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N.C., began their inspection visit a few hours before the shelling forced them and the Marines to flee for bunkers. No casualties were reported.

The shelling was on the fifth day of fighting between Druse and Christian militias, which police say has left 353 dead and 875 wounded since an Israeli pullback from the area on Sunday.

Today's barrage hit the airport only hours after Druse militiamen pledged to stop shooting at multinational peacekeeping forces in Beirut following reported threats of retaliation by the United States, France and Italy.

A statement from leftist Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt's Syrian-backed Progressive Socialist Party said it would guarantee that no "accident

French forces sent warplanes roaring over Beirut on Wednesday for the first time since the multinational force deployed in the Lebanese capital a year ago.

The government requested the force to help it assert control over areas long held by private armies and militias.

French Defense Minister Charles Hernu said Wednesday in Paris that artillery positions of Druse militiamen in the central Lebanese mountains would be destroyed unless the gunners did not stop firing at the headquarters of the French contingent in Beirut.

In Damascus, U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane asked the Syrian government Wednesday to convey a warning to the Druse command that U.S. warships and jets would blast any positions firing at Beirut international airport, reliable sources in the Syrian capital said.

The sources said the Italian government served a similar warning on the Druse command through diplomatic channels.

This bison is one of 2,000 in Yellowstone, the world's first national park. Some 2.5 million people visit the park each year and officials say encounters with the native animals are inevitable. But officials say when people fail to give the animals, bear, bison and others, proper respect, trouble can happen. Three people have been injured by bison this year alone, one fatally. (AP Laserphoto)

Confrontations between man and beast becoming a constant worry

By ROBERT C. UNRUH
Associated Press Writer

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Its geysers, mountains, rivers and thousands of wild animals attract 2.5 million tourists annually. But the rules for Yellowstone National Park say look from a distance, and never, ever touch the animals that populate the park.

More and more tourists aren't following the rules, and confrontations between man and beast are a growing worry for Yellowstone officials.

In July, a French tourist was gored by a bison bull when he tried to have his picture taken with the shaggy creature. Alain Jean-Jacques Dumont suffered a ruptured stomach, damaged spleen and colon and four broken ribs. He died Sept. 2 in a Salt Lake City hospital.

It was the first fatality at the park involving a bison in 11 years and only the second since the park opened in 1872, authorities at Yellowstone said.

"It is a matter of some concern that park visitors are simply not sufficiently aware that wild animals are ... not the docile little creatures depicted in cartoons, television shows and movies," said Duncan Morrow, a park service official.

The most frequent cause of death in the nation's 334-unit national park system which attracts 245 million people annually is automobile accidents, followed by drownings and falls. But anytime humans and animals come in close proximity, there can be problems.

"If Uncle Fred and Aunt Martha were to put their grandson up on a cow on somebody's farm, they run the risk of injury," said Mike Baugher, a public information officer for the National Park Service's Denver office.

Of the three bison incidents in Yellowstone this year, the first involved a German tourist who got too close and was knocked down. Two days later the same animal gored a visitor from Colorado.

"There is a great tendency of people not to realize that it is the human who is the visitor in the animal's natural habitat, rather than the reverse," Morrow said.

A change in policy in the late 1960s that closed dumps in Yellowstone cut the number of incidents involving bears and humans by 90 percent.

For years before that bears caused injuries and some fatalities in national parks, especially in Yellowstone where they begged at car windows and scavenged campgrounds for morsels. From the 1930s, four or five dozen incidents were reported each year, according to the Park Service.

But in the 1970s as the bears moved into more remote areas, tourists' attentions turned toward buffalo, elk and moose, all of which are "wild, unpredictable and potentially dangerous," according to a special brochure given to passengers in each entering vehicle.

Jean Anzelmo, a Yellowstone spokeswoman, said statistics for bear incidents over the last five years have remained virtually static at the park — at one to two minor injuries per year. Although statistics are not kept for everything, she said other types of incidents have followed the same pattern.

But she did predict more problems in the future, as more and more visitors crowd into wilderness areas made smaller and smaller by encroachment of neighboring developments.

"As visitation increases and as it becomes rarer and rarer for people to see animals in a wild situation, the greater the potential," she said.

VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — North Korea, the communist half of what was once known as the "hermit kingdom," has abandoned its isolation and expanded its role in Africa as a supplier of military expertise.

Since 1971 more than a dozen countries on the continent, from Burundi to Zimbabwe, have invited the tough North Korean trainers. An estimated 3,000 African military personnel were sent to North Korea for instruction between 1971 and 1981, Asian diplomatic sources say.

In April, the Seychelles, an Indian Ocean republic which considers itself part of Africa, became the latest recipient of Pyongyang's growing military cooperation program with the arrival of 55 North Korean instructors and interpreters.

Replacing unpopular Tanzanian troops, the Koreans have come to rebuild a 750-man force that mutinied briefly last year.

Their presence has puzzled some diplomatic observers who note that North Korea, one of the most rigid Marxist states, sent advisers at a time when the Seychelles' socialist regime was moving to moderate its militant image which has hurt tourism, its biggest industry.

Western diplomatic sources in East Africa say they are concerned by the Koreans' presence in the Seychelles because even a tiny force of professional soldiers has disproportionate influence in a country of only 65,000 people.

Security considerations have been paramount to the islands' president, France Albert Rene, since 45 South African-based mercenaries arrived on Nov. 25, 1981, intending to overthrow his government. Fighting broke out when a customs official found a machine pistol in a suitcase, and the soldiers of fortune escaped back to South Africa by hijacking an Air India jetliner.

The 49-year-old Rene, described by one diplomat as "intelligent and modest but scared and suspicious," had a concrete bunker sunk in the backyard of his estate. "L'Exile," in the lush hills overlooking Victoria. It took only 35 men to install him in power in a 1977 coup which toppled jet-setting President James R. Mancham.

