

Lawyers appointed for men accused of threatening Gallo wine

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal magistrate has appointed attorneys for two men jailed on charges they tried to extort $200,000 from the Gallo Winery by threatening to put poison in the wine.

U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter set bond at $200,000 each Monday for Kennard James Stewart, 35, owner of Tour America, a charter bus company, and Gerald Orville Graham, 46, a bus driver. The two were arrested Sunday by FBI agents.

Stewart is accused of retrieving a package containing $200,000 from a dumpster in front of the P&L Welding Co. on the city's north side. FBI agents arrested him at the scene and Graham was arrested later at his apartment.

Both men told Platter they had no money.

Stewart said in court that his two buses had been repossessed and that he has sizable debts, including $11,000 owed to the Internal Revenue Service.

Graham said he works for Stewart's company but has not been called to work for six months.

An FBI affidavit alleged Graham made a Jan. 12 call to the Gallo Winery in Modesto, Calif., instructing the company to pick up a package at the Modesto airport.

Gallo officials received a 1.5 liter bottle of wine contaminated with hydrochloric acid, the affidavit said.

The caller also told company officials a representative should register Friday at a Holiday Inn in Dallas. An FBI agent, posing as a Gallo representative, checked into the hotel and was told to register at another Holiday Inn in Houston.

A call then came to the agent, who was told to leave the money at the dumpster. The arrest came after Stewart allegedly retrieved the package and was stopped by FBI agents.

The FBI said there was no evidence other bottles of Gallo wine had been contaminated.

Grandstaff investigators relied heavily on police's own probe

(Ed. note: Cowboy Jim Grandstaff, 31, was shot and killed in front of his north camp home on the 6666 Ranch on Aug. 11, 1981. Borger police chased a fleeing man east from Borger on Texas 152. The fugitive's car crashed onto the ranch, where officers lost sight of him. Grandstaff drove the few hundred yards from his house to investigate, and was cut down by police gunfire. No one has ever admitted shooting the ranch worker — and no one ever apologized to his widow. The cowboy's wife, Sharon, and his family hired "Racehorse" Haynes and filed a $3 million lawsuit against the police and others. Trial for the suit is pending in federal court in Amarillo. Sworn testimony on file in the lawsuit and investigators' reports following the shooting provided most of the information for this series.)

PANHANDLE — Following the shooting of James Grandstaff, a Carson County grand jury was formed to investigate the killing.

The investigation returned no indictments against Borger police for their alleged killing of an innocent man, though the panel did say police were responsible.

The jury met August 24 and 25, 1981, two weeks after Grandstaff was gunned down. The panel heard evidence from the officers involved, from Grandstaff's family and from Texas Ranger Jim Gillespie, who conducted the investigation.

Gillespie relied much on the Borger police investigation of its own actions, the ranger later revealed in his deposition in federal court given to lawyers for the family of the victim.

While the grand jury issued no indictments for the killing, it did criticize police actions.

Carson County District Attorney David McCoy of Childress released the panel's findings following the grand jury investigation.

Nobody ever said they were sorry

McCoy said the police took "unfortunate actions" while killing Grandstaff. But he said then that grand jurors "do not feel actions of Borger policemen at the scene were wrong to the degree that they warrant indictments for criminally negligent homicide."

The jurors said they knew which officer fired the fatal shot and which officer fired his weapon first at the cowboy, but they declined to identify the officers involved.

The jury said the officers' actions of shooting the wrong man in the back "were not improper to the degree which warrants public scrutiny or ridicule."

However, the panel did criticize the Borger police for having the victim's body taken to a funeral home, where it was embalmed before an autopsy could be made, and it dressed down the officials for removing physical evidence.

Grandstaff's widow, Sharon, told reporters she was "not surprised" the grand jury took no action against Borger police, and she and the victim's father said police "murdered" Grandstaff.

Jim Grandstaff was killed between his home (rear) and this gate

J.H. "Joe" Grandstaff said his son was gunned down by "trigger-happy" police.

"Borger police murdered my son. They shot him in the back. There are gunshot holes in his house," Grandstaff told reporters.

While the grand jury took no action, a committee was formed by a Sanford man demanding an attorney general's investigation of the killing, but was unsuccessful in getting the top lawyer's office to look into it.

Jerry Forrest, heading "Citizens for Grandstaff," gathered about 1,000 signatures on a petition demanding a higher, independent investigation.

Days before the grand jury met, Grandstaff's widow retained the firm of famed Texas trial lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes to sue those she believed responsible for her husband's death.

Bizarre shooting story unfolds in court drama

PERRYTON (Spc) — They would sit down to have a drink at her new boyfriend's house and calm things down — the boyfriend — an ex-husband and his ex-wife.

But the drinks never touched their lips. Before the liquor was poured over waiting ice cubes, the ex-husband cut down the boyfriend with four blasts from a .38.

John Daniel, the new boyfriend of Merdella Stockstill, told jurors in Perryton Monday the story of how he was shot full of holes by William David Stockstill.

Daniel, 57, is a prominent farmer and rancher from the Perryton area. Stockstill, 59, is a prominent farmer and rancher from Pampa.

Daniel recounted the story of how he was shot Oct. 23, 1980 in a civil lawsuit for damages he filed against Stockstill.

Stockstill previously pleaded guilty to one count of attempted murder and received 10 years probation.

Now Daniel is trying to recover damages for the injuries he suffered on the business end of Stockstill's .38.

Daniel told jurors he met Stockstill's ex-wife at a Republican convention in San Antonio. Daniel said both he and Merdella had recently received divorces from their respective spouses.

He said on their first date, he and Merdella went to Lucy's club in Amarillo, where they saw Bill Stockstill in the parking lot of the club.

Daniel said when he took his date home, a window of her residence was smashed above a pool of blood. He testified Mrs. Stockstill believed her ex-husband was responsible, so she stayed in a motel that night.

The new couple continued to date until the night of the shooting, he testified. Daniel said he and Mrs. Stockstill would date about once a week, usually in Amarillo where she lived.

But on the day of the shooting, Daniel invited his new girlfriend to his Perryton ranch to help him remodel, he told the jury.

He said Merdella Stockstill received a person-to-person phone call about 8 p.m. that night at his Perryton-area ranch — it was Bill Stockstill, he said.

Daniel said about 11 p.m. that night, Stockstill drove up to his ranch, and was accompanied by an employee of the Dutch Inn motel-restaurant in Perryton, Laura Parker.

Daniel said Parker was the first to enter through the front door of his house, and he testified she warned him when she came in: "Watch him, John, he's dangerous!"

Money, divorce and jealousy led to rancher's shooting

PERRYTON (Spc) — Take two prominent area ranchers — mix in a spurned ex-husband forced to give his ex more than a third of his fortune — add four blasts from a .38 caliber pistol into the body of a newly-found boyfriend — and it results in a $1 million lawsuit underway in Perryton today.

Pampan William David Stockstill, 59, was looking for his ex-wife Merdella shortly before midnight Oct. 23, 1980.

After asking several Perryton citizens at a convenience store and at a motel-restaurant for the location of 57-year-old John Daniel's ranch, Stockstill got his information. A female employee of the restaurant rode along with Stockstill to point out directions to Daniel's ranch, 20 miles southeast of Perryton.

When Stockstill arrived at the ranch about 11:45 p.m., he found his ex-wife.

Stockstill confronted Daniel in the living room of the Daniel home and blasted his fellow rancher four times with a .38-caliber pistol.

Daniel managed to stagger through the house into the bathroom, where he collapsed on the floor.

In addition to hitting Daniel in the neck, chest, abdomen and right arm with the bullets from his gun, Stockstill managed to blow off part of his own thumb.

Stockstill, who at the time was general manager and part-owner of Heaton Cattle Company and who has numerous ranching interests in the area, fled the scene but was arrested a short time later by the Hemphill County Sheriff at a roadblock near Canadian.

Daniel was hospitalized in Amarillo for 37 days and had multiple surgeries for his gunshot wounds. He still carries a slug in his back which doctors couldn't remove.

Stockstill pleaded no contest to a charge of attempted murder March 9, 1981. He received 10 years probation and was ordered to pay $15,000 toward Daniel's medical bills.

Shortly after Stockstill's plea, Daniel filed a $900,000 lawsuit for injuries he suffered in the shooting.

The civil suit was filed at Perryton in the 84th Judicial District Court of Judge J.E. Blackburn.

Though he pleaded no contest to the criminal charge of attempted murder, in pleadings in the civil suit, Stockstill claims he shot Daniel in self-defense.

Daniel's suit asks for $600,000 in actual damages and $300,000 in punitive damages.

Stockstill and wife, Merdella, were granted a divorce Dec. 31, 1979.

In the Stockstills' divorce settlement, Merdella Stockstill was awarded $145,000 in certificates of deposit; $1,550 monthly alimony payments for 121 months and $500 per month thereafter; $3,000 per year through 1990; $60,000 cash; all money contained in checking accounts in her name; a 1979 Cadillac; and a third interest in all of the Stockstills' extensive farm and ranch properties.

The victim said he and his fellow rancher have been speaking acquaintances for about 30 years.

He testified his girlfriend's ex-husband followed Parker into the house and began scuffling with Daniel. He said Stockstill also began arguing with his ex-wife and asked her to leave with him.

"Calm down, let's have a drink," Daniel said he told the enraged Stockstill, who was standing in the living room of the house.

"I went to the kitchen and put ice in the glasses. I went back to the counter. He unzipped his jacket and reached too deep for a cigar."

"I yelled, 'My God, Bill!'"

"Bill wheeled around and said, 'I'll kill you!'" Daniel testified.

He testified Stockstill then fired a shot from his pistol into Daniel's neck. The victim said he nearly blacked out after the first shot, and didn't feel — but heard — three more shots which slammed into his body.

Daniel said he managed to stagger down a hall to the bathroom, where he locked the door. He said he looked into the bathroom mirror and saw "bloody bubbles" oozing from the wound in his neck.

"I had the feeling I was going to die," Daniel testified.

Daniel said he was fast losing consciousness in the bathroom, but was afraid to unlock the door. He said just before blacking out, he faintly heard female voices and unlocked the door.

The next thing he remembers, Daniel testified, it was three days later, and he was suffering intense pain in an Amarillo hospital. Thankful to be alive, he said.

Daniel removed his shirt in the courtroom Monday and showed jurors the scars from his wounds and subsequent operations.

His testimony was to continue today at 9 a.m.

The 125 prospective jurors were summoned to appear for duty at 10 a.m. Monday, and the eight-woman, four-man panel was selected about 12:30 p.m.

Those seated to hear the case include Shirley McClure, Rita Denton, Ronald Harvey, Huberta Stubblefield, Judy Euper, Kenneth Limbocker, Paul Caddel, Sadie Lovingood, Donna Lile, Bernita Powers, W.F. Tucker, and Joyce Luther.

Judge J.E. Blackburn of Perryton is presiding.

A case of patriotic thieves?

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Boy Scouts want some thieves to "do a good deed" and return the huge new American flag stolen from outside the organization's national headquarters here, a spokesman says.
 Scouts spokesman Mike Whittaker said the 30-foot-by-46-foot flag, which cost $2,276, had been flying from its 146-foot pole for five days when it was stolen Monday.

Did Abscam team 'get' Jenrette as favor for other FBI agents?

By RICHARD T. PIENCIACI

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Claims that FBI agents persuaded the Abscam team to do them a favor by investigating former Rep. John Jenrette, as suggested by newly released government documents, are "totally false," says a prosecutor in the case.
 The claims were made by two other federal prosecutors, who quoted superiors as saying FBI agents in South Carolina were unable to "get" Jenrette on land fraud-or-drug smuggling charges and persuaded the Abscam team to investigate him "as a favor."
 The assertions were made in documents obtained by The Associated Press following a 20-month federal court suit under the Freedom of Information Act.
 "It's just totally 100 percent false," John Kotelly, the former assistant U.S. attorney who prosecuted Jenrette, said Monday in a telephone interview.
 "No one was pulled off (other Abscam cases). No one went to South Carolina. This was not one field office doing a favor for another," said Kotelly, now in private practice.
 He said if such an internal FBI favor had been performed, it could possibly be viewed as a due process or entrapment issue, "but that just wasn't the case here."