But his trust in the Seychelles People's Defense Forces diminished during the August 1982 mutiny in which at least nine people died.

Despite official denials, the Tanzanians, whose dozen advisers were reinforced by 200 men after the 1981 coup attempt, have been held responsible by the public for the fatalities. Residents also resent the Tanzanians doing security duty at the airport and elsewhere, their occasional brawling and their alleged trafficking in illicit drugs.

Maj. James Michel, chief of staff, said the Tanzanians were being "phased out," with the North Koreans taking over many of their training duties.

In other countries like Uganda, North Korean army instructors are filling positions once held by the Israelis before most members of the Organization of African Unity broke ties with the Jewish state after the 1973 Middle East war.

Some Western diplomats in Africa believe that North Korean military personnel even have taken part in anti-guerrilla operations in Uganda.

The most controversial of Pyongyang's training missions is in Zimbabwe. At the peak of the North Korean presence, 160 instructors whipped into shape the 5,000-member 5th brigade, a special unit raised by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe to counter armed dissidents.

The Korean-trained force also was dispatched to Matabeleland province in January to crush armed groups loyal to opposition leader Joshua Nkomo.

Last month, Great Britain reduced its military advisers in Zimbabwe from 95 to about 50. Officials said the step had no political significance but noted Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's concern over reports of repressive tactics used by the North Korean-trained 5th brigade in recent months.

Pyeongyang's training missions are seen by some area specialists as a way of not only extending its influence but also to drum up business for its arms industry. It needs sales to pay bills arising from a multibillion-dollar shopping spree by state corporations during the mid-1970s.

Men with leprosy handled armadillos

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — A Victoria physician who specializes in skin disorders says there's no proof that four men who recently contracted leprosy contracted the disease from armadillos they had handled.

"Armadillos carry leprosy in significant numbers," said Dr. Gary F. Cox, a dermatologist. "But that does not prove these people caught leprosy from armadillos. We don't even know if these armadillos had leprosy."

Three of the men had cleaned armadillos for meat in the past several months. The fourth had handled an armadillo carcass.

Researchers at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston reported in February that about 1 of every 20 armadillos carries leprosy, also known as Hansen's disease. However, the study did not prove that humans can contract the disease from the animals.

Most people seem to have an exaggerated conception of the seriousness of leprosy, Cox said. Cox said 95 percent of the population has natural resistance to the disease. It is not very contagious and can be treated with antibiotics, he said.

"It is not necessary to isolate or quarantine people if you start them on the drugs. It is not the horrible disease we read about in the Bible," he said.

Of the four men who contracted leprosy recently, only one was hospitalized, Cox said. They ranged in age from 18 to 60; their identities were not released.

Texas Department of Health officials say there currently are 274 cases of Hansen's disease in the state. Most were reported along the Texas-Mexico border and in the southeastern corner. Other states where the disease is endemic include Hawaii, Louisiana and California.

Still, there are bear incidents. On June 25, 23-year-old William May of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., was camping in the Gallatin National Forest, just outside of Yellowstone, when a bear dragged him from his sleeping bag and mauled him to death. The bear was trapped and destroyed.

A female grizzly bear, caught rummaging through garbage outside the Yellowstone Park limits this summer, was captured for research and will be put to death because there is nothing else to do with her. Montana wildlife Director James Flynn said last month.

Officials said the bear had no history of violent behavior but authorities worry that as a mother with two cubs, the bear could eventually attack an unwary tourist. And park officials say the animal was teaching its cubs to forage in dumps.

Morrow said that most injuries still caused by people who do not give the wild animals a wide berth.

"My car weighs less than a fair number of the larger wild animals that are present in big Western parks," he said. "The average visitor has no doubt he will not stand (in the way) of a car. They don't understand these larger animals ... can do a great deal of damage."

Captain Wood heads to Houston to assess Salvation Army work

Captain Milton Wood of the Salvation Army here is to travel to the hurricane-struck Houston to survey and assess the situation. Wood said he is to look at operations of the three Salvation Army distribution stations and interview the Salvation workers manning the stations to see if it is still necessary for the Salvation Army to remain in the area. Salvation Army officials will make this decision, Wood said, after he has given his report.

Shortly after Hurricane Alicia moved inland spreading destruction across the Houston - Galveston areas, Salvation Army canteens headed for Houston's Salvation Army Disaster Zone headquarters.

Immediately more than 1,000 people were housed in six temporary shelters. Fresh water and food were brought in to the disaster area along with a 4,000 watt generator to help provide electricity.

Within days, a convoy of Salvation Army trucks from five Texas cities brought household furnishings and clothing to the hurricane victims.

An appeal for $1 million for disaster relief was sent out Aug. 25. Statewide, $500,000 was to be used for food vouchers and personal items; $400,000 for furniture and $100,000 for shelter and canteen expenses.

The most recent figures show that disaster relief in the Gulf Coast area includes 11,299 food vouchers, averaging $50 each, 1,500 in lodgings. More than 57,000 meals have been served to hurricane victims. About 9,700 pieces of clothing have been given to victims in addition to 363 pieces of furniture.

Food vouchers at one of the Salvation Army stations totaled $78,000 the first four days, according to Salvation Army figures.

Wood said that should the Salvation Army decide that the most immediate relief work is done and it is now time for their units to pull out of the area, the Red Cross will still remain for the final cleanup period, as set out by national laws.

Olympic designer looks for versatility

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Women's increasing interest in sports poses a challenge — how to build a comfortable and attractive wardrobe that will work for different activities, says Betty Louis, who is putting together special attire for some of America's finest athletes.

As director of Olympic apparel for Levi Strauss & Co. here, outfitter of the 1984 Olympics, she is heading up an unusual project that charges her with answering the clothing needs of hundreds of sportswomen, from volleyball players to distance runners.

"It's an extraordinary design and tailoring challenge," she says. "The wardrobe we're designing will have to look as good on a tiny gymnast as on a husky shotputter. Moreover, it will have to be adaptable to a variety of leisure activities."

"During the two weeks of the Games, the athletes will be wearing the clothes to special dinners, to watch teammates compete, and to relax in the Olympic Village."

To simplify her task, Ms. Louis has applied a fundamental fashion concept: versatility. It's a principle, says the veteran designer, that can be used just as effectively by the woman who wants to look right for a variety of sports.

A key to versatility is color, she points out. As might be expected, red, white and blue are the hues selected for the Olympians, colors that have enabled the design team to build a clothing collection where all of the elements work together.

"The active woman should use the same technique," says Ms. Louis. "Find two or three basic colors which interchange easily, the way red, white and blue do. That way, a few elements add up to several looks."

The second rule to follow in buying a do-everything wardrobe, says Ms. Louis, is, "Stay away from items designed exclusively for one sport. Building a collection of specialized sportswear can be expensive and inefficient. Instead, find clothes that will serve several purposes.

"For example, jogging shorts and a light T-shirt aren't simply for a runner. They're also good for bicycling, tennis, racquetball, even team sports such as softball and volleyball."

Also, a warm-up suit can come in handy regardless of what sport is on the agenda. "It provides the insulation you need when warming up or cooling down," Ms. Louis points out. "And it even looks good when the game heats up and you decide to tie the top around your waist."

Another versatile performer, she adds, is a light windbreaker. It offers insulation, a first line of defense against a sudden shower, and looks good, too. A roomy hood and ample pockets are other features to look for.

Thinking of their off-field activities, the U.S. Olympic team members have asked that jeans be a part of their official wardrobes, Ms. Louis says.

"Again, we casual athletes can learn a lesson from what the Olympians choose," she says. "Jeans are strong and durable and perfect for a variety of outdoor activities such as hiking, camping and horseback riding."

"What's more, blue — while still the biggest seller — is just one of many jeans shades being worn. There are some vital new colors this season, like turquoise and yellow, and even striped denims, which make jeans as fashionable as they are functional."

Although function and fashion are the terms most often used in discussing activewear, Ms. Louis cautions against neglecting comfort. She suggests doing some bending and stretching in the dressing room, making sure that the clothes will allow you to perform comfortably and enjoy all your favorite sports.

"I consider comfort so important that before handing out any clothes to the U.S. Olympic team we'll have all 700 athletes try them on, in a large staging area that will be set up just before the Games."

"Buying comfortable, quality clothing is actually economical. You're going to wear the durable items that feel good more often, they're going to last longer, and you're going to find that you can adapt them easily to many different leisure activities."

Michael J. Matusek, son of Julia Clark of Pampa and Ron Matusek of Peoria, Ariz., has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at Lackland Air Force Base.

Matusek is a student at New Mexico State University, Las Cruces. He is a 1979 graduate of Greenway High School, Phoenix, Ariz.

Field training, attended by cadets normally between their second and third year of college, gives an opportunity to evaluate each student's potential as an officer, according to an Air Force spokesman.

The summer's curriculum consists of orientations on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized.

Field training lasts four weeks, but cadets in the two-year ROTC program receive an additional two weeks of instruction in the development of air power and the contemporary Air Force.

LYNN W. BOYER
Airman Lynn W. Boyer, son of William H. and Vesta L. Boyer of Canadian has completed Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base.

Boyer is a 1981 graduate of Winnebago High School, Ill. During the six weeks at Lackland, Boyer studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

Boyer will now begin on-the-job training in the mechanical and electrical field at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C.

Dear Abby

Niece feels defeated by aunt's write-in campaign

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that I, a 51-year-old successful businesswoman, am actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but here I am.

I have an 87-year-old widowed aunt living in an exclusive senior citizens residence. She is educated, well-traveled and "has all her marbles."

The problem: She loves to write letters, so every week I get a letter that runs anywhere from 10 to 15 pages! If I don't answer immediately, she writes and asks if I'm "all right," or if I am angry with her. Lately I've been writing postcards because I don't have time to write long letters.

Today I received a letter from my aunt telling me how "hurt" she is that I'm down to postcards. She also scolded me for not answering all her questions. (Abby, she asks dozens in every letter!)

I know she's my aunt, I know she's old, and I know she's alone. So why do I feel frustration, guilt and anger at this moment? And what should I do about it?

READY TO SCREAM

DEAR READY: You feel frustration, guilt and anger because you would like to say, "Auntie, dear, I'm sorry I don't have time to write long letters, but I think I'm doing well to write a postcard every week. What's more, when you complain, you make me feel guilty."

It would be healthier if you could tell her this. But if you can't, put it on a postcard - with my stamp of approval.

DEAR ABBY: My 3-year-old grandson loves to play with the bare feet of women and girls. He even tries to play with mine. The moment he sees a female's bare feet, he persists in fondling, stroking and hugging them. He puts his face between the feet if possible and carries on as though he is in ecstasy. He gets very excited and his face becomes flushed, which makes me wonder if he could be getting sexually excited by feet.

Do you suppose the boy has some kind of foot fetish? Should this be ignored, discouraged or what?

CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: It's possible that the boy has a foot fetish. If he has, there is no reason to be concerned unless he has other behavioral problems. For the moment, ignore his fondness for feet, but if he shows other signs of unusual behavior, your pediatrician can recommend the appropriate therapist.

...

DEAR ABBY: My husband hates for me to look at him. He says it makes him very uncomfortable, and he resents it. If I look at him at the dinner table, he will pick up his plate and go into the bedroom to finish eating in private. If I look at him in bed, he pulls the covers over his head. And if I look at him while he's driving the car (God forbid), he gets so upset he nearly drives off the road.

I keep telling him that his behavior is unusual, but he claims that I'm the weird one. Frankly, if he looked at me, I would feel honored.