 Kotelly said Jenrette was pursued because of statements made by his co-defendant, John Stowe, that the congressman was "willing to do business."
 Robert Weir, one of the two New Jersey federal prosecutors who protested against some of the Abscam probe's methods, claimed that in late 1979 he "got the explanation" that a new, sudden Abscam investigation involved "a congressman and that they were doing this as a favor to the South Carolina (FBI) bureau, who had been trying to get Jenrette on something else ... and they weren't able to get him."
 The other attorney, Edward Plaza, contended he was told by Abscam officials: "The FBI in South Carolina has been after Jenrette for a long period of time. We will divert the resources of the FBI and the informant in this case (Mel Weinberg) in order to get Congressman Jenrette."
 Weir and Plaza outlined their concerns about Jenrette and other Abscam cases in January 1980 sessions with superiors in Washington.
 Transcripts of those debriefing sessions were included in the documents obtained by the AP.

This dad forgot a few things in the car...

DELAND, Fla. (AP) - As temperatures in this central Florida town dipped to 30 degrees, a man locked his lightly dressed young daughters in his car while he spent time in a hotel bar, police say.
 The children, ages 2 and 3, were "fine" but "tired," their mother said.
 The father, Michael Gene Williams, 26, of nearby Tavares, was arrested on a child abuse charge early Monday as he drove off, apparently unaware that police had taken the girls from his car, officials said.
 The children were taken to West Volusia Memorial Hospital for observation, released into the custody of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, then returned to their mother, Glenda Williams of Tavares, according to police.
 "They're fine ... but they're very tired," their mother said Monday.
 Police were sent to the Putnam Hotel about 1 a.m. Monday, after a caller reported seeing the children locked in the car at the hotel parking lot.
 Officers checked the bar but could not find the car's owner, so they forced open one of the car doors to release the girls who had been in the vehicle for an hour before police arrived, Officer James Locklear said.
 The girls were "scantily dressed" for the freezing temperatures, Locklear said. One girl, wearing a short-sleeved shirt and no shoes, was crying when officers freed her from the car, police said.
 The Williamses are divorced, police said. Williams had the children during the weekend and was supposed to have returned them to their mother by 8 p.m. Sunday.

Mark White is new governor of Texas

Governor and wife

AUSTIN (AP) — Mark White took the oath of office as Texas' 42nd governor today and Democrats planned morning-to-midnight celebrations to mark their retaking of the state's top executive office.

The first order of business for the day was a look at the sky. A strong chance of rain threatened to force the noon ceremony indoors. Inaugural organizers said the swearing-in of White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby would be held in the Capitol rotunda, instead of on the Capitol steps, if it rained.

"It's going to be crazy if we have to go into the Rotunda," said Roy Spence of the public relations firm organizing the inauguration.

The day was to start with an early morning breakfast for White campaign volunteers. The breakfast, initially scheduled for a local hotel, had to be moved to Austin's City Coliseum because of a larger-than-anticipated crowd.

White then was to head for Hyde Park Baptist Church for an inaugural prayer service.

The festivities actually got underway Monday night when jubilant Texas Democrats dined and drank at a $50 per person cocktail party-buffet supper to celebrate White's victory.

"How sweet it is," said Hobby. "This is just the first part of a 1-2 punch. The second part comes next year when we sent Ronnie (Reagan) back to Hollywood."

White told the cheering party faithful that his inauguration was the beginning of "another 100 years of Democrat control in Texas."

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said White's election was "one of the most exciting political victories in the history of the state."

Today's noon ceremony, expected to draw up to 8,000 people, would be a "crisis situation" if the rains come, organizers said.

"There won't be an easy flow if we have to go indoors," Spence said.

The decision to seek shelter must be made early. If a cloudburst douses Austin after the deadline, the inauguration will be a soggy ceremony.

"We hope to put some plastic over the scaffolding, but that would be tough," Spence said. Right after White is sworn in, he plans to lead a procession to the nearby Governor's Mansion to symbolically cut a lock off the gate.

At 3 p.m., White will be on hand for a parade up Congress Avenue, the broad boulevard leading to the Capitol.

Organizers of three evening inaugural balls braced for expected crowds of 5,000 at each.

Among those not in town today for the festivities was Bill Clements, the Republican incumbent upset by White in November. Clements and wife Rita returned to their Dallas home Monday.

The Clements' last day in power included two traditional duties — marking a Bible passage for the new governor and leaving a hot lunch for the new first family.

Bogus cops continue hitting El Pasoans

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Pasoans continued to be conned this weekend as men posing as patrolmen duped more local residents into thinking they could pay purported traffic fines on the spot in cash, officials say.

In one of two weekend ripoffs, though, an alert driver noticed the phony officer lacked a police badge and demanded identification. The bogus patrolman jumped back onto his motorcycle and fled the scene, Sgt. Robert Wiles said Monday.

In the second incident, however, a "patrolman" driving a sedan Saturday stopped Alicia Garcia Perez on an alleged speeding violation. The woman, out to buy milk, was charged $10, but told the phony patrolman she only had $7. He took the cash and drove off, said Lt. Eddie Agan.

"That's at least five times motorists here have been ripped off," he said.

Monday, El Paso Police Chief Bill Rodriguez said authorities had set up decoys over the weekend in hopes of entrapping the impostors, but hadn't had any success. He declined to elaborate on the use of police decoys.

Police say at least three men are believed to have conned motorists into paying fines, and motorcyclists wearing patrol uniforms have been involved in four of the five cases reported.

In the fifth case, an impostor dressed in a uniform but lacking a police badge was driving a sedan, officials said.

The first incident reported to police was Dec. 23, when a woman told police an officer stopped her for supposedly speeding. He took $15 and issued her a phony pink receipt after she said she didn't have the $25 he demanded.

There were no further reports until last Monday.

when a motorist lost $600 in cash after being stopped on Interstate 10.

The phony policeman said the victim had an invalid driver's license, took his car keys and left. Only after waiting an hour for a tow truck that supposedly was coming to impound his car did the man notice his cash had been taken from his wallet and his passport stolen, police said.

Another victim lost $153 in cash and pesos after he was stopped for supposedly urinating outside an eastside El Paso bar. Eddie Pallares told police he did not notice his money was missing until he went back into the bar.

Last Friday, another motorist gave $10 to a "copy-cat cop" to pay a purported traffic violation, Agan said.

"These guys are dressing up just like we do," Agan said.

Texas' chief justice is unsure of future

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Jack Pope says he feels like a hostage "held ransom" in a political squabble between two branches of government.

Pope, a Democrat for about 50 years, this week might find his judicial career ended — ironically cut short by a Democratic Senate and a Democratic governor he swears in today.

The 69-year-old chief justice was appointed to the post by former Gov. Bill Clements in November, shortly after Republican Clements was upset by Democrat Mark White.

Some senators want to scrap all nominations submitted by Clements after the November general election. One plan calls for the Senate to return all the nominations to White for reconsideration.

"I have been trying to behave and do my job as a judge, and I haven't been working the corridors of the Capitol trying to play any kind of a game," Pope said Monday. "If they approve me, I will be grateful for it. If they disapprove me, I truly hope that the republic will not fall."

Pope made his comments to reporters after delivering his "state of the judiciary" message to legislators. He told the joint House-Senate session that Texas must pay closer attention to the needs of poor people who wind up in court.

Pope said he wants to talk to senators before they make a decision on his future.

"I want a hearing. The issue and only issue is whether I'm qualified. All this other stuff is collateral and has nothing to do with the issue," he said.

"I haven't got myself into any mess," Pope said. "I'm just being held ransom by two branches of the government."

Pope said he spoke with White last week and was told "nothing has changed" and his future is in the Senate's hands.

"I don't remember the conversation. I think I said, 'Am I living or dead?'" said Pope. "He said some nice things about me. I really hate to quote him..."

Pope said he has voted Democratic since the 1930s, "before (some of the Democratic senators) were born."

"I didn't create this situation. I think they have a problem. Now, I may be the loser of the problem, but it is not my problem," Pope said.

In his speech to lawmakers, Pope said the courts are becoming "our culture's wastebasket," called on to "resolve all of the problems of mankind."

Pope called for alternatives to courtroom solutions. He favors "neighborhood dispute centers" to handle some arguments that now wind up in court.

"We should de-law matters that should never have been thrust upon the courts. We are moving, however, in the opposite direction. Courts have become the repository for all kinds of non-legal problems — traffic, juvenile, family and neighborhood disputes," said Pope.

He also warned that tough economic times have left many poor Texans unrepresented in legal matters.

"The denial of their legal rights is frightening when it relates to employment, health care, housing and family abuse," he said.

Democrats dine, drink to celebrate victory

AUSTIN (AP) — It was whoopee time for Texas Democrats as they dined and drank to celebrate the upset victory of Attorney General Mark White over Republican Bill Clements.

There were frequent hints Monday night that Texas might do the same for President Ronald Reagan in 1984.

The favorite tune was "Happy Days Are Here Again" as an estimated 4,500 party faithful, including most of the state's elected officials and legislators, kicked up their heels at a pre-inauguration fund-raising affair.

The Texas Democratic Party hoped to benefit by $75,000 to $100,000 from the $50-per-person cocktail party-buffet supper and help pay off some of its debts in getting White elected.

"How sweet it is," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who was honored with White. Both will be sworn in today at noon.

"This is just the first part of a 1-2 punch," said Hobby. "The second part comes next year when we send Ronnie back to Hollywood."

"We are celebrating one of the most exciting political victories in the history of this state," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Austin. "This victory will keep Texas a Democratic state well into the 21st century."

"We are setting out on another 100 years of Democratic control," said the governor-elect in a brief speech. "We will set out tomorrow to keep the promises we made in the campaign."

After his brief speech, White was presented a handmade rocking chair, with a Texas seal, by Reps. Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin, and Paul Ragsdale of Dallas. The lanky governor-elect sat down and tried the rocking action.

His wife, Linda Gale, plopped into his lap for a free ride, waving gaily at the audience.

Earlier, at an afternoon session of the State Democrat Executive Committee, U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, House majority leader, said "Nothing gave me greater pride and pleasure (on Nov. 2) than to hear that every single contested statewide race went to Democrats."

Wright said the election proved the state party was united and working together "like Sam Rayburn's definition. Without prefix or suffix, without apology we are Democrats."

"Let us dream, plan and hope that we will make certain two years from now of electing another Democrat in Washington," Wright said.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe told the Democratic party leaders that Clements' defeat set the Republican party back at least 20 years in Texas.

"We can finish off a great Democratic year by defeating what is happening in Washington — Reaganomics. That would set the party back another 30 years. I believe this will be a Democratic state for another 100 years," Briscoe said.

Former State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale and John Henry Faulk of Madisonville, both candidates, spoke briefly.

Prosecution witnesses link Chagra to hit man

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Through telephone calls and personal conversations Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra made inquiries about the man he is accused of hiring to kill Texas federal judge John H. Wood Jr., witnesses said in Chagra's murder trial.

George E. "Pete" Kay, a night club operator from Huntsville, Texas, testified Monday that Chagra telephoned him in 1979 and asked him about Charles V. Harrelson, convicted last Dec. 14 of shooting Wood in the back outside his San Antonio apartment on May 29, 1979.

He said the high-rolling Las Vegas gambler, who the prosecution claims paid to have Wood killed to remove him from a narcotics case, called and asked him to go to a pay telephone, which he did.

"He asked me about this guy Harrelson. He said: 'Is he OK?' I said: 'Yes, he's OK,'" said Kay, a friend of Harrelson's who was testifying under a grant of immunity from prosecution.

Chagra, 39, is accused of paying Harrelson $250,000 to murder Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his tough sentences for drug defendants. Chagra was scheduled to be tried before Wood on narcotics charges in Texas when Wood was killed.

The murder trial was moved from San Antonio to Jacksonville because of pretrial publicity.

Ronald Collier, who now works in San Francisco for Caesar's Palace arranging casino tours, testified that he once saw Chagra win $560,000 shooting dice and $100,000 at blackjack within a half-hour at Las Vegas gambling tables.

That was at the time of the 1979 World Series of Poker, also attended by Harrelson. Harrelson announced he was going home because he was losing and Chagra turned to Collier and said: "What do you think of this guy?" Collier testified.

"I said that it was unusual to admit your past criminal actions," he said. Collier said Harrelson approached Chagra and asked if he would seek revenge for the 1978 murder of his brother Lee, an El Paso attorney.

"What do you plan to do about the guys that killed your brother," Collier said Harrelson asked. "And Jimmy said: I have my own problems with my own trials and that situation will have to take care of itself."

The prosecution claims Harrelson contacted Chagra about a possible revenge contract and Chagra decided to hire him to kill Wood. The defense claims Chagra wanted nothing to do with Harrelson and that Harrelson approached Chagra after Wood's murder and threatened to implicate him unless he was paid thousands of dollars in extortion money.

After a 12-week trial in San Antonio, Harrelson was convicted of murder, conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to obstruct justice, the same charges facing Chagra. His wife, Jo Ann Harrelson, was convicted of conspiracy to obstruct justice and Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, was convicted of both conspiracy counts.

A week later, Chagra's brother, Joseph, an El Paso attorney, was sentenced to 10 years for conspiracy in the case.

Poor managers hinder growth

Every now and then, Americans need a stirrer - upper to tell them bluntly how incompetent they are and move them to get busy and do better. Such a one is A.R. Chowdbury, professor of manufacturing technology, at Bowling Green State University.

Chowdbury has been taking students on field trips to industrial plants throughout Ohio, and he has come to the conclusion that U.S. industries are mismanaged.

"Most managers are technology illiterate," he says. "They don't understand science and engineering, and don't try to. Meanwhile, problems continue to build up and are going to cripple this country from competing with others in the future."

Campaigns to persuade consumers to "buy American" are farces, he thinks. "Buy American? Why should they if Americans can't produce a quality product?" he asks. "People say to me that I'm not patriotic. That's ignoring the issue, unless you merely want to manipulate the consumer."

In these blunt words, the Bowling Green professor warns that the position of the U.S. in international trade will continue to slip. U.S. exports are now declining in relation to imports, the trade deficit having risen to $35 billion as of Nov. 1. Chowdbury thinks our managers and executives are at fault.

Why are foreign industries able to produce better goods in many cases, bear the cost of shipping them here, pay duty and still undersell us?

Our workers are paid more than those abroad, but they are not recognized by management, he thinks. They are treated like robots. Consequently, they have little interest in their jobs. They are not motivated to maximize efficiency. Result: high-cost production by high-paid producers.

Chowdbury would see more blue-collar people who have had long experience promoted to management positions.

What roles have both management and labor played in the tragic decline Chowdbury describes? Further answers are well worth seeking and considering.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 18, the 18th day of 1983. There are 317 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 18, 1968, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a draft treaty to control nuclear weapons.

On this date:

In 1534, Spanish conquerer Francisco Pizarro founded Lima, Peru.

In 1778, English explorer James Cook discovered the Hawaiian islands.

In 1788, the first English settlers arrived in Australia to establish a penal colony.

In 1919, the World War I peace conference opened in Versailles, France.

Ten years ago: A farm hiring boss, Juan Corona, was found guilty in his first trial of murdering 25 migrant workers whose bodies had been found buried near Yuba City, Calif.

Five years ago: Middle East peace talks in Jerusalem broke off abruptly as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat ordered his foreign minister home and said the talks would resume only if Israel changed its position.

One year ago: A U.S. military attaché was shot dead outside his Paris home.

Today's birthdays: Actor Cary Grant is 79. Entertainer Danny Kaye is 70. Former heavyweight boxing champ Muhammad Ali is 41.

Thought for today: "Eat to live, and do not live to eat." — Benjamin Franklin, U.S. statesman (1706-1790).

Berry's World

"His mom and dad are really neat! No form of behavior is considered unacceptable!"

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The politician with the most to lose following the departure of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., from the contest for the Democratic presidential nomination is the man previously viewed as Kennedy's principal opponent.

At first glance, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale ought to be the leading beneficiary of Kennedy's decision not to seek the presidency in 1984. But a closer examination suggests that Mondale could be the most adversely affected of the half-dozen remaining unofficial Democratic contenders.

When Kennedy and Mondale were both in the race, they enjoyed an unusual symbiotic relationship in which they reinforced each other's candidacy and maintained a joint standard against which all other contestants were informally judged.

Each man brought both assets and liabilities to that relationship. Kennedy's grass-roots support was deep but limited, while Mondale's political base was broad but thin. Both were unabashed proponents of traditional liberalism.

Most of the other contenders argued, in effect, that both Kennedy and Mondale were representatives of the past rather than the future — politicians tarnished by prior unsuccessful efforts to gain the presidency and by their embrace of an outdated philosophical approach to public affairs.

Mondale could be loser

Now that Kennedy has withdrawn from the race, Mondale must fend off that criticism without assistance from the senator — and that burden may be more than the former vice president can sustain under increasing pressure from a sizable group of aggressive challengers.

Moreover, the Kennedy supporters who were political activists and fervent proponents of the ideological agendas embraced by various special interest groups — Hispanics, blacks, women, gays and others — are not likely to transfer their allegiance to Mondale.

The most probable recipients of that support are Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado, although even they will have to work to convince Kennedy backers that there is any acceptable alternative to a politician who long has inspired intense passion among his followers.

Kennedy's detractors have been equally intense and passionate — and notwithstanding his proclamations to the contrary, it's fair to assume that an important element contributing to his recent decision was the survey data showing that as much as 30 percent of the electorate wouldn't vote for him if he was the only candidate on the ballot.

Perhaps the principal component of that pattern of hostility is what euphemistically has become known as the "character issue" — and Kennedy's defensiveness on that subject was all too obvious during his recent campaign for re-election to the Senate.

For Mondale, the increased danger to his status as the putative front-runner in the contest for the Democratic presidential nomination is accompanied by enhanced opportunity — especially in regard to support from organized labor.

The AFL-CIO General Board has tentatively scheduled a meeting next December at which it would take the unprecedented step of formally endorsing a presidential candidate before the party conventions on behalf of all its constituent unions and their members.

That action would require a two-thirds vote, a degree of unanimity virtually impossible to achieve as long as both Kennedy and Mondale were in the race because both men enjoyed considerable support within the trade union movement.

Mondale now has an opportunity to consolidate his position and gain the AFL-CIO endorsement — and the considerable political contributions and other forms of campaign assistance that undoubtedly would accompany it.

But if he fails in that effort — or stumbles significantly in any other respect during the coming months — his campaign could collapse and turn the contest for the nomination into a frenzied multi-candidate race.

The list of Democratic contenders presumably would then include not only Cranston, Hart, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, but also others who have not yet surfaced.

Muslim women shed veils

By OSCAR COOLEY

The war between the sexes, which once waxed hot in this country over the issue of woman suffrage, is hotting up in the Far East. In Pakistan, women are asserting their rights.

Ninety percent of the Pakastani are Muslims in religion, and Islamic law has always demoted the female sex to a low status. Now, in that country as elsewhere the women are going out and taking jobs, which they find are a road to independence. Some are air hostesses, many are office workers, some even are news broadcasters. Women's organizations are being formed.

The mullahs, or lawyers, took alarm and laid down the laws designed to keep women in their traditional place. That place, said Isar Ahmed, a conservative mullah, is the home. Speaking on TV, he said if women's labor is needed outside the home, they should be segregated in groups — yes, and keep their faces covered, as Islamic law requires.

A handful of business women, including a wife of a provincial governor, were outraged and told the TV station as much. People began taking sides and writing letters to the press, until Pakistan's president, Zia al-Hoc, tried to smooth the ruffled feathers. A sturdy old lady, widow of a prime minister and head of a women's organization, wrote Zia demanding a meeting "between you as head of state and me as leader of the women of this country." Another woman, an office worker in Lahore who belongs to an organization of about 100 working women, said, "Individually we can do nothing, but in groups we may be able to put pressure on the government in areas where it counts."

All in all, Pakistan is in quite a tizzy. It is not surprising when one considers that the old mullahs are trying to enforce ancient customs which condemned women to the role of renewing the population.

Something called the Council of Islamic Ideology recently recommended that compensation to a family for the death of a woman be fixed at half of that for a man. Women's athletics has been curbed. The women's national field hockey team was forbidden to go to Japan because it would be playing before a mixed crowd, and women were banned from participating in the national sports festival in Peshwar.

The women's revolt in Pakistan is part of a worldwide sexual revolution, touched off by economic change. Thanks to technology, much of the world can be done by women. It pays them their own income, enabling them to escape from their dependence on men. Hence, they are leaving the home and carving out a practical role for themselves which is on a level with that of the males.

This will cause the disintegration of the family as it has been known in the past. Probably it will also slow the growth of the world's population.

Chicago, where the dead vote

By PAUL HARVEY

Adlai Stevenson was incredibly naive. Last November's election for governor of Illinois was very close, with 5,074 votes separating winner Thompson from loser Stevenson.

So Stevenson demanded a recount. That was a mistake. Politics goes back three generations in his family. He should have known that a Chicago recount would reveal imaginary people and unfindable people and dead people.

But Democrat Stevenson should have known that historically, Chicago's dead people vote Democrat!

Chicago is trying hard to live down to its reputation. Chicago's professional politicians both deny and take a kind of pride in — allegations that John F. Kennedy was elected President by the uncounted votes in two ballot boxes

"on the bottom of Lake Michigan."

Chicago's Board of Election Commissioners has sought to tidy up its tarnished image, but now a federal grand jury is seeking and finding evidence that:

Voters listed as living in transient skid-row hotels are unknown at those addresses.

In one of Chicago's notorious "river wards," the 27th, 13 examples of apparently fraudulent ballot application signatures.

In Chicago, "where the dead vote," nursing home residents mispelled their own signatures — or somebody did. Three names and addresses on ballot applications have been traced to a vacant lot.

On at least 115 ballot applications there is no signature at all. Presumably "ghosts" voted.

There have been some citizen efforts to clean up Chicago's elections. An organization called LEAP, "Legal Elections in All Precincts," was created a decade ago to snopervise the election process.

But it has suffered a loss of confidence, a loss of support, may fold.

Election Board spokesman Thomas Leach says, "All this is putting us back 30 years," though he figures "there won't be more than a handful of people indicted."

Stevenson supporters insist there would also be irregularities revealed if downstate votes were recounted, that it is unfair to focus just on Chicago precincts.

But that's the focus that promises raw meat for the watchdogs. Interesting:

A Chicago newspaper published an article under the heading: "Clumsy forgeries reveal vote fraud."

The story listed 47 suspect signatures for voters listed as living in the Arcade Hotel, a skid-row flophouse on West Madison.

Mrs. Conrad Hopinkah read the article, saw her long-missing husband's signature, and said, "So that's where he is!"

But he wasn't.

Repeat winners dominate music awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenny Rogers, Willie Nelson and Lionel Richie headed a list of familiar faces who were repeat winners on the 10th annual presentation of the American Music Awards voted by 30,000 record buyers nationwide.

The exceptions were Daryl Hall & John Oates, named favorite pop group; John Cougar, favorite male pop vocalist; Alabama, favorite country group; and Marvin Gaye, favorite soul single winner for "Sexual Healing."

Rogers won as favorite male country vocalist and for the favorite country single "Love Will Turn You Around" at Monday night's nationally telecast ceremonies. He also was presented a special Award of Merit for his contribution to the entertainment of the American public.

The bearded singer, whose country hits have also enjoyed tremendous success on pop charts, lent a homey note to the ceremonies by bringing his wife, Marianne, and their 13-month-old son, Christopher Cody, with him as he accepted the merit award.

He also was the subject of a singing and spoken tribute by several artists, including Richie and show co-hosts Melissa Manchester and Mac Davis.