What do you think?

P. IN THE BRONX

DEAR P.: I think your husband is overreacting to an alarming degree. Be on the alert for other signs of strange behavior. And do not hesitate to inform his doctor. This could be a symptom of a physical disorder.

...

CONFIDENTIAL TO UPSET IN FORT DODGE, IOWA: People who make a practice of eavesdropping rarely hear anything good about themselves.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY - I have a marble sink in my bathroom that has developed bluish-green stains around the drain. I assume this is from chemicals in the water. Is there something that will remove them without damaging the marble surface? - MRS. M.A.

DEAR MRS. M.A. - The safest way to remove stains from marble is with a poultice. This is prepared by mixing a powder such as cornstarch, talcum powder, or a non-abrasive household cleanser with hot water to the consistency of a thick paste. This paste should be spread over the stain and covered with a piece of plastic wrap. Leave the poultice in place for at least 24 hours, then gently wash it off with lukewarm water and a soft cloth.

If some stain still remains, you can apply a paper towel soaked in hydrogen peroxide, leaving it in place for an hour or two, then rinse with warm water and a soft cloth. Do not use any abrasive cleaner on marble. - POLLY

Watch out! Turnabout is fair play

Most of us enjoy a good practical joke, especially if we're not the object of it. I have long been a practical joker, having learned the fine art from my older brother, whose longest-running practical pun is that he didn't get me a birthday present because he is saving up for something really great to buy me later. He began this when I was three years old. I am now 37 and am still anxiously awaiting the diamond tiara which he probably will forget to give me on my 93rd birthday.

There are times, of course, when the practical joke evokes the desire for revenge. I know of no better example of satisfactory revenge than the following story:

Abner was a salesman who was forced by his work to travel far and wide, thus being away from hearth and home for long periods of time. Far from being a typical portrait of a naughty traveling salesman, Abner was a faithful husband and loving father who, when he was able to spend some time in his hometown, involved himself in community activities to promote the little community he so dearly loved.

This particular evening ended a day which had been trying for poor Abner. He hadn't seen his family and friends for a couple of weeks, although he had spoken and written to them

Loose Marbles

By LISA PATMAN

frequently. And today he had been unable to reach anyone at home to talk to in order to help relieve him of his increasing homesickness. Abner was deeply depressed. After getting another busy signal, he wandered listlessly into the bar of the hotel where he was staying. He sadly ordered a Shirley Temple, and sat at the bar, watching his fellow bar mates.

Suddenly he recognized a familiar face. There, sitting discreetly at a table by herself, looking sad and lonely, was the wife of his best friend. Eureka, thought Abner, now I can talk to someone I know, and I'll be less homesick.

Abner quickly walked over to the lady who, although she was the wife of his best friend, also was known as the biggest practical joker on the homefront.

"Hello," chirped Abner. "Could I buy you a drink?" To which the lady replied in a loud voice. "GO TO YOUR ROOM WITH YOU?"

Shocked, Abner stuttered. "No, no, you must have misunderstood me. I only wanted to catch up on all the hometown news."

And the lady hollered. "SPEND THE NIGHT?" By this time everyone was staring at Abner as if he were a leering pervert who attacked innocent women in his spare time. Abner retreated to his lonely seat at the bar, upset and confused.

A few minutes later, the lady, feeling a bit sorry about the practical joke she had played, stepped hesitantly up to Abner at the bar, and apologized. "I'm sorry," she said quietly. "But the look on your face was worth it."

To which good old Abner shouted. "FIFTY DOLLARS?" and ran out of the bar.

Which just goes to show you that revenge can be as much fun as you always thought it could. It also gives my brother fair warning.

Chinese shocked by fashions

PEKING (AP) - To the disco beat of "Dancing Queen," a woman in white jodhpurs and white boots flings a polka-dot cape over her shoulder, lunges, tosses her head and smiles triumphantly.

The spectators gape. In conservative Peking, this is fashion future shock with a fictional, phantasmagoric flair.

A dashing woman in a man-tailored, three-piece pinstriped suit strolls on stage with her briefcase, clearly an upwardly mobile young professional on her way to the office.

Young men in safari suits and baseball caps strut about swinging tennis rackets. The music rises to a whistle. Enter girls in skimpy white dresses and colored visors, flirting with the boys on an imaginary, once unthinkable decadent tennis court.

In an act of abandon, a girl skips on stage in a bright green and white blouse and matching skirt well above the knee. With swift, breathtaking deftness, she unhooks her skirt and flings it over her shoulder. She is wearing matching shorts for more fun in the sun.

All this prancing, dancing and fantasizing are highlights of China's first public fashion show.

The stars are 14 young men and women, the "fashionable dress performance team" of Shanghai. All are former textile workers chosen from among 30,000 candidates for their tall, beautiful bodies, good looks, hard work and correct socialist outlook.

They prefer to be called actors and actresses since "model" still has unsavory implications here. Hence, they do a lot of dancing and quaint, coy operatic posing and pirouettes.

For China, these shows and accompanying sales are a high fashion event - and good entertainment - sounding the death knell for the Mao jacket and unisex proletarian shrouds.

For many in the audience, some of the Western clothes were too far out. "I would be ridiculed for wearing anything like knickers. They look silly - they are just for kids," says one 35-year-old. "The Western suits are nice for some occasions. Our old Mao jackets are ugly and clumsy. What we need are new Chinese styles."

The clothes that drew the "ahs" and applause, however, were the traditional form-fitting chi-pao with high collars and slit skirts - once considered a sign of feudal society and bourgeois decadence. They were in simple printed cotton, in satin, brocade and velvet, embroidered, sequined and bejeweled. The audience was bedazzled as the models moved in a stylized parade to traditional Chinese tunes.

China's high fashion show speaks volumes for leisure, aspirations and foreign influence.