Not including the special merit award, which is given by a committee of music industry figures, Rogers' 10-year total now stands at 12 American Music Awards.

The winners are determined by a poll of 30,000 record buyers selected to reflect the age, sex, ethnic background and geographic locations of record buyers nationwide. Nominees are drawn from year-end charts of music industry trade publications.

Richie increased his total to six by taking favorite male soul vocalist and favorite pop single for "Truly." He said he was surprised to win the award over Survivor's "Eye of the Tiger" and "Ebony and Ivory" — the Paul McCartney-Stevie Wonder duet.

"I like surprises," Richie added. Willie Nelson's hit LP "Always on My Mind" won in two categories, favorite country album and favorite pop album. The country singer, who accepted via satellite from San Diego, said simply,

"All of you who voted for me, thank you. That's all I can say."

Olivia Newton-John brought her total to nine by winning as this year's favorite female pop vocalist. She accepted via a satellite transmission from Hawaii.

Barbara Mandrell took her fourth award by being named favorite female country vocalist for the third straight year.

Another repeat winner was Diana Ross, voted favorite female soul vocalist for a second time. Last year she had won two awards for "Endless Love," her duet with Richie, and in 1981 she won a favorite soul single award for "Upside Down."

Kool & The Gang were declared favorite soul group for the second year in a row.

Aretha Franklin, another co-hostess of the ABC telecast, got her third American Music Award, winning favorite soul album for "Jump To It." She had won female soul vocalist honors in 1976 and 1977.

He ain't heavy

Country singer Kenny Rogers has his hands full as he balances his 13-month-old son Christopher backstage during the American Music Awards Monday night in Los Angeles. Rogers received honors as favorite male vocalist and also for favorite single honors for his song "Love Will Turn You Around." He was also honored with a special Award of Merit. Holding one of the three awards is Rogers' wife Marianne. (AP Laserphoto)

Developing countries fare better than firms

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It's too bad that farmers and businesses whose loans are being foreclosed couldn't be treated like developing countries.

The so-called LDCs, or less developed countries, suffer from illiquidity rather than insolvency, says William Ogden, vice chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank. Walter Wriston backs him up. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, says banks really don't demand that nations repay principal, only interest.

And if they can't pay the interest, he suggests, the loans are renegotiated so that they can.

These are not mere words either; the scenario is acted out, as in the cases of Brazil, Argentina, Poland and Romania, as Edward Yardeni, chief economist of Prudential-Bache observes.

Brazilian officials in late December told officials of 126 international banks that it needed more loans in order to meet 1983 interest repayments. And that if it didn't get them it would be insolvent. It got them.

On New Year's Eve Argentina received a $1.1 billion bridge loan from 250 international banks, with the proceeds to be used in settling overdue payments to certain banks. It also asked to banks to refinance other loans.

A couple of days before, the Polish parliament approved a 1983 budget that anticipated $3 billion in credits from non-Communist banks. Earlier, foreign bankers agreed to delay repayment of principal on $3.5 billion of loans.

As the year ended Romania informed 200 Western creditor banks that it didn't plan to pay $1.4 billion of principal due this year but instead wants a meeting to reschedule the loans.

In each instance the debtor called the shots. And "in most instances, the bankers actually must lend more money so that the debtors can repay their interest due," says Yardeni.

More demands may be coming. Yugoslavia has fallen behind in repayments to foreign creditors, and banks already are trying to arrange an economic aid package. Venezuela is behind on payments to a Bank of America syndicate. And many creditors fear that Chile soon will insist on renegotiating its loans.

Ogden states the obvious: "The LDC debt difficulties represent a problem not just for the international banks, but for the entire world economy."

If the creditor nations refuse to accede to the LDCs demands, then the LDCs will go bankrupt, and that in turn will force lenders into bankruptcy and bring even more nations down.

The web is intricate. As Yardeni observes, Poland's sixth-largest creditor is Brazil, which is the world's largest debtor.

White summoned as juror

AUSTIN (AP) — Mark White's schedule called for him to be sworn in today as governor of Texas. On Friday he plans to answer a summons to sit on a criminal court jury in Houston.

"Yup, we got him," said Marion Cleboski, a jury clerk in Houston.

Cleboski confirmed Monday that White had been asked to report to District Judge Joe Kegans' court, but court coordinator David Alsworth told the Austin American-Statesman the judge "probably will excuse him. I know he's busy."

White, a lawyer who lives in Westlake Hills here, has maintained Houston as his place of residence.

While White was state attorney general about two years ago, he was summoned to sit on a civil court jury, and

Cleboski said he "got picked and served, too."

White's press secretary, Ann Arnold, said the governor-elect has known about the summons "for some time now. He plans to be there. He doesn't want to ask to be excused. It's been on his schedule since he got the summons."

Dear Abby by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe the advice you gave "Not His Mother," who objected to being called "Mamma" by her husband. You said, "It's a loving title. Cherish it." Abby, this is 1983! I am the mother of two little boys, ages 2 and 5, and all I hear all day long is "Mommy this" and "Mommy that." The last thing I want to hear is my 29-year-old husband calling me "Mommy." I'm too young to have a 29-year-old son.

Whatever happened to "Darling," "Sweetheart," "Honey," and whatever her name is? I'd even settle for "Toots" or "Babe."

CALL ME SANDRA

DEAR SANDRA: My mail has been running 100-to-1 against "Mamma." The consensus: The only name that's worse is "my old lady."

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled that you saw nothing wrong with a man calling his wife "Mamma." Women in our society are continually identified as somebody's wife or somebody's mother rather than as people in their own right.

When a man refers to his wife as "Mamma" instead of Jane or Margaret, etc., he is saying, "She is not a person, she is only the mother of my children."

You should have told that husband to shape up, shut up or ship out!

COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: "Not His Mother" wrote: "My husband calls me 'Mamma' and I hate it." Your advice, Abby, was: "Change your attitude; Mamma is a loving title — one that you should cherish. Accept it as a compliment."

Abby, my dictionary says that mamma means "mother." It also says it is a term used by a child.

It may be too late for "Not His Mother," but I am a newlywed, and if my husband ever calls me "Mamma," I might just send him back to his!

BARBARA IN WALLA WALLA, WASH.

P.S. Yes, Abby, there is a Walla Walla — it's right between Waitsburg and Wallula.

DEAR ABBY: There's a problem between me and my new boyfriend. David (false name) has shared an apartment with Steve for many years. Steve is getting married next month, and David has to find a new roommate. He says he will accept either a male or a female. (The apartment has two bedrooms.)

I told him I do not want him living with a girl. He says if he does, there will not be anything between them, and I will just have to trust him.

Abby, I don't think I could handle his having a female roommate. He says he loves me and I don't want to lose him, but how can I be sure nothing will happen between him and his new roommate if she's a woman?

IN LOVE WITH DAVID

DEAR IN LOVE: Many men and women share living quarters without becoming romantically involved. In any case, his next roommate may not be a woman, so don't worry about something that may never happen.

CONFIDENTIAL TO UNEMPLOYED IN DETROIT: Yes, I think you were foolish to have turned down the job because you were "trained for something better."

"He that hath a trade hath an estate; and he that hath a calling hath a place of profit and honor. A plowman on his legs is higher than a gentleman on his knees." (Benjamin Franklin)

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Free clinic on car care set for Jan. 24 - Jan. 25

A free "not - just - for - women" car clinic will be taught Jan. 24 through Jan. 25 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Pampa Firestone Tires, 120 N. Gray.

Bobby Owens, a mechanic for 10 years, and currently assistant manager of Pampa Firestone will teach the classes aimed at informing the public about automotive care, how to save money when having your car worked on and the importance of preventive maintenance.

"This clinic is not just for women. I hope it will be beneficial for everyone, to enlighten people where they can save a few bucks," Owens explained. Some of the points to be covered in the clinic include couponing — "Many people don't realize that just by cutting out a dealer's coupon in the paper, they can save 10, 20, even 30 percent on a job." Owens said: getting an estimate, some car care training, information on service policies that would benefit the car owners and keeping a service ledger.

"Every car needs a service ledger," Owen said. "A lot of people keep one up while the car is on warranty, but after the warranty expires they don't keep a record of maintenance any more. A ledger can sometimes prove the owner has an adequate claim against a service agency that would be difficult to prove otherwise."

Owens added that a car that is well - cared - for will last longer and be less trouble.

Refreshments will be served at the clinic both nights. To register call Bobby Owens at Pampa Firestone

Miss Top O' Texas hopeful

SHONNA LEIGH DOOLEY, 18, of Shallowater is one of the many area contestants to participate in the Miss Top O' Texas Scholarship Pageant scheduled Jan. 22. Miss Dooley is the daughter of John and Jimmie Dooley of Shallowater. She is a freshman at South Plains College. Her future plans are to one day become an anchorman on a well-known television station.

Writer speaks on women and work

By JOAN SEITTELMAN

In 1957, when Betty Rollin graduated from Sarah Lawrence College, she was on a "husband hunt." Unlike most of her friends who successfully met and married men soon after, Rollin decided on what she considered her only alternative.

"I pursued a career but I felt like a freak. It's a natural tendency to want to do what most other people are doing and I wasn't," Rollin admits.

Women aiming for career heights in a predominantly male field in the late '50s, benefitted by their determination. "I got hired at Look when I was inexperienced... because I was female, because I was a novelty," states Rollin.

She continues, "I'm not saying that being female was enough, but there weren't that many women with those qualities or the single-minded devotion I had to my career."

Betty Rollin, who has progressed through several career changes ranging from acting to writing to feature reporting in magazines and on television to her current position as correspondent on ABC Nightline, lives with her husband in a Manhattan apartment.

Though she fulfilled her '50s dreams of marrying (as well as avoiding secretarial jobs), work remains an essential emotional link in her life. Rollin feels she has a "love affair" with work.

"I cared not only about the work but about the people at work and cared in the sense of love and hate, worry, trying to please — all the emotions I thought you had in your private life, but not in your work life," asserts Rollin.

"Mother-boss figures" such as Allene Talmey, features editor of Vogue magazine, and Pat Carbine, managing editor of Look, served as role models and ultimately aided Rollin in her career climb. "I cared more about pleasing individual bosses, whom I loved and admired, than about working for a company," says Rollin.

"From what I'm hearing, other women are having the same experience," Rollin continues. Women begin working because of financial need and mental fulfillment among other reasons.

"Before they know it, they're terribly involved, caught up emotionally, as well as busy," stresses Rollin, emphasizing the universality of her emotional ties to work.

Women's role in journalism has changed since Rollin entered the arena. She feels different from a lot of the younger feminists currently entering the work force.

Rollin has called herself a "housewife of journalism" because she prefers the traditionally female work of feature reporting which contrasts with the current trend of going after immediate and urgent news, "doing what the men have done."

Keen competition confronts young women vying for powerful positions. "It makes me smile to myself sometimes as it's like the reverse of what used to be. First, we couldn't do any of that; now, we all have to," claims Rollin.

She regrets that the current situation creates a "new kind of pressure" which, ironically, singles out women who aren't actively seeking status positions.

Unfortunately, expanding opportunities for women do not necessarily mean a rise in social status. Although women are inundating television news stations, they are not always hired for their merits alone. "Particularly anchorwomen on local stations are, I think, hired for their good looks, as much as anything else," says Rollin.

She's quick to point out, however, that nowadays, "the smart women are getting hired too. And, of course, there are some smart women who look good."

Planning for the future is not a priority in Rollin's life. "I just go ahead with what's under my nose. When I feel that there's something that I really want to write about, I just find somebody who wants to publish it," says Rollin.

Her first narrative, First You Cry (Lippincott) traced Rollin's struggle with her cancer and mastectomy in 1975.

Am I Getting Paid For This? (Little, Brown & Co.) traces the progress of her career. Her story sounds sincere because she is open and "truthful, even when it's uncomfortable."

One of her motivating drives behind the book was to describe how glamour jobs differ from other kinds of work. Rollin, gratified by continually meeting new challenges, candidly remarks, "You kill yourself! So many people want the job, you wind up knocking yourself out or you don't stay in the job — that's the penalty."

Q. — For years I have finished varnished surfaces with powdered pumice, in some cases following with powdered rottenstone when I want a very glossy finish. However, I have read about using a rubbing compound for the same purpose. Can you tell me whether rubbing compound will do the job and whether it has any disadvantages?

A. — Rubbing compound is an excellent product for obtaining a smooth, polished surface. There are many different kinds, both in makeup and coarseness. Ask the advice of the dealer for the type you should use for the project you have in mind. After using it, you will be able to determine the kind you need for future jobs. As for disadvantages, there should be none if you follow the directions exactly, but be careful to keep cleaning the cloth you are using to remove the accumulated muck.

Q. — I recently used pumice powder and water for rubbing down the surface of a table I had finished with lacquer. At first, everything seemed to go well, but after a while the pumice did not seem to be cutting. What causes this?

A. — See the above answer. It is probable you have not been cleaning the rubbing cloth often enough. Try using a piece of felt for the rubbing procedure. It is less likely to clog than regular cloth, but it never- bistles has bistles split at the ends. Sometimes it isn't easy to detect the split ends, but if you look very closely, preferably against a strong light, you will be able to see the splits — if the bristles have them.

Blind senator

Republican Boy Ryan, a freshman Nevada state senator from Las Vegas, is helped through the halls of the Nevada State Legislative Building by his wife Vicki Monday morning at the opening day session in Carson City, Nev. Ryan is totally blind. (AP Laserphoto)

Vision more important than sight to legislator

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A new state senator, blind since his college days, admits his job will be a challenge but says the Legislature needs people "with ability to think more than people who can see."

Bob Ryan, who was sworn in Monday, is the state's first blind legislator and only the second Republican this century to be elected from heavily Democratic Las Vegas.

He was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1947 with glaucoma that grew steadily worse until, in college, he was totally sightless. He conceded there are questions about whether he can handle his new job.

"There are going to be people looking over my shoulder, but I can do it," he said. "We need people with ability to think more than people who can see." Ryan, 35, also said that during each step of his career in journalism, broadcasting and politics, "I was told I couldn't handle it. But I wanted the opportunity to fail."

After graduating from Ithaca College in Ithaca, N.Y., Ryan went to work as a disc jockey with a radio station in nearby Syracuse. A few years later he joined ABC-TV where he served in a variety of news and programming slots.

He worked with ABC's outspoken sportscaster, Howard Cosell, which he said "prepared me for anything."

After nine years at the network, Ryan joined the Washington, D.C., staff of Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and a short time later joined the senator's Las Vegas office.

In 1980, he became an editorial writer for KLAS-TV in Las Vegas, a post he resigned recently to avoid potential conflicts of interest.

To deal with government's most prolific product — paperwork — x; hired Jane Fundis, a University of Nevada-Reno journalism graduate, to read to him.

He said he decided to seek elective office in 1981 at least partly out of a sense of challenge, but emphasized, "I don't want to be known as the blind person's legislator."

Ryan, a conservative, said his legislative goals include an effort to give parents the right to decide whether they want their children bused to school.

Speedy review refused on windfall profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to speedily review a ruling against the government's continued collection of billions of dollars under the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, turned down a government request to decide the constitutionality of the law by July. But Monday's action leaves open the possibility the court will eventually take on the case, and decide the issue sometime in 1984.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor voted to grant the government's request, but four such votes were needed.

The government has been allowed to continue collecting the tax pending the outcome of its appeal. U.S. District Judge Ewing T. Kerr in Cheyenne, Wyo., struck down the 3-year-old tax last Nov. 4.

He said the levy is unconstitutional because it exempts new oil produced above the Arctic Circle, excluding from the tax the giant Prudhoe Bay Field on the North Slope of Alaska.

The Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform throughout the nation, Kerr said.

The government contends that the exclusion is legitimate in order to encourage exploration in a remote area.

"Because of its remote location, fragile environment and extreme climatic conditions, the production of North Slope oil involved risks and costs that were far greater than the risks and costs of developing domestic oil properties elsewhere," government lawyers told the court.

They also noted that Congress anticipated that the wellhead price of North Slope oil would be $8 or $9 less per barrel than the prevailing prices in other producing states.

The Justice Department asked the Supreme Court to quickly grant review of Judge Kerr's ruling so it could schedule a hearing in April and announce a decision by July.

Lawrence Wallace, the department's acting solicitor general, said speeded up consideration was needed even though the government has been permitted to collect the tax.

"Because of the magnitude of the sums at stake, the ensuing fiscal uncertainty threatens to disrupt the federal budgetary process," he told the justices.

"Until the constitutionality of the tax is resolved definitively by this court, the government will be forced to plan for a possible substantial expenditure of public funds for refunds of windfall profit taxes already collected," he added.

The government imposed the tax to collect an estimated $26 billion as of last Oct. 1, and expects to collect another $40 billion over the next five years.

The original lawsuit against the government was filed by a small oil company, Calvin Petroleum Corp. of Fort Lupton, Colo., and three Wyoming oil royalty owners.

More than 30 other parties have joined the challenge. They include the major oil-producing states of Louisiana and Texas, which contend the law violates states' rights.

Hearing ordered on execution stay

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Texas death row inmate set to die one week from today is scheduled to have a hearing before a federal appeals court panel in Houston later this week.

The panel decided here Monday to conduct a hearing on whether to stay the execution of Thomas A. Barefoot, convicted of murdering a Texas policeman.

Barefoot, 42, an oilfield roughneck from New Iberia, La., was convicted of murder in the shooting of officer Carl Levin, 31, on Aug. 7, 1978, in Harker Heights, near Killeen. He is scheduled to be executed by a lethal injection before sunrise on Jan. 25.

Prosecutors said Barefoot, a fugitive at the time, shot Levin once in the head because he feared he would be sent back to Valencia, N.M., to face trial in an unrelated case.

Shaw said the infant was about six weeks premature. He said police had evidence the baby had been aborted, but refused to elaborate.

A woman whom police did not identify was looking for aluminum cans in the bin behind some apartments in the westside neighborhood of Oak Lawn, Shaw said. She heard "muffled crying sounds" coming from the closed shoebox, and inside found the naked baby, his umbilical cord still attached, in a tan plastic garbage bag.

The garbage bag was not sealed, Shaw said. He said police believed the infant had been in the large trash bin about one hour.

Hour-old infant found in trash

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities are treating as a criminal matter the abandonment of a one-hour-old baby who was discovered by a woman rummaging through a garbage bin, a Dallas police spokesman says.

The baby boy found Monday morning probably had been aborted and left to die in the garbage, said spokesman Bob Shaw.

The infant, whom hospital officials called "Baby X," was taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital and was listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit.

"If we find out who did it, it will be attempted murder," Shaw said.

Black market for endangered fish

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Lured by a rich black market for selling their catches, some fishermen are daring to test state laws aimed at protecting redbfish and speckled trout, state Parks and Wildlife Department officials say.

"If there's money involved, it's profitable to continue," said Tom Moore, chief of the department's coastal fisheries branch in Austin.

A law banning the sale of redbfish and speckled trout caught in Texas waters went into effect in September 1981 after earlier measures to limit the amount of fish taken from the waters proved insufficient, Moore said.

One of those measures prohibits the use of any type of net fishing in about half the state's inside waters, including the lower Laguna Madre north of Brownsville.

Those caught breaking the 35-year-old law face a $200 fine and the loss of their net, Moore says.

Although authorities patrol the waterways almost daily, Moore estimated that about 85 percent of those fishermen netting illegally get away with their crime because they net under cover of darkness.

"Our people can't find them at night," he said.

To make matters worse, most of the net found in illegal waters has been left unattended, so the fisherman loses only his property.

Still, last year alone authorities confiscated 580,411 feet of net found in Texas waters, according to figures from the two coastal wildlife department regions.

At an average price of $1.50 per foot, according to Moore's figures, the state's moonlighters lost about $870,616.

State law requires those nets confiscated be destroyed, so its resale at profit to the state is prohibited.

"I'd hate to sell it, then have to pick it right back up again," said Bob Miles, wildlife department district supervisor in Brownsville. Miles says his wardens patrol the areas within his jurisdiction by boat and on land, and confiscate sometimes several times a week.

"We let it accumulate until it gets in our way, then burn it," Miles said.

Those who run successful moonlight netting missions and smuggle the fish back into the state find a "ready market" for redbfish and speckled trout, Moore said.

"Somehow, they'll wind up in a cafe in Corpus Christi," he said. Moonlighters who sell their fish are getting over a dollar per pound, he added.

The law does not prohibit the sale of fish caught in the waters of other states or countries, so once it makes it to a Texas restaurant, there's no way of halting the sale to patrons.

Department officials say most of the state's commercial fishermen have not resorted to taking fish illegally since the redbfish law went into effect, although they say moonlighters are making matters worse for those hoping the ban will be lifted within the next couple of years.

After September of this year, marine biologists are to study the fish populations to determine if the moratorium should be lifted.

Commercial fishermen fought the bill when it was proposed in the Legislature, saying there was no undisputed information that the fish population was in jeopardy.

Department officials point out that the amount of net confiscated since the redbfish law went into effect appears to be going down slightly.

In the fiscal year before the law was passed, authorities confiscated 649,421 feet of net from Texas waters.

In the four-month period from September to date, 213,715 feet of net has been taken.

Most of the fish discovered in the seized net is redbfish and speckled trout, Miles says.

He says charitable organizations benefit from his department's enforcement practices. When his wardens apprehend a fisherman for netting illegally, the catch is given to a charity such as a Harlingen boys' home, he said.

If the net is unattended, the fish is returned to the water.

"We can't afford to give away fish unless you know how old they are," he says.

Court turns back Lubbock request

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to revive an effort by Lubbock, Texas, public school officials to accommodate student groups wanting to pray on school grounds.

The justices, without comment, left intact a ruling that the policy devised for Lubbock's schools violates the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

At issue was whether, in light of the Lubbock school district's past school-prayer policies, it could allow elementary and high school students to "gather at school with supervision either before or after regular school hours on the same basis as other groups ... so long as attendance at such meetings is voluntary."

A federal trial judge said yes, but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that decision last March 11.

School officials then appealed to the Supreme Court, their effort supported in an extraordinary "friend-of-the-court" brief submitted by 24 U.S. senators.

The senators noted that Congress is considering legislation aimed at stripping federal court jurisdiction in school-prayer controversies and proposed constitutional amendments to permit school prayer.

"The proposals before the Senate are responsive to the widespread perception that the courts are interpreting the Constitution in a way that is hostile to religion," the senators told the justices.

"We are of the firm conviction that the (5th Circuit court's) decision is just such a decision and ... will place the judiciary at odds with the people it serves and the Constitution it interprets," the senators' brief argued.

The Supreme Court in 1962 outlawed school-sponsored prayer sessions in public schools. In 1963, it banned Bible-reading sessions conducted by teachers.

Long before those two controversial rulings, the court in 1948 had banned classroom religious instruction in public schools.

School officials in Lubbock, in essence, ignored the Supreme Court.

When sued by the Lubbock Civil Liberties Union in 1979, the school district still sponsored such practices as morning Bible readings, classroom prayers led by teachers and distribution of "Gideon" Bibles to elementary pupils.

The district's school board ended those policies only after the lawsuit was filed. The school board then adopted its "equal access" policy.

U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward approved of the policy, but the 5th Circuit court struck it down.

The appeals court said the new policy violated that portion of the Constitution's First Amendment banning any "establishment of religion."

The school district's Supreme Court appeal argued that denying religious student groups the same treatment given to non-religious groups violates another portion of the First Amendment that bars any prohibition on the "free exercise" of religion.

Relying on the "free exercise" clause, the Supreme Court last year ruled in a Missouri case that state-run universities that allow student groups to use campus facilities must allow students to hold religious worship sessions there.

But a week later, the court refused without comment to let a group of students conduct prayer meetings during non-class hours in a public high school near Albany, N.Y.