"Even if we wouldn't wear all these clothes now, still it's nice to think about and nice to know people won't drag you out and scream at you and tear up your Western clothes," says one 30-year-old Chinese office worker. During the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, she says, rampaging Red Guards entered her family's home and pulled bourgeois Chinese and Western clothes out of the closets.

The widow of late President Liu Shao-chi was forced to wriggle into a tight-fitting chi-pao and totter on high heels before a crowd, public punishment for her sin of being a fashionable First Lady.

"Everyone wants to look nice," says Xu Zhenqing, the 57-year-old woman director of the modeling troupe. She says it was formed after French designer Pierre Cardin brought his fashions to China in June 1981, but couldn't find any trained models.

Most Chinese regarded modeling as a brazen, degrading line of work.

"Our job is to introduce the latest fashions to people and show them how to dress actively," Madame Wu says.

Perm terms

A salon perm can work wonders for your hair but there are so many new techniques now, it can get confusing. This perm glossary will help. Root-perming small rollers are used only on the roots for lift, good for short hair cut in layers. End-perming this technique rolls only the ends of the hair, partway up the hair shaft, which gently waves the hair. Stacking perm the top layer of hair is not curled, only the layers underneath are permed; adds volume and lift, without an all-over curly look. Skip perming rods are placed all around head, but the stylist randomly puts out sections of hair that are left unprocessed.

gives a very natural look, and the amount of curl varies depending on how much hair is left perm-free.

Strateline: Sports NL roundup

Kuempel Brainard

By L.D. STRATE

Before Pampa's 28-8 loss to Hereford in the season opener last Friday night, Harvester head coach John Kendall had gone into the game worried about his inexperienced defense.

Kendall's fears were realized after the visiting Whitefaces rolled to a 21-0 halftime bulge, but second-half statistics revealed the young Harvester defense matured quickly.

Pampa allowed Hereford only three first downs compared to nine the first half and yielded only 45 yards rushing after surrendering 100 the first half.

"We came out the second half and played football like we're capable of playing," Kendall said. "We looked like the team that had scrimmaged Tascosa."

There was some outstanding individual efforts for Pampa. Swasey Brainard, 180-pound senior, recovered a fumble and threw Hereford quarterback Mike Scott for a nine-yard loss. David Carter, a 155-pound sophomore, and Dennis Kuempel, a 170-pound senior, each had two quarterback sacks while Lyle Van Buskirk, a 195-pound junior, had one.

Punter Devin Cross started in where he left off last season, punting six times for a 38.6-yard average.

Pampa's offense also took a turn for the better the second half.

Pampa had only five yards total offense the first half, but finished with 87.

Tailback Anthony Scott rushed for 51 yards in only six attempts and tallied Pampa's two-point conversion. Scott, 165-pound senior, also averaged 14.2 yards on three punt returns. Danny Sebastian rushed for only 14 yards in eleven tries, but he scored Pampa's only TD on a one-yard run in the third quarter.

If the Harvesters can play for 48 minutes like they did the second half Friday night, there should be some victories in the near future.

Orthodox is a word heard most often when talking about religion, but it can also apply to a football game.

Take, for example, Groom's 27-21 win over White Deer last Friday night. The Tigers used basic fundamentals, nothing unorthodox, if you will, to avenge last season's 37-7 loss.

"We kept things simple," said Groom coach Frank Belcher. "We blocked and tackled the way you're supposed to do it."

Belcher said the victory over the Bucks was a total team effort, but there were some outstanding individual performances.

Rex Ruthardt had 109 total yards, including 82 yards rushing, while scoring a touchdown on a six-yard run.

It was Jeff Britten who scored the clinching TD in the fourth quarter on a one-yard plunge. He also put Groom ahead, 6-0, on an eleven-yard run in the first quarter. Britten, also a defensive safety, was in on eight tackles and had one interception. Britten's brother, Ted, led the Tiger defense with four solo tackles and a dozen assists.

"We played together as a team and made a lot of big plays," Belcher said. "That's something we had to do against White Deer because they run a lot of things."

Groom will have another stern test this Friday night at Nazareth, ranked No. 10 in the last Harris Ratings.

"Nazareth has a lot of returning starters and they're big and tall," Belcher said. "They just don't get any easier for us."

Groom's goal is to keep improving every game, Belcher said.

Groom has already made quite an improvement. Last year, White Deer beat Groom, 37-7, in the opener.

The Tri-State High School Rodeo Association (TSHSRA) opens its fall schedule at Memphis this weekend. TSHSRA will then move to Pampa Sept. 17-18 for afternoon (1 p.m. Sunday) and evening performances (6 p.m. Saturday).

Pampa rodeo club sponsor Darlene Eads said this year's club may be the largest ever, with 37 out for the team and more expected to join.

Two team trophies will be presented at the Pampa rodeo, along with two all-around saddles to the top cowboy and cowgirl and first-place buckles for all eleven events. There will also be a payback.

Gate admission is $3.50 for adults and $2 for students. Following the Sept. 17 performance, there will be a dance at the bull barn. Admission is $5 per couple and $3 for singles.

Panhandle's Wes Wood made the Associated Press' Schoolboy Honor Roll after rushing for 202 yards in 19 carries in the Panthers' 41-0 win over Sanford-Fritch last week. Wood also scored touchdowns of 59 and 40 yards.

The McLean Tigers snapped the longest losing streak in the Panhandle area last Thursday when they beat Whiteface, 19-0, in the season opener. McLean had lost 12 straight games prior to Thursday. The Tigers have dedicated their season to assistant coach Frank Purcell, who died of an apparent heart attack Aug. 2 at the age of 37.

The fall-winter bowling season is only a week old at Harvester Lanes, and already there's been a 600 plus series by a Jady bowler. Joyce Epperson, who bowls in a Monday night league, rolled a 623 series.

More bowlers are needed to fill the winter leagues. All it takes is a phone call to 665-3422 to join.