In deciding the Missouri case, the justices hinted that they still draw a distinction between colleges and universities on the one hand.

"University students are, of course, young adults," the court noted. "They are less impressionable than younger students and should be able to appreciate that the university's (free-access) policy is one of neutrality toward religion."

NBA Roundup

Cartwright leads Knicks past Chicago, 119-109

NEW YORK (AP) — With meal ticket Bernard King on the sidelines with an ankle injury, the New York Knicks needed a big scorer.

Bill Cartwright came through for them. So did Truck Robinson. Ditto Paul Westphal.

The three veterans, each of whom has averaged more than 20 points per game at least twice in his career, have rarely reached that total this season. But all three players exceeded their season highs in scoring Monday night to lead New York to a 119-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Chicago Bulls.

In the only other NBA game, Atlanta defeated New Jersey 102-96.

Cartwright led the Knicks with 28 points, one more than his season best, while Robinson had 26 points and scored more than 16 for the first time since he reached his previous high this season of 21 on Nov. 3.

Westphal's 25 points were six more than he has had for the Knicks in any game since they signed him last March 13.

"Truck, Cartwright and I have historically been scorers," Westphal said. "We have been running plays for Bernard this year, but with him injured we had to pick up the slack. Usually, we want to have balanced scoring, but we got in a rut and have been going to King."

King was injured Friday night after leading New York in scoring for 18 straight games. He is averaging 22.6 points per game, while Cartwright, Westphal and Robinson have combined for an average of only 28.9.

"Only getting eight or so shots a game is kind of hard for me to take when I used to get 20 a game," said Robinson, who leads the team in rebounding but is averaging only 7.5

points. "But we have a system that calls for King to shoot. I'm not washed up at 31. I need to be in the flow of the game."

Robinson said he realized that when King recovers, "we'll go back to Bernard King. But my confidence will be better. It'll also help Paul, who also has been an offensive player all his life."

Reggie Theus, who had only six points at halftime, led Chicago with 31, while Dave Corzine had 18 and Orlando Woolridge 17 for the Bulls.

Theus had 10 Chicago points in a row, including two three-point plays, early in the third quarter to reverse an 11-point deficit. But a 9-0 streak by the Knicks gave them an 81-73 lead.

New York then scored the first eight points of the fourth period for a 93-79 edge, the first of three occasions on which the Knicks led by 14.

The Bulls rallied to narrow the deficit to 102-99, but a free throw by Marvin Webster, a three-point play by Westphal, two free throws by Robinson and another basket by Westphal put the game out of reach.

Cartwright, Robinson and Westphal together were 31 for 37 from the free throw line as New York outscored the Bulls 39-20 in free throws, offsetting a 44-40 deficit from the field.

Hawks 102, Nets 96
Eddie Johnson had 28 points and 11 assists to lead Atlanta over New Jersey, which lost for only the second time in 14 games.

Hawk center Tree Rollins added 13 points, nine rebounds and 10 blocked shots, the most a player has ever had in a game against the Nets.

Pampa visits Dumas tonight for District 1-4A clashes

Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols doesn't want to sound like a prophet of doom, but he looks for Dumas to play much better than their 8-13 record indicates tonight.

Last Friday night, Dumas surprised Lubbock Estacado, 56-53, a team that lost by one point to Pampa two weeks ago. That game was played on the Demons' home floor.

"Dumas is a tough team to beat at home," Nichols said. "They've got some good outside shooters."

Danny Vasquez scored 21 points while Craig Bray added 15 in the win over Estacado. Both are 6-2 seniors and were starters a year ago.

Dumas' win over Estacado was the first in five District 1-4A games.

Pampa, 15-4 overall and 4-1 in loop play, will be without starting senior guard Terry Ferguson tonight. Ferguson, who is averaging 3.5 points per game, twisted an ankle in a shooting drill Saturday and could miss the next two games.

However, 6-6 senior Phil Jeffrey returns to the lineup after missing Pampa's 93-60 win over Brownfield last Friday night. Jeffrey had back problems, according to Nichols.

Craig Chapin will move to Ferguson's point guard position while high-scoring Mike Nelson (24.0 ppg) will move to the backcourt. Jeffrey, Coyle Winborn and Paul Prentice will start up front for the Harvesters.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters will meet Dumas in the preliminary game, starting at 6 p.m.

Pampa, 3-13 overall and 2-5 in district play, is coming off a 45-28 win over Brownfield.

"I was real pleased with our transition game against Brownfield," Pampa Coach Jerry Johnson said. "We were switching from offense to defense and defense to offense real well."

Johnson said the Lady Harvesters still need to improve on their free throw shooting. Pampa downed only seven of 18 tries against Brownfield.

"We've just got to get better in that area," Johnson added.

Dumas has a 14-4 record and is 8-11 overall.

Olympic planners meet in LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first shots are being fired in the battle to stage the Olympic Games of 1992.

Barcelona, one would-be host city, launched its campaign as Olympic officials from all over the world gathered in Los Angeles to discuss plans for the Games here in 1984.

The French National Olympic Committee also served notice that it will bid, but did not name a host city. French sources says Paris and Nice are vying with each other.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) has already allotted the 1988 Games to Seoul, capital of the Republic of Korea, and will not officially consider bids for 1992 for at least two years.

But the candidates for 1992 are lining up. In addition to Paris, Nice and Barcelona, cities reportedly interested are Stockholm, Vienna, Budapest and New Delhi.

Some of them may not be bidding when the time comes. But Juan Antonio Samaranch, Spanish president of the IOC, said, "It can only be good for the Olympic movement that so many places are interested in hosting the Games."

It is a widely different situation from five years ago, when Los Angeles was all alone in bidding for the Games of 1984.

Lemons hasn't lost sense of humor

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — A telephone rings somewhere in Austin, Texas, and it is answered by A.E. Lemons, better known as Abe by those who frequent places like Barnhill Arena or the Superdome.

What about this little item in The Sporting News, the caller asks the former University of Texas basketball coach. The item said:

"There was a rumor that Abe Lemons would be offered the head coaching job at Oral Roberts if interim coach Dick Acres doesn't impress ORU's brass."

"I can't work for Oral Roberts," Lemons said. "I smoke."

So after 27 seasons — 474 wins and 260 losses — of coaching collegiate basketball, Abe Lemons remains, a former coach. His six colorful, controversial seasons at Texas brought 110 victories, 63 losses and provided those who delight in college basketball a blend of court-side entertainment and coaching genius.

Even University of Arkansas fans had their place for Abe. Oh, how they loved to spar with Lemons each season when he brought his Longhorns to Barnhill.

After opening 14-0 last year, the Longhorns lost 11 of their last 13 games and finished seventh in the Southwest Conference. And Lemons was fired, though he remains technically associated with the university because of contractual obligations.

For now, Lemons will settle for doing color commentary for ON-TV, a subscription television outfit that is televising a SWC basketball game each week. It's not coaching, said Abe, but it's not unpleasant.

"I think one reason I do it, I like anything connected with sports. When you do it all your life it's hard to break away. Sure there's other things, but most of them don't interest me. It's not hard doing the color. The guy that does the announcing has the hard work."

He sees Houston and Arkansas as prohibitive SWC favorites. Arkansas is in the top 10 nationally, but Lemons agrees more with The Sporting News, which has Eddie Sutton's Razorbacks ranked No. 31.

"That's where (Arkansas) should be until they play somebody," Lemons said, although he hesitated to criticize a Razorback non-conference schedule that some say is too easy.

"Any coach that knows anything about the game is going to try to do the best he can in December, because if you don't have a good December schedule it's not likely you're going to have a good overall schedule."

"If you can find some teams you can beat and beat easily, you're better off doing that because people are not going to remember who you played. All they're going to remember is your (record). As long as people come to see you — you sell out all the time — it doesn't make any difference who you play."

Eddie's smart. I don't blame him for doing what he's doing. A coach is only as good as his record and there's no use over-scheduling yourself. There's no such thing as an easy schedule. Some are easier than others, but there's no reason for going out with a green team and playing Virginia. A loss never helped anybody."

So the Southwest Conference should come down to Houston and Arkansas mixing it up for the league title March 3 at Barnhill, according to Lemons' forecast. And, Lemons is to be there — as an announcer.

Connors top seed in Volvo Tournament

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors had a little talk with himself, and it could spell trouble for everyone else on the tennis court.

The 1982 Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion is the top seed in the $400,000 Volvo Masters tournament, which gets underway tonight at Madison Square Garden. Connors won't see action until Friday night as the top four seeds — Connors, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and John McEnroe — received first-round byes in this elite 12-man field.

Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina and Sweden's Mats Wilander kick off the new format tonight, followed by Andres Gomez of Ecuador playing Jose Figueras of Spain. The eight-man round-robin format has been discarded this year in favor of a straight knockout format.

On Wednesday, Vitas Gerulaitis will play Yannick Noah of France and Johan Kriek takes on Steve Denton in a rematch of the Australian Open finals of the last two years.

Connors will meet the Kriek-Denton winner, while Vilas, the No. 2 seed, will take on the Gomez-Figueras winner Thursday afternoon; fourth-seeded McEnroe will play the Clerc-Wilander survivor Thursday evening and Lendl, the defending champion who is seeded third this year, will take the court Thursday evening against the Gerulaitis-Noah winner.

"I had a little talk with myself over the course of my time off (during the last two months)," Connors said. "And my question was: do I want to and did I want to go through the same thing for '83 as I did going into '82?"

Last year, Connors briefly regained the world's No. 1 ranking following his victory over Lendl in the finals of the U.S. Open — Connors' fourth title in America's premiere tennis event.

"It's a tough question," Connors said. "because ... I don't have the time to go on a roller-coaster ride anymore — to go up to the top and then slide back down and try to make it back up again."

"If I want to do it, I've got to have to do it to a point where I've got to try to stay where I am and not let up quite so much. I don't mind starting out and trying it. I'm working hard and I'm training hard and I'm trying things to make it possible for me to go out there and win in the Masters, which is important."

The left-hander played in 17 Volvo Grand Prix tournaments last year, capturing the points race and the $600,000 bonus and top seed in the Masters.

"It's not the same as Wimbledon or the U.S. Open," said Gomez. "But 128 people in the draw. You can be in the top 150 in the world and still get in Wimbledon."

"To be in the Masters, you have to qualify."

Skellytown cagers win over Claude

Skellytown won two of three games from Claude in junior high basketball action last week.

Wendell Ledford led Skellytown to a 23-13 over Claude in the seventh-grade boys game. Harvey Collett and Mike Holloway had four points apiece while Raymond Byrditt and Mark Cowan had two points each.

Skellytown slipped by Claude, 15-12, in eighth-grade boys' action.

Rabbit Rogers was high scorer for the winners with eight points. Bryan Thurmond added three points while Joe Brown and Lance Cross had two points each.

Claude won over Skellytown, 35-4, in the eighth grade girls' game. Jo Lyne Russell had two points for Skellytown while Tamara O'Dell and Lorien Woods had one point each.

Big Day For Thurman

Dallas' Dennis Thurman holds the second of three interceptions he made against Green Bay Sunday during the Super Bowl Tournament. Thurman is congratulated by Michael Downs (26) and Anthony Dickerson (51). John Jefferson (83), the intended Packer receiver, walks to the bench. (AP Laserphoto)

Thurman ties club record in Cowboys' 37-26 victory

DALLAS (AP) — Dennis Thurman has been in a lot of game plans lately — the opponent's. Teams keep attacking his right cornerback position and finding the results sweet and sour. Thurman was burned twice by the Green Bay Packers in the Dallas Cowboys' 37-26 National Conference playoff victory Sunday on passes to James Lofton — but he returned the favor with three interceptions. He dashed 39 yards for a touchdown on one of them. "In this league, you have a different challenge every week," said Thurman. "One week it's James Lofton. The next week it's somebody else. You can't let them psych you out, get you back on your heels. "You just have to believe you are going to get as many as they do," he said. Thurman said one reason he is such a popular bombing target is that teams are afraid to take on the left cornerback, Everson Walls, the National Football League's leading interceptor. "I'd probably attack me, too," Thurman said. "I think I will be a part of the other team's attack the rest of this year." Thurman's three interceptions tied a club record held by Charlie Waters. "Any time you can tie Charlie Waters, you're in good company," Thurman said. Thurman said he could sleep only a few hours before Sunday's game with the Packers. He kept seeing Lofton in his sleep. "A defensive back can lose the game quicker than any other individual on the field other than the quarterback," Thurman said. On his interception return for a touchdown, Thurman's experience paid off. "I read his move because he pushed off a little," said Thurman. "He turned and I went inside. I was just in the right place at the right time. They had completed one like that earlier."