At last report, Michael Hutcherson of Pampa was leading the Class B all-events at the Texas State Bowling Association Tournament in Lubbock. Hutcherson rolled a 1,878 series.

Charlie Jones, also of Pampa, stands third in singles with a 678 series.

OCAW of Lefors is second so far in the team standings with a 2,580 series.

Holmes, Frank bout set Saturday

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A young fighter from New Jersey will be in a boxing ring on Saturday to take on World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, who has never lost a fight and has knocked out 30 of his 43 opponents.

Scott Frank, 25, of Oakland, has been in self-seclusion for the better part of this week, refusing to talk about his upcoming 12-round battle against the 33-year-old champion from Easton, Pa.

Frank, who acts as his own manager, declined interviews with the media, usually a tradition in the days leading to such a major bout. Bay Nicosia, a spokesman for Main Events Inc., a promotion company that has handled Frank in the past, said the challenger was training only this week and would not comment on the bout.

Both Frank and Holmes, however, were expected to meet for the first time with reporters today during a news conference.

Murad Muhammad, the promoter for Saturday's bout, said Holmes must concentrate on beating Frank. Holmes can't dismiss the fight as an easy warmup to November's match against Marvis Frazier, the 22-year-old son of former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

"If you talk to the professionals, everyone gives it to Larry to take this fight. But should Larry come in taking this kid lightly, he could be upset," said Muhammad.

Frank is ranked No. 10 by the WBC and No. 7 by the World Boxing Association. The bout, to be nationally broadcast Saturday on

The Los Angeles Dodgers expected big things from Mike Marshall and Greg Brock this season, and hoped Sid Bream would help out sometime in the future.

On Wednesday night, the trio spelled triple trouble for the Cincinnati Reds — along with the Atlanta Braves.

Bream's first major-league hit, a run-scoring pinch-swing with two outs in the ninth inning, tied the score and Marshall then belted a grand slam homer in the bottom of the 10th to give the Dodgers a 7-3 victory over the Reds.

Los Angeles, which was aided by Brock's 4-for-4 performance, broke a three-game losing streak and now leads Atlanta by two games in the NL West.

"I can't explain the feeling," said a giddy Marshall, whose first career slam came with one out against Ben Hayes, 4-4. "But I'll remember it more for driving in the winning run and picking up a game on Atlanta."

In other NL games, Montreal beat Chicago 6-1, Philadelphia topped New York 6-1, St. Louis downed Pittsburgh 5-2, San Diego edged Houston 8-7 and San Francisco nipped Atlanta 2-1.

Bill Russell began the 10th-inning rally with a one-out single and went to third on Dusty Baker's single. Pedro Guerrero was intentionally walked, filling the bases for Marshall. Hayes got two quick strikes and Marshall figured he "was in a hole."

"Then he wasted a couple of pitches and I don't think he wanted to go to 3-2 and he came in with it," said Marshall, whose home run was his 15th of the season. "I didn't think it was out."

Bream, playing in only his fourth game, singled home pinch runner Cecil Espy from third base to tie it in the ninth.

"He had to be shaking up there," Marshall said. "But he got his first big-league hit."

Brock, who earlier hit his 20th homer and a double, started the ninth-inning comeback with a one-out single and took second on left fielder Gary Redus' error.

Tom Niedenfuer, 8-2, got the victory.

Expos 6, Cubs 1

Steve Rogers, leading the NL in victories, upped his record to 17-9 with a five-hitter. He struck out four and walked two during his 13th complete game of the season.

The victory gave Montreal a one-half game lead over Philadelphia in the NL East. The Expos have now won 10 of 13 games during a 16-game homestand.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead with an unearned run in the first inning before host Montreal scored four times in the second.

Doug Flynn singled home the tying run and Rogers followed with an RBI single. Tim Lincecum then doubled in two more runs.

Terry Francona's first homer made it 5-1 in the sixth and Gary Carter singled in another run in the seventh.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 2

Danny Cox threw eight strong innings and then got help in the ninth to beat visiting Pittsburgh.

The rookie right-hander took a three-hitter and a 5-1 lead into the ninth, but left after Marvell Wynne led off with a double and Dave Parker delivered an RBI single with one out.

Reliever Dave Rucker came in and walked pinch hitter Gene Tenace before Bruce Sutter was summoned and retired the Pirates for his 17th save. Cox is now 2-3 while Rick Rhoden fell to 10-12.

Phillies 6, Mets 1

John Denny scattered nine hits and Joe Lefebvre singled in two runs during a four-run seventh inning that snapped a 1-1 tie.

Denny, 14-6, struck out five and walked none.

Len Matuszek's sacrifice fly gave Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in the first inning before George Foster's 24th home run tied it in the fourth.

The Phillies scored four times in the seventh to pin the loss on Walt Terrell, 6-7.

No tickets available

Tickets for the Pampa-Clovis, N.M. game Friday night are not available at the Pampa High Athletic Office, according to Athletic Director Bill Balcom.

"The tickets can only be purchased at Clovis," Balcom said.

Gametime is 7:30 p.m. at Clovis.

Tonight, Pampa's junior varsity Shockers play Borger JV's there, starting at 7 p.m.

AL roundup

Orioles put pressure on in AL East

By MIKE EMBRY AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees, Milwaukee Brewers, Detroit Tigers and Toronto Blue Jays are trying to make things interesting in the American League East.

The only problem is that front-running Baltimore isn't cooperating. The Orioles posted their 15th victory in the last 15 games Wednesday night by downing Boston 5-2.

Meanwhile, New York whipped Milwaukee 11-5. Toronto lost 9-6 to California and Detroit split a doubleheader with Cleveland, winning the nightcap 7-3 after losing the opener 7-1.

The Orioles now lead the second-place Brewers by five games, with New York and Detroit both 5 1/2 out and Toronto a longshot at eight.