Depleted Red Raiders fall to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Against the Houston Cougars, the Texas Tech Red Raiders were able to suit up only eight players. And eight was almost enough. The Raiders played 14th-ranked Houston Monday night on the Cougars' home court — and played them tight for one half. But Junior forward Michael Young and freshman guard Alvin Franklin sparked the Cougars in the second half and led Houston to a 98-73 drubbing of Tech. "Tech really impressed me," Houston coach Guy Lewis said. "You can write about them being depleted, but it only takes five to play. They just fought their hearts out. They have a young team that will improve." The Red Raiders have only eight players to last them the season. One player quit and three others were thrown off the team for disciplinary reasons. Clyde Drexler and Young hit 18 points apiece for the Cougars. Larry Michaux and Akeem Abdul-Olajuwon added 13 each as Houston improved its record to 14-2 for the season and 5-0 in Southwest Conference play. Houston led 43-35 at the half and pulled out at the opening of the second stanza, sinking 18 of the Cougars' first 28 shots. "We played good in that second half. But in the first half, we weren't getting all those shots," Young said. "We were moving the ball, but we were just a little too anxious with our shots." Lewis gave Tech more of the credit for Houston's lackluster first two periods. "They made it tough for us to run our offense in the first half," the Cougar coach said. The win sets the stage for a showdown Saturday between Houston and No. 4 Arkansas. And Franklin, who finished with seven points in his first start for Houston, will stay in the starting rotation against the Razorbacks. "Alvin's been looking so good when I've been putting him in that I decided it was time to give him a start," Lewis said. "I don't plan on sitting any of the other guards on the bench for long. I'll probably alternate them. But right now, I plan on keeping Alvin in the starting lineup against Arkansas." Franklin said he was grateful to be starting. Olajuwon pulled down 12 rebounds and Drexler grabbed 11.

Auburn surprised by Vanderbilt, 64-62

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Auburn basketball team was playing Vanderbilt, but thinking "Kentucky," according to Coach Sonny Smith.

"We left our game in Kentucky in the first half," Smith said, referring to Saturday's upset of the Wildcats.

The poor first-half play Monday night put the Tigers into a hole from which they never recovered and the new Top Twenty team lost a 64-62 decision to Vanderbilt as a result of it.

"It was a case of us getting too far down in the first half and overextending ourselves to catch up," said Smith, whose 20th-ranked Tigers trailed 43-28 at intermission.

The Auburn comeback fell short, however, when Vanderbilt's Ted Young sank a 15-footer with 57 seconds left. Auburn actually led, at 58-55 with about seven minutes remaining on a field goal by Odell Mosteller.

The Commodores battled back to tie the contest at 60 on a basket by James Williams and a three-point play by Phil Cox with 3:20 remaining. The teams traded baskets before Young put in his game-winning shot.

Cox led four Commodores in double figures with 17 points. Darrell Lockhart, Charles Barkley and Mosteller each had 16 points for Auburn.

"I was scared to death down the final few minutes," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton, "but I'm glad our players weren't. Our guys didn't panic down the stretch and really executed our delay game to perfection in the last minute."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 7 Virginia tripped Georgia Tech 66-52, No. 11 Kentucky stopped Florida 70-63, No. 14 Houston walloped Texas Tech 98-73 and 15th-ranked Syracuse rolled past Boston College 102-85.

Othell Wilson sank two free throws and Craig Robinson scored off the baseline before Stokes converted a three-point play on a driving layup with 11:51 remaining to give Virginia the lead for good at 41-40.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

Opportunities could present themselves this coming year which will enable you to make some beneficial changes for you and your family. Lady Luck will trigger several happenings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You should have a good rapport today with persons with whom you have strong emotional ties, but business contacts might not treat you as kindly. Order now. The NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet, which reveals romantic combinations, compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Capricorn Astro-Graph predictions for 1983. Be sure to include birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If a project you're planning is in its early stages, talk about it only to those friends who will encourage you with constructive suggestions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your possibilities today for material gain are greater in areas where you can operate independently. You might not do as well in joint ventures.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's important today to operate in accordance with your high standards and ideals. Do not let those with whom you associate entice you to do otherwise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Because they are your friends, pairs will overlook your shortcomings today, but those you deal with in the workday world might not be as tolerant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your possibilities for successful achievements will be lessened today if you bring persons into the picture who can't make a contribution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) What might be advantageous for you today may not be equally so for your mate. Before surging forward, consider how he or she will be affected.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not let it be said today that you are a nifty person only when all is going your way. Should adverse developments arise, take them in stride.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something advantageous could occur today to offer you the promise of profitable possibilities. However, don't spend it before you get it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are noted for fairness when dealing with people, but today you might show preferential treatment to some while disregarding others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Cover the bases today and look out for your own interests, but don't be overly concerned as to whether others might end up getting more than you do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unfortunately, not everyone will subscribe to your ethical standards today. Steer clear of any individuals who have unsavory reputations.

Accident sparks fire at pipeline plant

COLORADO CITY, Texas (AP) — A construction grader hit a natural gas pipe at the Gulf Oil Pipeline Co. plant here Monday and sparked a fire that burned for at least an hour, authorities said.

Mitchell County Sheriff's Deputy Edward Tersero said no injuries were reported in the incident at the West Texas plant.

"They haven't even called for an ambulance," he said. Officials said the grader drove into the pipe shortly before 5 p.m., but their investigation still was not complete.

did you know?

Keeping the customer's fuel adjustment cost down is my primary responsibility. I, along with Karen Roberts, Grafton Clarke, Barry Smith, and others, purchase fuels—coal, natural gas, oil—at the lowest possible prices. We negotiate with fuels suppliers to modify on-going contracts so the total cost to SPS customers for fuel is again minimized. And we plan ways to shift the production load among Southwestern's 27 generating units so that the fuel cost to our customers is made as low as possible.

Morris Rantz, fuel administration manager, Amarillo.

Computerized equipment helps SPS battle the costs of fuel. Every 10 seconds, we run a computer scan of all of our power generating units. The scan checks each unit's efficiency of operation, and calculates each unit's per-kilowatt-hour cost at that given moment. Then—for the sake of economy—we may immediately increase the generation at one unit, and decrease generation at one or more of the others. Our objective: At any instant in time to be producing electricity at the lowest possible fuel cost.

John H. Evans, manager electrical operations, Amarillo.

A new SPS ally is helping you manage electricity costs. Coal-fired Tolk Station, an efficient 561,000-kilowatt power plant near Muleshoe, Texas, began commercial production in August. We predict that the fuel cost adjustment our customers pay will be significantly lower over the life of Tolk Station than it would be if Tolk had never been built. In fact, Tolk Station for the next 35 years should save SPS customers about $50 million per year.

Roy Thomas, vice-president operations, Amarillo.

For answers to your questions, call or write your SPS manager.

You and SPS, partners managing electricity, make the difference.

Walesa plans court appeal

Former Polish Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa kneels in prayer Monday outside the main gate of the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk, Poland. Walesa was turned away from the shipyard last Friday when he tried to get back his electrician's job. He said Monday that if he is not reinstated, he will appeal to the courts. (AP Laserphoto)

Walesa seeks audience with Pope

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa wants to meet with Pope John Paul II in Rome, but has not applied for a visa or received an invitation yet, a spokesman said today.

The spokesman for Walesa said Walesa has received no guarantees that if Poland's Communist authorities allow him to leave the country they will permit him to return.

The pope has raised questions about whether he will return to his native Poland this summer as scheduled, presumably because of the potentially volatile labor situation.

The pontiff has spoken out against the suppression of Solidarity but has also urged moderation in resolving the crisis in his predominantly Roman Catholic homeland.

Walesa, meanwhile, has asked his lawyers to draft an appeal to the government to reinstate him in his old job as an electrician at the Lenin shipyard in the Baltic port of Gdansk.

Walesa was turned away from the shipyard on Friday by yard officials who said he first needed certification that he had not been employed elsewhere and had cleared up his affairs with Solidarity, the first independent union in the Soviet bloc.

The union was suspended and Walesa interned when martial law was imposed Dec. 13, 1981. The union was outlawed last October and Walesa was released the following month, several weeks before military law was suspended.

Gromyko says Soviets want missiles out

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Lobbying hard against the planned deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said Moscow wants "all nuclear weapons" out of the continent.

He warned deployment of the American missiles would mean an escalation of the arms race, "a years-long confrontation for the whole world."

Gromyko is to meet with Chancellor Helmut Kohl today, the third day of his visit to the West German capital. He already has met with the foreign minister and plans discussions with leaders of West Germany's opposition parties.

"We are for Europe becoming free in the end of all nuclear weapons — intermediate range as well as tactical," Gromyko said in a speech Monday night.

But West German Foreign Minister Dietrich Genscher replied by saying NATO's decision to deploy new U.S. medium-range missiles starting later this year resulted from Soviet advances in producing and deploying similar weapons.

In Washington, the Reagan administration reaffirmed its commitment to negotiate the elimination of all medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. But officials charged the Soviet Union is intent on preserving a "massive advantage and monopoly" in this area.

Under a NATO agreement, the United States will begin deploying 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe starting in December unless there is an East-West arms control agreement before then. The U.S. missiles are intended to neutralize SS-20 nuclear missiles Moscow has targeted at Western Europe.

Gromyko repeated Monday night the Kremlin's rejection of a U.S. offer to cancel the deployment plans if the Soviet Union dismantles all its medium-range SS-20s.

The foreign minister said the U.S. offer — dubbed the "zero option" by Washington — means "one-sided disarmament by the Soviet Union."

He repeated Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov's Dec. 22 proposal to reduce medium-range nuclear missiles deployed in the European part of the Soviet Union to 162 and to set "optimal limits for corresponding planes."

"Our missiles of intermediate range beyond the number agreed upon for the European zone would be stationed behind a line in Siberia from which they could not hit targets in Europe," Gromyko said.

He added that the Soviet Union is prepared to reach a similar agreement.

Nuclear arms issue discussed by bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Responding to a call by U.S. bishops, the Vatican is sponsoring a two-day meeting of top Western Roman Catholic prelates to discuss the American churchmen's broad denunciation of the use of nuclear weapons.

Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said his colleagues are preparing a final version of a draft pastoral letter that condemns nuclear warfare, as well as some aspects of American strategic policy.

"We simply want the insights of our peers in Western Europe as well as the Vatican," Roach said of the gathering, which opens today.

The 25,000-word disarmament document was proposed at a Catholic bishops' meeting in Washington last November and is expected to be adopted, with revisions, at another meeting in Chicago next May.

It condemned any intent or threat to use nuclear weapons and said even possessing them as a deterrent can be tolerated only if steps are being taken toward mutual disarmament by the United States and Soviet Union.

Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, who led the special committee that issued the draft letter, stressed that the closed-door meeting here was not to develop a document on nuclear arms for the entire Roman Catholic Church.

Bernardin called the meeting an "informal consultation."

But the Holy See named its top theologian, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, 55, to lead the discussion — a move seen as reflecting the importance the Vatican attaches to the gathering of bishops from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy.

ALAN ALDA RON REAGAN

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Alan Alda, star of the "M-A-S-H" series that is leaving television after a successful 11-year run, says networks "cancel shows faster than the post office cancel stamps."

"The networks are constantly telling producers how to write shows and cast them," Alda said in an interview in the February edition of McCall's magazine. "That's why TV is getting even worse, although that didn't seem possible."

Alda also said that although actors on the set of "M-A-S-H" had some good times in the comedy about the Korean War, it wasn't always that way.

"The experiences we had on this show were very close to life," Alda said.

"Although we didn't have actual blood, there were rats in the studio, just like at the front. The mattresses have lice in them. In the summer it's sweltering in here. We had to learn to live together here the way we would have if we'd been in Korea. Except for the fact that nobody is dying in our war, we're in a war. Sometimes you forget what's real and what isn't."

president, has made it official, he's hanging up his ballet slippers.

Reagan, 24, is leaving the Joffrey Ballet and plans to retire from dancing, the ballet company announced Monday.

A spokeswoman said he would "pursue other interests."

"We are sorry that he will not be continuing as a dancer," said Robert Joffrey, director of the company. "We have believed he had the capabilities for a career..."

Reagan started with the Joffrey as a scholarship student in 1979. He was a member of the Joffrey II Dancers before joining the main company last August.

In October, he made headlines when it was learned he was collecting unemployment while out of work during a break in the company's schedule. He was photographed standing in line at a state unemployment office just hours before his father told the nation that economic recovery was at hand.

The Washington Post reported recently that he planned to quit the company because he didn't want to face the embarrassment of standing in an unemployment line again.

Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Community Relations Manager.

Changes in Telecommunications — Today

The new year brings with it the first signs of changes in the way we do business with you.

These changes are the result of a ruling by the Federal Communications Commission to introduce more competition into our industry. The ruling went into effect January 1.

For most customers, the changes will have little impact. In fact, you probably won't be affected immediately unless you move, disconnect or change your service in some way.

If you plan to alter your phone service, here are some areas of change you should know about.

Bell PhoneCenters

Bell PhoneCenters are no longer a part of Southwestern Bell. Now the Southwestern Bell business office is the place to call for starting, stopping, moving or changing your service. The number is listed in the front of your phone directory.

Telephones

Southwestern Bell will continue to lease phones to our customers. However, during this year, we will not be permitted to add new phones to our inventory.

When you order phones from us, we will direct you to nearest Southwestern Bell Service Center located at 301 N. Ballard to pick up your telephones. If you cannot go to the Center, we will deliver the phones. There will be a charge for this service.

Business customers with a single line or two lines with non-key equipment can pick up telephones from these Centers, too.

Payments

If you choose to pay your monthly statements in person, you may continue to do so at one of the following locations:
 First National Bank
 100 N. Cuyler
 First National Motor Bank
 301 N. Cuyler

Repair Service

We will continue to repair Southwestern Bell phones as always. If you have trouble with your phone, you still should call the repair service number listed in the front of your phone book. If the problem is in your Southwestern Bell set, we'll direct you to a Service Center where you can pick up a replacement.

For more information about the changes, write me for a copy of our booklet, "Telecommunications in Transition." Address requests to: Transition Booklet, Southwestern Bell, P.O. Box 225265, Dallas, Texas 75265.

Veteran black doctor practiced 'hospital medicine' in homes

By RODGER CRAMER
Marshall News-Messenger

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — At age 58, Dr. I.J. Lamothe can look back over more than half his 33-year career in medicine without seeing the barriers that shaped his days as a young black doctor in Marshall.

For all of that, he takes a stubborn pride in the early years of practice.

"I have practiced 'hospital medicine' in dozens of homes, I treated meningitis at home. And I delivered hundreds of babies at home in those years. It was all I could do; so that is what I did it."

Lamothe takes a greater measure of pride in knowing that did not sit and wait for prejudice to go away. Marshall was a conscious choice for a place to bring his family and practice medicine. A passive role was not indicated. Overcoming racial barriers seems never to have been notional in inspiration or experience for Lamothe. He finds a ritual pattern to life's circumstances; and when the logic is interrupted by prejudice, he pushes his logic through the barrier.

"I suppose I am persistent and insistent. Just recently, I was trying to arrange financing for some property. It seemed things were going slowly, and there was no reason offered for the delay."

"So each morning, I saw to it the people in charge of processing the loan applications got a visit or a phone call from me. It's becoming part of my nature."

Isidore J. Lamothe Sr. was a successful carpentry contractor in New Orleans. When I.J. Junior was completing high school, his father encouraged him to wind up his formal education and help build the family carpentry business.

The boy had started first grade at age 5 and would finish high school at 16. Expecting no more cash than encouragement for college his father, the younger Lamothe seized the opportunity to write a competitive exam in chemistry at Xavier University. He won the scholarship prize and had a degree in chemistry and biology three years later.

At 19, his choice was military service or the study of medicine. He entered Howard University Medical School in Washington, D.C., and had "M.D." behind his name at age 22.

Lamothe met Grace Cooper, a student nurse, in Washington. "I had been dating her roommate and one evening we invited Grace to go to the snack shop with us. Well, Grace seemed a lot more fun and interesting." The couple was married in Washington and Lamothe went on to complete an internship at Homer G. Phillips Hospital in St. Louis, Mo., and one year of residency in internal medicine at Veterans Administration Hospital in Tuskegee, Ala.

In 1949, Lamothe and his friend, Joseph Boyer, another student physician from New Orleans, were looking for a place to practice medicine. A ward clerk at the VA hospital told Lamothe she was from Marshall and gave him the name of her minister, the Rev. A.S. Jackson.

Jackson described a growing county that — at the time — was 60 percent black. He offered free office space and had a house he was willing to rent, lease or sell.

"There were three black doctors in Marshall, but only one was in active practice. Joe and I were going to New Orleans on a holiday trip, so we made a large detour to visit Marshall."

"Rev. Jackson showed us around town and when we got to Dr. Anderson's office, the waiting room was full of people and so was the stairway leading up to it from the street," Lamothe recalls.

The two young doctors were installed in an office suite above a pharmacy owned by Jackson on the northwest side of the courthouse square. Since there were two of them, the rent was set at $20 a month.

"My first day, I was ready to practice a very straightforward kind of medicine. I remember one lady came with skin irritation on both arms below her elbows. I recognized the classic symptoms of vitamin A deficiency and wrote her a prescription for vitamin pills at the pharmacy."

"That will be two dollars," I told her. "Two dollars? Two dollars for what?" the lady demanded. She never did pay me, and I know why. I didn't take her blood pressure. I didn't listen to her chest. I just took care of what was wrong with her, and she didn't see much to that sort of medicine."

Lamothe's headlong college career and his new practice carried him into his 20s before the Selective Service caught up with him. He served two years at Webb Air Force Base hospital in Big Spring from 1953-55 "and I went right on paying that wonderful $20 a month rent on my office in Marshall." His partner, Dr. Boyer, had been drafted into the Army even sooner and eventually moved to Ohio.

In the 1950s, the first floor of Memorial Hospital had an area segregated for black patients. There was a delivery room for blacks but no nursery for their babies. Any black patients were admitted and treated by white doctors after referral from black doctors who couldn't attend their patients in the hospital.

"Of course, you soon learned which white doctors would release patients back to you and which ones wouldn't. You didn't refer people to the ones who kept your patients if you could avoid it," Lamothe recalls.

During the presidency of the late Lyndon B. Johnson, regional medical programs were established in Texas and elsewhere. Lamothe became active in the affairs of area and state programs.

At about that time, the Texas Medical Association had dropped the word "white" from its bylaws' eligibility provisions. Lamothe applied for membership but was refused because he was not a member of his county organization, which continued to exclude blacks.

"At one of the regional meetings a leading doctor, C.V. Brindley of Scott and White Hospital in Temple, said, 'Izzie, I never see you at association meetings.' I told him I was not a member. He said, 'We'll see about that' and told me to keep applying."

Memorial Hospital, meanwhile, under federal pressure, dropped the county medical society membership requirement from its staff eligibility and Lamothe and the late Dr. Nolan Anderson were given probationary staff privileges at the hospital.

At the same time, Lamothe was among a group of blacks who protested the poor, separate facilities for blacks at the 1964 Central East Texas Fair. They printed posters and flyers that said "NO FAIR." The blacks stayed away that year.

A few years earlier, he had helped bail out of jail students from nearby Wiley College involved in sit-ins around Marshall.

At the end of the probationary year, only Anderson was accepted. Lamothe remembers being disappointed, but not discouraged.

"It wasn't hard to see how some people's feelings lay. And I had been involved in the 'NO FAIR' organization that year."

He called the Justice Department and an agent was sent to Memorial Hospital to inform the administrator that race was no longer a bar to hospital staff practices and that certain federal funds were received by Memorial.

Outsiders secretly attending fashionable suburban school

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — A chauffeur-driven Mercedes slipping into this fashionable suburb each weekday carries one of several dozen children of wealthy Dallas parents who are sneaking them into schools here, officials say.

School administrators estimate that as many as 25 students probably will have to withdraw from the Highland Park school district this year, because they do not meet its residency requirements.

As many as 50 more students will attend illegally but never get caught, officials say.

"People will go to great lengths to get their kids in good schools, a former school administrator said. "But they will go to even greater lengths if it means having their kids in school with the well-bred children of the very rich."

Students in the Highland Park school district, which takes in the cities of Highland Park and University Park, consistently have among the highest achievement test scores in the state.

Some parents of the students attending school here illegally have homes in the Park Cities but live in Dallas, officials say. Others have gone so far as to have their children legally placed in the custody of grandparents or other relatives who live in the district.

"People buy cottages in the Park Cities so their kids can go to school here, but they may actually live in a luxurious mansion in North Dallas," said Becky Nugent, chief of public relations for the district.

"We've learned to check enrollment cards very carefully for an address or a telephone exchange that sounds suspicious."

Residents keep a watchful eye out for the offending students, many of whom are caught when neighbors spot them being dropped off at the homes of friends or relatives before school.

Lamothe received a letter inviting him to join the staff. With their youthful faces and trim figures, I.J. and Grace Lamothe could convince the world they are 15 years younger than their birth certificates claim.

Both are past presidents of the county medical society and auxiliary.

Mrs. Lamothe has been active in scouting and Campfire, is president of the East Texas chapter of Links, Inc. and is secretary of Harrison County League of Women Voters.

Both are active and provide leadership in the activities of St. Joseph Catholic Parish.

Lamothe is active in medical organizations at the local, state and national levels and is similarly involved in numerous social and civic organizations.

His scouting leadership over the years was recognized with the most prestigious adult awards, the Boy Scout Council's Silver Beaver and the region's Silver Antelope.

For the past year, the doctor has shared time from his active practice and other pursuits to serve an innovative presidency on Memorial Hospital staff.

"There were 11 meetings of a substantive nature — almost three a week — with homework in between just in the month of October," he said.

Lamothe is a trustee of Wiley College and is national chairman of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity's Million Dollar Fund Drive.

The couple reared five children. The oldest, I.J. "Pete" Lamothe III, is a graduate of Morehouse College in Atlanta. Son David is a professional photographer attending Wiley College. A daughter, Camille, is administrative assistant to an NBC News film director. Michelle lives in San Antonio and Robert is a senior at Marshall High School.

"I always say Pete and David 'intergrated' Marshall High School," Lamothe said with a chuckle. He said the first years of integration in Marshall left black parents with the option of sending their children to formerly all-black Pemberton High School.

"We discussed the option and were among those families who decided to help integrate the high school. Mostly, it was a matter of staring."

"What has happened to me and to other black people in Marshall, particularly in the early years as I recall them and relate them — that is an indictment of the past.

"Things could be difficult. I recall them and think about them because they illustrate the important changes that have come about. The days of palpable discrimination are over. This town and this area are past those ways, and their only significance now is to remind ourselves of what has been accomplished."

"I'm proud of Grace. She has supported me all the way. I couldn't have made it without her help. And I am proud of the friends who have helped."

"There are still some social barriers where race is the standard, but I don't give them much consideration."

"I'll give an example. The first time I was in the roof garden of the Hotel Marshall, I looked around and said, 'What's the big deal?' I said, 'Is this all there is to the place we haven't been welcome?'"

"In recent months, Grace and I have attended two functions at Marshall Lakeside Country Club. Frankly, I had the same reaction there," he said, shrugging with a quiet chuckle.