"It's going to be tough to catch us now," said catcher Joe Nolan, who doubled home Baltimore's first run in the second inning and singled to start a two-run rally in the fourth. "The pressure is on the other teams."

"Six games in the loss column can go in a hurry if you don't play good ball. But this is a very loose team, and I don't see us getting too excited going down the stretch."

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago trimmed Oakland 8-7 in 10 innings. Texas defeated Minnesota 3-0 and Kansas City stopped Seattle 3-2.

Baltimore's Mike Flanagan, 10-3, gave up 10 hits before being lifted in the seventh after Reid Nichols smacked a leadoff homer. Tippy Martinez then came on to notch his 15th save of the season.

John Lowenstein added an insurance run for the Orioles with a homer in the eighth, his 11th of the season, off reliever Mark Clear.

Dennis Boyd, 4-5, was the losing pitcher, leaving in the fifth.

Yankees 11, Brewers 5

Reliever Goose Gossage put out a Milwaukee rally in the last two innings to earn his 18th save.

After the homestanding Brewers had cut the lead to 8-5 on Ted Simmons' three-run homer in the eighth of George Frazier, Mark Brouhard and Marshall Edwards followed with singles. Gossage came on to strike out Ben Oglivie and get Jim Ganter to hit into a double play.

New York added three insurance runs in the ninth when Graig Nettles cracked a three-run homer, his 18th of the year. Juan Espino also connected on his first major-league homer in the eighth for the Yankees.

Ray Fontenot, 6-2, was the winning pitcher, allowing seven hits in seven innings, walking three and striking out one.

Chuck Porter, 6-7, took the loss after giving up four runs in the first two innings.

Angels 9, Blue Jays 6

The Blue Jays lost valuable ground in the AL East division race as California rallied for five runs in the top of the ninth.

Pinch-hitter Daryl Sconiers provided the key hit in the ninth, a bases-loaded double that cleared the bases.

Luis Sanchez, the third California pitcher, hiked his record to 9-7. Dave Geisel, 0-2, was the loser.

California's Ellis Valentine hit his 10th homer in the first and Toronto's Jorge Orta homered in the sixth, his seventh of the season.

Indians 7-3, Tigers 1-7

John Wockenuss' bases-loaded single in the ninth broke a 3-3 tie and helped the Tigers salvage a split of the doubleheader in Cleveland.

In the first game, right-hander Lary Sorenson, 10-9, fired a seven-hitter for the Indians. He lost his shutout when Lance Parrish homered with one out in the ninth, his 25th of the season.

The Indians' Gorman Thomas hit a two-run homer in the first game.

Pampa spikers play at Hereford

PERRYTON—Pampa High girls' volleyball team visits Hereford today and then travels to the Seminole Tournament Friday and Saturday.

Midland Lee is Pampa's first-round opponent at Seminole.

"We'll be out to get revenge since they stopped us from getting third place in the Amarillo Tournament," said Pampa coach Phil Hall.

The Lady Harvesters are coming off a 15-8, 15-12 win over Perryton Tuesday night.

"The girls played super all the way through," Hall said.

"They were very intense and played good team ball," Diana Simmons and Lisa Crayton led Pampa's attack.

"Dianna had an excellent game at the net," Hall said.

"She was hitting the ball hard. Lisa had good game serving the ball and in the backcourt."

Hall went to the bench in the second game, letting everybody play.

"Perryton has a well-coached team, but we just had more talent," Hall added.

"Pampa now has a 6-8 record."

Goes To Semifinals

Connors advances to semifinals

NEW YORK (AP) — For Chris Evert Lloyd, seeking her seventh U.S. Open tennis title, and Jimmy Connors, seeking his fifth, the obstacles now are similar — a void of upsets by lesser-regarded semifinal opponents.

The third-seeded Connors muddled through a first set with eight straight service breaks, then waltzed by 14th-seeded Eliot Teltscher 7-6, 6-2, 6-2 Wednesday to clinch his semifinal berth.

Connors, meanwhile, must wait until Saturday, when he meets 16th-seeded Bill Scanlon, conqueror of John Evert, second-seeded behind Martina Navratilova, followed that with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over eighth-seeded Hana Mandlikova.

The men's semifinals were to be completed today with fifth-seeded Mats Wilander meeting second-seeded Ivan Lendl and No. 4 Yannick Noah taking on No. 9 Jimmy Arias.

Connors, meanwhile, must wait until Saturday, when he meets 16th-seeded Bill Scanlon, conqueror of John McEnroe last Monday. Scanlon topped his friend and practice partner, Mark Dickson 3-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 in a 4-hour, 14-minute marathon Wednesday night.

Lloyd now takes on Great Britain's Jo Durie, the 14th women's seed, whose path through her half of the draw was eased considerably when fourth-seeded Tracy Austin dropped out because of back injury. Durie, the first British player to get this far since Virginia Wade in 1975, moved into the semis Wednesday with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina.

Connors and Lloyd — both of whom won here last year — wanted to talk only about their semifinal matches, rather than looking ahead to possible final matchups with Lendl and top-seeded Martina Navratilova, respectively.

Connors had some problems against Teltscher in a first set in which neither player could hold serve.

Brewery sues state agency

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Pearl Brewing Co. has filed suit against the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, contending the agency's ban on the sale of "private label" beers in this state could put the brewery out of business.

Private label beer also is known as "house brand" beer, meaning each brand is associated only with certain stores.

Pearl went through two years of unsuccessful administrative appeals before filing the suit, company president Lutz Issleib said.

"We are the first brewery that ever stood up to the TABC and challenged its ruling on private labels," he said.

The beverage commission had ruled specifically against five Pearl private label brands — Valu-Time, Valu-Time Light, Scotch Buy, Cost Cutter and Slim Price beer.

Manufacture of private label liquor and wine consistently have been approved, but beer has not, Pearl's suit said.

The beverage commission's hearing director, Allen Johnson, was not in his office Wednesday afternoon and did not return two calls from The Associated Press.

Pearl's suit, filed Tuesday, said private labels can be marketed to "value-conscious consumers" at a price 10 percent to 30 percent below nationally advertised brands because "virtually no money" is spent promoting them.

"When you pick up a six-pack of Coors," Issleib said, "you're paying for all those interruptions of a movie you're watching. We don't have the dollars to fund that kind of advertising. I wish we did."

Production of the private brands has constituted as much as 40 percent of the brewery's volume and the TABC ruling ultimately could put the 97-year-old facility out of business, he said.

The brewery currently employs 550-workers who receive $14 million annually in salaries and benefits, he said.

Pearl also has its own manufacturing plant, which benefits from the private label deals, he said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros and County Judge Albert Bustamante had written letters to the beverage commission urging that the brewery be allowed to manufacture and sell private label beer.

"I was concerned on behalf of a local industry that might be forced to close," Bustamante said.

Town shaken by children's sex-for-hire ring operation

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — A children's sex-for-hire ring in this New England town was made up of kids who feel they "aren't wanted," one 12-year-old said, as adults reacted with shock to reports that youngsters aged 8 to 13 sold sexual favors.

"We've been hearing a lot of talk about kids giving their bodies away," said 12-year-old Jeffrey Cleveland.

"I think a lot of them are kids whose mothers say 'go away' — like that — and they feel like they aren't wanted," he said Wednesday.

He said he wasn't surprised to learn that police had broken a ring including 10 youngsters, ages 8 to 13, who had allegedly organized a sex-selling ring for adults last winter.

"I've seen some kids do it. They just go up to people," Jeffrey said matter-of-factly. Adults in this town of 12,000 didn't take the matter so calmly.

"I was horrified," said resident Douglas Grube. "I wish I knew what was going on because I have two kids in that age group. You immediately begin wondering what your kids have been up to and who they're hanging around with."

the peer group," he said.

John Burchard, commissioner of the state Social and Rehabilitative Services department, said the ring began when "an adult approached a child and lured the child into the situation for monetary benefits." Children then began "luring" other children, he said.

Police refused to disclose any information on the children, the details of the sexual activities, how much was charged or where the encounters took place. Guthrie would only say the youngsters were not "running a house."

At a popular downtown video arcade, Instant Replay, a group of young teen-agers smoking cigarettes giggled and nudged each other. "You're a prostitute," teased one. "No, you are," the other answered. "We're all wondering who they are," one girl explained.

"Older kids know sex is for love, but the little kids don't necessarily know that," said

Marcy Knapp, 16. "Some kids might do it for attention because a lot of kids don't feel wanted. It's gonna affect them later on, though."

Regional school superintendent James Cusick said all of the youngsters involved attended the district's three elementary schools, which serve four neighboring rural towns as well as Brattleboro.

"I'm discouraged and disappointed," said Cusick. "You don't think of these things happening in Vermont."

McFarlane held a 100-minute conference with Syrian President Hafez Assad and his foreign minister, Abdul-Halim Khaddam, in Damascus on Wednesday and then had a late night meeting with Jumbblatt.

The sources said it was after this meeting that Jumbblatt issued the order to Druse forces to refrain from firing at multinational peacekeepers.

US visit comes during renewed tensions

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger is inspecting key U.S. military bases in Central America this week at a time when tension in the region is rising and diplomatic initiatives have stalled.

After a lull of three months, the civil war in El Salvador has entered another, possibly bloodier phase with both government officials and rebel leaders virtually discarding further attempts at peace talks.

While U.S. naval and land forces continue deploying for maneuvers in the area, diplomatic efforts launched in June by President Reagan's special envoy Richard Stone have been inconclusive.

The visit by Weinberger, accompanied by Assistant Secretary of State Langhorne Motley, to U.S. military installations in Panama, El Salvador and Honduras this week is a sign the Reagan administration maintains its hard line toward what it calls leftist subversion in Central America.

After several tries, Stone succeeded in meeting July 31 in Colombia with Ruben Zamora, a leader of the leftist coalition fighting for power in El Salvador.

Further breaking the ice, Stone met twice again with the rebel representatives last week in Costa Rica. Members of a Salvadoran government peace commission held a similar but separate meeting in Colombia.

But the flurry of diplomatic activity failed to budge the rebels in their resolve not to take part in elections planned for next spring.

Instead, they continued insisting on negotiations to share power in a coalition government, something that both Reagan and Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana have said is out of the question.

On Saturday, the Salvadoran guerrillas shattered a three-month lull in fighting by unleashing an intense artillery attack on San Miguel, El Salvador's third largest city. Rebel leaders described the attack as "a new phase" in the four-year-old civil war.

Meanwhile, Panamanian President Ricardo de la Esprilla is balking at the use of U.S. bases in his country for reconnaissance flights over Central American trouble spots. He said the bases should be used only for defending the Panama Canal.

U.S. Air Force AC-130 planes have been making these survey flights since January out of Howard Air Force Base, mostly over Nicaragua. The Reagan administration claims Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government has been receiving large quantities of Soviet and Cuban weapons.

According to Pentagon officials, one aim of the military exercises is to make such weapons smuggling more difficult and, hopefully, halt it altogether.

As many as 5,000 American and 6,000 Honduran troops will participate in the land exercises.

Job training funds distributed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Idled workers who must be trained for new careers before they can rejoin the workforce will get help under a $26.8 million program announced by the Labor Department.

Forty states and the District of Columbia will receive shares of the money to operate job training programs for workers unlikely to regain their old jobs because their industries were hard hit by the recession, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

"This money will allow impacted workers to find new careers through retraining and relocation," said Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

The latest grants are the last of $110 million the government is spending during the current fiscal year to train some 39,000 so-called "displaced workers" in all 50 states.
